NELSON'S ILLUSTRATED Bible Dictionary

NEW AND ENHANCED EDITION

CROSS-REFERENCED TO MAJOR TRANSLATIONS

MORE THAN 7,000 UP-TO-DATE ENTRIES

MORE THAN 500 ENHANCED FULL-COLOR PHOTOGRAPHS AND MAPS

ENLARGED TYPE SIZE FOR EASE OF USE

GENERAL EDITOR: RONALD F. YOUNGBLOOD

CONSULTING EDITORS: F.F. BRUCE AND R.K. HARRISON

Nelson's Illustrated Bible Dictionary

New and Enhanced Edition

General Editor
Ronald F. Youngblood

General Editor of Original Edition
Herbert Lockyer, Sr.

Consulting Editors
F. F. Bruce
R. K. Harrison

Published by THOMAS NELSON™
Since 1798

thomasnelson.com

Nashville Dallas Mexico City Rio de Janeiro Beijing

Copyright © 1986, 1995, 2014 by Thomas Nelson

All rights reserved. No portion of this book may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means—electronic, mechanical, photocopy, recording, scanning, or other—except for brief quotations in critical reviews or articles, without the prior written permission of the publisher.

Published in Nashville, Tennessee, by Thomas Nelson. Thomas Nelson is a trademark of HarperCollins Christian Publishing, Inc.

Cover and Interior Design by Larry Taylor

Produced with the assistance of Livingstone, the Publishing Services Division of Barton-Veerman Company. Project staff includes: Bruce Barton and Ashley Taylor. Typesetting by Tom Shumaker.

Thomas Nelson, Inc., titles may be purchased in bulk for educational, business, fund-raising, or sales promotional use. For information, please e-mail SpecialMarkets@ThomasNelson.com.

Visual Survey of the Bible, © 1985, 1995 by Thomas Nelson

Bible History Chart, © 1980, 1995 by Thomas Nelson

Selected maps from Nelson's 3-D Bible Mapbook, North American edition published 1995 by Thomas Nelson. Copyright © 1985, The Bible Mapbook, Linn Publishing, Oxford, England.

Unless otherwise indicated, all Scripture quotations are from the New King James Version, copyright © 1982 by Thomas Nelson. Used by permission. All rights reserved.

Verses marked "NASB" are taken from the New American Standard Bible, copyright © 1960, 1962, 1963, 1968, 1971, 1972, 1973, 1975 by the Lockman Foundation. Used by permission.

Verses marked "NIV" are taken from the Holy Bible: New International Version, copyright © 1978 by the New York International Bible Society.

Verses marked "RSV" are taken from the Holy Bible: Revised Standard Version, second edition, copyright © 1946, 1951, 1972 by the Division of Christian Education of the NCCCUSA.

The Scripture quotations contained herein from the New Revised Standard Version of the Bible are © 1989 by the Division of Christian Education of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States of America, and are used by permission. All rights reserved.

REB THE REVISED ENGLISH BIBLE, © 1989. The delegates of the Oxford University Press and the Syndics of the Cambridge University Press. Used by permission.

ePub edition October 2015: ISBN 978-0-5291-0624-7

The Library of Congress has cataloged the earlier edition of this book as follows:

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Nelson's new illustrated Bible dictionary: an authoritative one-volume reference work on the Bible, with full-color illustrations / general editor, Ronald F. Youngblood; consulting editors, F.F. Bruce . . . [et al.].
p. cm.
Rev. ed. of: Nelson's illustrated Bible dictionary.
ISBN 0-8407-2071-8 (CB)
1. Bible—Dictionaries. I. Youngblood, Ronald F. II. Bruce, F.F. (Frederick Fyvie), 1910– . III. Thomas Nelson Publishers. IV. Nelson's illustrated Bible dictionary. V. Title: Nelson's New illustrated Bible dictionary.
BS440.N347 1995
220.3–dc20

94–44332
CIP

Publisher's Preface

Nelson's Illustrated Bible Dictionary, New and Enhanced Edition is an up-to-date sourcebook of biblical information that is accurate, thorough, dependable, and easy to understand. More than 7,000 entries on the people, places, things, and doctrines of the Bible appear in the book, making it one of the most comprehensive one-volume Bible dictionaries ever published.

Nelson's Illustrated Bible Dictionary, New and Enhanced Edition consists of the most current, dependable findings and insights to enrich one's study and teaching of the Bible. Some of the world's leading evangelical scholars produced articles for the original edition—Nelson's Illustrated Bible Dictionary edited by Herbert Lockyer, Sr., and published in 1986. Drawing upon the groundbreaking work of Dr. Lockyer, F.F. Bruce, R.K. Harrison, and others on that project, Ronald F. Youngblood undertook the general editorship of this comprehensive revision in 1995. Every entry in the dictionary was reviewed, revised, corrected, replaced, rewritten, and updated as needed to provide the most comprehensive, current, and dependable Bible dictionary available.

In addition to the complete revision and update, special features include: the largest typeface of any Bible dictionary on the market for easier reading; The Visual Survey of the Bible; a how-to-use guide for effective Bible study; a new full-color page design throughout to enhance user friendliness; full-color three-dimensional maps that bring Bible events and locations to life; and a fully updated cross-reference system.

Readers of Nelson's Illustrated Bible Dictionary, New and Enhanced Edition will also appreciate many of the features from the original edition, including: more than 500 full-color photographs throughout; the easy-to-use study and teaching outlines of books of the Bible; tables, charts, and diagrams that further illustrate Bible teachings and life in Bible times; and indexed maps to biblical places.

Users will benefit from the book's extensive cross-reference system, which makes it easy to use with most of the popular English translations of the Bible available today. The key words in each article in the book are based on the New King James Version of the Bible (NKJV), but variant names from five additional translations—KJV, NASB, REB, NIV, and NRSV—are fully cross-referenced to this list.

Throughout the book, readers are also referred to related articles in the dictionary for further information. The article on the “Levites,” for example, contains a reference to priests (which appears in small capital letters: “PRIESTS”). This format refers the reader to the article on priests in the Dictionary that contributes to a better understanding of the Levites.

Finally, a selection of full-color maps from major periods of biblical history appears at the end of the book. A handy index preceding these maps helps the reader locate sites of specific cities, rivers, mountains, and nations in biblical times. Articles within the Dictionary referencing selected sites also refer the reader to the actual grid coordinates for these respective places on the maps.

Written in plain language, Nelson’s Illustrated Bible Dictionary, New and Enhanced Edition enables Bible readers and teachers to do authoritative research, making their own Bible study and teaching more rewarding. The publisher sends forth this new edition trusting that it will provide a gateway of understanding to the full riches of the Word of God.

How to Use This Dictionary

What is the difference between an eBook and a print book?

eBook versions contain all the content found in the original print versions and are optimized for navigation in the various apps and devices used for display. eReaders display text as one fluid string in a single column, which differs from the multi-column layout seen in many print version books. Therefore, some content may not match the exact appearance of the original print version, but uses hyperlinks to navigate between related content.

In addition to the full Dictionary materials, this eBook version also contains an appendix of the full text of the New King James Version Bible. All verse references in the Dictionary are linked to that verse in the Bible so that you can easily navigate between the Dictionary and Bible text.

How do I use the eBook Table of Contents?

Important Note: Be sure to consult your device manufacturer's User's Guide for device-specific navigation instructions.

The Table of Contents is generally formatted in the same order as the original print version and hyperlinked as follows:

- Preface and articles
- Main Dictionary, with alphabetical quick links
- The New King James Version Bible Appendix (full text Bible)

Selecting a main Table of Contents item takes you to that location in the eBook. Selecting the title of that specific section or using your device's "back" button or function returns you to the main Table of Contents.

Using the Dictionary

- Select the hyperlinked letter of the alphabet at the beginning of the Dictionary to go to the corresponding word list for that letter.

- Use the device's "Next Page/Previous Page" buttons or functions to scroll through the entries. Select a word to go to that specific entry in the dictionary.
- Select the Bible reference hyperlink to go to the corresponding Bible verse. To return to the Dictionary entry from the Bible text, use your device's "back" button or function.
- To return to the alphabetical word list, select the specific word entry.
- To return to the beginning of the Dictionary from the alphabetical word list, select the letter heading ("A").

Using the Bible Appendix

To navigate to specific Bible books, chapters, or verses from the beginning of the Appendix, please note the following:

- Book links (Ex. "Genesis") go directly to the beginning of that Bible book.
- Chapter number links go directly to the beginning of the chapter associated with a book.
- Use the device's "Next Page/Previous Page" buttons or functions to scroll through the verses in each chapter.
- Every Bible book and chapter hyperlink in the Bible text returns or goes back to the listing at the beginning of the Appendix. Or, use the device's "back" button or function to go back to the last selection.

Contents

Publisher's Preface
How to Use This Dictionary
Index to Articles and Teaching Outlines on Books of the Bible
Index to Charts, Tables, and Maps
Contributors
Five Easy Steps to Better Bible Study Using Nelson's Illustrated Bible Dictionary, New and Enhanced Edition
Visual Survey of the Bible
  Introduction to the Visual Survey of the Bible
  Visual Survey of the Bible: Overview
  History of the Early World
  History of Israel: The People
  History of Israel: The Land
  History of Israel: The Kingdom
  The Poetic Books: The Heart of the Jews
  The Prophetic Books: The Hope of the Jews
  History of Israel: The Remnant
  The Life of Christ
  History of the Early Church
  The Writings of the Early Church
  The Themes of the New Testament Letters
Bible History Chart

Dictionary

Index to Maps
New King James Version Appendix

Index to Articles and Teaching Outlines on Books of the Bible

Old Testament

Genesis
Exodus
Leviticus Numbers
Deuteronomy
Joshua
Judges
Ruth
1 Samuel
2 Samuel
1 Kings
2 Kings
1 Chronicles
2 Chronicles
Ezra
Nehemiah
Esther
Job
Psalms
Proverbs
Ecclesiastes
Song of Solomon
Isaiah
Jeremiah
Lamentations
Ezekiel
Daniel
Hosea
Joel
Amos
Obadiah
Jonah
Micah
Nahum
Habakkuk
Zephaniah
Haggai
Zechariah
Malachi

New Testament

Matthew Mark
Luke
John
Acts
Romans
1 Corinthians
2 Corinthians
Galatians
Ephesians
Philippians
Colossians
1 Thessalonians
2 Thessalonians
1 Timothy
2 Timothy
Titus
Philemon
Hebrews
James
1 Peter
2 Peter
1 John
2 John
3 John
Jude
Revelation

Index to Charts, Tables, and Maps

How Versions of the Bible Sometimes Differ In Translation of Animal Names
The Order of the Books of the Apocrypha
Israel Dragged into Exile
Babylonian Empire—586 B.C.
Jerusalem Falls
A Glance at the Major Divisions and Individual Books of the Bible
The Message Explodes
Apostles’ Creed, Nicene Creed, Athanasian Creed
Deborah’s Victory
The Exodus
Coming Home
Jerusalem Captured
Pagan Gods Mentioned in the Bible
Greek Cities
Like a Caged Bird
Exit from Egypt
Asleep in the Storm
The Last 24 Hours
Gideon’s Night Raid
The Parables of Jesus
Prophecies of the Messiah in Zechariah
The Prophets Speak
Traveling the Roman World
Saul’s Final Battle
Churches Extablished in Asia Minor
Rebuild My Temple
The Jerusalem Believers
The Shape of the Land

Contributors

Robert L. Alden
Leslie C. Allen
Ronald B. Allen
Timothy R. Ashley
David W. Baker
John J. Bimson
E. M. Blaiklock
Gerald Borchert
Stephen G. Brown
F. F. Bruce
John A. Burns
Newton L. Bush
G. Lloyd Carr
E. Clark Copeland
Leonard J. Coppes
Walter M. Dunnett
Kendell H. Easley
Kermit A. Ecklebarger
James R. Edwards
John M. Elliott
Millard J. Erickson
Harvey E. Finley
Royce G. Gruenler
Timothy Hadley
Donald A. Hagner
R. K Harrison
Harvey Hartman
Robert Hendren

Herschel H. Hobbs
Harold W. Hoehner
John J. Hughes
Robert Hughes
Harry B. Hunt, Jr.
W. Bingham Hunter
David K. Huttar
William W. Klein
Woodrow M. Kroll
Alvin S. Lawhead
Gordon Lewis
Jack P. Lewis
Walter L. Liefeld
G. Herbert Livingston
Tremper Longman, III
Robert S. MacLennan
W. Harold Mare
Elmer A. Martens
Wayne O. McCready
Scot McKnight
Janet McNish
Robert R. Moore
William Mounce
John Nolland
Dave O'Brien
Vernon S. Olson
Grant R. Osborne
Mildred Ottinger
Arthur G. Patzia
Gary Pratico

Richard A. Purdy
Robert V. Rakestraw
John Rasko
Richard O. Rigsby
Allen P. Ross
Glenn E. Schaefer
Stephen R. Schrader
Jack B. Scott
Martin J. Selman
Norman Shepherd
Gary V. Smith
Douglas K. Stuart
Robert L. Thomas
Willem A. VanGemeren
Dolores Walker
Larry L. Walker
Daniel B. Wallace
Forest Weddle
Tom Wells
Stephen Westerholm
Frederick E. Young
Ronald F. Youngblood

Five Easy Steps to Better Bible Study Using Nelson's Illustrated Bible Dictionary, New and Enhanced Edition

By Ronald F. Youngblood

We normally think of using a Bible dictionary to help us learn something about a Bible character or to find out the location of a place mentioned in the Bible or, more simply, to define a strange word or phrase that we encounter in our Scripture reading. Probably very few of us would think of turning to the pages of a Bible dictionary to give us assistance in studying a passage of Scripture—at least, not if we wish to study it in depth. We would more likely go to a concordance or a commentary or other similar reference works.

But a good Bible dictionary can help us significantly in studying a Scripture passage, no matter how long or short it might be. While it would be foolish to assume that a dictionary of the Bible can give us all the help we need, it would be equally foolish not to make full use of every resource that a good Bible dictionary contains. I would therefore like to suggest several steps to enhance the use of Nelson's Illustrated Bible Dictionary (NIBD) in studying God's Word.

STEP
1

Read the Bible Passage You Are Studying

Before opening NIBD, we benefit ourselves greatly if we first of all read carefully through the full text of the Bible passage we have chosen to study. It is important to pay attention to names, ideas, places, and events we might want to know more about. Let's take Psalm 51 as a typical example of a medium-length passage to study. Let's assume that we are using a copy of the Bible that contains no study notes, cross-references, or other helps. And let us further assume that we have available to us—at the moment, at least—no reference works other than NIBD. How far can we get in our study of Psalm 51?

Quite far, as it turns out.

STEP

2

Read the Dictionary Entry On the Bible Book You Are Studying

The second step is to read through the article entitled PSALMS, BOOK OF, from beginning to end. This will give us a brief overview of the book of Psalms.

We will learn something about the structure of the book as well as the authorship, date, and historical setting of many of the psalms themselves. The comprehensive "Study and Teaching Outline" in the article will show that there are many different types of psalms. With respect to Psalm 51, the outline tells us that it is usually classified as a "psalm of lament." A quick check of the title of Psalm 51 will narrow the classification more specifically to "psalm of individual lament." In other words, the writer of Psalm 51 was in the midst of a sad, penitent, or mournful experience when the psalm was written.

The title of Psalm 51 tells us that it is a "Psalm of David." Referring again to PSALMS, BOOK OF, in NIBD, we discover that 73 (almost half) of the 150 psalms in the book include the name of David in their titles. We also see that the Hebrew word translated "of" in "A Psalm of David" can also mean "to" (perhaps implying "A Psalm dedicated to David") or "for" (perhaps implying "A Psalm written for David"—that is, on his behalf).

Although the NIBD article takes the traditional position that the 73 psalms containing David's name in their titles were in fact references to authorship, it presents alternative possibilities as well.

PSALMS, BOOK OF, also informs us that "some of the psalms written by David grew out of specific experiences in his life." In addition to listing Psalm 51 as one such psalm, it also lists Psalms 3, 52, 54, 56, 57, and 59. A quick check of the titles of those psalms shows us that Psalm 3 is connected to David’s flight from his son Absalom and that the other five all have to do with the lengthy period in David’s life when he was hiding from King Saul, whose insane jealousy made David the object of a series of search-and-destroy missions. The title of Psalm 51, on the other hand, tells us that David wrote it “when Nathan the prophet went to him, after he [David] had gone in to Bathsheba.”

STEP
3

Read the Dictionary Entries on All Key Words

The third step is to read the entries on key words from Psalm 51. Three NIBD articles—those on DAVID, NATHAN, and BATHSHEBA—give us background information on the all-too-brief statement found in the title of Psalm 51.

The article on David summarizes the story of his sin of adultery with Bathsheba, his sin of having Bathsheba’s husband Uriah killed in battle to cover up his adulterous act after Bathsheba becomes pregnant, Nathan’s rebuke of David and announcement of divine judgment on him, and the subsequent death of the baby boy born to David and Bathsheba. It also refers to Psalm 51 as David’s “prayer for forgiveness,” which underscores the penitential aspect of that particular psalm of lament.

The article on Nathan provides information concerning the parable he told when he confronted David with his double sin. It also indicates that the story of that confrontation is recorded in 2 Samuel 12.

The article on Bathsheba adds even more details, noting that the full account of the entire series of episodes is found in 2 Samuel 11–12 and reminding us that Bathsheba herself is mentioned “indirectly in the genealogy of Jesus (Matt. 1:6).”

STEP
4

Re-read the Bible Passage to Note Other Features and Words

The fourth step is to refer to background articles in NIBD. The NIBD article entitled BIBLE, INTERPRETATION OF THE, OR HERMENEUTICS is especially recommended. Features such as literary form should also be investigated. Turning back to the first verse of Psalm 51, we observe immediately that it, together with the rest of the psalm, is poetic in form.

The NIBD article on POETRY states that more than one-third of the Old Testament—about 40 percent of it, in fact—was written as poetry. Most recent English versions of the Bible (including the NKJV) set these sections in poetic form. Like all of the other psalms, Psalm 51 by its very nature is a poem.

“The essential formal characteristic of Hebrew poetry is parallelism,” the POETRY article tells us. “The three main types of parallelism in biblical poetry are synonymous, antithetic, and synthetic.” It then gives examples of each type—and among its examples of synonymous parallelism, which it defines as occurring when “a parallel segment repeats an idea found in the previous segment,” is Psalm 51:2–3:

> “Wash me thoroughly from my iniquity,
> And cleanse me from my sin.
> For I acknowledge my transgressions,
> And my sin is ever before me.”

In other words, “Cleanse me from my sin” repeats the thought of “Wash me thoroughly from my iniquity,” and “My sin is ever before me” repeats the idea found in “I acknowledge my transgressions.”

The NIBD article on SIN provides us with rich insights into the “dark background of sin and its reality” in the lives of people today. It defines sin as “lawlessness (1 John 3:4) or transgression of God’s will, either by omitting to do what God’s law requires or doing what it forbids.”

The article on TRANSGRESSION defines it as “the violation of a law, command, or duty” and goes on to tell us that “the Hebrew word most often translated as ‘transgression’ in the Old Testament means ‘revolt’ or ‘rebellion.’ ”

INIQUITY is defined as “unrighteousness, lawlessness.” The three NIBD articles show us that all disobedience toward God—whether “sin,” “transgression,” or “iniquity”—is violation of His law, refusing to do what He commands. David uses several different words for sin as a way of emphasizing the enormity and seriousness of his rebellion against God.

The INIQUITY article cites verses 2, 5, and 9 in Psalm 51 as three places in the psalm in which the word “iniquity” appears. In so doing it calls our attention to another important Bible study technique: checking the passage to see how often and in what ways its writer repeats key words.

David confesses that he was “brought forth in iniquity”—that is, he was a sinner from the moment his mother conceived him in the womb (Ps. 51:5). He pleads that God will wash him thoroughly from his iniquity (Ps. 51:2)—that He will blot out all his “iniquities” (plural; Ps. 51:9), since he is aware that he has committed sin upon sin.

Needless to say, David’s inspired observation that he was a sinner from the moment of conception tells us when life really begins and therefore has much to contribute to a Christian view of abortion.

What does David mean when he says to God, “Purge me with hyssop” (Ps. 51:7)? The NIBD entry on HYSSOP advises us to “see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE.” When we turn to the Hyssop section of that article, we read a fascinating description of the shrub known as hyssop and we are informed that it was employed in purification ceremonies in Old Testament times.

The article also tells us that “David mentioned it as an instrument of inner cleansing (Ps. 51:7).” Reference to “inner cleansing” reveals that David uses the word “hyssop” in a figurative sense, since his statement could hardly mean that he ate all or part of a hyssop shrub in an attempt to cleanse himself from sin.

The article on PURGE also mentions Psalm 51:7 and defines “purge” as “to cast out whatever is impure or undesirable.” “Snow” in the same verse is declared to be “a symbol of cleansing,” of “purity,” in the NIBD article on SNOW, where we are directed to Job 9:30 and Isaiah 1:18 as additional references.

In addition to presenting a lengthy discussion of the Old Testament concept of salvation, the article on SALVATION mentions Psalm 51:14 as an example of salvation defined as deliverance from bloodguiltiness and its consequences.

A quick check of the rest of Psalm 51 uncovers the phrase “the joy of Your salvation” in verse 12, and the NIBD article on JOY cites Psalm 21:1 and 71:23 as other references to a psalmist rejoicing over God’s salvation.

STEP

5

Read Other Entries to Which the Dictionary Refers

Step five is to refer to the “Also see . . .” entries at the end of the article. Returning to the article on SALVATION, we note that at the end of it we are advised to see also the NIBD articles on a number of related topics, including FORGIVENESS and REGENERATION. The former defines forgiveness in its theological sense as “God’s pardon of the sins of human beings” and lists Psalm 51:1, 9 as references stating that God “completely forgives” sin, thus defining the phrase “blot out” in those two verses.

The latter article defines regeneration as an act of God that results in a “radical change of character from self-centeredness to God-centeredness” that “is, in effect, an appeal to be ‘born again,’ ” citing Psalm 51:5–11 as a parade example in the Old Testament.

Not claiming any righteousness of his own, David vows that his tongue “shall sing aloud of Your righteousness” (Ps. 51:14). The NIBD article on RIGHTEOUSNESS defines the word as “a state that conforms to an authoritative standard" and notes that "God's character is the definition and source of all righteousness."

It goes on to assert that our "righteousness is defined in terms of God's." And if it is true that David's "tongue shall sing aloud of Your righteousness," it is equally true in the parallel verse that his "mouth shall show forth Your praise" (Ps. 51:15).

The NIBD article on PRAISE, while brief, is a model of concisely summarizing a complex subject. Defining praise as "an act of worship or acknowledgment by which the virtues or deeds of another are recognized and extolled," it concludes: "The godly person will echo David's words, 'My praise shall be continually of You . . . And [I] will praise You yet more and more' (Ps. 71:6, 14)."

David says to God in Psalm 51:16, "You do not desire sacrifice, or else I would give it; / You do not delight in burnt offering." If that is true, what are we to make of, for example, Leviticus 1–7, which contains the Lord's own words giving his people precise and detailed instructions concerning what kinds of sacrifices to offer (including the "burnt offering": Lev. 1:1–17; 6:8–13) and how to offer them?

Once again, the NIBD comes to the rescue. The article on SACRIFICE states: "God repeatedly emphasized that He did not need or desire food and sacrifices themselves. He wants our love, commitment, and service (Deut. 6:5; 1 Sam. 15:22)."

The latter reference is particularly important because it quotes the prophet Samuel's words to King Saul, David's predecessor on the throne of Israel. David continues in Psalm 51:17:

> "The sacrifices of God [that is, the sacrifices God desires] >   are a broken spirit,
> A broken and a contrite heart—
> These, O God, You will not despise."

"Sacrifices of God" is echoed in verse 19 as "sacrifices of righteousness"—that is, "righteous sacrifices" that are pleasing to God in that they measure up to His standards of righteousness (see comments on "righteousness" above).

The word "contrite" is not common in the vocabulary of the ordinary person today. The article on CONTRITE, however, defines it well for us as "the kind of spirit, or heart, pleasing and acceptable to God." It also gives us the additional reference of Psalm 34:18 and notes that in that verse several recent English translations render the underlying Hebrew word as “crushed.” The entry helpfully concludes as follows: “The person with a contrite spirit weeps over wrongdoing and expresses genuine sorrow for his sin (see also Matt. 5:4; Luke 6:21; 2 Cor. 7:10).”

Observing the parallelism in Psalm 51:18 might lead us to the conclusion that “Zion” is merely another way of referring to Jerusalem, the well-known capital of Israel, also called the “City of David,” as the NNIBD article on JERUSALEM tells us. (That article, incidentally, contains an excellent section entitled “Jerusalem Under David” that gives basic information about the city during David’s reign.)

But as the article on ZION states, “the meaning of the word ‘Zion’ underwent a distinct progression in its usage.” Its precise earliest reference is “the ancient JEBUSITE fortress situated on the southeast hill of Jerusalem at the junction of the Kidron Valley and the Tyropoeon Valley.”

The references to “burnt offering and whole burnt offering” (Ps. 51:19) would, by this time, naturally lead us to look up BURNT OFFERING in NIBD. The entry by that title advises us to turn to SACRIFICIAL OFFERINGS. There, under “Burnt Offering,” we learn that the burnt offering “was termed ‘whole’ because the entire offering was to be burnt upon the altar.”

The reference to “altar” in verse 19 is clarified in the ALTAR article: “The altar of burnt offering (Ex. 27:1–8) was placed in front of the entrance to the tabernacle (Ex. 40:6), where it was used for the daily burnt offering and meal offering. This altar declared that entry into the presence of God must be preceded by sacrificial ATONEMENT for sin.”

Those two sentences serve as a fitting conclusion to a few ways in which Nelson’s New Illustrated Bible Dictionary can guide the Bible student into a deeper understanding of David’s plea for God’s forgiveness in this moving psalm.

Introduction to the Visual Survey of the Bible

The Visual Survey gives you a complete overview of the Bible. Taking people, events, and themes of the Bible as focus points, this handy study tool unfolds for you the contents of Scripture.

Take a moment to familiarize yourself with the first chart, which compares the Old and New Testaments. Note particularly the timeline beginning with Adam and ending with John. This time-line divides the Old Testament into five periods and the New Testament into two. It is the key to the rest of the charts.

As you look through the Visual Survey, notice that each chart has its own time-line containing both biblical and extrabiblical events. The maps portray the major movement of each period; the boxes present the key topics. The charts also summarize the themes of the Old Testament poetic and prophetic books, and the themes of the New Testament Epistles.

The ten Life Applications are an important part of this Survey. Based on the flow of each period, they crystallize the central spiritual truths of Scripture. Each principle leads into the next, and all of them relate to your own life.

Visual Survey of the Bible

VISUAL SURVEY . . .

POETIC HISTORICAL PROPHETIC
OLD TESTAMENT

THE OLD TESTAMENT

Size	First 3/4ths of the Bible
Years of History	Over 4,000 years
Number of Books	39
Theme	Humankind's unsuccessful attempts to please God through works
Key Word (John 1:17)	Law: The Law was given through Moses . . .
Jesus Christ Is Seen in:	Over 300 prophecies
	The Passover lamb
	The tabernacle and sacrifices

Adam	Before 4000 B.C.
Noah	?
Abraham	2000 B.C.
Moses	1500 B.C.
David	1000 B.C.
Ezra	450 B.C.

History of the Early World		History of Israel
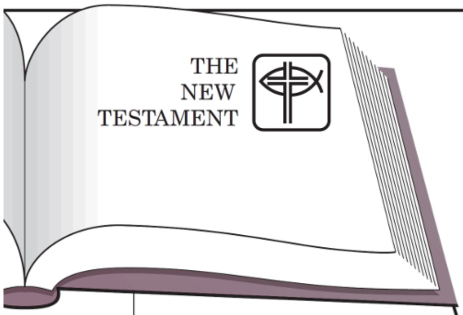
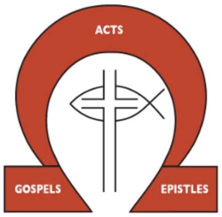
Pre-Flood	After the Flood	The People	The Land	The Kingdom	The Remnant
11 Chapters (Gen. 1—11)		Over 38 Books (Gen. 12—Mal.)

. . . OF THE BIBLE





NEW TESTAMENT

Last 1/4th of the Bible
About 100 years
27
The Person and work of Jesus Christ who gives us salvation
Grace: . . . grace and truth came through Jesus Christ.
In flesh and blood (Matt.— John)
In the teachings of the apostles (Acts—3 John)
His coming return (Rev.)

"Your word I have hidden in my heart, that I might not sin against You."
Psalm 119:11

Throughout this visual survey, the symbol above will focus on a key principle of life change that grows out of that section of the Bible survey.

Jesus
Peter
Paul
John

4 B.C.
A.D. 27–30
A.D. 100

History of the Messiah	History of the Early Church
The Life of Christ	In all Jerusalem	In all Judea & Samaria	To all the Earth
(Matt.—John)	(Acts—Rev.)

HISTORY OF THE EARLY WORLD

Adam

Before
4000 B.C.

BEFORE THE FLOOD
CREATION (Origin of man)	FALL (Origin of sin)	SPREAD OF SIN
Gen. 1; 2	Gen. 3	Gen. 4—9

THE CREATIVE WORK OF GOD
	Genesis 1	Genesis 2
Creation Accounts	God the creator Elohim God as powerful Creation of the universe Climaxes with man The six days of creation	God the covenant-keeper Yahweh God as personal Creation of man Climaxes with marriage The sixth day of creation
Genesis 1:2	"without form …"	"… and void"
Six Days of Creation	In the first three days, God shaped the creation Day 1: light Day 2: water, atmosphere Day 3: earth, vegetation	In the second three days, God populated the creation Day 4: sun, moon, stars Day 5: sea creatures, birds Day 6: animals

TEMPTATION: THE TWO ADAMS CONTRASTED
1 John 2:16	Genesis 3:6 (First Adam)	Luke 4:1–13 (Second Adam—Christ)
"the lust of the flesh"	"the tree was good for food"	"command this stone to become bread"
"the lust of the eyes"	"it was pleasant to the eyes"	"the devil … showed Him all the kingdoms"
"the pride of life"	"a tree desirable to make one wise"	"throw Yourself down from here"

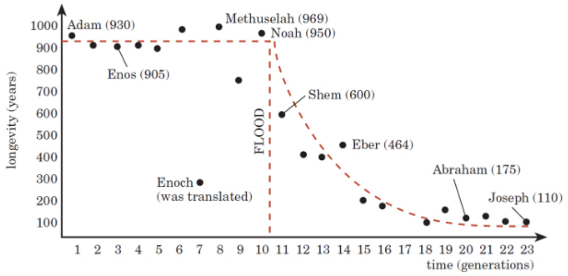
Noah Abraham

? 2000 B.C.

AFTER THE FLOOD
FLOOD (Judgment of sin)	SPREAD OF NATIONS
Gen. 6—9	Gen. 10; 11

AGES OF THE PATRIARCHS
(Before and after the Flood)

The patriarchs who lived before the Flood had an average life span of about 900 years (Gen. 5). The ages of post-Flood patriarchs dropped rapidly and gradually leveled off (Gen. 11). Some suggest that this is due to major environmental changes brought about by the Flood.



Principle: Rigteousness is creative; sin is destructive (Gen. 2:17; Rom. 6:23).

Practice: Genesis 1—11, the prologue not only to Genesis, but to the entire Bible, begins with the ordered and life-giving activity of the holy Creator. The fall of man and the consequent spread of sin stand in stark contrast to the work of God and illustrate the disorder and death that always accompany rebellion against the purposes of the Lord. God is not mocked; in a moral and spiritual universe, sin must be judged. What must you do, according to Romans 3:21–26, to escape the condemnation of your Creator?

HISTORY OF ISRAEL:

Abraham
2000 B.C.

Joseph
1975 B.C.

THE PEOPLE

THE PATRIARCHS	BONDAGE IN EGYPT

2135	1991	Jacob	1790
Birth of Abraham	Beginning of Egyptian Middle Kingdom	Enters Egypt with His Family	Code of Hammurabi

THE ABRAHAMIC COVENANT
Genesis 12:1–3	God initiated His covenant with Abram when he was living in Ur of the Chaldeans, promising a land, descendants, and blessing.
Genesis 12:4, 5	Abram went with his family to Haran, lived there for a time, and left at the age of 75.
Genesis 13:14–17	After Lot separated from Abram, God again promised the land to him and his descendants.
Genesis 15:1–21	This covenant was ratified when God passed between the sacrificial animals Abram laid before God.
Genesis 17:1–27	When Abram was 99 God renewed His covenant, changing Abram's name to Abraham ("a father of many nations"). Sign of the covenant: circumcision.
Genesis 22:15–18	Confirmation of the covenant because of Abraham's obedience.
This covenant was foundational to other covenants.	Land: Palestinian covenant (Deut. 30). Seed: Davidic covenant (2 Sam. 7). Blessing: "old" (Ex. 19) and "new" (Jer. 31) covenants.

SPIRITUAL DECLINE IN THE PATRIARCHAL AGE

First Generation	Second Generation	Third Generation	Fourth Generation
Abraham	Ishmael and Isaac	Esau and Jacob	Joseph and his eleven brothers
Abraham: man of faith believed God	Ishmael: not son of promise Isaac: called on God believed God	Esau: unspiritual little faith Jacob: at first compromised, later turned to the Lord	Joseph: man of God showed faith Brothers: treachery, immorality, lack of separation from Canaanites
Abraham: built altars to God (Gen. 12:7, 8; 13:4, 18; 22:9)	Isaac: built an altar to God (Gen. 26:25)	Jacob: built altars to God (Gen. 33:20; 35:1, 3, 7)	No altars were built to God in the fourth generation

Moses

1500 B.C.

(430 years until Exodus, Ex. 12:40; Gal. 3:17)

c. 1750
Beginning of Hittite Empire

1570
Beginning of Egyptian
New Kingdom

1525
Birth of Moses

1445
The Exodus

Abram's call (Gen. 12:1–3)
Tigris River
Haran
? Eden (location unknown)
Euphrates River
The Great Sea (Mediterranean)
CANAAN
Babylon
Abram's family grows to 70 in number over four generations in Canaan.
EGYPT
Ur
Joseph sold into slavery in Egypt—His family later moves to Egypt.
Abram's father, Terah, moves his family to Haran, where he dies (Gen. 11:31, 32).
Persian Gulf
0
250 miles
N

© 1997, Thomas Nelson, Inc.

Principle: The destructiveness of sin is overcome by a faith that takes God at His word in spite of appearances and circumstances to the contrary (Gen. 15:6; John 3:16; Heb. 11:8–22).

Practice: Beginning in Genesis 12, God drew forth a man who would be the father of the people from whom and to whom the Messiah would come. Abraham became a friend of God through faith. In spite of appearances to the contrary, he went to a land he had not seen, believed God's promise of a son, and offered up that son at the same area where God's own Son would be crucified. Because he believed God, his faith was accounted to him for righteousness. In the same way, you can enter into a relationship with God by placing your trust in the Person and work of His Son. Have you made that decision?

HISTORY OF ISRAEL:

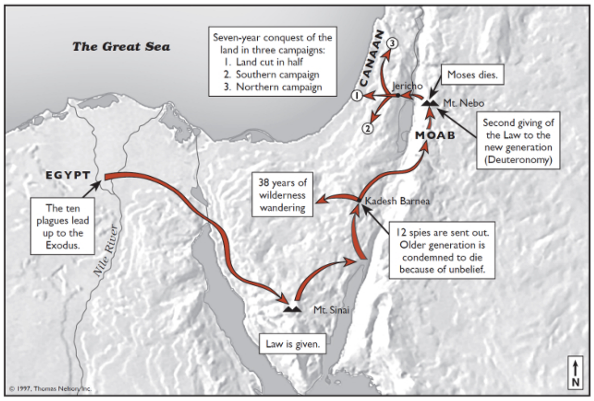
Moses
1500 B.C.

Shang Dynasty c. 1000
Mycenaean Civilization c. 1100

THE LAND

EXODUS | CONQUEST | PERIOD OF THE JUDGES

1445 1405 1398
1450 —— 1423 Reign of Amenhotep II of Egypt

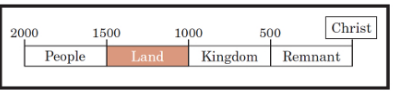


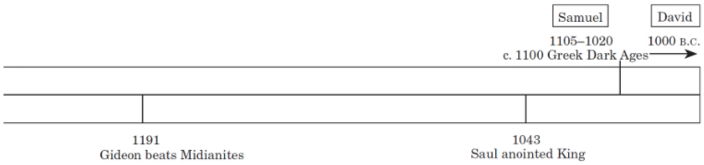
The Great Sea
Seven-year conquest of the land in three campaigns:
1. Land cut in half
2. Southern campaign
3. Northern campaign
CANAAN
③
①
②
Jericho
Moses dies.
Mt. Nebo
MOAB
Second giving of the Law to the new generation (Deuteronomy)
EGYPT
The ten plagues lead up to the Exodus.
Nile River
38 years of wilderness wandering
Kadesh Barnea
12 spies are sent out. Older generation is condemned to die because of unbelief.
Mt. Sinai
Law is given.
N
© 1997, Thomas Nelson Inc.

Principle: Revelation demands obedience, and obedience brings blessing (Deut. 6:1–15; Josh. 1:8; John 15:12–17).

Practice: After redeeming His people from bondage, the Lord spoke to them in power and glory at Mt. Sinai. The revelation of the Mosaic law required a response of obedience. Their success as individuals and as a nation would depend on the degree of their conformity to God's moral, civil, and ceremonial law. Likewise, disobedience would lead to disaster (e.g., the wilderness wandering and servitude in the time of the Judges). As believers in Christ, our success is measured by the degree of our conformity to His character. To what extent is Christ the Lord of your life?

THE LAND





THE LAW After their deliverance from Egyptian bondage, the children of Israel needed to learn to walk with their God. The Law was given to instruct the people about the person and the ways of their Redeemer so that they could be set apart to a life of holiness and obedience, not to save anyone but to reveal the people's need to trust in the Lord. As Paul told the Galatians, "Therefore the law was our tutor to bring us to Christ, that we might be justified by faith" (Gal. 3:24).

The Law combines poetry, salvation history, legislation, and exhortation. The three major divisions of the Law (Deut. 4:44) are the testimonies (moral duties), the statutes (ceremonial duties), and the judgments or ordinances (civil and social duties). The moral portion of the Law is summarized in the Ten Commandments (Ex. 20:1–17; Deut. 5:6–21):

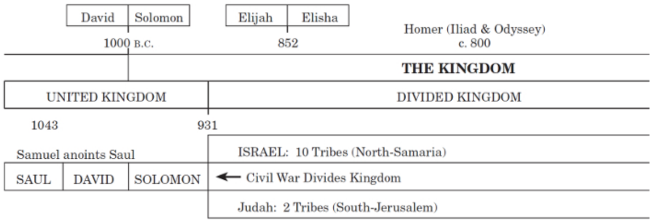
THE TEN COMMANDMENTS (Moral Law)
1–4	Duties to God	"You shall love the LORD your God" (Matt. 22:37).
5–10	Duties to others	"You shall love your neighbor" (Matt. 22:39).

THE JUDGES: A CASE STUDY IN DISOBEDIENCE

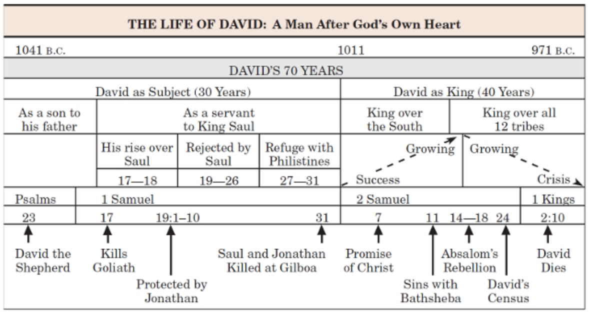
Each of the seven cycles found in Judges 3:5—16:31 has five steps: sin, servitude, supplication, salvation, and silence. The cycles connect as a descending spiral of sin (2:19), with Israel vacillating between obedience and apostasy.

Cycle	Oppressor	Years of Oppression	Judge/Deliverer	Years of Peace
1. (3:7–11)	Mesopotamians	8	Othniel	40
2. (3:12–30)	Moabites	18	Ehud	80
(3:31)	Philistines		Shamgar
3. (4:1—5:31)	Canaanites	20	Deborah/Barak	40
4. (6:1—8:32)	Midianites	7	Gideon	40
5. (8:33—10:5)	Abimelech	3	Tola/Jair	45
6. (10:6—12:15)	Ammonites	18	Jephthah/Ibzan/Elon/Abdon	6/7/10/8
7. (13:1—16:31)	Philistines	40	Samson	20

HISTORY OF ISRAEL:



David
Solomon
1000 B.C.
Elijah
Elisha
852
Homer (Iliad & Odyssey)
c. 800
THE KINGDOM
UNITED KINGDOM
DIVIDED KINGDOM
1043
931
Samuel anoints Saul
SAUL
DAVID
SOLOMON
ISRAEL: 10 Tribes (North-Samaria)
Civil War Divides Kingdom
Judah: 2 Tribes (South-Jerusalem)



THE LIFE OF DAVID: A Man After God's Own Heart
1041 B.C.
1011
971 B.C.
DAVID'S 70 YEARS
David as Subject (30 Years)
David as King (40 Years)
As a son to his father
As a servant to King Saul
King over the South
King over all 12 tribes
His rise over Saul
Rejected by Saul
Refuge with Philistines
Growing
Growing
Success
Crisis
17—18
19—26
27—31
Psalms
1 Samuel
2 Samuel
1 Kings
23
17
19:1–10
31
7
11
14—18
24
2:10
David the Shepherd
Kills Goliath
Protected by Jonathan
Saul and Jonathan Killed at Gilboa
Promise of Christ
Sins with Bathsheba
Absalom's Rebellion
David's Census
David Dies

Principle: Obedience grows out of a heart for God (Deut. 6:5; 1 Sam 13:14; 1 Chr. 28:9; Acts 13:22).

Practice: Saul and David are a study in contrasts. The key to Saul's failure was his lack of a heart for God; the key to David's greatness was his obvious love for the Lord. David's relationship with God became the standard by which all the kings of Judah would be measured. To know God is to love Him, and to love Him is to desire to obey Him. Read Psalm 23 as a model of a man who was intimate with God. What are the things that may be hindering your growth in the knowledge of God?

THE KINGDOM

2000 1500 1000 500 Christ

People | Land | Kingdom | Remnant

Rome Founded
753

Births of Buddha, Confucius
563 551

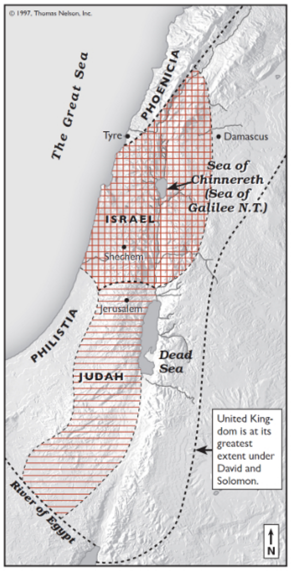
Ezra
500 B.C.

EXILE RETURN

722 586 538

← Assyria Conquers Israel

Babylon Conquers Judah →



© 1997, Thomas Nelson, Inc.
The Great Sea
PHOENICIA
Tyre
Damascus
Sea of Chinnereth (Sea of Galilee N.T.)
ISRAEL
Shechem
Jerusalem
PHILISTIA
Dead Sea
JUDAH
River of Egypt
N

United Kingdom is at its greatest extent under David and Solomon.

KINGS OF ISRAEL	KINGS OF JUDAH
1. Jeroboam I	1. Rehoboam
2. Nadab	2. Abijam
3. Baasha	3. Asa
4. Elah	4. Jehoshaphat
5. Zimri	5. Jehoram
6. Omri	6. Ahaziah
7. Ahab	7. Athaliah
8. Ahaziah	8. Joash
9. Jehoram	9. Amaziah
10. Jehu	10. Azariah
11. Jehoahaz	11. Jotham
12. Jehoash	12. Ahaz
13. Jeroboam II	13. Hezekiah
14. Zechariah	14. Manasseh
15. Shallum	15. Amon
16. Menahem	16. Josiah
17. Pekahiah	17. Jehoahaz
18. Pekah	18. Jehoiakim
19. Hoshea	19. Jehoiachin
	20. Zedekiah

DIVIDED KINGDOM

▦ — ISRAEL ▤ — JUDAH

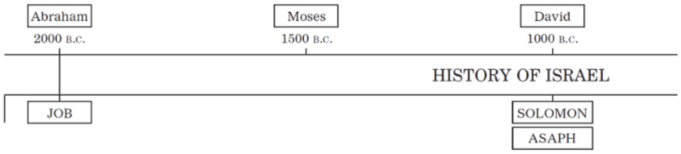
THE POETIC BOOKS:



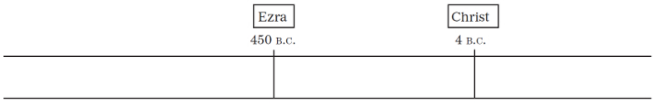
THEMES OF THE POETIC BOOKS

BOOK	KEY WORD	THEME
Job	Sovereignty	God revealed Himself in His majesty and power to Job. It became clear that the real issue was not Job's suffering (caused by Job's sin) but God's sovereignty.
Psalms	Worship	The five books of psalms span the centuries from Moses to the postexilic period, covering the full range of human emotions and experiences. Suited for service as the temple hymnal, they were set to music and focused on worship.
Proverbs	Wisdom	Proverbs was designed to equip the reader in practical wisdom, discernment, discipline, and discretion. The development of skills in all the details of life are stressed, so that beauty and righteousness will replace foolishness and evil through dependence upon God.
Ecclesiastes	Vanity	The Preacher applied his great mind and resources to the quest for meaning and purpose in life. He found that wisdom, wealth, works, pleasure, and power all led to futility and striving after wind. The only source of ultimate meaning and fulfillment is God Himself.
Song of Solomon	Love in Marriage	This beautiful song portrays the intimate love relationship between Solomon and his Shulamite bride. It magnifies the virtues of physical and emotional love in marriage.

Principle: To have a heart for God is to approach life from His perspective (Job 42:1–6; Ps. 1; 19; 63; 73; 119; Prov. 2:1–9; Rom. 12:1–3).

Practice: The poetic books record the struggles of men like Job, David, Solomon, and Asaph to gain a divine perspective on their lives and circumstances. As they learned to set their minds on the Person, powers, and perfections of God, their wills and emotions came into alignment with His truth. True wisdom is seeing life from God's side, and this is rooted in setting our minds (meditating) on the things above (Col. 3:1–3). Try dipping into the Psalms and Proverbs on a daily basis and prayerfully ponder what you read.

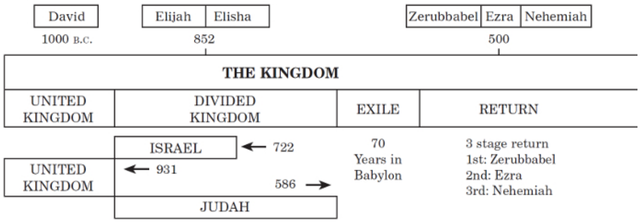
THE HEART OF THE JEWS



THE PATH TO TRUE SUCCESS

QUESTION	PRINCIPLE
1. What is wisdom?	Wisdom is the key to a life of beauty, fulfillment, and purpose (Prov. 3:15–18). Wisdom is the skill in the art of living life with every area under the dominion of God. It is the ability to use the best means at the best time to accomplish the best ends.
2. How do we pursue wisdom?	The treasure of wisdom rests in the hands of God. Since it comes from above (Prov. 2:6; cf. James 3:17), we cannot attain it apart from Him.
3. What are the conditions for attaining wisdom?	True wisdom can only be gained by cultivating the fear of the Lord (Job 28:28; Ps. 86:11; 111:10; Prov. 1:7; 9:10).
4. What is the fear of the Lord?	To fear God is to have an attitude of awe and humility before Him (Prov. 15:33). It is to recognize Him as our Creator and our complete dependence upon Him in every activity of our lives.
5. Why have so few people developed this fear of God?	The temporal value system of this world is based on what is seen, while the eternal value system of Scripture is based on what is unseen (2 Cor. 4:16–18; 5:7). The former exerts a powerful influence upon us, and we struggle with giving up the seen for the unseen.
6. What can enable us to choose the eternal value system?	This choice is based on faith (believing God in spite of appearances and circumstances), and faith is based on trust.
7. How do we grow in faith?	Our ability to trust God is directly proportional to our knowledge of God. The better we know Him, the more we can trust Him.
8. How can we increase in our knowledge of God?	We become intimate with God as we talk with Him in prayer and listen to His voice in Scripture. The better we know God, the more we love Him and want to respond to His desires for our lives. Faith in God is simply trusting Him as a person, and trust is manifested in action.

THE PROPHETIC BOOKS:



David
1000 B.C.
Elijah
Elisha
852
Zerubbabel
Ezra
Nehemiah
500
THE KINGDOM
UNITED KINGDOM
DIVIDED KINGDOM
EXILE
RETURN
ISRAEL
722
UNITED KINGDOM
931
586
JUDAH
70 Years in Babylon
3 stage return
1st: Zerubbabel
2nd: Ezra
3rd: Nehemiah

PROPHETS BEFORE THE EXILE		EXILE PROPHETS	PROPHETS AFTER THE EXILE
To Israel: Amos (760) Hosea (755) To Nineveh: Jonah (760) Nahum (660) To Edom:	To Judah: Joel (835) Isaiah (740) Micah (735) Zephaniah (630) Jeremiah (627) Habakkuk (607) Lamentations (586) Obadiah (580)	To Jews in Babylon: Daniel (605) Ezekiel (592)	To the Remnant after returning: Haggai (520) Zechariah (520) Malachi (432)

Principle: God's disciplines are designed to restore a heart for Himself (Jer. 17:5, 7; Joel 2:12, 13; Heb. 12:5–11).

Practice: God had to discipline His people because of their moral and spiritual rebellion and their refusal to heed the warnings of His prophets. Reproof is designed to bring repentance, and repentance brings restoration. The same prophets who pronounced the condemnation of God also announced the consolation of God. Similarly, because God loves us, He must sometimes chasten us as His children to train us in the ways of righteousness. How do you respond during these times? Are you teachable or intractable?

THE HOPE OF THE JEWS

Christ
4 B.C.

THE REMNANT

400 YEARS UNTIL CHRIST

415

THEMES OF THE PROPHETIC BOOKS

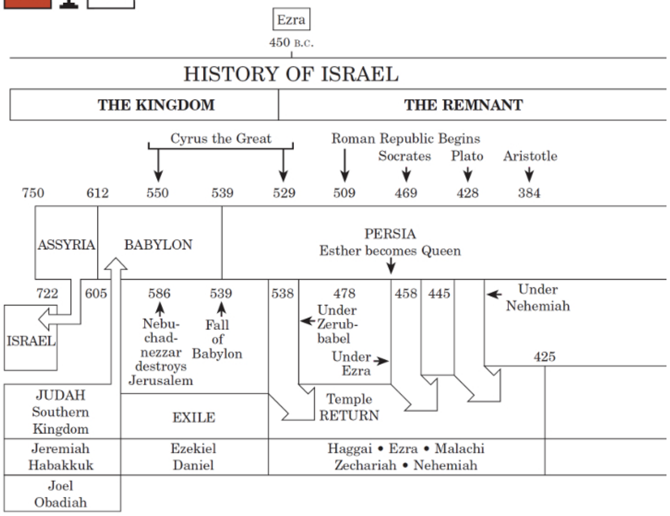
THE MAJOR PROPHETS

BOOK	KEY WORD	THEME
Isaiah	Salvation Is of the Lord	Twofold message of condemnation (1—39) and consolation (40—66). God's judgment on the sins of Judah, the surrounding nations, and the world, followed by future salvation and restoration.
Jeremiah	Judah's Last Hour	Declaration of certain judgment of God against Judah. God promises to establish a new covenant with His people.
Lamentations	Lamentations	This beautifully structured series of five lament poems is a funeral dirge for the fallen city of Jerusalem.
Ezekiel	Future Restoration	Ministry to the Jewish captives in Babylon before and after the fall of Jerusalem. The fate of Judah's foes and an apocalyptic vision of Judah's future.
Daniel	God's Program for Israel	Outlines God's plan for the Gentile nations (2—7) and portrays Israel during the time of Gentile domination (8—12).

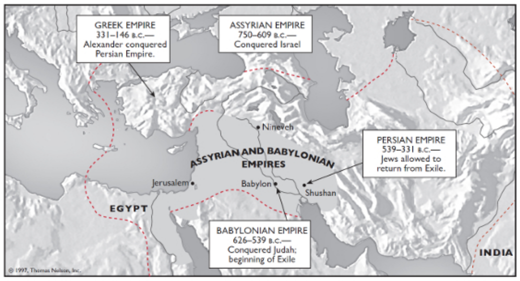
THE MINOR PROPHETS

BOOK	KEY WORD	THEME
Hosea	God's Love for Israel	The story of Hosea and his faithless wife illustrates the loyal love of God and the spiritual adultery of Israel.
Joel	Day of the Lord	A recent locust plague illustrates the far more terrifying day of the Lord. God appeals to the people to repent in order to avert the coming disaster.
Amos	Judgment of Israel	In eight pronouncements of judgment, Amos spirals around the surrounding countries before landing on Israel. He lists the sins of Israel and calls for repentance.
Obadiah	Judgment of Edom	Condemns the nation of Edom (descended from Esau) for refusing to act as a brother toward Judah (descended from Jacob).
Jonah	Revival in Nineveh	The repentant response of the people of Nineveh to Jonah's one-line prophetic message caused the God of mercy to spare the city.
Micah	Judgment and Restoration of Judah	In spite of divine retribution against the corruption of Israel and Judah. God's covenant with them will be fulfilled in Messiah's future kingdom.
Nahum	Judgment of Nineveh	About 140 years after Nineveh repented under the preaching of Jonah, Micah predicted the destruction of the city because of its idolatry and brutality.
Habakkuk	Live by Faith	Troubled with God's plan to use the Babylonians as His rod of judgment of Judah, Habakkuk praises the Lord after gaining a better pespective on His power and purposes.
Zephaniah	Day of the Lord	The coming day of the Lord is a time of awesome judgment followed by great blessing. Judah stands condemned, but God will restore the fortunes of the remnant.
Haggai	Reconstruction of the Temple	After the Babylonian exile, Haggai urges the Jews to put God first and finish the temple they had begun so that they can enjoy God's blessing.
Zechariah	Prepare for the Messiah	Like Haggai, Zechariah exhorts the Jews to complete the construction of the temple. He relates it to the coming of Messiah in a series of visions and messianic prophecies.
Malachi	Appeal to Backsliders	The spiritual climate of the people had grown cold, and Malachi rebukes them for their religious and social compromise. If they return to God with sincere hearts, they will be blessed.

HISTORY OF ISRAEL: THE REMNANT

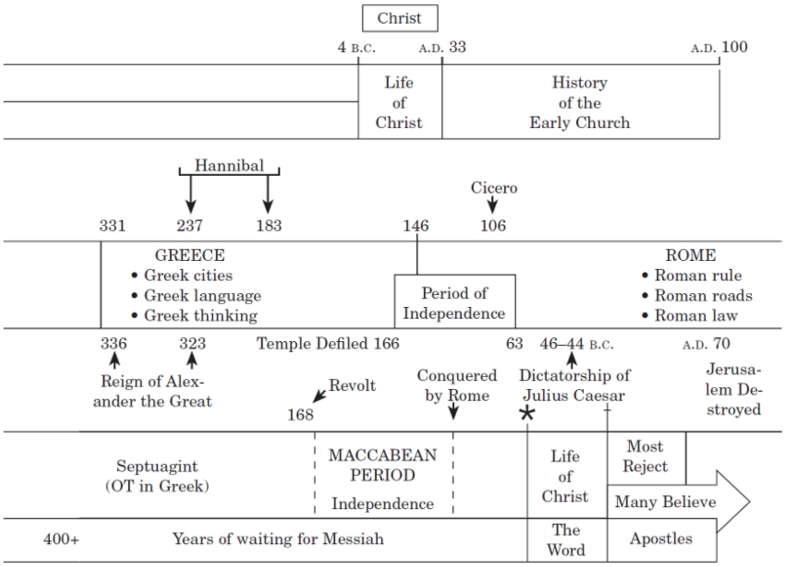


Ezra
450 B.C.
HISTORY OF ISRAEL
THE KINGDOM
THE REMNANT
Cyrus the Great
Roman Republic Begins
Socrates
Plato
Aristotle
750
612
550
539
529
509
469
428
384
ASSYRIA
BABYLON
PERSIA
Esther becomes Queen
722
605
586
539
538
478
458
445
Under Nehemiah
ISRAEL
Nebu-chad-nezzar destroys Jerusalem
Fall of Babylon
Under Zerub-babel
Under Ezra
425
JUDAH Southern Kingdom
EXILE
Temple RETURN
Jeremiah Habakkuk
Ezekiel Daniel
Haggai • Ezra • Malachi
Zechariah • Nehemiah
Joel Obadiah



GREEK EMPIRE 331–146 B.C.— Alexander conquered Persian Empire.
ASSYRIAN EMPIRE 750–609 B.C.— Conquered Israel
Nineveh
PERSIAN EMPIRE 539–331 B.C.— Jews allowed to return from Exile.
ASSYRIAN AND BABYLONIAN EMPIRES
Jerusalem
Babylon
Shushan
EGYPT
BABYLONIAN EMPIRE 626–539 B.C.— Conquered Judah; beginning of Exile
INDIA

© 1997, Thomas Nelson, Inc.



Christ
4 B.C.
A.D. 33
A.D. 100
Life of Christ
History of the Early Church
Hannibal
Cicero
331
237
183
146
106
GREECE
• Greek cities
• Greek language
• Greek thinking
Period of Independence
ROME
• Roman rule
• Roman roads
• Roman law
336
323
Temple Defiled 166
63
46–44 B.C.
A.D. 70
Reign of Alexander the Great
Revolt
168
Conquered by Rome
Dictatorship of Julius Caesar
Jerusalem Destroyed
Septuagint (OT in Greek)
MACCABEAN PERIOD
Independence
Life of Christ
Most Reject
Many Believe
400+
Years of waiting for Messiah
The Word
Apostles

Principle: True restoration results from being molded by the Word within rather than by the world without (Ezra 7:10; 9:10–15; Is. 46:3, 4; Acts 7:51–53).

Practice: Even after the chastening of the Exile, most of the returning Jews became enmeshed once again in the affairs of the world and neglected their relationship with God. For some, the problem was external religiosity without internal reality; for others, the problem was being more influenced by culture than by Scripture. God has always had to work with a faithful minority who love Him enough to stand against the tide of the world system. Is your quality of life different from that of those who love the world more than they love the Lord?

THE LIFE OF CHRIST

4 B.C. A.D. 9 (Temple Discussion)

EARLY CHILDHOOD | YEARS AT NAZARETH (Luke 2:51, 52)

Birth Luke 2:41–50

THE GOSPELS COMPARED AND CONTRASTED

Topics	The Synoptic Gospels
	Matthew	Mark	Luke	John
Probable Date	A.D. 58–68	A.D. 55–65	A.D. 60–68	A.D. 80–90
Place of Writing	Syria Antioch or Palestine	Rome	Rome/Greece	Ephesus
Original Audience	Jewish mind (Religious)	Roman mind (Pragmatic)	Greek mind (Idealistic)	Universal
Theme	Messiah-King	Servant-Redeemer	Perfect Man	Son of God
Traditional Picture of Christ (cf. Ezek. 1:10; Rev. 4:6–8)	The Lion (strength, authority)	The Bull (service, power)	The Man (wisdom, character)	The Eagle (deity, person)
Portrait of Christ	God-man			God-man
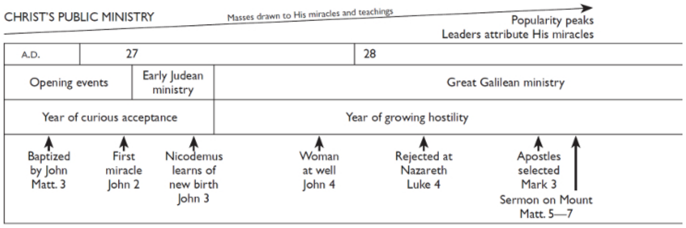
Perspective	Historical			Theological
Unique Material	Less unique (Matthew, 42%; Mark, 7%; Luke, 59%)			More unique (92%)
Chronology	Only one Passover mentioned			Three or four Passovers mentioned
Geography	Concentrates on Galilean ministry			Concentrates on Judean ministry
Discourse Material	More public			More private
Teaching Method	Parables			Allegories
Teaching Emphasis	More on ethical, practical teachings			More on the Person of Christ
Relationship to Other Gospels	Complementary			Supplementary



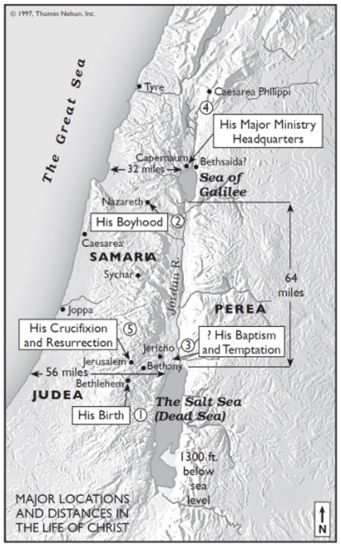
CHRIST'S PUBLIC MINISTRY
Masses drawn to His miracles and teachings
Popularity peaks
Leaders attribute His miracles
A.D.
27
28
Opening events
Early Judean ministry
Great Galilean ministry
Year of curious acceptance
Year of growing hostility
Baptized by John Matt. 3
First miracle John 2
Nicodemus learns of new birth John 3
Woman at well John 4
Rejected at Nazareth Luke 4
Apostles selected Mark 3
Sermon on Mount Matt. 5—7

A.D. 27 A.D. 30

PUBLIC MINISTRY

Principle: Jesus, the living Word, lives His life in and through us as we walk in dependence upon Him (John 1:11, 12; 10:10; 15:4, 5; Gal. 2:20).

Practice: In Christ, God personally revealed Himself in human flesh: to see Him is to see God (John 12:45; 14:9), to know Him is to know God (John 8:19), to receive Him is to receive God (Mark 9:37), to honor Him is to honor God (John 5:23), and to reject Him is to reject God (Luke 10:16). He is the vine, the source of life; we are the branches, the channels of life. It is only as we draw our life from Him that we bear lasting fruit. To what extent are you looking to Jesus as the true source of your security, significance, and fulfillment?



© 1997, Thomas Nelson, Inc.
The Great Sea
Tyre
Caesarea Philippi
④
His Major Ministry Headquarters
Capernaum
Bethsaida?
32 miles
Sea of Galilee
Nazareth
His Boyhood ②
Caesarea
SAMARIA
Sychar
Jordan R.
64 miles
Joppa
PEREA
His Crucifixion and Resurrection ⑤
Jericho
③ ? His Baptism and Temptation
Jerusalem
Bethany
56 miles
Bethlehem
JUDEA
His Birth ①
The Salt Sea (Dead Sea)
1300 ft. below sea level
MAJOR LOCATIONS AND DISTANCES IN THE LIFE OF CHRIST N

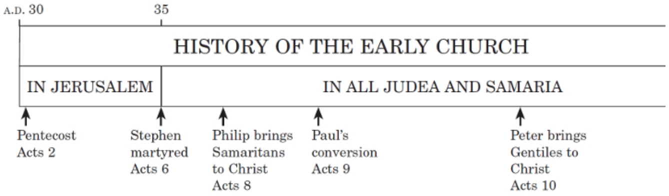
to Satan (Matt. 12:24)
Masses fall away in face of "official" rejection
29
A.D. 30
Later Judean ministry
Perean ministry
Years of training the apostles to carry on
Period of intense struggle leading to the Cross
Begin teaching in parables Matt. 13
12 sent out Matt. 10
4000 fed Mark 8
70 sent out Luke 10
Lazarus raised John 11
Rejection by leaders Matt. 12
5000 fed Mark 6
Transfiguration Luke 9

HISTORY OF THE EARLY CHURCH



A.D. 30
35
HISTORY OF THE EARLY CHURCH
IN JERUSALEM
IN ALL JUDEA AND SAMARIA
Pentecost Acts 2
Stephen martyred Acts 6
Philip brings Samaritans to Christ Acts 8
Paul's conversion Acts 9
Peter brings Gentiles to Christ Acts 10

THE BOOK OF ACTS IN OVERVIEW

"But you shall receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you; and you shall be witnesses to Me in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and Samaria, and to the end of the earth." (Acts 1:8).

Chapters	Acts 1–7	Acts 8–12	Acts 13–28
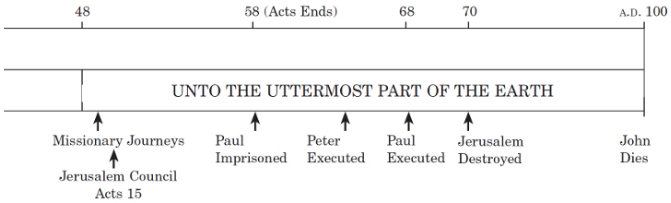
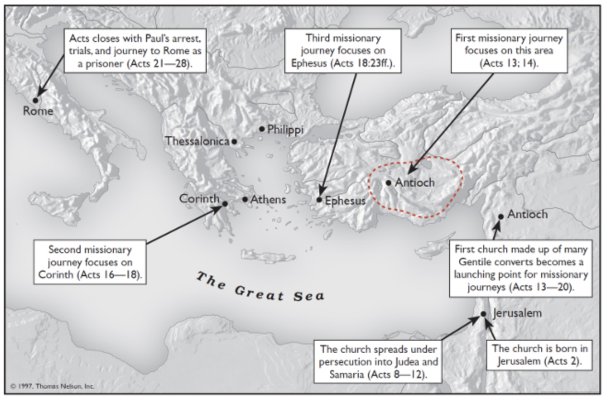
Spread of the Church	The church in Jerusalem	The church in all Judea and Samaria	The church to all the earth
The Gospel	Witnessing in the city	Witnessing in the provinces	Witnessing in the world
Theme	Power and progress of the church	Expansion of the church	Paul's three journeys and trials
People Addressed	Jews	Samaritans	Gentiles
Key Person	Peter	Philip	Paul
Time	2 years (A.D. 33–35)	13 years (A.D. 35–48)	14 years (A.D. 48–62)
Development	Triumph	Transition	Travels and trials



48
58 (Acts Ends)
68
70
A.D. 100
UNTO THE UTTERMOST PART OF THE EARTH
Missionary Journeys
Jerusalem Council Acts 15
Paul Imprisoned
Peter Executed
Paul Executed
Jerusalem Destroyed
John Dies



Acts closes with Paul's arrest, trials, and journey to Rome as a prisoner (Acts 21—28).

Third missionary journey focuses on Ephesus (Acts 18:23ff.).

First missionary journey focuses on this area (Acts 13; 14).

Second missionary journey focuses on Corinth (Acts 16—18).

First church made up of many Gentile converts becomes a launching point for missionary journeys (Acts 13—20).

The church spreads under persecution into Judea and Samaria (Acts 8—12).

The church is born in Jerusalem (Acts 2).
Rome
Philippi
Thessalonica
Antioch
Corinth
Athens
Ephesus
Antioch
The Great Sea
Jerusalem
© 1997, Thomas Nelson, Inc.

Principle: Christ's life is reproduced in others when we take the initiative to witness in the power of the Holy Spirit (Matt. 28:18–20; Acts 1:8; Col. 4:2–6).

Practice: The Book of Acts records the spread of the gospel from the city of Jerusalem to the whole province of Judea and Samaria, and ultimately through the Roman Empire and beyond. These first-century Christians were sold out for the cause of Christ and transformed their world as their lives became living epistles of the Good News. God has called us to a lifestyle of evangelism in which we build relationships with non-Christians. These friendships in turn become natural bridges for communicating the gospel. Take a close look at Colossians 4:2–6 to learn how to become more effective as an instrument of the Holy Spirit to reproduce the life of Christ in others.

THE WRITINGS OF THE EARLY

Paul converted A.D. 34	Cornelius converted 40	1st Missionary Journey 48	Jerusalem Council 50

FOCUS ON PETER	FOCUS ON PAUL

PAUL THE LEARNER	PAUL THE MISSIONARY
Paul spends nearly 3 years at Damascus and 10 years in obscurity in Tarsus before he is ready for mission work.	1st Journey	The Jerusalem Council Acts 15	2nd Journey
	Galatians (49)	A.D. 50	1 Thessalonians (51) 2 Thessalonians (51)
	PAUL'S LETTERS
	James (44, 45)
	LETTERS BY OTHERS
	GOSPELS & ACTS
	Matthew (c. 40's)

Principle: God wants us to grow in our understanding that Christ's life and destiny are our life and destiny (2 Cor. 4:16–18; Eph. 1:3, 17–19; 3:16–19; Phil. 1:21; 3:20, 21; 1 Pet. 1:3–9).

Practice: Paul, Peter, and the other apostles learned the secret of developing an eternal perspective in the midst of earthly problems. They were able to live above their circumstances and rejoice even while being persecuted because of their firm grasp on who they were in Christ and where they were going. In spite of his imprisonment, Paul could write, "For to me, to live is Christ, and to die is gain" (Phil. 1:21). Are you looking more at "the things which are seen" or at "the things which are not seen"? The former are temporary, but the latter are eternal (2 Cor. 4:18).

CHURCH

A.D. 27–30 | 49 | A.D. 100

James | John

Paul imprisoned 58	Peter executed 64	Paul executed 68	Jerusalem destroyed 70	John dies A.D. 100

FOCUS ON JOHN

PAUL THE PRISONER

3rd Journey	1st Imprisonment	Freedom	2nd Imprisonment	JOHN'S WRITINGS
1 Corinthians (56)	Ephesians (60)	1 Timothy (62)	2 Timothy (67)
2 Corinthians (56)	Colossians (61)	Titus (66)
Romans (56, 57)	Philemon (61)
	Philippians (62)
		1 Peter (64)	Hebrews (66–69)	1 John (85–90)
		2 Peter (64)	Jude (75)	2 John (85–90)
				3 John (85–90)
				Revelation (95–96)
	Acts (62)
	Luke (58–60)	Mark (60)		John (65–70)

THE THEMES OF THE NEW TESTAMENT LETTERS

PAUL'S LETTERS TO CHURCHES

BOOK	KEY WORD	THEME
Romans	Righteousness of God	Portrays the gospel from condemnation to justification to sanctification to glorification (1—8). Presents God's program for Jews and Gentiles (9—11) and practical exhortations for believers (12—16).
1 Corinthians	Correction of Carnal Living	Corrects problems of factions, immorality, lawsuits, and abuse of the Lord's Supper (1—6). Replies to questions concerning marriage, meat offered to idols, public worship, and the Resurrection (7—16).
2 Corinthians	Paul Defends His Ministry	Defends Paul's apostolic character, call, and credentials. The majority had repented of their rebellion against Paul, but there was still an unrepentant minority.
Galatians	Freedom from the Law	Refutes the error of legalism that had ensnared the churches of Galatia. Demonstrates the superiority of grace over law, and magnifies the life of liberty over legalism and license.
Ephesians	Building the Body of Christ	Extols the believer's position in Christ (1—3), and exhorts the readers to maintain a spiritual walk that is based upon their spiritual wealth (4—6).
Philippians	To Live Is Christ	Paul speaks of the latest developments in his imprisonment and urges his readers to a lifestyle of unity, humility, and godliness.
Colossians	The Preeminence of Christ	Demonstrates the preeminence of Christ in creation, redemption, and the relationships of life. The Christian is complete in Christ and needs nothing else.
1 Thessalonians	Holiness in Light of Christ's Return	Paul commends the Thessalonians for their faith and reminds them of his motives and concerns on their behalf. He exhorts them to purity of life and teaches them about the coming of the Lord.
2 Thessalonians	Understanding the Day of the Lord	Paul corrects false conclusions about the day of the Lord, explains what must precede this awesome event, and exhorts his readers to remain diligent.

PAUL'S LETTERS TO PEOPLE

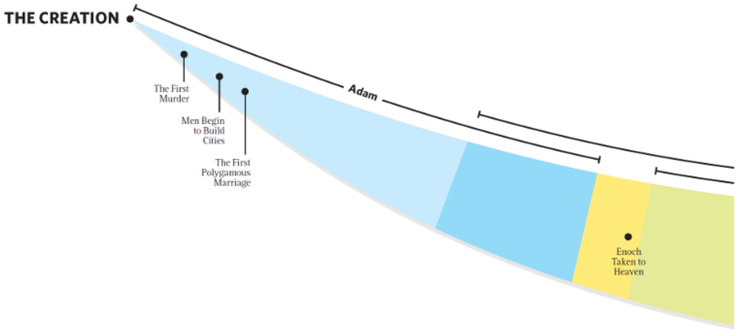
BOOK	KEY WORD	THEME
1 Timothy	Leadership Manual for Churches	Paul counsels Timothy on the problems of false teachers, public prayer, the role of women, and the requirements for elders and deacons.
2 Timothy	Endurance in Ministry	A combat manual designed to build up and encourage Timothy to boldness and steadfastness in view of the hardships of the spiritual warfare.
Titus	Conduct Manual for Churches	Lists the requirements for elders and instructs Titus in his duties relative to the various groups in the churches.
Philemon	Forgiveness from Slavery	Paul appeals to Philemon to forgive Onesimus and to regard him no longer as a slave but as a brother in Christ.

LETTERS FROM OTHERS

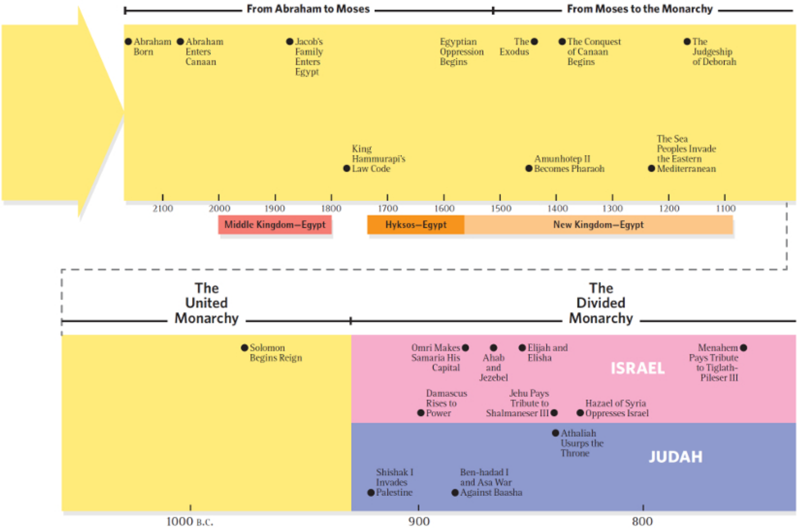
BOOK	KEY WORD	THEME
Hebrews	Superiority of Christ	Demonstrates the superiority of Christ's Person, priesthood, and power over all that preceded Him to encourage the readers to mature and to become stable in their faith.
James	Faith that Works	A practical catalog of the characteristics of true faith written to exhort James's Hebrew-Christian readers to examine the reality of their own faith.
1 Peter	Suffering for Christ	Comfort and counsel to those who were being maligned for their faith in Christ. They are encouraged to develop an attitude of submission in view of their suffering.
2 Peter	Guard Against False Prophets	Copes with internal opposition in the form of false teachers who were enticing believers into their errors of belief and conduct. Appeals for growth in the true knowledge of Christ.
1 John	Fellowship with God	Explores the dimensions of fellowship between redeemed people and God. Believers must walk in His light, manifest His love, and abide in His life.
2 John	Avoid Fellowship with False Teachers	John commends his readers for remaining steadfast in apostolic truth and reminds them to walk in love and avoid false teachers.
3 John	Enjoy Fellowship with the Brethren	John thanks Gaius for his support of traveling teachers of the truth, in contrast to Diotrephes, who rejected them and told others to do the same.
Jude	Contend for the Faith	This exposé of false teachers reveals their conduct and character and predicts their judgment. Jude encourages his readers to build themselves up in the truth and contend earnestly for the faith.
Revelation	Revelation of the Coming Christ	The glorified Christ gives seven messages to the church (1—3). Visions of unparalleled judment upon rebellious humankind are followed by the Second Advent (4—19). The Apocalypse concludes with a description of the new heaven and new earth and the marvels of the New Jerusalem (20—22).

Bible History

* * *



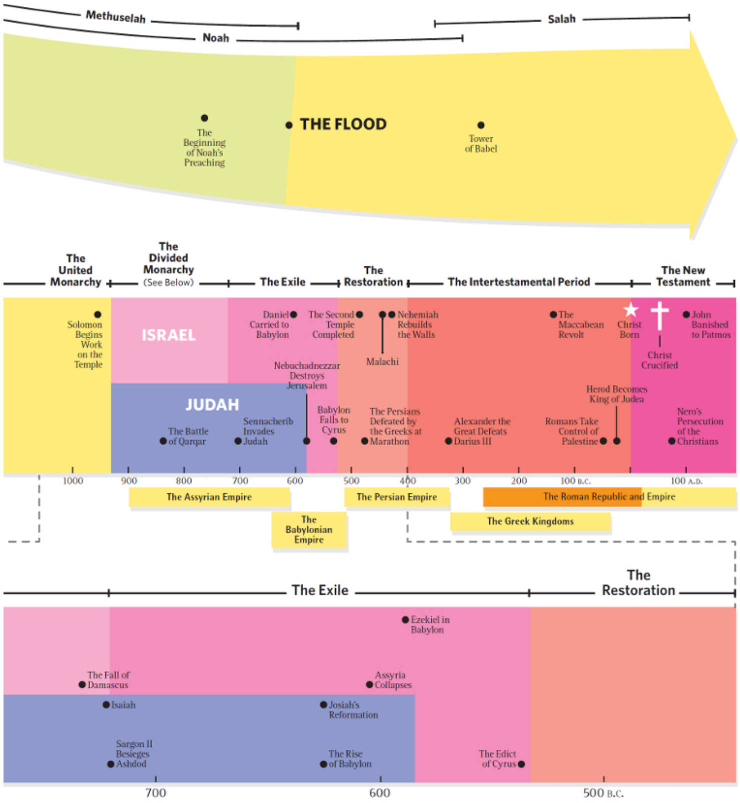
THE CREATION
Adam
The First Murder
Men Begin to Build Cities
The First Polygamous Marriage
Enoch Taken to Heaven



From Abraham to Moses
From Moses to the Monarchy
Abraham Born
Abraham Enters Canaan
Jacob's Family Enters Egypt
Egyptian Oppression Begins
The Exodus
The Conquest of Canaan Begins
The Judgeship of Deborah
King Hammurapi's Law Code
Amunhotep II Becomes Pharaoh
The Sea Peoples Invade the Eastern Mediterranean
2100
2000
1900
1800
1700
1600
1500
1400
1300
1200
1100
Middle Kingdom—Egypt
Hyksos—Egypt
New Kingdom—Egypt
The United Monarchy
The Divided Monarchy
Solomon Begins Reign
Omri Makes Samaria His Capital
Ahab and Jezebel
Elijah and Elisha
ISRAEL
Menahem Pays Tribute to Tiglath-Pileser III
Damascus Rises to Power
Jehu Pays Tribute to Shalmaneser III
Hazael of Syria Oppresses Israel
Athaliah Usurps the Throne
JUDAH
Shishak I Invades Palestine
Ben-hadad I and Asa War Against Baasha
1000 B.C.
900
800

BIBLE HISTORY

© Thomas Nelson, Inc.



Methuselah
Noah
Salah
The Beginning of Noah's Preaching
THE FLOOD
Tower of Babel
The United Monarchy
The Divided Monarchy (See Below)
The Exile
The Restoration
The Intertestamental Period
The New Testament
Solomon Begins Work on the Temple
ISRAEL
JUDAH
The Battle of Qarqar
Sennacherib Invades Judah
Daniel Carried to Babylon
Nebuchadnezzar Destroys Jerusalem
Babylon Falls to Cyrus
The Second Temple Completed
Malachi
Nehemiah Rebuilds the Walls
The Persians Defeated by the Greeks at Marathon
Alexander the Great Defeats Darius III
The Maccabean Revolt
Romans Take Control of Palestine
Herod Becomes King of Judea
Christ Born
Christ Crucified
John Banished to Patmos
Nero's Persecution of the Christians
1000
900
800
700
600
500
400
300
200
100 B.C.
100 A.D.
The Assyrian Empire
The Babylonian Empire
The Persian Empire
The Greek Kingdoms
The Roman Republic and Empire
The Exile
The Restoration
Ezekiel in Babylon
The Fall of Damascus
Assyria Collapses
Isaiah
Josiah's Reformation
Sargon II Besieges Ashdod
The Rise of Babylon
The Edict of Cyrus
700
600
500 B.C.

• A spectacular view of the Dead Sea, situated at the lowest point on earth in the hot, desolate wilderness of southern Palestine

Dictionary

A | B | C | D | E | F | G | H | I | J | K | L | M | N | O | P | Q | R | S | T | U | V |
W | XYZ

A

AARON
AARON’S ROD
AARONITES
AB
ABADDON
ABAGTHA
ABANA
ABANAH
ABARIM
ABBA
ABDA
ABDEEL
ABDI
ABDIEL
ABDON
ABED–NEGO
ABEL
ABEL ACACIA GROVE
ABEL BETH MAACHAH
ABEL CHERAMIM
ABEL KERAMIM
ABEL MAIM
ABEL MAYIM
ABEL MEHOLAH
ABEL MIZRAIM
ABEL SHITTIM
ABEZ
ABI
ABIA
ABI ALBON
ABIASAPH
ABIATHAR
ABIB
ABIDA, ABIDAH
ABIDAN
ABIEL
ABIEZER
ABIEZRITE

ABIGAIL
ABIGAL
ABIHAIL
ABIHU
ABIHUD
ABIJAH
ABIJAM
ABILENE
ABIMAEL
ABIMELECH
ABINADAB
ABINOAM
ABIRAM
ABISHAG
ABISHAI
ABISHALOM
ABISHUA
ABISHUR
ABITAL
ABITUB
ABIUD
ABLUTION
ABNER
ABOMINATION
ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION
ABRAHAM
ABRAHAM’S BOSOM
ABRAM ABRONAH
ABSALOM
ABSALOM’S MONUMENT
ABSOLUTION
ABSTINENCE
ABYSS
ABYSSINIA
ACACIA
ACACIA GROVE
ACACIAS, VALLEY OF ACCAD
ACCEPT ACCESS
ACCHO
ACCO
ACCOMMODATION
ACCOUNTABILITY
ACCURSED
ACCUSER
ACELDAMA

ACHAIA
ACHAICUS
ACHAN
ACHAR
ACHAZ
ACHBOR
ACHIM
ACHISH
ACHMETHA
ACHOR
ACHSA
ACHSAH
ACHSHAPH
ACHZIB
ACRE
ACRE
ACROPOLIS
ACROSTIC
ACSAH
ACTS, APOCRYPHAL
ACTS OF THE APOSTLES
ADADAH
ADAH
ADAIAH
ADALIA
ADAM
ADAM AND EVE, BOOK OF ADAMAH
ADAMANT
ADAMI NEKEB
ADAR
ADBEEL
ADDAN
ADDAR
ADDAX, ADDER
ADDI
ADDON
ADER
ADIEL
ADIN
ADINA
ADINO
ADITHAIM
ADJURATION
ADLAI
ADMAH
ADMATHA
ADNA

ADNAH
ADONI–BEZEK
ADONI–ZEDEK
ADONIJAH
ADONIKAM
ADONIRAM
ADOPTION
ADORAIM
ADORAM
ADORATION ADORN
ADRAMMELECH
ADRAMYTTIUM
ADRIA
ADRIATIC
ADRIEL
ADULLAM
ADULLAMITE
ADULTERY
ADUMMIM
ADVENT, SECOND
ADVERSARY
ADVOCATE
AENEAS
AENON
AEON
AFFLICTION AFTERNOON
AGABUS
AGAG
AGAGITE
AGAPE
AGAR
AGATE
AGE
AGEE
AGORA
AGRAPHA
AGRICULTURE
AGRIPPA I
AGRIPPA II
AGUE
AGUR
AHAB
AHARAH
AHARHEL
AHASAI
AHASBAI

AHASUERUS
AHAVA
AHAZ
AHAZ, DIAL OF AHAZIAH
AHBAN
AHER
AHI
AHIAH
AHIAM
AHIAN
AHIEZER
AHIHUD
AHIJAH
AHIKAM
AHILUD
AHIMAAZ
AHIMAN
AHIMELECH
AHIMOTH
AHINADAB
AHINOAM
AHIO
AHIRA
AHIRAM
AHIRAMITES
AHISAMACH
AHISHAHAR
AHISHAR
AHITHOPHEL
AHITUB
AHLAB
AHLAI
AHOAH
AHOHI
AHOHITE
AHOLAH
AHOLIAB
AHOLIBAH
AHOLIBAMAH
AHUMAI
AHUZAM
AHUZZAM
AHUZZATH
AHZAI
AI
AIAH
AIATH

AIJA
AIJALON
AIJELETH SHAHAR
AIN
AIR
AJAH
AJALON
AKAN
AKELDAMA
AKKAD
AKKUB
AKRABBIM, ASCENT OF ALABASTER
ALAMETH
ALAMMELECH
ALAMOTH
ALARM
ALEMETH
ALEPH
ALEXANDER
ALEXANDRIA
ALEXANDRIANS
ALGUM
ALIAH
ALIAN
ALIEN
ALLEGORY
ALLELUIA
ALLIANCE
ALLON
ALLON BACHUTH ALLOTMENT
ALMIGHTY ALMODAD
ALMON
ALMON DIBLATHAIM
ALMOND
ALMS
ALMUG, ALOES
ALOTH
ALPHA AND OMEGA
ALPHABET
ALPHAEUS ALTAR
AL TASHCHETH
ALUSH
ALVAH
ALVAN

AMAD
AMAL
AMALEK
AMALEKITES
AMAM
AMANA
AMARANTH
AMARIAH
AMARNA, TELL EL-AMASA AMASAI
AMASHAI
AMASHSAI
AMASIAH
AMAU
AMAW
AMAZIAH
AMBASSADOR
AMBER
AMBITION, SELFISH
AMEN
AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION
AMETHYST
AMI
AMINADAB
AMITTAI
AMMAH
AMMI
AMMIEL
AMMIHUD
AMMINADAB
AMMINADIB
AMMISHADDAI
AMMIZABAD
AMMON
AMMONITES
AMMONITESS
AMNON
AMOK
AMON
AMORITES
AMOS
AMOS, BOOK OF AMOZ
AMPHIPOLIS
AMPLIAS
AMPLIATUS
AMRAM

AMRAMITES
AMRAPHEL
AMULET
AMZI ANAB
ANAH
ANAHARATH
ANAIAH
ANAK
ANAKIM
ANAMIM
ANAMMELECH
ANAN
ANANI
ANANIAH
ANANIAS
ANATH
ANATHEMA
ANATHOTH
ANATHOTHITE
ANCESTOR WORSHIP
ANCHOR
ANCIENT OF DAYS
ANCIENTS ANCIENT VERSIONS
ANDREW
ANDRONICUS
ANEM
ANER
ANETHOTHITE, ANETOTHITE
ANGEL
ANGEL OF GOD, ANGEL OF THE LORD
ANGELS, FALLEN
ANGER
ANGLE
ANIAM
ANIM
ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE
ANIMALS, UNCLEAN ANIMALS, WORSHIP OF ANISE
ANKLE CHAIN
ANKLETS
ANNA
ANNAS
ANNUNCIATION
ANOINT, ANOINTING
ANSWER

ANT
ANTEDILUVIANS
ANTELOPE
ANTHOTHIJAH
ANTHROPOMORPHISM
ANTHROPOPATHISM
ANTICHRIST, THE ANTIMONY
ANTIOCH OF PISIDIA
ANTIOCH OF SYRIA
ANTIOCHUS
ANTIPAS
ANTIPATRIS
ANTITYPE
ANTONIA, TOWER OF ANTOTHIJAH
ANUB
ANVIL
APE
APELLES
APHARSACHITES
APHARSATHCHITES
APHEK
APHEKAH
APHIAH
APHIK
APHRAH
APHSES
APIS
APOCALYPSE
APOCALYPTIC LITERATURE
APOCRYPHA, THE APOLLONIA
APOLLOS
APOSTASY
APOSTLE
APOSTLES’ CREED
APOSTOLIC, APOSTOLICAL
APOSTOLIC AGE
APOSTOLIC COUNCIL
APOTHECARY
APPAIM
APPAREL
APPEAL
APPHIA
APPIAN WAY
APPII FORUM
APPLE

APPLE OF THE EYE
APRON
AQABA, GULF OF AQUEDUCT
AQUILA
AR
ARA ARAB ARABAH
ARABIA
ARABIC VERSIONS
ARAD
ARAH
ARAM
ARAM DAMMESEK
ARAM–NAHARAIM
ARAMAIC LANGUAGE
ARAMAIC VERSION
ARAMEANS
ARAMITESS
ARAN
ARARAH
ARARAT
ARAUNAH
ARBA
ARBATHITE
ARBITE
ARBITRATE
ARCH
ARCHAEOLOGY OF THE BIBLE
ARCHANGEL
ARCHELAUS
ARCHER
ARCHEVITES
ARCHIPPUS
ARCHITECTURE
ARCHITES
ARCHWAY
ARCTURUS
ARD ARDITE
ARDON
ARELI
ARELITES
AREOPAGITE
AREOPAGUS
ARETAS
ARGOB

ARIDAI
ARIDATHA
ARIEH
ARIEL
ARIMATHEA
ARIOCH
ARISAI
ARISTARCHUS
ARISTOBULUS
ARK OF THE COVENANT
ARK OF MOSES ARK, NOAH’S
ARK OF THE TESTIMONY
ARKITES
ARM
ARMAGEDDON
ARMENIAN VERSIONS
ARMONI
ARMOR
ARMOR BEARER
ARMOR OF GOD
ARMORER
ARMORY
ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE
ARMY
ARNAN
ARNON
AROD
ARODI
AROER
AROERITE
ARPAD
ARPHAD
ARPHAXAD
ARROW
ARSENAL
ART
ARTAXERXES
ARTEMAS, ARTEMIS
ARTIFICER, ARTISAN
ARUBBOTH
ARUMAH
ARVAD
ARVADITES
ARZA
ASA ASAHEL
ASAHIAH

ASAIAH
ASAPH
ASAREEL
ASAREL
ASARELAH
ASCENSION OF CHRIST
ASCENSION OF ISAIAH
ASCENT OF AKRABBIM
ASCENTS, SONG OF ASENATH
ASER
ASH
ASHAN
ASHARELAH
ASHBEA
ASHBEL
ASHBELITES
ASHCHENAZ
ASHDOD
ASHDODITES
ASHDOTH-PISGAH
ASHER
ASHER, TRIBE OF
ASHERAH, ASHERIM, ASHEROTH
ASHERITES
ASHES
ASHHUR
ASHIMA, ASHIMAH
ASHKALONITES
ASHKELON
ASHKELONITES
ASHKENAZ
ASHNAH
ASHPENAZ
ASHRIEL
ASHTAROTH
ASHTAROTH, CITY OF ASHTERATHITE
ASHTEROTH KARNAIM
ASHTORETH
ASHUR
ASHURBANIPAL
ASHURITES
ASHURNASIRPAL
ASHVATH
ASIA
ASIA MINOR
ASIARCHS

ASIEL
ASNAH
ASNAPPER
ASP
ASPATHA
ASPEN ASPHALT
ASPHODEL
ASRIEL
ASRIELITES
ASS
ASSASSINS
ASSEMBLY
ASSHUR
ASSHURIM
ASSIR
ASSOS
ASSUMPTION OF MOSES
ASSUR
ASSURANCE
ASSYRIA
ASTAROTH
ASTARTE
ASTROLOGER
ASTROLOGY
ASTRONOMY
ASUPPIM, HOUSE OF ASYLUM
ASYNCRITUS
ATAD
ATARAH
ATAROTH
ATAROTH ADAR
ATER
ATHACH
ATHAIAH
ATHALIAH
ATHARIM
ATHEIST
ATHENIANS
ATHENS
ATHLAI
ATONEMENT
ATONEMENT, DAY OF ATROTH BETH JOAB
ATTAI
ATTALIA
ATTENDANT

ATTIRE
AUGURY
AUGUSTAN REGIMENT
AUGUSTUS
AUNT AUTHORITY
AUTHORIZED VERSION AVA
AVEN
AVENGER OF BLOOD
AVIM
AVITES
AVITH
AVVA
AVVIM
AVVITES
AWL
AX
AXLE
AYIN
AYYAH
AZAL
AZALIAH
AZANIAH
AZARAEL
AZAREEL
AZAREL
AZARIAH
AZARIAH, PRAYER OF AZARIAHU
AZARYAHU
AZAZ
AZAZEL
AZAZIAH
AZBUK
AZEKAH
AZEL
AZEM
AZGAD
AZIEL
AZIZA
AZMAVETH
AZMON
AZNOTH TABOR
AZOR
AZOTUS
AZRIEL
AZRIKAM

AZUBAH
AZUR
AZZAN
AZZUR

B

BAAL
BAAL–BERITH
BAAL GAD
BAAL HAMON
BAAL–HANAN
BAAL HAZOR
BAAL HERMON
BAAL MEON
BAAL OF PEOR
BAAL PERAZIM
BAAL SHALISHA
BAAL TAMAR
BAAL–ZEBUB
BAAL ZEPHON
BAALAH BAALATH
BAALATH BEER
BAALBEK
BAALE JUDAH
BAALI
BAALIM
BAALIS
BAANA
BAANAH
BAARA
BAASEIAH
BAASHA
BABBLER
BABEL, TOWER OF BABOON
BABYLON, CITY OF BABYLON IN THE NEW TESTAMENT
BABYLONIA
BACA, VALLEY OF BACHRITES
BACKBITE
BACKSLIDE
BADGER
BAG
BAGPIPE
BAHARUM

BAHARUMITE
BAHURIM
BAJITH
BAKBAKKAR
BAKBUK
BAKBUKIAH
BAKER
BALAAM
BALADAN
BALAH
BALAK
BALANCES
BALDNESS
BALM
BALM OF GILEAD
BALSAM
BAMAH
BAMOTH
BAMOTH BAAL
BAN
BANI
BANISH
BANKER
BANKING BANNER BANQUET
BAPTISM
BAPTISM OF FIRE
BAPTISM FOR THE DEAD
BAR–
BARABBAS
BARACHEL
BARACHIAH
BARACHIAS
BARAK
BARBARIAN
BARBER
BAREFOOT
BARHUMITE
BARIAH
BAR–JESUS BAR–JONAH
BARKOS
BARLEY
BARN
BARNABAS BARRACKS
BARREL

BARREN
BARSABAS
BARSABBAS
BARTHOLOMEW
BARTHOLOMEW, GOSPEL OF BARTIMAEUS
BARTIMEUS
BARUCH
BARUCH, APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH, BOOK OF BARZILLAI
BASEMATH
BASHAN
BASHAN, MOUNTAIN OF BASHEMATH BASIN
BASKET
BASKETMAKER
BASMATH
BASTARD
BAT
BATH BATHING
BATH RABBIM
BATHSHEBA
BATHSHUA
BATTERING RAM
BATTLE
BATTLE AX, BATTLE BOW
BATTLEMENT
BAVAI
BAVVAI
BAY TREE
BAZLITH
BDELLIUM
BEALIAH
BEALOTH
BEAM
BEAN
BEAR BEARD BEAST BEATING BEATITUDES, THE BEAUTIFUL GATE
BEBAI
BECHER
BECHERITES

BECHORATH
BECORATH
BED, BEDROOM
BEDAD
BEDAN
BEDEIAH
BEE
BEELIADA
BEELZEBUB
BEELZEBUL
BEER
BEER ELIM
BEER LAHAI ROI
BEERA
BEERAH
BEERI
BEEROTH
BEEROTH-BENE-JAAKAN
BEEROTHITE
BEERSHEBA
BEETLE
BEGGAR
BEGINNING
BEGOTTEN, ONLY BEHEMOTH
BEKAH
BEKER
BEL
BEL AND THE DRAGON
BELA
BELAH
BELAITES
BELIAL
BELIEVE, BELIEVER
BELL
BELLOWS
BELLY
BELOVED DISCIPLE
BELSHAZZAR
BELT
BELTESHAZZAR
BEN
BEN-ABINADAB
BEN-AMMI
BEN-DEKAR
BEN-DEKER
BEN-GEBER
BEN-HADAD

BEN-HAIL
BEN-HANAN
BEN-HAYIL
BEN-HESED
BEN-HUR
BEN-JAHAZIEL
BEN JOSIPHIAH
BEN-ONI
BEN-ZOHETH
BENAIAH
BENCH
BENE BERAK
BENE JAAKAN
BENE-KEDEM
BENEDICTION
BENEFACTOR
BENINU
BENJAMIN
BENJAMIN, TRIBE OF BENJAMIN’S GATE
BENJAMITE
BENO
BEON
BEOR
BERA
BERACAH
BERACHAH
BERACHIAH
BERAIAH
BEREA
BERECHIAH
BERED
BERI
BERIAH
BERIITES
BERITES
BERITH
BERNICE
BERODACH–BALADAN
BEROTHAH
BEROTHAI
BEROTHITE
BERUTHA
BERYL
BESAI
BESODEIAH
BESOM
BESOR, THE BROOK

BESTIALITY
BETAH
BETEN
BETH BETH ACACIA
BETH ANATH
BETH ANOTH
BETH APHRAH
BETH ARABAH
BETH-ARAM
BETH ARBEL
BETH AVEN
BETH AZMAVETH
BETH-AZMOTH
BETH BAAL MEON
BETH BARAH
BETH-BIREI
BETH BIRI
BETH CAR
BETH DAGON
BETH DIBLATHAIM
BETH EDEN
BETH EKED OF THE SHEPHERDS
BETH EMEK
BETH EZEL
BETH GADER
BETH GAMUL
BETH HACCEREM
BETH HACCHEREM
BETH HAGGAN
BETH HAKKEREM
BETH HARAM
BETH HARAN
BETH-HOGLA
BETH HOGLAH
BETH HORON
BETH JESHIMOTH
BETH JESIMOTH
BETH-LE-APHRAH
BETH LEBAOTH
BETH MARCABOTH
BETH MEON
BETH MILLO
BETH NIMRAH
BETH OPHRAH
BETH PAZZEZ
BETH PELET
BETH PEOR

BETH-PHELET
BETH-RAPHA
BETH REHOB
BETH SHAN
BETH SHEAN
BETH SHEMESH
BETH-SHITTAH
BETH TAPPUAH
BETH ZUR
BETHABARA
BETHANY
BETHEL
BETHER
BETHESDA
BETHLEHEM
BETHLEHEMITE
BETHPHAGE
BETHSAIDA
BETHUEL
BETHUL
BETONIM
BETROTHAL
BEULAH BEWITCH
BEZAANANNIM
BEZAI
BEZALEEL
BEZALEL
BEZEK
BEZER
BIBLE, THE
BIBLE, INTERPRETATION OF THE, OR HERMENEUTICS
BIBLE VERSIONS AND TRANSLATIONS
BIBLICAL CRITICISM
BIBLICAL ETHICS
BIBLICAL THEOLOGY
BICHRI
BICHRITES
BIDKAR
BIER
BIGTHA
BIGTHAN
BIGVAI
BILDAD
BILEAM
BILGAH
BILGAI
BILHAH

BILHAN
BILSHAN
BIMHAL
BINDING AND LOOSING
BINEA
BINNUI
BIRDS
BIRSHA
BIRTH
BIRTH, NEW BIRTH, VIRGIN BIRTHDAY
BIRTHRIGHT
BIRTHSTOOL
BIRZAITH
BISHLAM
BISHOP
BISHOP’S BIBLE
BIT AND BRIDLE
BITHIAH
BITHRON
BITHYNIA
BITTER HERBS
BITTERN
BITTERNESS
BITTERWEED
BITUMEN
BIZIOTHIAH
BIZJOTHJAH
BIZTHA
BLACK
BLACK VULTURE
BLACKSMITH
BLAINS
BLASPHEMY
BLAST, BLASTING
BLASTUS
BLEACHER
BLEMISH
BLESS, BLESSING BLESSING, CUP OF BLIGHT BLINDNESS
BLOOD BLOOD, AVENGER OF BLOOD, FLOW OF, BLOODY FLUX
BLOODY SWEAT
BLUE

BOANERGES
BOAR BOAT
BOAZ
BOCHERU
BOCHIM
BODY
BODY ARMOR
BODY OF CHRIST
BODY, SPIRITUAL BOHAN
BOILS
BOKERU
BOKIM
BOLT
BOND
BONDAGE, BONDMAN, BOND SERVANT
BONE, BONES
BONNET
BOOK
BOOK OF THE COVENANT
BOOK OF LIFE
BOOTH
BOOTHS, FEAST OF BOOTY
BOOZ
BOR ASHAN
BORDER
BORN AGAIN
BORROW BOSCATH
BOSOM
BOSOM, ABRAHAM’S
BOSOR
BOTCH
BOTTLE
BOTTOMLESS PIT
BOUNDARY STONES
BOW BOWELS
BOWING
BOWL
BOWSHOT
BOX
BOX TREE
BOZEZ
BOZKATH
BOZRAH

BRACELET
BRANCH
BRASS
BRAY
BRAZEN SEA
BRAZEN SERPENT
BREAD
BREAD, FEAST OF UNLEAVENED BREAST
BREASTPLATE
BREASTPLATE OF HIGH PRIEST BREATH
BREECHES BRETHREN
BREWER
BRIBE
BRICK
BRICKMAKER, BRICKWORKER BRIDE BRIDEGROOM
BRIDEGROOM, FRIEND OF THE BRIDLE BRIER
BRIGANDINE
BRIMSTONE
BROIDERED
BROKEN-FOOTED, BROKEN-HANDED BRONZE
BRONZE SEA
BRONZE SERPENT
BRONZE WORKER
BROOK
BROOM BROTHER
BROTHERLY LOVE
BROTHERS, LORD’S
BROTHER’S WIFE
BROWN
BRUISE
BUCK
BUCKET
BUCKLER
BUFFALO
BUGLE
BUILDER
BUKKI
BUKKIAH
BUL

BULL, BULLOCK
BULRUSH
BULRUSHES, ARK OF BULWARKS
BUNAH
BUNNI BURDEN BURGLARY
BURIAL
BURN
BURNING BUSH
BURNT OFFERING BUSHEL
BUSTARD
BUSYBODY
BUTLER
BUTTER BUYING
BUZ
BUZI
BUZITE
BUZZARD
BYBLOS

C

CABBON
CABUL
CAESAR
CAESAREA
CAESAREA PHILIPPI
CAESAR’S HOUSEHOLD
CAGE
CAIAPHAS
CAIN
CAINAN
CAKE
CALAH
CALAMUS
CALCOL
CALDRON
CALEB
CALEB EPHRATHAH
CALENDAR
CALF
CALF WORSHIP
CALL, CALLING
CALNEH

CALNO
CALVARY
CAMEL
CAMEL DRIVER
CAMEL’S HAIR
CAMEL-THORN
CAMON
CAMP, ENCAMPMENT
CANA
CANAAN
CANAANITES
CANAANITESS
CANAANITE, SIMON THE CANALS
CANANAEAN
CANCER
CANDACE
CANDLE
CANDLESTICK
CANE
CANKER
CANKERWORM
CANNEH
CANON CANOPY
CANTICLES
CAPERBERRY
CAPERNAUM
CAPH
CAPHTOR
CAPITAL
CAPPADOCIA
CAPSTONE CAPTIVE
CAPTIVITY CARAVAN
CARBUNCLE
CARCAS
CARCASS
CARCHEMISH
CARE
CAREAH
CARGO
CARKAS
CARMEL CARMELITE
CARMELITESS
CARMI

CARNAL
CARPENTER
CARPUS
CARRIAGE
CARRION VULTURE
CARSHENA
CART CARVER
CASEMENT
CASIPHIA
CASLUHIM
CASSIA
CASTAWAY
CASTLE
CASTOR AND POLLUX
CAT
CATACOMBS
CATERPILLAR
CATHOLIC EPISTLES
CATTLE
CAUDA
CAUL
CAUSEWAY
CAVALRY CAVE
CEDAR CEILING CELEBRATE CELLAR
CENCHREA
CENCHREAE
CENSER
CENSUS
CENTURION
CEPHAS
CHAFF CHAINS
CHALCEDONY
CHALCOL
CHALDEA
CHALDEAN ASTROLOGERS
CHALDEANS
CHALDEANS, UR OF THE CHALKSTONE
CHAMBER
CHAMBERLAIN
CHAMELEON; CHAMOIS CHAMPION

CHANCELLOR
CHANGERS, MONEY
CHANT
CHARCOAL
CHARGER
CHARIOT
CHARIOTEER
CHARIOTS OF THE SUN
CHARITY CHARM
CHARRAN
CHASTE
CHASTEN
CHASTISEMENT
CHEBAR
CHECKER WORK
CHEDORLAOMER
CHEEK
CHEESE
CHELAL
CHELLUH
CHELUB
CHELUBAI
CHELUH
CHELUHI
CHEMARIM
CHEMOSH
CHENAANAH
CHENANI
CHENANIAH
CHEPHAR HAAMMONI
CHEPHIRAH
CHERAN
CHERETHITES
CHERITH
CHERUB
CHERUBIM
CHESALON
CHESED
CHESIL CHEST
CHESTNUT
CHESULLOTH
CHETH
CHEZIB
CHICKEN
CHIDON
CHIEF

CHILD, CHILDREN
CHILDBEARING
CHILDREN OF GOD
CHILEAB
CHILION
CHILMAD
CHIMHAM CHIMNEY
CHINNERETH, CHINNEROTH, CINNEROTH
CHIOS
CHISEL
CHISLEV
CHISLON
CHISLOTH TABOR
CHITLISH
CHITTIM
CHIUN
CHLOE
CHOINIX
CHORASHAN
CHORAZIN
CHOSEN CHOSEN PEOPLE
CHOZEBA
CHRIST
CHRIST, ASCENSION OF CHRIST, CRUCIFIXION OF CHRIST, DEATH OF CHRIST, DIVINITY OF CHRIST, HUMANITY OF CHRIST, PERSON OF CHRIST, TEMPTATION OF CHRISTIAN
CHRISTIANITY
CHRONICLES, BOOKS OF FIRST AND SECOND CHRONOLOGY, NEW TESTAMENT
CHRONOLOGY, OLD TESTAMENT
CHRYSOLITE, CHRYSOPRASE, CHRYSOPRASUS
CHUB
CHUN
CHURCH
CHURCH GOVERNMENT
CHUZA
CILICIA
CINNAMON
CINNEROTH CIRCLE
CIRCUIT

CIRCUMCISION CIRCUMFERENCE
CISTERN CITADEL
CITIES OF THE PLAIN
CITIES OF REFUGE
CITIZENSHIP
CITRON
CITY
CITY CLERK
CITY OF DAVID CITY, HOLY CITY OF SALT
CITY OF WATERS
CLAUDA
CLAUDIA
CLAUDIUS
CLAUDIUS LYSIAS
CLAW
CLAY
CLAY TABLETS
CLEAN, CLEANNESS
CLEFT
CLEMENT
CLEOPAS
CLEOPHAS
CLERK, CITY CLOAK CLOPAS CLOSET
CLOTH
CLOTHES, CLOTHING
CLOUD
CLOUD, PILLAR OF CLOUT
CLUB
CNIDUS
COAL COAST
COAT COAT OF MAIL
COBRA, COCK, COCKATRICE
COCKCROWING
COCKLE
CODEX
COFFER
COFFIN COHORT

COINS
COL-HOZEH COLLECTION COLLEGE COLONY
COLORS OF THE BIBLE
COLOSSAE
COLOSSE
COLOSSIANS, EPISTLE TO THE COLT
COMFORTER
COMMANDMENT
COMMANDMENT, NEW COMMANDMENTS, TEN COMMERCE
COMMON-LANDS
COMMON LIFE COMMUNION
COMMUNITY OF GOODS
COMPASS COMPASSION
COMPTROLLER
CONANIAH
CONCISION
CONCOURSES
CONCUBINE
CONCUPISCENCE
CONDEMN, CONDEMNATION CONDUIT
CONEY
CONFECTIONARY, CONFECTIONER
CONFESSION
CONFIRM, CONFIRMATION CONGREGATION
CONGREGATION, MOUNT OF CONIAH
CONONIAH CONSCIENCE
CONSECRATION CONSOLATION
CONSTELLATIONS
CONSUMMATION
CONSUMPTION
CONTENTMENT
CONTRITE CONTROLLER
CONVERSATION CONVERSION

CONVICTION
CONVOCATION
COOK
COOKING
COOS
COPPER
COPPERSMITH
COR
COR ASHAN
CORAL CORBAN
CORD
CORE CORIANDER
CORINTH
CORINTHIANS, EPISTLES TO THE CORMORANT
CORN
CORNELIAN
CORNELIUS
CORNER GATE
CORNER, UPPER ROOM AT THE CORNERSTONE CORNET
CORRECTION
CORRUPTION
CORRUPTION, MOUNT OF COS
COSAM
COSMETICS
COTTAGE
COTTON
COUCH
COUNCIL
COUNCIL OF JERUSALEM COUNSELOR
COUPLINGS COURAGE COURSE
COURT
COURT OF THE GENTILES
COURT, SANCTUARY
COURTIER
COURTS, JUDICIAL COUSIN COVENANT
COVENANT, BOOK OF THE COVENANT, NEW

COVENANT PEOPLE
COVENANT OF SALT
COVERING THE HEAD
COVETOUSNESS
COW
COZ
COZBI
COZEBA
CRACKNELS
CRAFTINESS
CRAFTSMAN
CRANE CREATION CREATURE CREDITOR
CREED
CREEPING THINGS
CRESCENS
CRETANS
CRETE
CRIB
CRICKET CRIME CRIMINAL
CRIMINALS, TWO CRIMSON
CRISPING PINS
CRISPUS CRITICISM
CROCODILE
CROCUS
CROOKBACKED CROP
CROSS
CROW
CROWN
CROWN OF THORNS
CRUCIFIXION OF CHRIST
CRUSE
CRYSTAL CUBIT
CUCKOO
CUCUMBER
CUD
CUDGEL
CUMI
CUMMIN
CUN

CUNEIFORM
CUP
CUPBEARER
CURSE
CURTAIN
CUSH
CUSHAN
CUSHAN–RISHATHAIM
CUSHI
CUSHION
CUSHITE
CUSTODIAN
CUTH, CUTHAH
CUTTINGS OF THE FLESH
CUZA
CYMBAL
CYPRESS
CYPRUS
CYRENE
CYRENIUS
CYRUS

D

DABAREH
DABBASHETH
DABBESHETH
DABERATH
DAGGER
DAGON
DAILY
DAILY OFFERING
DALAIAH
DALETH
DALMANUTHA
DALMATIA
DALPHON DAMAGES
DAMARIS
DAMASCENES
DAMASCUS
DAMN, DAMNATION
DAN
DAN, CAMP OF DAN, TRIBE OF DANCING
DANIEL
DANIEL, APOCRYPHAL ADDITIONS TO

DANIEL, BOOK OF DANITES
DAN JAAN
DANNAH
DARA
DARDA
DARIC
DARIUS DARKNESS
DARKON
DART
DATHAN
DAUGHTER
DAVID
DAVID, CITY OF
DAVID, TOWER OF DAWN, DAWNING
DAY
DAY OF ATONEMENT DAY OF CHRIST, THE
DAY OF JUDGMENT
DAY OF THE LORD, THE DAY’S JOURNEY
DAYSMAN
DAYSPRING
DEACON
DEACONESS
DEAD, THE DEAD, ABODE OF THE DEAD, BAPTISM FOR THE
DEAD SEA
DEAD SEA SCROLLS
DEAF, DEAFNESS DEATH
DEATH, SECOND
DEBIR
DEBORAH DEBT
DECALOGUE
DECAPOLIS
DECISION, VALLEY OF DECREE
DEDAN
DEDANITES
DEDICATION
DEDICATION, FEAST OF DEEP, THE DEER

DEFECT
DEFILE DEGREES, SONG OF DEHAVITES
DELAIAH
DELILAH
DELUGE
DEMAS
DEMETRIUS DEMONS
DEMON POSSESSION
DEN
DEN OF LIONS
DENARIUS
DENY DEPOSIT
DEPRAVITY
DEPUTY DERBE
DESCENT INTO HADES DESERT DESIGNER
DESIRE OF ALL NATIONS
DESOLATION, ABOMINATION OF DESTROYER
DESTRUCTION
DEUEL
DEUTERONOMY, BOOK OF DEVIL
DEW
DIADEM
DIAL
DIAL OF AHAZ
DIAMOND
DIANA DIASPORA
DIBLAH
DIBLAIM
DIBON
DIBRI
DICE PLAYING
DIDACHE
DIDRACHMA
DIDYMUS
DIGNITARIES
DIGNITIES
DIKLAH
DILEAN

DILL
DIMNAH
DIMON
DIMONAH
DINAH
DINAITES
DINHABAH
DIONYSIUS THE AREOPAGITE
DIOTROPHES
DIPHATH
DIRECTION
DISABILITIES AND DEFORMITIES
DISCERNING OF SPIRITS DISCIPLE DISCIPLINE
DISEASES OF THE BIBLE DISH
DISHAN
DISHON
DISHONESTY
DISOBEDIENCE
DISPENSATION
DISPERSION
DISPERSION OF THE NATIONS
DISQUALIFIED
DISSENSION
DISSIPATION
DISTAFF
DIVINATION
DIVINE NAMES
DIVINER
DIVINER’S TEREBINTH TREE
DIVORCE
DIZAHAB
DOCTOR DOCTRINE
DODAI
DODANIM
DODAVAH
DODO
DOE
DOEG
DOG
DONKEY
DOOR
DOORKEEPER
DOORPOSTS
DOPHKAH

DOR
DORCAS
DOT
DOTHAN
DOUBLE
DOUBT
DOUGH
DOVE
DOVE’S DUNG
DOWRY
DOXOLOGY
DRACHMA
DRAGNET DRAGON DRAGON, BEL AND THE DRAGON WELL
DRAM
DRAWER OF WATER
DREAM
DREGS
DRESS OF THE BIBLE
DRINK
DRINK OFFERING
DRINK, STRONG DRIVER
DROMEDARY
DROPSY
DROSS
DROUGHT
DRUNKENNESS
DRUSILLA
DUKE
DULCIMER
DUMAH
DUMB SPIRIT, DUMBNESS
DUNG
DUNG GATE
DUNG HILL
DUNG PORT
DUNGEON
DURA
DUST
DUTY DWARF DWELLING
DYER
DYSENTERY

E

EAGLE
EAGLE OWL
EAR
EARNEST
EARRINGS EARTH
EARTH, ENDS OF THE EARTH, FOUR CORNERS OF THE EARTH, THE NEW EARTH, PILLARS OF THE EARTH, VAULTED EARTHQUAKE
EAST
EAST, CHILDREN OF EAST GATE
EAST WIND
EASTER
EASTERN SEA EATING
EBAL
EBED
EBED-MELECH
EBENEZER
EBER
EBEZ
EBIASAPH
EBONY
EBRON
EBRONAH
ECBATANA
ECCE HOMO
ECCLESIASTES, BOOK OF ECCLESIASTICUS
ECLIPSE
ECZEMA
ED
EDAR
EDAR, TOWER OF EDEN
EDER
EDOM
EDOMITES
EDREI
EDUCATION
EGG, EGGS
EGLAH

EGLAIM
EGLATH-SHELISHIYAH
EGLON
EGYPT
EGYPT, BROOK OF EHI
EHUD
EKER
EKRON
EKRONITES
EL
EL ELOHE ISRAEL
EL OLAM
EL PARAN
EL SHADDAI
EL ELYON
ELADAH
ELAH
ELAM
ELAMITES
ELASAH
ELATH
ELDAAH
ELDAD
ELDER ELEAD
ELEADAH
ELEALEH
ELEASAH
ELEAZAR ELECT
ELECT LADY ELECTION ELEMENTS
ELEPH
ELEPHANT
ELEPHANTINE
ELHANAN
ELI
ELI, ELI, LAMA SABACHTHANI
ELIAB
ELIADA
ELIAHBA
ELIAKIM
ELIAM
ELIAS
ELIASAPH
ELIASHIB

ELIATHAH
ELIDAD
ELIEHOENAI
ELIEL
ELIENAI
ELIEZER
ELIHOENAI
ELIHOREPH
ELIHU
ELIJAH
ELIKA
ELIM
ELIMELECH
ELIOENAI
ELIPHAL
ELIPHALET
ELIPHAZ
ELIPHELEH
ELIPHELEHU
ELIPHELET
ELISHA ELISHAH
ELISHAMA
ELISHAPHAT
ELISHEBA
ELISHUA
ELIUD
ELIZABETH
ELIZAPHAN
ELIZUR
ELKANAH
ELKOSHITE
ELLASAR
ELM
ELMODAM
ELNAAM
ELNATHAN
ELOHIM
ELOI
ELON
ELON BETH HANAN
ELONITES
ELOTH
ELPAAL
ELPALET
ELPELET
ELTEKEH
ELTEKON

ELTOLAD
ELUL
ELUZAI
ELYMAS
ELZABAD
ELZAPHAN
EMBALMER
EMBALMING
EMBROIDERER
EMBROIDERY
EMEK KEZIZ
EMERALD
EMEROD
EMERY
EMIM
EMITES
EMMANUEL EMMAUS EMPEROR
EMPEROR WORSHIP
EN
EN DOR
EN EGLAIM
EN GANNIM
EN GEDI
EN HADDAH
EN HAKKORE
EN HAZOR
EN MISHPAT
EN RIMMON
EN ROGEL
EN SHEMESH
EN TAPPUAH
ENAIM
ENAM
ENAN
ENCAMPMENT
ENCHANTMENT ENEMY ENGINE
ENGLISH VERSIONS
ENGRAVER ENMITY
ENOCH
ENOCH, BOOK OF ENOS ENOSH
ENQUIRE OF THE LORD

ENROLLMENT
ENSIGN
ENVOY
ENVY
EPAENETUS
EPAPHRAS
EPAPHRODITUS
EPENETUS
EPHAH
EPHAI
EPHER
EPHES DAMMIM
EPHESIANS
EPHESIANS, EPISTLE TO THE EPHESUS
EPHLAL
EPHOD
EPHOD OF HIGH PRIEST
EPHPHATHA
EPHRAIM
EPHRAIM, CITY OF EPHRAIM, FOREST OF EPHRAIM, GATE OF EPHRAIM, MOUNTAINS OF EPHRAIM, TRIBE OF EPHRAIMITES
EPHRAIN
EPHRATH
EPHRATHAH
EPHRATHITE
EPHRON
EPICUREANS
EPILEPSY
EPIPHANES
EPISTLE
ER
ERAN
ERASTUS
ERECH
ERI
ERROR
ESARHADDON
ESAU
ESAU’S WIVES
ESCHATOLOGY
ESDRAELON
ESDRAS, BOOKS OF ESEK

ESH-BAAL
ESHBAN
ESHCOL
ESHEAN
ESHEK
ESHKALONITE
ESHTAOL
ESHTAOLITES
ESHTAULITES
ESHTEMOA
ESHTEMOH
ESHTON
ESLI
ESPOUSAL
ESROM
ESSENES
ESTHER
ESTHER, ADDITIONS TO ESTHER, BOOK OF ETAM
ETERNAL LIFE
ETERNITY
ETHAM
ETHAN ETHANIM
ETHBAAL
ETHER
ETHICS, BIBLICAL ETHIOPIA
ETHIOPIAN EUNUCH
ETHIOPIAN VERSIONS
ETH KAZIN
ETHNAN
ETHNI
EUBULUS
EUCHARIST
EUNICE EUNUCH
EUODIA
EUODIAS
EUPHRATES
EUROCLYDON
EUTYCHUS
EVANGELIST
EVE
EVEN, EVENING
EVERLASTING
EVI

EVIL
EVILDOER
EVIL EYE
EVIL-FAVOREDNESS
EVIL-MERODACH
EVIL ONE
EVIL-SPEAKING
EVIL SPIRIT
EWE
EXACTOR
EXCOMMUNICATION
EXECUTIONER
EXEGESIS
EXERCISE, BODILY
EXHORTATION
EXILE
EXODUS, THE EXODUS, BOOK OF EXORCISM
EXORCIST
EXPEDIENT, EXPEDIENCY
EXTORTION, EXTORTIONER
EYE
EYE OF A NEEDLE
EYE SALVE
EYESERVICE
EYEWITNESS
EYES, COVERING OF THE EYES, PAINTING OF EZAR
EZBAI
EZBON
EZEKIAS
EZEKIEL
EZEKIEL, BOOK OF EZEL
EZEM
EZER
EZION GEBER
EZNITE
EZRA
EZRA, BOOK OF EZRAH
EZRAHITE
EZRI

F

FABLE
FACE FACES, BREAD OF FAIR
FAIR HAVENS
FAITH FAITHFULNESS
FALCON FALL, THE FALLOW DEER
FALLOW GROUND
FALSE CHRISTS
FALSE PROPHET, THE FALSE PROPHETS
FAMILIAR SPIRITS FAMILY
FAMINE
FAN
FANNER
FARM, FARMING FARMER
FAST, FASTING
FAT
FATHER
FATHER, GOD THE
FATHER-IN-LAW
FATHERLESS
FATHER’S HOUSE
FATHOM
FATLING
FATTED
FAWN
FEAR
FEASTS AND FESTIVALS
FEEBLE KNEES
FEEBLE-MINDED
FEET, DISEASED
FEET, WASHING
FELIX
FELLOES
FELLOW FELLOWSHIP FENCE
FENCED CITIES
FERRET
FERRYBOAT
FESTIVALS
FESTUS, PORCIUS

FETTERS FEVER
FIDELITY FIELD
FIELD OF SHARP SWORDS
FIFE
FIG, FIG TREE
FIGUREHEAD
FILE
FILLY
FILTH, FILTHINESS
FINE, FINES FINER FINGER
FINING POT
FINISHER
FINS
FIR, FIR TREE
FIRE
FIRE BAPTISM
FIRE, LAKE OF FIREBRAND
FIREPAN
FIRMAMENT
FIRST-BEGOTTEN
FIRSTBORN
FIRSTFRUITS
FIRST GATE
FIRSTLING
FISH
FISH GATE
FISHERMAN
FISHER OWL
FISHHOOK FISHING
FITCH
FLAG
FLAGON
FLANGE
FLANK
FLASK
FLAT NOSE
FLAX
FLEA
FLEECE FLESH
FLESH HOOK FLESH POT

FLINT
FLOCK FLOOD, THE FLOOR
FLOUR
FLOWERS FLUTE FLY
FOAL
FODDER
FOLD
FOLLY
FOOD
FOOL, FOOLISHNESS FOOT
FOOTMAN
FOOTSTOOL
FOOT-WASHING
FORBEARANCE
FORCES
FORD
FOREHEAD
FOREIGNER
FOREKNOWLEDGE
FOREMAN
FORERUNNER
FORESKIN
FOREST FORGE
FORGER
FORGIVENESS FORK
FORMER GATE
FORNICATION
FORT, FORTIFICATION
FORTIFIED CITIES
FORTUNATUS
FORTUNE-TELLING FOUNDATION
FOUNDATION GATE FOUNDER FOUNTAIN
FOUNTAIN GATE
FOWL
FOWLER
FOX
FRANKINCENSE
FREEDMAN

FREEDOM FRIEND
FRIEND OF THE BRIDEGROOM FRINGE
FROG
FRONTLET
FROST
FRUIT
FRYING PAN
FUEL
FULFILL FULLER
FULLER’S FIELD
FULLER’S SOAP
FULLNESS
FUNERAL
FURLONG
FURNACE
FURNACES, TOWER OF THE FURNITURE
FURROW FURY FUTURE

G

GAAL
GAASH
GABA
GABBAI
GABBATHA
GABRIEL
GAD
GAD, RAVINE OF
GAD, TRIBE OF GADARA
GADARENES
GADDI
GADDIEL
GADI
GADITES
GAHAM
GAHAR
GAIUS
GALAL
GALATIA
GALATIANS
GALATIANS, EPISTLE TO THE

GALBANUM
GALEED
GALILEAN
GALILEE
GALILEE, SEA OF GALL
GALLERY
GALLEY
GALLIM
GALLIO
GALLON
GALLOWS
GAMALIEL GAMES
GAMMAD
GAMUL
GANGRENE GARDEN
GARDEN HOUSE
GARDENER
GAREB
GARLAND
GARLIC
GARMITE
GARNER
GARRISON
GASHMU
GATAM
GATE, CITY
GATES OF JERUSALEM AND THE TEMPLE
GATEKEEPER
GATH
GATH HEPHER
GATH RIMMON
GAULANITIS
GAZA
GAZATHITES
GAZELLE
GAZEZ
GAZITES
GAZZAM
GEBA
GEBAL
GEBALITES
GEBER
GEBIM
GECKO
GEDALIAH

GEDER
GEDERAH
GEDERATHITE
GEDERITE
GEDEROTH
GEDEROTHAIM
GEDOR
GE–HARASHIM
GEHAZI
GEHENNA
GELILOTH
GEM
GEMALLI
GEMARA
GEMARIAH
GENEALOGIES OF JESUS
GENEALOGY
GENERATION GENEROSITY
GENESIS, BOOK OF GENITALS
GENNESARET
GENTILES GENTILES, COURT OF GENTLENESS
GENUBATH
GERA
GERAH
GERAR
GERASA
GERASENES
GERGESENES
GERIZIM
GERSHOM
GERSHOMITES
GERSHON
GERSHONITES
GERUTH KIMHAM
GESHEM
GESHUR
GESHURI
GESHURITES
GETHER
GETHSEMANE
GEUEL
GEZER
GEZRITES
GHIMEL

GHOST
GHOST, HOLY GIAH
GIANTS
GIANTS, VALLEY OF GIBBAR
GIBBETHON
GIBEA
GIBEAH, GIBEATH
GIBEATH ELOHIM
GIBEATHITE
GIBEON
GIBEONITES
GIBLITES
GIDDALTI
GIDDEL
GIDEON
GIDEONI
GIDOM
GIER EAGLE
GIFT, GIVING
GIFT OF HEALING; GIFTS, SPIRITUAL GIFT OF TONGUES
GIHON
GILALAI
GILBOA
GILEAD
GILEAD, BALM OF GILEADITES
GILGAL
GILOH
GILONITE
GIMEL
GIMZO
GINATH
GINNETHO
GINNETHOI
GINNETHON
GIRDLE
GIRGASHITE
GIRZITES
GISHPA
GITTAH-HEPHER
GITTAIM
GITTITE
GITTITH
GIZONITE
GIZRITES

GLASS GLASS, SEA GLASS WORKER
GLEANING
GLEDE
GLORIFY GLORY
GLUTTON
GNASH, GNASHING OF TEETH
GNAT
GNOSTICISM
GOAD
GOAH
GOAT
GOATH
GOATHERD
GOAT’S HAIR
GOB
GOBLET
GOD
GOD, CHILDREN OF GOD, IMAGE OF GOD, NAMES OF
GOD, SONS OF
GOD, UNKNOWN
GOD-WHO-FORGIVES GODDESS
GODHEAD
GODLINESS
GODS, PAGAN
GOG
GOIIM
GOLAN
GOLD
GOLD, PIECE OF GOLDEN CALF
GOLDSMITH
GOLGOTHA
GOLIATH
GOMER
GOMORRAH
GONG
GOOD
GOODMAN GOODNESS
GOOSE
GOPHERWOOD
GOSHEN

GOSPEL GOSPELS
GOSSIP
GOTHIC VERSIONS
GOURD
GOVERNMENT
GOVERNOR
GOZAN
GRACE
GRAFT, GRAFTING
GRAIN
GRANARY
GRAPES
GRASSHOPPER
GRATE, GRATING GRATITUDE GRAVE
GRAVECLOTHES
GRAVEN IMAGE
GREAT LIZARD, GREAT OWL GREAVES
GREECE
GREEK GREEKS
GREEK VERSIONS
GREEN
GREEN FELDSPAR, GREEN JASPER GREETING
GREYHOUND GRIEF
GRIFFON GRIND
GRINDERS
GROVE
GRUB
GUARANTEE
GUARD
GUARD, GATE OF THE; GUARDHOUSE, GATE OF THE GUARDIAN
GUDGODAH
GUEST
GUEST ROOM
GUILE
GUILT, GUILTY
GUILT OFFERING
GULF
GUM RESIN
GUNI

GUNITES
GUR, ASCENT TO GUR BAAL
GUTTER GYMNASIUM

H

HAAHASHTARI
HABAIAH
HABAKKUK
HABAKKUK, BOOK OF HABAZZINIAH
HABERGEON
HABIRU
HABITATION
HABOR
HACALIAH
HACHILAH
HACHMONI
HACHMONITE
HADAD
HADADEZER
HADAD RIMMON
HADAR
HADAREZER
HADASHAH
HADASSAH
HADATTAH
HADES
HADID
HADLAI
HADORAM
HADRACH
HAFT
HAGAB
HAGABA, HAGABAH
HAGAR
HAGARENES
HAGARITES
HAGGAI
HAGGAI, BOOK OF HAGGEDOLIM
HAGGERI
HAGGI
HAGGIAH
HAGGITES
HAGGITH
HAGIOGRAPHA
HAGRI
HAGRITES
HAHIROTH
HAI

HAIL
HAILSTONES
HAIR
HAKILAH
HAKKATAN
HAKKOZ
HAKUPHA
HALAH
HALAK
HALF-SHEKEL
HALF-TRIBE
HALHUL
HALI
HALL
HALL, JUDGMENT
HALLEL
HALLELUJAH
HALLOHESH
HALLOW
HALOHESH
HALT
HAM
HAMAN
HAMATH
HAMATH ZOBAH
HAMATHITES
HAMITES
HAMMATH
HAMMEDATHA
HAMMELECH
HAMMER
HAMMOLECHETH
HAMMOLEKETH
HAMMON
HAMMOTH DOR
HAMMUEL
HAMMURAPI, CODE OF HAMONAH
HAMON GOG
HAMOR
HAMRAN
HAMSTRING
HAMUEL
HAMUL
HAMULITES
HAMUTAL
HANAMEEL
HANAN

HANANEEL
HANANI
HANANIAH
HAND
HANDBREADTH
HANDKERCHIEF HANDLE
HANDPIKE, HANDSTAFF
HANDS, LAYING ON OF HANDWRITING
HANES
HANGING
HANIEL
HANNAH
HANNATHON
HANNIEL
HANOCH
HANOCHITES
HANUKKAH
HANUN
HAPHRAIM
HAPPIZZEZ
HARA
HARADAH
HARAN
HARAN
HARARITE
HARBONA
HARD SAYING
HARDNESS OF HEART
HARE
HAREPH
HARETH
HARHAIAH
HARHAS
HARHUR
HARIM
HARIPH
HARLOT
HAR MAGEDON
HARMON
HARNEPHER HARNESS
HAROD
HARODITE
HAROEH
HARORITE
HAROSHETH HAGOYIM

HARP
HARPOONS
HARROW HARSHA
HART
HARUM
HARUMAPH
HARUPHITE
HARUZ
HARVEST
HARVEST, FEAST OF HARVESTER
HASADIAH
HASENUAH
HASHABIAH
HASHABNAH
HASHABNIAH
HASHBADANA
HASHEM
HASHMONAH
HASHUB
HASHUBAH
HASHUM
HASHUPHA
HASMONEAN
HASRAH
HASSENAAH
HASSENUAH
HASSHUB
HASSOPHERETH
HASUPHA
HATACH
HATE, HATRED
HATHACH
HATHATH
HATIPHA
HATITA
HATS
HATTIL
HATTIN, HORNS OF HATTUSH
HAURAN
HAVEN
HAVENS, FAIR
HAVILAH
HAVOTH JAIR
HAWK
HAY

HAZAEL
HAZAIAH
HAZAR
HAZAR ADDAR
HAZAR ENAN
HAZAR GADDAH
HAZAR HATTICON
HAZARMAVETH
HAZAR SHUAL
HAZAR SUSAH
HAZAR SUSIM
HAZAZON TAMAR
HAZEL
HAZELELPONI
HAZER–HATTICON
HAZERIM
HAZEROTH
HAZEZON TAMAR
HAZIEL
HAZO
HAZOR
HAZOR-HADATTAH
HAZZELELPONI
HE HEAD
HEADBAND
HEADDRESSES
HEALING
HEALING, GIFTS OF HEART HEARTH
HEATH
HEATHEN
HEAVE OFFERING HEAVEN
HEAVENLY CITY, THE HEAVENS, NEW HEBER
HEBERITES HEBREW HEBREW PEOPLE
HEBREWS, EPISTLE TO THE HEBRON
HEBRONITES
HEDGE HEDGEHOG
HEEL
HEGAI

HEGE
HEIFER
HEIR
HELAH
HELAM
HELBAH
HELBON
HELDAI
HELEB
HELECH
HELED
HELEK
HELEKITES
HELEM
HELEPH
HELEZ
HELI HELIOPOLIS
HELKAI
HELKATH
HELKATH–HAZZURIM HELL
HELLENISM
HELMET
HELMSMAN
HELON
HELP, HELPS
HELPER
HELPMEET
HEM
HEMAM
HEMAN HEMDAN
HEMLOCK
HEMORRHAGE
HEN
HEN
HENA
HENADAD
HENNA
HENOCH
HEPHER
HEPHERITES
HEPHZIBAH
HERALD
HERB
HERBS, BITTER HERD

HERDSMAN
HERESH
HERESY
HERETH
HERETIC
HERITAGE
HERMAS
HERMENEUTICS
HERMES
HERMOGENES
HERMON
HERMONITES
HEROD
HEROD, PALACE OF HERODIANS
HERODIAS
HERODION
HERODIUM
HERON
HESHBON
HESHMON
HETH
HETHLON
HEW HEWER
HEXATEUCH
HEZEKI
HEZEKIAH
HEZION
HEZIR
HEZRAI
HEZRO
HEZRON
HEZRONITES
HIDDAI
HIDDEKEL
HIEL
HIERAPOLIS
HIEROGLYPHICS
HIGGAION
HIGH GATE
HIGH PLACES
HIGH PRIEST
HIGHER GATE HIGHEST HIGHWAY
HILEN
HILKIAH

HILL
HILL COUNTRY
HILL OF THE FORESKINS
HILL OF GOD
HILLEL
HILT
HIN
HIND
HINGE HINNOM
HINNOM, VALLEY OF HIP
HIP AND THIGH
HIPPOPOTAMUS
HIRAH
HIRAM
HIRE
HIRELING
HISS, HISSING
HISTORY
HITTITES
HIVITES
HIZKI
HIZKIAH
HOARFROST
HOBAB
HOBAH
HOBAIAH
HOD
HODAIAH
HODAVIAH
HODESH
HODEVAH
HODIAH
HODIJAH
HOE
HOGLAH
HOHAM
HOLIDAY
HOLINESS, CEREMONIAL
HOLON
HOLY HOLY CITY
HOLY DAY
HOLY GHOST
HOLY OF HOLIES
HOLY ONE OF ISRAEL
HOLY PLACE

HOLY SPIRIT
HOLY SPIRIT, SIN AGAINST HOMAGE
HOMAM
HOME
HOMER
HOMOSEXUAL HONESTY
HONEY HONOR
HOOD
HOOK
HOOPOE
HOPE
HOPHNI
HOPHRA
HOR HAGIDGAD
HOR, MOUNT
HORAM
HOREB, MOUNT
HOREM
HORESH
HORI
HORITES
HORMAH
HORN
HORNED OWL; HORNET
HORONAIM
HORONITE HORSE
HORSE GATE
HORSELEECH
HORSEMAN
HOSAH
HOSANNA
HOSEA
HOSEA, BOOK OF HOSEN
HOSHAIAH
HOSHAMA
HOSHEA
HOSPITALITY
HOST
HOST OF HEAVEN
HOSTAGE HOSTS, LORD OF HOTHAM
HOTHAN

HOTHIR
HOUGH
HOUND
HOUR HOUSE HOUSEHOLD
HOUSEHOLDER
HOUSETOP
HOZAI
HUB
HUKKOK
HUKOK
HUL HULDAH
HUMAN SACRIFICE HUMILITY
HUMPS
HUMTAH
HUNCHBACK HUNDRED, TOWER OF THE HUNGER
HUNTER
HUPHAM
HUPHAMITES
HUPPAH
HUPPIM
HUR
HURAI
HURAM
HURI
HURRIANS
HUSBAND
HUSBANDMAN
HUSHAH
HUSHAI
HUSHAM
HUSHATHITE
HUSHIM
HUT
HUZ
HUZZAB
HYACINTH
HYENA
HYKSOS
HYMENAEUS
HYPOCRISY
HYSSOP

I

I AM
IBEX
IBHAR
IBLEAM
IBNEIAH
IBNIJAH
IBRI
IBSAM
IBZAN
ICE
ICHABOD
ICONIUM
IDALAH
IDBASH
IDDO
IDLE
IDOL, IMAGE IDOLATRY
IDUMEA
IEZERITES
IGAL
IGDALIAH
IGEAL
IIM
IJE ABARIM
IJIM
IJON
IKKESH
ILAI
ILEX
ILLUSTRATION
ILLYRICUM
IMAGE
IMAGE OF GOD
IMAGE, NEBUCHADNEZZAR’S
IMAGERY IMAGINATION
IMLA
IMMANUEL
IMMER
IMMORALITY IMMORTALITY
IMMUTABILITY
IMNA
IMNAH
IMPEDIMENT

IMPORTUNITY
IMPOTENCE
IMPRECATORY PSALMS
IMPURITY
IMPUTATION
IMRAH
IMRI
INCANTATION
INCARNATION
INCENSE INCEST
INCH
INDIA
INFANT BAPTISM
INFINITY
INFIRMITY
INHERITANCE
INIQUITY INK
INKHORN
INLET
INN
INNKEEPER
INNOCENCE
INNOCENTS, SLAUGHTER OF INQUIRE OF THE LORD
INSANITY
INSCRIPTION
INSECTS
INSPECTION GATE INSPIRATION INSTANT INSURRECTION
INTEGRITY
INTERCESSION
INTEREST
INTERMEDIATE STATE
INTERPRETATION
INTERPRETATION OF TONGUES
INTERTESTAMENTAL PERIOD INTESTINES
INTESTINES, DISEASE OF IOB
IPHDEIAH
IPHTAH
IPHTAHEL
IR
IR HA-HERES

IR-NAHASH
IR SHEMESH
IRA
IRAD
IRAM
IRI IRIJAH
IRON
IRON IRONSMITH
IRPEEL IRRIGATION
IRU
ISAAC
ISAIAH
ISAIAH, BOOK OF ISAIAH, MARTYRDOM OF ISCAH
ISCARIOT
ISHBAH
ISHBAK
ISHBI-BENOB
ISHBOSHETH
ISHHOD
ISHI
ISHIJAH
ISHMA
ISHMAEL
ISHMAELITES
ISHMAIAH
ISHMERAI
ISHOD
ISHPAH
ISHPAN
ISHTAR
ISH-TOB
ISHUAH
ISHUAI
ISHUI
ISHVAH
ISHVI
ISHYO
ISLAND
ISMACHIAH
ISPAH
ISRAEL
ISRAEL, HISTORY OF ISRAELITE

ISSACHAR
ISSACHAR, TRIBE OF ISSARON
ISSHIAH
ISSHIJAH
ISUI
ITALIAN REGIMENT
ITALY
ITCH, ITCHING DISEASE
ITHAI
ITHAMAR
ITHIEL
ITHLAH
ITHMAH
ITHNAN
ITHRA
ITHRAN
ITHREAM
ITHRITE
ITTAH-KAZIN
ITTAI
ITUREA
IVAH
IVORY
IVVAH
IYE-ABARIM
IYIM
IZHAR
IZHARITES
IZRAHIAH
IZRAHITE
IZRI
IZZIAH

J

JAAKAN
JAAKOBAH
JAALA
JAALAM
JAANAI
JAAR
JAARE-OREGIM
JAARESHIAH
JAASAI
JAASAU
JAASIEL
JAASU

JAAZANIAH
JAAZER
JAAZIAH
JAAZIEL
JABAL
JABBOK
JABESH
JABESH GILEAD
JABEZ JABIN
JABNEEL
JACHAN
JACHIN
JACHIN AND BOAZ
JACHINITES
JACINTH
JACKAL
JACKAL’S WELL
JACKDAW
JACOB
JACOB, TESTAMENT OF JACOB’S WELL
JADA JADDAI
JADDUA
JADE JADON
JAEL
JAGUR
JAHALELEEL
JAHATH
JAHAZ
JAHAZA
JAHAZAH
JAHAZIAH
JAHAZIEL
JAHDAI
JAHDIEL
JAHDO
JAHLEEL
JAHLEELITES
JAHMAI
JAHZAH
JAHZEEL
JAHZEELITES
JAHZEIAH
JAHZERAH
JAHZIEL

JAILER
JAIR
JAIRITE
JAIRUS
JAKAN
JAKEH
JAKIM
JAKIN
JALAM
JALON
JAMBRES
JAMES
JAMES, EPISTLE OF
JAMES, PROTEVANGELIUM OF JAMIN
JAMINITES
JAMLECH
JANAI
JANGLING, VAIN
JANIM
JANNA
JANNES AND JAMBRES
JANOAH
JANOHAH
JANUM
JAPHETH
JAPHIA
JAPHLET
JAPHLETI
JAPHLETITES
JAPHO
JAR
JARAH
JAREB
JARED
JARESIAH
JARHA
JARIB
JARMUTH
JAROAH
JASHAR
JASHEN
JASHER, BOOK OF JASHOBEAM
JASHUB
JASHUBI-LEHEM
JASHUBITES
JASIEL

JASON
JASPER JATHNIEL
JATTIR
JAVAN
JAVELIN
JAZER
JAZIZ
JEALOUSY OFFERING
JEARIM, MOUNT
JEATHERAI
JEBERECHIAH
JEBUS
JEBUSITES
JECAMIAH
JECHILIAH, JECOLIAH
JECHOLIAH
JECONIAH
JEDAIAH
JEDIAEL
JEDIDAH
JEDIDIAH
JEDUTHUN
JEEZER
JEEZERITES
JEGAR SAHADUTHA
JEHALELEEL
JEHALELEL
JEHALLELEL
JEHDEIAH
JEHEZEKEL
JEHEZKEL
JEHIAH
JEHIEL
JEHIELI
JEHIZKIAH
JEHOADDAH
JEHOADDAN
JEHOAHAZ
JEHOASH
JEHOHANAN
JEHOIACHIN
JEHOIADA
JEHOIAKIM
JEHOIARIB
JEHONADAB
JEHONATHAN
JEHORAM

JEHOSHABEATH
JEHOSHAPHAT
JEHOSHAPHAT, VALLEY OF JEHOSHEBA, JEHOSHABEATH
JEHOSHUA
JEHOVAH
JEHOZABAD
JEHU
JEHUBBAH
JEHUCAL
JEHUD
JEHUDI
JEHUDIJAH
JEHUEL
JEHUSH
JEIEL
JEKAMEAM
JEKAMIAH
JEKUTHIEL
JEMIMAH
JEMUEL
JEPHTHAH
JEPHUNNEH
JERAH
JERAHMEEL
JERAHMEELITES
JERBOA
JERED
JEREMAI
JEREMIAH
JEREMIAH, BOOK OF JEREMIAH, EPISTLE OF
JEREMIAH, LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAS, JEREMY JEREMOTH
JERIAH
JERIBAI
JERICHO JERIEL
JERIJAH
JERIMOTH
JERIOTH
JEROBOAM
JEROHAM
JERUBBAAL
JERUBBESHETH
JERUEL
JERUSALEM

JERUSALEM COUNCIL, THE JERUSALEM, NEW JERUSHA
JERUSHAH
JESAIAH
JESHAIAH
JESHANAH
JESHANAH GATE
JESHARELAH
JESHEBEAB
JESHER
JESHIAH
JESHIMON
JESHISHAI
JESHOHAIAH
JESHUA
JESHUAH
JESHURUN
JESIAH
JESIMIEL
JESSE
JESSHIAH
JESUI
JESUITES
JESURUN
JESUS
JESUS CHRIST
JESUS JUSTUS
JESUS, SON OF SIRACH
JETHER
JETHETH
JETHLAH
JETHRO
JETUR
JEUEL
JEUSH
JEUZ
JEWELER
JEWELRY
JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES
JEWS
JEZANIAH
JEZEBEL
JEZER
JEZERITES
JEZIAH
JEZIEL
JEZLIAH

JEZRAHIAH
JEZREEL
JEZREELITE
JEZREELITESS
JIBSAM
JIDLAPH
JIMNAH
JIMNITES
JIPHTAH
JIPHTHAH EL JISHUI
JISSHIAH
JITHLAH
JITHRA
JITHRAN
JIZLIAH
JIZRI
JOAB
JOAH
JOAHAZ
JOANNA JOANNAS
JOASH, JEHOASH
JOATHAM
JOB JOB, BOOK OF JOBAB
JOCHEBED
JOED
JOEL
JOEL, BOOK OF JOELAH
JOEZER
JOGBEHAH
JOGLI
JOHA
JOHANAN
JOHN THE APOSTLE
JOHN THE BAPTIST
JOHN, EPISTLES OF
JOHN, GOSPEL OF
JOHN MARK
JOHN, REVELATION OF JOIADA
JOIAKIM
JOIARIB
JOKDEAM
JOKIM

JOKMEAM
JOKNEAM
JOKSHAN
JOKTAN
JOKTHEEL
JONADAB
JONAH
JONAH, BOOK OF JONAM
JONAN
JONAS
JONATHAN
JONATH-ELEM-RECHOKIM
JOPPA
JORAH
JORAI
JORAM
JORDAN
JORIM
JORKOAM
JOSABAD
JOSE
JOSECH
JOSEPH
JOSEPHUS, FLAVIUS
JOSES
JOSHAH
JOSHAPHAT
JOSHAVIAH
JOSHBEKASHAH
JOSHEB-BASSHEBETH
JOSHIBIAH
JOSHUA
JOSHUA, BOOK OF JOSHUA, GATE OF JOSIAH
JOSIAS
JOT JOTBAH
JOTBATHAH
JOTHAM
JOY
JOZABAD
JOZACHAR
JOZADAK
JUBAL
JUBILEE
JUBILEES, BOOK OF

JUCAL
JUDA
JUDAEA
JUDAH JUDAH, KINGDOM OF JUDAH, TRIBE OF JUDAIZERS
JUDAS
JUDAS ISCARIOT
JUDAS MACCABAEUS
JUDE
JUDE, EPISTLE OF JUDEA
JUDGE
JUDGES, THE JUDGES, BOOK OF JUDGMENT
JUDITH
JUDITH, BOOK OF JUG
JULIA
JULIUS JUNIA
JUNIPER
JUPITER
JUSHAB-HESED JUSTICE JUSTICE OF GOD
JUSTIFICATION
JUSTUS JUTTAH

K

KAB
KABZEEL
KADESH, KADESH BARNEA
KADMIEL
KADMONITES
KAIN
KAIWAN
KALLAI
KAMON
KANAH
KAPH
KAREAH
KARKAA
KARKOR

KARNAIM
KARTAH
KARTAN
KATTATH
KATYDID
KEBAR
KEDAR
KEDEMAH
KEDEMOTH
KEDESH
KEDESH-NAPHTALI
KEDORLAOMER
KEHELATHAH
KEILAH
KELAIAH
KELAL
KELITA
KELUB
KELUHI
KEMOSH
KEMUEL
KENAANAH
KENAN KENANI
KENANIAH
KENATH
KENAZ
KENEZZITES
KENITES
KENIZZITES
KENOSIS
KEPHAR AMMONI
KEPHIRAH
KERAN
KEREN–HAPPUCH
KERETHITES
KERIOTH
KERITH
KEROS
KERUB
KERYGMA
KESALON
KESED
KESIL
KESITAH
KESULLOTH
KETTLE
KETURAH

KEVEH
KEY
KEYS, POWER OF KEZIAH
KEZIB
KEZIZ
KIBROTH HATTAAVAH
KIBZAIM
KID
KIDNAPPER
KIDNEY
KIDON
KIDRON
KILION
KILMAD
KILN
KIMHAM
KINAH
KINDNESS, LOVINGKINDNESS KINDRED KINE
KING, KINGDOM
KINGDOM OF GOD, KINGDOM OF HEAVEN
KINGDOM OF ISRAEL
KINGDOM OF JUDAH
KINGS, BOOKS OF KING’S GATE
KINNERETH
KINSMAN
KIOS
KIR
KIR HARASETH
KIR HARESETH
KIR HERES
KIR OF MOAB
KIRHARESH
KIRIATHAIM
KIRIATH ARBA
KIRIATH BAAL
KIRIATH HUZOTH
KIRIATH JEARIM
KIRJATH
KIRJATH ARBA
KIRJATH BAAL
KIRJATH HUZOTH
KIRJATH JEARIM
KIRJATH SANNAH
KIRJATH SEPHER

KIRJATHAIM
KISH
KISHI
KISHION
KISHON
KISLEV
KISLON
KISLOTH TABOR KISS KITCHEN
KITE
KITHLISH
KITLISH
KITRON
KITTIM
KNAPSACK
KNEAD, KNEADING
KNEADING BOWL
KNEELING KNIFE
KNOB
KNOP KNOWLEDGE
KOA
KOHATH
KOHATHITES
KOHELETH
KOLAIAH
KOPH
KOR, KORS
KORAH
KORAHITES
KORAZIN
KORE
KORHITES
KOROS
KOZ
KUE
KUSHAIAH

L

LAADAH
LAADAN LABAN
LABORER
LACE
LACHISH

LADAN LADDER
LADLE
LAEL
LAHAD
LAHAI ROI
LAHMAS
LAHMI
LAISH
LAKE OF GENNESARET
LAKKUM
LAMA
LAMB
LAMB OF GOD
LAME, LAMENESS
LAMECH
LAMED
LAMENT
LAMENTATIONS, BOOK OF LAMP
LANCE, LANCET
LAND
LANDMARK
LANE
LANGUAGES OF THE BIBLE
LANTERN
LAODICEA LAP
LAPIDOTH, LAPPIDOTH
LAPIS LAZULI
LAPPED, LAPS
LAPWING
LASCIVIOUSNESS
LASEA
LASHA
LASHARON
LAST DAYS
LAST SUPPER
LATCHET
LATIN
LATIN VERSION LATTER DAYS
LATTICE NETWORK
LAUGH, LAUGHTER
LAUNDERER
LAUREL
LAVER
LAW

LAW, ROMAN
LAWGIVER LAWYER
LAYING ON OF HANDS
LAZARUS
LAZINESS
LEAD LEAGUE
LEAH LEANNOTH
LEATHER
LEATHER WORKER
LEAVEN
LEAVES
LEB KAMAI
LEBANA
LEBANAH
LEBANON
LEBAOTH
LEBBAEUS
LEBONAH
LECAH
LEECH
LEEK
LEES
LEFT LEFT HAND
LEFT-HANDED LEGACY LEGION
LEHABIM
LEHI
LEMUEL
LENTIL
LEOPARD
LEPROSY
LESHEM
LETTERS
LETUSHIM
LEUMMIM
LEVI
LEVIATHAN
LEVIRATE MARRIAGE
LEVITES
LEVITICAL CITIES
LEVITICUS, BOOK OF LEVY
LEWDNESS

LIBERALITY
LIBERTINES
LIBNAH
LIBNI
LIBNITES LIBRARY
LIBYA
LIBYANS
LICE
LICENTIOUSNESS
LIE
LIEUTENANT
LIFE
LIFE, BOOK OF LIFE, TREE OF LIGHT
LIGHTNING
LIGHTS, FEAST OF LIGN ALOES
LIGURE
LIKHI
LILY
LILY-WORK
LIME
LINE
LINEAGE
LINEN LINTEL
LINUS
LION
LIPS LITERATURE
LITTER
LITTLE OWL LIVELIHOOD LIVER
LIVING CREATURES
LIZARD
LOAF
LO-AMMI
LO DEBAR
LO-RUHAMAH
LOCK, LOCKS LOCUST
LOD
LODGE
LOFT
LOG

LOGIA
LOGOS
LOINS
LOIS
LONGSUFFERING
LOOKING GLASS LOOKOUT
LOOM LOOP
LORD
LORD GOD OF ISRAEL
LORD OF HOSTS
LORD-IS-MY-BANNER, THE LORD-SHALOM, THE LORD-WILL-PROVIDE, THE LORD’S DAY
LORD’S PRAYER
LORD’S SUPPER
LOT
LOTAN
LOTS, CASTING OF LOTS, FEAST OF LOTUS LOVE
LOVE, BROTHERLY LOVE FEAST
LOVINGKINDNESS LOWLAND, THE LUBIM
LUCAS
LUCIFER
LUCIUS
LUD
LUDIM
LUHITH
LUKE
LUKE, GOSPEL OF LUKEWARM
LUNACY, LUNATICK
LUST
LUTE
LUZ
LXX
LYCAONIA
LYCAONIAN
LYCIA
LYDDA
LYDIA

LYDIANS
LYE
LYRE
LYSANIAS
LYSIAS, CLAUDIUS
LYSTRA

M

MAACAH
MAACHAH
MAACHATHITES, MAACATHITES
MAADAI
MAADIAH
MAAI
MAALEH-ACRABBIM
MAARATH
MAASAI
MAASEIAH
MAASIAI
MAATH
MAAZ
MAAZIAH
MACBANNAI
MACCABEES
MACCABEES, BOOKS OF MACE
MACEDONIA
MACEDONIANS
MACHAERUS
MACHBANAI
MACHBENAH
MACHI
MACHIR
MACHIRITES
MACHNADEBAI
MACHPELAH
MADABA
MADAI
MADMANNAH
MADMEN
MADMENAH
MADNESS
MADON
MAGADAN
MAGBISH
MAGDALA
MAGDALENE

MAGDIEL
MAGGOT
MAGI
MAGIC, SORCERY, AND DIVINATION
MAGISTRATE
MAGNIFICAT
MAGOG
MAGOR-MISSABIB
MAGPIASH
MAHALAB
MAHALAH
MAHALALEEL
MAHALATH
MAHALATH LEANNOTH
MAHALI
MAHANAIM
MAHANEH DAN
MAHARAI
MAHATH
MAHAVITE
MAHAZIOTH
MAHER-SHALAL-HASH-BAZ
MAHLAH
MAHLI
MAHLITES
MAHLON
MAHOL
MAHSEIAH
MAID
MAIL, COAT OF MAIMED
MAINSAIL
MAKAZ
MAKHELOTH
MAKKEDAH
MAKTESH
MALACHI
MALACHI, BOOK OF MALACHITE
MALCAM
MALCHAM
MALCHIAH
MALCHIEL
MALCHIELITES
MALCHIJAH
MALCHIRAM
MALCHISHUA
MALCHUS

MALEFACTOR
MALELEEL MALICE
MALKIJAH
MALLOTHI
MALLOW
MALLUCH
MALLUCHI
MALTA
MAMMON
MAMRE MAN, MANKIND
MAN OF SIN
MANAEN
MANAHATH
MANAHATHITES
MANAHETHITES
MANASSEH
MANASSEH, TRIBE OF MANASSITES
MANDRAKE
MANEH
MANEIT
MANGER
MANNA
MANOAH
MANSERVANT MANSIONS
MANSLAYER, MANSTEALER MANTLE
MANUHOTH
MANURE
MANUSCRIPTS
MAOCH
MAON
MAONITES
MARA
MARAH
MARALAH
MARANATHA
MARBLE
MARCUS
MARE
MAREAL
MARESHAH
MARHESHVAN
MARI MARINER

MARJORAM
MARK, GOSPEL OF MARK, JOHN
MARKET, MARKETPLACE
MARKING TOOL
MAROTH MARRIAGE
MARROW
MARS’ HILL
MARSENA
MARSH
MARSHAL
MARTHA MARTYR
MARY MASCHIL
MASH
MASHAL
MASKIL
MASON
MASREKAH
MASSA
MASSAH
MAST
MASTER
MASTICH
MATHUSALA
MATRED
MATRI
MATRIX
MATTAN
MATTANAH
MATTANIAH
MATTATHAH
MATTATHIAH
MATTATHIAS
MATTATTAH
MATTENAI
MATTHAN
MATTHAT
MATTHEW
MATTHEW, GOSPEL OF MATTHIAS
MATTITHIAH
MATTOCK
MAUL
MAW
MAZZAROTH

MEADOW
MEAH, TOWER OF MEAL OFFERING MEALS
MEARAH
MEASURE, CHOINIX
MEASURING LINE
MEASURING REED MEAT
MEAT OFFERING
MEATS, UNCLEAN
MEBUNNAI
MECHERATHITE
MECONAH
MEDAD
MEDAN
MEDEBA
MEDIA MEDIATOR MEDICINE
MEDITATION
MEDITERRANEAN SEA
MEDIUM
MEEKNESS
MEGIDDO
MEGIDDON
MEHETABEEL
MEHETABEL
MEHIDA
MEHIR
MEHOLATHITE
MEHUJAEL
MEHUMAN
MEHUNIM
ME JARKON
MEKONAH
MELATIAH
MELCHI
MELCHIAH
MELCHISEDEC
MELCHI-SHUA
MELCHIZEDEK
MELEA
MELECH
MELICHU, MELICU
MELITA
MELON MELZAR

MEM
MEMBER MEMORIAL MEMPHIS
MEMUCAN
MENAHEM
MENAN
MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN
MENI
MENNA
MEN-PLEASERS
MENUHOTH
MEONENIM, PLAIN OF MEONOTHAI
MEPHAATH
MEPHIBOSHETH
MERAB
MERAIAH
MERAIOTH
MERARI
MERARITES
MERATHAIM
MERCHANDISER
MERCHANT
MERCURIUS
MERCURY MERCY
MERCY SEAT
MERED
MEREMOTH
MERES
MERIBAH
MERIBATH-KADESH
MERIB-BAAL
MERODACH
MERODACH-BALADAN
MEROM, WATERS OF MERONOTHITE
MEROZ
MESECH
MESHA
MESHACH
MESHECH
MESHELEMIAH
MESHEZABEEL
MESHEZABEL
MESHILLEMITH
MESHILLEMOTH

MESHOBAB
MESHULLAM
MESHULLEMETH
MESOBAITE
MESOPOTAMIA
MESSENGER
MESSIAH
MESSIAS
METALSMITH
METAL WORKER
METALS OF THE BIBLE
METEYARD
METHEG AMMAH
METHUSELAH
METHUSHAEL
MEUNIM, MEUNITES
MEZAHAB
MEZOBÏAITE
MEZUZAH
MIAMIN
MIBHAR
MIBSAM
MIBZAR
MICAH
MICAH, BOOK OF MICAIAH MICE
MICHA
MICHAEL MICHAH
MICHAIAH
MICHAL
MICHMASH
MICHMETHATH
MICHRI
MICHTAM
MIDDAY
MIDDIN
MIDDLE GATE
MIDDLE WALL
MIDIAN
MIDIANITES
MIDNIGHT
MIDRASH
MIDWIFE
MIGDAL EL MIGDAL GAD
MIGDOL

MIGHTY MEN
MIGRON
MIJAMIN
MIKHTAM
MIKLOTH
MIKNEIAH
MIKTAM
MILALAI
MILCAH
MILCOM
MILDEW
MILE MILETUS
MILK
MILL MILLENNIUM, THE MILLET
MILLO
MINA MIND
MINER
MINERALS OF THE BIBLE
MINGLED PEOPLE
MINIAMIN
MINING MINISTER, MINISTRY
MINJAMIN
MINNI
MINNITH
MINSTREL
MINT
MIPHKAD GATE
MIRACLES
MIRACLES, GIFT OF MIRIAM MIRMAH MIRROR
MISGAB
MISHAEL
MISHAL
MISHAM
MISHEAL
MISHMA
MISHMANNAH
MISHNA
MISHRAITES
MISPAR
MISPERETH

MISREPHOTH, THE BROOK
MIST
MITE
MITHCAH
MITHKAH
MITHNITE
MITHRAISM
MITHREDATH
MITRE
MITYLENE
MIXED MULTITUDE
MIZAR
MIZPAH
MIZPAR
MIZRAIM
MIZZAH
MNASON
MOAB
MOABITES
MOABITESS
MOABITE STONE
MOADIAH
MODERATION
MODIOS
MOLADAH
MOLE MOLECH
MOLID
MOLOCH
MOLTEN SEA MOMENT
MONEY OF THE BIBLE
MONEYBELTS
MONEYCHANGERS
MONEYLENDER
MONITOR LIZARD, MONKEY
MONOTHEISM
MONTH
MOON
MOON, NEW MORASTHITE
MORDECAI
MOREH
MORESHETH GATH
MORIAH MORNING MORNING STAR
MORROW

MORTAL MORTAR
MORTAR, THE MORTAR AND PESTLE
MORTIFY
MOSERAH
MOSEROTH
MOSES
MOST HIGH
MOTE
MOTH MOTHER
MOTHER-IN-LAW
MOUNT, MOUNTAIN
MOUNT BAAL HERMON
MOUNT OF THE BEATITUDES
MOUNT OF THE CONGREGATION
MOUNT OF CORRUPTION
MOUNT EPHRAIM
MOUNT HERES
MOUNT OF OLIVES
MOUNTAIN SHEEP
MOUNTAIN OF THE VALLEY
MOUNTAINS OF THE AMALEKITES MOUNTAINS OF THE AMORITES
MOURNER
MOURNING MOUSE MOUTH
MOWING
MOZA
MOZAH
MULBERRY MULE
MUPPIM
MURDER
MURRAIN
MUSHI
MUSHITES
MUSIC
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS OF THE BIBLE MUSICIAN
MUSTARD
MUSTER GATE
MUSTERING GATE
MUTENESS
MUTE SPIRIT
MUTH LABBEN

MUZZLE
MYRA MYRIAD MYRRH
MYRTLE
MYSIA
MYSTERY
MYSTERY RELIGIONS

N

NAAM
NAAMAH
NAAMAN
NAAMATHITE
NAAMITES
NAARAH
NAARAI
NAARAN
NAARATH
NAASSON
NABAJOTH
NABAL
NABATEA
NABONIDUS
NABOPOLASSAR
NABOTH
NACHON
NACHOR
NACON
NADAB
NAGGAI
NAGGE
NAG HAMMADI
NAHALAL
NAHALIEL
NAHALLAL
NAHALOL
NAHAM
NAHAMANI
NAHARAI
NAHARI
NAHASH
NAHATH
NAHBI
NAHOR
NAHSHON
NAHUM

NAHUM, BOOK OF NAIL
NAIN
NAIOTH
NAKED
NAME
NAOMI
NAPHATH-DOR
NAPHISH
NAPHOTH DOR
NAPHTALI
NAPHTALI, MOUNT
NAPHTALI, TRIBE OF NAPHTUHIM
NAPKIN
NARCISSUS
NARD
NARRATIVE
NATHAN
NATHAN-MELECH
NATHANAEL NATIONS
NATIVES
NATIVITY NATURE NAVE
NAVEL
NAVY
NAZARENE
NAZARETH
NAZIRITE
NEAH
NEAPOLIS
NEARIAH
NEBAI
NEBAIOTH
NEBAJOTH
NEBALLAT
NEBAT
NEBO
NEBUCHADNEZZAR
NEBUCHADREZZAR
NEBUSHASBAN
NEBUSHAZBAN
NEBUZARADAN
NECHO
NECHOH, NECO, NECOH
NECK

NECKLACE
NECROMANCY
NEDABIAH NEEDLE
NEEDLEWORK, EMBROIDERY
NEGEV, THE NEGINOTH
NEHELAM
NEHELAMITE
NEHEMIAH
NEHEMIAH, BOOK OF NEHILOTH
NEHUM
NEHUSHTA
NEHUSHTAN
NEIEL NEIGHBOR
NEKODA
NEMUEL
NEMUELITES
NEPHEG NEPHEW
NEPHILIM
NEPHISH
NEPHISHESIM
NEPHISIM
NEPHTOAH
NEPHUSHESIM
NEPHUSIM
NEPHUSSIM
NER
NEREUS
NERGAL
NERGAL-SAREZER, NERGAL-SHAREZER
NERI
NERIAH
NERO
NEST
NET
NETAIM
NETHANEAL
NETHANEEL
NETHANEL
NETHANIAH
NETHINIM
NETOPHAH
NETOPHATHITE NETTLE

NETWORK
NEW AGE
NEW BIRTH
NEW COVENANT
NEW GATE
NEW HEAVENS
NEW JERUSALEM
NEW MOON
NEW TESTAMENT
NEW YEAR
NEZIAH
NEZIB
NIBHAZ
NIBSHAN
NICANOR
NICODEMUS
NICOLAITANS
NICOLAS NICOLAUS
NICOPOLIS
NIGER
NIGHT
NIGHT CREATURE, NIGHT HAG, NIGHTHAWK, NIGHTJAR, NIGHT MONSTER NIGHT-WATCH
NILE NIMRAH
NIMRIM, WATERS OF NIMROD
NIMSHI
NINEVEH
NINEVITES
NISAN
NISROCH
NITER, NITRE
NO, NO AMON
NOADIAH
NOAH
NOB
NOBAH
NOBLE
NOD
NODAB
NOGAH
NOHAH
NOON
NOOSE
NOPH
NOPHAH

NORTH NORTHEASTER
NORTH GATE NOSE
NOSE JEWEL, NOSE RING
NOSTRILS
NOVICE
NUMBER, NUMBERS NUMBERS, BOOK OF NUN
NURSE, NURSING
NUTS
NUZI
NYMPHA NYMPHAS

O

OAK
OAR
OARSMEN
OATH
OBADIAH
OBADIAH, BOOK OF OBAL
OBED
OBED-EDOM
OBEDIENCE
OBEISANCE
OBELISK
OBIL
OBLATION
OBOTH OBSCENE
OBSERVING TIMES
OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES
OCHRAN
OCRAN
ODED
ODOR
OFFAL OFFENSE OFFERINGS OFFICER
OFFICES OF CHRIST
OFFSCOURING
OG
OHAD

OHEL
OHOLAH
OHOLIAB
OHOLIBAH
OHOLIBAMAH
OIL, OIL TREE OINTMENT
OLD GATE
OLD TESTAMENT
OLD TESTAMENT CHRONOLOGY OLIVE OLIVES, MOUNT OF OLIVET DISCOURSE
OLYMPAS
OMAR
OMEGA
OMEN
OMER
OMNIPOTENCE
OMNIPRESENCE
OMNISCIENCE
OMRI
ON ONAGER
ONAM
ONAN
ONESIMUS
ONESIPHORUS
ONION
ONLY BEGOTTEN
ONO
ONYCHA
ONYX
OPHEL
OPHIR
OPHNI
OPHRAH
ORACLE
ORACLES, SIBYLLINE ORATOR
ORCHARD
ORDAIN, ORDINATION
OREB
OREN
ORGAN
ORION
ORNAMENTS
ORNAN

ORONTES
ORPAH ORPHAN
ORYX
OSEE
OSHEA
OSNAPPER
OSPREY, OSSIFRAGE
OSTIA
OSTRACA
OSTRICH
OTHNI
OTHNIEL
OUCHES
OUTCASTS
OVEN
OVENS, TOWER OF THE OVERSEER
OWL, OX
OX-GOAD
OZEM
OZIAS
OZNI
OZNITES

P

PAARAI
PADAN, PADDAN
PADAN ARAM
PADON
PAGAN PAGIEL
PAHATH��MOAB
PAI
PALAL
PALANQUIN
PALESTINA PALESTINE
PALLET
PALLU
PALLUITES
PALM TREE
PALMERWORM
PALSY
PALTI
PALTIEL
PALTITE

PAMPHYLIA
PAN
PANNAG
PANTHER PAPER
PAPHOS
PAPS PAPYRUS PARABLE
PARACLETE
PARADISE
PARAH
PARALLELISM
PARALYSIS, PARALYTIC
PARAMOUR
PARAN PARAPET
PARBAR
PARCHED GRAIN PARCHMENT
PARDON
PARENTS
PARLOR
PARMASHTA
PARMENAS
PARNACH
PAROSH
PAROUSIA
PARSHANDATHA
PARSIN
PARTHIANS
PARTIALITY
PARTITION
PARTRIDGE
PARUAH
PARVAIM
PARZITES
PASACH
PASDAMMIM
PASEAH
PASHHUR
PASHUR PASSAGE
PASSION OF CHRIST
PASSOVER, FEAST OF PASTOR
PASTORAL EPISTLES
PATARA

PATH
PATHROS
PATHRUSIM PATIENCE
PATMOS
PATRIARCH
PATRIARCHS, TESTAMENTS OF THE TWELVE PATRIMONY
PATROBAS
PAU
PAUL, THE APOSTLE
PAULUS, SERGIUS
PAVEMENT, THE PAVILION
PE
PEACE
PEACE OFFERING PEACOCK
PEARL
PECULIAR PEDAHEL
PEDAHZUR
PEDAIAH
PEG
PEKAH
PEKAHIAH
PEKOD
PELAIAH
PELALIAH
PELATIAH
PELEG
PELET
PELETH
PELETHITES
PELICAN
PELLA
PELONITE
PEN
PENDANT PENIEL
PENINNAH
PENKNIFE
PENTATEUCH
PENTATEUCH, SAMARITAN
PENTECOST, FEAST OF PENUEL
PEOPLE OF GOD
PEOR

PERAZIM
PERDITION
PEREA
PERES
PERESH
PEREZ
PEREZ UZZAH, PEREZ UZZA
PEREZITES
PERFECT, PERFECTION PERFUME
PERFUMER
PERGA
PERGAMOS
PERGAMUM
PERIDA
PERIZZITES PERJURY
PERSECUTION
PERSEPOLIS
PERSEVERANCE
PERSIA
PERSIS
PERSON OF CHRIST
PERUDA
PESHITTA
PESTILENCE
PETER, APOCALYPSE OF PETER, EPISTLES OF PETER, GOSPEL OF
PETER, SIMON
PETHAHIAH
PETHOR
PETHUEL
PETITION PETRA
PEULLETHAI
PEULTHAI
PHALEC
PHALLU
PHALTI
PHALTIEL
PHANUEL
PHARAOH
PHARES, PHAREZ
PHARISEES
PHAROSH
PHARPAR
PHARZITES

PHASEAH
PHEBE
PHENICE
PHENICIA
PHICHOL
PHICOL
PHILADELPHIA
PHILEMON
PHILEMON, EPISTLE TO PHILETUS
PHILIP
PHILIP HEROD
PHILIPPI
PHILIPPIANS
PHILIPPIANS, EPISTLE TO THE PHILISTIA
PHILISTIM
PHILISTINES
PHILO JUDAEUS
PHILOLOGUS
PHILOSOPHY
PHINEHAS
PHLEGON
PHOEBE
PHOENICIA
PHOENICIANS
PHOENIX
PHRYGIA
PHURAH
PHUT
PHUVAH
PHYGELLUS
PHYLACTERIES
PHYSICIAN
PI BESETH
PI HAHIROTH
PICK
PIECE OF GOLD, MONEY, SILVER PIETY
PIG, PIGEON
PILATE, PONTIUS
PILDASH
PILEHA
PILGRIMAGE
PILHA
PILLAR
PILLAR OF FIRE AND CLOUD
PILLARS OF SALT

PILLOW PILOT
PILTAI
PIM
PIN
PINE
PINNACLE
PINON
PIPE
PIRAM
PIRATHON
PIRATHONITE
PISGAH
PISHON
PISIDIA
PISON
PISPAH
PISTACHIO NUTS
PIT PITCH PITCHER
PITHOM
PITHON
PITY
PLACENTA
PLAGUE
PLAGUES OF EGYPT
PLAIN PLANE
PLANE TREE
PLANK
PLANTS OF THE BIBLE
PLASTER
PLASTERER
PLATE
PLATTER
PLAY
PLEDGE
PLEIADES
PLEROMA
PLOWMAN
PLOWSHARE
PLUMB LINE, PLUMMET
POCHERETH–ZEBAIM
PODS
POET
POETRY POISON

POLE
POLLUTE POLYGAMY
POMEGRANATE
POMMEL
POND
PONTIUS PILATE
PONTUS
POOL POOR
POOR IN SPIRIT
POPLAR
PORATHA
PORCH
PORCIUS
PORCUPINE
PORPHYRY
PORPOISE
PORTER
PORTION POSSESSION, DEMON
POST, POSTS
POTENTATE
POTIPHAR
POTI-PHERAH
POTSHERD
POTSHERD GATE
POTTAGE
POTTER
POTTER’S FIELD
POTTER’S GATE
POTTERY
POUND POVERTY
POWDERS
POWER
PRAETORIUM, PRAETORIAN GUARD PRAISE
PRAYER
PRAYER OF AZARIAH, PRAYER OF MANASSEH
PRAYER, LORD’S PREACHER, PREACHING
PRECIOUS STONES
PREDESTINATION
PREFECT
PREPARATION DAY
PRESBYTER PRESBYTERY

PRESIDENT PRESS
PRIEST, HIGH PRIESTS
PRINCE
PRINCESS
PRINCIPALITY
PRINTING
PRISCA
PRISCILLA PRISON PRISON, GATE OF THE PROCHORUS PROCLAMATION
PROCONSUL
PROCURATOR
PRODIGAL
PROFANE
PROGNOSTICATOR PROMISE PROPHECY PROPHET
PROPHET, FALSE
PROPHETESS
PROPITIATION
PROSELYTE
PROSTITUTION PROVERB
PROVERBS, BOOK OF PROVIDENCE
PROVINCE
PROVOCATION
PROW
PRUDENCE
PRUNING HOOKS
PSALMIST
PSALMS, BOOK OF PSALMS OF SOLOMON
PSALTERY
PSEUDEPIGRAPHA
PTOLEMAIS
PTOLEMY
PUA
PUAH
PUBLICAN
PUBLIUS
PUDENS
PUHITES

PUL PULPIT
PULSE PUNISHMENT
PUNISHMENT, EVERLASTING
PUNITES
PUNON
PURAH
PURE PURGE
PURIFICATION
PURIM
PURITY
PURPLE
PURPLE GARNET
PURSE
PUT PUTEOLI
PUTHITES
PUTIEL
PUVAH
PYGARG PYRAMID
PYRRHUS

Q

Q
QOPH
QUAIL QUARRY
QUARRYMAN
QUARTERMASTER
QUARTUS
QUARTZ
QUATERNION
QUEEN
QUEEN OF HEAVEN
QUEEN OF SHEBA
QUICK, QUICKEN
QUICKSANDS, THE QUIRINIUS
QUIVER
QUMRAN, KHIRBET
QUOTATIONS IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

R

RAAMA, RAAMAH
RAAMIAH
RAAMSES
RABBAH
RABBI RABBIT
RABBITH
RABBONI
RABMAG, THE RABSARIS, THE RABSHAKEH, THE RACA
RACAL
RACE
RACHAB
RACHAL
RACHEL RADDAI
RAFT RAGAU
RAGUEL
RAHAB
RAHAB-HEM-SHEBETH
RAHAB THE DRAGON
RAHAM
RAHEL
RAIL RAIMENT
RAIN RAINBOW
RAISIN CAKE
RAISINS
RAKEM
RAKKATH
RAKKON
RAM
RAMA
RAMAH
RAMATH
RAMATH LEHI
RAMATH MIZPAH
RAMATH-MIZPEH
RAMATH-NEGEB
RAMATH OF THE SOUTH
RAMATHITE

RAMESES, RAAMSES
RAMIAH
RAMOTH
RAMOTH GILEAD
RAMOTH-MIZPAH
RAMOTH-NEGEB
RAMPART
RAM’S HORN
RAMS’ SKINS
RANSOM
RAPE
RAPHA
RAPHAH
RAPHU
RAS SHAMRA
RAT, RAVEN
RAZOR
REAIA
REAIAH
REAPING
REBA
REBECCA
REBEKAH
RECAB
RECAH
RECHAB
RECHABITES
RECHAH RECONCILIATION RECORDER
RED
RED HEIFER
RED JASPER
RED SEA
REDEEM
REDEEMER
REDEMPTION
REED
REED-PIPE
REED, VESSELS OF REELAIAH REFINE REFINER
REFINING POT
REFORMATION REFUGE, CITIES OF REFUSE
REFUSE GATE

REGEM
REGEM-MELECH
REGENERATION REGIMENT
REGISTER
REHABIAH
REHOB
REHOBOAM
REHOBOTH
REHOBOTH-BY-THE-RIVER
REHOBOTH IR
REHUM
REI
REINS
REKEM
RELEASE, YEAR OF RELIGION
REMALIAH
REMETH
REMISSION
REMMON
REMNANT REMPHAN
REND
REPENTANCE
REPHAEL
REPHAH
REPHAIAH
REPHAIM
REPHAN
REPHIDIM
REPROACH
REPROBATE
REPTILE REPUTATION
RESEN
RESERVOIR
RESH
RESHEPH
RESIN
RESPECT OF PERSONS
RESTITUTION
RESURRECTION
RESURRECTION OF JESUS CHRIST
RETRIBUTION
RETURN OF CHRIST
REU
REUBEN

REUBEN, TRIBE OF REUBENITES
REUEL
REUMAH
REVELATION
REVELATION OF JOHN REVELRY
REVENGE
REVERENCE
REVILE
REWARD
REZEPH
REZIA
REZIN
REZON
RHEGIUM
RHESA
RHODA
RHODES
RIBAI
RIBLAH
RICHES
RIDDLE
RIGHTEOUSNESS
RIM
RIMMON
RIMMON-METHOAR
RIMMON-PAREZ
RIMMON PEREZ
RIMMON, ROCK OF RING
RINGLEADER
RINNAH
RIPHATH
RISSAH
RITHMAH RITUAL
RIVER
RIVER OF EGYPT
RIZIA
RIZPAH
ROAD
ROBBER ROBE
ROCK
ROCK BADGER, ROCK GOAT, ROCK HYRAX ROD RODANIM

ROE, ROEBUCK
ROGELIM
ROHGAH
ROLL
ROMAMTI-EZER
ROMAN EMPIRE
ROMAN LAW
ROMANS, EPISTLE TO THE ROME, CITY OF ROOF
ROOF-CHAMBER ROOMS
ROOSTER
ROOT
ROPE
ROSE
ROSETTA STONE
ROSH
ROYAL CITY
RUBBISH
RUBY
RUDDER
RUDDY
RUDIMENTS
RUE
RUFUS RUHAMAH
RUIN, RUINS
RULER OF THE SYNAGOGUE
RUMAH
RUSH
RUST
RUTH
RUTH, BOOK OF RYE

S

SABACHTHANI
SABAOTH
SABBATH
SABBATH DAY’S JOURNEY
SABBATICAL YEAR
SABEANS
SABTA, SABTAH
SABTECA
SABTECHA
SACAR

SACHAR
SACHIA
SACHIAH
SACKBUT
SACKCLOTH SACRAMENT SACRIFICE
SACRIFICE, HUMAN SACRIFICIAL OFFERINGS
SACRILEGE SADDLE
SADDUCEES
SADOC
SAFFRON
SAGE, SAILOR
SAINTS
SAKIA
SAKKUTH
SALA
SALAH
SALAMIS
SALATHIEL
SALCAH
SALCHAH, SALECAH
SALEM
SALIM
SALIVA
SALLAI
SALLU
SALMA
SALMAI
SALMON
SALMONE
SALOME
SALT
SALT, CITY OF
SALT, COVENANT OF SALT HERB
SALT, PILLAR OF SALTPITS
SALT SEA
SALT, VALLEY OF SALTWORT
SALU
SALUTATION
SALVATION
SALVE
SAMARIA, CITY OF

SAMARIA, REGION OF SAMARITAN PENTATEUCH
SAMARITANS
SAMECH, SAMEKH
SAMEK
SAMGAR-NEBO
SAMLAH
SAMOS
SAMOTHRACE
SAMSON
SAMUEL
SAMUEL, BOOKS OF SANBALLAT
SANCTIFICATION
SANCTUARY
SAND
SAND FLY, SAND LIZARD, SAND PARTRIDGE, SAND VIPER SANDALS, SHOES
SANHEDRIN
SANSANNAH
SAPH
SAPHIR
SAPPHIRA
SAPPHIRE
SARAH, SARAI
SARAPH
SARDIN, SARDIUS
SARDIS
SARDITES
SARDONYX
SAREPTA
SARGON
SARID
SARSECHIM
SARUCH
SASH
SATAN
SATAN, SYNAGOGUE OF SATISFACTION
SATON
SATRAP
SATYR
SAUL
SAVIOR
SAVOR
SAW SCABS
SCABBARD

SCALE
SCALL
SCAPEGOAT
SCARLET SCENT
SCEPTER
SCEVA
SCHIN SCHISM
SCHOLAR
SCHOOLMASTER
SCHOOLS
SCIENCE
SCOFFER
SCORN
SCORNFUL
SCORPION
SCOUNDREL SCOURGE
SCREECH OWL
SCRIBES
SCRIBE’S KNIFE SCRIPT
SCRIPTURE
SCROLL SCRUPLES
SCUM
SCURVY
SCYTHIANS
SEA
SEA, BRAZEN
SEA, CHINNERETH
SEA COW, SEA GULL, SEA MEW, SEA MONSTER SEA, DEAD
SEA, MOLTEN
SEA OF GALILEE
SEA OF GLASS
SEA, THE GREAT SEA OF JAZER
SEA, SALT
SEA, TIBERIAS
SEAH
SEAL
SEAMSTER
SEANCE
SEAR SEASON SEAT

SEBA
SEBAM
SEBAT
SECACAH
SECHU
SECOND COMING SECOND DEATH
SECOND QUARTER, THE SECOND SABBATH
SECRET
SECRETARY
SECT
SECU
SECUNDUS
SEDITION
SEDUCTRESS
SEED SEEDTIME
SEGUB
SEIR
SEIRAH
SEIRATH
SELA
SELAH
SELA-HAMMAHLEKOTH
SELED
SELEUCIA
SELEUCUS
SELF-CONTROL
SELF-DENIAL
SELF-INDULGENCE
SELF-SUFFICIENCY
SELF-WILL SELVEDGE
SEM
SEMACHIAH
SEMEI
SEMEIN
SEMEN
SENAAH
SENEH
SENIR
SENNACHERIB
SENSUAL
SENTRY
SENUAH
SEORIM SEPARATION

SEPHAR
SEPHARAD
SEPHARVAIM
SEPHARVITES
SEPTUAGINT
SEPULCHER, SEPULCHRE
SERAH
SERAIAH
SERAPHIM
SERED
SEREDITES
SERGEANT
SERGIUS PAULUS
SERMON ON THE MOUNT SERPENT
SERPENT, BRONZE
SERPENT CHARMERS
SERPENT WELL
SERUG
SERVANT
SERVANT OF THE LORD
SERVICE, SERVITUDE
SETH
SETHUR
SETTINGS OF GOLD
SEVEN CHURCHES OF ASIA
SEVEN, SEVENTH
SEVEN WORDS FROM THE CROSS
SEVENTH MONTH FESTIVAL
SEVENTY SEVENTY, THE SEVENTY WEEKS
SEVENTY YEARS
SEX
SHAALABBIN
SHAALBIM
SHAALBON
SHAALBONITE
SHAALIM
SHAAPH
SHAARAIM
SHAASHGAZ
SHABBETHAI
SHACHIA
SHACKLE
SHADDAI
SHADOW SHADRACH

SHAGE, SHAGEE
SHAGEH
SHAHAR
SHAHARAIM
SHAHAZIMAH
SHAHAZUMAH
SHALEM
SHALIM
SHALISHA
SHALISHAH
SHALLECHETH GATE, SHALLEKETH GATE
SHALLUM
SHALLUN
SHALMAI
SHALMAN
SHALMANESER SHAMA
SHAMARIAH
SHAME
SHAMED
SHAMER
SHAMGAR
SHAMHUTH
SHAMIR
SHAMLAI
SHAMMA
SHAMMAH
SHAMMAI
SHAMMOTH
SHAMMUA
SHAMMUAH
SHAMSHERAI
SHAPHAM
SHAPHAN
SHAPHAT
SHAPHER
SHAPHIR
SHARAI
SHARAIM
SHARAR
SHARD
SHAREZER
SHARON SHARONITE, THE SHARUHEN
SHASHAI
SHASHAK
SHAUL

SHAULITES
SHAVEH
SHAVEH KIRIATHAIM
SHAVING
SHAVSHA
SHEAF
SHEAL
SHEALTIEL
SHEAR-JASHUB
SHEARIAH
SHEARING HOUSE
SHEATH
SHEBA
SHEBA, QUEEN OF SHEBAH
SHEBAM
SHEBANIAH
SHEBARIM
SHEBAT
SHEBER
SHEBNA
SHEBUEL
SHECANIAH
SHECHANIAH
SHECHEM
SHECHEMITES
SHEDEUR
SHEEP
SHEEP BREEDER
SHEEPCOTE
SHEEPFOLD
SHEEP GATE, SHEEP MARKET, SHEEP POOL
SHEEP SHEARER
SHEERAH
SHEET
SHEHARIAH
SHEKEL
SHEKINAH
SHELAH
SHELANITES
SHELEMIAH
SHELEPH
SHELESH
SHELOMI
SHELOMITH
SHELOMOTH
SHELUMIEL
SHEM

SHEMA
SHEMA, THE SHEMAAH
SHEMAIAH
SHEMARIAH
SHEMEBER
SHEMED
SHEMER
SHEMIDA
SHEMIDAH
SHEMIDAITES
SHEMINITH
SHEMIRAMOTH
SHEMUEL
SHEN
SHENAZAR
SHENAZZAR
SHEOL
SHEPHAM
SHEPHATIAH
SHEPHER, MOUNT
SHEPHERD
SHEPHI, SHEPHO
SHEPHUPHAM
SHEPHUPHAN
SHERAH
SHERD
SHEREBIAH
SHERESH
SHEREZER
SHESHACH
SHESHAI
SHESHAN
SHESHBAZZAR
SHETH
SHETHAR
SHETHAR-BOZENAI
SHETHAR-BOZNAI
SHEVA
SHEWBREAD
SHIBAH
SHIBBOLETH
SHIBMAH
SHICRON
SHIELD
SHIGGAION, SHIGGIONOTH
SHIHON
SHIHOR, SIHOR

SHIHOR LIBNATH
SHIKKERON
SHILHI
SHILHIM
SHILLEM
SHILLEMITES
SHILOAH, WATERS OF SHILOH
SHILONI
SHILONITE
SHILSHAH
SHIMEA, SHIMEAH
SHIMEAM
SHIMEATH
SHIMEATHITES
SHIMEI
SHIMEITES
SHIMEON
SHIMHI
SHIMI
SHIMITES
SHIMMA
SHIMON
SHIMRATH
SHIMRI
SHIMRITH
SHIMROM
SHIMRON
SHIMRON MERON
SHIMRONITES
SHIMSHAI
SHIN
SHINAB
SHINAR
SHION
SHIP BUILDER
SHIPHI
SHIPHMITE
SHIPHRAH
SHIPHTAN
SHIPMASTER SHIPS
SHIPWRECK
SHIPWRIGHT
SHIRT
SHISHA
SHISHAK
SHITRAI

SHITTAH TREE SHITTIM
SHITTIM WOOD
SHIZA
SHOA
SHOBAB
SHOBACH
SHOBAI
SHOBAL
SHOBEK
SHOBI
SHOCHOH, SHOCO
SHOE
SHOFAR
SHOHAM
SHOMER
SHOPHACH
SHOPHAN
SHOPHAR
SHORE
SHOSHANNIM
SHOULDER
SHOULDER PIECE
SHOVELS
SHOWBREAD
SHRINE
SHRIVELED HAND
SHUA
SHUAH
SHUAL
SHUBAEL
SHUHAH
SHUHAM
SHUHAMITES
SHUHITE
SHULAMITE
SHULAMMITE
SHUMATHITES
SHUNAMMITE
SHUNEM
SHUNI
SHUNITES
SHUPHAM
SHUPHAMITES
SHUPPIM
SHUR
SHUSHAN
SHUSHAN EDUTH

SHUTHALHITES
SHUTHELAH SHUTTLE
SIA, SIAHA
SIBBECAI
SIBBECHAI
SIBBOLETH
SIBMAH
SIBRAIM
SIBYLLINE ORACLES
SICARII
SICHEM
SICK
SICKLE
SIDDIM
SIDE
SIDON
SIDONIANS
SIEGE
SIEVE
SIGN SIGNET
SIGNPOST
SIHON
SIHOR
SIKKUTH
SILAS
SILENCE
SILK
SILLA
SILOAM
SILOAM, TOWER OF SILOAM, VILLAGE OF SILVANUS
SILVER
SILVERLING
SILVER, PIECE OF SILVERSMITH
SIMEON
SIMEON, TRIBE OF SIMEONITES
SIMILITUDE
SIMON
SIMON MACCABAEUS
SIMON PETER
SIMPLICITY
SIMRI
SIN

SIN SIN, MAN OF SIN OFFERING
SIN, UNPARDONABLE SIN, WILDERNESS OF SINAI
SINCERITY
SINEW
SINGER
SINGING
SINGLENESS OF HEART
SINIM
SINITE
SINNER
SION
SIPHMOTH
SIPPAI
SIR
SIRAH
SIRION
SISAMAI
SISERA
SISMAI
SISTER
SISTRUM
SITHRI
SITNAH
SIVAN
SIX, SIXTY
SIYON
SKIFF
SKIN
SKINK
SKIRT
SKULL
SKY
SLABS
SLACK, SLACKNESS
SLANDER
SLAUGHTER OF THE INNOCENTS
SLAUGHTER, VALLEY OF SLAVE, SLAVERY SLEEP SLIME
SLING
SLINGSTONES
SLOOPS SLOTHFUL

SMELTER
SMITH
SMYRNA
SNAIL, SNAKE
SNARE
SNOW
SNUFFDISHES, SNUFFERS
SO
SOAP
SOBER
SOCHOH, SOCO, SOCOH
SODA
SODI
SODOM
SODOM, VINE OF SODOMITE, SODOMY
SOJOURNER SOLDIER
SOLOMON
SOLOMON, PSALMS OF SOLOMON, WISDOM OF SOLOMON’S POOLS
SOLOMON’S PORCH
SOLOMON’S SERVANTS
SON
SON OF GOD, SON OF MAN
SONG
SONG OF DEGREES
SONG OF SOLOMON, THE SONG OF SONGS
SONG OF THE THREE YOUNG MEN
SONS OF GOD
SOOT
SOP
SOPATER
SOPHERETH
SORCERY, SORCERER SORES
SOREK
SORREL
SORROW
SOSIPATER
SOSTHENES
SOTAI
SOUL
SOUTH
SOUTH GATE
SOUTH RAMOTH

SOUTH, THE SOVEREIGNTY OF GOD
SOW
SOWER, SOWING
SPAIN
SPAN
SPARKS
SPARROW
SPEAR
SPECK
SPECKLED SPECTACLE SPELT
SPHERE
SPICE, SPICES
SPIDER
SPIES
SPIKENARD
SPINDLE
SPINNING SPIRIT SPIRIT, HOLY SPIRITS, FAMILIAR
SPIRITS IN PRISON
SPIRITUAL SPIRITUAL BLESSINGS
SPIRITUAL BODY
SPIRITUAL GIFTS
SPIRITUALITY
SPIT, SPITTLE
SPLINT SPOIL
SPOKES SPOKESMAN SPONGE
SPOONS
SPORTS
SPOT
SPRING
SPRINKLING
SPRINKLING-BOWLS
SQUAD STABLE
STACHYS
STACTE
STADION
STAFF
STAG

STAIRS
STAKES
STALL
STAMMER STANDARD
STAR
STAR OF BETHLEHEM
STARGAZER
STARS, THE ELEVEN STATURE STATUTE STAVE
STEADFASTNESS STEALING
STEALTH
STEEL
STEPHANAS
STEPHEN
STEW
STEWARD
STEWARDSHIP
STIFF-NECKED
STOCKS
STOICISM STOMACH
STONE
STONECUTTER, STONEMASON, STONEWORKER
STONES, PRECIOUS
STONING
STOOL
STORAGE CITY, STOREHOUSE
STORK
STOVE
STRAIGHT STREET
STRAIN OUT STRANGER
STRANGLING
STRAW
STREETS
STRINGED INSTRUMENTS
STRIPES
STRONG DRINK
STUBBLE
STUMBLING BLOCK
SUAH
SUBTLE SUBURBS
SUCATHITES

SUCCOTH
SUCCOTH BENOTH
SUCHATHITES SUFFERING
SUFFERING SERVANT
SUICIDE
SUKKIIM
SUKKIMS
SUKKITES
SULPHUR
SUMER
SUN
SUN, WORSHIP OF SUNDAY SUNDIAL
SUNDIAL OF AHAZ
SUPERSCRIPTION
SUPERSTITIOUS
SUPH
SUPHAH
SUPPER, LORD’S
SUR
SURETY
SURNAME
SUSA
SUSANCHITES
SUSANNA
SUSI SWADDLE
SWADDLING BAND
SWALLOW, SWAN SWEARING SWEAT
SWEET INCENSE SWELLING
SWIFT, SWINE
SWORD
SYCAMINE, SYCAMORE
SYCHAR
SYENE
SYMBOL SYNAGOGUE
SYNAGOGUE, GREAT SYNTYCHE
SYRACUSE
SYRIA
SYRIAC VERSIONS
SYRIANS

SYRIAC
SYRO-PHOENICIAN
SYRTIS SANDS, THE

T

TAANACH
TAANATH SHILOH
TABBAOTH
TABBATH
TABEEL
TABERAH
TABERING
TABERNACLE
TABERNACLE OF THE CONGREGATION
TABERNACLE OF MEETING
TABERNACLES, FEAST OF TABITHA
TABLE
TABLET
TABOR TABRET
TABRIMMON
TACHES
TACHMONITE
TACKLE, TACKLING
TADMOR
TAHAN
TAHANITES
TAHAPANES
TAHASH TAHATH
TAHCHEMONITE, TAHKEMONITE
TAHPANHES
TAHPENES
TAHREA
TAHTIM HODSHI
TAILOR
TALEBEARER
TALENT
TALITHA CUMI
TALMAI
TALMON
TALMUD
TAMAH
TAMAR
TAMARISK TAMBOURINE

TAMMUZ
TANACH
TANHUMETH
TANNER
TAPESTRY MAKER
TAPHATH
TAPPUAH
TAR
TARAH
TARALAH
TAREA
TARES
TARGUM
TARPELITES
TARSHISH
TARSHISHAH
TARSUS
TARTAK
TARTAN
TASKMASTER
TASSEL
TATTENAI
TATTOO
TAU TAUNT-SONG
TAVERNS, THREE
TAWNY OWL
TAX, TAXES
TAX COLLECTOR
TEACHERS OF THE LAW
TEACHING
TEARS
TEBAH
TEBALIAH
TEBETH
TEETH
TEHAPHNEHES
TEHINNAH
TEIL TREE
TEKEL
TEKOA
TEKOAH
TEKOITE
TEL ABIB
TEL-HARESHA
TEL HARSHA
TEL MELAH
TELAH

TELAIM
TELASSAR
TELEM
TELL
TELL EL AMARNA
TEMA
TEMAN
TEMANITE
TEMENI TEMPERANCE TEMPLE
TEMPLE SHEKEL
TEMPTATION
TEMPTATION OF CHRIST
TEN
TEN COMMANDMENTS
TENDERHEARTED
TENON
TENT
TENT OF MEETING
TENTMAKER
TERAH
TERAPHIM
TEREBINTH
TERESH
TERRACE TERROR
TERTIUS
TERTULLUS
TESTAMENT
TESTAMENTS OF THE TWELVE PATRIARCHS
TESTICLES, CRUSHED
TESTIMONY
TESTIMONY, ARK OF THE TETH
TETRARCH
TEXTS AND MANUSCRIPTS
THADDAEUS
THAHASH
THAMAH
THAMAR
THANK OFFERING THANKSGIVING
THARA
THARSHISH
THEATER
THEBES
THEBEZ

THEFT
THELASAR
THEOCRACY
THEOPHANY
THEOPHILUS
THESSALONIANS, EPISTLES TO THE THESSALONICA
THEUDAS
THIEF
THIEVES, TWO THIGH
THIMNATHAH
THIRD PART OF A SHEKEL
THISTLES, THORNS
THOMAS
THOMAS, GOSPEL OF THORN IN THE FLESH
THOUSAND THREE THREE CHILDREN, SONG OF THE THREE INNS
THREE TAVERNS
THRESHING
THRESHING FLOOR
THRESHING SLEDGE
THRESHOLD THRONE
THROWING STICK THRUSH
THUMMIM THUNDER
THUNDER, SONS OF THYATIRA
THYINE
TIBERIAS
TIBERIAS, SEA OF TIBERIUS
TIBHATH
TIBNI
TIDAL
TIGLATH–PILESER
TIGRIS
TIKVAH
TIKVATH
TILGATH–PILNESER
TILING
TILLER
TILON

TIMAEUS
TIMBREL TIME
TIMES, LAST TIMES, OBSERVING
TIMEUS
TIMNA
TIMNAH
TIMNATH HERES
TIMNATH SERAH
TIMNITE
TIMON
TIMOTHY
TIMOTHY, EPISTLES TO TIN
TINDER
TINKLING
TIPHSAH
TIRAS
TIRATHITES
TIRE
TIRHAKAH
TIRHANAH
TIRIA
TIRSHATHA
TIRZAH
TISHBITE
TISHRI
TITHE TITIUS
TITLE
TITTLE
TITUS
TITUS, EPISTLE TO TIZITE
TOAH
TOB
TOBADONIJAH
TOBIAH
TOBIJAH
TOBIT, BOOK OF TOCHEN
TOGARMAH
TOHU
TOI
TOKEN TOKHATH
TOLA

TOLAD
TOLAITES
TOLL TOMB
TONGS TONGUE
TONGUES, CONFUSION OF TONGUES, GIFT OF TOOLS OF THE BIBLE
TOOTH
TOPAZ
TOPHEL
TOPHET
TOPHETH
TORAH TORCH TORMENT
TORSO
TORTOISE
TOU
TOW
TOWER
TOWER OF BABEL
TOWER OF THE FURNACES
TOWN
TOWN CLERK
TRACHONITIS
TRADE AND TRAVEL
TRADER TRADITION
TRAIN
TRAJAN
TRANCE
TRANSFIGURATION
TRANSFORM
TRANSGRESSION
TRANSJORDAN
TRANSLATE, TRANSLATION
TRANSLITERATION
TRAP
TRAPPER
TRAVAIL TRAVEL
TREASURE, TREASURY
TREASURE CITY
TREASURER
TREATY
TREE OF KNOWLEDGE

TREE OF LIFE
TRESPASS
TRESPASS OFFERING TRIAL
TRIAL OF JESUS
TRIANGLE TRIBE TRIBULATION
TRIBULATION, THE GREAT TRIBUTE
TRIBUTE MONEY
TRIFLES
TRIGON
TRIMMERS
TRINITY
TRIPOLIS, MEN OF TRIUMPH
TROAS
TROGYLLIUM
TROPHIMUS
TROUSERS
TRUMPET
TRUMPETS, FEAST OF TRUSTEE TRUTH
TRYPHAENA
TRYPHENA
TRYPHOSA
TSADDE
TUBAL
TUBAL–CAIN
TUMOR
TUNIC TUNNEL
TURBAN
TURQUOISE
TURTLE, TURTLEDOVE
TUSK
TUTOR
TWELVE
TWELVE, THE
TWIN BROTHERS, THE TWO TYCHICUS
TYPE TYRANNUS
TYRE
TYROPOEON VALLEY

U

UCAL
UEL
UGARIT
UKNAZ
ULAI
ULAM
ULCER
ULLA
UMMAH
UNBELIEF
UNCHASTITY
UNCIRCUMCISED
UNCLE
UNCLEAN, UNCLEANNESS
UNCLEAN DEMON, UNCLEAN SPIRIT
UNCTION
UNDEFILED
UNDERSETTERS
UNICORN
UNITY
UNKNOWN GOD
UNLEAVENED BREAD
UNLEAVENED BREAD, FEAST OF UNNI
UNNO
UNPARDONABLE SIN
UPHARSIN
UPHAZ
UPPER CHAMBER
UPPER GATE
UR
URBANE
URBANUS
URI
URIAH
URIEL
URIJAH
URIM AND THUMMIM
USURY UTHAI
UZ
UZAI
UZAL
UZZA, UZZAH
UZZEN SHEERAH
UZZI

UZZIA
UZZIAH
UZZIEL
UZZIELITES

V

VAGABOND
VAIN
VAINGLORY
VAJEZATHA
VALE
VALLEY
VALLEY GATE
VALLEY OF SLAUGHTER
VANIAH VANITY
VASHNI
VASHTI
VASSAL
VEIL
VENGEANCE
VENISON
VENOM
VERILY
VERMILION VESSEL VESTIBULE
VIA DOLOROSA
VIAL
VICE VICEROY
VIGIL
VILLAGE
VINE, VINEYARD
VINE-DRESSER
VINE OF SODOM
VINEGAR
VIOL VIOLENCE VIPER VIRGIN
VIRGIN BIRTH VIRTUE VISIONS VOCATION
VOID
VOPHSI

VOW
VULGATE VULTURE

W

WADI
WAFERS WAGES
WAGON
WAHEB
WAIL
WAIT
WALK
WALKWAYS
WALL
WANDERINGS OF ISRAEL
WAR, WARFARE
WAR CLUB WASHING
WASHPOT
WASP
WASTING DISEASE
WATCH
WATCHTOWER
WATER OF BITTERNESS WATER CARRIER
WATER OF JEALOUSY
WATERMELON
WATERPOOLS
WATERPOT
WATERS OF MEROM
WATERSPOUTS
WAVE OFFERING
WAW
WAX WAY
WEALTH WEAPONS
WEASEL
WEATHER
WEAVER
WEAVING
WEB WEDDING
WEEK
WEEKLY SABBATH WEEKS, FEAST OF

WEEKS, SEVENTY WEEPING
WEIGHTS AND MEASURES OF THE BIBLE
WELL
WELL DIGGER
WEST
WEST GATE
WHALE
WHEAT
WHEEL
WHELP
WHIP
WHIRLWIND
WHITE
WHITEWASH
WHORE
WICKED ONE, THE WICK-TRIMMER WIDOW
WIFE
WILD ASS, WILD BEASTS, WILD BOAR, WILD DONKEY, WILD GOAT, WILD OX WILDERNESS
WILDERNESS WANDERING
WILE
WILL WILLOW
WILLOWS, BROOK OF THE WIMPLE
WIND WINDOW
WINE
WINEBIBBERS
WINEPRESS
WINESKIN WING
WINNOWING
WINNOWING FORK
WINTER
WINTER HOUSE
WISDOM
WISDOM LITERATURE
WISDOM OF SOLOMON
WISE MEN
WITCH, WITCHCRAFT
WITHERED HAND
WITNESS
WIZARD
WOE

WOLF WOMAN
WOODCUTTER, WOODWORKER WOODEN IMAGES
WOOL
WORD, THE WORD OF GOD
WORK WORKS
WORLD
WORM, WORMS
WORMWOOD
WORSHIP
WORSHIP, EMPEROR
WRANGLINGS
WRATH WRITING
WRITING MATERIALS
WRYNECK

XYZ

XERXES
YAH
YAHWEH, YAHWEH ELOHIM
YARMUK
YARN
YEA
YEAR
YEAR OF JUBILEE
YHWH
YIRON
YOD
YOKE
YOKEFELLOW
ZAANAIM
ZAANAN
ZAANANNIM
ZAAVAN
ZABAD
ZABBAI
ZABBUD
ZABDI
ZABDIEL
ZABUD
ZABULON
ZACCAI
ZACCHAEUS

ZACCHUR
ZACCUR
ZACHARIAH
ZACHARIAS
ZADOK
ZAHAM
ZAIR
ZALAPH
ZALMON
ZALMONAH
ZALMUNNA
ZAMZUMMIM
ZANOAH
ZAPHNATH-PAANEAH
ZAPHON
ZARA, ZARAH
ZAREATHITES
ZARED
ZAREPHATH
ZARETAN
ZARETH–SHAHAR
ZARETHAN
ZARHITES
ZARTANAH
ZATTU
ZAYIN
ZAZA
ZEAL, ZEALOUS ZEALOT
ZEBADIAH
ZEBAH, ZALMUNNA
ZEBAIM
ZEBEDEE
ZEBIDAH
ZEBINA
ZEBOIIM
ZEBOIM
ZEBUDAH
ZEBUL
ZEBULUN
ZEBULUN, TRIBE OF ZEBULUNITE
ZECHARIAH
ZECHARIAH, BOOK OF ZECHER
ZEDAD
ZEDEKIAH
ZEEB

ZELAH
ZELEK
ZELOPHEHAD
ZELOTES
ZELZAH
ZEMARAIM
ZEMARITES
ZEMER
ZEMIRAH
ZENAN
ZENAS
ZEPHANIAH
ZEPHANIAH, BOOK OF ZEPHATH
ZEPHATHAH
ZEPHI, ZEPHO
ZEPHON
ZEPHONITES
ZER
ZERAH
ZERAHIAH
ZERAHITES
ZERED
ZEREDA
ZEREDAH
ZERERAH
ZERERATH
ZERESH
ZERETH
ZERETH SHAHAR
ZERI
ZEROR
ZERUAH
ZERUBBABEL
ZERUIAH
ZETHAM
ZETHAN
ZETHAR
ZEUS
ZIA
ZIBA
ZIBEON
ZIBIA
ZIBIAH
ZICHRI
ZIDDIM ZIDKIJAH
ZIDON

ZIF
ZIGGURAT
ZIHA
ZIKLAG
ZILLAH
ZILLETHAI
ZILPAH
ZILTHAI
ZIMMAH
ZIMRAN
ZIMRI
ZIN
ZINA
ZION
ZIOR
ZIPH
ZIPHAH
ZIPHIM
ZIPHION
ZIPHITES
ZIPHRON
ZIPPOR
ZIPPORAH
ZITHER
ZITHRI
ZIV
ZIZ, ASCENT OF ZIZA
ZIZAH
ZOAN
ZOAR
ZOBA, ZOBAH
ZOBEBAH
ZOHAR
ZOHELETH, STONE OF ZOHETH
ZOPHAH
ZOPHAI
ZOPHAR
ZOPHIM
ZORAH
ZORATHITES
ZOREAH
ZORITES
ZOROASTRIANISM
ZUAR
ZUPH
ZUR

ZURIEL
ZURISHADDAI
ZUZIM, ZUZIMS

A

AARON [EHR un]—brother of Moses and first high priest of the Hebrew nation. Very little is known about Aaron’s early life, other than his marriage to Elisheba, daughter of Amminadab (Ex. 6:23).

When God called Moses to lead the Hebrew people out of slavery in Egypt, Moses protested that he would not be able to speak convincingly to the Pharaoh. So Aaron was designated by God as Moses’ official spokesman (Ex. 4:14–16). At Moses’ instruction, Aaron also performed miracles as signs for the release of the Hebrews. Aaron’s rod turned into a serpent that swallowed the rods of the Egyptian magicians (Ex. 7:8–20). Aaron also caused frogs to cover the land by stretching his rod over the lakes and streams of Egypt (Ex. 8:6).

Aaron held an important place of leadership because of his work with his brother Moses. A central figure in the EXODUS from Egypt, he also received instructions from God for observing the first PASSOVER (Ex. 12:1). In the wilderness he assisted Moses in keeping order and rendering judgments over the people (Num. 15:33). Both he and Moses were singled out when the people complained about the harsh conditions of these wilderness years (Num. 14:2).

When the priesthood was instituted in the wilderness, Moses consecrated Aaron as the first high priest of Israel (Exodus 28–29; Leviticus 8–9). The priesthood was set within the tribe of Levi, from which Aaron was descended. Aaron’s sons (Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar) inherited the position of high priest from their father (Num. 3:2–3). Aaron was given special robes to wear, signifying his status within the priesthood (Lev. 8:7–9). At his death the robes were transferred to his oldest living son, Eleazar (Num. 20:25–28). The TABERNACLE, the main sanctuary of worship, was placed under Aaron’s supervision (Numbers 4). He received instructions from God on the functions of the priesthood and the tabernacle (Numbers 18). He alone, serving in the capacity of high priest, went into the Holy of Holies once a year to represent the people on the DAY OF ATONEMENT.

In spite of his responsibility for the spiritual leadership of the nation, Aaron committed a serious sin in the wilderness surrounding Mount Sinai. While Moses was on the mountain praying to God and receiving His commandments, the people demanded that Aaron make one or more gods for them to worship. Aaron made no attempt to stop the people and made a golden calf for them (Ex. 32:1–10). Aaron was saved from God's wrath only because Moses interceded on his behalf (Deut. 9:20).

After all their years of leading the people, neither Moses nor Aaron was permitted to enter the Promised Land. Apparently this was because they did not make it clear that God would provide for the Hebrews' needs when they believed they would die for lack of water in the wilderness (Num. 20:12). Aaron died at Mount Hor, and Moses died later in Moab.

Upon arriving at Mount Hor from the wilderness of Kadesh, Aaron was accompanied by Moses and his son Eleazar to the top of the mountain. There he was stripped of his high priestly garments, which were transferred to Eleazar. After Aaron's death, the community mourned for 30 days (Num. 20:22–29).

The Book of Hebrews contrasts the imperfect priesthood of Aaron with the perfect priesthood of Christ (Heb. 5:2–5; 7:11–12). Christ's priesthood is compared to the order of MELCHIZEDEK because it is an eternal office with no beginning and no end. Thus, it replaces the priesthood of Aaron.

Photo: Amsterdam Bible Museum

- A model of Aaron in the distinctive dress of the high priest, including the ephod with 12 precious stones representing the tribes of Israel (Numbers 17).

AARON'S ROD—a rod mentioned on two dramatic occasions in the Old Testament. When Moses and Aaron appeared before Pharaoh, Aaron cast down his rod and it became a serpent. When the magicians of Egypt did the same thing, "Aaron's rod swallowed up their rods" (Ex. 7:12). Later, Aaron struck the waters of Egypt with his rod and they turned to blood (7:15–20).

During the wilderness wandering, Aaron's rod was the only staff that produced buds, blossoms, and almonds, indicating God's choice of Aaron and his descendants as priests (Num. 17:1–10).

AARONITES [EHR un ites]—the descendants of Aaron and therefore a part of the priestly tribe of Levi. Led by Jehoida, 3,700 Aaronites fought with David against Saul after David was made king (1 Chr. 12:27).

AB (see CALENDAR).

ABADDON [ah BAD un] (destruction)—a term found only once in most English translations of the Bible (Rev. 9:11). Abaddon is a transliteration of a Hebrew word that occurs six other times in the Bible, usually translated “destruction” (Job 26:6; 28:22; 31:12; Ps. 88:11; Prov. 15:11; 27:20). In three of these places, it occurs in the phrase “Hell and Destruction” (Job 26:6; Prov. 15:11; 27:20). The Hebrew nouns translated “Hell” and “Destruction” are Sheol and Abaddon respectively. They appear to be synonymous terms for the abode of the dead or the grave.

In the Book of Revelation, Abaddon is not a place—the realm of the dead—but a person—the angel who reigns over the abyss.

Also see HADES; HELL; SHEOL.

ABAGTHA [uh BAG thuh]—one of the seven chamberlains, or eunuchs, chosen by the Persian king Ahasuerus (Xerxes) to bring his queen, Vashti, to the royal banquet (Esth. 1:10).

ABANA [AB ah nah]—a form of ABANAH.

ABANAH [AB ah nah]—the chief river of Damascus. The Abanah flowed through the center of the city. With the Pharpar, it supplied an abundance of water, making the country around it a beautiful and fertile spot. When Naaman the leper was asked to bathe in the Jordan River seven times, he complained that he would rather bathe in the Abanah or the Pharpar (2 Kin. 5:12; Abana, KJV, NIV, NRSV). The Abanah River’s modern name is Barada.

ABARIM [AB ah rim] (regions beyond)—a range of mountains east of the Dead Sea and the Jordan River valley. Mount Nebo was part of this mountain range. These mountains gave a panoramic view of the surrounding country. From Mount Nebo Moses viewed the Promised Land before he died (Deut. 32:49; Num. 27:12).

ABBA [AB ah] (father)—an Aramaic word that corresponds to our “Daddy” or “Papa.” It is found three times in the New Testament: in the Garden of Gethsemane, Jesus prayed, “Abba, Father” (Mark 14:36); the apostle Paul linked the Christian’s cry of “Abba, Father” with the “Spirit of adoption” (Rom. 8:15); and, again, Paul writes, “Because you are sons, God has sent forth the Spirit of His son into your hearts, crying out, ‘Abba, Father!’ ” (Gal. 4:6). What a blessed privilege it is to be given the right to call the great Creator, “Our Father”!

ABDA [AB dah] (servant or worshiper)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. The father of Adoniram, Solomon’s officer in charge of the labor force (1 Kin. 4:6).
2. A chief Levite, the son of Shammua, who lived in Jerusalem after the captivity (Neh. 11:17). He is also called Obadiah (1 Chr. 9:16).

ABDEEL [AB dih ell] (servant of God)—the father of Shelemiah, who was commanded by Jehoiakim, king of Judah, to arrest Jeremiah the prophet and Baruch the scribe (Jer. 36:26).

ABDI [AB dih] (servant of the Lord)—the name of two or three men in the Old Testament:

1. A Levite of the family of Merari; he was the son of Malluch and the father of Kishi (1 Chr. 6:44).
2. A Levite contemporary with Hezekiah king of Judah (2 Chr. 29:12). This person may be the same as Abdi No. 1.
3. One of Elam’s sons who divorced his pagan wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:26).

ABDIEL [AB dih ell] (servant of God)—a man of the tribe of Gad who lived “in Gilead, in Bashan” (1 Chr. 5:15–16).

ABDON [AB done] (service)—a name given to one city and four men:

1. A Levitical city in Asher (Josh. 21:30; 1 Chr. 6:74), also called Ebron (Josh. 19:28).
2. A son of Hillel, a native of Pirathon in the tribe of Ephraim. He judged Israel eight years (Judg. 12:13–15).
3. A Benjamite who lived in Jerusalem (1 Chr. 8:23).
4. The firstborn son of Jeiel from Maacah and an ancestor of King Saul (1 Chr. 8:30; 9:35–36).
5. A son of Micah who was sent by King Josiah to inquire of God about the Book of the Law found in the temple (2 Chr. 34:20). Abdon is also called Achbor (2 Kin. 22:12).

ABED–NEGO [uh BED knee goe] (servant of Nebo)—the Chaldean name given to Azariah in King Nebuchadnezzar's court when he was chosen as one of the king's servants (Dan. 1:7; 2:49). With Shadrach and Meshach, Abed–Nego was thrown into the fiery furnace for refusing to bow down and worship a golden image. The three men were miraculously protected from the fire (Dan. 3:12–30). Like the three Hebrew men in the fiery furnace, the nation of Israel endured the captivity and were miraculously protected by God.

ABEL [A buhl] (breath, vapor)—the name of a person and two places in the Old Testament:

1. The second son of Adam and Eve (Gen. 4:2). His brother Cain, who was a farmer, brought an offering of his produce to the Lord. Abel, a shepherd, brought to the Lord an offering "of the firstlings [the best quality] of his flock." Genesis records: "And the Lord respected Abel and his offering, but he did not respect Cain and his offering" (Gen. 4:4–5). Envious of Abel, Cain killed his brother and was cursed by God for the murder.

   In the New Testament, Abel is described as a man of faith, who "offered to God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain" (Heb. 11:4). Cain murdered his brother Abel, writes John, "because his [Cain's] works were evil and his brother's [Abel's] righteous" (1 John 3:12). Jesus spoke of "the blood of righteous Abel" (Matt. 23:35; Luke 11:51) and implied that Abel, the first righteous martyr, anticipated in symbol His own death on Calvary at the hands of evil men. The blood of the new covenant, however, "speaks better things than that of Abel" (Heb. 12:24). The blood of Abel cried out for vengeance; the blood of Christ speaks of salvation.
2. A large stone in the field of Joshua of Beth Shemesh on which the ARK OF THE COVENANT was set by the Philistines (1 Sam. 6:18).
3. A fortified city in northern Israel, which Joab besieged after the rebellion of Sheba (2 Sam. 20:14–15, 18). This city, called Abel of Beth Maachah, is probably the same place as ABEL BETH MAACHAH.

ABEL ACACIA GROVE [A bell a KAY shuh grove]—a site northeast of the Dead Sea in the plains of Moab, also called Acacia Grove. It was here that the Israelites camped just before crossing the Jordan and entering the Promised Land (Num. 25:1; Josh. 2:1; 3:1; Mic. 6:5; Shittim, KJV). It was probably the same place as Abel–shittim (Num. 33:49, KJV).

Most scholars identify Acacia Grove with Tell el–Hamman, although some think it was at nearby Tell el–Kefrein. Many notable events occurred while the Israelites were camped here. Here many Israelites took Moabite women for their wives and worshiped Moabite gods. As punishment, God allowed a plague to kill 24,000 Israelites (Num. 25:9).

At this campsite Moses also took a military census of the Israelite tribes, establishing the number of those 20 years old and above who were able to go to war (Num. 26:2). At Acacia Grove God also revealed to Moses that he would not be allowed to cross the Jordan River and that Joshua would be his successor as leader of the people (Num. 27:12–23).

After Moses ascended Mount Nebo and died (Deuteronomy 34), Joshua sent out two spies from Acacia Grove to examine the defense of Jericho (Josh. 2:1). Upon their return, the Israelites broke camp and crossed the Jordan River, finally entering the land that God had promised to Abraham and his descendants hundreds of years earlier (Josh. 3:1).

ABEL BETH MAACHAH [A bell beth MAY uh kah] (meadow of the house of Maachah)—a fortified town near the town of Dan in the area of the tribe of Naphtali. It was attacked by Ben–Hadad (1 Kin. 15:20) and Tiglath–Pileser (2 Kin. 15:29), who mentions it in his annals. The name of the town is also given as Abel Maim, meaning “Abel on the waters” (2 Chr. 16:4). It is described as a “mother in Israel”—meaning a place of great importance, having many “daughters,” or inhabitants.

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

- The mound of Abel Beth Maacah in the northern part of Naphtali.

ABEL CHERAMIM [A bell CARE uh meem]—a form of ABEL KERAMIM.

ABEL KERAMIM [A bell CARE uh meem] (meadow of vineyards)—a city east of the Jordan River and northeast of the Dead Sea. Abel Keramim was the farthest extent of Jephthah's military campaign against the Ammonites (Judg. 11:33; Abel Cheramim, KJV).

ABEL MAIM [A bell im]—a city in northern Israel (2 Chr. 16:4; Abel-mayim, REB), usually called ABEL BETH MAACHAH.

ABEL MAYIM—a form of ABEL MAIM.

ABEL MEHOLAH [A bell me HOE lah] (meadow of dancing)—a town east of the Jordan River in the hill country of Gilead. It was the residence (and perhaps also the birthplace) of Elisha the prophet (1 Kin. 4:12; 19:16). In 1943, archaeologist Nelson Glueck identified Abel Meholah with Tell el–Maqlub, by the Wadi el–Yabis.

ABEL MIZRAIM [A bell MIZ ray ihm] (see ATAD).

ABEL SHITTIM [A bell SHIH tihm]—a form of ABEL ACACIA GROVE.

ABEZ [A bez]—a town in northern Canaan allotted to the tribe of Issachar (Josh. 19:20; Ebez, NASB, REB, NIV, NRSV).

ABI [a BEE] (my father)—a daughter of Zechariah, wife of Ahaz, and mother of King Hezekiah of Judah (2 Kin. 18:2). Abi is also called Abijah (2 Chr. 29:1).

ABIA [ah BEE uh]—a form of ABIJAM.

ABI ALBON [A bih AL bonn]—a form of ABIEL.

ABIASAPH [a BY uh saf] (father has gathered)—a son or descendant of Korah the Levite (Ex. 6:24). It is unclear whether he was the same person as Ebiasaph (1 Chr. 6:23, 37; 9:19).

ABIATHAR [a BY uh thar] (father of abundance)—one of two chief priests in the court of David. Abiathar was the son of Ahimelech of the priestly clan of Eli from Shiloh (1 Sam. 22:20). When the residents of the priestly village of Nob were massacred by Saul for helping David, Abiathar was the only one to escape (1 Sam. 22:6–23). When David eventually became king, he appointed Abiathar, along with Zadok, as priests in the royal court (2 Sam. 8:17; 1 Chr. 18:16).

When David's son Absalom tried to take his throne by force, David was forced to leave Jerusalem. Zadok and Abiathar carried the ARK OF THE COVENANT out of the capital city but later returned it at the command of David (2 Sam. 15:29). Both priests remained in Jerusalem to inform David of Absalom's plans (2 Sam. 15:34). After Absalom's death, Abiathar and Zadok carried the message of reconciliation to Amasa and the elders of Judah (2 Sam. 19:11–14).

During the struggle over who would succeed as king, Abiathar supported Adonijah. When Solomon emerged as the new ruler, Zadok was appointed priest of the royal court, while Abiathar escaped execution only because of his earlier loyalty to David. He and his family were banished to Anathoth, and his rights and privileges as a Jerusalem priest were taken away (1 Kin. 1:7–25; 2:22–35).

Some scholars believe Abiathar may have written portions of 1 and 2 Samuel, especially the sections describing the royal court life under David.

ABIB [A bibb] (sprouting or budding)—one of the months of the Hebrew calendar (corresponding to our March–April). On the 15th of this month, the people of Israel left Egypt. Abib was made the first month of the year in commemoration of the Exodus (Ex. 23:15; Deut. 16:1). The Passover and the Feast of Unleavened Bread were celebrated during the month of Abib. After the captivity, the month was called Nisan (Neh. 2:1; Esth. 3:7). Also see CALENDAR.

ABIDA, ABIDAH [uh BY duh] (father of knowledge)—the fourth son of Midian, who was the fourth son of Abraham and Keturah (Gen. 25:4; 1 Chr. 1:33).

ABIDAN [uh BY duhn] (my father is judge)—a son of Gideoni and the leader of the Benjamites who represented his tribe when the census was taken during the wilderness wandering (Num. 2:22; 7:60, 65).

ABIEL [A bih ell] (my God is father)—the name of two Old Testament men:

1. An ancestor of Saul, the first king of Israel (1 Sam. 9:1; 14:51).
2. An Arbathite, one of David's mighty men (1 Chr. 11:32), also called Abi Albon (2 Sam. 23:31).

ABIEZER [a bih EE zur] (father of help)—two Old Testament men bear this consoling name:

1. The son of Hammoleketh (Josh. 17:2; 1 Chr. 7:18). The renowned Gideon belonged to this family. Possibly this Abiezer is the same person as Jeezer (Num. 26:30).
2. One of David's mighty men. He was from the town of Anathoth—which later became the birthplace of the prophet Jeremiah (1 Chr. 27:12).

ABIEZRITE [a bih EZ rite] (belonging to Abiezer)—a person who belonged to the family of ABIEZER (Judg. 6:11, 24; 8:32).

ABIGAIL [AB ih gale] (father of joy)—one or two Old Testament women had this delightful name:

1. Wife of Nabal the Carmelite and, after his death, of David (1 Sam. 25:3, 14–42; 2 Sam. 2:2; 1 Chr. 3:1). Abigail's husband, Nabal, was an ill-tempered, drunken man. When David was hiding from the jealous King Saul, he asked Nabal for food for himself and his men. Nabal blatantly refused. Angered, David threatened to plunder Nabal's possessions and kill Nabal himself. Abigail, in her wisdom, gathered enough food for David's men, rode out to meet David, and bowed before him to show her respect. By agreeing with David that Nabal had acted with great disrespect, she calmed David's anger. To Abigail's credit, she did not leave her godless husband. When Nabal died, apparently from shock at discovering his near brush with death, David married Abigail and she later bore him a son, Chileab.
2. A sister or half-sister of David and mother of Amasa, whom Absalom made captain of the army instead of Joab (2 Sam. 17:25; Abigal, NRSV, REB; 1 Chr. 2:16–17). She may be the same person as No. 1.

ABIGAL—a form of ABIGAIL.

ABIHAIL [AB ih hail] (father of strength)—the name of three men and two women in the Old Testament:

1. A Levite and the father of Zuriel in the time of Moses (Num. 3:35).
2. The wife of Abishur, a descendant of Hezron of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 2:29).
3. The head of a family in the tribe of Gad who lived in Gilead of Bashan (1 Chr. 5:14).
4. A daughter of Eliab (David's brother) and the wife of King Rehoboam (2 Chr. 11:18).
5. The father of Queen Esther, who became the wife of Ahasuerus (Xerxes I, 485–464 B.C.), king of Persia, in the place of Vashti. Abihail was therefore also an uncle of Mordecai (Esth. 2:15; 9:29).

ABIHU [a BIH hoo] (he is my father)—second son of Aaron and Elisheba (Ex. 6:23). Abihu was destroyed, along with his brother NADAB, in the Wilderness of Sinai for offering "profane fire" (Lev. 10:1) before the Lord. Exactly why the fire was "profane" is not certain; perhaps Abihu and Nadab rebelled against the authority of Moses and Aaron by presuming to bring an unauthorized offering before the Lord. If so, their action implies pride and arrogance, which the Lord despises.

ABIHUD [a BIH hud] (father of honor)—a son of Bela, who was the oldest son of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:3).

ABIJAH [a BUY jah] (the Lord is my Father)—the name of eight people in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Jeroboam who died in youth, in fulfillment of the prophecy of Abijah (1 Kin. 14:1–18).
2. The wife of Hezron, a man of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 2:24).
3. A descendant of Benjamin (or perhaps of Zebulun) through Becher (1 Chr. 7:8).
4. A descendant of Aaron, who was a priest in the time of David (1 Chr. 24:10).
5. A king of Judah and son of Rehoboam and Maacah, the granddaughter of Absalom (2 Chr. 11:20, 22). Also see ABIJAM.
6. The mother of Hezekiah, king of Judah (2 Chr. 29:1). Abijah is also called Abi (2 Kin. 18:2).
7. A priest who signed Nehemiah’s covenant (Neh. 10:7).
8. A priest who returned to Jerusalem from Babylon with Zerubbabel (Neh. 12:1–4, 12–17).

ABIJAM [a BUY jam] (the sea is my father)—a king of Judah and son of Rehoboam and Maacah the daughter of Absalom. When King Rehoboam died, Abijam succeeded to Judah’s throne. He had 14 wives, 22 sons, and 16 daughters. When he died, after reigning for three years, his son ASA became king (1 Kin. 14:31). He is also called Abijah (2 Chr. 11:20, 22). The KJV has Abia (Matt. 1:7), listing him as an ancestor of Jesus.

ABILENE [ab uh LEE knee] (region of Abila)—a district near the Anti-Lebanon Mountains. It derived its name from Abila, its capital, which was located on the Abanah (modern Barada) River some 29 to 32 kilometers (18 or 20 miles) northwest of Damascus. Originally a part of the Iturean kingdom of Ptolemy Mennaeus (about 85–40 B.C.), Abilene was broken up when King Lysanias I (40–36 B.C.) was put to death by Mark Antony. It became the tetrarchy of a younger Lysanias “in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberias Caesar” (Luke 3:1), when John the Baptist began his ministry.

ABIMAEL [ah BIM uh ell] (my Father is God)—the ninth of the 13 sons of Joktan, a descendant of Shem (Gen. 10:28; 1 Chr. 1:22).

ABIMELECH [uh BIM eh leck] (my father is king)—the name of five men in the Old Testament:

1. The king of Gerar in the time of Abraham (Gen. 20:1–18; 21:22–34). Fearing for his own safety, Abraham introduced Sarah, his wife, as his sister when he entered Abimelech’s territory. Abimelech claimed Sarah for his harem, only to be warned in a dream that he had taken the wife of another man. Then Abimelech returned Sarah to Abraham. The two men made a covenant with each other, and Abraham asked God to reward the king by giving him many children. Many scholars believe that the word Abimelech is not a proper name but a royal title of the Philistine kings, just as Pharaoh was a title for Egyptian kings.
2. The king of Gerar in the time of Isaac (Gen. 26:1–31).
3. The ruler of the city of Shechem during the period of the judges (Judg. 8:30—10:1; 2 Sam. 11:21). Abimelech was a son of Gideon by a concubine from Shechem. Abimelech tried to become king, and he did reign over Israel for three years (Judg. 9:22). In order to eliminate all who might challenge his authority, he killed all the other sons of Gideon—his brothers and half-brothers—who were potential successors of his father (Judg. 9:5).

   Abimelech was killed in a battle at Thebez, a city northeast of Shechem, which he surrounded with his army. When Abimelech ventured too close to the city tower, a woman dropped a millstone on his head, crushing his skull. Abimelech commanded his armorbearer to kill him so it could not be said that he died at the hands of a woman (Judg. 9:50–54; 2 Sam. 11:21).
4. A priest in the time of David (1 Chr. 18:16).
5. A Philistine king whom David met while fleeing from King Saul (Psalm 34, title). Abimelech is apparently the royal title of ACHISH the king of Gath (1 Sam. 21:10–15).

ABINADAB [uh BIN a dab]—the name of four Old Testament men:

1. An Israelite of the tribe of Judah in whose house the ARK OF THE COVENANT was placed after being returned by the Philistines (1 Sam. 7:1; 1 Chr. 13:7).
2. The second son of Jesse; a brother of David (1 Sam. 17:13; 1 Chr. 2:13).
3. A son of King Saul slain at Mount Gilboa by the Philistines (1 Sam. 31:2; 1 Chr. 10:2).
4. The father of one of Solomon's officers, who was set over Dor in the territory of Issachar (1 Kin. 4:11).

ABINOAM [ah BIN oh am] (father of pleasantness)—the father of Barak of the tribe of Naphtali (Judg. 4:6; 5:1).

ABIRAM [ah BY ram] (my father is exalted)—the name of two people in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Eliab, a Reubenite, who joined in the rebellion of KORAH and conspired against Moses and Aaron in the wilderness. He died in an earthquake, which served as a fitting judgment for his sin (Num. 16:1–33).
2. The firstborn of Hiel, who rebuilt the city of Jericho (1 Kin. 16:34).

ABISHAG [AB ih shag]—a young woman from Shunem employed by David's physicians to care for him in his old age (1 Kin. 1:1–4, 15). The treatment implies that through physical contact Abishag's youth could revive a dying David. The treatment failed. After David's death, one of his sons, Adonijah, asked permission to marry Abishag (1 Kin. 2:17). Solomon saw Adonijah's request as an attempt to seize the throne. He had Adonijah killed (1 Kin. 2:13–25).

ABISHAI [ah BISH a eye]—the oldest son of Zeruiah, David's half-sister, and brother of Joab and Asahel (2 Sam. 2:18). He was one of David's mighty men (2 Sam. 23:18; 1 Chr. 11:20). He helped David in the fight with Ishbi–Benob the giant (2 Sam. 21:16–17). A headstrong and impulsive man, he nevertheless maintained an unswerving loyalty to David through such crises as the rebellions of Absalom and Sheba (2 Sam. 16:9; 18–20).

ABISHALOM [ah BISH ah lom]—a form of ABSALOM (see 1 Kin. 15:2, 10).

ABISHUA [ah BISH you ah] (father of salvation)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. The son of Phinehas and the fourth high priest of Israel (1 Chr. 6:4–5).
2. The fourth son of Bela, who was a son of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:4).

ABISHUR [ah BY shur] (my father is a wall)—the second son of Shammai, of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 2:28–29).

ABITAL [ah BY tuhl] (father of dew)—a wife of King David and the mother of Shephatiah, the fifth son born to David while he was at Hebron (2 Sam. 3:4; 1 Chr. 3:3).

ABITUB [ah BY tub] (my father is good)—a descendant of Benjamin listed in the family tree of King Saul (1 Chr. 8:11).

ABIUD [ah BY ud]—an ancestor of Jesus, listed in the Gospel of Matthew (Matt. 1:13).

ABLUTION—the ceremonial washing of one’s body, vessels, and clothing for the purpose of religious purification. This word is not found in the NKJV, but it occurs in Hebrews 6:2 and 9:10 in the RSV. In both places the Greek word is baptismos (literally, “dipping”), which can be translated “washings” (Heb. 9:10).

Ablutions have nothing to do with washing one’s body for sanitary or hygienic purposes. Rather, these were performed in order to remove ritual defilement. Some of the causes of ritual uncleanness in Bible times were bloodshed (Lev. 17), childbirth (Lev. 12), sexual intercourse (Lev. 18), leprosy (Lev. 12), menstruation (Lev. 15), and contact with dead bodies (Num. 19).

At Mount Sinai, the Israelites were told to wash (literally, “trample”) their clothes in preparation for worship (Ex. 19:10, 14). Similarly, the Levites as well as Aaron and his sons were prepared for service by washing their clothes and their bodies (Ex. 12–13).

By New Testament times, ceremonial washings became almost an end in themselves. The Pharisees were preoccupied with ritual purifications (Matt. 15:2; Mark 7:4). Jesus exhorted the scribes and Pharisees to “cleanse the inside of the cup and dish” (Matt. 23:26)—that is, cleanse their hearts and spirits—and not just wash the outside by religious rituals. Moral filth cannot be washed away with physical cleansing agents (Jer. 2:22; Is. 1:16). Jesus Christ is to be praised, for He “loved us and washed us from our sins in His own blood” (Rev. 1:5; Rev. 7:14).

ABNER [AB nar] (the father is a lamp)—the commander-in-chief of the army of Saul, first king of the nation of Israel (1 Sam. 14:50–51; 17:55).

As Saul’s highest military official, Abner occupied a seat of honor in the king’s court (1 Sam. 20:25). He was the person who inquired about David after his battle with the giant, Goliath, and who introduced David to King Saul (1 Sam. 17:55–58). Abner also was the commander of the guard that was supposedly protecting Saul when David entered the camp of the king while everyone was asleep (1 Sam. 26:5–7).

After the death of Saul and his three sons in a battle with the Philistines (1 Sam. 31:1–6), Abner established Saul’s son Ishbosheth as king. His capital was at Mahanaim on the east side of the Jordan River. Only the tribe of Judah, of the 12 tribes of the nation, followed the leadership of David (2 Sam. 2:8–11). In the warfare that broke out between the forces of David and Ishbosheth, Abner killed a brother of Joab—one of David’s military officers—in self-defense (2 Sam. 2:12—3:1).

Still later, a crisis developed between Abner and Ishbosheth when Abner took one of Saul’s concubines. Ishbosheth accused Abner of plotting to take over the kingship. The rift between them became so pronounced that Abner eventually shifted his loyalties to David. This move by Abner was significant, because Abner was able to persuade the elders of all the tribes of Israel to follow David’s leadership (2 Sam. 3:6–21).

Soon after this turning point in David’s political career, Abner was killed by David’s commander Joab in an act of vengeance over the death of his brother (2 Sam. 3:22–30). This presented David with a troublesome situation. Abner’s death looked like the execution of an opponent who had delivered the tribal loyalties the king needed to establish control over the entire nation. To counter any backlash, David reprimanded Joab publicly and had Abner buried with full honors (2 Sam. 3:27–39).

ABOMINATION—anything that offends the spiritual, religious, or moral sense of a person and causes extreme disgust, hatred, or loathing. Among the objects described as an "abomination" were the carved images of pagan gods (Deut. 7:25–26), the sacrifice to God of inferior, blemished animals (Deut. 17:1), the practice of idolatry (Deut. 17:2–5), and the fashioning of a "carved or molded image" of a false god (Deut. 27:15; Is. 44:19).

Other abominations were sexual transgressions (Lev. 18), the adoption of the clothing of the opposite sex (Deut. 22:5), and the practice of magic, witchcraft, and spiritism (Deut. 18:9–12). Most of the Hebrew words translated "abomination" have the meaning of "impure," "filthy," and "unclean"—that which is foul-smelling and objectionable to a holy God.

ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION—a despicable misuse of the temple of the Lord during a time of great trouble—an event foretold by the prophet Daniel.

The phrase is found in Matthew 24:15 and Mark 13:14 as a quotation from Daniel 11:31 and 12:11. In Daniel, the words mean "the abomination that makes desolate." In other words, Daniel prophesied that the temple would be used for an "abominable" purpose at some time in the future. As a result, God's faithful people would no longer worship there—so great would be their moral revulsion, contempt, and abhorrence at the sacrilege—and the temple would become "desolate."

According to the verses in the gospels, a similar misuse of the temple would take place in the future. This would show that a time of great trouble was coming on Judea. People should take warning and flee to the mountains (Matt. 24:16; Mark 13:14).

Some believe Daniel's prophecy was initially fulfilled about 165 B.C. when Antiochus IV (Epiphanes), Greek ruler of Syria, polluted the Jewish temple in Jerusalem by sacrificing a pig on the holy altar. This sacrificing of an UNCLEAN pig was the worst kind of abomination that could have taken place. A more complete fulfillment, however, occurred when the Romans sacked the Jewish temple about A.D. 70 (Luke 21:5–7, 20–22). But others insist that the final abomination of desolation refers to the idolatrous image or the "man of sin" who will take over God's place in the temple and make people bow down and worship him (2 Thess. 2:3–4). According to this interpretation, this will be the final act of sacrilege that marks the beginning of the end time.

ABRAHAM [AY bruh ham] (father of a multitude); originally Abram (exalted father)—the first great PATRIARCH of ancient Israel and a primary model of faithfulness for Christianity. The accounts about Abraham are found in Genesis 11:26—25:11, with the biblical writer focusing on four important aspects of his life.

The Migration. Abraham's story begins with his migration with the rest of his family from UR of the Chaldeans in ancient southern Babylonia (Gen. 11:31). He and his family moved north along the trade routes of the ancient world and settled in the flourishing trade center of HARAN, several hundred miles to the northwest.

While living in Haran, at the age of 75 Abraham received a call from God to go to a strange, unknown land that God would show him. The Lord promised Abraham that He would make him and his descendants a great nation (Gen. 12:1–3). The promise must have seemed unbelievable to Abraham because his wife Sarah (called Sarai in the early part of the story) was childless (Gen. 11:30–31; 17:15). But Abraham obeyed God with no hint of doubt or disbelief. He took his wife and his nephew, Lot, and went to the land that God would show him.

Abraham moved south along the trade routes from Haran, through Shechem and Bethel in the land of Canaan. Canaan was a populated area at the time, inhabited by the warlike Canaanites; so Abraham's belief that God would ultimately give this land to him and his descendants was an act of faith. The circumstances seemed quite difficult, but Abraham's faith in God's promises allowed him to trust in the Lord.

The Famine and the Separation from Lot. Because of a severe famine in the land of Canaan, Abraham moved to Egypt for a short time (Gen. 12:10–20). During this trip, Abraham introduced Sarah to the Egyptians as his sister rather than as his wife in order to avoid trouble.

Pharaoh, the Egyptian ruler, then took Sarah as his wife. It was only because “the Lord plagued Pharaoh and his house with great plagues because of Sarai, Abram’s wife” (Gen. 12:17), that Sarah was returned to Abraham.

Upon his return from Egypt, Abraham and his nephew, Lot, quarreled over pasturelands and went separate ways (Gen. 13:8–9). Lot settled in the Jordan River Valley, while Abraham moved into Canaan. After this split, God reaffirmed His promise to Abraham: “And I will make your descendants as the dust of the earth; so that if a man could number the dust of the earth, then your descendants also could be numbered” (Gen. 13:16).

Apparently Abraham headed a strong military force by this time as he is called “Abram the Hebrew” (Gen. 14:13). He succeeded in rescuing his nephew Lot from the kings who had captured him while raiding the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah (Gen. 14:14–17).

The Promise Reaffirmed. In Genesis 15 the Lord reaffirmed His promise to Abraham. The relationship between God and Abraham should be understood as a COVENANT relationship—the most solemn form of arrangement between individuals in the ancient world. According to such an arrangement, individuals or groups agreed to abide by certain conditions that governed their relationship to each other. In this case Abraham agreed to go to the land that God would show him (an act of faith on his part), and God agreed to make Abraham a great nation (Gen. 12:1–3). However, in Genesis 15 Abraham became anxious about the promise of a nation being found in his descendants because of his advanced age. The Lord thus reaffirmed the earlier covenant.

As we know from recent archaeological discoveries, a common practice of that time among heirless families was to adopt a slave who would inherit the master’s goods. Therefore, because Abraham was childless, he proposed to make a slave, ELIEZER of Damascus, his heir (Gen. 15:2). But God rejected this action and challenged Abraham’s faith: “Then he [God] brought him [Abraham] outside and said, ‘Look now toward heaven, and count the stars if you are able to number them.’ And He said to him, ‘So shall your descendants be’ ” (Gen. 15:5). Abraham’s response is the model of believing faith. “And he [Abraham] believed in the Lord, and He [God] accounted it to him for righteousness" (Gen. 15:6).

The rest of chapter 15 consists of a ceremony between Abraham and God that was commonly used in the ancient world to formalize a covenant (Gen. 15:7–21).

According to Genesis 16, Sarah, because she had not borne a child, provided Abraham with a handmaiden. This also appears to be a familiar custom of the ancient world. According to this custom, if the wife had not had a child (preferably a male) by a certain time in the marriage, she was obligated to provide a substitute (usually a slavewoman) to bear a child to her husband and thereby ensure the leadership of the clan. Thus, Hagar, the Egyptian maidservant, had a son by Abraham. The boy was named ISHMAEL. Although Ishmael was not understood to be the child that would carry on the line promised to Abraham, he was given a favorable blessing (Gen. 16:10–13; 17:20).

The most substantial account of the covenant between Abraham and God is given in Genesis 17—a covenant that extended the promise of the land and descendants to further generations. This covenant required Abraham and the male members of his household to be circumcised as the sign of the agreement (Gen. 17:10–14). In this chapter Abraham and Sarah receive their new names. (Their old names were Abram and Sarai.) The name of the son whom God promises that Sarah will bear is designated as Isaac (Gen. 17:19–21). The practice of CIRCUMCISION instituted at this time is not unique to the ancient Hebrews, but its emphasis as a religious requirement is a unique feature of God's Covenant People. It became a visible symbol of the covenant between Abraham and his descendants and their redeemer God.

After Isaac was born to Sarah (Gen. 21:1–7), Sarah was unhappy with the presence of Hagar and Ishmael. She asked Abraham to cast them out of the family, which he did after the Lord told him they would have His protection. Ishmael does not play an important role in the rest of Abraham's story; he does reenter the picture in Genesis 25:9, accompanying Isaac at Abraham's death.

The Supreme Test. God's command for Abraham to sacrifice his beloved son Isaac was the crucial test of his faith. He was willing to give up his son in obedience to God, although at the last moment the Lord intervened to save Isaac (Gen. 22:1–13). The Lord's promise of descendants as numerous as the stars of the heavens was once again reaffirmed as a result of Abraham's unquestioning obedience (Gen. 22:16–18).

Abraham did not want Isaac to marry a woman from one of the local tribes. Possibly he feared this would introduce Canaanite religious practices into the Hebrew clan. Thus, Abraham sent a senior servant to Haran, the city from which he had migrated, to find a wife for Isaac. This mission was successful, and Isaac eventually married REBEKAH, the sister of Laban (Gen. 24:1–67). Sarah had died some time earlier (Gen. 23:1–20); Abraham eventually remarried and fathered several children by Keturah (Gen. 25:1–6). Abraham died at the age of 175 and was buried alongside Sarah in the cave of Machpelah, near Hebron (Gen. 25:7–11).

Summary. Abraham was the father of the Hebrews and the prime example of a righteous man. In spite of impossible odds, Abraham had faith in the promises of God. Therefore, he is presented as a model for human behavior. Hospitable to strangers (Gen. 18:1–8), he was a God-fearing man (Gen. 22:1–18) who was obedient to God's laws (Gen. 26:5). The promises originally given to Abraham were passed on to his son Isaac (Gen. 26:3) and to his grandson Jacob (Gen. 28:13; 35:11–12). In later biblical references, the God of Israel is frequently identified as the God of Abraham (Gen. 26:24), and Israel is often called the people "of the God of Abraham" (Ps. 47:9; 105:6). Abraham was such an important figure in the history of God's people that when they were in trouble, Israel appealed to God to remember the covenant made with Abraham (Ex. 32:13; Deut. 9:27; Ps. 105:9).

In the New Testament, Abraham is presented as the supreme model of vital faith and as the prime example of the faith required for the Christian believer (Rom. 4:11; Gal. 3:6–9; 4:28). He is viewed as the spiritual father for all who share a similar faith in Christ (Matt. 3:9; Luke 13:16; Rom. 11:1). If anyone deserves to be called God's "friend," it is Abraham (Is. 41:8).

Photo by Howard Vos

• Traditional well of Abraham in the plains of Mamre (Gen. 21:22–32).

ABRAHAM'S BOSOM—a figure of speech for the life hereafter. According to the Old Testament, when a person died he went to "be with his fathers" (Gen. 15:15; 47:30; Deut. 31:16; Judg. 2:10). The patriarch Abraham was regarded as the "father" of the Jews (Luke 3:8; John 8:37–40). At death, therefore, the Jew went to his forefathers or, more specifically, to join "father Abraham."

The only use in the Bible of "Abraham's bosom" occurs in Jesus' parable of the rich man and Lazarus (Luke 16:19–31), in which the beggar is described as being "carried by the angels to Abraham's bosom" (v. 22). A great gulf or chasm separated him from the rich man, who was being tormented in the flames of Hades.

ABRAM [A bruhm] (exalted father)—the original name of ABRAHAM, the great patriarch of Israel (Gen. 17:5).

ABRONAH [a BROH nah]—one of the encampments of the Israelites in the wilderness (Num. 33:34; Ebronah, KJV).

ABSALOM [AB suh lum] (father of peace)—the arrogant and vain son of David who tried to take the kingship from his father by force.

Absalom was David's third son by Maacah, the daughter of the king of GESHUR (2 Sam. 3:3; 1 Chr. 3:2). Of royal descent on both sides, Absalom was a potential heir to the throne. Attractive in appearance and charming in manners, Absalom was also a popular prince with the people and a favorite of his father. He was especially noted for his beautiful long hair, in which he took great pride (2 Sam. 14:25–26).

During the height of Israel's prosperity under David's rule, another of David's sons, Amnon, raped his half-sister Tamar—Absalom's sister (2 Sam. 13:1–22). Absalom took it upon himself to avenge this dishonor, eventually succeeding after two years in having Amnon murdered by his servants (2 Sam. 13:23–29). Fearing his father's wrath, Absalom fled into exile. He stayed with his grandfather Talmai in Geshur for three years (2 Sam. 13:37–38).

Since Absalom was one of David's favorite sons, the king longed for his return (2 Sam. 13:39) in spite of his crime. Joab, one of David's advisors, urged that Absalom be allowed to return to Jerusalem on probation but that he not be allowed to appear before David.

David did allow Absalom to return to Jerusalem, but this turned out to be an ill-advised move on David's part. Absalom secretly plotted a revolt against the throne. Taking advantage of his natural appeal and his handsome appearance to win the favor of the people, he also aroused discontent by implying that he could rule more justly than his father.

When the plot was ready, Absalom obtained permission to go to Hebron to worship. Meanwhile, he had sent spies throughout the tribes, inviting those favorable to him to meet at Hebron (2 Sam. 15:7–11). After gathering these warriors, he then enlisted Ahithophel, a disloyal official of David, as his aide and advisor (2 Sam. 15:12).

When David learned of these rebellious acts, he fled to Mahanaim, beyond the Jordan River (2 Sam. 17:24). Under Ahithophel's advice, Absalom entered Jerusalem and publicly took possession of the wives in his father's harem who had been left in the city. By this act Absalom demonstrated that he would never be reconciled with his father, and even more of the people rallied to his cause.

Absalom then called a council to determine what action to take against David. Present at this meeting was Hushai, a loyal advisor to David who pretended to follow Absalom in order to spy on the proceedings. Ahithophel advised that Absalom move against the retreating king as quickly as possible, but Hushai countered by pointing out that if the attack failed, his revolt would fail. He advised instead that Absalom gather all his forces for one full-scale attack. Absalom heeded Hushai's counsel, giving David time to assemble an army.

Absalom was formally anointed king after taking Jerusalem (2 Sam. 19:10). He appointed Amasa as captain of his army, then crossed the Jordan to meet his father's forces. The battle took place in the woods of Ephraim, where Absalom's recruits were no match for David's veterans. Absalom's army was defeated, and 20,000 of his men were killed (2 Sam. 18:6–7).

Absalom tried to flee from the forest on a mule, but his head caught in the thick boughs of a terebinth tree. Joab, the captain of David's army, then killed Absalom in spite of David's request that he not be harmed. Upon hearing the news of his death, David moaned, "O my son Absalom—my son, my son Absalom—if only I had died in your place! O Absalom my son, my son!" (2 Sam. 18:33). These are some of the saddest words in the Bible.

Absalom had many talents and abilities. But he was also spoiled, impatient, and overly ambitious. These, along with his vanity and pride, led to his tragic death. His body was cast into a pit, over which a great heap of stones was piled as a sign of contempt (2 Sam. 18:17). A large mausoleum erroneously called Absalom's Monument, located in the Kidron Valley east of Jerusalem, was built centuries after Absalom's death. It can still be seen today.

Photo by E. B. Trovillion

- This tomb in the Kidron Valley is erroneously called Absalom's Tomb. It was probably built several centuries after Absalom's time.

ABSALOM'S MONUMENT—a pillar or monument that Absalom set up for himself in the King's Valley (2 Sam. 18:18; Absalom's place, KJV). What a contrast to his dishonored grave (2 Sam. 18:17)!

ABSOLUTION—a formal release from sins, pronounced by a priest as, for example, in the sacrament of penance (Roman Catholic Church). Absolution is an ecclesiastical term, not found in the Bible, which proclaims the atoning work of Christ as the only way a sinner may receive absolution or forgiveness (Luke 7:36–50; Col. 1:13–14)!

ABSTINENCE—the voluntary, self-imposed, and deliberate denial of certain pleasures, such as food, drink, and sex. The noun "abstinence" is found only once in the KJV (Acts 27:21), where the apostle Paul is described as having experienced "long abstinence." The verb "abstain" is found six times in the KJV (Acts 15:20, 29; 1 Thess. 4:3; 5:22; 1 Tim. 4:3; 1 Pet. 2:11).

Abstinence is basically of two kinds: (1) a total abstinence involving an absolute renunciation of a forbidden thing, such as in a NAZIRITE vow; and (2) a temporary abstinence as, for example, the mutual consent of husband and wife to give up sexual relations for a time, in order to give themselves “to fasting and prayer” (1 Cor. 7:5).

The Israelites were commanded to abstain from eating meat that contained blood (Gen. 9:4). They were to refrain from eating certain animals (Leviticus 11). Priests could not drink wine while exercising their holy ministries (Lev. 10:9). Others abstained from drinking wine (Jer. 35:6).

The apostle Paul taught that Christians live by the laws of love and freedom—and that they should voluntarily abstain from food sacrificed to idols, lest it cause a weaker brother or sister in Christ to stumble (Rom. 14:1–23; 1 Cor. 8:1–13). The believer’s body, said Paul, is the “temple of the Holy Spirit” (1 Cor. 6:19) and should not be polluted by unclean things.

Paul also exhorted the church of the Thessalonians to “abstain from sexual immorality” (1 Thess. 4:3); indeed, they were to “abstain from every form of evil” (1 Thess. 5:22).

The Christian is called to live a life of unselfish and sacrificial love. Abstinence should always seek to glorify God and to build up fellow believers in the faith.

ABYSS [ah BISS]—the bottomless pit or the chaotic deep. Sumerian in origin, the term referred to a deep mass of waters surrounding the earth. Darkness is said to have been on the face of the deep or abyss (Gen. 1:2).

The term is used in several other ways in the Bible. It describes the prison of disobedient spirits, or the world of the dead (Luke 8:31; Rom. 10:7; Rev. 20:1–3). Terms like “the pit” and “bottomless pit” represent the abode of all the wicked dead.

ABYSSINIA [AB ih SIN ee uh]—another name for ETHIOPIA.

ACACIA [uh KAY shuh] (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

ACACIA GROVE [uh KAY shuh]—a form of ABEL ACACIA GROVE.

ACACIAS, VALLEY OF [uh KAY shuhs]—a dry valley where only the acacia tree can grow (Joel 3:18). According to Joel's prophecy, in the end time a fountain of refreshing water will flow from the temple ("the house of the Lord") and give new life to the parched and barren valley.

ACCAD [ACK add]—one of four cities built by Nimrod in the land of Shinar—which were "the beginning of his kingdom" (Gen. 10:10; Akkad, NIV). The name was extended to the land of Accad, which was the northern division of ancient BABYLONIA. Accad was the region between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers—where the two rivers are close together and flow in roughly parallel courses.

The dynasty of Accad was founded by Sargon the Great and lasted from the 23rd to the 21st century B.C. The name Accad survives in references to one of the earliest recorded Semitic languages, Accadian or Akkadian, which had two major dialects, Assyrian and Babylonian. It was written in the wedge-shaped characters (CUNEIFORM) developed by the Sumerians.

The location of Accad is not positively identified, but it is thought by some to be about 15 kilometers (9 miles) from modern Baghdad.

ACCEPT—to receive or treat with favor. In the Bible, a person is accepted by the grace, mercy, or covenant-love of God through faith and repentance.

When the Bible mentions individuals being accepted by God, offerings frequently are mentioned (Gen. 4:3–7; Job 42:8–9). In the Old Testament, offerings were acceptable to God when made as prescribed (Lev. 1:4; 22:27), but they were unacceptable when God's instructions were ignored (Lev. 7:18; 19:7; 22:23–25). However, they were flatly rejected when the attitude of one's heart was wayward or irreverent (Amos 5:22; Jer. 14:10; Mal. 1:8, 10).

In the primary New Testament passage on acceptance, the apostle Paul explains that God has fully accepted believers through the merits of Christ (Eph. 1:6). God will not reject them; He opens Himself to His own by welcoming them.

The apostle speaks also of a teaching "worthy of all acceptance," or deserving of universal, wholehearted welcome by Christians (1 Tim. 1:15; 4:9). Worship, prayers, the work of one's hands, spiritual sacrifices, and life’s service can be favorably received by God (Ps. 19:14; 2 Cor. 5:9). God accepts us fully in Jesus Christ because of His offering and receives what we return to Him.

ACCESS—the privilege of having an audience with one’s superior. Access to God is that positive, friendly relationship with the Father in which we have confidence that we are pleasing and acceptable to Him. Jesus is the “new and living way” (Heb. 10:20) who gives us access to God.

ACCHO [ACK coe]—a form of ACCO.

ACCO [ACK coe]—a city of Canaan on the Mediterranean coast about 40 kilometers (25 miles) south of Tyre and about 15 kilometers (9 miles) north of Mount Carmel (see Map 3, B–2). Situated on the north shore of a broad bay, Acco was at the entrance to the rich, fertile plain of Jezreel. Although Acco was located in the portion of land assigned to the tribe of Asher, the Hebrews were never able to drive out the original Canaanite inhabitants (Judg. 1:31; Accho, KJV).

Acco was mentioned in the AMARNA letters of the fourteenth century B.C. In the Hellenistic period the name was changed to Ptolemais. It came under Roman domination in 65 B.C.

Acco is mentioned only once in the New Testament and then as Ptolemais (Acts 21:7), the name coming from Ptolemy, the king of Egypt who rebuilt the city. Sailing from Tyre to Caesarea at the end of his third missionary journey, the apostle Paul docked at Ptolemais and spent the day with his fellow Christians while his ship was anchored in the harbor.

During the Crusades, Ptolemais recaptured some of its former prominence under the name Acre, by which name it is still known today. Its importance has once again waned, being overshadowed by the city of Haifa, which lies directly across the bay.

The apostle Paul visited Acco after he returned from his third missionary journey (Acts 21:7).

• The apostle Paul visited Acco after he returned from his third missionary journey (Acts 21:7).

ACCOMMODATION—the process by which God adapts His revelation of Himself to the thought systems of the human mind so we can understand something of who He is and how He does His work.

God made the world a fit place for the revelation of Himself. He also made people capable of understanding that revelation. The images God takes from the world to describe Himself are appropriate and true because the creation reflects its Creator. “The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament shows His handiwork,” the psalmist affirmed (Ps. 19:1). Human beings, the crowning achievement of God’s creation—made in His very image and likeness (Gen. 1:26)—were made to fellowship and communicate with their Creator.

Because of the difference between God’s supreme nature as Creator and our weak nature as His creatures, all revelation on God’s part involves accommodation to our level of understanding. Thus in the Bible God is described in human terms (the technical word for this is ANTHROPOMORPHISM). Scripture speaks of God's eyes, fingers, and hands; He is a God who sees and touches His creation. He is also portrayed with such emotions as jealousy and anger. This is the Bible's way of declaring that He is a God who feels and responds to His creatures.

God's greatest act of accommodation occurred when Jesus, God's Son, took on the form of a human being. The Gospel of John declares, "The Word became flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth" (John 1:14). Jesus, the only begotten God (John 1:18, NASB), accommodated Himself to the limitations of human nature in order to declare the Father to us, showing how far He was willing to go to set us free from our sin.

ACCOUNTABILITY—the biblical principle that we are answerable to our Maker for our thoughts, words, and deeds. The Bible plainly teaches that "the whole world [is] accountable to God" (Rom. 3:19, NASB) and that "all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:23). This means we cannot experience God's GRACE until we first see ourselves as sinners who are without excuse. Christians are accountable to God individually (Rom. 14:12), and corporately as well, "for we are members of one another" (Eph. 4:25).

All who trust Jesus Christ as their Savior are forgiven for the penalty of their sins. They also receive the strength to fight the presence of sin in their lives (Gal. 5:16–25). Thus, our accountability is matched by God's grace and FORGIVENESS.

ACCURSED—under a curse, doomed; anything on which a curse has been pronounced, such as the city of Jericho (Josh. 6:17–18). The apostle Paul pronounced a curse on anyone who preaches a false gospel (Gal. 1:8–9). Also see ANATHEMA.

ACCUSER (see SATAN).

ACELDAMA [ah kell DA mah]—a form of AKELDAMA.

ACHAIA [ah KAY yah]—in Roman times, the name for the whole of Greece, except Thessaly (see Map 7, B–2). The Romans gave the region this name when they captured Corinth and destroyed the Achaian League in 146 B.C. Later it comprised several Greek cities, including Athens.

The apostle Paul passed through Achaia on his way to Jerusalem (Acts 19:21). He also appeared before Gallio, the proconsul of Achaia, when the Jewish leaders tried to convince him to prosecute Paul for worship contrary to Jewish law (Acts 18:13). Gallio refused to accept the case and Paul was set free (Acts 18:12–17).

ACHAICUS [uh KAY ih cus] (belonging to Achaia)—a Christian of Corinth who, along with Stephanas and Fortunatus, visited the apostle Paul at Ephesus and refreshed his spirit (1 Cor. 16:17).

ACHAN [A kinn]—son of Carmi of the tribe of Judah who unintentionally brought about the Israelites' defeat at Ai (Josh. 7:1, 18–24). He is called Achar in 1 Chronicles 2:7 and is described as the "troubler of Israel, who transgressed in the accursed thing."

During the Israelites' destruction of Jericho, Achan took a Babylonian garment, 200 shekels of silver, and a wedge of gold and hid them in his tent. Before the battle, the Lord had designated everything in Jericho an "accursed thing" and commanded that everything be destroyed, lest Israel also become cursed because their camp contained Canaanite spoils. The Israelites were defeated near the city of Ai because Achan had brought the "accursed thing" into their camp.

Also see ACHOR.

ACHAR [a CARR]—a form of ACHAN.

ACHAZ [a KAZZ]—a form of AHAZ.

ACHBOR [ACK bor] (mouse)—the name of two or three men in the Old Testament:

1. The father of Baal–Hanan (Gen. 36:31, 38–39).
2. One of five men sent by King Josiah to ask Huldah the prophetess about the Book of the Law discovered in the temple (2 Kin. 22:12, 14).
3. A Jew who lived during the reign of King Jehoiakim of Judah (Jer. 26:20–23). He may be the same person as No. 2.

ACHIM [A kem]—an ancestor of Joseph the husband of Mary (Matt. 1:14), listed in the genealogy of Jesus (Matt. 1:17) as the son of Zadok and the father of Eliud.

ACHISH [A kish]—a king of the Philistine city of Gath, to whom David fled for refuge when King Saul sought his life (1 Sam. 21:10–14; 27:2–12). David formed an alliance with Achish, who always treated him with great kindness (1 Sam. 28:1–2).

Because the Philistine lords resisted the league between Achish and David, Achish was forced to send David away (1 Sam. 29:2–9). Achish is called ABIMELECH in the title of Psalm 34.

ACHMETHA [AK mee thah]—the capital of the empire of the Medes. Later it became one of the capitals of the Persian and Parthian Empires. Achmetha was surrounded by seven concentric walls; since the city was built on a hill, the inner walls thus rose above the outer ones. Each wall was painted a different color.

Achmetha was also a treasure city, known for its luxury and splendor. When Cyrus the Great of Persia captured Achmetha in 550 B.C., he made it his summer residence, seeking escape from the terrible heat of Persia. At the time of Cyrus the imperial records were kept here, according to Ezra 6:2. When Darius I ordered a search of the palace library in Achmetha, a scroll was discovered upon which was written the decree of Cyrus permitting the Jews to return to Jerusalem and authorizing them to rebuild the temple.

In 330 B.C. Alexander the Great conquered Achmetha, destroying its walls and looting its palaces. Hamadan, Iran, occupies the site today, about 280 kilometers (175 miles) southwest of Tehran. Most modern versions (such as NIV, NASB, REB, and NRSV) translate Ecbatana.

ACHOR [A kore] (trouble)—a valley near Jericho where Achan was stoned to death during the time of Joshua (Josh. 7:24, 26). The prophets used the phrase “the Valley of Achor” (Is. 65:10) to symbolize the idyllic state of contentment and peace of the Messianic age (Hos. 2:15).

ACHSA [ACK sah]—a form of ACHSAH.

ACHSAH [ACK sah]—the only daughter of Caleb (1 Chr. 2:49; Achsa, KJV). Caleb promised Achsah in marriage to anyone who would capture the city of Debir (formerly known as Kirjath Sepher). When Othniel, Caleb's nephew, took the town, Caleb gave his daughter a portion of the Negev (land in the South) as a dowry. Achsah also wanted springs to water her land and thus Caleb gave her "the upper springs and the lower springs" (Josh. 15:16–19; Judg. 1:12–15). The NIV spells the name Acsah.

ACHSHAPH [ACK shaf]—a Canaanite city situated in the northern part of the territory conquered by Joshua (Josh. 11:1; 12:7, 20; 19:24–25). It was in the territory allotted to the tribe of Asher. Modern scholarship identifies Achshaph as Tell Kisan, about 10 kilometers (6 miles) southeast of Acre.

ACHZIB [ACK zib] (falsehood)—the name of two towns in Israel:

1. A town in the Shephelah, the lowland of western Judah (Josh. 15:44), probably the same town as CHEZIB (Gen. 38:5) and CHOZEBA (1 Chr. 4:22).
2. A town in western Galilee, on the Mediterranean Sea near the border of ancient Phoenicia (Josh. 19:29; Judg. 1:31). Identified as modern ez–Zib, Achzib was located about 15 kilometers (9 miles) north of Acre.

ACRE [ah CREE]—a form of ACCO.

ACRE (see WEIGHTS AND MEASURES).

ACROPOLIS [uh CROP oh lis] (topmost city)—an elevated, fortified part of an ancient Greek city, such as Athens, Philippi, and Corinth. The Acropolis of Athens, the most famous acropolis of all ancient cities, was located on a hill about 500 feet high. It was adorned with stunning architectural works. Among these works was the Parthenon, a magnificent temple with 8 Doric columns in front and rear and 17 along each side.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• The acropolis at Athens, site of the beautiful Parthenon and other buildings of the ancient Greeks.

ACROSTIC—a literary device by which sets of letters (such as the first letter of a line) are taken in order to form a word, phrase, or a regular sequence of letters of the alphabet.

The ancient Hebrews realized the importance of words and various literary devices such as puns, allusions, and acrostics. The best example of an acrostic in the Bible is Psalm 119, based on the Hebrew alphabet of 22 letters, from Aleph to Tau ("A" to "Z"). This Psalm, the longest chapter in the Bible, has 176 verses—eight verses for each of the 22 Hebrew letters.

In the original Hebrew of Psalm 119, verses 1–8 begin with ALEPH; verses 9–16 begin with BETH; verses 17–24 begin with GIMEL; and so forth. Parts of Psalms 9, 10, 25, 37, 111, 112, and 145 and Lamentations 1–4 are also acrostic—as are the last 22 verses of the book of Proverbs, which contain a description of a virtuous wife (Prov. 31:10–21).

ACSAH [ack SAH]—a form of ACHSAH.

ACTS, APOCRYPHAL (see APOCRYPHA, THE).

ACTS OF THE APOSTLES—the one historical book of the New Testament, which traces the development of the early church after the ascension of Jesus. Standing between the Gospels and the Epistles, the Book of Acts is a bridge between the life of Jesus and the ministry of the apostle Paul. As such, it offers invaluable information about the development of the early church.

The title of Acts is somewhat misleading, for only a few of the apostles of Jesus are mentioned in the book. In reality, Acts relates some acts of some of the apostles, primarily Peter and Paul, and involves a time-span of about 32 years—from the ascension of Jesus (about A.D. 30) to Paul's imprisonment in Rome (about A.D. 62). See CHRONOLOGY, NEW TESTAMENT.

Structure of the Book. The Acts of the Apostles is like a drama with two main characters, Peter and Paul. This drama portrays the spread of the gospel from Jerusalem—the city where Jesus was crucified—to Rome, the capital of the Roman Empire.

Authorship and Date. There can be little doubt that the Book of Acts and the Gospel of Luke come from the same author. Each book is the length of a scroll (about 35 feet), and each is addressed to the same individual, Theophilus. The similarities between the Gospel of Luke and the Book of Acts in literary style, vocabulary, and theological ideas are unmistakable. Although the author does not identify himself by name, scholars have ascribed the authorship of both books to Luke, the companion of Paul (see LUKE, GOSPEL OF).

It is difficult to say when Acts was written. We know only that it follows the Gospel: "The former account [Gospel of Luke] I made, O Theophilus" (Acts 1:1). If the Gospel were written in the early 70s, Acts would have been composed shortly thereafter. Many scholars date Acts as early as A.D. 62 because it ends abruptly with Paul's imprisonment in Rome.

Luke is a reliable historian, in part because of the sources he used. He was closely associated with many events of Paul's mission, and this results in greater vividness in the latter half of Acts. At three places in Acts (16:10–17, 20:5—21:18, and 27:1—28:16) the narrative changes to the first person plural ("we"), indicating that LUKE was personally present. Luke also may have had access to written documents (for example, the decree of the Council of Jerusalem, Acts 15:23; or letters from early Christian leaders).

Above all, Luke had the benefit of a wide circle of contacts. In the Book of Acts he mentions 95 different persons from 32 countries, 54 cities, and 9 Mediterranean islands. From these he gathered information for the first part of Acts (especially chaps. 1–12) and for the gospel. Luke, however, writes selective history, focusing only on the course of the gospel from Jerusalem to Rome.

Historical Setting. As in the Gospel of Luke, Luke writes to Gentiles. He wants his audience to know the truthful and triumphant course of the gospel, beginning in Jesus and continuing in the church (Acts 1:1).

This is his primary motive for writing the Book of Acts. In addition, however, Luke defends, where possible, the Christian faith from suspicion of sedition or superstition. The “Way” (9:2) is not a secret, subversive cult (26:26). On the contrary, it is proclaimed in the city squares for all to hear and judge. This is one reason the many public speeches were included in Acts. Neither is Christianity politically dangerous. If Christians are suspected of sedition against Rome, Luke shows that in each instance where they are brought before Roman authorities they are acquitted (Acts 16:39; 17:6; 18:12; 19:37; 23:29; 25:25; 26:31). Luke devotes nearly one third of Acts (chaps. 21–28) to Paul’s imprisonment. He does this not only to show that the gospel reaches its destination in spite of insurmountable obstacles, but also to show that Paul and his message are not politically subversive.

This Greek inscription at Athens contains the text of Paul’s speech which he delivered at the Areopagus (Acts 17:22–31).

Theological Contribution. The Acts of the Apostles could justly be entitled “The Acts of the Holy Spirit,” for the Spirit is mentioned nearly 60 times in the book. In His parting words, Jesus reminds the disciples of the promise of the Father (1:4–8); ten days later the power of the Spirit descends at Pentecost (2:1–4). Persons “from every nation under heaven” (2:5) are enabled by the Holy Spirit to hear “the wonderful works of God” (2:11), and so the Christian church was born.

Pentecost was a reversal of the Tower of Babel, where language became confused and nations were separated by misunderstanding (Gen. 11:1–9). At Pentecost, the Holy Spirit gathered persons from every nation into one united fellowship. From Pentecost onward, the Holy Spirit directs the unfolding drama of the growth of the church.

Acts contains portraits of many outstanding Christians of the early church. Barnabas exemplifies generosity (4:36–37), Stephen forgiveness (7:60), Philip and Paul obedience (8:26; 26:19), Cornelius piety (10:2), and the witness of the early church vibrates with boldness (2:29; 4:13, 29, 31; 28:31). Ordinary people are empowered to perform extraordinary feats. A faltering apostle is empowered to address multitudes (2:14) or make a defense before rulers (4:8). A prayer fellowship is shaken (4:31); a deacon defends his faith by martyrdom (7:58). The despised Samaritans receive the Spirit (8:4–8), as does a Gentile soldier (10:1–48). A staunch persecutor of the gospel is converted (9:1–19), and through him the gospel reaches the capital of the world!

Paul reaches Rome in chains. Circumstances, too, may be adverse: persecutions (8:3–4; 11:19), famines (11:27–30), opposition (13:45), or violent storms (27:1–44). Through it all, however, the Holy Spirit directs the drama so that “all things work together for good” (Rom. 8:28) to further the cause of Christ.

Special Considerations. Nearly one fifth of Acts consists of speeches, primarily from Peter, Stephen, and Paul. Common to each of the speeches is a basic framework of gospel proclamation. This proclamation can be outlined as follows:

1. The promises of God in the Old Testament are now fulfilled.
2. The Messiah has come in Jesus of Nazareth.
    a. He did good and mighty works by the power of God.
    b. He was crucified according to the purpose of God.
    c. He was raised from the dead by the power of God.
    d. He now reigns by the power of God.
    e. He will come again to judge and restore all things for the purpose of God.
3. All who hear should repent and be baptized.

This outline is our earliest example of the gospel proclaimed by the early church. It is the “foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief cornerstone” (Eph. 2:20), upon which the church is built. In this sense, the Book of Acts is not yet completed, for each generation is enabled by the Holy Spirit to add its chapters by proclaiming the “wonderful works of God” (2:11).

◆

Acts: A Study and Teaching Outline

Part One: The Witness in Jerusalem (1:1—8:3)

I. The Power of the Church 1:1—2:47
- A. Introduction to Acts 1:1—3
- B. Appearances of the Resurrected Christ 1:4–8
- C. Ascension of Christ 1:9–11
- D. Anticipation of the Holy Spirit 1:12–14
- E. Appointment of Matthias 1:15–26
- F. Filling with the Holy Spirit 2:1–4
- G. Speaking with Other Tongues 2:5–13
- H. Peter Explains Pentecost 2:14–39
- I. Practices of the Early Church 2:40–47

II. The Progress of the Church 3:1—8:3
- A. Peter Heals the Lame Man 3:1–10
- B. Peter’s Second Sermon 3:11–26
- C. Peter and John Are Arrested 4:1–4
- D. Peter Preaches to the Jewish Sanhedrin 4:5–12
- E. The Sanhedrin Commands Peter Not to Preach 4:13–22
- F. Apostles’ Prayer for Boldness 4:23–31
- G. The Early Church Voluntarily Shares 4:32–37
- H. Ananias and Sapphira Lie 5:1–11
- I. The Apostles’ Mighty Miracles 5:12–16
- J. The Apostles’ Persecution 5:17–42
- K. Deacons Are Appointed 6:1–7
- L. Stephen Is Martyred 6:8—7:60
- M. Saul Persecutes the Church 8:1–3

Part Two: The Witness in Judea and Samaria (8:4—12:24)

I. The Witness of Philip 8:4–40
- A. Philip Witnesses to the Samaritans 8:4–25
- B. Philip Witnesses to the Ethiopian 8:26–40

II. The Conversion of Saul 9:1–31
- A. Saul Is Converted and Blinded 9:1–9
- B. Saul Is Filled with the Holy Spirit 9:10–19
- C. Saul Preaches at Damascus 9:20–22
- D. Saul Witnesses in Jerusalem 9:23–31

III. The Witness of Peter 9:32—11:18
- A. Peter Heals Aeneas at Lydda 9:32–35
- B. Peter Raises Dorcas at Joppa 9:36–43
- C. Peter Witnesses to Cornelius at Caesarea 10:1—11:18

IV. The Witness of the Early Church 11:19—12:24
- A. The Witness of the Antioch Church 11:19–30
- B. The Persecution by Herod 12:1–24

Part Three: The Witness to the Ends of the Earth (12:25—28:31)

I. The First Missionary Journey 12:25—14:28
- A. Barnabas and Saul are Sent from Antioch 12:25—13:3
- B. Ministry at Cyprus 13:4–12
- C. Ministry at Antioch 13:13–50
- D. Ministry at Iconium 13:51—14:5
- E. Ministry at Lystra 14:6–20
- F. Ministry on the Return Trip 14:21–25
- G. Report on the First Missionary Journey 14:26–28

II. The Jerusalem Council 15:1–35
- A. Debate over Gentiles Keeping the Law 15:1–5
- B. Peter Preaches Salvation through Grace 15:6–11
- C. Paul and Barnabas Testify 15:12
- D. James Proves Gentiles Are Free from the Law 15:13–21
- E. The Council Sends an Official Letter 15:22–29
- F. Report to Antioch 15:30–35

III. The Second Missionary Journey 15:36—18:22
- A. Disagreement over John Mark 15:36–41
- B. Derbe and Lystra: Timothy Is Circumcised 16:1–5
- C. Troas: Macedonian Call 16:6–10
- D. Philippi: Extensive Ministry 16:11–40
- E. Thessalonica: “Turn the World Upside Down” 17:1–9
- F. Berea: Many Receive the Word 17:10–15
- G. Athens: Paul’s Sermon at the Areopagus 17:16–34
- H. Corinth: One-and-a-half Years of Ministry 18:1–17
- I. Return Trip to Antioch 18:18–22

IV. The Third Missionary Journey 18:23—21:14
- A. Galatia and Phrygia: Strengthening the Disciples 18:23
- B. Ephesus: Three Years of Ministry 18:24—19:41
- C. Macedonia: Three Months of Ministry 20:1–6
- D. Troas: Eutychus Falls from Loft 20:7–12
- E. Miletus: Paul Bids Farewell to Ephesian Elders 20:13–38
- F. Tyre: Paul Is Warned about Jerusalem 21:1–6
- G. Caesarea: Agabus’ Prediction 21:7–14

V. The Trip to Rome 21:15—28:31

A. Paul Witnesses in Jerusalem 21:15—23:33
B. Paul Witnesses in Caesarea 23:34—26:32
C. Paul Witnesses in Rome 27:1—28:31

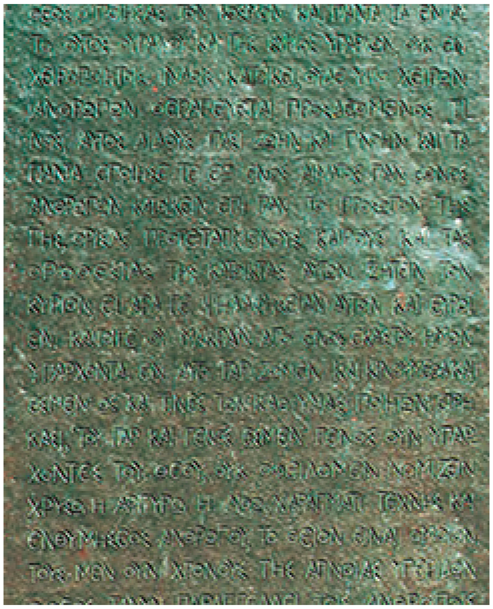

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• This Greek inscription at Athens contains the text of Paul’s speech which he delivered at the Areopagus (Acts 17:22–31).

ADADAH [ADD a dah]—a city in southern Judah (Josh. 15:22) “toward the border of Edom” (v. 21; Ararah, REB).

ADAH [A duh] (adornment)—the name of two women of the Old Testament:

1. One of the two wives of Lamech and the mother of JABAL and JUBAL (Gen. 4:19–21, 23).
2. One of Esau’s wives and the daughter of Elon the Hittite (Gen. 36:1–4). She was the mother of Esau’s firstborn, Eliphaz, and the ancestress of the Edomites.

ADAIAH [a DYE yuh] (the Lord has adorned)—the name of eight or nine men in the Old Testament:

1. A man of Bozcath whose daughter Jedidah was the mother of King Josiah of Israel (2 Kin. 22:1).
2. An ancestor of Asaph (1 Chr. 6:41–43).
3. A son of Shimei of the tribe of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:1, 21).
4. A descendant of Aaron who returned to Jerusalem following the captivity (1 Chr. 9:10–12).
5. The father of Maaseiah (2 Chr. 23:1).
6, 7. Two different men, one of the family of Bani and one of the family of Binnui (NRSV), who divorced their pagan wives after the captivity (Ezra 10:29, 39).
8. A son of Joiarib and a descendant of Judah by Perez—and thus a member of the royal line of David (Neh. 11:5).
9. A Levite of the family of Aaron, probably the same as No. 4 (Neh. 11:12).

ADALIA [uh DAY lyuh]—one of the ten sons of Haman who were hanged like their father (Esth. 9:8–10).

ADAM [ADD um] (red, ground)—the name of a man and a city in the Old Testament:

1. The first man, created by God on the sixth day of creation, and placed in the Garden of Eden (Gen. 2:19–23; 3:8–9, 17, 20–21; 4:1, 25; 5:1–5). He and his wife EVE, created by God from one of Adam's ribs (Gen. 2:21–22), became the ancestors of all people now living on the earth. Adam was unique and distinct from the animals in several ways. His creation is described separately from that of the animals and the rest of God's creative acts (Gen. 1:3–25; 1:26–27; 2:7).

   God breathed into Adam's body of "dust" the divine "breath of life; and man became a living being" (Gen. 2:7). God also made man in his own image and likeness. The exact words are, "Let Us make man in Our image, according to Our likeness" (Gen. 1:26). The apostle Paul interprets this to mean that God created man with spiritual, rational, emotional, and moral qualities (Eph. 4:24–32; Col. 3:8–10).

God placed Adam in the Garden of Eden where he was to work the ground (Gen. 2:5, 15) and take care of the animals (Gen. 1:26–28; 2:19–20). God made Eve as a “helper comparable to” Adam (Gen. 2:20), creating her out of one of Adam’s ribs so they were “one flesh” (Gen. 2:24).

God told the human pair, “Be fruitful and multiply; fill the earth” (Gen. 1:28). As a consequence, they had a number of children: Cain, Abel, Seth, and a number of other sons and daughters (Gen. 4:1–2; 5:3–4). Created in innocence, they did not know sin (Gen. 2:25).

Genesis 3 tells how Adam failed to keep God’s command not to eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. The consequence of this disobedience was death (Gen. 2:17), both physical (Gen. 5:5) and spiritual (Eph. 2:1). Eve disobeyed first, lured by pride and the desire for pleasure (Gen. 3:5–6; 1 Tim. 2:14). Then Adam, with full knowledge of the consequences, joined Eve in rebellion against God (Gen. 3:6).

The consequences of disobedience were: (1) loss of innocence (Gen. 3:7); (2) continued enmity between the seed of the woman [Christ] (Gen. 3:15; Gal. 3:16) and the seed of the serpent [SATAN and his followers] (John 8:44); (3) the cursing of the ground and the resultant hard labor for man (Gen. 3:17–19); (4) the hard labor of childbirth (Gen. 3:16); (5) the submission of woman to her husband (Gen. 3:16; Eph. 5:22–23); and (6) separation from God (Gen. 3:23–24; 2 Thess. 1:9). Adam lived 930 years (Gen. 5:5).

The New Testament emphasizes the oneness of Adam and Eve (Matt. 19:3–9), showing that Adam represented man in bringing the human race into sin and death (Rom. 5:12–19; 1 Cor. 15:22). In contrast, Christ, the “last Adam,” represented His redeemed people in bringing justification and eternal life to them (Rom. 5:15–21).

2. A city located “beside Zaretan” (Josh. 3:16), near the junction of the Jabbok River and the Jordan River, about 30 kilometers (18 miles) north of Jericho.

ADAM AND EVE, BOOK OF (see PSEUDEPIGRAPHA).

ADAMAH [AD uh mah] (earth)—a fortified city in the territory of Naphtali. It was near Chinnereth and Ramah (Josh. 19:35–36) northwest of the Sea of Galilee.

ADAMANT (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

ADAMI NEKEB [AD ah me NEH keb] (Adam of the pass)—a place in lower Galilee on the border of Naphtali (Josh. 19:33).

ADAR [A dar] (cloudy)—the name of a city and a month:

1. A town in southern Judah (Josh. 15:3), also called HAZAR ADDAR (Num. 34:4).
2. The Babylonian name of the 12th month of the Jewish year (Ezra 6:15; Esth. 3:7, 13; 8:12; 9:1, 15–21). It began with the new moon in February and ended at the new moon in March.

ADBEEL [AD bee el]—the third of the 12 sons of Ishmael (Gen. 25:13). Adbeel is also believed by scholars to be the name of an Arabian tribe located in northwest Arabia.

ADDAN [ADD un]—an unidentified place in Babylonia from which returning captives came with Zerubbabel to Jerusalem (Ezra 2:59; Addon, Neh. 7:61). Some scholars believe Addan was the name of a man who was unable to produce his genealogy to prove he was an Israelite.

ADDAR [ad DAR] (cloudy)—a son of Bela and the grandson of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:3), also called ARD (Num. 26:40).

ADDAX, ADDER (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

ADDI [AD ee]—an ancestor of Joseph listed in the genealogy of Jesus Christ (Luke 3:28). Addi is the Greek form of IDDO.

ADDON [AD un]—a form of ADDAN.

ADER [A duhr]—a form of EDER.

ADIEL [A dih el] (ornament of God)—the name of three men in the Old Testament:

1. One of the family heads of the tribe of Simeon in the time of Hezekiah (1 Chr. 4:36).
2. The father of Maasai, who helped rebuild the temple after the captivity (1 Chr. 9:12).
3. The father of Azmaveth (1 Chr. 27:25).

ADIN [A dun]—the father and ancestor of a family known as “the people of Adin” (Ezra 2:15), “the sons of Adin” (Ezra 8:6), or “the children of Adin” (Neh. 7:20). This family returned from captivity in Babylonia to Jerusalem with Zerubbabel and Ezra (Neh. 10:16).

ADINA [AD uh nah] (ornament)—the son of Shiza the Reubenite and one of David’s mighty men (1 Chr. 11:42).

ADINO [AD ih noe]—the name given to JOSHEB-BASSHEBETH the Tachmonite, chief captain of David’s mighty men. He was given the name Adino the Eznite “because he had killed 800 men at one time” (2 Sam. 23:8).

ADITHAIM [ad ih THAY em]—a city in the Shephelah, or lowland, of Judah (Josh. 15:33, 36).

ADJURATION—an earnest urging or advising; the action by which a person in authority imposes the obligations of an OATH upon another. Some of those who adjured others were King Saul, King Ahab, and some itinerant Jewish exorcists (1 Sam. 14:24; 1 Kin. 22:16; Mark 5:7; Acts 19:13).

Perhaps the most famous example of adjuration in the Bible is found in Matthew 26:63. The high priest said to Jesus, “I adjure You by the living God that You tell us if You are the Christ, the Son of God.” The words “I adjure You” in this case mean, “I solemnly command that you testify on oath and tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.”

ADLAI [AD lay]—the father of Shaphat, a chief herdsman (1 Chr. 27:29) in the time of David.

ADMAH [AD muh] (red earth)—one of the CITIES OF THE PLAIN, destroyed with Sodom, Gomorrah, and the other cities (Deut. 29:23).

Some scholars identify Admah with the city of ADAM (Josh. 3:16).

ADMATHA [AD mah thah]—a high Persian official at Shushan, one of seven princes "who had access to the king's presence" (Esth. 1:14).

ADNA [AD nuh] (pleasure)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Pahath–Moab who divorced his pagan wife (Ezra 10:30).
2. A priest who returned from the captivity in the time of the high priest Joiakim (Neh. 12:12, 15).

ADNAH [AD nuh] (pleasure)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A warrior of the tribe of Manasseh who joined David's army at Ziklag (1 Chr. 12:20).
2. A man of high military rank in King Jehoshaphat's army (2 Chr. 17:14).

ADONI–BEZEK [a DAWN ih BEE zek] (lord of Bezek)—a king of Bezek, which was located in the territory allotted to Judah. After he was captured by the men of Judah and Simeon, his thumbs and big toes were cut off (Judg. 1:5–7). Adoni–Bezek reaped what he had sown, for he himself had previously cut off the thumbs and big toes of 70 kings (Judg. 1:7).

ADONI–ZEDEK [a DAWN ih ZEH deck] (my lord is righteousness)—one of the five kings of the Amorites who fought against Joshua at Gibeon (Josh. 10:1–27). When Adoni–Zedek and his four allies took refuge in a cave near MAKKEDAH, Joshua had them sealed inside while he pursued their armies. Later, the Israelites returned to the cave, removed the five kings, and "put their feet on their necks" (Josh. 10:24) as a sign of triumph. After they were killed, their bodies were hung on five trees for public display. Then they were taken down and cast into the cave, which was sealed with stones.

ADONIJAH [add oh NYE juh] (the Lord is my Lord)—the name of three men in the Old Testament:

1. The fourth of the six sons born to David while he was at Hebron (2 Sam. 3:4). Adonijah's mother was Haggith. With the exception of Absalom, David apparently favored Adonijah over his other five sons. When David was old, Adonijah attempted to seize the throne, although he probably knew that his father intended Solomon to succeed him (1 Kin. 1:13).

   Adonijah won two important people to his cause—Joab, the captain of the army, and Abiathar, the priest. At an open-air feast at the stone of Zoheleth beside En Rogel, he had himself proclaimed king.

   But Adonijah had not won over Zadok the priest, Benaiah the commander of the royal bodyguard, or Nathan the prophet. Bathsheba, Solomon's mother, and Nathan told David of Adonijah's activities; David immediately ordered Solomon, who had been divinely chosen as David's successor, to be proclaimed king. When Adonijah sought sanctuary at the altar (1 Kin. 1:5–50), Solomon forgave him.

   Adonijah, however, foolishly made another attempt to become king—this time after David's death. He asked that the beautiful Abishag, who had taken care of David during his final days, be given to him in marriage. According to the custom of the day, claiming a king's wife or concubine amounted to the same thing as claiming his throne. This time Solomon ordered that Adonijah be killed (1 Kin. 2:13, 25).
2. One of the Levites sent by Jehoshaphat to instruct the people of Judah in the law (2 Chr. 17:8).
3. A chieftain who, with Nehemiah, sealed the covenant (Neh. 10:14–16); he is also called ADONIKAM (Ezra 2:13).

ADONIKAM [ad oh NYE kum] (my lord has risen)—an Israelite whose descendants returned to Palestine from Babylonia after the captivity (Ezra 2:13; 8:13; Neh. 7:18). Apparently he is the ADONIJAH of Nehemiah 10:16.

ADONIRAM [ad oh NYE rum] (my Lord is exalted)—the son of Abda and an officer under kings David, Solomon, and Rehoboam. David placed Adoniram "in charge of revenue" (2 Sam. 20:24), and Solomon appointed him “over the labor force” (1 Kin. 4:6; 5:14)—a group sent to work in his enforced labor crews in Lebanon.

When the northern tribes rebelled against Rehoboam, Rehoboam sent Adoniram to force the rebels to obey the king, but “all Israel stoned him . . . and he died” (1 Kin. 12:18; 2 Chr. 10:18). Adoniram also was called Adoram (2 Sam. 20:24; 1 Kin. 12:18) and Hadoram (2 Chr. 10:18).

ADOPTION—the act of taking voluntarily a child of other parents as one’s own child; in a theological sense, the act of God’s grace by which sinful people are brought into his redeemed family.

In the New Testament, the Greek word translated adoption literally means “placing as a son.” It is a legal term that expresses the process by which a man brings another person into his family, endowing him with the status and privileges of a biological son or daughter.

In the Old Testament, adoption was never common among the Israelites. Adoption in the Old Testament was done by foreigners or by Jews influenced by foreign customs. Pharaoh’s daughter adopted Moses (Ex. 2:10) and another pharaoh adopted Genubath (1 Kin. 11:20). Furthermore, there is no Hebrew word to describe the process of adoption. When the Pharaoh’s daughter adopted Moses, the text says, “And he became her son” (Ex. 2:10).

By New Testament times, Roman customs exercised a great deal of influence on Jewish family life. One custom is particularly significant in relation to adoption. Roman law required that the adopter be a male and childless; the one to be adopted had to be an independent adult, able to agree to be adopted. In the eyes of the law, the adopted one became a new creature; he was regarded as being born again into the new family—an illustration of what happens to the believer at conversion.

The apostle Paul used this legal concept of adoption as an analogy to show the believer’s relationship to God. Although similar ideas are found throughout the New Testament, the word “adoption,” used in a theological sense, is found only in the writings of Paul (Rom. 8:15, 23; 9:4).

In Ephesians, Paul’s emphasis was that our adoption rests with God, who “predestined us to adoption as sons” (Eph. 1:5). In his letter to the Romans, Paul used the term to describe Israel's place of honor in God's plan (Rom. 9:4). However, Gentile believers have also been given the "Spirit of adoption," which allows them to cry, "Abba, Father" (Gal. 4:6).

God's adoption of the believer also has a future dimension, the assurance that the believer's body will be resurrected (Rom. 8:23).

ADORAIM [ad oh RAY em]—a city in southwest Judah rebuilt and fortified by Rehoboam, son of Solomon (2 Chr. 11:5, 9). It is now known as Dura, located about 8 kilometers (5 miles) southwest of Hebron.

ADORAM [a DOH rum]—a form of ADONIRAM.

ADORATION—the act of worship, of paying honor, reverence, and obedience to God. The word adoration does not occur in most English versions of the Bible (such as the KJV, NKJV, and NRSV), but the concept of adoration as worship is implied in many places in the Bible. Also see WORSHIP.

ADORN—to decorate or beautify. In the New Testament, the temple (Luke 21:5), the monuments of the righteous (Matt. 23:29), and an empty house (Matt. 12:44; Luke 11:25) are all adorned.

Photo: Egyptian National Museum

• In this scene from an Egyptian tomb, a princess is adorned with a hairdressing by her servant.

ADRAMMELECH [a DRAM uh leck]—the name of a pagan god and a man in the Old Testament:

1. A pagan god to whom the colonists of Samaria sacrificed their children (2 Kin. 17:31). Also see GODS, PAGAN.
2. A son of the Assyrian king Sennacherib. He and his brother, Sharezer, killed their father (2 Kin. 19:37; Is. 37:38).

ADRAMYTTIUM [add rah MITT ee um]—an important seaport of the Roman province of Asia, situated in northwestern Asia Minor, in what is modern Turkey. As a prisoner, Paul boarded “a ship of Adramyttium” (Acts 27:2) on his way to Rome. The site is now called Karatash, but a nearby town, EDREMIT, preserves the name.

ADRIA [A drih uh]—a form of ADRIATIC.

ADRIATIC [a drih AT ick]—a name for the central part of the Mediterranean Sea south of Italy (see Map 7, B–1). It is mentioned in Luke's account of Paul's voyage to Rome (Acts 27:27). Paul's courage in the midst of this terrible storm is an inspiration: "Do not be afraid . . . for I believe God" (Acts 27:24–25). The Greek geographer Strabo (63 B.C.?—A.D. 24?) identified the Adriatic as the Gulf of Adria, pointing out that the name comes from the old Etruscan city of Atria. The KJV translates as Adria.

ADRIEL [A drih el] (God is my help)—a son of Barzillai the Meholathite, of the tribe of Issachar. Adriel was also the husband of Merab, the daughter of King Saul, who was given to Adriel in marriage (1 Sam. 18:19; 2 Sam. 21:8).

ADULLAM [a DULL um]—the name of a city (see Map 3, A–4) and a cave:

1. A city in the Shephelah, or lowland, of Judah, situated southwest of Jerusalem (Josh. 12:15; 15:35). It first appears as a Canaanite city (2 Chr. 11:5, 7; Mic. 1:15).
2. A large cave near the city of Adullam (1 Sam. 22:1; 1 Chr. 11:15), where David hid when he was a fugitive from King Saul.

ADULLAMITE [a DULL uh mite]—a person from ADULLAM. The only Adullamite mentioned in the Bible is Hirah, a friend of Judah (Gen. 38:1, 12, 20).

ADULTERY—willful sexual intercourse with someone other than one's husband or wife. Jesus expanded the meaning of adultery to include the cultivation of lust: "Whoever looks at a woman to lust for her has already committed adultery with her in his heart" (Matt. 5:28).

In the Ten Commandments God emphatically prohibited adultery when He said, "You shall not commit adultery" (Ex. 20:14). Under Mosaic Law, when a couple was caught in the act of adultery, both parties were to be killed: "If a man is found lying with a woman married to a husband, then both of them shall die—" (Deut. 22:22).

Adultery plays havoc with personal, domestic, and national happiness. A case in point is David's affair with Bathsheba. Their adultery led to a cover-up, which was followed by the murder of Bathsheba's husband (2 Samuel 11). Nathan the prophet later came to David, accusing him of his sin and declaring that because of it, violence would become commonplace in David's household (2 Sam. 12:10). One disaster after another struck his family, including rape, murder, and revolt (2 Samuel 13–15).

Adultery reached epidemic proportions in Jeremiah's time. The prophet repeatedly spoke out against this and other sins (Jer. 7:9; 23:10). The problem was so rampant that even the other prophets of Jerusalem were guilty of it (Jer. 23:14), and Jeremiah predicted God's judgment on them (Jer. 23:15).

Occasionally, the marriage covenant was used as an analogy to describe God's relationship to His people. When the people of Israel and Judah refused to obey Him, or when they practiced idolatry, the prophets accused them of spiritual adultery (Jer. 3:6–10).

The record of the woman taken in adultery—who, according to the law of Moses, should have been stoned to death—reveals the wisdom and grace of Jesus (John 8:3–9). He knew that her accusers were not without sin; and, therefore, they were being self-righteous when they condemned her. When Jesus said to her, "Go and sin no more" (John 8:11), He did not excuse her sin; He forgave her of it and warned against continuing in adultery.

The apostle Paul catalogued a series of sins that exclude a person from the kingdom of God. The sin of adultery was included in these lists (1 Cor. 6:9).

ADUMMIM [a DUM em]—a pass leading down from the hill country surrounding Jerusalem to the lowlands of Jericho and the Jordan River valley near the boundary between Benjamin and Judah. Jesus' parable of the Good Samaritan refers to this area (Luke 10:30). Known in the Bible as the "Ascent of Adummim" (Josh. 15:7; 18:17), its modern name is Tal'at ed-Damm. Modern tourists are shown the "Inn of the Good Samaritan," at a place where the Jericho Road enters a narrow gorge that leads into the pass.

ADVENT, SECOND (see ESCHATOLOGY; SECOND COMING).

ADVERSARY—one who opposes or hinders another. In the Bible, this word is often used of SATAN, the adversary of God and His plan of righteousness and redemption in the world. Since his fall, Satan has opposed God's plan to establish His kingdom on earth. He tricked Eve (Gen. 3:1–5) in order to use human beings to establish his kingdom rather than God's. Satan later opposed Jesus by questioning His identity as the Messiah and by tempting Him to misuse His powers as God's Son (Matt. 4:1–11).

Satan is still the Christian's adversary (1 Pet. 5:8), but we have an ADVOCATE, Jesus Christ (1 John 2:1), who enables us to overcome his temptation.

ADVOCATE—one who pleads another's cause before a tribunal or judicial court. The word "advocate" is found only once in the NKJV: "If anyone sins, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous" (1 John 2:1). The Greek word translated as "advocate" here is also found four times in the Gospel of John, all referring to the Holy Spirit (John 14:16, 26; 15:26; 16:7; helper, NKJV).

Christians need an Advocate because of the ADVERSARY, the devil or Satan, who accuses us before God (1 Pet. 5:8; Rev. 12:10). If Satan is the "prosecuting attorney," Christ and the Holy Spirit are the legal advocates, the "defense attorneys," who help, defend, counsel, and comfort us; they plead the Christian's case before God day and night, providing a continuing remedy for sin.

AENEAS [ee NEE us]—a paralyzed man at Lydda healed by Peter (Acts 9:34–35).

AENON [EE none] (springs)—a place in Palestine near Salim, where John the Baptist was baptizing at the time of Jesus' ministry in Judea (John 3:22–23). Most likely, Aenon was close to the Jordan River, "because there was much water there" (John 3:23). If its name came from its surroundings, however, Aenon may have been a place where natural springs supplied water.

AEON (see AGE; TIME).

AFFLICTION—any condition or problem that produces suffering or pain. The Bible speaks of two types of affliction—suffering that represents God's judgment on sin (Is. 53:4; Matt. 24:29; Rom. 2:9), and suffering that brings about the purifying of believers as they identify with Christ (Rom. 5:3–5; 2 Thess. 1:4–7).

God's judgment on the sin of unbelievers is designed to punish them, while the second type of affliction is designed to perfect Christians and prepare them for greater service in God's kingdom. The believer's attitude through all affliction should be the declaration of the apostle Paul, "For I consider that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us" (Rom. 8:18).

AFTERNOON—literally, the declining of the day (Judg. 19:8), beginning about 4:00 p.m. Also see CALENDAR; TIME.

AGABUS [AG uh bus]—a Christian prophet of Jerusalem who went to Antioch of Syria while Paul and Barnabas were there, and "showed by the Spirit that there was going to be a great famine throughout all the world" (Acts 11:28). Later, when Paul and his companions were at Caesarea, Agabus the prophet gave a symbolic demonstration of Paul's impending arrest. Agabus bound his own hands and feet with Paul's belt. Then he predicted that the owner of the belt would be bound like this by the Jews and delivered into the hands of the Gentiles (Acts 21:10–11).

AGAG [A gag]—the name of two kings in the Old Testament:

1. The king of the Amalekites mentioned by Balaam (Num. 24:7).
2. A king of the Amalekites whose army was defeated by the forces of Saul. Instead of slaying Agag as God told him to do, Saul spared his life. Because of his disobedience, Saul was rebuked by the prophet Samuel and rejected by the Lord. David was then anointed king in Saul's place (1 Sam. 15:33).

AGAGITE [A gah gite] (belonging to Agag)—a term of contempt used of Haman, the enemy of the Jews (Esth. 3:1; 9:24). The term is probably synonymous with AMALEKITE (Ex. 17:8–16).

AGAPE [ah GAH pay]—a Greek word for love used often in the New Testament (John 13:35; 1 Cor. 13; 1 John 4:7–18). Contrary to popular understanding, the significance of agape is not that it is an unconditional love, but that it is primarily a love of the will rather than the emotions. The New Testament never speaks of God loving unbelieving human beings with emotional love or a love that expects something in return. But He loves with His will (John 3:16; Rom. 5:8). The reason for this is that God can find nothing enjoyable about a sinner on whom His wrath still abides. So He loves by His will; it is His nature to love. Also see LOVE; LOVE FEAST.

AGAR [A gahr]—Greek form of HAGAR.

AGATE (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

AGE—an aeon; a specified period of time during which certain related events come to pass. As used in the New Testament, age generally refers to the present era, as opposed to the future age. According to the apostle Paul, Satan is "the god of this age" (2 Cor. 4:4). But the age to come will belong to Jesus Christ and His rule of justice and righteousness (Heb. 6:5). Also see TIME.

AGEE [A ghee]—a Hararite, the father of one of David's mighty men (2 Sam. 23:11).

AGORA [ah GOE ruh]—the Greek word for MARKETPLACE (Acts 16:19). The agora was a large open space, often found near the gates of cities in New Testament times, where goods were bought and sold. The agora was also the site for public assemblies. While in Athens, the apostle Paul shared his faith with people in the agora (Acts 17:17).

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• The agora, or marketplace, at Ephesus with the remains of shops and government buildings.

AGRAPHA [AG rah fuh] (unwritten things)—statements supposedly made by Jesus that are not included in the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, or John or referred to anywhere else in the New Testament.

Jesus must have made many statements that were not recorded by any of the writers of the four gospels. For example, the Book of Acts records that Jesus taught, “It is more blessed to give than to receive” (Acts 20:35), but none of the gospels records this saying. However beyond the Bible, many other books were written that also claim to contain statements made by Jesus. Although Jesus may have made a few of these statements, the vast majority were not spoken by Him.

Many of these sayings were created because people were curious about matters the four gospels did not discuss, such as what Jesus was like when he was a boy. Others were created because the writer wanted to prove that a certain belief came from Jesus, when in fact it did not. Some writers may actually have thought the sayings they were recording did come from Jesus, and they wanted to write them down so they would not be forgotten.

A book known as the Gospel of Thomas records an incident when a child threw a stone at the boy Jesus. Jesus said, “Thou shalt not finish thy course,” and the child fell down dead. This account does not match what we know about Jesus from the four gospels; so the Gospel of Thomas was rejected as a false book by the early church.

Because most of the agrapha are not based on actual events in Jesus' life, they are of no value in determining what Jesus actually said and did. But the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John can be trusted as authentic accounts of the life and ministry of our Lord.

AGRICULTURE—the science, art, and business of cultivating the soil, producing crops, and raising livestock; farming. Israel's society remained basically agricultural throughout biblical times. Although cities and towns developed in Israel as early as the time of David and Solomon, both Old and New Testaments contain many references to agricultural customs and practices.

The Bible indicates that one of the most basic human tasks was to "till it and keep it" (Gen. 2:15, NRSV), so that human beings are seen as having divinely-given abilities to be gardeners or farmers. The close relationship between people and soil is also indicated by the similarity between two Hebrew words for man (adam) and earth (adamah).

Although Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob moved about in Canaan and were concerned primarily with looking after their flocks, they were also involved in farming. Isaac, for example, was instantly aware of the "smell of a field" on Esau's clothes. He prayed that Jacob might be blessed with "plenty of grain and wine" (Gen. 27:27–28).

When the Israelites settled in the land of Canaan, they were largely confined to the heavily wooded hill country, while the Canaanites continued in the valleys and along the coast (Judg. 1:27–33). The Israelites, therefore, began the long process of clearing the forests. The uplands of Ephraim and Judah as well as the land east of the Jordan River were gradually made suitable for cultivation.

With the expansion of Israel during the time of the United Kingdom under David and Solomon, agricultural activity prospered (1 Kin. 4:25). Some agricultural products, such as wheat, olive oil, and honey, were even exported (Ezek. 27:17). Certain kings, such as David (1 Chr. 27:26–31) and Hezekiah (2 Chr. 32:28), took a special interest in agricultural production, and none more so than Uzziah, who is described as one who "loved the soil" (2 Chr. 26:10). This prosperity, however, was not enjoyed by everyone. Ahab's attempt to take over Naboth's vineyard (1 Kings 21) is only one example of how the poor were exploited. The prophet Isaiah condemned those who “add field to field” (Is. 5:8).

The years of Israel’s CAPTIVITY in Babylon brought a considerable decline in agricultural activity. Much of the land was neglected, desolation was increased by the ravages of wild animals (2 Kin. 17:25–27), and only the poor were left to till the land “as vinedressers and farmers” (2 Kin. 25:12).

Some restoration of agriculture took place after the return from captivity, but some of the earlier problems persisted. In the prophet Haggai’s time, God’s corrective judgment had a noticeable effect on food production (Hag. 1:11). And Nehemiah received complaints from the poor concerning the financial difficulties they were experiencing in keeping their farms going (Neh. 5:11).

Agriculture was also important in New Testament times. Jesus made frequent reference to the land and its products in His teaching, indicating that He and His hearers were quite familiar with such matters. Matthew 13, for example, contains four agricultural parables—the sower (vv. 1–23), the wheat and the tares (vv. 24–30, 36–43), the mustard seed (vv. 31–32), and the treasure hidden in the field (v. 44). Other New Testament writers also refer to agricultural matters. The apostle Paul, for example, spoke of reaping and sowing (Gal. 6:7–10) and the cultivation of olive trees (Rom. 11:17–24); and James referred to the farmer patiently waiting for the rain (James 5:7).

The Bible supplies two striking agricultural metaphors concerning the purposes of God. God Himself is twice described as a farmer. He is the “vinedresser” who tends the vine, which is both Christ and those who abide in Him (John 15:1–8); and He farms the field of His church, where He is working to produce a perfect harvest (1 Cor. 2:7, 9). The second picture is slightly different. It illustrates God’s constant supply of rich and varied food for His people, especially in heaven. This idea is found both in the Old Testament prophets (Amos 9:13–15; Joel 2:18–19) and in John’s vision of the New Jerusalem, where the tree of life produces 12 different monthly crops of fruit (Rev. 22:2).

The traditional picture of Canaan is that of “a land flowing with milk and honey” (Ex. 3:8, 17). This view is supported elsewhere in the Bible, as in Deuteronomy 8:8: “A land of wheat and barley, of vines and fig trees and pomegranates, a land of olive oil and honey.” But the fertility of the land was neither automatic nor uniform. The Old Testament in particular continually stresses that success and prosperity in agriculture came from God and that His blessing was closely associated with the people's trust in God and their obedience to His word (Deuteronomy 28).

Thus, agricultural labor was tied up with spiritual and moral attitudes. Bumper crops could not be guaranteed through the correct observance of ritual, as the idol worshipers of Canaan imagined. Many Israelites, however, were seduced by Canaanite ways, influenced by the unpredictability of Canaan's climate and the undemanding morality of Canaanite religion, as well as by their desire for a good harvest.

One reminder that thanksgiving and worship were due to the Lord for multiplying their crops and flocks came through Israel's festivals, which were closely associated with the agricultural year. The Feasts of Passover and Unleavened Bread were celebrated at the beginning of the barley harvest. This was followed 50 days later by the Feast of Weeks or Pentecost with the offering of the firstfruits of the wheat harvest.

The Feast of Tabernacles, or Ingathering, took place when the harvest was complete. Because these festivals sometimes degenerated into the mere performance of ritualism, the prophets brought a further reminder that the Lord (or Yahweh), and not Baal, was the true Lord of the harvest. The prophet Hosea actually said of Israel, "For she did not know that I [the Lord] gave her grain, new wine, and oil" (Hos. 2:8), so steeped had they become in paganism. When the people failed to respond even to this clear message, the prophets announced God's judgment on the land as well as the people (Jer. 12:7–13; Amos 4:6–10), although they still gave hope for the future (Ezek. 36:30; Hos. 2:21–23).

Israelite agriculture included the farming of the land and the rearing of animals. In the days of the patriarchs, livestock farming was the major activity; but as the Israelites settled in the land, the role of animals became less important. Herds and flocks were kept basically for their wealth and for food, although meat was much less important than it is in modern Western society. Most families also owned work animals, the ox being the most valuable and the donkey the most common. Neither horses nor camels were used much in agriculture.

Horses were kept mostly for military use and camels for trading purposes.

The growing of crops in ancient Israel was no easy matter. Palestine’s location between the Mediterranean Sea and the desert produced unpredictable rainfall. The growth of vegetation in some lowland areas, such as the Jordan River Valley and parts of the Plain of Sharon along the coast, was so luxuriant that they contained mostly dense forests. Other areas, mainly in the east, were dry and barren, with stony terrain and only occasional rain. These were impossible to farm and unable to support a settled population. Even the areas that could be cultivated had their continual hazards, such as locusts, hail, desert storms, and invading armies. The Israelite farmer well understood the truth of Genesis 3:19: “In the sweat of your face you shall eat bread.”

The pattern of the agricultural year in the land of Canaan can be reconstructed only with difficulty. Many details remain unknown, and there must have been considerable variation from place to place. The period of sowing and plowing began around the middle of October at the time of the early rains. This was followed by harrowing and weeding. The latter rains were vital for ripening the crops, and the rainy season usually ended around early April. Harvesting began with the barley harvest, around the middle of April. The gathering of the grain harvest, the summer fruits, and the grapes lasted until August and September, although the last olives were finally picked in November.

An early Hebrew inscription from the 10th century B.C., found at Gezer and known as the “Gezer Calendar,” lists various agricultural activities through the months of the year. Its purpose is unknown, although it is often thought to have been a child’s exercise tablet. The approximate translation is as follows: “Two months of harvest. Two months of sowing. Two months of late planting. Month of reaping flax. Month of reaping barley. Month of reaping and measuring. Two months of vine tending. Month of summer fruit.”

The Old Testament consistently refers to the three basic Israelite crops: grain, grapes, and olives. Psalm 104:15, for example, speaks of God providing “wine that makes glad the heart of man, oil to make his face shine, and bread which strengthens man’s heart” (Deut. 7:13; 2 Kin. 18:32; Neh. 5:11). Of the grain crops, wheat was grown mainly in the central area of the western highlands (Manasseh) and in Gilead and Bashan, east of the Jordan River. Barley was grown in the drier south and east, especially in Philistia. Barley is able to grow in poorer soils than wheat, and it has a shorter ripening period.

Seed was usually broadcast and then plowed or raked into the soil, although occasionally plowing was done before sowing. A single wooden plow with a metal tip was normally used; it was pulled by a pair of oxen or donkeys. The animals were yoked together with either a single yoke or a double yoke with bars over and under the neck. An ox goad, a long staff with a nail or metal tip, was used to control the animals (Judg. 3:31).

Harvest was an important time, and workers were hired especially for the occasion. The standing grain was cut with a scythe or sickle, then brought in bundles to the threshing floor where it was threshed and separated from the chaff. Finally it was stored, either in earthenware jars or in underground silos. The prophet Isaiah referred to the various processes involved in growing grain, observing that it was an occasion for wonder and praise of God (Is. 28:23–29).

Vineyards were concentrated on the terraces of the Judean hills, although they were also found in the Carmel area and in parts of the region east of the Jordan River. Isaiah 5:1–7 gives some idea of the hard labor involved in preparing and cultivating vineyards. Vines were often left to trail on the ground. As the fruit began to ripen from July onward, people built watchtowers, or temporary booths, to keep watch for both human and animal intruders. Harvesting the grapes and making wine were great social occasions. The Old Testament law allowed people to eat grapes while collecting them, but not to put them in their own baskets while in someone else’s field (Deut. 23:24). The grapes were mainly used for wine, but some were dried as raisins.

Olive trees need little cultivation, as they can grow in shallow soils and survive long periods of drought. They were grown in the central uplands of Ephraim and Carmel and parts of Gilead. Olives were the last crop to be picked—as late as October and November—and they were used mainly for their oil.

In addition to the three main crops, a variety of fruits and vegetables was also grown in Bible times. The importance of vegetables is indicated by Ahab’s desire to turn Naboth’s vineyard into a vegetable garden. Melons, cucumbers, leeks, herbs, and spices were probably grown in the kitchen gardens of the nobility, while the poor had to be content with beans and lentils, which were often grown between the vines of other crops (2 Sam. 17:28).

Summer fruits were eagerly awaited in the heat as a tasty and refreshing supplement to the regular diet. Figs and pomegranates seem to have been particularly popular (Hos. 9:10; Hag. 2:19), and the prophet Amos was involved in the production of sycamore figs (Amos 7:14). Dates were cultivated in the Jericho region, and nuts such as almond and pistachio were also enjoyed (Gen. 43:11; Song 6:11).

Also see FOOD; HARVEST.

◆

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• Productive farmland near Jabesh Gilead, demonstrating progressive agricultural methods in use in the Holy Land today.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- Lemon trees at Tel Aviv, Israel, in a modem citrus-farming operation.

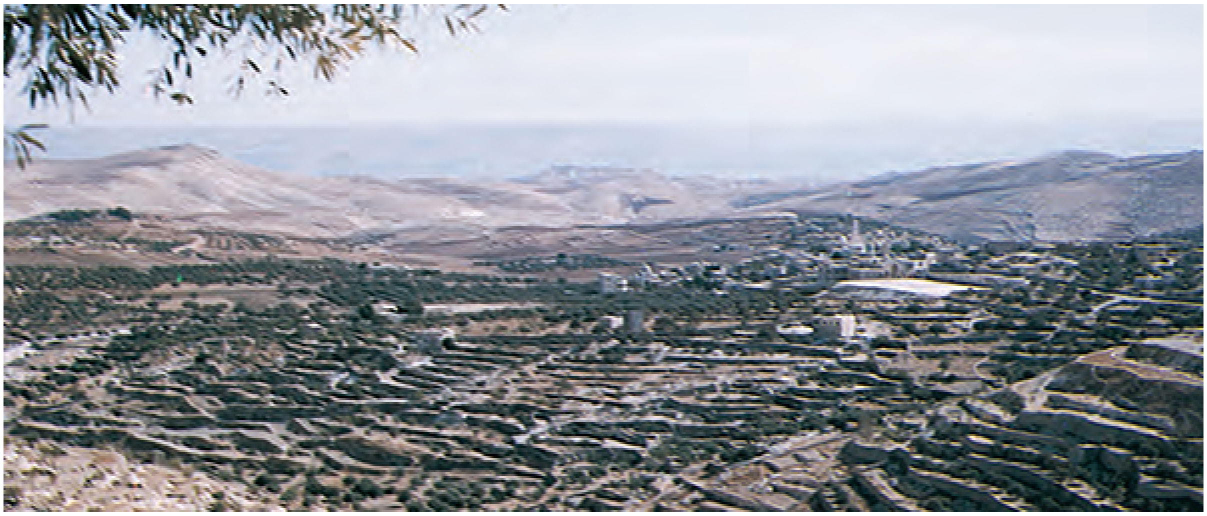

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- Hillside terracing—a technique for preventing soil erosion— in the farmlands surrounding Bethlehem.

AGRIPPA I [a GRIP uh]—Roman ruler of Galilee and eventual ruler of the territory previously governed by his grandfather, Herod the Great. Agrippa persecuted the Christians in Jerusalem (Acts 12:1–23) during his reign in Judea from A.D. 41 until his death in A.D. 44. Also see HEROD.

AGRIPPA II [a GRIP uh]—son of Herod Agrippa I and great-grandson of Herod the Great. He was appointed by the Roman Emperor Claudius as ruler of Abilene, part of Galilee, Iturea, and Trachonitis. Shortly before the apostle Paul was taken prisoner to Rome, he appeared before Herod Agrippa II (Acts 25:13—26:32). Also see HEROD.

AGUE (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

AGUR [A ghur]—a son of Jakeh and one of the writers of the book of Proverbs (Prov. 30:1). His celebrated prayer (Prov. 30:8–9) asks for deliverance from economic extremes.

AHAB [A hab] (father is brother)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. The son of Omri and the seventh king of Israel (1 Kin. 16:30). Under the influence of Jezebel his wife, Ahab gave Baal equal place with God. Ahab also built a temple to Baal in which he erected a "wooden image" of the Canaanite goddess Asherah (1 Kin. 16:33). At Jezebel's urging, Ahab opposed the worship of the Lord, destroyed His altars, and killed His prophets. He reigned over Israel in Samaria for 22 years (873–852 B.C.) (1 Kin. 16:29).

   Ahab strengthened the friendly relations with Phoenicia that David had begun when he was king of the United Kingdom. He sealed the friendship between the two nations with a political marriage to Jezebel, the notoriously wicked daughter of Ethbaal, king of the Sidonians (1 Kin. 16:31). Ahab may have been the first king of Israel to establish peaceful relations with Judah.

   False religion soon led to immoral civil acts. Because Jezebel had neither religious scruples nor regard for Hebrew civil laws (Lev. 25:23–34), she had Naboth tried unjustly and killed so that Ahab could take over his property (1 Kin. 21:1–16).

Throughout Ahab's reign, the prophet ELIJAH stood in open opposition to Ahab and the worship of Baal. Ahab also had frequent conflicts with Ben–Hadad, King of Syria, who once besieged Ahab's capital city, Samaria, but was driven off (1 Kin. 20:1–21).

Later, Ahab defeated Ben–Hadad in a battle at Aphek (1 Kin. 20:22–34); but Ahab was lenient with him, perhaps in view of a greater threat, Shalmaneser III of Assyria. In 853 B.C., Ahab and Ben–Hadad joined in a coalition to stop Shalmaneser's army at Qarqar on the Orontes River in Syria. Ahab contributed 2,000 chariots and 10,000 soldiers to this coalition. Still later, Ahab fought Ben–Hadad again. In spite of his precautions, Ahab was killed at Ramoth Gilead (1 Kin. 22:1–38).

Ahab was a capable leader and an avid builder. He completed and adorned the capital city of Samaria, which his father Omri had begun. Archaeological discoveries show that Ahab's "ivory house" (1 Kin. 22:39; Amos 3:15) was faced with white stone, which gave it the appearance of ivory. It also was decorated with ivory inlays. The ivory fragments that have been found show similarities with Phoenician ivories of the period. These findings illustrate the close political and social ties that existed between Israel and Phoenicia. Archaeology has also shown that Ahab refortified the cities of Megiddo and Hazor, probably in defense against growing threats from Syria and Assyria.

Ahab's story is particularly sad because of his great potential. His tragedy was forming an alliance with Jezebel and turning from God to serve idols.

2. The son of Kolaiah and one of two false prophets denounced by Jeremiah (Jer. 29:21–23). Because Ahab prophesied falsely in God's name, Jeremiah declared that he would die at the hand of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and would be cursed by all Babylonian captives from Judah.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Remains of a palace from Ahab's time, uncovered in an excavation at the site of ancient Samaria.

AHARAH [a HAR uh]—Benjamin's third son (1 Chr. 8:1). He is also called Ehi (Gen. 46:21) and Ahiram (Num. 26:38).

AHARHEL [a HAR hell]—a son of Harum and the founder of a family included in the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 4:8).

AHASAI [a HAH sigh]—a form of AHZAI.

AHASBAI [a HAS bih]—the father of one of David's mighty men (2 Sam. 23:34).

AHASUERUS [ah has you EH rus] (mighty man)—the name of two kings in the Old Testament:

1. A king of Persia and the husband of the Jewish woman ESTHER. Scholars generally agree that Ahasuerus is the same person as Xerxes I (485–464 B.C.).

The picture of Ahasuerus presented in the Book of Esther—the vastness of his empire (1:1), his riches (1:4), his sensuality and feasting (1:5–12), and his cruelty and lack of foresight (1:13–22)—is consistent with the description of Xerxes provided by the Greek historian Herodotus. Ahasuerus succeeded his father, Darius Hystaspis, in 485 B.C.

The Book of Esther tells the story of how Ahasuerus banished his queen, Vashti, because of her refusal to parade herself before the drunken merrymakers at one of his feasts. Following a two-year search for Vashti's replacement, Ahasuerus chose Esther as his queen. Esther and her people, the Jews, were in Persia as a consequence of the fall of Jerusalem (in 586 B.C.) and the scattering of the Jews into captivity in foreign lands.

Ahasuerus' advisor, Haman, hated the Jews; he prevailed upon Ahasuerus to order them to be wiped out—an order which the king gave with little concern for its consequences. During a sleepless night, Ahasuerus sent for his royal records and read of how the Jew Mordecai, Esther's guardian, had uncovered a plot to kill the king and thus had saved his life. Ahasuerus' discovery led to Mordecai's being raised to a position of honor in the kingdom. Haman's treachery soon led to his own fall, and he and his ten sons were hanged on the gallows he had previously prepared for Mordecai.

In 464 B.C. a courtier murdered Ahasuerus, and his son, Artaxerxes Longimanus, succeeded him. In Ezra 4:6, the reign of Ahasuerus is mentioned chronologically between Cyrus (v. 5) and Artaxerxes (v. 7).

2. A king of the Medes and the father of Darius (Dan. 9:1).

AHAVA [a HAH vuh]—a town in Babylonia situated near a small river or canal of the same name. Ezra and his companions camped for three days on the banks of this stream as they prepared for the long journey to Jerusalem (Ezra 8:15, 21, 31).

AHAZ [A haz]—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Jotham and the 11th king of Judah (2 Kin. 15:38; 16:1–20; Achaz, KJV). He was an ungodly king who promoted the worship of Molech, with its pagan rites of human sacrifice (2 Chr. 28:1–4).

The reign of Ahaz probably overlapped the reign of his father Jotham and possibly the reign of his own son Hezekiah. His age when he became king was 20 and he reigned for 16 years, beginning about 735 B.C.

Early in his reign Ahaz adopted policies that favored Assyria. When he refused to join the anti-Assyrian alliance of Pekah of Israel and Rezin of Syria, they invaded Judah and besieged Jerusalem, threatening to dethrone Ahaz and replace him with a puppet king (Is. 7:1–6). Pekah and Rezin killed 120,000 people and took 200,000 captives. However, through the intervention of Oded the prophet, the captives were released immediately (2 Chr. 28:5–15).

In view of his precarious circumstances, Ahaz requested help from Tiglath–Pileser III, king of Assyria, offering him silver and gold. At first the plan worked, and Assyria invaded Israel and Syria (2 Kin. 15:29). Ultimately, however, Assyria ��distressed” Ahaz, demanding excessive tribute (2 Chr. 28:20–21).

Spiritually, Ahaz stopped following in the ways of the four relatively good kings who had preceded him (Joash, Amaziah, Azariah, and Jotham). He made images of Baal, offered infant sacrifices in the Valley of Hinnom, and sacrificed on the high places (2 Chr. 28:1–4). He came under further pagan influence at Damascus where he had gone to meet Tiglath–Pileser III. Seeing a pagan altar there, he commanded Uriah the priest at Jerusalem to build a copy of it. He then installed it next to the bronze altar in the Jerusalem temple.

It was to King Ahaz that Isaiah’s announcement of the promised Immanuel was made (Is. 7:10–17). The prophet Isaiah sent a message to the terrified Ahaz, but Ahaz would not turn to God and trust Him for deliverance. Instead, he plunged deeper into idolatry and self-destruction. Ahaz’s conduct brought divine judgment to Judah in the form of military defeats. Edom revolted and took captives from Judah. The Philistines invaded Judah, capturing several cities. Rezin of Damascus seized control of Elath, Judah’s port on the Gulf of Aqaba (2 Kin. 16:5–6).

At his death, Ahaz was buried without honor in Jerusalem. He was not deemed worthy of a burial in the royal tombs (2 Chr. 28:27).

2. A Benjamite and descendant of King Saul. Ahaz was a son of Micah and the father of Jehoaddah (1 Chr. 8:35–36; 9:42).

AHAZ, DIAL OF (see SUNDIAL OF AHAZ).

AHAZIAH [a huh ZIE uh] (the Lord sustains)—the name of two kings in the Old Testament:

1. The son and successor of Ahab and the ninth king of Israel (1 Kin. 22:40, 49, 51). Ahaziah reigned from 853 to 852 B.C.

   The son of JEZEBEL, Ahaziah followed policies that showed evidence of his mother's pagan influence. After reigning only two years, he "fell through the lattice of his upper room in Samaria" (2 Kin. 1:2) and was seriously injured. Sending his messengers to ask Baal–Zebub, the god of Ekron, about his recovery, Ahaziah was frustrated when the prophet Elijah interrupted their mission and prophesied Ahaziah's death. Enraged by Elijah's predictions, Ahaziah tried to seize him, but the men sent to capture the prophet were destroyed by fire from heaven and Elijah's prophecy was quickly fulfilled (2 Kin. 1:9–17).

   At the time of Ahaziah's ascent to the throne, Mesha, the king of Moab, rebelled because of the tribute imposed on him by Omri, Ahaziah's grandfather (2 Kin. 1:1; 3:4–5). Ahaziah formed an alliance with Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, to build ships and trade with other nations. God judged this effort and it failed (1 Kin. 22:49).
2. The son and successor of Joram and the nephew of Ahaziah No. 1 (2 Kin. 8:24–26). Ahaziah is also called Jehoahaz (2 Chr. 21:17; 25:23) and Azariah (2 Chr. 22:6). The sixth king of Judah, Ahaziah reigned for only one year (841 B.C.).

   Ahaziah became king at age 22 (2 Kin. 8:26; 2 Chr. 22:1). His wicked reign was heavily influenced by his mother Athaliah, who was the evil power behind his throne: "He walked in the way of the house of Ahab" (2 Kin. 8:27).

   Ahaziah cultivated relations with Israel and joined with his uncle, King Jehoram (2 Kin. 1:17; 9:24; 2 Chr. 22:5–7), in a military expedition at Ramoth Gilead against Hazael, king of Syria. Jehoram was wounded and returned to Jezreel, near Mount Gilboa, to convalesce. While visiting his uncle Jehoram, Ahaziah was killed by Jehu, Israel's captain, who had been ordered by God to exterminate the house of Ahab (2 Kin. 9:4–10).

AHBAN [AH bun] (brother of an intelligent one)—a son of Abishur and Abihail, in the genealogy of Jerahmeel (1 Chr. 2:29).

AHER [A hehr] (one who is behind)—a descendant of Benjamin (1 Chr. 7:12). His name may be a contraction of Ahiram (Num. 26:38) or Aharah (1 Chr. 8:1).

AHI [A high] (my brother)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Abdiel, of the tribe of Gad (1 Chr. 5:15).
2. A son of Shemer, of the tribe of Asher (1 Chr. 7:34).

AHIAH [a HIGH uh]—a form of AHIJAH.

AHIAM [a HIGH um]—one of David's mighty men, a son of Sharar (2 Sam. 23:33) the Hararite.

AHIAN [A HIGH un]—a son of Shemida, of the tribe of Manasseh (1 Chr. 7:19).

AHIEZER [ah hih EE zur] (brother of help)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Ammishaddai and head of the tribe of Dan at the time of Israel's wandering in the wilderness (Num. 1:12).
2. A chief of the tribe of Benjamin (1 Chr. 12:3).

AHIHUD [a HIGH hud] (brother of honor)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A prince from the tribe of Asher who helped divide the land of Canaan (Num. 34:27).
2. A son of Ehud, of the tribe of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:7).

AHIJAH [a HIGH juh] (my brother is the Lord)—the name of nine men in the Old Testament:

1. The performer of high-priestly functions at Gibeah during part of Saul's reign (1 Sam. 14:3, 18). Many scholars identify him with Ahimelech, the priest at Nob who is also identified as a son of Ahitub (1 Sam. 22:9). Ahijah's name is usually spelled Ahiah, a variant of Ahijah.
2. A secretary or scribe in Solomon's reign and a son of Shisha (1 Kin. 4:3); also spelled Ahiah.
3. The prophet from Shiloh who prophesied Israel's division into two kingdoms because of its idolatries (1 Kin. 11:29–39). While Solomon was king, Jeroboam rebelled against him. Ahijah tore his own garment into 12 pieces and instructed Jeroboam to take ten of them. This symbolic action indicated that Jeroboam would be king over the ten tribes which would be known as the northern kingdom of Israel. Ahijah stood up for the people in the face of their oppression under Solomon and Rehoboam.

   Later, King Jeroboam disguised his queen and sent her to the aging and nearly blind prophet to ask whether their sick child would recover. Ahijah prophesied that because of Jeroboam's wickedness the child would die (1 Kin. 14:1–18). His prophecies were also put into writing (2 Chr. 9:29).
4. The father of Baasha, who killed Jeroboam's son Nadab. He then reigned over Israel in his stead (1 Kin. 15:27).
5. A man of the tribe of Judah and a son of Jerahmeel (1 Chr. 2:25).
6. A Benjamite who helped carry off the inhabitants of Geba (1 Chr. 8:7).
7. One of David's mighty men (1 Chr. 11:36).
8. A Levite during David's reign (1 Chr. 26:20) who kept the temple treasury.
9. One of the priests who, with Nehemiah, sealed the covenant (Neh. 10:26).

AHIKAM [a HIGH kumm] (my brother has risen)—a son of Shaphan and an officer in King Josiah's court. He was a member of the delegation sent by Josiah to the prophetess Huldah (2 Kin. 22:12–14).

He helped protect the prophet Jeremiah from the persecutions of King Jehoiakim (Jer. 26:24).

AHILUD [a HIGH lud] (a brother is born)—the father of Jehoshaphat, "secretary of state" (REB) or "recorder" for David and Solomon (2 Sam. 8:16).

AHIMAAZ [a HIM a az] (powerful brother)—the name of two or three men in the Old Testament:

1. The father of Saul's wife, Ahinoam (1 Sam. 14:50).
2. A son of Zadok the high priest, Ahimaaz kept David informed of Absalom's revolt after the king was forced to flee Jerusalem (2 Sam. 15:27). This "spy" system worked well at first, but it was later discovered, and Ahimaaz and Jonathan fled for their lives (2 Sam. 17:18).
3. Solomon's son-in-law and governor in Naphtali (1 Kin. 4:15). Ahimaaz married Basemath, the daughter of King Solomon. He may be the same person as No. 2.

AHIMAN [a HIGH mun]—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. One of the three descendants of the Anakim (Num. 13:22; Judg. 1:10), a famous race of giants who lived at Hebron when the Hebrew spies surveyed the land.
2. A Levite gatekeeper in the temple (1 Chr. 9:17).

AHIMELECH [a HIM eh leck] (my brother is king)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A high priest at Nob who helped David when he fled from King Saul (1 Sam. 22:18).
2. A Hittite who befriended David when he hid in the wilderness from King Saul (1 Sam. 26:6).

AHIMOTH [a HIGH moth] (brother of death)—a son of the Levite Elkanah (1 Chr. 6:25).

AHINADAB [a HIN uh dab] (brother of liberality)—a son of Iddo and one of Solomon’s 12 supply officers (1 Kin. 4:14).

AHINOAM [a HIN oh am] (my brother is delight)—the name of one or two women in the Old Testament:

1. A daughter of Ahimaaz and a wife of King Saul (1 Sam. 14:49–50).
2. One of David’s wives, the mother of Amnon (1 Sam. 25:43; 2 Sam. 3:2). She may be the same person as No. 1.

AHIO [a HIGH oh] (his brother)—the name of three men in the Old Testament:

1. Abinadab’s son and Uzzah’s brother (2 Sam. 6:3–4; 1 Chr. 13:7). When the ARK OF THE COVENANT was being transported to Jerusalem, Ahio and Uzzah drove the cart (2 Sam. 6:6–7).
2. A son of Elpaal the Benjamite (1 Chr. 8:14).
3. A son of Jeiel the Benjamite by his wife Maacah (1 Chr. 8:31; 9:37) and an ancestor of King Saul.

AHIRA [a HIGH ruh]—a son of Enan and leader of the tribe of Naphtali in the wilderness. Ahiram was one of the heads of the twelve tribes who helped Moses take a census shortly after the Exodus (Num. 1:15; 10:27).

AHIRAM [a HIGH rum] (my brother is exalted)—the third son of Benjamin and the founder of a family called the AHIRAMITES (Num. 26:38). Ahiram was probably the same man as Aharah (1 Chr. 8:1), also called Ehi (Gen. 46:21) and Aher (1 Chr. 7:12).

Photo by Howard Vos

• Hiram, king of Tyre (also known as Ahiram), seated on a throne, in this stone carving from his tomb.

AHIRAMITES [a HIGH rum ites]—descendants of AHIRAM.

AHISAMACH [a HIS ah mack] (my brother sustains)—a man of the tribe of Dan and a craftsman who worked on the tabernacle (Ex. 31:6).

AHISHAHAR [a HISH ah har] (brother of the dawn)—according to 1 Chronicles 7:10, a son of Bilhan, a grandson of Jediael, and a great-grandson of Benjamin.

AHISHAR [a HIGH shar] (brother of song)—an official or servant of King Solomon (1 Kin. 4:6).

AHITHOPHEL [a HITH oh fell] (brother of folly)—one of David's counselors who assisted Absalom in his revolt. When Absalom rebelled against David, Ahithophel apparently believed his own popularity would bring success to Absalom's revolt. Possibly sensing a chance to rise to power himself, Ahithophel advised Absalom to take David's harem (2 Sam. 15:12; 16:21)—an act equivalent to claiming the throne.

Ahithophel also advised Absalom to pursue David, who had fled Jerusalem. But Absalom chose to listen to Hushai, who advised the prince not to pursue his father. Sensing that Absalom's rebellion was doomed, Ahithophel put his household in order and hanged himself (2 Sam. 17:23)—one of the few cases of suicide in the Bible.

AHITUB [a HIGH tuhb] (my brother is goodness)—the name of three men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Phinehas and grandson of Eli. Ahitub probably became high priest upon his grandfather's death (1 Sam. 4:11).
2. A son of Amariah and father of Zadok, who later was made high priest by King Saul after Ahimelech's death (2 Sam. 8:17; 1 Chr. 6:7–8, 52; 18:16; Ezra 7:2). The Ahitub of 1 Chronicles 6:8, 11–12 is probably the Azariah of 2 Chronicles 31:10.
3. The father of Meraioth and "officer over the house of God" (1 Chr. 9:11).

AHLAB [A lub]—a town of Asher. The Israelites failed to dislodge Asher's Canaanite inhabitants (Judg. 1:31).

AHLAI [A lih]—the name of two people in the Old Testament:

1. One of several daughters of Sheshan (1 Chr. 2:31) and a descendant of Perez, Judah's older son by TAMAR (Matt. 1:3).
2. The father of one of David's mighty men (1 Chr. 11:41).

AHOAH [a HOE uh]—a son of Bela in the genealogy of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:4). Ahoah is called Ahijah in 1 Chronicles 8:7.

AHOHI [a HOE high]—a form of AHOHITE.

AHOHITE [a HOE hite]—a term for the descendants of Ahoah (1 Chr. 8:4). This tribe had a flair for military affairs (2 Sam. 23:9, 28; 1 Chr. 11:12, 29). The NRSV translates "son of Ahohi" (2 Sam. 23:9) instead of "the Ahohite."

AHOLAH [a HOE la]—a form of OHOLAH.

AHOLIAB [a HOE lih ab] (tent of the father)—a son of Ahisamach of the tribe of Dan. During the time of Moses, he was chosen to work with Bezaleel and other craftsmen in preparing the furniture of the tabernacle (Ex. 31:6; 35:34; 36:1–2; 38:23; Oholiab, NRSV, NIV).

AHOLIBAH [a HOE lih bah]—a form of OHOLIBAH.

AHOLIBAMAH [a HOE lih BAH muh] (tent of the high place)—the name of one man and one woman in the Old Testament:

1. A wife of Esau (Gen. 36:5, 14). In Genesis 26:34 she is called "Judith the daughter of Beeri the Hittite."
2. The chief of an Edomite clan (Gen. 36:41; 1 Chr. 1:52; Oholibamah, NRSV, NIV).

AHUMAI [a HUE mih]—a son of Jahath and a descendant of Judah (1 Chr. 4:2).

AHUZAM [a HUE zem]—a form of AHUZZAM.

AHUZZAM [a HUZ um] (possessing)—a son of Ashhur and Naarah in the genealogy of Judah (1 Chr. 4:6; Ahuzam, KJV).

AHUZZATH [a HUZZ ath]—a friend of Abimelech, who was "King of Gerar" (Gen. 20:2) or "King of the Philistines" (Gen. 26:1). Ahuzzath accompanied King Abimelech on a journey from Gerar to BEERSHEBA in an effort to make a covenant with Isaac (Gen. 26:26).

AHZAI [A zih] (the Lord has seized)—a priest who lived in Jerusalem in Ezra's time (Neh. 11:13; Ahasai, KJV).

AI [A eye] (the ruin)—the name of two cities in the Old Testament:

1. A Canaanite city (see Map 3, B–4) (Josh. 10:1) located east of Bethel (Gen. 12:8), "beside Beth Aven" (Josh. 7:2), and north of Michmash (Is. 10:28). Many years before Joshua's time, Abraham pitched his tent at Ai before journeying to Egypt (Gen. 12:8).

   Ai figures prominently in the story of Israel's conquest of Canaan. After Joshua conquered Jericho, he sent men to spy out Ai and the surrounding countryside. Because Ai was small, the spies assured Joshua that he could take Ai with only a handful of soldiers.

   Joshua dispatched about 3,000 soldiers to attack Ai. This army was soundly defeated, due to Achan's sin of taking spoils from Jericho contrary to God's commandment. When God singled out Achan and his family, the people stoned them to death. Joshua then sent 30,000 soldiers against Ai and captured the city by a clever military tactic—an ambush (Joshua 7–8).

Although Ai has been identified with modern et-Tell, situated southeast of Bethel, recent archaeological discoveries conflict with this placement and make this identification uncertain. Nearby Khirbet Nisya is another possible location for Ai. Ai is also called Aiath (Is. 10:28, KJV), Aija (Neh. 11:31, KJV), and Hai (Gen. 12:8; 13:3, KJV).

2. An Ammonite city in Moab (Jer. 49:3).

AIAH [a EYE ah] (falcon)—the father of Rizpah, a concubine of King Saul (2 Sam. 3:7). Two of his grandsons were hanged by King David to appease the Gibeonites (2 Sam. 21:8, 10–11).

AIATH [a EYE ath]—a form of AI.

AIJA [a EYE juh]—a form of AI.

AIJALON [A juh lon] (place of deer)—the name of two cities in Israel:

1. A city in the Shephelah, the lowlands west of Jerusalem (see Map 3, A–4). It belonged to the tribe of Dan (Josh. 19:42) and was assigned to the Kohathite Levites. The area surrounding Aijalon was the scene of the famous battle between Joshua and the five Amorite kings. This was the battle where Joshua made the sun stand still, while the Israelites destroyed their enemies (Josh. 10:12–14). After the ten tribes seceded to form the northern kingdom of Israel, Aijalon was fortified by Rehoboam (1 Chr. 8:13; 2 Chr. 11:10). In the days of King Ahaz, the city was captured by the Philistines (2 Chr. 28:18).

   Aijalon is identified with Yalo, a village situated about 23 kilometers (14 miles) northwest of Jerusalem (Josh. 10:12; 19:42; 2 Chr. 28:18; Ajalon, KJV).
2. A site "in the country of Zebulun" where Elon the judge was buried (Judg. 12:12).

AIJELETH SHAHAR [A juh leth SHAY har] (deer of the dawn)—probably the name of a specific tune used with Psalm 22. The words appear as part of the title of this psalm in the KJV.

AIN [ane] (fountain)—the name of two cities in the Old Testament:

1. A place in northwest Canaan (Num. 34:11).
2. A city originally given to Judah but later transferred to Simeon. It was assigned to the Levites (Josh. 21:16). In three places in the Bible, Ain is mentioned with another city, Rimmon (Josh. 15:32; 19:7; 1 Chr. 4:32), and perhaps should be read as Ain–Rimmon. See also Rimmon in Nehemiah 11:19.

Also see AYIN.

AIR—the atmosphere or the region through which the birds fly. “Speaking into the air” (1 Cor. 14:9) means to waste one’s breath, to speak in a way that cannot be understood.

The apostle Paul used this word of the region where human beings exist. “The prince of the power of the air” (Eph. 2:2), the devil or Satan, is busy at work in the same region. At the coming of the Lord, however, believers will rise to meet Christ in the air (1 Thess. 4:17), which the devil has unlawfully claimed as his own.

AJAH [A jah] (hawk)—a son of Zibeon (Gen. 36:24; 1 Chr. 1:40).

AJALON [AJ uh lun]—a form of AIJALON.

AKAN [A ken]—a son of Ezer and grandson of Seir the Horite (Gen. 36:27). Akan is also called JAAKAN (1 Chr. 1:42).

AKELDAMA [ah kell DA mah] (field of blood)—a field located outside the walls of Jerusalem. According to Matthew, this field was purchased by the chief priests with the 30 pieces of silver they paid to Judas for betraying Jesus. Remorseful at having betrayed innocent blood, Judas flung the 30 pieces of silver on the floor of the temple and went out and hanged himself. The priests would not put the coins in the temple treasury, for they were tainted with “the price of blood.” So they took the money and bought the potter’s field, in which to bury strangers (Matt. 27:3–10).

According to Luke, however, the field was purchased by Judas himself with the 30 pieces of silver. Apparently it was this field that became known as “Akel Dama, or Field of Blood” (Acts 1:18–19; Aceldama, KJV)—the place where Judas died. Apparently, Judas did not personally buy the field; he “bought” it only in the sense that his own money, thrown down on the temple floor, was used by the chief priests to purchase the field.

A tradition from the fourth century places this plot of ground on the Hill of Evil Counsel, a level plot overlooking the Valley of Hinnom.

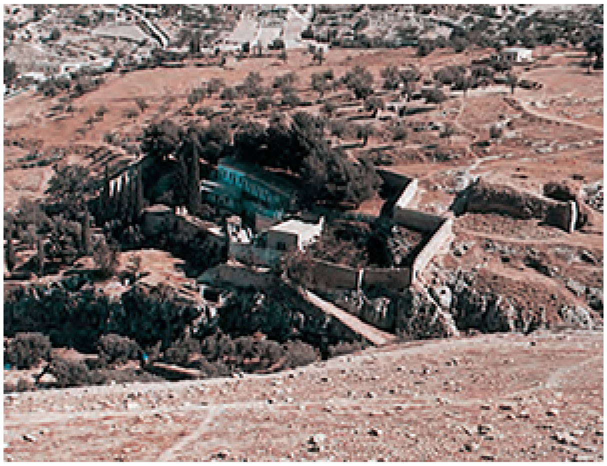

Photo by Howard Vos

• The Valley of Hinnom near Jerusalem, with the traditional site of Akeldama in the fenced area (Matt. 27:3–10).

AKKAD [ACK kad]—a form of ACCAD.

AKKUB [ACK kub]—the name of four men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Elioenai, a descendant of Zerubbabel and of King David (1 Chr. 3:24).
2. The head of a family of Levite gatekeepers in the temple after the captivity (Ezra 2:42; Neh. 7:45).
3. The head of a family of temple servants (NETHINIM) who returned to Jerusalem after the captivity (Ezra 2:45).
4. A Levite who helped Ezra read and interpret the law (Neh. 8:7).

AKRABBIM, ASCENT OF [ack RAB im] (scorpions)—an ascending slope and mountain pass located on the southeast border of Judah near the Dead Sea and the Wilderness of Zin (Num. 34:4). As its name implies, this area abounded in scorpions. Its Greek name was Akrabattene.

ALABASTER (see MINERALS OF THE BIBLE).

ALAMETH [AL ah meth]—a form of ALEMETH.

ALAMMELECH [al LAM eh leck] (oak of a king)—a town of the tribe of Asher (Josh. 19:26).

ALAMOTH [AL ah mohth] (probably sopranos)—a musical term of uncertain meaning (1 Chr. 15:20; Ps. 46 title). It may have meant singing in a high-pitched, or soprano, voice.

ALARM—a warning signal, usually sounded among the Israelites by the blowing of two silver trumpets. The trumpets were sounded when the people were to assemble, disperse, march into battle, or gather for feasts and festivals (Num. 10:1–10; Jer. 4:19).

ALEMETH [AL eh meth]—the name of one town and two men:

1. A priestly town of the tribe of Benjamin near Geba and Anathoth (1 Chr. 6:60). It is also called ALMON (Josh. 21:18).
2. A son of Becher and the grandson of Benjamin (1 Chr. 7:8; Alameth, KJV).
3. A son of Jehoaddah (1 Chr. 8:36). Alemeth also was a descendant of Jonathan and King Saul.

ALEPH [AH lef]—the first letter of the Hebrew alphabet, used as a heading over Psalm 119:1–8. In the original Hebrew language, each of these eight verses began with the letter aleph. Also see ACROSTIC.

ALEXANDER [EH leg zan dur] (defender of men)—the name of five or six men in the Bible:

1. Alexander III (the Great), son of Philip II (King of Macedon) and founder of the Hellenistic (Greek) Empire. He was born in 356 B.C. and ascended the Macedonian throne in 336 B.C. Advised by his teacher Aristotle that he could rule the world if he could make people adopt the Greek culture, Alexander extended his empire east from Greece, around the Mediterranean Sea to Egypt, and then to the borders of India. He died in Babylon in 323 B.C. at the age of 33. Because he did not leave an heir who could continue his reign, Alexander's three generals divided his kingdom, with Ptolemy taking Egypt, Seleucus the East, and Cassander Macedonia.

Although Alexander the Great is not mentioned directly in the Old or New Testament, many scholars think that “the large horn that is between [the] eyes . . . of the male goat” (Dan. 8:21) and the “mighty king” in the vision of Daniel 11:3–4 may refer to him.

Alexander encouraged Jews to settle in Alexandria, a city named after himself. He founded it after conquering Egypt. It was at Alexandria that a Greek translation of the Old Testament, known as the SEPTUAGINT, was developed.

2. A son of Simon, a Cyrenian who carried the cross for Jesus (Mark 15:21), and a brother of Rufus.
3. A member of the family of Annas, the Jewish high priest (Acts 4:6). Both Annas and Alexander were in Jerusalem during the trial of Peter and John.
4. A Jew who lived at Ephesus during the riot started by Demetrius and the silversmiths who opposed Paul’s preaching (Acts 19:21–41). The Jews sought to use Alexander to convince the Ephesians that they had nothing to do with Paul and the Christians (Acts 19:33).
5. One of two heretical teachers at Ephesus mentioned by the apostle Paul. With Hymenaeus, he is said to have “suffered shipwreck” of the faith. He was “delivered to Satan” (1 Tim. 1:19–20) by Paul. Perhaps this was some form of excommunication from the church.
6. The coppersmith who did Paul “much harm” (2 Tim. 4:14). Some scholars identify him with No. 4 and suggest that he may have been a silversmith engaged in activity that was unlawful for a Jew. Other scholars suggest he might be No. 5.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Bust of Alexander the Great, Greek military conqueror.

ALEXANDRIA [eh leg ZAN drih uh]—the capital of Egypt during the Greek and Roman periods. Situated on the Mediterranean Sea at the western edge of the Nile delta, the city was established by Alexander the Great when he conquered Egypt in 331 B.C. After Alexander's death, the capital of Egypt was moved from Memphis to Alexandria, and it became one of the most significant cities of the Greek Empire. The population of Alexandria included native Egyptians, learned Greeks, and many Jews. The commercial strength of the city was aided by the famous towering lighthouse (one of the Seven Wonders of the ancient world) that guided ships into port. Paul himself sailed in an Alexandrian ship on his way to Rome (Acts 27:6; 28:11).

As a cultural center, Alexandria had a large museum and a library that attracted many scholars and writers. These learned people carried out research to establish accurate versions of the important Greek myths and epics as well as scientific investigations in astronomy, botany, and mathematics. One of the results of these interests was the commissioning of 70 (or 72) Jewish scholars to translate the Old Testament from Hebrew to Greek. The translation they produced is known as the SEPTUAGINT.

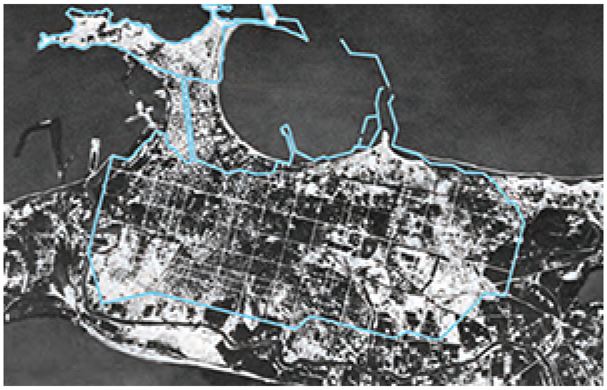
Philo and other learned Jews in Alexandria wrote many books in defense of the Jewish faith to show that their beliefs were consistent with Greek philosophical thinking. This sometimes resulted in unusual methods of interpretation because the literal understanding of Scripture often was mixed with fanciful explanations—a type of interpretation known as ALLEGORY. A Christian school of thought that used the allegorical method grew up in Alexandria, led by such great church fathers as Clement and Origen.

Apollos, a believer from Alexandria, who worked with the church at Corinth after it was founded by the apostle Paul, may have attended one of these early schools. The Book of Acts describes Apollos as one who was well versed in the Scriptures (Acts 18:24). Because the Book of Hebrews reflects thinking that is similar to writings from Alexandria, some scholars believe Apollos may have written the book.

The early church father Eusebius recorded the tradition that John Mark was one of the first missionaries who brought the message of Christ to the people of Alexandria. Years earlier, prominent Jews from Alexandria who gathered in Jerusalem strongly opposed Stephen’s preaching about Christ (Acts 6:9).

Of the many Alexandrias that Alexander the Great founded and named after himself, the one in Egypt outshines them all. It remains a thriving city to this day.



• Aerial photograph of the coastal site of Alexandria, Egypt. The location of the ancient city is shown within the light blue lines.

ALEXANDRIANS [eh leg ZAN drih un]—residents of the city of ALEXANDRIA (in Egypt). Certain Alexandrians at Jerusalem, who belonged to the "Synagogue of the Freedmen" (Acts 6:9) disputed with Stephen and stirred up opposition to him.

ALGUM (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

ALIAH [a LIE ah]—a form of ALVAH.

ALIAN [AL ih un]—a form of ALVAN.

ALIEN—a foreigner, sojourner, or stranger from a country other than Israel. Aliens did not enjoy the rights of Israelites (Deut. 14:21; Job 19:15; Ps. 69:8).

Also see FOREIGNER.

ALLEGORY—a symbolic representation of a truth about human conduct or experience. The word "allegory" is found only once in the King James Version. In Galatians 4:24 it translates the Greek verb allegoreo, which means to say something different from what the words normally imply. The NKJV translates it by the word "symbolic."

As a literary device, an allegory may consist of only a few lines or it may be sustained through an entire book. According to traditional Jewish and Christian interpretation, the entire book of the Song of Solomon is an allegory: of God and his wife, Israel (Jewish), or of Christ and his bride, the church (Christian). Other examples of allegory in the Old Testament are Psalm 80:8–19 and Ecclesiastes 12:3–7. In Psalm 80 the pronouns "we" and "us" identify the vine as Israel (vv. 18–19).

In the New Testament, Jesus' parable of the wheat and the tares (Matt. 13:24–30, 36–43) is a good example of allegory. The apostle Paul also used allegories when writing. In Ephesians 6:11–17 he urges his readers to "put on the whole armor of God" and then gives the symbolic spiritual designation for each article worn by the Christian soldier. And in 1 Corinthians 10:1–4, Paul gives an allegory that compares the experience of Moses and the Israelites to Christian baptism and the Lord's Supper.

Perhaps the most memorable of Paul's allegories, however, is found in Galatians 4:21–31: Hagar and Sarah, Ishmael and Isaac. One of them (Ishmael) was born to the bondwoman Hagar; the other (Isaac) was born to a freewoman, Sarah. Hagar and Ishmael are symbolic of the Old Covenant: the law from Mount Sinai that brings all people into bondage. Sarah and Isaac are symbolic of the New Covenant: the gospel of grace from Mount Calvary that gives spiritual freedom. When Paul concluded by saying, "So then, brethren, we are not children of the bondwoman but of the free [woman]," he was urging his readers to reject the bondage of legalism—salvation by keeping the law—and to live by faith in Christ.

ALLELUIA [al e LOO yuh] (praise the Lord)—a Greek form of the Hebrew word Hallelujah, used to express joy, praise, and thanksgiving.

The words, "Praise the Lord," found often in the Psalms, are a translation of the Hebrew Hallelujah (Ps. 104:35; 116:19; 147:1). The word was probably a standardized call to worship in the temple, since it usually appears at the beginning or end of a psalm.

ALLIANCE—an agreement or treaty among two or more individuals or nations for the purpose of providing mutual trading privileges or military protection. Alliances between the PATRIARCHS and foreigners were common—for example, Abraham with Abimelech of Gerar (Gen. 21:22–34) and Jacob with Laban (Gen. 31:43–55). At Sinai Israel was forbidden to make alliances with the Canaanites (Ex. 23:32). This was to keep Israel's loyalties from being divided between God and pagan powers.

During the conquest of the land of Canaan, the Israelites were tricked into an alliance with the Gibeonites (Joshua 9). Later, during the period of the judges, the individual Hebrew tribes apparently made alliances with one another for their common defense (Judg. 4:10; 6:35).

King David entered into several foreign treaties—for example, with Achish of Gath (1 Sam. 27:1–12) and Hiram of Tyre (1 Kin. 5:1–12). Solomon's many marriages probably included alliances with other nations (1 Kin. 3:1; 9:16; 11:1–3). Other Hebrew kings formed many alliances, such as Asa with Ben–Hadad of Syria (1 Kin. 15:18–20; 2 Chr. 16:1–6). Judah's attempts to make alliances with Egypt were responsible for the attacks of Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon on Jerusalem in 597 B.C. and 586 B.C. (2 Kin. 24:1, 20; Ezek. 17:12–21).

The prophets warned the nation of Israel against forming alliances that sought to replace dependence on God with reliance on a foreign power (Jer. 2:18, 36; Ezek. 23:11–21).

ALLON [AL lun] (oak or terebinth)—a son of Jedaiah and the father of Shiphi, of the tribe of Simeon (1 Chr. 4:37). The word is also found in Joshua 19:33 (KJV) as a town of Naphtali, but the NKJV translates "the terebinth tree"; the NRSV has "the oak"; the NIV has "the large tree."

ALLON BACHUTH [AL lun BACK uth] (oak of weeping)—a place "below Bethel," the name of the burial place of Deborah, the nurse of Rebekah (Isaac's wife) (Gen. 35:8).

ALLOTMENT—in the Old Testament a system of land tenure used in Israel to distribute the land to the tribes, clans and families. Joshua 13–19 describes the division of the land on both sides of the Jordan River among the tribes of Israel, with each tribe except the Levites receiving a specific territory.

How the allotment was determined is not explained, but many scholars believe the "lot" involved the use of the URIM AND THUMMIM (Ex. 28:30; Lev. 8:8; Deut. 33:8; Ezra 2:63; Neh. 7:65), which were stones kept in the breastplate (or pouch) on the high priest’s ephod and used in determining God’s will.

Over a period of time, a reallotment or redistribution of the land was necessary. This explains the provision for a “Year of Jubilee” (Lev. 25:8–55; 27:17–24; Num. 36:4). Every 50th year, the allotments were to be restored to their original owners—a practice that helped prevent drastic inequalities of wealth and poverty.

Because the Lord himself was the “lot” (allotment, portion, or inheritance) of the Levites (or priests), the tribe of Levi received no allotment of land (Num. 18:20; Deut. 10:9; Josh. 13:14). They were allowed, however, to live among all the tribes.

ALMIGHTY (see GOD, NAMES OF).

ALMODAD [al MOE dad]—a son of Joktan (1 Chr. 1:19–23).

ALMON [AL mon]—a priestly town in the tribe of Benjamin (Josh 21:18), also called Alemeth (1 Chr. 6:60). It probably is to be identified with Khirbet Almit, a mound northeast of Jerusalem.

ALMON DIBLATHAIM [AL mon dibb lah THAY em]—a stopping place during the wilderness journey of the Israelites (situated in Moab), between Dibon Gad and the mountains of Abarim (Num. 33:46–47). It may be the same place as Beth Diblathaim (Jer. 48:22).

ALMOND (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

ALMS—money given out of mercy for the poor. The Israelite was commanded to be generous in opening his hand wide to the poor and needy (Deut. 15:11). Gleanings from vineyards, orchards, olive groves, and fields should be made available to the poor (Lev. 19:9–10; Ruth 2:2, 7–8). Blessings were promised to those who were generous in aiding the poor (Prov. 14:21; 19:17). Eventually, the notion developed that almsgiving had power to atone for the giver’s sins.

By Jesus’ time, the word “righteousness” was tied closely to the word “alms.” Thus, when Jesus taught about “charitable deeds” (or almsgiving; Matt. 6:2–4), prayer (Matt. 6:5–15), and fasting (Matt. 6:16–18), he prefaced his teachings by saying, “Beware of practicing your piety [literally, righteousness] before men in order to be seen by them" (Matt. 6:1). In this way he taught that the giving of alms to the poor must not become a theatrical display to win people's applause; the praise that comes from God is more important.

The Book of Acts comments favorably on several instances of almsgiving. A certain disciple at Joppa—a woman named Tabitha, or Dorcas—was full of good works and charitable deeds (Acts 9:36). A God-fearing man named Cornelius "gave alms generously to the people, and prayed to God always" (Acts 10:2). Then, as now, God acknowledges those who give gifts of food to the hungry and in other ways show compassion to the needy (Is. 58:6–8; 1 John 3:17).

ALMUG, ALOES (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

ALOTH [A lohth] (ascents)—a place in northern Israel put under the charge of Baanah, one of Solomon's officials (1 Kin. 4:16; Bealoth, RSV).

ALPHA AND OMEGA [AL fuh, oh MAY guh]—the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet. This title is given to God the Father and God the Son (Rev. 1:8; 21:6). The risen Christ says, "I am the Alpha and the Omega, the Beginning and the End, the First and the Last" (Rev. 22:13). By calling Jesus Christ the Alpha and the Omega, the writer of the book of Revelation acknowledged that He is the Creator, the Redeemer, and the Final Judge of all things.

ALPHABET (see WRITING).

ALPHAEUS [al FEE us] (leader or chief)—the name of two men in the New Testament:

1. The father of the apostle James the Less (Matt. 10:3; Acts 1:13).
2. The father of Levi (or Matthew), the apostle and writer of the first gospel (Mark 2:14).

ALTAR—a table, platform, or elevated place on which a priest placed a sacrifice as an offering to God. The nature of altars changed considerably during the several centuries of Bible times. In addition to describing altars dedicated to God, the Bible speaks frequently also of pagan altars, particularly those associated with the false worship of the Canaanites.

Altars in the Old Testament. The first altar in the Bible was the one built by Noah after the Flood (Gen. 8:20). The next several altars mentioned appear in connection with the patriarch Abraham and his wanderings. His first altar, at Shechem, seemed to serve as a symbol of his possession of the land (Gen. 12:7). At his altars between Bethel and Ai (Gen. 12:8) and at Hebron (Gen. 13:18), he sacrificed animals and called upon the name of the Lord. Abraham built his last altar on top of a mountain in the land of Moriah (Gen. 22:9). To these altars, his son Isaac added one at Beersheba (Gen. 26:25). Isaac's son Jacob built no new altars; but he restored those that Abraham had built at Shechem (Gen. 33:20) and Bethel (Gen. 35:1, 3).

The Hebrew word for altar means "a place of slaughter or sacrifice." But the altars of the Old Testament were not restricted to offerings of animals as sacrifices. Joshua 22:26–29 indicates that altars were occasionally used to remind the Israelites of their heritage or to call attention to a major event. Sometimes an altar might even be used as a place for refuge (1 Kin. 1:50–51; 2:28).

During the days of Moses, two priestly altars assumed important roles in the ritual of the TABERNACLE in the wilderness. These were the altar of burnt offering and the altar of incense.

The altar of burnt offering (Ex. 27:1–8) was placed in front of the entrance to the tabernacle (Ex. 40:6), where it was used for the daily burnt offering and meal offering. This altar declared that entry into the presence of God must be preceded by sacrificial ATONEMENT for sin. The altar of burnt offering was made of acacia wood, overlaid with bronze. The corners of the altar extended at the top into projections that looked like horns.

The golden altar of incense (Ex. 30:1–10) stood just before the veil inside the tabernacle that separated the most holy place from the rest of the worship area (Ex. 40:26–27). Priests burned incense on this altar every day so its fragrance would fill the tabernacle.

As the first king of Israel, Saul built an altar during his conquest of the Philistines for the sacrifice of sheep, oxen, and calves (1 Sam. 14:35). Later David erected an altar on a threshing floor of natural stone that he bought from Araunah the Jebusite (2 Sam. 24:15–25). This site became the central place of sacrifice in the TEMPLE after it was constructed by Solomon, David's son and successor. Some have identified this site with the large rock structure in the city of Jerusalem now seen under the famous building known as the Dome of the Rock.

After building the temple in Jerusalem, Solomon constructed an altar (2 Chr. 4:1) larger than the one Moses had built, probably adapting it to the size of the temple. This was the altar restored later by King Asa (2 Chr. 15:8). Still later, King Ahaz had Solomon's altar moved to the northern part of the temple courtyard (2 Kin. 16:14–15). This was also the same altar cleansed by Hezekiah (2 Chr. 29:18) and rebuilt by Manasseh (2 Chr. 33:16) at later times in Old Testament history.

The incense altar of the tabernacle was also replaced by Solomon's altar made of cedar and overlaid with gold (1 Kin. 6:20, 22; 7:48). Incense was burned every morning and evening on this altar. The priest also sprinkled the blood of a sacrificial animal on the incense altar to make atonement for his sins and the sins of the people. The incense altar was also symbolic of prayer. It is the only altar that appears in the heavenly temple (Is. 6:6; Rev. 8:3).

When the captives returned to Jerusalem following their years of captivity in Babylon, one of their first acts was to build an altar (Ezra 3:3).

Altars in the New Testament. In addition to the temple of the Jewish people with its altars, the New Testament refers to the altar in Athens that was dedicated "TO THE UNKNOWN GOD" (Acts 17:23). No physical Christian altar appears in the New Testament. The statement "we have an altar" (Heb. 13:10) refers to the sacrifice of Christ. The altar of incense mentioned in Revelation 8:3 belongs to the heavenly temple. In this heavenly temple there is no need for an altar of burnt offering since atonement for our sins is now complete through the death of Jesus Christ.

Canaanite Altars. Archaeology has turned up many Canaanite altars from all periods of Old Testament history. A kind of table or altar built into the rear wall of a temple in ancient Megiddo has been dated at about 2000 B.C. Also uncovered at Megiddo was a large round altar from an even earlier period.

Canaanite altars were constructed of earth, stone, or metal. Stone altars have been preserved in Israel. Their form ranges from unworked, detached rocks to carefully cut natural stone. Altars of earth are mentioned in the ancient records, but none have been preserved. These were the simplest altars, probably built by the common people.

References to altars dedicated to pagan gods other than the one true God appear throughout the Old Testament. They were devoted to the Baals (2 Chr. 33:3) and various other Canaanite gods and goddesses (Deut. 12:3)—Chemosh the god of Moab, Ashtoreth of the Sidonians, and Molech of the Ammonites (1 Kin. 11:5–7). The Lord gave specific instructions that these pagan altars should be torn down and destroyed before altars dedicated to His worship were built (Deut. 12:2–3).

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- Excavations at ancient Megiddo, showing the ancient round altar used for pagan sacrifices.

AL TASHCHETH [al TASH keth] (do not destroy)—a phrase found in the titles of Psalms 57, 58, 59, and 75. It was probably the name of the tune to which the psalm was to be sung.

ALUSH [A luhsh]—a desert camp of the Israelites (Num. 33:13–14).

ALVAH [AL vuh]—a chief of Edom descended from Esau (Gen 36:40), also spelled Aliah (1 Chr. 1:51).

ALVAN [AL vann]—the oldest son of Shobal and a descendant of Seir the Horite (Gen. 36:23). His name is also spelled Alian (1 Chr. 1:40).

AMAD [A madd] (station)—a town in northern Canaan, assigned to the tribe of Asher (Josh. 19:26).

AMAL [A mal]—a son of Helem in the genealogy of Asher (1 Chr. 7:35).

AMALEK [AM uh leck]—a grandson of Esau and son of Eliphaz by Timnah, his concubine (Gen. 36:12; 1 Chr. 1:36). A chieftain of an Edomite tribe (Gen. 36:16), Amalek gave his name to the AMALEKITES.

AMALEKITES [AM uh leck ites]—an ancient wandering tribe descended from Esau's grandson Amalek (Gen. 36:12, 16; 1 Chr. 1:36). The main territory of the Amalekites was in the Sinai peninsula and in the Negev, the southern part of present-day Israel. But they roamed widely throughout the territory later settled by the people of Israel. Throughout the Old Testament period the Amalekites were bitter foes of the Israelites.

The Amalekites are first mentioned in the time of Abraham, when a group of kings under the leadership of CHEDORLAOMER defeated Amalek (Gen. 14:7). At the time of Israel's journey through the wilderness, the Amalekites lived in the southern part of the land promised to Israel. The Amalekites attacked the Israelites, but Joshua later defeated them in a battle at Rephidim (Ex. 17:8–16). Because of their treacherous attacks, Moses declared that God would continually wage war against them (Ex. 17:14–16).

During the period of the judges, the Amalekites joined forces with the Ammonites and Eglon, king of Moab, to attack and capture Jericho (Judg. 3:13). Along with the Midianites and the people of the East, they were defeated in the Valley of Jezreel by Gideon's army (Judg. 6:3, 33; 7:12–22).

Eventually the Amalekites gained a mountain in the land of Ephraim. King Saul of Israel won this area back and then chased the Amalekites from the land (1 Sam. 14:48; 15:1–9). But Saul did not destroy the rich booty of livestock as God commanded, and so he was rebuked by the prophet Samuel (1 Sam. 15:10–33).

The Amalekites continued to raid Israel. David attacked and defeated them (1 Sam. 27:8–10), but they countered by raiding Ziklag and carrying off two of David's wives. He pursued and defeated them (1 Sam. 30:1–31), executing one of them for claiming to have killed Saul in battle (2 Sam. 1:1–16).

In the days of Hezekiah, 500 men of the tribe of Simeon defeated the Amalekites. Consequently, the Simeonites took their land and the Amalekites became a dispossessed people (1 Chr. 4:39–43).

AMAM [A mam]—a town in southern Canaan assigned to Judah in the ALLOTMENT of the land (Josh. 15:26).

AMANA [a MAH nuh]—a mountain mentioned in the Song of Solomon (4:8), along with Lebanon, Senir, and Hermon. It may refer to Mount Amanus, part of the Anti–Lebanon range.

AMARANTH [AM uh ranth] (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

AMARIAH [am ah RYE uh] (the Lord has said)—the name of nine Old Testament men:

1. A son of the priest Meraioth, who was descended from Phinehas, a grandson of Aaron (1 Chr. 6:7, 52; Ezra 7:3).
2. A son of Azariah, who was a high priest during Solomon's reign (1 Chr. 6:11).
3. A Levite descended from Kohath (1 Chr. 23:19; 24:23).
4. A chief priest during Jehoshaphat's reign (2 Chr. 19:11).
5. A priest appointed by King Hezekiah to help distribute "the freewill offerings to God" (2 Chr. 31:14–15).
6. A man of the family of Bani who divorced his foreign wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:42).
7. One of the priests who, along with Nehemiah, sealed the covenant (Neh. 10:3).
8. A descendant of Judah through Perez (Neh. 11:4).

9. An ancestor of the prophet Zephaniah, who lived during King Josiah’s reign (Zeph. 1:1).

AMARNA, TELL EL- [a MAR nuh]—the modern name of the site of Akhetaten, capital of Egypt during the reign of Amunhotep IV (about 1375–1358 B.C.), and the site of important archaeological finds.

Amunhotep IV, who changed his name to Akhenaten, rejected the predominant gods of Egypt that were worshiped at Thebes in order to further the worship of Aten, the sun disc. In the process of rejecting the old religion and setting up worship of Aten, Akhenaten almost created a monotheistic (one-god) religion. After Akhenaten died, his capital at Tell el-Amarna was destroyed and the worship of Aten was rejected for the more traditional gods at Thebes.

In 1887 a peasant woman discovered some clay tablets in the ruins of Akhetaten. Archaeologists carefully examined the area and found fragments of about 350 documents in the wedge-shaped (CUNEIFORM) script that was popular in ancient Mesopotamia. Many of these clay tablets were written on both sides with messages from various small city-state “kings” in Canaan. Others contained treaties between larger countries, such as Egypt and the land of the Hittites.

The tablets from Canaan describe the internal strife there and the weakened Egyptian control over the country shortly after the period when the Israelites invaded the land under Joshua. The “king” of Byblos wrote almost 60 letters protesting the lack of military support given to him by the Egyptian king. Letters from the “kings” of Shechem, Megiddo, Hebron, Tyre, Hazor, and even Jerusalem were found in these royal archives. They provide firsthand geographical and historical information about political events and important people during the 14th century B.C.

The advanced state of writing, references to irrigation, olives, corn, ships, chariots, silver, gold, and copper, and even the price of a bride have provided many new insights into the culture of Canaan. They show clearly that Canaan was far from being an uncultured land. The language of the tablets themselves is primarily Akkadian, but various Canaanite words and grammatical forms appear. These give a firsthand knowledge of the language spoken by the Canaanites.

Tell el-Amarna is situated about 320 kilometers (200 miles) south of Cairo on the east bank of the Nile River.

AMASA [AM ah sah] (burden-bearer)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. David's nephew, the son of Jether and Abigail (1 Chr. 2:17). Amasa was also the cousin of Joab, a captain in David's army (2 Sam. 17:25). When Absalom rebelled against his father David, he appointed Amasa commander of the rebel army. After Absalom was defeated and killed by Joab (2 Sam. 18:14), David forgave Amasa and appointed him commander of the royal army in place of Joab (2 Sam. 19:13).
2. A leader of the Ephraimites and a son of Hadai (2 Chr. 28:12). Amasa followed the lead of the prophet Oded. He advised that the prisoners from Judah (captured by King Pekah of Israel in his campaign against King Ahaz of Judah) be fed, clothed, and transported back to their homes in Jericho.

AMASAI [a MASS a eye] (the Lord has borne)—the name of three men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Elkanah and a descendant of Kohath (1 Chr. 6:25; 2 Chr. 29:12).
2. A chieftain who joined David at Ziklag. Amasai became one of David's captains (1 Chr. 12:18).
3. A Levite who helped move the ARK OF THE COVENANT to Jerusalem (1 Chr. 15:24).

AMASHAI [a MASH eye]—a priest who lived in Jerusalem in the time of Nehemiah (Neh. 11:13; Amashsai, NIV, NRSV).

AMASHSAI [a MASH sigh]—a form of AMASHAI.

AMASIAH [am ah SIGH ah] (burden of the Lord)—a son of Zichri and a commander in the army of King Jehoshaphat of Judah (2 Chr. 17:16).

AMAU [A moe]—the land from which Balak, king of Moab, summoned Balaam the soothsayer (Num. 22:5; Amaw, NRSV; his native land, NIV).

AMAW [A maw]—a form of AMAU.

AMAZIAH [am ah ZIE uh] (the Lord is mighty)—the name of four men in the Old Testament:

1. The son of King Joash (2 Kin. 14:1–20; 2 Chr. 25:1). Amaziah was twenty-five years old when he began his reign as the ninth king of Judah. He followed in the steps of his father, doing “what was right in the sight of the Lord” (2 Kin. 14:3). However, he permitted the high places of false worship to stand (2 Kin. 14:4). After becoming king, Amaziah built up an army in Judah, adding to these ranks 100,000 mercenaries, or paid troops, from Israel to war against Edom (2 Chr. 25:6). Warned by a “man of God” that if he used the mercenaries he was inviting certain defeat (2 Chr. 25:7), he sent them home. He incurred their wrath for this action (2 Chr. 25:10).

   Following a stunning victory over the Edomites, Amaziah embraced the gods of Edom (2 Chr. 25:14). The folly of his action was exposed by the ironic question of a godly priest, “Why have you sought the gods of the people, which could not rescue their own people from your hand?” (2 Chr. 25:15). Meanwhile the mercenaries he had dismissed attacked several towns in Judah, killing three thousand and taking much spoil (2 Chr. 25:13).

   Apparently filled with pride over his victory, Amaziah challenged the king of Israel, Joash (or Jehoash), to war and suffered defeat at Beth Shemesh. The Bible notes that this was God’s punishment for Amaziah’s sin of idolatry (2 Chr. 25:20). King Joash destroyed a large section of the wall of Jerusalem and claimed spoil from the temple and the king’s treasury. He also took hostages back to Samaria, possibly even King Amaziah (2 Chr. 25:23–24). Amaziah outlived Joash by 15 years. Learning of a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem, he fled to Lachish. However, his enemies followed and assassinated him there, ending a reign of twenty-nine years (2 Chr. 25:25–28).
2. The father of Joshah (1 Chr. 4:34–43).
3. A Levite of the family of Merari and the son of Hilkiah (1 Chr. 6:45).

4. A priest at Bethel who sought to silence the prophet Amos (Amos 7:10–17).

AMBASSADOR (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

AMBER (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

AMBITION, SELFISH—a spirit of strife and selfishness condemned by the apostle Paul (2 Cor. 12:20; Gal. 5:20). This type of behavior is alien to the spirit of Christ and inappropriate for Christian believers.

AMEN [A min] (so be it)—a solemn word by which a person confirms a statement, an oath, or a covenant (Num. 5:22; Neh. 5:13). It is also used in worship to affirm an address, psalm, or prayer.

In Isaiah 65:16 the Lord is called “the God of truth”; the original Hebrew means, “the God of amen.” This is Isaiah’s way of saying that the Lord is the One who remains eternally true, the One who can always be relied on. In the New Testament, our Lord Jesus Christ is given the same title: “the Amen, the Faithful and True Witness” (Rev. 3:14). He, too, is eternally true and reliable.

AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION (see BIBLE VERSIONS AND TRANSLATIONS).

AMETHYST (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

AMI [A mih]—a form of AMON.

AMINADAB [a MIN uh dab]—Greek form of AMMINADAB.

AMITTAI [a MIT ih] (faithful)—the father of the prophet Jonah (2 Kin. 14:25; Jon. 1:1).

AMMAH [AM muh]—a hill in the territory of Benjamin (2 Sam. 2:24). Joab and Abishai stopped here after their victory over Abner in the battle of Gibeon before traveling on to Hebron.

AMMI [AM mih] (my people)—the symbolic name that God told the prophet Hosea to give to the people of Israel. This name was a sign of God's forgiveness and acceptance of those who had wandered away from him (Hos. 2:1, 23).

AMMIEL [AM ih ell] (kinsman of God)—the name of four Old Testament men:

1. A son of Gemalli and one of those sent by Moses to spy out the land of Canaan (Num. 13:12).
2. The father of Machir, an inhabitant of Lo Debar (2 Sam. 9:4–5; 17:27).
3. The father of Bathsheba (Bathshua), one of David's wives (1 Chr. 3:5). He is called Eliam in 2 Samuel 11:3.
4. A son of Obed–Edom, whose family served as gatekeepers for the tabernacle (1 Chr. 26:5).

AMMIHUD [a MIH hud]—the name of five Old Testament men:

1. The father of Elishama, chief of the tribe of Ephraim during Israel's 40 years in the wilderness (Num. 1:10; 10:22). Ammihud was Joshua's great-grandfather (1 Chr. 7:26).
2. A man of the tribe of Simeon in the time of Moses (Num. 34:20).
3. A man of the tribe of Naphtali in Moses' time (Num. 34:28).
4. The father of Talmai, king of Geshur (2 Sam. 13:37).
5. A descendant of Judah through Perez and a son of Omri (1 Chr. 9:4). He returned to Jerusalem after the captivity.

AMMINADAB [ah MIN ah dab] (my people are notable)—the name of three men in the Old Testament:

1. The father of Elisheba, Aaron's wife (Ex. 6:23). Amminadab's name appears as an ancestor of David (Ruth 4:19–22) and, thus, as an ancestor of Jesus (Matt. 1:4; Luke 3:33; Aminadab, KJV).
2. A chief of a Levitical group, and one of the sons of Kohath, during David's reign (1 Chr. 6:22).
3. One of the Levites who helped bring the ARK OF THE COVENANT to Jerusalem (1 Chr. 15:10–11).

AMMINADIB [am MIN ah dib] (my people are noble)—a chariot driver mentioned in the Song of Solomon (6:12) in the KJV. Other translations render the word Amminadib as “my noble people.��

AMMISHADDAI [am ih SHAD eye] (the Almighty is my kinsman)—the father of Ahiezer (Num. 1:12; 7:66–71; 10:25). Ahiezer was a captain of the tribe of Dan during the wilderness journey.

AMMIZABAD [ah MIZ ah bad]—the son of Benaiah, one of David’s captains (1 Chr. 27:6).

AMMON [AM muhn] (kinsman or people)—the land of Ammon, settled by those who were descended from Ben–Ammi, Lot’s son. Ben–Ammi was born in a cave near Zoar (Gen. 19:30–38), a city near the southern end of the Dead Sea (see Map 2, D–1). The land of the AMMONITES generally was located in the area north and east of Moab, a region between the River Arnon and the River Jabbok. Its capital city was Rabbah (Deut. 3:11; 2 Sam. 11:1). Amman, the name of the capital of the modern Hashemite kingdom of Jordan, is a continuing use of this ancient name.

AMMONITES [AM muhn ites]—a nomadic race descended from Ben–Ammi, Lot’s son, who became enemies of the people of Israel during their later history. During the days of the Exodus, the Israelites were instructed by God not to associate with the Ammonites (Deut. 23:3). No reason is given in the Bible for such hostility, but the rift between the two peoples continued across several centuries.

In the days of the judges, Eglon, king of Moab, enlisted the aid of the Ammonites in taking Jericho from the Hebrew people (Judg. 3:13). In Saul’s time, Nahash, the Ammonite king, attacked Jabesh Gilead. Saul responded to the call for help and saved the people of Jabesh Gilead from being captured by Nahash (1 Sam. 11:1–11).

Later in the history of the Israelites, Ammonites were among the armies allied against King Jehoshaphat; God caused confusion among them, and they destroyed themselves (2 Chr. 20:1–23). The prophets of the Old Testament often pronounced God’s judgment against the Ammonites (Jer. 9:26; Amos 1:13–15). Archaeological evidence suggests that Ammonite civilization continued from about 1200 B.C. to 600 B.C.

AMMONITESS [AM muhn ite ess] (Ammonite woman)—a word used to describe NAAMAH, mother of Rehoboam (1 Kin. 14:21), and SHIMEATH, mother of Zabad (2 Chr. 24:26).

AMNON [AM nun] (faithful)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. The oldest son of David, born at Hebron while that city was still capital of the nation of Israel (2 Sam. 3:2; 1 Chr. 3:1). Amnon raped Tamar, his half-sister, incurring the wrath of Absalom, Tamar's full brother. After two years, Absalom had Amnon murdered.
2. A son of Shimon (or Shammai), a descendant of Judah (1 Chr. 4:20).

AMOK [A mock]—a priest who returned to Jerusalem with Zerubbabel after the captivity (Neh. 12:7). Amok was the ancestor of a priestly family (Neh. 12:20).

AMON [A mun]—the name of three men in the Old Testament:

1. A governor of Samaria (1 Kin. 22:26; 2 Chr. 18:25). When the prophet Micaiah prophesied that Ahab, king of Israel, would be killed in battle, he was sent to Amon as a prisoner.
2. A son of Manasseh and a king of Judah (2 Kin. 21:18–26; 2 Chr. 33:20–25). Amon became king at the age of 22 and reigned for only two years. His reign was characterized by idolatry. His wicked father may have deliberately named him after the Egyptian god Amun.

   Finally, Amon's own servants conspired to kill him, possibly because his corruption and idolatry had made him a weak king and they hoped to claim the throne for themselves. However, after Amon was assassinated, the people of Judah killed the conspirators and set Amon's eight-year-old son, Josiah, on the throne. Amon is mentioned in the New Testament as an ancestor of Jesus (Matt. 1:10).
3. The head of a captive family that returned to Israel from Babylon (Neh. 7:59). He was a descendant of one of Solomon's servants. He is also called Ami (Ezra 2:57).

AMORITES [AM oh rites] (Westerners)—the inhabitants of the land west of the Euphrates River, which included Canaan, Phoènicia, and Syria (see Map 1, C–2). The Amorites were one of the major tribes, or national groups, living in Canaan. The Old Testament frequently uses “Amorites” as a synonym for Canaanites in general. The Book of Genesis cites Canaan as the ancestor of the Amorites (Gen. 10:16).

Shortly before 2000 B.C., the Amorites lived in the wilderness regions of what today is western Saudi Arabia and southern Syria. In the court records of ACCAD and SUMER they were known as barbarians, or uncivilized people. Beginning about 2000 B.C., Amorites migrated eastward to Babylonia in large numbers. There they captured major cities and regions from the native Mesopotamians. “Abram” is an Amorite name, and Abraham himself may have been an Amorite.

Throughout Old Testament times, other Amorites remained in Syria, Phoenicia, and the desert regions to the south (Josh. 13:4). A significant number, however, settled in the land of Canaan itself, eventually occupying large areas both east and west of the Jordan River (Judg. 11:19–22). These Amorites spoke a dialect that was closely related to Canaanite and Hebrew. Occasionally, the Amorites were identified as a Canaanite tribe (Gen. 10:16). At other times they were called the people of Canaan (Deut. 1:27).

When Israel invaded Canaan under Joshua, the first Israelite victories came against the Amorite kings Sihon and Og, who ruled much of the Promised Land east of the Jordan River (Josh. 12:1–6). Various cities west of the Jordan—Jerusalem, Hebron, Jarmuth, Lachish, and Eglon—also were called Amorite cities (Josh. 10:5), even though Jerusalem was also known as a Jebusite city.

While conquering Canaan, the Israelites frequently fought with the Amorites. After the Israelites prevailed, the Amorites who had not been killed remained in Canaan and became servants to the Israelites (1 Kin. 9:20–21).

Much of our knowledge about the Amorites and their culture comes from clay tablets discovered at MARI, a major Amorite city situated on the Euphrates River in western Mesopotamia.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Ruins of a pagan temple of the Amorites, at Shechem.

AMOS [AIM us] (burden bearer)—the famous shepherd–prophet of the Old Testament who denounced the people of the northern kingdom of Israel for their idol worship, graft and corruption, and oppression of the poor. He was probably the earliest of the writing prophets. His prophecies and the few facts known about his life are found in the Book of Amos.

Although he prophesied to the Northern Kingdom, Amos was a native of Judah, Israel's sister nation to the south. He came from the village of Tekoa (Amos 1:1), situated about 16 kilometers (10 miles) south of Jerusalem.

On one occasion, Amos' authority in Israel was questioned by a priest who served in the court of King Jeroboam II, and Amos admitted he was not descended from a line of prophets or other religious officials. By vocation, he claimed to be nothing but "a herdsman and a tender of sycamore fruit" (Amos 7:14), but he pointed out that his right to speak came from the highest authority of all: "The Lord took me as I followed the flock, and the Lord said to me, ‘Go, prophesy to My people Israel’ ” (Amos 7:15).

Amos spoke because the Lord had called him to deliver His message of judgment. This is one of the clearest statements of the compulsion of the divine call to be found in the Bible.

The theme of Amos’ message was that Israel had rejected the one true God in order to worship false gods. He also condemned the wealthy class of the nation for cheating the poor through oppressive taxes (Amos 5:11) and the use of false weights and measures (Amos 8:5). He urged the people to turn from their sinful ways, to acknowledge God as their Maker and Redeemer, and to restore justice and righteousness in their dealings with others.

Amaziah the priest, who served in the court of King Jeroboam, made a report to the king about Amos and his message (Amos 7:10–13). This probably indicates that the prophet’s stern warning created quite a stir throughout the land. But there is no record that the nation changed its ways as a result of Amos’ message. About 40 years after his prophecies, Israel collapsed when the Assyrians overran their capital city, Samaria, and carried away the leading citizens as captives.

After preaching in Israel, Amos probably returned to his home in Tekoa. No facts are known about his later life or death. He will always serve as an example of courage and faithfulness.

AMOS, BOOK OF—a prophetic book of the Old Testament noted for its fiery denunciation of the northern kingdom of Israel during a time of widespread idol worship and indulgent living. The book is named for its author, the prophet AMOS, whose name means “burden bearer.” Amos lived up to his name as he declared God’s message of judgment in dramatic fashion to a sinful and disobedient people.

Structure of the Book. The nine chapters of the Book of Amos emphasize one central theme: The people of the nation of Israel have broken their COVENANT with God, and His judgment against their sin will be severe. After a brief introduction of Amos as the prophet (1:1–2), the book falls naturally into three major sections: (1) judgment against the nations, including Judah and Israel (1:3—2:16); (2) sermons of judgment against Israel (3:1—6:14); and (3) visions of God’s judgment (7:1—9:10). The book concludes with a promise of Israel’s restoration (9:11–15), ultimately fulfilled in the church’s mission to the Gentiles (Acts 15:15–21).

In the first major section of the book Amos begins with biting words of judgment against the six nations surrounding the lands of Judah and Israel. These nations (or their capitals) are Damascus (1:3–5), Gaza (1:6–8), Tyre (1:9–10), Edom (1:11–12), Ammon (1:13–15), and Moab (2:1–3). Next he announces God’s judgment against Judah, Israel’s sister nation to the south (2:4–5). Because of Israel’s bitterness toward Judah, Amos’ listeners must have greeted this cry of doom with pleasant agreement.

But Amos was only warming up to the main part of his sermon. Suddenly he launched into a vivid description of God’s judgment against the nation of Israel. With biting sarcasm, Amos condemned the citizens of Israel for their oppression of the poor (2:7), worship of idols (2:8), rejection of God’s salvation (2:9, 2:12), and defilement of the Lord’s holy name (2:7). Hypocrisy, greed, and injustice prevailed throughout the land. True worship had been replaced by empty ritualism and dependence on pagan gods. And Amos made it plain that Israel would be judged severely unless the people turned from their sin and looked to the one true God for strength and guidance.

In the second major section of his book (3:1—6:14), Amos preached three biting sermons of judgment against the nation of Israel. He referred to the wealthy, luxury-seeking women of Samaria—the capital city of Israel—as “cows of Bashan” (4:1). He also attacked the system of idol worship that had been established in the cities of Bethel and Gilgal (4:4; 5:5).

Following these sermons of judgment, Amos moved on in the third major section of his book (7:1—9:10) to present five visions of God’s approaching judgment. The prophet’s vision of a basket of fruit is particularly graphic. He described the nation of Israel as a basket of summer fruit, implying that it would soon spoil and rot in the blistering sun of God’s judgment (8:1–14).

Following these messages of judgment, the Book of Amos ends on a positive, optimistic note. Amos predicted that the people of Israel would be restored to their special place in God’s service after their season of judgment had come to an end (9:11–15). This note of hope is characteristic of the Hebrew prophets. They pointed to a glorious future for God’s people, even in the midst of dark times. This positive spirit, which issued from Amos’ deep faith in God, sustained the prophet and gave him hope for the future.

Authorship and Date. The author of this book was the prophet Amos, since it is clearly identified in the introduction as “the words of Amos” (1:1). Amos was a humble herdsman, or shepherd, of Tekoa (1:1), a village near Jerusalem in the southern kingdom of Judah. But God called him to deliver His message of judgment to the people who lived in Israel, Judah’s sister nation to the north. Amos indicated in his book that he prophesied during the reigns of King Uzziah (Azariah) in Judah and King Jeroboam II in Israel (1:1). This places his prophecy at about 760 B.C. He must have written the book some time after this date, perhaps after returning to his home in Tekoa.

In one revealing passage in his book, Amos indicates that he was “no prophet, nor was I a son of a prophet, but I was a herdsman and a tender of sycamore fruit” (7:14). In spite of this humble background, he was called by God to preach His message of repentance and judgment to a rebellious nation (7:15–16). His unquestioning obedience and his clear proclamation of God’s message show that he was committed to the Lord and His principles of holiness and righteousness. Amos’ keen sense of justice and fairness also comes through clearly in the book.

Historical Setting. Amos prophesied during the reign of Jeroboam II of Israel (793–753 B.C.), a time of peace and prosperity. The prophet speaks of the excessive luxury of the wealthy (6:3–7), who had no concern for the needs of the poor. Religiously, the nation had departed from the worship of the one true God. Jeroboam encouraged the practice of fertility cults, mixing an element of BAAL worship with Israel’s faith in their Lord of the Covenant. The situation clearly called for a courageous prophet who could call the nation back to authentic faith as well as a policy of fairness and justice in their dealings with their fellow citizens.

Theological Contribution. Amos is known as the great “prophet of righteousness” of the Old Testament. His book underlines the principle that religion demands righteous behavior. True religion is not a matter of observing all the right feast days, offering burnt offerings, and worshiping at the sanctuary. Authentic worship results in changed behavior—seeking God’s will, treating others with justice, and following God’s commands. This great insight is summarized by these famous words from the prophet: “Let justice run down like water, and righteousness like a mighty stream” (5:24).

Special Considerations. Although Amos was a shepherd by occupation, his book gives evidence of careful literary craftsmanship. One technique that he used was puns or plays on words to drive home his message. Unfortunately, they do not translate easily into English. In his vision of the summer fruit, for example, Amos spoke of the coming of God’s judgment with a word that sounds very similar to the Hebrew word for fruit (8:1–2). The “summer fruit” (qayits) suggested the “end” (qets) of the kingdom of Israel (NRSV). Like “ripe” summer fruit, Israel was “ripe” for God’s judgment.

Another literary device that Amos used in his sermons of judgment against the nations is known as numerical parallelism: “For three transgressions . . . and for four . . .” (1:3). He repeated this phrase seven times as he covered the sins of the various nations around Israel (1:3, 6, 9, 11, 13; 2:1, 4). The reader can almost feel the suspense building until the prophet reaches the dramatic climax of his sermon: “For three transgressions of Israel, and for four, I will not turn away its punishment, because they sell the righteous for silver, and the poor for a pair of sandals” (2:6).

The Book of Amos is one of the most eloquent cries for justice and righteousness to be found in the Bible. And it came through a humble shepherd who dared to deliver God’s message to the wealthy and influential people of his day. His message is just as timely for our world, since God still places a higher value on justice and righteousness than on silver and gold and the things that money will buy.

◆

Amos: A Study and Teaching Outline

I. Introduction to Amos 1:1–2

II. The Eight Judgments 1:3—2:16
- A. Judgment on Damascus 1:3–5
- B. Judgment on Gaza 1:6–8
- C. Judgment on Tyre 1:9–10

    - D. Judgment on Edom 1:11–12
    - E. Judgment on Ammon 1:13–15
    - F. Judgment on Moab 2:1–3
    - G. Judgment on Judah 2:4–5
    - H. Judgment on Israel 2:6–16

III. The Three Sermons of Judgment 3:1—6:14
- A. The First Sermon: Israel's Present 3:1–15
  - 1. Israel's Judgment Is Deserved 3:1–10
  - 2. Israel's Judgment Is Described 3:11–15
- B. The Second Sermon: Israel's Past 4:1–13
  - 1. Israel's Judgment Is Deserved 4:1–5
  - 2. Israel's Judgment Is Demonstrated 4:6–11
  - 3. Israel's Judgment Is Described 4:12–13
- C. The Third Sermon: Israel's Future 5:1—6:14
  - 1. Israel's Judgment Is Deserved 5:1–15
  - 2. Israel's Judgment Is Described 5:16—6:14
    - a. The First Woe of Judgment 5:16–27
    - b. The Second Woe of Judgment 6:1–14

IV. The Five Visions of Judgment 7:1—9:10
- A. Vision of the Locusts 7:1–3
- B. Vision of the Fire 7:4–6
- C. Vision of the Plumb Line 7:7–9
- D. Opposition of Amaziah (Historical Parenthesis) 7:10–17
- E. Vision of the Summer Fruit 8:1–14
- F. Vision of the Doorposts 9:1–10

V. The Five Promises of the Restoration of Israel 9:11–15

◆

AMOZ [A mozz] (strong)—the father of the prophet Isaiah (Is. 1:1; 13:1; 38:1). According to a tradition of the rabbis, Amoz was a brother of King Amaziah of Judah (reigned about 796–767) and, like his son Isaiah, also a prophet.

AMPHIPOLIS [am FIP oh liss] (surrounded city)—a city of Macedonia (see Map 7, B–1) through which the apostle Paul passed on his second missionary journey (Acts 17:1). Amphipolis was situated about 50 kilometers (30 miles) southwest of Philippi. It was almost completely surrounded by a bend in the River Strymon.

Situated on a terraced hill, the city was highly visible from land and sea. A large monument, the Lion of Amphipolis, commemorating a military victory, stands guard today at the ancient site, as it did in Paul's time.

Photo by Howard Vos

• A statue of a lion still stands today at the site of ancient Amphipolis, as it did in Paul's time.

AMPLIAS [AM plih ahs] (large, enlarged)—a Christian in Rome greeted by the apostle Paul as "my beloved in the Lord" (Rom. 16:8; Ampliatus, NASB, REB, NIV, NRSV).

AMPLIATUS [am plih AY tus]—a form of AMPLIAS.

AMRAM [AM ram] (exalted kinsman)—the name of three men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Kohath and an ancestor of Moses, Aaron, and Miriam through Jochebed, Kohath's sister (Ex. 6:18, 20). Amram was the father of the AMRAMITES, the Levitical family that served in the wilderness tabernacle and perhaps in the temple in Jerusalem (Num. 3:27; 1 Chr. 26:23).

2. The KJV spelling of Hamran (1 Chr. 1:41). The name should probably be HEMDAN, as recorded in the Septuagint (Greek) version (Gen. 36:26).
3. A son of Bani who divorced his foreign wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:34).

AMRAMITES [AM ram ites]—descendants of AMRAM (Num. 3:27; 1 Chr. 26:23). The Amramites were a branch of the priestly family of KOHATHITES.

AMRAPHEL [AM rah fell—a king of Shinar who invaded Canaan during Abraham's time (Gen. 14:1, 9). Amraphel is not to be identified with Hammurapi, founder of the first Babylonian dynasty.

AMULET—a charm or ornament usually assumed to have supernatural powers. Often inscribed with magic incantations, amulets supposedly protected the wearer from evil—such as sickness, disease, accidents, witchcraft, evil spirits, and demons. They also were thought to serve as aids to success.

Although the word "amulet" does not occur in the KJV or the NKJV, several modern versions do use it. For instance, amulets are perhaps included in a list of garments and accessories worn by the women of Jerusalem (Is. 3:20, NRSV; charms, NIV). In this instance the word does not have any religious significance.

AMZI [Am zih] (my strength)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A descendant of Merari, of the tribe of Levi (1 Chr. 6:46).
2. An ancestor of Adaiah (Neh. 11:12).

ANAB [A nab] (grapes)—a town in the mountains of Judah captured by Joshua (Josh. 11:21; 15:50). The present-day Khirbet Anab is situated about 21 kilometers (13 miles) southwest of Hebron.

ANAH [A nah]—the name of one woman and two men in the Old Testament:

1. Zibeon's daughter and the mother of one of Esau's wives, Aholibamah (Gen. 36:2, 14, 18, 25).
2. A son of Seir and brother of the HORITE chief Zibeon (Gen. 36:20, 29; 1 Chr. 1:38). This Anah may be a tribal name rather than a personal name.
3. A son of Zibeon who discovered hot springs in the wilderness (Gen. 36:24; 1 Chr. 1:40–41).

ANAHARATH [uh NAY ha rath]—a town in the Valley of Jezreel allotted to the tribe of Issachar (Josh. 19:19).

ANAIAH [a NIGH uh] (the Lord has answered)—the name of one or two men in the Old Testament:

1. A leader who helped Ezra read the law (Neh. 8:4).
2. An Israelite who sealed the covenant under Nehemiah (Neh. 10:22). He may be the same person as No. 1.

ANAK [A knack]—a son of Arba, who gave his name to Kirjath Arba, or Hebron (Josh. 15:13–14). Anak had three sons, whose descendants were giants, the ANAKIM.

ANAKIM [AN uh kim]—a race of fierce giants (Deut. 1:28; 2:10–11; Josh. 14:12, 15) descended from ANAK. So gigantic were they that the spies sent out by Moses considered themselves as mere grasshoppers compared to the Anakim (Num. 13:33). Under Joshua, however, the Israelites destroyed many of the Anakim. A remnant of these giants took refuge among the Philistines.

ANAMIM [AN uh mem]—descendants of Mizraim, the second son of Ham (Gen. 10:13; 1 Chr. 1:11).

ANAMMELECH [ah NAM uh leck] (see GODS, PAGAN).

ANAN [A nan] (a cloud)—a leader of the Israelites who sealed the covenant after returning from the captivity (Neh. 10:26).

ANANI [a NAY nih]—a son of Elioenai, a descendant of Zerubbabel and King David (1 Chr. 3:24).

ANANIAH [an uh NYE uh]—the name of a person and a place:

1. An ancestor of Azariah (Neh. 3:23).
2. A town in Benjamin (Neh. 11:32).

ANANIAS [an uh NYE us] (the Lord is gracious)—the name of three New Testament men:

1. A Christian in the early church at Jerusalem (Acts 5:1–11). With the knowledge of his wife, SAPPHIRA, Ananias sold a piece of property and brought only a portion of the proceeds from its sale to Peter, claiming this represented the total amount realized from the sale. When Peter rebuked him for lying about the amount, Ananias immediately fell down and died. Sapphira later repeated the same falsehood, and she also fell down and died. Apparently, their pretense to be something they were not caused God to strike Ananias and Sapphira dead.
2. A Christian disciple living in Damascus at the time of Paul's conversion (Acts 9:10–18; 22:12–16). In a vision the Lord told Ananias of Paul's conversion and directed him to go to Paul and welcome him into the church. Aware of Paul's reputation as a persecutor of Christians, Ananias reacted with alarm. When the Lord informed him that Paul was "a chosen vessel of Mine" (Acts 9:15), Ananias went to Paul and laid his hands upon him. Paul's sight was restored immediately, and he was baptized (Acts 9:18).
3. The Jewish high priest before whom Paul appeared after his arrest in Jerusalem following his third missionary journey, about A.D. 58 (Acts 23:2). Ananias was also one of those who spoke against Paul before the Roman governor Felix (Acts 24:1). Ananias was appointed high priest about A.D. 48 by Herod. In A.D. 52 the governor of Syria sent Ananias to Rome to be tried for the Jews' violent treatment of the Samaritans. Ananias was acquitted of the charges through Agrippa's influence, and he was returned to his office in Jerusalem. About A.D. 59 Ananias was deposed by Agrippa. Known to the Jews as a Roman collaborator, Ananias was murdered by a Jewish mob at the beginning of the Jewish–Roman War of A.D. 66–73.

ANATH [A nath]—the father of SHAMGAR (Judg. 3:31; 5:6), the third judge of Israel. Some scholars believe Anath is a contraction of BETH ANATH, an ancient fortified city of the Canaanites near the border of Naphtali and Asher. If this is correct, then Anath was the place from which Shamgar came, not his father.

ANATHEMA [ah NATH a mah] (accursed)—the transliteration of a Greek word that means "accursed" or "separated" (Luke 21:5; Rom. 9:3; Gal. 1:8–9). In the Greek translation of the Old Testament (Septuagint, LXX), the word is applied to the images, altars, and sacred objects of the Canaanites (Deut. 7:23–26). The gold and silver images of their gods were "accursed" (Deut. 7:26); they were not to be kept by the Israelites but were to be destroyed with fire.

To act greedily and take what was "devoted to destruction" brought the curse on the taker as well as the entire congregation of Israel, as in the case of Achan (Josh. 7:1, 11–12, 20–26).

With a self-condemning oath (Mark 14:71), Peter denied that he knew Jesus. Paul pronounced a curse on preachers of a false gospel (Gal. 1:8–9). In Romans 9:3–4 Paul said, "I could wish that I myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh, who are Israelites." The phrase "accursed from Christ" means to be separated from all benefits of Jesus' life, death, and resurrection.

Early in church history, the term "anathema" took on an ecclesiastical meaning and was applied to a person expelled from the church because of moral offenses or persistence in heresy. The person who continued in stubborn rebellion against the church was considered "devoted to destruction." Today the Roman Catholic Church often uses the term "anathema" in declarations against what it considers false beliefs.

ANATHOTH [AN uh thoth]—the name of two men and one city in the Old Testament:

1. A city in the tribe of Benjamin given to the Levites (1 Kin. 2:26). Anathoth was the birthplace of the prophet Jeremiah (Jer. 1:1; 29:27). During a time of siege, the Lord instructed Jeremiah to purchase a field in Anathoth. This was to serve as a sign of God's promised redemption of Israel (Jer. 32:7–9). Anathoth was located about 5 kilometers (3 miles) northeast of Jerusalem.

2. A son of Becher (1 Chr. 7:8).
3. A leader of the people who placed his seal on the covenant, along with Nehemiah (Neh. 10:19).

ANATHOTHITE [AN uh thow thight]—a native or resident of the city of Anathoth (2 Sam. 23:27; Anethothite, KJV; 1 Chr. 27:12; Anetothite, KJV).

ANCESTOR WORSHIP—a form of superstitious religion in which the living seek to deify the spirits of their departed relatives. It is likely that ancestor worship occurred among the Canaanites and other pagan neighbors of Israel, particularly the Syrians. No conclusive evidence exists, however, to indicate that ancestor worship or a cult of the dead was ever a part of the religion of Israel. Although prohibitions against such practices were given (Lev. 19:28; Deut. 14:1; 26:14), these commands were probably given to warn Israel not to begin ancestor worship rather than to command that it be stopped.

ANCHOR—a heavy object on a ship cast overboard to hold the vessel in a particular place (Mark 6:53; Acts 27:29–30, 40). The writer of the Book of Hebrews had the holding power of an anchor in mind when he wrote, “This hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast” (Heb. 6:19). The strong and trustworthy promises of God serve as an anchor to calm our fears in the storms of life.

ANCIENT OF DAYS—a name for God used by the prophet Daniel, who portrayed God on His throne, judging the great world empires of his day (Dan. 7:9, 13, 22). Also see GOD, NAMES OF.

ANCIENTS (see ELDER).

ANCIENT VERSIONS (see BIBLE VERSIONS AND TRANSLATIONS).

ANDREW [AN droo] (manly)—brother of Simon Peter and one of Jesus’ first disciples. Both Andrew and Peter were fishermen (Matt. 4:18; Mark 1:16–18) from Bethsaida (John 1:44), on the northwest coast of the Sea of Galilee. They also had a house at Capernaum in this vicinity (Mark 1:29).

According to the Gospel of John, Andrew and an unnamed friend were among the followers of John the Baptist (John 1:35–40). When John the Baptist identified Jesus as the Lamb of God, both he and Andrew followed Jesus (John 1:41). Andrew then brought his brother Simon to meet the Messiah (John 1:43–51)—an action that continues to be a model for all who bring others to Christ.

At the feeding of the 5,000, Andrew called Jesus’ attention to the boy with five barley loaves and two fish (John 6:5–9). Later Philip and Andrew decided to bring to Jesus the request of certain Greeks for an audience with Him (John 12:20–22). Andrew is mentioned a final time in the gospels, when he asked Jesus a question concerning last things in the company of Peter, James, and John (Mark 13:3–4).

All lists of the disciples name Andrew among the first four (Matt. 10:2–4; Mark 3:16–19; Luke 6:14–16; Acts 1:13). According to tradition, Andrew was martyred at Patrae in Achaia by crucifixion on an X-shaped cross. According to Eusebius, Andrew’s field of labor was Scythia, the region north of the Black Sea. For this reason he became the patron saint of Russia. He is also considered the patron saint of Scotland.

ANDRONICUS [an droe NYE kus]—a Christian in Rome to whom the apostle Paul sent greetings (Rom. 16:7). Andronicus had become a Christian before Paul. He may have been well known as a traveling evangelist or preacher.

ANEM [A nem]—a place listed among the cities of Issachar and assigned to the priests (1 Chr. 6:73). Located about 11 kilometers (7 miles) southwest of Mount Gilboa, Anem’s modern name is Jenin.

ANER [A nare]—the name of an Old Testament man and a city:

1. An Amorite chief who joined forces with Abraham in his battle with Chedorlaomer (Gen. 14:13, 24).
2. A city assigned to the Kohathites (1 Chr. 6:70) and located west of the Jordan River in the area belonging to Manasseh. It is probably the same place as Taanach (Judg. 1:27).

ANETHOTHITE, ANETOTHITE [AN uh thow thight, AN uh toe thight]—forms of ANATHOTHITE.

ANGEL—a member of an order of heavenly beings who are superior to human beings in power and intelligence. By nature angels are spiritual beings (Heb. 1:14). Their nature is superior to human nature (Heb. 2:7), and they have superhuman power and knowledge (2 Sam. 14:17, 20; 2 Pet. 2:11). They are not, however, all-powerful and all-knowing (Ps. 103:20; 2 Thess. 1:7).

Artistic portrayals of angels as winged beings are generally without basis in the Bible. Rarely is an angel so described. (For exceptions, compare the CHERUBIM and SERAPHIM and the living creatures—Ex. 25:20; Is. 6:2, 6; Ezek. 1:6; Rev. 4:8.)

The Relation of Angels to God. Angels were created by God (Ps. 148:2, 5) and were present to rejoice when He created the world (Job. 38:4–7). In their original state they were holy, but before the creation of the world some of them rebelled against God and lost this exalted position. The leading angel in this revolt became the devil, also known as SATAN (Gen. 3:4, 14; Rev. 12:4, 7–9). Another of the fallen angels is named Abaddon or Apollyon (Rev. 9:11), “the angel of the bottomless pit” (abyss, NASB, NIV; bottomless pit, NRSV).

Two of the vast company of unfallen angels are named in the Bible. They are the archangels Michael (Dan. 10:13, 21; 12:1; Jude 9; Rev. 12:7) and Gabriel (Dan. 8:16; 9:21; Luke 1:19, 26). Michael has the special task of caring for Israel, and Gabriel communicates special messages to God’s servants.

The vast army of unfallen angels delights in praising the Lord continually (Ps. 103:21; 148:1–2). Large numbers of them remain at God’s side, ready to do His every command (1 Kin. 22:19). Angels in God’s presence include the cherubim, seraphim, and living creatures (or living beings) (Ex. 25:20; Is. 6:2; Ezek. 1:5–6; Rev. 4:6).

Unfallen angels are known for their reverence for God and their obedience to His will. Angels represent God in making significant announcements of good news (Gen. 18:9–10; Luke 1:13, 30; 2:8–15). On His behalf they also warn of coming dangers (Gen. 18:16—19:29; Matt. 2:13). In some cases they are God’s agents in the destruction and judgment of evil (Gen. 19:13; 2 Sam. 24:16).

Of special importance in the Old Testament is the ANGEL (Gen. 16:7; 22:11; 31:11). This angel is depicted as a visible manifestation of God Himself. He has powers and characteristics that belong only to God, such as the power to forgive sins (Ex. 23:20–21). His similarities to Jesus lead many scholars to conclude that He is the pre-incarnate Word present with God at the creation of the world (John 1:1, 14).

The Relation of Angels to Human Beings. When visible to human beings, angels consistently appear in human form (Gen. 18:2; Dan. 10:18; Zech. 2:1). Sometimes, however, their appearance inspires awe (Judg. 13:6; Matt. 28:3–4; Luke 24:4).

Angels are never known to appear to wicked people—only to those whom the Bible views as good, such as Abraham, Moses, David, Daniel, Jesus, Peter, and Paul. They are charged with caring for such people and serving them in times of need (Ps. 91:11–12; Heb. 1:14). They also guide and instruct good people (Gen. 24:7, 40; Ex. 14:19). This task is illustrated by the role the angels played in God's giving of the Law to Moses (Acts 7:38, 53; Heb. 2:2). Sometimes their guidance comes through human dreams (Gen. 28:12; 31:11).

Angels also protect the people of God (Ex. 14:19–20; Dan. 3:28; Matt. 26:53). They meet a wide variety of human needs, including relieving hunger and thirst (Gen. 21:17–19; Mark 1:13) and overcoming loneliness and dread (Luke 22:43). They sometimes deliver the people of God from danger (Acts 5:19; 12:6–11).

Although they are not the objects of salvation, angels are interested in the salvation of human beings (Luke 15:10; 1 Cor. 4:9). They also were particularly active in the events surrounding the birth and resurrection of Jesus (Matt. 1:20; 2:13, 19; 28:2; Luke 1:11–38; 2:9–15; 22:43; 24:23; John 20:12). The frequency with which angels participate in human affairs has diminished since Pentecost, probably because of the larger role played by the Holy Spirit in the lives of Christians since then.

Jesus spoke frequently of angels, both good and bad (Matt. 13:41; 26:53; Mark 8:38; Luke 12:8–9). Angels are quite real, and they play a vital part in God's plan for the world.

ANGEL OF GOD, ANGEL OF THE LORD—a mysterious messenger of God, sometimes described as the Lord Himself (Gen. 16:10–13; Ex. 3:2–6; 23:20; Judg. 6:11–18), but at other times as one sent by God. The Lord used this messenger to appear to human beings who otherwise would not be able to see Him and live (Ex. 33:20).

The Angel of the Lord performed actions associated with God, such as revelation, deliverance, and destruction, but he can be spoken of as distinct from God (2 Sam. 24:16; Zech. 1:12). This special relationship has led many to conclude that the Angel of the Lord was Jesus in a pre-incarnate form.

ANGELS, FALLEN—heavenly beings or divine messengers created by God who rebelled against Him and were cast out of heaven. The lord or prince of these fallen angels is Satan (Rev. 12:7–9). Fallen angels, or messengers, continue to serve Satan; but their power is limited. Judgment awaits them in the future (Matt. 25:41; Rev. 12:9). The fallen angels referred to in 2 Peter 2:4 and Jude 6 are possibly the beings referred to as "sons of God" in Genesis 6:1–4. There is no real distinction between fallen angels and DEMONS.

ANGER (see WRATH).

ANGLE—an old English word in the KJV that means "hook" (Is. 19:8; Hab. 1:15).

ANIAM [a NIGH am]—a son of Shemida of the tribe of Manasseh (1 Chr. 7:19).

ANIM [A nem] (fountains)—a town in the hill country of Judah (Josh. 15:50), located about 16 kilometers (10 miles) south of Hebron.

ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE—The Bible shows a vital interest in every aspect of nature. However, it tends to look upon nature more in terms of how mankind experiences it than in terms of scientific interest. Furthermore, the Bible frequently draws spiritual lessons from its observations. God created all things; He is also concerned for His creation. Not even a common sparrow falls to the ground without His notice (Matt. 10:29).

Scores of specific animals are named in the English Bible. But many of these names are simply the educated guesses of translators. In some cases, the meaning is obvious to translators, and in others the passage gives helpful clues. Other passages offer no clue to which animals are intended. In those cases, the meaning of animal names has been lost.

This problem is complicated by the fact that the animal life of Palestine has changed over the centuries. One naturalist claimed that it was impossible that certain passages of Scripture could really refer to lions; no lions lived in the Holy Land with which he was familiar. But, as is true in many areas of the world, some animals of the biblical world have since become extinct. To make matters even more complicated, over the centuries the words used to describe certain animals have changed. Scholars who have done much work in the language of the Bible and have studied the evidence from archaeology are not always clear or final in their conclusions. When a single term has as many as ten possible meanings, it is no wonder that different names are given for the same animals in different translations of the Bible.

The Bible classifies animals quite broadly. Sometimes its terms are unfamiliar to modern ears. For instance, Genesis 1:28 divides animal life into fish, fowl, and living things. The words "flesh" and "beast" often imply animal life in general. "Beast" also refers to wildlife, in contrast to cattle, which means the domesticated animals (sheep, goats, donkeys, and pigs, as well as cows and oxen). "Fowl" means all bird life, not just domesticated fowl. Since Genesis 1:20 obviously refers to fish, "whales" probably indicates larger sea creatures. Creeping things (swarming things) include reptiles, amphibians, insects, and small animals that scamper around, such as mice.

The most basic division of animal life—clean and unclean—was in effect very early in Israel's history. Clean animals, the Jews believed, were acceptable to God for sacrifices and were thus permitted as food. All others were considered unclean, or unacceptable for sacrificing or eating.

This chart shows clearly that six popular translations of the Bible—New King James Version, King James Version, New Revised Standard Version, New International Version, Revised English Bible, and New American Standard Bible—sometimes disagree in their translations of the names of animals in the Bible. These differences exist because scholars disagree on the precise meaning of the underlying Hebrew words.

How Versions of the Bible Sometimes Differ in Translation of Animal Names

This chart shows clearly that six popular translations of the Bible—New King James Version, King James Version, New Revised Standard Version, New International Version, Revised English Bible, and New American Standard Bible—sometimes disagree in their translations of the names of animals in the Bible. These differences exist because scholars disagree on the precise meaning of the underlying Hebrew words.

REFERENCE: Ex. 8:17
NKJV: lice
KJV: lice
NRSV: gnats
NIV: gnats
REB: maggots
NASB: gnats

REFERENCE: Ex. 36:19
NKJV: badger skins
KJV: badger skins
NRSV: fine leather
NIV: hides of sea cows
REB: dugong hides
NASB: porpoise skins

REFERENCE: Lev. 11:18
NKJV: jackdaw
KJV: pelican
NRSV: desert owl
NIV: desert owl
REB: horned owl
NASB: pelican

REFERENCE: Num. 23:22
NKJV: wild ox
KJV: unicorn
NRSV: wild ox
NIV: wild ox
REB: wild ox
NASB: wild ox

REFERENCE: 2 Sam. 6:13
NKJV: fatted sheep

KJV: fatlings
NRSV: fatling
NIV: fattened calf
REB: buffalo
NASB: fatling

REFERENCE: 1 Kin. 10:22
NKJV: monkeys
KJV: peacocks
NRSV: peacocks
NIV: baboons
REB: monkeys
NASB: peacocks

REFERENCE: Ps. 104:18
NKJV: rock badgers
KJV: coneys
NRSV: coneys
NIV: coneys
REB: rock badgers
NASB: rock badgers

REFERENCE: Is. 11:8
NKJV: viper
KJV: cockatrice
NRSV: adder
NIV: viper
REB: viper
NASB: viper

REFERENCE: Is. 14:23
NKJV: porcupine
KJV: bittern
NRSV: hedgehog
NIV: owl
REB: bustard
NASB: hedgehog

REFERENCE: Is. 34:11
NKJV: pelican
KJV: cormorant
NRSV: hawk
NIV: desert owl
REB: horned owl
NASB: pelican

REFERENCE: Jer. 8:7
NKJV: swallow
KJV: swallow
NRSV: swallow
NIV: thrush
REB: wryneck
NASB: thrush

REFERENCE: Lam. 5:18
NKJV: foxes
KJV: foxes
NRSV: jackals
NIV: jackals
REB: jackals
NASB: foxes

REFERENCE: Amos 4:9
NKJV: locust
KJV: palmerworm
NRSV: locust
NIV: locust
REB: locust
NASB: caterpillar

REFERENCE: Zeph. 2:14
NKJV: pelican
KJV: cormorant
NRSV: desert owl
NIV: desert owl
REB: horned owl
NASB: pelican

Distinguishing between clean and unclean animals was the responsibility of the priest (Lev. 11:47). Guidelines for this procedure were given in detail in Leviticus 11 and Deuteronomy 14:1–21. Of the larger mammals, God said, “Whatever divides the hoof, having cloven hooves and chewing the cud—that you may eat” (Lev. 11:3). Birds were an important source of food; so the few unclean ones were listed. These were mostly scavenger birds that ate flesh. Though neighboring peoples ate lizards, snakes, and turtles, Jews considered all reptiles unclean.

Fish with scales and fins were clean; but shellfish, eels, and sharks were unclean. Most insects were unclean, with the exception of locusts, grasshoppers, and some beetles, which could be eaten.

Early Christians inherited this historic concern of the Hebrew people for clean and unclean animals. The Christians' concern was whether meat bought in the marketplace might have come from Roman sacrifices. Paul counseled them that nothing was "unclean of itself" (Rom. 14:14). Peter, a devout Jew who would not think of eating an unclean animal, was instructed to do so in a vision (Acts 10). He interpreted the angel's message, "What God has cleansed you must not call common," as a call to carry the message of the gospel to non-Jewish nations.

Almost since the Fall of mankind, people sacrificed animals to God. The first biblical mention of this practice is Abel's offering (Gen. 4:4). Animal sacrifice was an essential part of Jewish worship until the temple in Jerusalem was destroyed in A.D. 70. Forced to abandon the practice, Jews replaced it with the study of the Law and fellowship and worship in synagogues.

Moses spelled out strict rules for animal sacrifice. Many of these guidelines are found in the Book of Leviticus in the Old Testament. Only clean animals were acceptable, and they had to be at least eight days old, with no blemishes or flaws. A bullock, kid, or lamb was the usual offering. In some cases, older animals, doves, or pigeons were brought. A very poor man, who could not afford even a bird, might offer a measure of fine flour in its place.

Although they practiced animal sacrifice, the Jewish people believed in humane treatment of their animals. The Old Testament contains many warnings against mistreating livestock. The Law itself provided that animals should receive a day of rest during the week, along with their masters. Israel also had a distinctive attitude toward animals. Unlike their neighbors, they did not worship animals. Egypt, for instance, considered the bull and cat sacred, and Greece worshiped the serpent. It was common for a nation of the ancient world to be represented by an animal on its coins. But the prohibition against making graven images prevented this practice in the nation of Israel.

Many Old Testament writers were students of nature, quick to draw parallels between animal and human behavior. In the creation and the creatures that filled it, they saw evidence of the power of God Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth.

The following animals are mentioned or implied in the Bible. This list is keyed to the New King James Version, with cross-references from five additional popular translations—KJV, NASB, REB, NIV, and NRSV. Animals in this listing include mammals, insects, and reptiles.

Addax (see Antelope).

Adder (see Snake).

Ant. Approximately 100 species of ants live in the Holy Land. Harvester ants are the ones meant in Proverbs 6:6–8 and 30:25. These tiny insects settle near grain fields, carrying seed after seed into their private storehouses. In cold weather these ants cluster together and hibernate. When winter comes, they have food stored up until the next harvest.

God has provided ants with such amazing instincts that they appear to reason and plan ahead. If stored grain gets wet, they haul it out into the sun to dry. Their hard work was considered a worthy example for human beings by the writer of Proverbs (Prov. 6:6–8; 30:25).

Antelope. Antelope are cud-chewing, hollow-horned animals related to goats. Early European Bible translators were not acquainted with antelope, which roam the grassy plains and forests of Asia and Africa; so they called them antelope deer instead. Antelope are listed among clean wild game (Deut. 14:5) and among King Solomon's table provisions (1 Kin. 4:23).

When threatened, antelope flee in breathtaking leaps. So speedy were they that hunters in Bible times sometimes needed nets to catch them (Is. 51:20). Sometimes a grazing herd of antelope is joined by other animals that profit from their ability to spot an enemy or smell water at a great distance.

Various Bible translations mention three types of antelopes. The addax is a large, light-colored antelope with spiral horns. The oryx is a large African antelope, whose long horns are nearly straight. Most familiar to Bible writers was the gazelle, which stands less than a yard (approximately one meter) high at the shoulders.

Young gazelles were taken as pets. Poets made much of their dark, liquid eyes and delicate beauty. King David's soldier, Asahel, gifted with both speed and endurance, was "as fleet of foot as a wild gazelle"

(2 Sam. 2:18). The woman of good works whom Peter raised to life (Acts 9:36) was called Tabitha (Hebrew for gazelle) or Dorcas (Greek for gazelle). The dorcas gazelle, once common, almost became extinct. Protected by the modern nation of Israel, it is now an agricultural nuisance.

Ape. King Solomon brought apes from tropical and semitropical regions of the ancient world to Israel. Solomon's zoo probably contained a variety of apes, monkeys, and baboons (1 Kin. 10:22; 2 Chr. 9:21). Some commentators suggest that Isaiah's reference to the "satyrs" who "dance" and "cry to [their] fellow[s]" (Is. 13:21; 34:14, KJV; wild goats, NIV) would fit the dogfaced baboon honored by the Egyptians. Also see Monkey.

Asp (see Snake).

Ass (see Donkey).

Baboon (see Ape).

Badger. Only the skin of badgers is mentioned in the Bible, and even this is questionable. Exodus 26:14 and Numbers 4:6–25 speak of the coverings for the tent of the tabernacle. The Hebrew word tachash is translated "badger skins." However, no one really knows what the Hebrews meant by this word. Other translators render it as "goatskins" (NRSV), "porpoise-hides" (REB), or "hides of sea cows" (NIV).

Possibly this word did mean "badgers." Coarse badger hair would certainly be a protective cushion between the fine fabrics in which the articles of worship were wrapped for travel. The KJV translates the word as "badgers' skins" in Ezekiel 16:10, which refers to a foot covering. The NRSV translates "leather."

Bat. Bats are flying mammals. They are included on the list of unclean fowl (Lev. 11:19). About 15 species of bats live in the Holy Land. Most feed on insects or fruit.

Bats hunt their food at night. An amazing built-in sonar system enables them to fly safely in total darkness. They sleep hanging upside down, often with their wings wrapped around them. Some species gather in caves. Isaiah 2:20 pictures discarded idols being cast "to the moles and bats," as if to say that is where such abominations belong.

Bear. In Old Testament times, bears were a threat to other animals as well as people. They ate honey, fruit, and livestock; so they harmed both crops and herds. Bears are easily angered, and the Asian black bear is exceptionally fierce. This bear is prone to attack people, with or without provocation, as did the two female bears that mauled the boys who taunted the prophet Elisha (2 Kin. 2:24). It was a mark of David's courage that he killed a bear that stole from his flock (1 Sam. 17:34–37).

A bear "robbed of her cubs" (2 Sam. 17:8) was legendary because of her fierceness. Since bears are rather clumsy, they sometimes lie in ambush, waiting for prey to come to them (Lam. 3:10). The era of peace shall arrive when, as Isaiah 11:7 predicts, "the cow and the bear shall graze" side by side.

Bee. Bees are not mentioned often in the Bible, but honey is. Honey was a major sweetening substance for primitive peoples. Beekeeping was practiced in Canaan. Indeed, the Israelites spoke of the Promised Land as a region flowing with milk and honey. Honey was among the gifts Jacob sent to Joseph in Egypt (Gen. 43:11). Ezekiel 27:17 notes that Israel marketed honey in Tyre.

Bees may remind us of honey, but biblical writers saw angry bees as a picture of God's wrath (Ps. 118:12). These insects can be ferocious when disturbed or threatened. Wild bees of Palestine often choose strange hives. They may hide their honeycombs in the crannies of high rocks (Deut. 32:13). One swarm even settled in the carcass of a lion (Judg. 14:8).

Beetle. Beetles fly, but they do not leap (Lev. 11:21). Crickets, which are related to locusts, both fly and leap. Some scholars contend that "katydids" or "locusts" are more likely the correct translations of this one biblical reference to beetles or crickets.

Behemoth. "Behemoth," a Hebrew plural noun implying majesty, could refer to the elephant, hippopotamus, water buffalo, or a mythological monster. The word appears in Job 40:15, where God humbles Job by praising two of His creations, behemoth and Leviathan. Hippopotamus is the best choice for the precise meaning of behemoth. Hippos submerge themselves in rivers and bask in cool marshes. Yet they can climb up riverbanks and hillsides, devouring vegetation. An angered hippo can bite a man in half or crush a canoe with his enormous jaws.

Bittern. This bird is similar to the heron. The KJV uses "bittern" in Isaiah 14:23; 34:11; and Zephaniah 2:14, referring to a creature that dwells in ruined places—a symbol of abandonment.

The bittern can be found in marshes all over the world. His loud cry, hollow and drumlike, booms through the darkness while he hunts his prey. The bittern was considered an omen of desolation and a prophecy of evil. Bitterns are large birds, about two feet long, with a gift of camouflage. A bittern may freeze with his long beak tilted skyward and be overlooked among reeds swaying gently in the wind. Bitterns eat frogs, snails, worms, and small fish.

Other translations of the Hebrew word for bittern are hedgehog (Is. 14:23; Zeph. 2:14, NRSV), porcupine (Is. 14:23, NKJV; Is. 34:11, NRSV, NKJV), and owl (Is. 14:23, NIV).

Black Vulture (see Osprey).

Boar (see Swine).

Buck (see Deer).

Buffalo (see Cattle).

Bull, Bullock (see Cattle).

Bustard (see Porcupine; Vulture).

Buzzard (see Vulture).

Calf (see Cattle).

Camel. Although it is an ugly beast, the camel is prized as the “ship of the desert.” From the time of Abraham, the Bible mentions camels frequently, mostly in lists of possessions. Large herds of camels were a sign of wealth.

Jeremiah spoke of the “swift dromedary” (Jer. 2:23), a camel raised for riding and racing. Jesus talked of “blind guides, who strain out a gnat and swallow a camel!” (Matt. 23:24), and declared, “It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God” (Matt. 19:24).

Camels are bad-tempered, prone to spit and grumble when they take on a load. But they are well suited for harsh desert life. With a heavy coat as insulation, this animal perspires little; and his well-balanced system does not require much liquid. He can go for weeks or even months without water. When he does drink, he takes only enough to replace lost moisture. Each one of his three stomachs can hold 23 liters (5 gallons) of water. In the hump on his back the camel stores fat for times when food is scarce. Then the hump shrinks when his body draws on that reserve.

The camel stands 20 meters (6 feet) or higher at the shoulder. He is trained to kneel on his leathery knees to take on a load. He holds his head high with what seems to be a haughty air, but he is merely peering out from under bushy eyebrows. Like his tightly closing lips and nostrils, his eyebrows protect him against desert sandstorms. His tough feet are ideal for walking through sharp rocks and hot sands.

The Hebrew people used camels as pack animals. They were indispensable for traveling the desert routes, carrying several hundred pounds on their backs. The Israelites also rode camels and milked them, although they considered camels unclean and did not eat them (Lev. 11:4).

The Arabs, however, let no part of a camel go to waste. They ate camel meat and wove the soft fur into warm, durable cloth. John the Baptist was clothed in a garment of camel's hair (Matt. 3:4). The tough hide made good leather for sandals and water bags, and camel-dung chips served as fuel. Even the dried bones of camels were carved like ivory.

Desert tribes rode camels to war (Judg. 7:12), and camels were seized as spoils of war.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• In addition to serving as a beast of burden, the camel provided milk and leather for the ancient Hebrew people.

Cankerworm (see Worm).

Carrion Vulture (see Vulture).

Cat. Cats were common throughout the ancient world, but they are mentioned only in the APOCRYPHA (Epistle of Jeremiah 21). The Hebrews may have avoided cats since the Egyptians worshiped them. The Romans made cats a symbol of liberty. Cats and mongooses were probably used to control rats and mice in places where grain was stored.

Caterpillar (see Moth; Worm).

Cattle. If we think of cattle as a group of cows, we must adjust our thinking when we read the Bible. The word “cattle” is usually a general reference to livestock (Gen. 30:32; 31:10). What we think of as cattle, the Bible calls oxen. A wild ox—a massive, untameable beast—is also mentioned (Job 39:9–10). The KJV calls it a unicorn.

The Bible uses specific terms to refer to cattle: kine, for instance, the plural of cow, and beeves, the plural of beef. But then as now, a male was a bull, a female was a cow, and their offspring was a calf. Until she bore a calf, a young female was known as a heifer; the young male was a bullock.

Some oxen were raised for sacrifice or prime quality meat. Rather than running with the herd, they were fed in a small enclosure. Fatling, fatted calf, fed beasts, stalled ox, fattened cattle and yearling described such well-cared-for animals. One translation even refers to buffalo (2 Sam. 6:13, NEB), when fatling seems to be the obvious reference. A similar term, firstling, refers to the first offspring of any livestock. All firstborn males belonged to the Lord (Gen. 4:4; Ex. 13:12).

Oxen were hollow-horned, divided-hoof, cud-chewing animals considered “clean” by the Jews. They needed considerable food and space because of their large size, so a person who kept many cattle was rich indeed. The pastures and grain country of Bashan, located east of the Jordan River and south of Damascus, were ideal places to raise oxen.

Scripture speaks of oxen as a measure of wealth (Job 42:12), beasts of burden (1 Chr. 12:40), draft animals (Deut. 22:10), meat (Gen. 18:7), and sacrificial offerings (2 Sam. 6:13).

Bulls (as opposed to work oxen) were allowed a large measure of freedom. Strong, fearsome beasts, they were often used as symbols. The BRONZE SEA in the temple rested on the backs of 12 bronze oxen—perhaps to show that Israel’s strength was dedicated to the Lord (1 Kin. 7:23). Anyone who has trembled at a bully can identify with King David’s frustration with his enemies, whom he compared to the “strong bulls of Bashan” (Ps. 22:12).

The Old Testament showed concern for the humane treatment of oxen (Deut. 22:4) and provided legal recourse for a person wounded by an ox (Ex. 21:28–36).

While in Egypt, the Hebrews were surrounded by bull worshipers. After the Exodus, they began to despair of Moses and his invisible God. So Aaron melted down their jewelry to make a visible idol, a golden calf. The people were punished severely for this idolatry, but some of their descendants fell into the same sin (Exodus 32; 1 Kin. 12:18).

Chameleon (see Lizard).

Chamois. The KJV has “chamois” for the goat or antelope of Deuteronomy 14:5. The chamois (“goat antelope”) of Europe never lived in Palestine. Since the Hebrews were allowed to eat this animal, it must have been very familiar in their country. It may have been a wild goat (ibex?) or a type of wild mountain sheep. Also see Sheep.

Chicken (see Fowl).

Cobra (see Snake).

Cock (see Fowl).

Cockatrice (see Snake).

Colt (see Donkey; Horse).

Coney (see Rock Badger).

Cormorant. Both the prophets Isaiah and Zephaniah linked the cormorant or “pelican” (NKJV) with the bittern to describe the ruin God brings in judgment upon proud cities (Is. 34:11; Zeph. 2:14). The cormorant (fisher owl, NKJV) was listed among the few birds the Israelites were not to eat (Lev. 11:17; Deut. 14:17).

Cormorants are large fish-eating birds, related to pelicans, with hooked beaks and webbed feet. They dive into the water to catch fish; they swim well; and they can stay under water for a long time.

The cormorant found in Israel has a black head, yellow-circled eyes, and green highlights in its black plumage. As the prophets suggested (Is. 34:11; Zeph. 2:14), the cormorant would be an unsettling sight in the swampy pools of a ruined city.

Cow (see Cattle).

Crane. Cranes are the largest of several migratory birds that fly over Palestine (Jer. 8:7) in noisy flocks of thousands.

Hezekiah, king of Judah, thinking he was dying, chattered and clamored “like a crane” (Is. 38:14; swift, NIV). This must have been quite a noise. With a windpipe coiled like a French horn, cranes produce one of the loudest bird calls in the world.

Cricket (see Beetle).

Crocodile. The land crocodile appears as an unclean beast in the NRSV rendering of Leviticus 11:30. Many scholars assume that the crocodile is the mysterious “Leviathan” (Leviathan, REB) praised by Job (Job 41:1–34) and mentioned in Psalm 74:14; 104:26; and Isaiah 27:1.

Crocodiles used to live in rivers in the Holy Land, including the Jordan, but they have now disappeared from this region. A long, heavy animal, the crocodile has a tough hide covered with overlapping scales. His eyes and nostrils are high on his head; so he can float almost totally submerged. Crocodiles are extremely dangerous, with strong jaws and sharp teeth. They ordinarily eat small animals, birds, and fish, but occasionally will attack larger animals or people.

Crow (see Raven).

Cuckoo. Cuckoos are insect-eating migratory birds that appear in Israel during the summer. Scholars feel that the Hebrew word was incorrectly rendered cuckow in the KJV. There is no obvious reason why the cuckoo would be considered an unclean bird (Lev. 11:16; Deut. 14:15). The NKJV translates seagull; the NIV renders gull.

Cuckow (see Cuckoo).

Deer. From early times, deer were game animals. Deer were still plentiful in Palestine in Solomon's day and were served at his table (1 Kin. 4:23). Israelites could eat deer because this animal "chews the cud" and "divides the hoof." (A deer track perfectly illustrates a "divided hoof.")

The Bible contains many references to deer. The animal was admired for its agility and grace, its ability to sense danger quickly, and its swiftness. Biblical writers also noted the doe's gentle care of her young. A young deer is called a fawn (Song 4:5; 7:3). The psalmist thought of the long journey for water that a deer faces in dry seasons and exclaimed: "As the deer pants for the water brooks, so pants my soul for You, O God" (Ps. 42:1). Isaiah wrote of the feelings of joy and elation when "the lame shall leap like a deer" (35:6).

Scholars are not sure of the precise species or kind of deer Solomon served. The terms stag or buck (male), hart (male), and hind (female) are used of the red deer common in Europe, which has never lived in Palestine. Likely candidates are the fallow deer (Deut. 14:5, KJV), which was common in Mesopotamia, and the roe deer, often called by its male name, roe buck (Deut. 14:5, NRSV). Bible translators often interchanged terms for various kinds of deer, and for gazelle as well; so readers must settle for informed guesses about the exact species intended. Also see Antelope.

Doe (see Deer).

Dog. In ancient Israel, the dog was not "man's best friend." In fact, calling someone a dog was one of the most offensive ways of insulting that person. The Bible mentions dogs frequently; most of the references are derogatory. Even in New Testament times, Jews called Gentiles “dogs” (Matt. 15:26). The term “dog” also referred to a male prostitute (Deut. 23:18). Unbelievers who were shut out of the New Jerusalem were also termed “dogs” (Rev. 22:15)—probably a reference to their sexual immorality. Moslems later applied the insult to Christians.

The dog may have been the first animal in the ancient world to be tamed. Ancient Egyptians raced greyhounds, mentioned in Proverbs 30:31 (NKJV), and the Greeks raised mastiffs. But dogs in Palestine were more wild than tame. They often banded together in packs and lived off the refuse and food supplies of a village. Some dogs were useful as watchdogs or guardians of sheep, but even they were not altogether reliable (Is. 56:10).

Donkey. One of the first animals tamed by people, the donkey was a necessity in Bible times. It is mentioned frequently in the Bible. Wild donkeys (referred to as the onager in Job 39:5, NKJV) also roamed the land. “Like a wild donkey” (Hos. 8:9) described a headstrong, untamed nature. But the domesticated donkey was an obedient servant.

Donkeys stand about 1.3 meters (4 feet) high. They are usually gray, reddish-brown, or white. The long-suffering donkey often won the affection of the household and was decorated with beads and bright ribbons. But his true role was to serve as a work animal. He trampled seed, turned the millstone to grind grain, and pulled the plow.

Donkey caravans were the freight trains and transport trucks of ancient times. These animals could carry great weight in spite of their small size. Since they required only a fraction as much fodder as a horse, they were more economical to own. The donkey was also a safe and comfortable animal to ride. They were ridden by rich and poor alike. When Jesus entered Jerusalem, he signaled his peaceful intentions by riding a young donkey rather than a prancing warhorse.

The offspring of a male donkey (jack) and female horse (mare) was a mule. The mule had the sure-footedness and endurance of the donkey, coupled with the greater size and strength of the horse. Crossbreeding like this was outlawed among the Jewish people (Lev. 19:19), but from David’s time mules were imported and increasingly used by the Israelites (2 Sam. 18:9; 1 Kin. 1:33; 18:5). Ezra 2:66 records that the Israelites brought 245 mules with them when they returned from captivity.

• Although small in size, donkeys were strong enough to carry travelers and transport heavy loads in Bible times.

Dove. Doves and pigeons belong to the same family. They are often mentioned in the Bible as if they are the same bird. The rock dove found in Palestine is the wild ancestor of our common street pigeon. Turtledoves are migrants. They spend the months of April to October in the Holy Land, filling the air with soft cooing when they arrive each spring (Song 2:11–12).

Doves come in several colors, from pure white to the chestnut-colored palm turtledove. Even the plain gray pigeon has a silver sheen. Solomon waxed poetic over doves' eyes. David longed for "wings like a dove" (Ps. 55:6) so he could fly away from his enemies.

Pigeons were probably the first domesticated bird. When people realized doves could travel long distances and always find their way home, they used them to carry messages. Homing pigeons have keen eyes with which they spot landmarks to help them stay on the right route.

Hebrews ate pigeons and, from Abraham's time, used them in sacrifice. Even a poor man could provide a pigeon or two for worship, as Joseph and Mary did at Jesus’ circumcision (Luke 2:21–24; Lev. 12:8).

Doves appear to express affection, stroking each other, and “billing and cooing.” They mate for life, sharing nesting and parenting duties. They are gentle birds that never resist attack or retaliate against their enemies. Even when her young are attacked, a dove will give only a pitiful call of distress.

Because of its innocence and gentle nature, the dove is a common religious symbol. The Holy Spirit took the form of a dove at Jesus’ baptism (Matt. 3:16; Mark 1:10; Luke 3:22). The dove also symbolizes peace, love, forgiveness, and the church.

Dragon. Dragons are imaginary beasts with a long history in the folklore of many cultures. Usually the dragon is a crafty creature that represents evil. The word “dragon,” as used in some translations of the Bible, is often confusing. Occasionally this word is used when the intended meaning was probably jackal (Lam. 4:3, NRSV), sea serpent or serpent (Ps. 91:13, NRSV), or even crocodile (Ezek. 29:3–4).

This huge, fire-breathing monster with terrifying wings and claws is a symbol of Satan (Rev. 12:3–17; 16:13; 20:2). In the church of early Christian history, dragons represented sin. Christian art often depicts a dragon at the feet of Jesus—to show His triumph over sin.

Dromedary (see Camel).

Eagle. Eagles are included among the unclean birds mentioned in the Bible (Lev. 11:13, NKJV), but they were admired as majestic birds. The golden eagle, which is really dark brown with sprinkles of gold, has a 26-meter (8-feet) wingspread. It nests in high places that are inaccessible (Jer. 49:16). There, in a nest that the eagle makes larger each year, the eagle hatches two eggs. Usually only one eaglet survives to adulthood.

An eagle has keen eyesight. He can spot his prey while soaring hundreds of feet in the air. Like a lightning bolt, he drops to seize it, killing it quickly with his powerful claws. Then he swoops back to his nest to rip the meat apart and share it with his young.

A mother eagle carries her eaglet on her back until it masters the art of flying. Moses used this familiar picture from nature to describe God’s care for His people. God stirred up Jacob (the nation of Israel), and carried His people on His wings (Deut. 32:11–12) as He delivered them from slavery in Egypt.

Agur marveled at “the way of an eagle in the air” (Prov. 30:19). An eagle can stay aloft for hours, rarely moving his wings and riding wind currents. But many passages in the Bible also speak of the swiftness of the eagle’s flight (Deut. 28:49).

The belief that an eagle renews its strength and youthful appearance after shedding its feathers gave rise to Psalm 103:5 and Isaiah 40:31. Eagles do have a long lifespan, living 20 to 30 years in the wild, and longer in captivity.

In the Old Testament, prophets spoke of the eagle as a symbol of God’s judgment (Jer. 48:40; Ezek. 17:3, 7). In Revelation 12:14, “two wings of a great eagle” portray God’s intervention to deliver His people from persecution.

Eagle Owl (see Owl).

Elephant. No elephants lived in Palestine. But they were found elsewhere in Asia and were also native to Africa. Wealthy Israelites sometimes imported the ivory that came from their great tusks. King Solomon “made a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with pure gold” (1 Kin. 10:18). And King Ahab built an “ivory house” (1 Kin. 22:39).

Ewe (see Sheep).

Falcon. In some translations of the Bible the falcon appears in the lists of unclean birds (Lev. 11:14; Deut. 14:13, NKJV). As a bird of prey, it is often grouped with hawks. But a falcon is not a true hawk. The sport of hunting with trained falcons originated in ancient Persia. Great numbers of falcons are still seen in Israel, as they surely were in Bible times (Job 28:7).

Photo by Bernice Johnson

• The pagan god Horus of the ancient Egyptians was represented as a falcon—a common bird throughout the ancient Near East.

Fallow Deer (see Deer).

Fawn (see Deer).

Ferret (see Lizard).

Fish. According to one authority, 45 species of fish are found in the inland waters of Palestine. Many more live in the Mediterranean Sea. But the Bible gives no details on any specific species of fish.

Fish, just like other animals, were divided into clean and unclean categories. Fish with fins and scales were considered clean, and they made a popular Sabbath meal. Unclean fish included catfish, eels, and probably sharks and lampreys, as well as shellfish. The Hebrews also considered whales and porpoises as fish, since they lived in the sea.

Fishing was a major industry among the Israelites. Jerusalem had a Fish Gate, and presumably a fish market. Fish were caught with nets (Hab. 1:15), hooks (Is. 19:8; Matt. 17:27), and harpoons and spears (Job 41:7). The catch was preserved by salting and drying or storing in salt water.

The Bible contains many references to fish and fishing. Habbakuk 1:14–17 compares captive Israel to helpless fish gathered into a dragnet by her enemies. Jesus, on the other hand, called his disciples to become “fishers of men” (Matt. 4:19; Mark 1:17). Since the time of the early church, the fish has been a symbol of Christianity. The Greek word for fish—ichthys—is an acrostic for “Jesus Christ, Son of God, Savior.”

Fisher Owl (see Cormorant).

Flea. Fleas flourished in the sand and dust of the Holy Land. Classified as parasites, these tiny insects attach themselves to a body and suck blood from their host. Fleas have no wings, but they do have strong legs and can jump several inches at one leap. The flea that lives on people is tiny, but it can be very irritating. David described himself as a mere flea being pursued by a king (1 Sam. 24:14; 26:20). He may have seemed insignificant, but he irritated King Saul.

Fly. The “flies” of the Bible included the common housefly, as well as other two-winged insects. Many of these were biting insects. This explains the “devouring” flies of Psalm 78:45. The flies visited as a plague upon the Egyptians probably included the housefly and the stinging sand fly, as well as gnats and mosquitoes.

The prophet Isaiah’s reference to the “fly that is in the farthest part of the rivers of Egypt” (7:18) may have been a symbol of swarms of Egyptian soldiers. Or, he could have had in mind the dreaded tsetse fly of Africa, which spreads sleeping sickness. Still another possibility is the olive fly, which could ruin a crop of ripe olives.

“Fly in the ointment” (Eccl. 10:1) has become a proverbial phrase. So also has Jesus’ “straining out a gnat”—which referred to the custom of straining wine to take out the impurities before it was served (Matt. 23:24).

Fowl. Most people assume that hens and roosters (cocks) were common in Palestine, but they are rarely mentioned in the Bible. Domestic chickens probably descended from the red jungle fowl of Asia. Cocks were bred for the ancient sport of cockfighting before hens were raised for meat and eggs. An onyx seal from Jeremiah’s time pictures a fighting cock.

The crowing of cocks served the ancient world as an alarm clock. Cocks crowed about midnight and again about 3 a.m. Soldiers often rotated their guard duty at this regular signal. Jesus predicted that Peter would deny Him three times before the cock crowed (Matt. 26:34; Mark 14:30; Luke 22:34; John 13:38).

Wild or tame, chickens gather in flocks. Jesus must have been familiar with this flocking instinct. He spoke of a mother hen that tucks a whole brood of chicks under her wings for safety (Matt. 23:37; Luke 13:34).

The "fatted fowl" provided for King Solomon (1 Kin. 4:23; choice fowl, NIV) may have been geese. Ancient carvings from Megiddo show women carrying fat geese. Geese also appear in Egyptian tomb paintings.

Fox. Foxes were common predators in Bible times. Since they fed on small rodents like rats and mice, they helped to protect the grain crops. But their fondness for grapes caused farmers much grief. Sometimes they even tunneled under protective walls to feast on grapevines (Song 2:15). Foxes also settle in holes and burrows, often those abandoned by other animals. Jesus pointed out that foxes have holes, but the Son of Man had nowhere to lay His head (Matt. 8:20).

Foxes have keen senses of sight, smell, and hearing. They are also clever enough to lie in wait for prey. They may even play dead to attract a bird within striking range. When hunted, they are cunning and devious, misleading their pursuers. Jesus compared Herod, the Roman tetrarch of Galilee and Perea, to a fox, because of his crafty, devious nature (Luke 13:32).

"The land of Shual" (1 Sam. 13:17) may have been fox country, for shual means "fox" or "jackal." Also see Jackal.

Frog. Frogs are mentioned several times in the Bible (Ex. 8:2–13; Ps. 105:30; Rev. 16:13). All but the passage in Revelation refer to the plague of frogs in Egypt. The ancient Egyptians connected frogs with fertility and the life cycle, so they considered frogs sacred. What dismay it must have caused when the frogs multiplied uncontrollably and then died and the Egyptians had to gather these sacred animals into stinking heaps! Revelation 16:13 speaks of frogs as the symbol of unclean spirits.

Gazelle (see Antelope).

Gecko (see Lizard).

Gier Eagle (see Vulture).

Glede (see Hawk).

Gnat (see Fly; Lice).

Goat. In Bible times, shepherds treasured the goat because it was such a useful animal. They wove its hair into a type of rough cloth. They drank the goat's milk which is sweet and more nutritious than cow's milk—ideal for making cheese. They even used goatskin bottles to transport water and wine. When the hide of these containers wore thin, they leaked and had to be patched (Josh. 9:4; Matt. 9:17).

Goats often grazed with sheep in mixed flocks. Unlike their gentle and helpless cousins, goats were independent, willful, and curious. Bible writers sometimes used goats to symbolize irresponsible leadership (Jer. 50:8; Zech. 10:3). In Jesus' parable of the Great Judgment (Matt. 25:32–33), the goats represented the unrighteous who could not enter His kingdom.

Goats were often sacrificed in the worship system of ancient Israel. On the Day of Atonement the Israelites used two goats. One was sacrificed, and the other was sent into the wilderness, symbolically bearing the sins of the people (Lev. 16:10).

Young goats are referred to as kids (Gen. 27:9, 16; Num. 7:87). The wild goat of Canaan is known as the ibex (Deut. 14:5, NRSV, NIV; mountain goat, NKJV; pygarg, KJV).

Goose (see Fowl).

Grasshopper. Numerous references to grasshoppers and locusts in the Bible show what an impact these insects had in the hot, dry lands of the ancient world. Some of these references are literal (Ex. 10:4–19) while others are symbolic (Num. 13:33).

The terms grasshopper and locust are often used interchangeably. A locust is one kind of grasshopper. Another term used rarely for these insects is katydid (Lev. 11:22, NIV). It has a brown-colored body two to three inches long. Airborne, with two sets of wings, the locust was dreaded because of its destructive power as a foliage-eating insect in the ancient world.

The eighth plague that God sent upon the Egyptians was an invasion of locusts. Millions of these insects may be included in one of these swarms, which usually occur in the spring. Locusts in such numbers speedily eat every plant in sight, totally destroying the crops. A locust plague is practically unstoppable. Water does not work; for when enough locusts drown, the survivors use their bodies as a bridge. They have also been known to smother fires that had been set to destroy them. Even modern farmers wrestle with this problem, often resorting to poisoning the adults and harrowing fields in the fall to destroy the eggs before they can hatch in the spring.

Chapter 9 of the Book of Revelation presents a nightmarish prospect: locusts with special powers will be unleashed upon mankind for five months.

Locusts do not always appear in swarms. Hot weather normally brings a few solitary grasshoppers and locusts to the Holy Land. But scientists have learned that under certain conditions of climate and food scarcity, chemical changes take place in the female locust. These cause more eggs to hatch, sending millions of locusts into the air at the same time in search of food.

Many people, including the ancient Israelites, eat locusts (Lev. 11:22). These insects may be boiled, fried, or dried. Locusts were part of the wilderness diet of John the Baptist (Matt. 3:4).

Great Lizard (see Lizard).

Great Owl (see Owl).

Greyhound (see Dog).

Griffon (see Vulture).

Grub (see Worm).

Hare. Hares were plentiful in Canaan, but they are mentioned in the Bible only as forbidden food (Lev. 11:6; rabbit, NIV, NASB). They look like large rabbits with longer ears and legs. The common jackrabbit is actually a hare. Unlike rabbits, hares are born furry and able to see. They were considered unclean because they did not have divided hoofs (Lev. 11:6; Deut. 14:7). Perhaps they were forbidden because they are rodents, but the Hebrews' Arab neighbors did not hesitate to hunt them for food.

Hart (see Deer).

Hawk. Hawks are the fierce little brothers in the eagle and vulture family. Adult hawks vary from one to two feet in length. They are known for their exceptional eyesight, which is about eight times as keen as that of a human being. Solomon remarked, "Surely, in vain the net is spread in the sight of any bird" (Prov. 1:17).

The farsighted hawk not only detects nets from a distance, but he can also see mice, insects, and birds. He strikes with devastating swiftness, his powerful claws crushing his prey, which he eats whole.

Some eighteen species of hawk exist in Israel, among them the small sparrow hawk. This hawk, which Egyptians considered sacred, nests in a hollow tree, amid old ruins, or upon a rock. As winter approaches, it migrates to a warmer climate.

Harrier hawks are found in the valleys and low-lying plains. They glide nearer the ground and "harry" other birds by forcing them to land.

Kites (gledes) are a larger breed of hawk, with long narrow wings (Deut. 14:13). Red kites, black kites, and Egyptian kites are found in Israel. Kites in Syria hide their nests by draping them with cloth scraps or animal skins. Just as they abstained from eating other birds of prey, Israelites did not eat hawks (Lev. 11:16; Deut. 14:15).

Hedgehog (see Porcupine).

Heifer (see Cattle).

Hen (see Fowl).

Heron. The Bible mentions herons only in the lists of unclean birds (Lev. 11:19; Deut. 14:18). Several species of herons and egrets made their home in Palestine. Egyptian carvings picture herons and their nests among the reeds of marshes and lakes.

A tall, graceful bird, the heron flies with its neck curled and its long legs stretched out behind. The heron eats fish, frogs, and small reptiles, which it spears swiftly with a long, sharp beak.

Hind (see Deer).

Hippopotamus (see Behemoth).

Hoopoe. The hoopoe is a beautiful bird with a disgusting habit: it probes foul places for insects with its sharp, slender beak. Its wing feathers bear a zebra stripe, and its head sports a lovely crown of feathers. When frightened, the hoopoe may flutter his crest or drop to the ground and play dead. The offensive odor picked up from its feeding grounds is enough to drive away most of its enemies.

Called lapwing in the KJV, the hoopoe is on the list of unclean birds (Lev. 11:19; Deut. 14:18). It is frequently seen throughout the Holy Land today.

Horned Owl (see Owl).

Hornet (see Wasp).

Horse. Horses are mentioned often in the Bible. But they were of little importance to the average Hebrew, who found it more practical to keep a donkey to ride or an ox to pull the plow. Horses were traded for food when money failed during a famine in Egypt (Gen. 47:17). Some kings used swift horses rather than camels to carry messages (Esth. 8:10, 14). But for the most part, Hebrews thought of horses in terms of war.

Pharaoh's horses and chariots pursued when Moses led the Israelites out of Egypt (Ex. 14:9). Their Canaanite enemies met them with many horses and chariots, but they still fell before the Israelites (Josh. 11:4–9). Repeatedly God warned the Hebrews not to place their faith in the strength and speed of horses (Ps. 20:7) or to "multiply" horses (Deut. 17:16).

In spite of these warnings, David and Solomon did multiply horses, even importing them from other countries. Solomon had a sizeable cavalry as well as horses to draw war chariots.

The prophet Jeremiah used the word "stallion" in speaking of horses (Jer. 8:16; 47:3; 50:11, NRSV, NIV). He warned the nation of Judah that it would fall to a conquering army that would be riding prancing stallions. He also used the symbol of a "well-fed, lusty stallion" (Jer. 5:8, NKJV) to describe the idolatry and unfaithfulness of God's people.

The New Testament tells of the "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," who ride out to ravage the earth in the end times (Rev. 6:1–8). But even more dramatic than this is the entrance of a white horse bearing the "King of kings and Lord of lords" (Rev. 19:11–16).

Horseleach (see Leech).

Hound (see Dog).

Hyena. Hyenas were plentiful in Bible times. "Doleful creatures" (KJV) and "beasts of the desert" (Is. 13:21; Jer. 12:9) may refer to hyenas. The place name Zeboim (1 Sam. 13:18; Neh. 11:34) means "hyenas." Members of the dog family, hyenas have square snouts and powerful jaws. They run down prey and may even attack human beings. The Israelites hated hyenas and considered them unclean because they are scavengers. Sometimes they would even dig up and devour dead bodies. Hyenas hunt at night. Their eerie howls sound like demented laughter. Also see Jackal.

Photo by Andy Diamond

• The hyena, considered unclean and forbidden as food by the Hebrews because it was a scavenger that ate dead animals.

Ibex (see Goat).

Photo by Boris Katsman

• The ibex, also referred to in the Bible as the wild goat (Deut. 14:5, NKJV).

Jackal. The prophet Isaiah spoke of jackals—wild dogs that make their dens in desolate places (Is. 34:13). As scavengers, jackals also fed on garbage in towns and villages in Bible times.

Jackals have an unpleasant smell, and they make a yapping and howling noise at night. They are also agricultural pests. Canaanite farmers put up shelters for watchmen, who guarded their cucumber fields against jackals. Some farmers heaped up whitewashed stones to frighten the jackals, just as scarecrows are used in other places.

Bible references to jackals are confusing, since jackal, fox, dragon, and wolf may be used interchangeably, depending on the translation. The "foxes" to whose tails Samson tied torches may have been jackals which, unlike foxes, travel in packs (Judg. 15:4). Also see Fox.

Jackdaw (see Pelican).

Jerboa (see Mouse).

Katydid (see Grasshopper).

Kid (see Goat).

Kine (see Cattle).

Kite (see Hawk).

Lamb (see Sheep).

Lapwing (see Hoopoe).

Leech. A leech may be described as a type of worm with suckers at each end of its body. One end also contains a mouth. Some species of this animal even have tiny teeth. Parasitic leeches attach themselves to a person or an animal, from which they suck blood for nourishment. A leech of this type secretes chemicals that keep the blood flowing freely.

In primitive times, physicians used leeches to "bleed" a patient and purge his body of what was thought to be contaminated blood. But an untended leech could cause pain and damage. Agur may have had the blood-sucking nature of this animal in mind when he spoke of the leech's "two daughters" who cry "Give! Give!" (Prov. 30:15).

Leopard. The huge cats known as leopards were familiar in Palestine, and the Hebrews had good reason to fear them. Smaller and lighter than lions, leopards are better hunters. They are swift, wary, and intelligent; and they can climb trees as easily as a domestic cat. A leopard is also strong enough to drag his prey to a tree branch, where he can devour it out of reach of lions or hyenas. Although leopards do not usually attack human beings, Jeremiah portrayed them symbolically as an instrument of God's judgment: "A leopard will watch over their cities. Everyone who goes out from there shall be torn in pieces" (Jer. 5:6).

The books of Daniel and Revelation use the leopard as a symbol of swiftness in cruelty (Dan. 7:6; Rev. 13:2). Isaiah suggested that a day of peace would come when the savage leopard would not harm a young goat (11:6).

Leviathan (see Crocodile).

Lice. Lice thrive in dry, dusty climates where sanitation is poor. These tiny insects are parasites with flat, colorless bodies. They cling to animals, humans, or plants, sucking blood or sap. The Egyptian nobles and priests shaved their heads and beards so lice could find no hiding place on their bodies. An infestation of lice, the third plague of the Exodus, must have been particularly bothersome to them (Ex. 8:16–18; gnats, NRSV, NIV, NASB; maggots, REB).

Lion. The lion was the most awesome and dangerous wild beast in Canaan. His tawny hide blended into the golden fields and sandy wastes. Lions hid in forests and sometimes pounced from the thickets near the Jordan River (Jer. 49:19).

The Bible contains many references to lions. Daniel miraculously survived a night in a lions' den (Daniel 6). Samson and David killed lions single-handedly (Judg. 14:5–6; 1 Sam. 17:34–37). Kings hunted lions for sport. According to Ezekiel 19:1–9, lions were also captured with pits and nets.

The lion's majestic appearance and fearsome roar prompted many comparisons. The prophet Joel declared, "The Lord also will roar from Zion" (Joel 3:16). The apostle Peter wrote: "Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil walks about like a roaring lion" (1 Pet. 5:8). The prophet Hosea foretold that God would be like a protective lion for the nation of Israel (Hos. 5:14; panther, REB).

Largest and grandest of cats, the lion is filled with power. A swat of his paw can kill. His massive body forces him to rely on strength instead of speed in his hunting.

A lion looks and sounds so imposing that he symbolizes royalty and courage. The highest compliment that biblical writers could give was to indicate that a person had the face or heart of a lion. Ari is the most common term for lion. In Isaiah 29:1 Jerusalem is called "Ariel," perhaps implying that the capital of Israel is "the strong [lion-like] city of God." In some translations of the Bible, a young lion is called a cub (Gen. 49:9, NIV), while other translations use the word "whelp."

The Israelite tribes of Judah, Dan, and Gad—and also the nation of Babylon—adopted the lion as their symbol. Jesus is called “the Lion of the tribe of Judah” (Rev. 5:5). Isaiah the prophet foretold that at the end of time, the Prince of Peace would tame even the fierce heart of the lion (Is. 9:6–7; 11:1–9).

Little Owl (see Owl).

Lizard. Lizards receive little attention in the Bible, although they are common in Israel. They appeared on the list of unclean animals (Lev. 11:30) and were thus forbidden as food to the Israelites.

The lizard comes in many species. Some of the small lizards often pass for snakes, while larger versions of this animal resemble the crocodile. All lizards are cold-blooded reptiles. Since their body temperature depends on their surroundings, they thrive in the tropics and in deserts. But when the sun gets too hot even for them, they lie in the shade or burrow into the sand. One species is even called a sand lizard (Lev. 11:30; skink, NIV).

Lizards are ingenious in the different ways they move. Some unfurl skin-like sails and soar from tree to tree. Monitor lizards (probably the Bible’s great lizard, Lev. 11:29, NRSV, NIV) swim well. They can also climb trees. Many lizards scamper rapidly across the ground. Others have poorly developed legs or no legs at all. But the little gecko (translated ferret in KJV, Lev. 11:30) can walk across a plaster ceiling upside down or cling to a pane of glass. His toes end in a pad made of hundreds of tiny hooks, capped with a hidden claw. This enables him to get a foothold on smooth surfaces. Geckos are abundant in Palestine.

Most lizards eat insects. Larger species of this reptile also eat small animals or plants. The chameleon’s sticky tongue, nearly as long as his body, whips out to catch insects. Chameleons are also common in Palestine. They are so narrow they look as if they have been squashed, and their bulging eyes can see in opposite directions. They have a long tail that can grasp a branch or coil into a spiral when at rest. Chameleons move at a slow, deliberate pace.

The chameleon is known for its ability to change its color to match its surroundings. Actually, this is a common protective trait for most species of lizards. Another defensive tactic is the use of tricks or bluffs. The glass snake, a type of lizard, escapes capture by shedding its wiggling tail. Other lizards hiss, puff up, or use their tails as whips.

Locust (see Grasshopper).

Maggot (see Lice; Worm).

Mare (see Horse).

Mole. Palestine has no true moles. The few Bible references to moles probably mean a burrowing rat that resembles a mole. “Mole rats” live underground and feed on roots and bulbs, to the distress of farmers. Their tiny ears and eyes are nearly hidden in their thick coats of fur. Because these mole rats live in darkness, the prophet Isaiah referred to them as symbols of the spiritually blind. The REB translates dung-beetles (Is. 2:20; rodents, NIV). Also see Weasel.

Mole Rat (see Weasel).

Monitor Lizard (see Lizard).

Monkey. Monkeys are not native to Palestine. So King Solomon apparently had them imported from other nations, along with apes and other exotic goods such as ivory, silver, and gold. They may have come from India, Africa, or even parts of Lower Egypt. The NKJV has “monkeys” in 1 Kings 10:22 and 2 Chronicles 9:21. Other versions translate as “peacocks.” Also see Ape.

Moth. Moths are mentioned several times in the Bible as a symbol of destructiveness and the perishable nature of all earthly goods. In Hosea 5:12, God says, “I will be to Ephraim like a moth.” Just as the damage caused by moths takes place slowly and undetected, so God would quietly, but inevitably, bring judgment upon His backsliding people.

The female moth lays her eggs upon garments. When the eggs hatch into caterpillars, they feed on the fibers, eventually leaving the garment full of holes. Jesus warned against placing too much confidence and hope in worldly possessions that could be wiped out so easily by moths (Matt. 6:19; Luke 12:33).

Mountain Sheep (see Sheep).

Mouse. About forty kinds of mice are found in the Holy Land. These include house and field mice, moles, small rats, jerboas, and even hamsters. Arabs ate hamsters, but the Hebrew people considered all rodents unclean (Lev. 11:29; Is. 66:17).

In spite of its small size, the mouse is one of the most destructive animals in the world. Swarms of mice threatened grain crops in ancient times. When the Philistines stole the ARK OF THE COVENANT, God punished them by sending a swarm of mice, which infected them with a disease (1 Sam. 6:4–5, 11, 18; rats, NKJV).

Mule (see Donkey).

Night Creature (see Owl).

Nighthawk. This bird is mentioned in the Bible only on the list of unclean birds (Lev. 11:16; Deut. 14:15). No specific characteristics are given that might help to identify the bird. Nighthawks, also called nightjars, are found in the Holy Land, but they are not predators. There is no obvious reason why nighthawks would be considered unclean by the Israelites. Other translations render the Hebrew word for nighthawk as owl (NASB) or screech owl (NIV). After sunset, nighthawks fly high into the air to hunt for insects. They build nests near the ground in thickets or hedges.

Onager (see Donkey).

Oryx (see Antelope).

Osprey. Sometimes called fish hawk or fishing eagle, the osprey is a member of the hawk family. With a six-foot wingspan, it is one of the larger birds of prey. The osprey appears on the list of unclean birds (Lev. 11:13; Deut. 14:12). Some scholars think the term refers to the black vulture. Also see Vulture.

Ossifrage (see Vulture).

Ostrich. Several Scripture passages that refer to owls in the KJV are rendered ostrich in the NRSV. This strange bird was a common sight in the deserts of Israel and Sinai in Bible times. Earth's largest living bird, the ostrich may stand about 2.5 meters (eight feet) tall. While it cannot fly, this unusual animal with its long steps, which can cover 15 feet per stride at top speed, can outrun a horse. Sometimes an ostrich will use its wings as a sail to achieve even greater speed. An adult ostrich fears only people and lions, and it may live as long as 70 years.

The popular belief that ostriches hide their heads in the sand is not true. However, when a young ostrich senses danger, it will crouch near the ground and stretch out its long neck to lessen the possibility of being seen.

This enormous bird has only a walnut-sized brain. But God has given it certain helpful instincts, along with its great physical stamina. Like a camel, the ostrich is fitted for desert life. It eats coarse food and can go for a long time without water. Its head, neck, and powerful legs have no feathers. This helps to keep the bird cool in the hot desert climate. Its huge eyes enable it to spot danger from a great distance, and its long eyelashes protect its eyes from dust and sand. The male ostrich has a cry that is similar to a lion's roar.

Unlike most other birds, the ostrich does not build a nest to protect its young. The female ostrich deposits her eggs on the desert floor and covers them with sand. These eggs are generally left unattended during the day, since the desert sun serves as a natural incubator. Job compared these habits unfavorably with the more traditional nesting instincts of the stork (Job 39:13–18).

Owl. The owl is mentioned several times in the Bible (Lev. 11:16–17; Ps. 102:6; Jer. 50:39; Mic. 1:8). The largest species native to Israel is the great owl, sometimes called an eagle owl. Several varieties of smaller owls are also common. Among them are screech owls, whose calls and whistles bring an eerie feeling in the night.

Other varieties of owls mentioned by different translations of the Bible include the short-eared owl (Lev. 11:16, NKJV, REB); long-eared owl (Lev. 11:16, REB); horned owl (Lev. 11:16, NIV); little owl (Lev. 11:17, KJV, NIV, NASB); tawny owl (Lev. 11:17, REB); fisher owl (Lev. 11:17, NKJV); desert owl (Lev. 11:18, NIV); and white owl (Lev. 11:18, NKJV, NIV, NASB).

The owl is no wiser than any other bird, but his facial features give him a thoughtful and solemn look. Owls have round faces with a circle of feathers around their heads, framing and highlighting their large eyes. These feathers also serve as a sound collector for the ears. An owl's fluffy feathers make him appear larger than he actually is. They also enable him to fly silently, since the edges of the feathers pierce the air with little wind resistance.

Owls have good night vision, which enables them to stalk their prey at night. Unlike other birds, whose eyes are set on opposite sides of their head, the owl looks directly ahead. He navigates in the dark mostly by sound. Alerted by a noise, he plunges in toward his prey with his claws spread for the kill.

Owls serve a useful agricultural purpose, since they feed on rats, mice, and other rodents. But the Hebrew people considered the owl an unclean bird and often associated it with scenes of desolation. The scops owl may be the satyr of such verses as Isaiah 13:21 and 34:14

(night creature, NKJV). It has a horned look and does a hop-like dance much like a goat. Also see Bittern; Porcupine.

Ox, Oxen (see Cattle).

Palmerworm (see Worm).

Panther (see Lion).

Partridge. From early times, the partridge has been a game bird. They were among the birds that could be eaten as clean food by the Hebrew people. Two species, the sand-partridge (Is. 34:15, REB) and the chukar, are common in Israel.

Partridges live in fields, feeding on grain and insects. They usually travel in coveys of 12 to 30 birds. Their meat is tasty, and the bird is clever enough to give the hunter a fine chase. It takes sharp eyes to spot the mottled feathers of a partridge. When alarmed, the bird will hide in a hole, crouch among loose stones, or fly from tree to tree with loudly whirring wings. David compared himself to a partridge when he was fleeing from Saul (1 Sam. 26:20).

The prophet Jeremiah compared the person who gathered riches by unrighteous means to a partridge that gathers a brood of young birds that she has not hatched (Jer. 17:11).

Peacock. According to the KJV, Solomon imported peacocks from other nations for his royal courts in Israel (1 Kin. 10:22; 2 Chr. 9:21). A peacock, the male of the species, is about the size of a turkey, with feathers of brilliant blue, green, and purple. He parades in front of the female, spreading his train of gorgeous long plumes behind him like a huge fan. Some versions of the Bible translate the underlying Hebrew word as monkeys or baboons.

Pelican. The pelican is one of the largest web-footed birds, often reaching 2 meters (6 feet) in length with a 3 meter (10-foot) wingspread. But in spite of its great size, the pelican swims and flies well.

Pelicans live in colonies, and they are known as experts at catching fish for food. Their long bills have an elastic pouch on the bottom half. With this pouch a pelican scoops up several quarts of water along with his prey. The pouch serves also as a dinner bowl for baby pelicans, who dip into it for a partially digested treat.

Beautiful in flight, the pelican is a haunting, solitary figure when at rest. Perhaps this was the image in the mind of an afflicted man when he declared, “I am like a pelican of the wilderness” (Ps. 102:6). Other translations render the word as vulture, desert owl, or jackdaw.

Pig (see Swine).

Pigeon (see Dove).

Porcupine. The prophets Isaiah and Zephaniah mention a wild creature that lived in desolate ruined places (Is. 14:23; 34:11; Zeph. 2:14). The KJV calls it a bittern, but the NRSV translates the animal as hedgehog or porcupine (bustard, REB; owl, NIV). Israel does have porcupines, even today. They are small animals with sharp needles all over their backs. When in danger, the porcupine rolls up into a prickly ball.

Photo by Eric Isselée

- The porcupine is the largest rodent found in Israel.

Porpoise (see Badger).

Pygarg. The Hebrew term translated pygarg in Deuteronomy 14:5 means “leaper.” The NRSV and NIV translate ibex and the NKJV has mountain goat or addax (margin). This animal probably was the white-rumped antelope. Also see Antelope; Goat.

Quail. In Israel, the quail is a migrating bird that arrives in droves along the shores of the Mediterranean Sea. With their strong flying muscles, these birds can fly rapidly for a short time. When migrating, however, they stretch their wings and allow the wind to bear them along. Sometimes they reach land so exhausted after their long flight that they can be caught by hand.

Most of the time quail remain on the ground, scratching for food and helping farmers by eating insects. Their brown-speckled bodies are inconspicuous, but they often give away their presence by a shrill whistle.

The Hebrew people probably ate dried, salted quail while they were enslaved by the Egyptians. When they longed for meat in the Sinai desert, God promised He would provide enough meat for a month. Then He directed thousands of quail to their camp, where the birds dropped in exhaustion (Num. 11:31–34; Ex. 16:13; Ps. 105:40).

Rabbit (see Hare).

Ram (see Sheep).

Rat (see Mouse).

Raven. In the Bible, “raven” is a catch-all term for crows, ravens, rooks, jackdaws, magpies, and jays. All were considered unclean by the Hebrew people (Lev. 11:15). With a wingspread of about three feet, the raven is the largest member of this family.

Ravens are scavenger birds that will eat almost anything. Their harsh cry has probably contributed to their reputation as birds of ill omen. Since they have keen eyes and strong wings, this may explain why the first bird Noah sent from the ark was a raven (Gen. 8:7). These birds were also known for their practice of pecking out the eyes of a body—a quick way to determine whether their meal was actually dead (Prov. 30:17).

The Bible indicates that God feeds even young ravens (Job 38:41). Jesus used a similar example to illustrate God’s care (Luke 12:24). Because God sent ravens to feed the prophet Elijah, ravens are also associated with God’s protective care (1 Kin. 17:4, 6). Solomon brought the expression, “black as a raven,” into common use (Song 5:11).

Rock Badger. The rock badger or rock hyrax is a rabbit-sized furry animal. With short ears, sharp teeth, and black-button eyes, it resembles an overgrown guinea pig (Lev. 11:5; coney, KJV, NIV).

“The rock badgers are a feeble folk, yet they make their homes in the crags,” says Proverbs 30:26, holding them up as little things that are “exceedingly wise.” Feeble or defenseless they may be, but they find safety in steep, rocky terrain. Their feet have a suction-like grip that enables them to scamper among rocky outcroppings. Their enemies easily overlook a rock badger stretched out motionless on a sun-warmed rock.

Rock Goat (see Sheep).

Rock Hyrax (see Rock Badger).

Roe Buck (see Deer).

Sand Fly (see Fly).

Sand Lizard (see Lizard).

Sand Partridge (see Partridge).

Sand Viper (see Snake).

Satyr (see Goat; Owl).

Scorpion. The scorpion is a small crawling animal that looks like a flat lobster. A member of the spider family, it has eight legs, two sets of pincers, and a tail with a poisonous stinger. A scorpion feeds on spiders and insects, which it rips apart with its claws. It uses its poisonous sting only when threatened or when it attacks large prey. This sting is seldom fatal, but it can be very painful (Rev. 9:5).

During the day, scorpions escape the desert heat by hiding under rocks. They come out at night to hunt and eat. Inhabitants of Bible lands feared scorpions. These animals were an ever-present danger when Moses led the children of Israel through the hot, rocky wilderness (Deut. 8:15).

Jesus’ words in Luke 11:12 about giving a person a scorpion instead of an egg may refer to a light-colored scorpion, which could be mistaken for an egg when in a coiled position. The prophet Ezekiel was told by God not to be afraid of his enemies, who were referred to symbolically as scorpions (Ezek. 2:6). King Rehoboam’s threat did not mean he would use scorpions as whips (1 Kin. 12:14). In those days a barbed whip or scourge was called a “scorpion.”

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• Several species of the scorpion are found in Israel. Their bite is poisonous but generally not fatal to human beings (Deut. 8:14–15).

Screech Owl (see Owl).

Sea Cow (see Badger).

Sea Gull. Sea gulls are birds about the size of pigeons. They have long wings, which they use to swoop and soar gracefully on air currents. Gulls gather in flocks near bodies of water. They are scavengers who eat garbage as well as fish and insects. Sea gulls are mentioned only in some translations of the Bible. Others translate the Hebrew term as cuckoo, sea mew, or owl (Lev. 11:16; Deut. 14:15).

Sea Mew (see Sea Gull).

Sea Monster. Several terms are used in the Bible to describe large sea creatures: sea monsters or serpents, dragons, great fish, whales, and Leviathan. All of these do not refer to one animal, but it is impossible to match the terms with specific marine life. For instance, many animals have been mistaken for sea serpents—large eels, sharks, and giant squid. The Mediterranean and Red Seas contain whales and enough other such “monsters” to provide plenty of material for sea-related scare tales.

Dragons are mythical creatures that appear in many ancient cultures. The prophet Ezekiel saw images of dragons on the city gates when he was exiled in Babylon. The book of Revelation refers to Satan as “a great, fiery red dragon” (12:3). However, Ezekiel and the writer of the Psalms also used the word “dragon” as a synonym for whale.

Whales, of course, were real creatures that may have been a common sight in the Mediterranean Sea during Bible times. The REB refers to them in Psalm 148:7 as sea monsters, a possible reference to the sperm whale.

Serpent (see Snake).

Sheep. Sheep are mentioned more frequently than any other animal in the Bible—about 750 times. This is only natural since the Hebrew people were known early in their history as a race of wandering herdsmen. Even in the days of the kings, the simple shepherd’s life seemed the ideal calling. The Bible makes many comparisons between the ways of sheep and human beings. In the New Testament the church is often compared to a sheepfold.

Well-suited for Canaan’s dry plains, sheep fed on grass, woods, and shrubs. They could get along for long periods without water. Sheep in clusters are easily led, so a single shepherd could watch over a large flock.

Sheep today are bred for white wool. But the sheep of Bible times were probably brown or a mixture of black and white. Modern farmers clip off the tails of sheep for sanitary reasons, but fat tails were prized on biblical sheep. The Hebrews called this “the whole fat tail.” When they offered this prized part of the sheep as a burnt offering to God, they burned the “entire fat-tail cut off close by the spine” (Lev. 3:9, REB).

Sheep were also valuable because they provided meat for the Hebrew diet. Mutton was a nutritious food, and it could be packed away and preserved for winter. And before people learned to spin and weave wool, shepherds wore warm sheepskin jackets.

By nature, sheep are helpless creatures. They depend on shepherds to lead them to water and pasture, to fight off wild beasts, and to anoint their faces with oil when a snake nips them from the grass. Sheep are social animals that gather in flocks, but they tend to wander off and fall into a crevice or get caught in a thorn bush. Then the shepherd must leave the rest of his flock to search for the stray. Jesus used this familiar picture when He described a shepherd who left ninety-nine sheep in the fold to search for one that had wandered off. The God of Israel revealed His nurturing nature by speaking of Himself as a shepherd (Psalm 23). Jesus also described Himself as the Good Shepherd who takes care of His sheep (John 10:1–18).

A unique relationship existed between shepherd and sheep. He knew them by name, and they in turn recognized his voice. Sheep were models of submissiveness. Because he demonstrated purity and trustful obedience to the Father, Jesus was also called “the Lamb of God” (John 1:29, 36).

Wild sheep, high-spirited and independent, lived among the tall peaks of Canaan’s mountains. Like their domesticated cousins, they flocked together, but their disposition more nearly resembled goats. They are referred to as mountain sheep (Deut. 14:5, NKJV, NRSV, NIV, NASB), chamois (KJV), and rock goats (REB).

Wild or domestic, the male sheep is called a ram; the female is called a ewe.

Skink (See Lizard).

Photo by Eric Isselée

- The skink, also called the sand lizard (Lev. 11:30, NKJV), is a common reptile in the desert places of the Holy Land.

Snail. Snails are small, slow-crawling animals with a soft body protected by a coiled shell. They move with wave-like motions of their single foot, secreting a slime as they go to make their travel easier. The psalmist may have had this peculiar motion in mind when he spoke of the snail "which melts away as it goes" (Ps. 58:8).

The snail in Leviticus 11:30 (KJV) is probably a skink, a type of sand lizard.

Snake. A snake is the Bible's first—and final—animal villain (Genesis 3; Rev. 20:2). Throughout the Old and New Testaments, several different words for snake or serpent appear some twenty times. Scholars can only make educated guesses as to which of Canaan's many species of snakes are meant in most verses.

The asp and adder are both common in the Holy Land. The asp is a type of cobra with its familiar hood, although its hood is not as pronounced as the Indian cobra's. There is also a desert cobra, which has no hood at all. "Adder" and "viper" are two different words for the same deadly snake. A horned viper and sawscale, or carpet viper, are native to Israel. Another species mentioned in the Bible is the sand viper (Is. 30:6, REB).

In the wilderness, the Israelites were plagued by fiery serpents (Num. 21:6). "Fiery" may indicate the burning fever caused by their bite. Or it may refer to the puff adder, which has yellow, flame-like markings. The cockatrice of the KJV was a mythological monster. It had the wings and head of a cock and the tail of a dragon. According to the superstitious legend about this animal, its look could kill.

Most snakes in Canaan were nonpoisonous, but the Israelites feared and hated all snakes. In the Bible the serpent is often referred to as the symbol of evil and wrongdoing (Ps. 140:3; Jer. 8:17).

In spite of this attitude among the Israelites, some of their neighbors associated serpents with health, life, and immortality. The kingdom of Lower Egypt took the cobra as its official symbol. Even Moses once lifted up a BRONZE SERPENT before the Israelites at God's command to save the people from the fiery serpents in the wilderness (Num. 21:9). Some continued to worship that bronze serpent until King Hezekiah destroyed it generations later (2 Kin. 18:4).

Snakes are fascinating creatures. Scales on their undersides provide traction. Their forked tongues flick rapidly in and out to collect sensations of touch and smell. Psalm 58:4 is correct in speaking of the "deaf cobra," since snakes have no ears to receive sound waves. Like deaf persons, they rely on physical vibrations to pick up sounds. Thus cobras are not charmed by music, but by movement.

A snake's spine may contain as many as 300 tiny vertebrae. This gives them their amazing flexibility to coil and curve. Their mouths are hinged to permit them to swallow and eat creatures much larger than themselves. Their eyes are protected by transparent lids that are always open, causing scientists to wonder if snakes ever sleep.

Sow (see Swine).

Sparrow. Sparrow is the name given to several different species of birds in the Bible. They ate grain and insects and gathered in noisy flocks. The psalmist wrote, "I . . . am like a sparrow alone on the housetop" (Ps. 102:7). These tiny birds were such social creatures that a lone sparrow was the symbol of deep loneliness.

Sparrows build their untidy nests in the eaves of houses. Sparrows were not driven away when they built their nests in the temple (Ps. 84:3).

In Jesus' time sparrows sold for a very low price—two for a copper coin, five for two copper coins (Matt. 10:29; Luke 12:6). Perhaps this was the temple price, for they were considered a poor man's sacrifice. Those who could not afford to sacrifice a sheep or a goat might bring a sparrow. Moses once directed healed lepers to bring two sparrows to the temple for a cleansing ceremony (Lev. 14:1–7).

Sometimes it seems that only God cares for sparrows. Cats, hawks, and naughty boys prey upon them. People complain about how they multiply, considering them pests. Yet, Jesus declared, "Not one of them falls to the ground apart from your Father's will" (Matt. 10:29). We may not esteem the little sparrow, but the Son of God used it to illustrate our Heavenly Father's watchful care: "You are of more value than many sparrows" (Matt. 10:31; Luke 12:7).

Spider. Hundreds of different species of spiders are found in the Holy Land. A spider's skill at spinning threads into a web is one of nature's miracles. The fragile web of a spider is used to demonstrate the folly of placing confidence in something other than the stable, dependable God (Job 8:14).

Spiders trap their victims in their webs and dissolve them with pre-digestive juices so they can be eaten. Oil on the spider's body keeps it from being entangled in its own web.

Sponge. The sponge is a plant-like animal that lives on the ocean floor. It absorbs nourishment from water passing through its body. When a sponge is removed from water, the cells die, leaving a skeleton. The skeletons of some sponges are flexible and porous. These have been used for centuries as cleaning and water-absorbing tools. Such a sponge, dipped in sour wine, was offered to Christ on the cross (Matt. 27:48; Mark 15:36; John 19:29).

Stag (see Deer).

Stork. This goose-sized bird looks ungainly in flight, with its legs dangling and its wings slowly flapping. But people in Canaan were always glad to see the storks on their yearly migration from Europe to Africa. Storks had the reputation of bringing good luck. If they were numerous, surely crops would be good. Farmers welcomed storks because they helped their crops by eating insects.

Both black and white storks were often seen in Israel. White storks nest as high as possible—often on chimneys. But since houses in the Holy Land had low, flat roofs, storks nested instead in the fir trees (Ps. 104:17). In spite of their commendable features, storks were considered unclean (Lev. 11:19; Deut. 14:18).

Swallow. The swallow is a migratory bird quite familiar to residents of the Holy Land. Frequently on the move to warmer climates, swallows gather in huge flocks to travel thousands of miles. A chattering flock can make quite a racket (Is. 38:14). The psalmist makes an interesting distinction between the sparrow, who finds a home, and the swallow, who gets a nest (Ps. 84:3). Only a permanent resident needs a home. Some translations render the Hebrew word for swallow as thrush (Jer. 8:7, NIV, NASB) or wryneck (Jer. 8:7, REB).

Swallows spend most of their time in the air, catching insects on the wing. They are beautiful birds, brightly colored, with forked tails.

Swan. Swans are seen occasionally in Israel. As vegetarians, they are related to ducks and geese. Alternate translations of the Hebrew term for swan include ibis, stork, white owl, and water hen. These are better translations, since there seems to be no reason why swans would have been considered unclean (Lev. 11:18, KJV).

Swift. The swift is a small migratory bird often confused with the swallow. Although they are similar, the two birds come from different families. Swifts are strong fliers that can travel short distances at over 100 m.p.h. They spend much of their time feeding on airborne insects.

The prophet Jeremiah must have known the migrating habits of the swift. He spoke of this bird and others that “observe the time of their coming.” Unlike these birds, he observed, the rebellious people of the nation of Judah “do not know the judgment of the Lord” (Jer. 8:7).

Swine. The Hebrew people had nothing to do with pigs, but these animals still received much attention in the Bible. In Psalm 80:13, Israel’s enemies were likened to a “boar out of the woods.” Vicious wild pigs (boars) ranged throughout Canaan. Owners of vineyards hated them, because they devoured grapes and trampled their vines. Dogs and men alike feared their razor-sharp tusks. In modern times, the boar is the largest game animal in Israel.

Domesticated pigs (swine) were also raised in Canaan—by Gentiles or unorthodox Jews. Pigs were ceremonially unclean, supposedly because they did not “chew the cud.” The symbol of greed and filth, pigs symbolized a person’s unredeemed nature (2 Pet. 2:22). Jesus told a story of a prodigal son who really hit bottom when he had to take care of hogs and even eat food intended for them (Luke 15:15–16).

Tawny Owl (see Owl).

Thrush (see Swift).

Tortoise (see Turtle).

Turtle. Both turtles and tortoises (a type often found in Canaan) and their eggs and meat were eaten. In Numbers 6:10; Song of Solomon 2:12; and Jeremiah 8:7 (KJV), “turtle” is simply an abbreviation of “turtledove.” The context clearly indicates that a bird is meant, not the silent, slow-moving turtle.

Turtledove (see Dove).

Unicorn. A unicorn is a mythical creature, similar to a horse, with a single spiral horn growing out of its forehead. In the Middle Ages, the unicorn appeared in paintings as a symbol of purity. Many people believed an animal like this really lived. In the Bible, most verses that refer to the unicorn emphasize its great strength (Num. 23:22; 24:8; Deut. 33:17). The biblical writer may have had the aurochs in mind.

This horned wild ox was so large and powerful that no one could control or tame it (Job 39:9–10; Ps. 22:21; 92:10; Is. 34:7).

Viper (see Snake).

Vulture. Vultures are large, loathsome members of the hawk family. The largest species have a wingspread of 9 to 10 feet. Most vultures have bare heads and necks. However, the lammergeier (bearded vulture) has dirty-white neck feathers and a tassel of dark feathers hanging from its beak. The Egyptian vulture likewise has neck feathers. A griffon's long neck is covered with fine white down.

The lammergeier is also called the ossifrage (see Lev. 11:13; Deut. 14:12) or the gier eagle (Lev. 11:18; Deut. 14:17).

Vultures feed on dead bodies. For this reason they were considered UNCLEAN animals by the Hebrew people (Lev. 11:13; Deut. 14:12–13). Other versions of the Bible translate the word as buzzard, falcon, bustard, or carrion vulture.

Wasp. These overgrown relatives of bees are known for their painful sting. Wasps are common throughout the Holy Land. Hornets are a large species of wasp. So savage were these insects when disturbed that Egyptian soldiers used hornets as a symbol of their military might. When the people of Israel were marching toward the Promised Land, God promised He would send hornets before them to drive the Canaanites out of the land (Ex. 23:28). Ancient writers claim that entire tribes were sometimes driven out of a country by wasps or hornets.

Weasel. These animals live in almost every country, including Israel. They are small and furry, with thin, long bodies and short legs. Weasels eat small animals and have a reputation for stealing eggs. The Bible mentions them only in Leviticus 11:29, in the list of unclean animals. Some modern sources believe the mole (NASB) or mole-rat (REB) was meant in this verse.

Whale (see Crocodile; Sea Monster).

Wild Boar (see Swine).

Wild Donkey (see Donkey).

Wild Goat (see Goat).

Wild Ox (see Cattle; Unicorn).

Wolf. Wolves were a menace to the sheep farmers of Canaan. The first dogs were probably tamed wolf pups. Perhaps this kinship enabled wolves to lurk near sheepfolds and gain their reputation for treachery.

Of his youngest son, the patriarch Jacob said: “Benjamin is a ravenous wolf” (Gen. 49:27). The Hebrew word translated “ravenous” means “to rip and tear,” indicating the bloodthirsty nature of the wolf. Wolves seem particularly cruel because they seek out the weak, old, and defenseless as victims. The flow of blood incites them to rip and tear even more with their powerful jaws.

In many Bible references, wolves represent ruthless enemies. Jesus warned of false prophets “who come . . . in sheep’s clothing, but inwardly . . . are ravenous wolves” (Matt. 7:15).

Worm. Worms have no backbone, legs, or eyes, although their bodies are sensitive to light and temperature. But they do play a useful role. They improve the soil by working decaying vegetation into the earth and aerating it with their tunnels.

The Bible speaks both literally and figuratively of worms. The word “worm” also refers to a worm-like creature, such as insect larva. For instance, the palmerworm and cankerworm of Joel 1:4 may be caterpillars, which is the larval stage of various moths. (The NKJV and NIV, however, translate the words as various kinds of locusts.) Grub is another word used for worm in various translations (Is. 51:8, REB, NASB). Job 7:5 and other passages that refer to infestation of worms probably mean maggots, the larvae of flies. Decaying matter often teems with tiny wormlike maggots.

Some worms, such as tapeworms and pinworms, are parasites that invade the human body. Thus Herod could be described as “eaten by worms” (Acts 12:23).

The common earthworm also appears in the Bible. Micah 7:17 refers to worms (snakes, NKJV) coming out of their holes. Perhaps it was an earthworm also that God appointed to strike at the root of Jonah’s shade (Jon. 4:7). The psalmist lamented: “I am a worm . . . and despised” (Ps. 22:6). Job claimed kinship with the lowly worm (Job 17:14). Isaiah 41:14 uses “you worm Jacob” as a metaphor of weakness. The Israelites associated worms and fire with the place reserved for the ungodly dead (Is. 66:24; Mark 9:44, 48).

Wryneck (see Swallow).

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

- A flock of storks in the Huleh Nature Reserve in Israel.

ANIMALS, UNCLEAN (see UNCLEAN, UNCLEANNESS).

ANIMALS, WORSHIP OF—a form of pagan worship practiced in the ancient world, especially by the Egyptians, who held certain animals sacred. Some scholars believe that Israel's fashioning of the golden calf during the time of Moses was an imitation of Egyptian animal worship. Both the Old and New Testaments forbid such worship (Ex. 20:2–5; Deut. 5:6–9; Rom. 1:22–25). Also see GODS, PAGAN.

ANISE (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

ANKLE CHAIN—a chain of precious metal that linked a pair of ANKLETS, decorative rings worn around a person's ankles, in Bible times. Ankle chains forced the wearer to take small steps in rapid fashion. Also see DRESS OF THE BIBLE.

ANKLETS—rings of precious metals worn around the ankle. Anklets were popular in the ancient world, and archaeologists have unearthed many different types. They varied greatly in size and design. Apparently, some people who wore them even attached small bells to the anklets to make them jingle (Is. 3:16). Some anklets were hollow. This design increased the sound when they were struck together. Some scholars think the sound of anklets joined with an ANKLE CHAIN may have announced the approach of Jeroboam's wife (1 Kin. 14:6).

ANNA [AN ah] (favor)—a widow, daughter of Phanuel of the tribe of Asher (Luke 2:36). She was at the temple in Jerusalem when Mary and Joseph brought Jesus to be dedicated (Luke 2:27). Anna recognized Jesus as the long-awaited Messiah (Luke 2:37–38).

ANNAS [AN us] (grace of the Lord)—one of the high priests at Jerusalem, along with CAIAPHAS, when John the Baptist began his ministry, about A.D. 26 (Luke 3:2). Quirinius, governor of Syria, appointed Annas as high priest about A.D. 6 or 7. Although Annas was deposed by Valerius Gratus, the Procurator of Judea, about A.D. 15, he was still the most influential of the priests and continued to carry the title of high priest (Luke 3:2; Acts 4:6).

After his removal, Annas was officially succeeded by each of his five sons, one grandson, and his son-in-law CAIAPHAS, the high priest who presided at the trial of Jesus (Matt. 26:3, 57; John 18:13–14). During His trial, Jesus was first taken to Annas, who then sent Jesus to Caiaphas (John 18:13, 24). Both Annas and Caiaphas were among the principal examiners when Peter and John were arrested (Acts 4:6).

ANNUNCIATION—the announcement by the angel Gabriel (Luke 1:26–38) to the Virgin Mary of the forthcoming birth of Jesus. The angel told Mary that the Holy Spirit would cause her to conceive a child, and "that Holy One who is to be born will be called the Son of God" (Luke 1:35). Also see VIRGIN BIRTH.

ANOINT, ANOINTING—to authorize, or set apart, a person for a particular work or service (Is. 61:1). The anointed person belonged to God in a special sense. The phrases, "the Lord's anointed," "God's anointed," "My anointed," "Your anointed," or "His anointed" are used of Saul (1 Sam. 26:9, 11), David (2 Sam. 22:51), and Solomon (2 Chr. 6:42). In the New Testament, all who are Christ's disciples are said to be anointed; they are God's very own, set apart and commissioned for service (2 Cor. 1:21).

Priests, kings, and prophets were anointed. Oil was poured on the head of the person being anointed (Ex. 29:7). Kings were set apart through the ritual of anointing, which was performed by a prophet who acted in God's power and authority (1 Sam. 15:1). The Old Testament also records two instances of the anointing of a prophet (1 Kin. 19:16; Is. 61:1).

Jesus the Messiah is described as "anointed." This description is found in the psalms of the Old Testament that prophesy the coming of Christ and in the preaching of the apostle Peter in the Book of Acts. "Messiah" comes from the Hebrew word for "anointed" and "Christ" comes from the Greek word.

In the New Testament, anointing was frequently used in connection with healing. The Holy Spirit's activities in a believer's life are pictured in terms associated with anointing. Jesus' disciples anointed the sick (Mark 6:13), and James instructed the elders of the church to anoint the sick with oil (James 5:14). This anointing was for healing.

Anointing in the New Testament also refers to the anointing of the Holy Spirit, which brings understanding (1 John 2:20, 27). This anointing is not only for kings, priests, and prophets; it is for everyone who believes in the Lord Jesus Christ. The anointing occurs physically with a substance such as oil, myrrh, or balsam. But this is also a spiritual anointing, as the Holy Spirit anoints a person's heart and mind with the love and truth of God.

Photo by Howard Vos

• King Ashurnasirpal of Assyria being anointed by a winged deity, in a carving from his excavated palace.

ANSWER (see WITNESS).

ANT (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

ANTEDILUVIANS—the people who lived before the FLOOD. They possessed some skills that compare with modern technology. For example, Cain built cities (Gen. 4:17), Jubal was a musician (Gen. 4:21), and Tubal-Cain was an "instructor of every craftsman in bronze and iron" (Gen. 4:22). Such crafts imply the skills to mine, smelt, and purify brass and iron. That Noah could construct his huge ark is witness to the engineering skills and tools that were available. The antediluvians also lived long lives (Gen. 5:5–31).

Before the Flood, sin was rampant. Life was marked by disobedience, murder, and immorality: "The earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence" (Gen. 6:11). Humanity's spiritual condition was appalling.

Both Noah and Enoch preached to the antediluvians (2 Pet. 2:5; Jude 14–15). Their preaching, however, was not heeded; and the sinful world was destroyed by the Flood. Noah was the only righteous man whom God could find on the entire earth at the time: "Noah was a just man, perfect in his generations. Noah walked with God" (Gen. 6:9).

In the New Testament, Jesus compared the antediluvians—who were "eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage"—to the people who will be living in the end times (Matt. 24:37–41). His words point to the need for watchfulness, for "as it was in the days of Noah, so it will be in the days of the Son of Man" (Luke 17:26).

ANTELOPE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

ANTHOTHIJAH [an thoe THIGH juh]—a form of ANTOTHIJAH.

ANTHROPOMORPHISM—the practice of describing God in human terms, as if He had feet (Ex. 24:10), hands (John 10:29), a face (Matt. 18:10), a heart (Hos. 11:8), and so forth. Although the Old and New Testaments deny any literal similarity of form between God and His creatures (Job 9:32; John 4:24), the Bible frequently uses such human language to affirm that God is personal and active in His creation.

The appearance of Jesus, God's Son, in a human body is a literal revelation of God in human form (John 1:14). Jesus was "in the form of God," but He took "the form of a servant," the "likeness" and "appearance" of a human being (Phil. 2:6–8), to save us and reveal the depth of God's love (John 14:9; 1 John 1:1–2). Therefore, with respect to Jesus, we can literally speak of God in human form. Also see GOD.

ANTHROPOPATHISM—the practice of describing God as if He displayed human emotions, such as jealousy (Ex. 20:5), anger (Ps.

77:9), love (Jon. 4:2), and mercy (Ps. 103:8). Although the Old and New Testaments plainly show that God is beyond our human experiences (Is. 40:18; 1 Cor. 2:14; 1 Tim. 6:16), the Bible frequently uses such language to declare that God is personal and that He responds to the actions of His creatures. Also see GOD.

ANTICHRIST, THE—a false prophet and evil being who will set himself up against Christ and the people of God in the last days before the SECOND COMING. The term is used only in the writings of John in the New Testament. It refers to one who stands in opposition to all that Jesus Christ represents (1 John 2:18, 22; 4:3; 2 John 7). John wrote that several antichrists existed already in his day—false teachers who denied the deity and the incarnation of Christ—but that the supreme Antichrist of history would appear at some future time.

The Antichrist's primary work is deception, which also characterizes SATAN in his attempts to undermine the work of God in the world. Satan's deception began in the Garden of Eden (Genesis 3) and will continue until the end of time. The DRAGON (or serpent) of Revelation 12 is Satan, the Serpent mentioned in Genesis 3. Thus the thread of Satan's deceptive work may be traced from Genesis through Revelation. That work reaches its climax in the Antichrist, who receives his authority and power from the dragon, Satan (Rev. 13:4).

The work of Satan through the Antichrist is clearly rooted in the prophecies of Daniel. Daniel spoke of a dreadful beast with ten horns and one little horn (Dan. 7:7–8). The Ancient of Days will kill the beast and throw it in the fire (Dan. 7:11). Then, according to Daniel, one like the Son of Man will receive the everlasting kingdom (Dan. 7:13–14).

The Antichrist will be the sum total of the beasts referred to in Daniel 7 (Rev. 13:1–4). He will speak arrogant, boastful words; and he will be aided by a FALSE PROPHET, who will make the entire earth worship him (Rev. 13:11–12) and receive his mark (Rev. 13:16–17). The number of the beast, says John, is 666—a mysterious code name.

Those who worship the Antichrist will experience certain doom through the wrath of God (Rev. 14:9–11). The Antichrist makes war against Christ and His army, but he is captured and is "cast alive into the lake of fire burning with brimstone" (Rev. 19:20). He is later joined by the DEVIL; together they "will be tormented day and night forever and ever” (Rev. 20:10). The devil, the BEAST (or Antichrist), and the false prophet form a kind of unholy trinity, counterfeiting Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. After much wickedness and suffering has been loosed against Christ and His people, the satanic rebellion will be crushed by the power of God.

Although the apostle Paul does not use the term Antichrist, he surely had the Antichrist in mind when he wrote of the great apostasy, or falling away, that would occur before the return of Christ (2 Thess. 2:1–12). The Antichrist is also called the lawless one (v. 9) who, empowered and inspired by Satan, will lead the final rebellion against God (v. 3, REB), but will be destroyed at the coming of the Lord. Paul urges believers to stand firm in the faith and not be deceived by the Antichrist who will display “all kinds of counterfeit miracles, signs and wonders” (2 Thess. 2:9, NIV).

The main reason the Bible discusses the Antichrist is not to encourage idle speculation, but to warn believers not to be misled by his deceit (Matt. 24:4–5, 23–24). The times when the Antichrist will appear will be very hard for the faithful. They need to be prepared with special instructions on how to deal with this unsettling event.

ANTIMONY (see MINERALS OF THE BIBLE).

ANTIOCH OF PISIDIA [AN tih ock, pih SID ih uh]—a city of southern Asia Minor in Phrygia, situated just north of the territory of Pisidia (see Map 7, D–2). Antioch was an important first-century commercial center and an important center for the spread of the gospel. Founded by Seleucus I Nicator (about 300 B.C.) and named for his father Antiochus, it became a great center for commerce and was inhabited by many Jews.

The apostle Paul preached in this city’s synagogue and founded a church there during his first missionary journey (Acts 13:14–49). Just as Antioch exerted great cultural and political influence over the surrounding area, so also it became a strong base from which to launch the church’s evangelistic outreach (Acts 13:42–49). In reaction to Paul’s success, the Jews at Antioch caused some influential women to turn against the gospel and had Paul driven out of the city (Acts 13:50).

ANTIOCH OF SYRIA [AN tih ock, SIHR ih uh]—the capital of the Roman province of Syria that played an important part in the first-century expansion of the church. Antioch was situated on the east bank of the Orontes River, about 27 kilometers (16.5 miles) from the Mediterranean Sea and 485 kilometers (300 miles) north of Jerusalem (see Map 6, D–2). The city was founded about 300 B.C. by Seleucus I Nicator, one of the three successors to ALEXANDER the Great, and named for his father Antiochus.

The early history of the church is closely connected with Antioch of Syria. One of the first seven "deacons," Nicolas, was a "proselyte from Antioch" (Acts 6:5). After the stoning of Stephen (Acts 7:54–60), great persecution caused certain disciples to flee from Jerusalem to Antioch where they preached the Gospel to the Jews (Acts 8:1; 11:19). Others arrived later and had success preaching to the Gentiles (Acts 11:20–21).

When the church leaders at Jerusalem heard of this success in Antioch, they sent Barnabas to visit the church there (Acts 11:25–26).

Apparently, Paul and Barnabas used Antioch as the base for their missionary journeys into Asia Minor (Acts 13:1–3; 15:36–41; 18:22–23). Following the first missionary journey, Antioch became the scene of an important dispute. Certain men from Judea taught that Gentile converts must be circumcised and follow other rules for converts to Judaism before becoming Christians (Acts 15:1–2). This theological disagreement led to a church council at Jerusalem. Paul and Barnabas were sent here to report how God had given them success in bringing the gospel to the Gentiles. The council decided that Gentile converts did not have to be circumcised. Antioch is now known as Antakya, in modern-day Turkey.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Tyche, the goddess of good fortune, connected with the pagan worship of the residents of Antioch of Syria.

ANTIOCHUS [an TIE oh kus] (withstander)—the name of 13 members of the Seleucid dynasty of Syria. The SELEUCIDS governed Palestine from 280 B.C., following the division of ALEXANDER the Great's empire, until the Roman commander Pompey made Syria a Roman province in 63 B.C. The Book of Daniel prophesies about the following three of these rulers, although it mentions none of them by name:

1. Antiochus II (261–246 B.C.), surnamed Theos ("god"). He was a drunken, immoral ruler easily swayed by favorites. The prophecy in Daniel 11:6 probably refers to him; for he divorced his wife Laodice, who was his half sister, to marry Berenice, the daughter of Ptolemy, the ruler of Egypt.
2. Antiochus III (223–187 B.C.), surnamed Megas ("the Great"). He was the second son of Seleucus II Callinicus and the successor of his older brother, Seleucus III Soter. The Seleucids of Syria and the Ptolemies of Egypt waged a continual struggle for control in Palestine. Antiochus III finally defeated the Egyptian general Scopas at Pani, or Panias (the New Testament CAESAREA PHILIPPI), in 198 B.C., giving the Seleucids complete control of Palestine. This victory eventually led to the worst persecution the Jews had yet endured. Some scholars see Daniel 11:10–19 as a reference to Antiochus III, but the allusion is vague.

3. Antiochus IV (175–164 B.C.), surnamed Epiphanes (God manifest) but called by his Jewish enemies Epimanes (madman). Antiochus IV was one of the cruelest rulers of all time. Like his father, Antiochus III the Great, he was enterprising and ambitious; however, he had a tendency to cruelty that bordered on madness. His primary aim—to unify his empire by spreading Greek civilization and culture—brought him into direct conflict with the Jews. This conflict broke into open rebellion in 167 B.C. Accounts of these conflicts are found in the apocryphal book of 2 Maccabees.

   The revolt began with Antiochus' edict that sought to unite all the peoples of his kingdom in religion, law, and custom. The Jews were the only people who would not adhere to this edict. Antiochus issued regulations against observing the Sabbath, practicing circumcision, and keeping all food laws. These regulations were followed by the "ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION" (Dan. 11:31)—the desecration of the altar of the burnt offering in the temple in Jerusalem. Jews were forced to participate in heathen festivities and were put to death if they were caught with the Book of the Law in their possession.

   As the revolt, led by the pious priest Mattathias and his sons, gained momentum, the Jews united to overthrow Seleucid domination of their land. The Syrians were routed and the temple was cleansed on the 25th of Chislev, 165 B.C. This cleansing is now observed by the Jews as the Feast of Lights (Hanukkah), around December 25. According to ancient writers, Antiochus IV withdrew into the East following his defeat. He died in Persia a madman. The "little horn" of Daniel 8:9 is a reference to Antiochus IV Epiphanes.

• Coin issued by Antiochus IV Epiphanes, Syrian ruler whose desecration of the Jewish temple triggered the revolt of the Maccabees.

ANTIPAS [AN tih pas] (against all)—the name of two New Testament men:

1. A son of Herod the Great. (See HEROD ANTIPAS.)
2. A Christian martyr of the church of Pergamos (Rev. 2:13). According to tradition, he became bishop of Pergamos.

ANTIPATRIS [an TIP uh tris] (belonging to Antipater)—a city built on the Plain of Sharon by Herod the Great and named in honor of his father, Antipater (see Map 6, A–3). Located on the Roman military road between Jerusalem and Caesarea, Antipatris was the lodging place for the apostle Paul and the Roman soldiers who were transporting him as a prisoner to Felix, the governor of Judea (Acts 23:31). The city was the site of the Old Testament APHEK (Josh. 12:18; 1 Sam. 4:1; 29:1).

ANTITYPE [AN tih type]—a fulfillment or completion of an earlier truth revealed in the Bible. Baptism in the New Testament, for example, as an expression of one’s salvation, fulfills the function served by Noah’s ark in the Old Testament. Thus, Noah’s ark was a type, and baptism was an antitype (1 Pet. 3:21).

ANTONIA, TOWER OF [an TONE ih ah]—a fortress-palace rebuilt by Herod the Great and situated at the northwest corner of the temple area. Herod named the rebuilt tower after his friend, Mark Antony.

The fortress was rectangular in shape, measuring about 165 meters (490 feet) by 87 meters (260 feet), with walls about 19 meters (60 feet) high. Each corner had a high tower, three of which were 24 meters (75 feet) high. The tower in the northwest corner, which overlooked the temple area, however, was about 32 meters (100 feet) high. Stairs connected the Antonia with the temple area (see Acts 21:35, 40).

Soldiers from the Antonia ("the barracks") rescued the apostle Paul from enraged crowds on several occasions (Acts 21:27–36; 22:24; 23:10). Paul was held in the fortress in protective custody until a military escort took him to Caesarea (Acts 23:12–24, 31–35).

ANTOTHIJAH [an toe THIE jah] (belonging to Anathoth)—a descendant of Shashak (1 Chr. 8:24; Anthothijah, NASB, NIV, NRSV).

ANUB [A nubb]—a son of Koz in the genealogy of Judah (1 Chr. 4:8).

ANVIL (see TOOLS OF THE BIBLE).

APE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

APELLES [a PELL ez]—a Christian at Rome to whom the apostle Paul sent greetings, describing Apelles as "approved in Christ" (Rom. 16:10).

APHARSACHITES [a FAR sack ites]—KJV word for an eastern tribe from beyond the Euphrates River settled in Samaria by the king of Assyria (Ezra 5:6; 6:6).

APHARSATHCHITES [a FAR sath kites]—KJV word for an unknown people of the Assyrian Empire. Apparently they were Assyrian or Persian colonists (Ezra 4:9) settled in Samaria by Ashurbanipal, king of Assyria (Ezra 4:10). They are probably the same people as the APHARSACHITES of Ezra 5:6; 6:6.

APHEK [A fek]—the name of four ancient Canaanite towns:

1. A city on the plain of Sharon. Joshua conquered the king of Aphek while taking the Promised Land (Josh. 12:18). Aphek (1 Sam. 4:1; 29:1) is to be identified with New Testament ANTIPATRIS.

2. A town mentioned in Joshua 13:4 as located in the northern edge of Canaanite territory.
3. A town in the territory alloted to the tribe of Asher (Josh 19:30; Aphik, Judg. 1:31). The Asherites were unable to expel the Canaanites from this city.
4. A town east of the Sea of Galilee (see Map 3, A–3) where God gave Ahab victory over Ben-Hadad and the Syrian army (1 Kin. 20:26–30). Later the prophet Elisha, while on his deathbed, prophesied Israel's victory at Aphek over the Syrian army (2 Kin. 13:17).

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

• Site of ancient Aphek, a Phillistine city conquered by Joshua (Josh. 12:7, 18).

APHEKAH [a FEE kuh]—a village in the hill country of Judah (Josh. 15:53).

APHIAH [a FIE ah]—a Benjamite who was an ancestor of King Saul (1 Sam. 9:1).

APHIK [A fick]—a form of APHEK No. 3.

APHRAH [AF ruh]—a form of BETH APHRAH.

APHSES [AF sez]—a form of HAPPIZZEZ.

APIS [A pis]—the sacred bull-god of Memphis (the biblical NOPH) worshiped by the ancient Egyptians (Jer. 46:15; REB, NRSV). Apis was thought to be the reincarnation of Ptah, a creator god. Some scholars believe the Apis bull served as the model for the golden calf the Israelites made at Mount Sinai (Exodus 32).

APOCALYPSE [a POCK ah lips] (see REVELATION OF JOHN).

APOCALYPTIC LITERATURE [a pock uh LIP tik]—a certain type of Jewish and Christian literature written in Egypt and Palestine during the period from 200 B.C. to A.D. 200. The word apocalypsis is a Greek word meaning "revelation." Therefore, apocalyptic literature is a special kind of writing that arose among the Jews and Christians to reveal certain mysteries about heaven and earth, humankind and God, angels and demons, the life of the world today, and the world to come.

Apocalyptic literature probably arose in the tradition of the PROPHETS of Israel, but it came several centuries after their time. The last prophet of Israel, Malachi, wrote about 450 B.C. Two books in the Bible—the Book of Daniel in the Old Testament and the Book of Revelation in the New Testament—are good examples of the apocalyptic literary form.

The following additional Jewish and Christian books are also classified as apocalyptic by most Bible scholars: Apocalypse of Abraham, Apocalypse of Baruch, Ascension of Isaiah, Assumption of Moses, 2 Baruch, Book of Jubilees, 1 and 2 Enoch, Life of Adam and Eve, the Sybilline Oracles, Testament of Abraham, and the Testaments of the 12 Patriarchs. Most of these books are found in the PSEUDEPIGRAPHA of the Old Testament.

In 1974 several apocalyptic books and fragments were found among the Dead Sea Scrolls, including the War Scroll and Book of Mysteries. In the second and third century A.D., Christian writers produced a number of apocalypses, including The Revelation of Peter, The Revelation of Paul, and The Revelation of Thomas. All these writings are included in a collection known as the New Testament Apocrypha.

Most of the apocalyptic books were written by Jews in reaction to the oppression of their people by foreign powers. Often they wrote to explain why evil seemed to prosper while the righteous suffered. The Christian apocalyptic writings were influenced by these earlier Jewish works. The Book of Revelation in the New Testament uses symbols and images that occur in the Book of Enoch, and the book known as 4 Ezra, written about A.D. 100, seems to parallel the New Testament book of Revelation in several ways. The close similarities between Jewish and Christian apocalyptic literature explains why scholars group them into one category and study both Jewish and Christian apocalyptic literature together.

Characteristics. Apocalyptic literature has certain literary devices or styles that set it apart from other literature.

Visions—Although other types of literature use visions to communicate (see Isaiah 6), apocalyptic literature uses visions as a way of revealing secrets from heaven about the present and the future of humankind. Often these visions are caused by some trauma or major personal or social event that created a crisis in the writer's experience (compare Rev. 1:10 with 4 Ezra 3:1). These visions lead in turn to further explanations about coming events or other visions and dreams.

Ethics—As a result of these visionary experiences, the writer draws ethical conclusions. In Revelation 2–3, John writes seven letters to seven churches in western Asia Minor. Each letter is addressed to specific issues facing the church. These letters were written after John saw a vision and was commissioned by God to write (Rev. 1:19). They call the churches to specific ethical or moral decisions.

Pseudonymous authorship—The Book of Revelation in the New Testament is the only book of apocalyptic literature that gives the name of the author. All other apocalyptic books are attributed to famous prophets of the past, such as Ezra, Enoch, Baruch, Jeremiah, Abraham, Moses, and Adam. The reason why these authors identified their writings with great persons in Israel's history probably was to add credibility to their work. A vision from Enoch, for example, would carry more weight than if it were from some contemporary writer.

Powerful symbolism—Each of the apocalyptic books is rich in symbolism. The reader's imagination is stretched. Those who read the apocalyptic books just after they had been written knew the meaning of the symbols used by the author. The events of the time, evil rulers, and pagan nations are symbolized by distorted animals and beasts, horrible signs from heaven, or a chaotic flowing of waters. But the people who are faithful to God are portrayed as majestic animals, like a lion, or a well-kept plant. The purpose of this symbolism was to make the contrast between good and evil obvious to the reader.

Messages. Through the apocalyptic books, the authors communicated several important messages to their readers. The following themes occur in all the apocalyptic writings.

The end is coming soon—Throughout these books the authors write about the arrival of the end times within the near future: “For the youth of this world is past, and the strength of the creation already exhausted and the advent of the times is very short, yea, they have passed by: and the pitcher is near to the cistern, and the ship to the port, and the course of the journey to the city, and life to its consummation” (2 Baruch 85:10).

In the other books various images are used to spell out the coming end. This apocalyptic view of the last days gives a certain urgency to these writings.

The whole universe involved—The end of the world is not a solitary event for the earth alone; it extends to the whole universe. This planet is only a part of a greater tragedy. An awful time is in store, for all nations of the earth will “be seized with great panic” (4 Ezra 5:1).

History divided into fixed segments—Along with a pessimistic view of history, the apocalyptic books declare that history has been determined by God before creation. World history is divided into fixed time periods. These fixed segments have been established, and mankind simply lives out the already established drama.

History may be divided into two periods—this age, which is ruled by Satan and his legions, and the age to come, in which wickedness will be abolished and God will rule supreme.

Angels and demons—Apocalyptic literature is filled with angels and demons who are actively involved in the drama of events. The problem of evil is explained by pointing to the demons and Satan himself as the forces that cause evil. Angels who have not fallen (1 Enoch 6–36) are used by God to protect and serve his faithful people. The Books of Enoch, Testament of the Twelve Patriarchs, and Jubilees give detailed descriptions of the task of angels and demons. These truths are also echoed by the Book of Revelation in the New Testament.

The New Heaven and the New Earth. The end times as portrayed in the apocalyptic writings return to the beginning of creation. Out of heaven will come a new heaven and a new earth. The old will be destroyed, replaced by a new creation where God will rule (Revelation 20–22; 2 Enoch 65:7–10; 2 Baruch 48). Only those who have been faithful to God's law will be saved.

The Kingdom of God. Enoch 41 describes the place from which all the world will be judged. Other apocalyptic books describe the Kingdom of God as the ultimate rule in the new creation (Enoch 84:3; Rev. 11:15; Dan. 4:17). All through the apocalyptic literature the image of the Kingdom or rule of God is central. All events are determined from God's throne.

A Messiah. A Messiah or mediator between God and humankind appears in most of the apocalyptic writings as one who accomplishes the final salvation of the world. This figure appears either as a Messiah, a son of man, a chosen one, or a mediator.

Glory. The righteous have suffered in this world because it has been ruled by Satan. But this situation will change in the future. This vision of glory appears as a word of hope or encouragement to the faithful—those who trust in God. Glory will come to God's people. They have the power necessary to live full and meaningful lives in this world now.

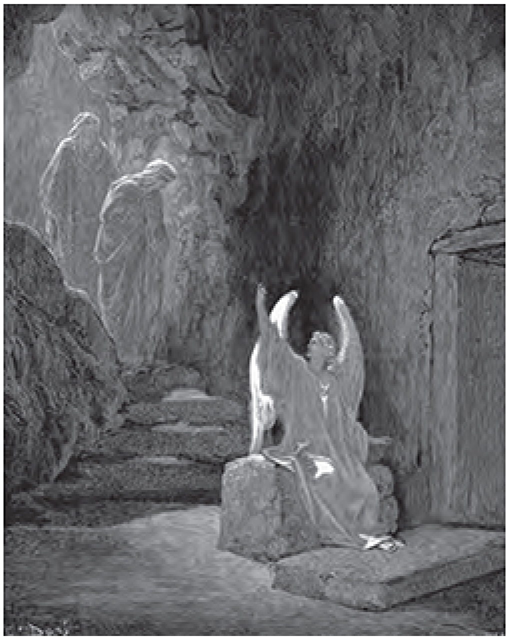

Illustration by Gustave Doré

- Illustration of the two Mary’s at Jesus’ tomb.

Illustration image by Fotokostic

- Illustration of a demonic beast in apocalyptic literature.

APOCRYPHA, THE [A POCK rih fuh]—a group of books written during a time of turmoil in the history of the Jewish people, from about 190 B.C. to about A.D. 210. These books fall into two main divisions, Old Testament apocryphal books and New Testament apocryphal books.

The Old Testament books, 15 in number, were written during the period from about 190 B.C. to about A.D. 70, when the Jewish people were in rebellion against the repression of foreign military rulers. These books were excluded from some early versions of the Old Testament but included in others. This explains why Bibles used by Roman Catholics contain the Old Testament Apocrypha, while they are not included in most Protestant editions of the Bible.

The books known as the New Testament Apocrypha were written during the second and third centuries A.D., long after the death of the apostles and other eyewitnesses to the life and ministry of Jesus. None of these books were included in the New Testament because they were judged as unworthy and not authoritative by officials of the early church.

The Old Testament Apocrypha. The series of events that led to the writing of the Old Testament apocryphal books began in 167 B.C., when the Jews revolted against the king of Syria, Antiochus IV Epiphanes. A pious Jewish priest, Mattathias, and his sons led the rebellion. Mattathias refused to obey Antiochus' command that the Jews worship his gods and offer a pagan sacrifice. Mattathias killed the Syrian official as well as a fellow Jew who was offering the sacrifice and declared: "Follow me, every one of you who is zealous for the law and strives to maintain the covenant. He and his sons took to the hills, leaving all their belongings behind in the town" (1 Macc. 2:27–28, REB).

Guerrilla warfare against the Syrians followed, until the Jews established control of Palestine. Early in the revolt one of the sons of Mattathias, Judas Maccabeus (Maccabeus means "hammerer"), cleansed the temple in Jerusalem from the pollution of the Syrian sacrifices. This day has been celebrated annually by the Jews since that time in the festival known as Chanukah (or Hanukkah), the Feast of Dedication (John 10:22).

These events helped stir the Jewish people to rededicate themselves to the law of Moses. In the fight to establish their independence and uphold their traditions, some Jewish authors wrote to encourage their own people. The apocryphal books show clearly that the authors were enthusiastic for faith in God and the study of His Word.

From 142 to 63 B.C. the Jews were led in their rebellion against foreign oppression by the family of Mattathias, known as the Hasmoneans. Simon Asamonaios was the grandfather of Mattathias, and his name was applied to all the members of this great family. In spite of the respect given to the Hasmoneans in the early years of their influence, civil strife again plagued the Jews. The Syrians continued to fight for power over the land of Israel. Judas Maccabeus finally made an agreement with Rome that the Romans would come to the aid of the Jews if they should need assistance in their struggle. About a century later some of the Jews did appeal to Rome for help. Pompey, a powerful Roman general, brought order to Jerusalem and made Judea part of a Roman province.

In 37 B.C. the land of Israel, called Palestine, was placed under the rule of a Roman official, Herod the Great (37–4 B.C.). Herod was actually a Roman vassal and was hated by most of the Jews. In spite of this hostility, Herod managed to launch an ambitious building program in Palestine. He created the magnificent port city of CAESAREA on the Mediterranean Sea and improved the temple in Jerusalem. The western wall still stands today in Jerusalem as evidence of Herod's skill as a builder.

After Herod's death (4 B.C.), his sons divided Palestine into four regions, ruling the land with varying degrees of success. In A.D. 66 the Jews again grew angry over the foreign domination of their land. Under the encouragement of radical freedom fighters known as ZEALOTS, the Jews started a disastrous war with the Romans. This led to the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple in A.D. 70 and the end of the Jewish nation.

This brief historical sketch provides the background for the Old Testament apocryphal writings. The Jewish people were continually wondering what God was saying to them through their struggles. Out of their experiences arose the books of the Apocrypha. Following are brief descriptions of the books in this Old Testament collection.

Baruch—This book is a collection of materials written during the period from 150 B.C. to 60 B.C. Set in the period of the prophet Jeremiah and his secretary Baruch around 585 B.C., it actually speaks to Jews who were living during the period of the Hasmoneans (142–63 B.C.). It was written originally in Hebrew and was later translated into Greek.

Baruch contains a letter (1:1–14), a prayer-sermon (1:15—3:8), a hymn (3:9—4:4), and a lament (4:5—5:9). Jerusalem had fallen into the hands of the enemy, but this book declared that God will not forget His people. The refrain, "Take courage, my children, Cry out to God, and he will deliver you from the power and hand of the enemy." (4:21, REB), echoes throughout Baruch. Some scholars believe Baruch was reworked many times and then was put into its final form by a rabbi in Palestine after the destruction of the temple in A.D. 70.

Bel and the Dragon—This book is an addition to the Old Testament's Book of Daniel and was written by a Jew in Palestine around 50 B.C. The author used Babylonian mythology to declare that the God of the Hebrews can outwit the tricks of the priests of Babylon through the faith of the prophet Daniel. Daniel demonstrated that there is no God other than the Lord God of the Hebrews and that Bel, the supposed God of Babylon, does not exist. In this book Daniel also killed a dragon in a clever way. This was the author's way of showing that pagan gods are worshiped because the priests deceive the people. Only God is worthy of our praise because He is a living God.

Ecclesiasticus, or the Wisdom of Jesus, Son of Sirach—This is a book of wisdom teachings in the Apocrypha. It should not be confused with the Book of Ecclesiastes in the Old Testament. The word Ecclesiasticus means "The Church Book" in Latin. But the title of the Book of Ecclesiastes comes from a Greek word that means "assembly" or "gathering."

Ecclesiasticus is a masterpiece of wisdom literature, organized into teachable units. Many subjects are contained in this work, including faith in God as Creator and Sustainer of life, love of wisdom and ethical conduct, virtue and good deeds, the value of the tradition of the past, proper behavior in eating and drinking, work and commerce, study and teaching, poverty and wealth, and health and sickness. It was written by Jesus ben Eleazar ben Sira, a Jew living in Jerusalem around 190 B.C.

The author of Ecclesiasticus upholds Israel's traditions as a channel through which God's Word is communicated. His essay on the great people in Israel's history gives the reader an appreciation for the kind of people who make our world pleasant and worthwhile. The righteous person receives a reward from God, while the sinner and unbeliever will be punished. The final chapter, 51, contains a beautiful prayer.

Esdras, Books of—The First Book of Esdras is a historical narrative taken from 2 Chronicles 35:1; 36:23; Ezra 1:1–11; 2:1—3:13; 4:1—10:44; and Nehemiah 7:73—8:12 of the Old Testament. It begins with the Passover celebrated by Josiah, the king of Judah (640–609 B.C.). Then the book discusses Josiah's death in the battle of Megiddo and continues with the story of the events leading up to the fall of Jerusalem and the deportation of the Jews to Babylon (586 B.C.). Cyrus, the great king of the Medes who freed the Jews from bondage in Babylon in 539 B.C., is also described.

Included in the Book of 1 Esdras is a description of the building of the temple by the returned exiles in Jerusalem and the problems encountered in its reconstruction. An interesting part of the story is the trouble that the Jews had with the Samaritans. Thus, 1 Esdras provides an excellent background for a better understanding of the conflict between the Jews and Samaritans—a problem mentioned throughout the four gospels in the New Testament.

The story of the three young men (1 Esdras 3:1—5:6) who guarded the Persian King Darius I (522–486 B.C.) is an interesting drama. The guards were instructed to write down what they considered to be the most powerful thing on earth. Their answers and the surprise fourth answer (trust) make this book a delightful contribution to the wisdom writings of the Jewish people.

The purpose of the book of 1 Esdras was to promote the value of worship of the Lord among Jews. It was probably written during the time of the Hasmoneans, about 150 B.C., by a zealous Jew who held to this worship tradition and encouraged others to do the same.

The Second Book of Esdras was probably written during the same period as the Book of REVELATION in the New Testament, around A.D. 96, by a Palestinian Jew who was disillusioned over the destruction of the temple of Jerusalem in A.D. 70. He was puzzled by the apparent evil in a world where God was supposed to be in control.

The word "Babylon" in 2 Esdras is a code name for Rome. According to the writer, Rome had become evil in A.D. 96–100. The book is a good example of Jewish APOCALYPTIC LITERATURE. In many ways it is like the Book of Revelation in the New Testament. The revelations in the book lament the destruction of Jerusalem and deal with the questions of the reward of the righteous, the punishment of the wicked, and the end of the age.

This gloomy book is tied together with a thread of hope. Deliverance for God's people is assured. God is ultimately in control of history, and His Word (in written form) will never disappear.

Esther, Additions to—The Old Testament Book of Esther does not mention the name of God or any worship rituals. Most scholars agree that these apocryphal additions to the Book of Esther were written to connect Esther to the traditions of Israel's faith in a more explicit way.

Jeremiah, Epistle of—This letter is a sermon against idolatry. It asks the readers to beware of false gods. The date of its writing is unknown, although some scholars have suggested a date as early as 541 B.C. Others believe it was written during the time of the invasion of Palestine by the Romans in 63 B.C. Some fragments of the letter were discovered among the DEAD SEA SCROLLS in the caves of Qumran.

Judith—This book contains one of the most delightful stories in the Apocrypha. A wise and intelligent Jewish woman, Judith was devoted to observing the law of Moses. The story takes place during the reign of a king of Assyria named Nebuchadnezzar. His general, Holophernes, was about to destroy the Jewish inhabitants of the city of Bethulia when Judith came to the aid of her fellow Jews. The people prayed to God for help, allowing Him five days in which to help them, or they would surrender (1:1—7:32). Judith went to the enemy camp and beheaded Holophernes, bringing his head back to the Jews of the city. Terrified, the Assyrians fled (8:1—16:29), and the Jews were saved.

Judith appealed to Jews living during a time of discouragement and defeat. It was probably written during the Hasmonean period (142–63 B.C.). Judith emphasized the importance of faithfulness to the law of Moses and the power of God in the lives of His people.

Maccabees, Books of—The First Book of Maccabees is a history of the struggle of the Jews in Judea under the leadership of one family, the Hasmoneans, from about 175 to 135 B.C. Judas Maccabeus was the family's most famous leader. Most of the action took place in and around Jerusalem. The book includes speeches, prayers, laments, and psalms of victory, all woven into a beautiful history of the Jews of that period. The author was probably a Jew living in Jerusalem who supported the Maccabean revolt and the importance of the law of Moses. Some scholars suggest that one of the members of the family of the Maccabees wrote the book, sometime during the period from 103 to 63 B.C. The theme of the book is that faithful obedience to the law brings success by God’s standards.

The Second Book of Maccabees is a two-part work that describes the events that occurred in Judea from 191 to 162 B.C. In a sense, it serves as a prelude to the Book of 1 Maccabees. The first part of the book (1:1—2:18) consists of two letters. One of the letters (1:1–10) was from Jews in Jerusalem to Jews in Egypt, telling them how to observe the Jewish holiday of Chanukah (or Hanukkah) which celebrates the cleansing of the temple under Judas Maccabeus in 164 B.C. The other letter (1:10—2:18) was sent by the same group of Jews in Jerusalem to Aristobulus, a Jewish teacher in Egypt, encouraging him to celebrate the temple festival.

The second section of the Second Book of Maccabees (2:19—15:39) describes events in Judea from 191 to 162 B.C. A good description of the celebration of Chanukah (Hanukkah) appears in 10:1–9. The entire book is important because of its teaching that the world was created “out of nothing” (7:28), and its clear statement of belief in the resurrection of the dead (7:9, 14, 23, 29).

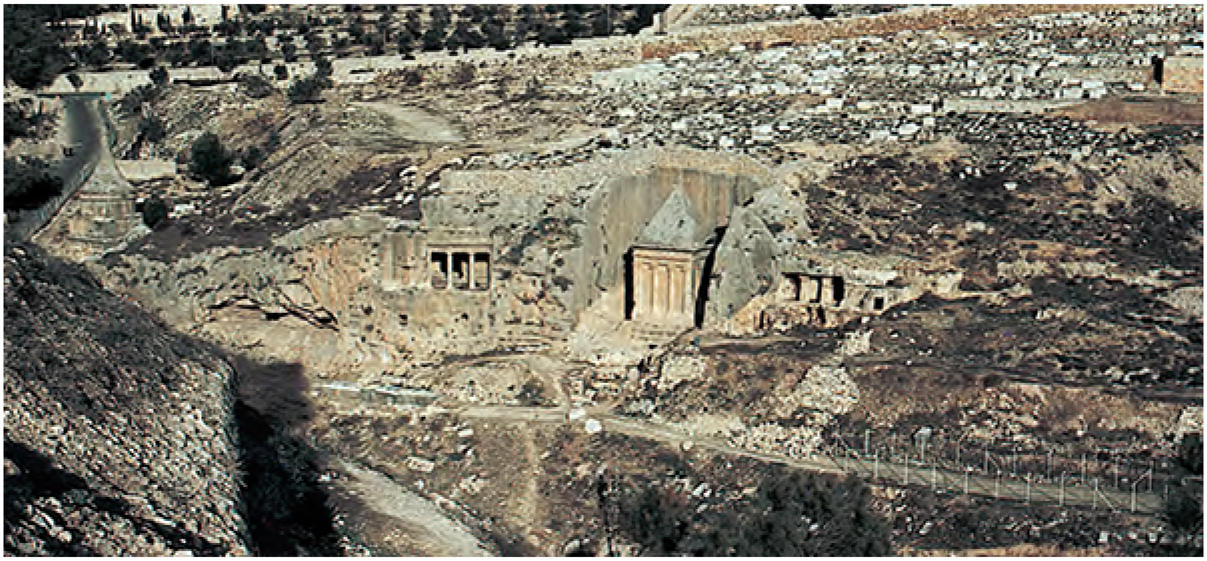

Photo by Ben Chapman

• Tomb complex of the Bene Hezir (center) near Jerusalem—burial site of a priestly family of the Maccabean period.

• Remains of Antioch of Syria, capital of the dynasty that ruled Palestine during the era of the Maccabees and the writing of much of the Old Testament Apocrypha.

Prayer of Azariah and the Song of the Three Young Men—This brief book is included in the Apocrypha because it represents an addition to the Old Testament Book of Daniel. It probably was written about 150 B.C. by a pious Jew who expanded the famous story in Daniel 3 about Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed–Nego—the three young Jews who were thrown into the fiery furnace by the king of Babylon.

According to this addition to the biblical account, Azariah (Abed-Nego) began to pray while they were in the fire (vv. 1–22). After the prayer, all three began to sing as they stood in the flames (vv. 28–68). Their songs came from various psalms of the Jewish people.

Prayer of Manasseh—This book is an addition to the Old Testament Book of 2 Chronicles. Manasseh was one of the most wicked kings in Israel's history. He burned his sons as offerings (2 Chr. 33:6) and practiced magic. After a humiliating defeat in battle, Manasseh repented of his sin, and God forgave him (2 Chr. 33:10–13). The Prayer of Manasseh was probably written later by a pious Jew who blended various psalms and prayers into this beautiful prayer of repentance.

The outline of the prayer follows a typical outline for a worship service: invocation and praise to God (vv. 1–7), confession of sins (vv. 8–12), a request for forgiveness (v. 13), and a concluding thanksgiving (vv. 14–15).

Song of the Three Young Men (see APOCRYPHA).

Susanna—This book is an addition to the Old Testament Book of Daniel. It is full of suspenseful tragedy and wisdom. Written around 110–60 B.C. by a Jew in Palestine, the story is about a woman named Susanna, who was nearly sexually abused by two respected elders of the community. Susanna was brought to court by the elders on a charge of adultery. She stood condemned and sentenced to death until Daniel raised an objection and proved that the two elders had lied.

This is a powerful story that challenges the normal method of taking evidence in Jewish courts during the first century B.C. Susanna is important because it gives insights into the Jewish legal process during that time and because it supports another view of how evidence can be taken from a witness.

Tobit—This book is a narrative about Tobit, a Jew who was taken into captivity to Nineveh, the capital of Assyria, after the defeat of Israel in 722 B.C. Tobit was a strict observer of the law of Moses who met with unfortunate circumstances. One night he was blinded by droppings from a swallow that fell into his eyes. God heard the prayers of Tobit and another Jew, Sarah, who was living to the east in Babylon or Media. God sent his angel, Raphael, to save them both. Through Tobit's son Tobias and the angel Raphael, God was able to help Tobit and Sarah. The story ends happily as Tobias marries Sarah and defeats a demon named Asmodeus and the two reestablish order in their lives. Tobit was written to show the place of fasting and prayer in the lives of the faithful. It teaches that God breaks into human history, using His angels to rescue people.

Wisdom of Solomon—This book, along with the Book of Ecclesiaticus in the Apocrypha, is similar to the Book of Proverbs in the Old Testament. Classified as wisdom books, all these works are profound in their understanding and insight into practical matters of daily life. The Wisdom of Solomon was named after the great wise man of Israel, King Solomon, who reigned from 970 to 931 B.C. Solomon was the model for all wise people who followed him. Many proverbs or wise sayings written many centuries after Solomon, such as this book, were attributed to him. It was composed sometime around 100 to 50 B.C.

The Wisdom of Solomon is organized into various topics for convenient use by those who study the book. The first section (1:1—5:23) declares that wisdom is given only to a righteous person. The second section (6:1—9:19) deals with political issues, such as God's part in judging the wicked rulers. The third section (10:1—19:21) deals with the actions of God among His people, His protection of Israel, and His punishment of their enemies.

The whole book assumes that as Creator, God is actively involved in human affairs. Wisdom comes from God and is necessary for preservation and creativity in this world. Immortality awaits those who live by this wisdom.

The New Testament Apocrypha. The New Testament Apocrypha contains several writings that were similar to New Testament books but were not included as a part of the New Testament. These writings were greatly influenced by the philosophies and religions of the cities or nations out of which they came. Some of the apocryphal gospels were written to replace the gospels of the New Testament but were declared false writings by officials of the early church.

Often the apocryphal books from the early history of the church present stories and legends meant to fill in information about the apostles and Jesus that is lacking in the New Testament. For example, some New Testament apocryphal works claim to give details on the childhood of Jesus (Protevangelium of James, The Gospel of Thomas) as well as a description of how Jesus was raised from the dead (The Gospel of Peter). These writings expand on the accounts found in the New Testament.

Other apocryphal writings that expand or explain the gospel stories include The Gospel of the Egyptians, The Gospel of Truth, The Gospel of the Twelve, The Gospel of Philip, The Gospel of Judas, The Gospel of Bartholomew, The Gospel According to Mary, The Gospel of Nicodemus, and The Questions of Bartholomew. These are only a few of the 59 fragments and gospel-related writings in the New Testament Apocrypha.

The Acts of the Apostles in the New Testament is also paralleled by several apocryphal books. These include stories about the apostles themselves written in the second and third century. Titles of some of these books are The Acts of John, The Acts of Peter, The Acts of Paul, The Acts of Andrew and The Acts of Thomas.

The Acts of John, for example, tells the story of the disciple, John, his journey from Jerusalem to Rome, and his imprisonment on an island off the coast of modern-day Turkey called Patmos (see Rev. 1:9). Other travels of this apostle appear in the book, and he finally dies in Ephesus. Some scholars believe these second-century books may be based on some historical facts. They do give Bible researchers a better understanding of the origin of the early church.

The last group of New Testament apocryphal writings consists of APOCALYPTIC books. The New Testament Book of Revelation inspired the early Christians to write their own books that were similar in content and style. Probably the most popular of the apocryphal apocalypses are the Apocalypse of Peter, the Apocalypse of Paul, and the Apocalypse of Thomas. These apocalypses give Bible scholars a clear picture of the early Christian’s view of heaven and hell, since they emphasize the state of sinners after death.

While these apocryphal New Testament books are interesting and informative, none are considered authoritative like the books of the New Testament. For various reasons, these books were judged unworthy and were not accepted as authoritative when the New Testament took its final form in the third century A.D. Thus, God has worked throughout history not only to inspire the Bible but also to preserve its authenticity and integrity so it can serve as a standard and guide for all believers.

◆

The Order of the Books of the Apocrypha

The individual books of the Old Testament Apocrypha are arranged in alphabetical order in the accompanying article. But here is the order in which these 15 books are generally arranged in Bibles that contain the Apocrypha:

1. First Esdras
2. Second Esdras
3. Tobit
4. Judith
5. The Additions to Esther
6. The Wisdom of Solomon
7. Ecclesiasticus, or the Wisdom of Jesus, the Son of Sirach
8. Baruch
9. The Letter of Jeremiah
10. The Prayer of Azariah and the Song of the Three Young Men
11. Susanna
12. Bel and the Dragon
13. The Prayer of Manasseh
14. First Maccabees
15. Second Maccabees

◆

APOLLONIA [ap oh LONE ih ah] (place of Apollo)—a Greek city (see Map 7, B–1) on the Egnatian Way of Macedonia about 45 kilometers (28 miles) west of Amphipolis. Paul and Silas passed through Apollonia on their way from Philippi to Thessalonica (Acts 17:1) on Paul’s second missionary journey.

APOLLOS [a POL lus] (destroyer)—a learned and eloquent Jew from Alexandria in Egypt and an influential leader in the early church. Well-versed in the Old Testament, Apollos was a disciple of John the Baptist and “taught accurately the things of the Lord” (Acts 18:25). However, while Apollos knew some of Jesus’ teaching, “he knew only the baptism of John” (Acts 18:25). When Priscilla and Aquila, two other leaders in the early church, arrived in Ephesus, they instructed Apollos more accurately in the way of God (Acts 18:26).

In Corinth, Apollos publicly contended with the Jewish leaders and refuted their objections to Christian teaching. He was apparently quite popular in Corinth, for in 1 Corinthians 1:12 Paul wrote of four parties into which the church at Corinth had become divided: one “following” Apollos, one Paul, one Cephas [Peter], and one Christ. In dealing with this division, Paul compared himself to the one who planted and Apollos to the one who watered what was already planted (1 Cor. 3:6).

APOSTASY—a falling away from the faith. The nation of Israel fell into repeated backslidings (Jer. 5:6, NRSV). The prophet Jeremiah predicted the judgment of God upon such disloyalty: “Your wickedness will chasten you, and your apostasies will reprove you” (Jer. 2:19, NRSV).

Some of the noted apostates in the Bible are: King Saul, who turned back from following the Lord (1 Sam. 15:11); Hymenaeus and Alexander, who “suffered shipwreck” of their faith (1 Tim. 1:19–20); and Demas, who forsook the apostle Paul because he loved this present world (2 Tim. 4:10).

In Acts 21:21 Paul was described falsely as one who taught the Jews living among the Gentiles to commit apostasy (forsake, NKJV). Second Thessalonians 2:3 declares that the Day of Christ “will not come unless the apostasy comes first” (NASB). This great apostasy will be the time of “the final rebellion against God, when wickedness will be revealed in human form” (2 Thess. 2:3, REB).

Apostasy is generally defined as the determined, willful rejection of Christ and His teachings by a Christian believer (Heb. 10:26–29; John 15:22). This is different from false belief, or error, which is the result of ignorance. Some Christian groups teach that apostasy is impossible for those persons who have truly accepted Jesus as Savior and Lord.

APOSTLE—a special messenger of Jesus Christ; a person to whom Jesus delegated authority for certain tasks. The word "apostle" is used of those twelve disciples whom Jesus sent out, two by two, during His ministry in Galilee to expand His own ministry of preaching and healing. It was on that occasion, evidently, that they were first called "apostles" (Mark 3:14; 6:30).

These same disciples, with the exception of Judas Iscariot, were recommissioned by Jesus after His resurrection to be His witnesses throughout the world (Luke 24:46–49; Acts 1:8). After Jesus' ASCENSION, the apostles brought their number to twelve by choosing Matthias (Acts 1:23–26).

The word "apostle" is sometimes used in the New Testament in a general sense of "messenger." For instance, when delegates of Christian communities were charged with conveying those churches' contributions to a charitable fund, they were described by Paul as "messengers [apostles] of the churches" (2 Cor. 8:23). Jesus also used the word this way when He quoted the proverb, "A servant is not greater than his master, nor he who is sent [literally, "an apostle"] greater than he who sent him" (John 13:16). Jesus Himself is called "the Apostle . . . of our confession" (Heb. 3:1), a reference to His function as God's special Messenger to the world.

The word "apostle" has a wider meaning in the letters of the apostle Paul. It includes people who, like himself, were not included in the Twelve, but who saw the risen Christ and were specially commissioned by Him. Paul's claim to be an apostle was questioned by others. He based his apostleship, however on the direct call of the exalted Lord who appeared to him on the Damascus Road and on the Lord's blessing of his ministry in winning converts and establishing churches (1 Cor. 15:10).

Apparently, Paul also counted James, the Lord's brother, as an apostle (Gal. 1:19). This James was not one of the Twelve; in fact, he was not a believer in Jesus before the Crucifixion (John 7:5). It was the resurrected Lord who "appeared to James" (1 Cor. 15:7) and presumably commissioned him for his ministry. When Paul says Jesus was seen not only by James but also by "all the apostles" (1 Cor. 15:7), he seems to be describing a wider group than "the Twelve" to whom Jesus appeared earlier (1 Cor. 15:5).

In 1 Corinthians 12:28 and Ephesians 4:11, apostles are listed along with prophets and other saints as part of the foundation of the household of God. In this strictly New Testament sense, apostles are confined to the first generation of Christians.

At an early stage in the church's history it was agreed that apostles to the Jews and Gentiles should be divided into separate camps. Paul and Barnabas were to concentrate on the evangelization of Gentiles; Peter, John, and James (the Lord's brother) were to continue evangelizing Jews (Gal. 2:7–9).

As pioneers in the work of making converts and planting churches, apostles were exposed to special dangers. When persecution erupted, they were the primary targets for attack (1 Cor. 4:9–13). Paul, in particular, welcomed the suffering he endured as an apostle because it was his way of participating in the suffering of Christ (Rom. 8:17; 2 Cor. 1:5–7).

The authority committed to the apostles by Christ was unique. It could not be transmitted to others. The apostles could install elders or other leaders and teachers in the churches, and they could authorize them to assume special responsibilities; but apostolic authority could not be transferred. Their authority has not come to us through their successors; it has come through their writings, which are contained in the New Testament.

APOSTLES' CREED (see CREEDS).

APOSTOLIC, APOSTOLICAL—of or pertaining to the twelve apostles or the faith, teaching, and practice of these apostles. While the word "apostolic" does not appear in the New Testament, the period in early church history when the Apostles were alive is commonly called the APOSTOLIC AGE.

APOSTOLIC AGE—the period of church history when the apostles were alive, beginning with the Day of Pentecost (about A.D. 30) and ending near the conclusion of the first century (about A.D. 100) with the death of the apostle John. During the apostolic age, all the books of the New Testament were written, including the four gospels, the Book of Acts, the letters of Paul, the general letters, and the Book of Revelation.

APOSTOLIC COUNCIL—the assembly of apostles and elders of the New Testament church in Jerusalem (A.D. 50). This council considered the question of whether Gentiles had to be circumcised and keep certain other laws of the Jewish faith in order to be members of the church (Acts 15). This assembly decided that a Gentile does not first have to become a Jew in order to be a Christian.

APOTHECARY (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

APPAIM [AP a em] (nostrils)—a son of Nadab and the father of Ishi (1 Chr. 2:30–31).

APPAREL (see DRESS OF THE BIBLE).

APPEAL—a strong or urgent request. Such an appeal is appropriate in a court of law. In Old Testament times, Moses set up an arrangement similar to an appeals court (Ex. 18:26). Job, while suffering, pressed his case beyond his "comforters" to God Himself as the last court of appeal (Job 31:35).

In the New Testament, the apostle Paul requested that his trial come before the highest Roman authority: "I appeal to Caesar" (Acts 25:11). In situations of spiritual watchcare, leaders frequently appealed to those who were in their charge. Paul appealed to Philemon in behalf of Onesimus "for love's sake" (Philem. 9).

The Bible is a book of appeals—from God to man, from man to God, and from man to man.

APPHIA [AF ih uh]—a Christian woman of Colossae (Philem. 2). Since she is mentioned in a domestic matter, she may have been Philemon's wife, or possibly the mother or sister of Archippus.

APPIAN WAY [AP pih un]—an ancient Roman road built by Appius Claudius. It ran from Rome to Brundisium on the Adriatic Sea. Paul traveled this road from near the city of Puteoli to Rome, where he was imprisoned (Acts 28:13–16).

Photo by Howard Vos

• A section of the Appian Way, a road built by the Romans, south of the city of Rome.

APPII FORUM [AP ih eye] (marketplace of Appius)—a town in Italy located about 64 kilometers (40 miles) southeast of Rome on the Appian Way (see Map 8, A–1) where the apostle Paul was welcomed by Christians from Rome (Acts 28:15).

APPLE (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

APPLE OF THE EYE—an old English expression referring to the pupil of the eye. This phrase is used symbolically of something cherished, precious, and protected (Deut. 32:10; Zech. 2:8).

APRON—a loincloth or girdle that apparently covered only the loins or the front of one's body (Gen. 3:7; KVJ, loincloth, NRSV).

AQABA, GULF OF [ACK ah bah] (see RED SEA).

AQUEDUCT—a channel for transporting water from a remote source to a city. Israel's climate provides abundant rainfall in the winter months, but there is seldom any rain from May to October. This, along with the scarcity of good water supplies, made it necessary to build artificial storage areas to catch the winter rains. Elaborate systems of stone and masonry aqueducts and storage pools were sometimes constructed to bring water from the hill country to the cities and larger towns.

The best-known biblical accounts of the building of an aqueduct occur in 2 Kings 20:20 and 2 Chronicles 32:30. King Hezekiah of Judah had a tunnel dug under the city of Jerusalem to bring water from the spring outside the city to the Siloam reservoir inside the city wall. Across part of the course the workmen cut a tunnel through solid rock to complete the aqueduct. "Hezekiah's Tunnel" is still a major tourist attraction in Jerusalem.

"Solomon's Pools" near Bethlehem are part of an ancient aqueduct system that brought water from the hills south of Jerusalem into the temple area. During his administration, Pontius Pilate, Roman prefect of Judea, built an aqueduct to bring water to Jerusalem. Some scholars suggest that the Tower of Siloam (Luke 13:4) that fell and killed eighteen people may have been part of that building project. Also see CONDUIT.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• Roman aqueduct at Caesarea Maritima, showing the Romans' expertise at building such water transport systems.

AQUILA [A kwil uh] (eagle)—a Jewish Christian living in Corinth with his wife PRISCILLA at the time of Paul's arrival from Athens (Acts 18:2). Aquila was born in PONTUS (located in Asia Minor) but lived in Rome until Claudius commanded that all Jews leave the city. He and Priscilla moved to Corinth, where Aquila took up his trade, tentmaking.

When Paul left Corinth, Aquila and Priscilla traveled with him as far as Ephesus (1 Cor. 16:19), where they met Apollos and instructed him more thoroughly in the Christian faith (Acts 18:24–26). Apparently, they returned to Rome because Paul sent them greetings in his letter to the Romans (Rom. 16:3).

AR [ar] (city)—one of the chief cities of Moab, situated about 32 kilometers (20 miles) east of the Dead Sea on the southern bank of the Arnon River (Num. 21:15; Is. 15:1). It is probably the same place as "the city of Moab" (Num. 22:36).

ARA [A ruh]—a son of Jether, of the tribe of Asher (1 Chr. 7:38).

ARAB [A rab]—a village in the hill country of Hebron allotted to the tribe of Judah after the conquest of Canaan by Joshua (Josh. 15:52).

ARABAH [AIR ah bah] (plain, desert)—a major region of the land of Israel (see Map 2, C–1), referring usually to the entire valley region between Mount Hermon in the north to the Red Sea in the south (Num. 22:1; Deut. 1:7). The Arabah is more than 390 kilometers (240 miles) long, varying in width from 10 to 40 kilometers (6 to 25 miles).

The Arabah includes the Sea of Galilee, the Jordan River valley, the Dead Sea, and the area between the Dead Sea and the Red Sea. Much of this region lies below sea level, and the Dead Sea, which lies at approximately 394 meters (1,292 feet) below sea level, is the lowest spot on the earth's surface. The NKJV refers several times to the "Sea of the Arabah," meaning the Salt Sea or the Dead Sea (Deut. 3:17; Josh. 3:16; 2 Kin. 14:25).

Before their entry into the Promised Land, the people of Israel camped in the Arabah, in an area called "the plains of Moab" (Num. 22:1), just north of the Dead Sea. While the Israelites were camped there, God turned Balaam's curses to blessings (Num. 22:1—24:25), Israel committed idolatry and immorality (Num. 25), Moses renewed the covenant, and Joshua sent out spies to prepare for the invasion of Canaan (Josh. 1:1—3:17).

Photo by Algul

- The hot, barren deserts of the Arabah in southern Israel.

Photo by Brita

- Desert dwellers with their flocks in the Arabah.

ARABIA [uh RAY bih uh]—the large peninsula east of Egypt, between the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf (see Map 1, C–3). About 1,300 kilometers (800 miles) wide and 2,300 kilometers (1,400 miles) long, Arabia is nearly one-third the size of the United States. It has almost no rainfall except along the coast, where it measures about 51 centimeters (20 inches) per year. There is only one river and one lake in the entire peninsula. Although a sudden shower may create a short-lived stream, most of the water in Arabia comes from deep wells or desert oases. Consequently, there is little agricultural activity on the peninsula.

The Arabian peninsula is a sandy, rocky desert with high mountain ranges on the western and southern coasts. The western mountains reach a height of 3,660 meters (12,000 feet) and show some evidence of past volcanic activity. Because of this volcanic activity, a few scholars have suggested that Mount Sinai was located in the western region of this mountain range. However, the traditional site at the southern end of the Sinai Peninsula is much more likely. Much of the sandy interior of Arabia is uninhabited, although there is barely enough grass on the lower mountain slopes to support its nomadic population. In addition to its lack of water, the desert was known for its sandstorms driven by violent winds (Job 1:19; 27:20–21).

The queen of Sheba came from Arabia, bringing gold, spices, and precious stones to Solomon (1 Kin. 10:2, 10, 14; 2 Chr. 9:1, 9, 14). Solomon and other kings sent their ships to Ophir in Arabia to bring back gold (1 Kin. 9:28; 2 Chr. 9:10). Ophir, Raamah, and Sheba were famous for their gold, silver, and precious stones (Job 22:24; Is. 13:12; Ezek. 27:22).

The people who lived in Arabia included the children of Joktan (Gen. 10:26–30), Cush (Gen. 10:7), the sons of Abraham and Keturah (Gen. 25:1–6), and Esau (Gen. 36). The “country of the east” (Gen. 25:6) is probably a reference to Arabia. The early history of many of these peoples is unknown. Israel’s earliest contacts with the inhabitants of Arabia probably came through their camel caravans. Some of them oppressed the Israelites during the time of the judges, but God delivered Israel from them by raising up the judge Gideon (Judg. 6:11).

David subdued some of the Arabian tribes that were close to Israel (2 Sam. 8:3–14), and Solomon established extensive trade relations with more distant tribes in Arabia to obtain their gold for his building projects (1 Kin. 9:28; 10:2, 11). Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, received rams and goats from the Arabians as tribute (2 Chr. 17:10–12), but after his death they revolted and refused to pay tribute to his son Jehoram. Instead, they invaded Jerusalem and carried away Jehoram's wealth, his wives, and all but his youngest son (2 Chr. 21:16–17).

Most of the tribes of southern and eastern Arabia were not well-known to Israel. Joel referred to the slave-trading Sabeans [Shebaites] as a people who lived far away (Joel 3:8). Isaiah pictured the Arabians wandering as far east as Babylon (Is. 13:19, 20). Tribes that lived closer—those at Tema, Dedan, and Kedar—were included in Isaiah's prophecies of judgment against the foreign nations (Is. 21:13–17). Jeremiah also announced God's judgment upon Dedan, Tema, Buz, Kedar, Hazor, and all the kings of Arabia (Jer. 25:23–24; 49:28–33).

Although most of Israel's knowledge of the Arabians and their habits (Jer. 3:2) was due to a passing association with their caravan traders (Ezek. 27:21), some Arabians eventually settled in Palestine. While attempting to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem, Nehemiah struggled against Geshem the Arab, who scorned and despised the Jews (Neh. 2:19). When this tactic failed to discourage the work on Jerusalem's walls, the Arabs, Ammonites, Ashdodites, and others planned to attack the city by force (Neh. 4:7–13). When this strategy also failed, Sanballat, Tobiah, and Geshem the Arab set a trap to lure Nehemiah out of the city and kill him (Neh. 6:1–7). Nehemiah prayed for guidance, and God delivered him from this plot.

It is likely that Job was from Arabia. Uz, the home of Job (Job 1:1), appears to be named after a descendant of Esau and the Edomites (Gen. 36:28; Lam. 4:21). Eliphaz, one of Job's comforters, was from Teman, a city in Arabia (Job 2:11). Bands of Sabeans [Shebaites] and Chaldeans were close enough to attack Job's cattle (Job 1:15, 17). A great desert wind destroyed the house of Job's children (Job 1:19). The dialogue between Job and his comforters is filled with desert imagery and animals (Job 39).

ARABIC VERSIONS (see BIBLE VERSIONS AND TRANSLATIONS).

ARAD [A rad]—the name of a city (see Map 2, C–1) and a man in the Old Testament:

1. A Canaanite city in the southern wilderness of Judah whose inhabitants fought against the Israelites at Mount Hor but were defeated by Joshua (Josh. 12:14). It was situated about 32 kilometers (20 miles) south of Hebron. The site today is marked by Tell Arad.
2. A descendant of Beriah and one of the principal men of Aijalon (1 Chr. 8:15).

ARAH [A rah]—the name of two Old Testament men:

1. A son of Ulla, of the tribe of Asher (1 Chr. 7:39).
2. The father of a family that returned from the captivity with Zerubbabel (Ezra 2:5; Neh. 7:10).

ARAM [A ram]—the name of four men and one region (see Map 1, C–2) in the Bible:

1. A descendant of Shem. This Aram was the ancestor of the ARAMEANS (Gen. 10:22–23).
2. A son of Abraham’s nephew, Kemuel (Gen. 22:21).
3. An area that may be translated generally as SYRIA or MESOPOTAMIA (1 Chr. 2:23). The Arameans occupied a large plain that reached from the Taurus Mountains (on the north) to Damascus and beyond (on the south), and from the Euphrates River (on the east) to the Lebanon Mountains (on the west). Also see ARAMEANS.
4. A son of Shemer, of the tribe of Asher (1 Chr. 7:34).
5. A Greek form of Ram, the father of Amminadab (Matt. 1:3, KJV; Luke 3:33, KJV).

ARAM DAMMESEK [AIR um DAM meh seck]—an ancient name for SYRIA, conquered by David (2 Sam. 8:5–6, KJV).

ARAM–NAHARAIM [A ram nuh ha RAY im] (Aram of the two rivers)—the northern section of the land between the Tigris and the Euphrates Rivers. Psalm 60 refers to David’s war with two districts of Syria: Aram–naharaim and Aram–zobah (Psalm 60, title, KJV).

ARAMAIC LANGUAGE (see LANGUAGES OF THE BIBLE).

ARAMAIC VERSION (see BIBLE VERSIONS AND TRANSLATIONS; TARGUM).

ARAMEANS [AIR ah mee unz]—an ancient desert people who flourished along with the Israelites during much of their history, sometimes as enemies and sometimes as friends.

The region of the Arameans, the land of ARAM, extended from the Lebanon Mountains on the west eastward to the Euphrates River and from the Taurus Mountains on the north southward to Damascus. Arameans were among the ancient peoples who settled the Near East as early as 2250 B.C. They were fully established as a separate kingdom by the 12th century B.C., which made their history parallel with Israel's.

The Arameans made their presence felt internationally during the time of the judges, when they existed in large numbers in the region east of the Jordan River. An Aramean ruler, Cushan–Rishathaim, overran the land of Israel and oppressed it for eight years (Judg. 3:8–10).

In later years, David extended the boundary of Israel to the Euphrates River by subduing the Aramean rulers Hadadezer of Zobah and Toi of Hamath (2 Sam. 8:1–13). But a third Aramean official, Rezon, fled to Damascus and founded a strong Aramean city-state there (1 Kin. 11:23–24). This city-state was Israel's bitter foe for many generations.

Between quarrels and hostilities, there were times when either the nation of Judah or the nation of Israel was allied with Aram against a common foe. Judah and Aram were allied with each other against Israel (1 Kin. 15:18–20); Israel and Aram were allies against Judah (2 Kin. 16:5). Judah also joined with Assyria against Israel and Aram.

The result of this strong alliance was the downfall of Damascus and the end of the Aramean power, about 732 B.C. (2 Kin. 16:7–18). Many Arameans were taken as hostages to other lands, in keeping with the foreign policy of the conquering Assyrians.

ARAMITESS [AIR ah MIGHT ess]—a woman of ARAM (1 Chr. 7:14, KJV); she was the concubine of Manasseh and the mother of Machir.

ARAN [A ran]—a son of Dishan and a descendant of Seir the Horite (Gen. 36:28; 1 Chr. 1:42).

ARARAH [AIR ah rah]—a form of ADADAH.

ARARAT [AIR uh rat]—the mountainous region between the Black Sea and the Caspian Sea where Noah's ark rested when the Flood subsided (Gen. 8:4). From this region streams converge to form the Tigris and the Euphrates Rivers. Originally called Urartu, Ararat referred to the whole mountainous area; its use, however has gradually come to be restricted to the huge volcanic mountain at the borders of Turkey, Iran, Armenia, and Georgia.

This volcanic mountain includes two peaks, 5,600 meters (17,000 feet) and 4,200 meters (13,000 feet) above sea level. The taller peak rises 920 meters (3,000 feet) above the line of perpetual snow. Some people believe that Noah's ark still rests on Mount Ararat, and occasional expeditions have been launched to find it. However, shifting glaciers, avalanches, hidden crevices, and sudden storms make the mountain so difficult to climb that it is referred to by the native inhabitants of that region as "the Painful Mountain."

ARAUNAH [a ROW nah]—a JEBUSITE who owned a threshing floor on Mount Moriah in Jerusalem. King David purchased the threshing floor on which to build an altar to the Lord (2 Sam. 24:16–24). Later, this land was the site on which Solomon's temple was built (2 Chr. 3:1). Araunah was also called ORNAN.

ARBA [AR bah] (four)—the ancestor of ANAK the giant. The city of Hebron, in the mountains of Judah, got its early name, Kirjath Arba, from him (Josh. 21:11).

ARBATHITE [AR bah thight]—one who lived in the ARABAH, a barren wilderness in the Jordan River valley (2 Sam. 23:31).

ARBITE [AR bight]—a native of ARAB, a village in the hill country of Judah (Josh. 15:52).

ARBITRATE—see MEDIATOR.

ARCH (see ARCHITECTURE).

ARCHAEOLOGY OF THE BIBLE—The word "archaeology" comes from two Greek words meaning "a study of ancient things." But the term usually applies today to a study of excavated materials belonging to a former era. Biblical archaeology is the scientific study, by excavation, examination, and publication, of the evidences of cultures and civilizations from the biblical period. Archaeological findings help scholars, as well as Bible students, in understanding the Bible better. They reveal what life was like in biblical times, throw light on obscure passages of Scripture, and help us appreciate the historical context of the Bible.

Archaeology is a complex science, calling on the assistance of other sciences, such as chemistry, anthropology, and zoology. Many talented professionals—including engineers, historians, chemists, paleontologists, photographers artists, and surveyors—are involved in the discovery, interpretation, and publication of archaeological knowledge.

Every object an archaeologist discovers—whether a piece of bone, pottery, metal, stone, or wood—is studied in detail. The archaeologist's work often requires translating ancient writings and studying an ancient city's art and architecture. These detailed studies are carried out in museums and laboratories, but the archaeologist must first recover the material by carefully excavating an ancient city.

For the New Testament period, biblical archaeology has concentrated upon a geographical area that parallels the reaches of the old Roman Empire. The area is somewhat smaller for Old Testament times; and the focus shifts eastward to include the Mesopotamian Valley and Persia (modern Iran).

The hub for Old Testament research is Palestine, or Israel (ancient Canaan), but it fans out to include the great empires in the Nile and Mesopotamian valleys. The culture of Phoenicia (modern Lebanon) was very similar to that of Canaan to the south. Syria to the east is also studied because its history often was tied to Israel's. Still farther north, Asia Minor was the homeland of the Hittites and several Greek cultures.

Until the early 1800s, little was known of biblical times and customs, except what was written in the Old Testament. Although the Greek historians preserved considerable background material on New Testament times, little documentation was found for the Old Testament period. The reason for this is that Alexander the Great forced the Greek language and customs upon all the lands his armies conquered. This policy almost destroyed the languages and culture of Egypt, Persia, Canaan, and Babylon. Before the rise of modern archaeology, scarcely any historical evidence was available to illustrate or confirm the history and literature of the Old Testament.

Modern Near Eastern archaeology began during the eighteenth century. Before that, some research had been done by collectors of antiquities, usually museums or wealthy individuals. Biblical archaeology probably began with the discovery of the ROSETTA STONE during Napoleon’s invasion of Egypt in 1799. Discovered by an officer in the expedition, the stone was inscribed in three columns consisting of Greek, Egyptian hieroglyphics, and later Egyptian script. With Napoleon’s encouragement, the stone was studied and recorded with scientific accuracy, then displayed in the British Museum. This discovery opened the door to the study of the remains of ancient Egypt, a rich resource for biblical researchers.

How Ancient Ruins (Tells) Were Formed. In ancient times, cities were usually built on sites that were easy to defend and were located near a source of water and on a good trade route. The homes were constructed primarily of sun-baked bricks, which could be destroyed quite easily by flood, earthquakes, or enemy attack. In rebuilding the town, the inhabitants would usually level the rubble and debris and build new buildings on the same location. Cities continued to be destroyed by windstorm, enemy attack, or other catastrophes until gradually a mound of earth containing remnants of buildings, tools, vases, and pottery rose on the site. Eventually many layers of habitation lay upon one another.

The sites of these mounds in the ancient Near East are called tells, the Arabic word for mounds. These mounds do not look like natural hills, appearing instead as unnatural rounded humps on the landscape. They often rise from their surroundings by as much as 15 to 23 meters (50 to 75 feet).

If a city was destroyed by famine, disease, earthquake, or some other natural catastrophe, the townspeople might conclude that the gods had cursed their city and that it would be unwise to rebuild on the same site.

The area might lie unused for hundreds of years until a new group decided to build again on this strategically located site.

When a site is occupied continuously by the same group of people, one layer or stratum of the mound is very similar to the next. Some slight changes in artifacts and ways of doing things, such as the method of baking pottery or the shape of certain tools, will occur in an orderly fashion from generation to generation. If a long period with no habitation has taken place between layers, the new people who inhabit the mound may have discovered new techniques. Also peoples with new skills—perhaps the conquerors of the former dwellers—may inhabit the site. A sharp change in the pattern of living or in types of artifacts discovered may indicate a gap in habitation of the site.

As he excavates these ancient sites, an archaeologist will first find large stationary objects such as houses, monuments, tombs, and fortresses. Also there will be smaller artifacts such as jewelry, tools, weapons, and cooking utensils. Archaeology provides the Bible researcher with the rich remains of material culture over the course of centuries to supplement what is recorded in the Bible, as well as in art and literature.

How Archaeologists Do Their Work. In organizing his work (called a dig), the archaeologist first will divide the site, or area, by a “grid system,” using lines parallel to the longitude and latitude of the area. A “field,” 5.8 meters (19 feet) square, is then divided into four squares or quadrants, leaving room for a catwalk (baulk) among them to observe the work. Each area has an area supervisor, who in turn works under the supervision of the excavation director. The area supervisor is responsible for directing the actual digging in his area and recording everything as it comes from the ground. It is more important to excavate small areas in detail than to excavate a large area carelessly.

Those who actually work the site are of three categories. Pickmen carefully break up the soil, noticing every difference in the hardness of the earth and how it is compacted. It takes skill to distinguish a clay wall from ordinary packed clay or to develop the delicate touch that can bring forth a vase or a human bone unharmed. Hoemen work over the loosened soil, saving anything of potential interest. Basketmen carry off the excavated dirt, perhaps using a sieve to sift the soil—to be sure nothing of value is discarded. Often archaeology students serve as laborers on expeditions.

Everything found in a quadrant of the site is collected in an individual basket and tagged with all pertinent information, including the date and location of discovery. The baskets are then photographed and evaluated by experts who record all the data. The materials and information then go to laboratories and museums where they are studied in detail. Conclusions are then published by the excavation director and are circulated to other archaeologists and scholars.

In 1832, while a Danish archaeologist, C. J. Thomsen, was classifying some implements for display in a Copenhagen museum, he wondered about the age of the various tools made of iron, bronze, and stone. Returning to the peat bog where the implements had been found, he discovered that artifacts made of stone were found in the bottom layer. Higher levels contained many tools made of copper and bronze. At the top of the bog were instruments of iron, indicating they were made last. (We now speak of the Stone Age, the Bronze Age, and the Iron Age.)

Thomsen had made a very simple application of the principle of stratigraphy, or keeping track of the layers of soil in which artifacts were found to establish a sequence of events. Archaeologists base many of their conclusions on their study and evaluation of the various strata of the mound.

An archaeologist can determine how many times a town has been destroyed and rebuilt, but he will want to know the date of each occupation, how long it lasted, and why it was destroyed. Each level of occupation will contain the foundations of walls and buildings and often a layer of debris from the destruction. Also the articles of everyday living such as weapons, tools, pottery, and ornaments will be revealed. Sometimes the different strata are separated by thick layers of ash from a great fire. At other times, only a difference in soil color or compactness distinguishes the levels.

Furthermore, during centuries when the mound was not inhabited, erosion and random digging at the site can disrupt a stratum. A new group of settlers may have dug foundations, garbage pits, or trenches deep into an earlier layer, making the job of the archaeologist more difficult.

POTTERY is one of the most important keys to dating the strata of a tell. Pottery typology, or the study of various types of pottery, is now refined to almost an exact science. The scientist can call upon the detailed knowledge of the characteristics of pottery of each period to identify and date the pottery, usually within a half century of the exact time when it was made. The scientific method of carbon-14 dating is also used to establish the age of some archaeological materials.

Earlier pottery designs were simple and functional; later vessels became more delicate and elaborate, often showing Persian and Greek influences. The method of baking the clay can also indicate the approximate time when it was made. Changes in everyday objects such as lamps, tools, weapons, and jewelry help scientists identify broader periods of history. Ancient coins found on a site can also help to establish the dates when the site was inhabited.

How Archaeology Helps Us Understand the Bible. During the early years of exploring Bible lands, archaeologists hoped to make discoveries that would confirm the main events of Bible history. Today's archaeologists realize that many things about the Bible cannot be proved in a direct way. Instead of providing proof of specific events, archaeology is used to increase our knowledge of the everyday life, the history, and the customs of the people who appear in the Bible's long story—the Egyptians, Phoenicians, Philistines, Moabites, Assyrians, Babylonians, and others, as well as the Hebrews. For example, discoveries of ancient texts on clay tablets—in many languages—show us what the various peoples of the ancient Near East thought about the gods they worshiped, as well as the types of laws by which they lived. Ancient texts also tell us of alliances, trade agreements, and wars between the great cities and nations of the past.

Archaeological discoveries paint in the background of the Bible, helping to explain many of its events. Thanks to archaeology, we now know that in the time of Abraham (about 2000 B.C.) many thriving cities existed in the ancient Near East. Civilization was already over a thousand years old in Egypt and in the region of the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers. It was from a city on the Euphrates River, called Ur, that Abraham (then called Abram) began the journey that eventually brought him to the land of Canaan (Gen. 11:31). The excavation of Ur early in the twentieth century (1922–1934) by Sir Charles Leonard Woolley revealed that Abraham was surrounded by idolatry on all sides when God called him to begin a new people through which God could do His redemptive work.

The discovery of large bodies of CUNEIFORM literature in Babylon and other places also has proved most revealing. For example, the AMARNA Letters from Egypt give an inside glance into conditions in Canaan just after the conquest by Joshua and the Israelites.

In 1890 the famed archaeologist Flinders Petrie began an excavation at Tell el-Hesi in southwestern Palestine. He carefully recorded the pieces and types of broken pottery found at each level of occupation. This exploration helped refine the method known as "ceramic chronology," which is one of the methods still used to date ancient finds.

Inscriptions and ancient manuscripts also have made an important contribution to biblical study. In fact, today's archaeological work is increasingly concerned with the text of the Bible. Intensive study of more than 3,000 New Testament Greek manuscripts dating from the second century A.D. and subsequent years has shown that the New Testament text has been preserved remarkably from that time. Not one doctrine has been perverted due to major errors in transmission.

The science of papyrology developed after large quantities of PAPYRI, or ancient writing materials, were discovered in Egypt around the turn of the century. The papyri, written on paper made from the papyrus reed of Egypt, included a wide variety of topics presented in several languages. More than 70 papyri containing portions of the New Testament have been found. These fragments help to confirm the texts of the longer manuscripts dating to the fourth century A.D. and following. Since many of the papyri date to the first three centuries after Christ, the impact of papyrology upon biblical studies has been significant. These discoveries make it possible to establish the grammar of the period and, thus, to date the composition of New Testament books to the first century A.D.

The mass of papyri also demonstrated that New Testament Greek was not invented by New Testament writers. Instead, it was the common language generally used during the first century of the Christian era. Moreover, the papyri have shown that the New Testament contained good grammar, judged by first-century standards.

The search for buildings and places associated with the ministry of Jesus has taken place for centuries. A synagogue was unearthed in Capernaum, although it hardly can be the one in which Jesus taught (Mark 1:21). It may well be the successor of the synagogue Jesus knew, however. Archaeologists think they may have discovered Peter's house at the same site (Matt. 8:14). Graffiti on the plastered wall of this second-century house clearly links it with Peter. Atop Mount Gerizim, excavations have uncovered the foundations of the Samaritan temple. Although tradition has assigned sites for the birth and the crucifixion of Jesus, archaeologists disagree on the authenticity of these locations.

Significant Archaeological Digs and Their Contributions. Many important archaeological discoveries of this century have contributed to Bible knowledge. Following are descriptions of five of these projects, with an analysis of their contribution.

The Law Code of Hammurapi—In 1901 a slab of black marble over seven feet tall and six feet wide, containing over 300 paragraphs of legal inscriptions, was discovered at Susa (Shushan) in ancient Elam. Engraved on the large rock were legal provisions dealing with the social, domestic, and moral life of the ancient Babylonian people of King Hammurapi's time (about 1792–1750 B.C.). The Code furnishes important background material for comparison with other ancient bodies of law, particularly the laws of the Pentateuch.

The fact that Hammurapi's Code is older by three centuries than the laws of Moses has ruined some of the theories of critics and has given rise to others. A discovery of this sort illustrates how archaeology roots out views that earlier placed the origin of many of the laws attributed to Moses at a much later time. The discovery of Hammurapi's laws indicate that the Law of Moses is neither borrowed from, nor dependent upon, the Babylonian.

The resemblances between the Mosaic laws and the Code of Hammurapi are clearly due to the similarity of the general intellectual and cultural heritage of the Hebrews and the Babylonians at that ancient time. The striking differences, however, demonstrate that there is no direct borrowing and that the Mosaic law—although later by three centuries—is in no way dependent upon the Babylonian.

The two laws are radically different in their origins and morality. The Babylonian laws are alleged to have been received by Hammurapi from the sun god, Shamash. Moses received his laws directly from the Lord. Hammurapi's laws list at least ten varieties of bodily mutilation prescribed for various offenses. For example, if a physician performed an operation that was unsuccessful, his hand was to be cut off.

By contrast, in the Mosaic legislation, only one instance of mutilation occurs, where a wife's hand is to be severed (Deut. 25:11–12). Also in the Hebrew laws a greater value is placed upon human life. A stricter regard for the honor of womanhood is evident and masters are ordered to treat their slaves more humanely.

The City of Ur—Ur was an important city of ancient Babylonia situated on the Euphrates River in lower Mesopotamia, or present-day Iraq. But the glory of the city was suddenly destroyed about 1960 B.C. Foreigners stormed down from the surrounding hills, captured the reigning king, Ibbi–Sin, and reduced the city to ruins. So complete was its destruction that the city lay buried in oblivion until it was excavated in modern times by archaeologists.

Abraham lived in the city of Ur at the height of its splendor. The city was a center of religion and industry. The Babylonians worshiped many gods, but the moon god Sin was supreme. Accordingly, Ur was a theocracy centered in worship of the moon deity. Abraham's father, Terah, probably worshiped at the altar of Sin.

God's sovereign grace called Abraham out of this polluted atmosphere to begin a new line of people, the Hebrews, who were to be separated from idolatry and to become a blessing to all mankind. The archaeological findings of ancient Ur have greatly illuminated the biblical references to the patriarch Abraham and have given a much wider view of the ancient world before 2000 B.C.

The Ras Shamra Tablets—Recovered in another significant excavation were hundreds of clay tablets that had been housed in a library located between two pagan temples in Ugarit, modern Ras Shamra in Syria. These tablets date from about the 15th century B.C. They were inscribed in the earliest known alphabet written in wedge-shaped signs. The strange writing was recognized as ancient Canaanite in origin, and it turned out to be religious and cultic (related to worship) in nature. The tablets were inscribed in a dialect closely akin to biblical Hebrew and Phoenician.

So important were the initial discoveries that archaeologist Claude F. Schaeffer continued excavations in the area from 1929 to 1937. Aside from the knowledge gained about the ancient city of Ugarit, the Ras Shamra texts have great literary importance. The translation of the texts showed the important parallels between the Ugaritic and Hebrew literary style and vocabulary. These texts have been invaluable to scholars studying Hebrew poetry and the general literary style and vocabulary of Old Testament Hebrew.

The most important contribution of the religious texts from Ras Shamra consists of the background material they provide for careful study of the pagan religions mentioned repeatedly in the Old Testament. As a result of archaeological work, an independent witness to the degenerate nature of Canaanite cults is now available. No longer can critics accuse the Old Testament of projecting a bloodthirsty mentality because Joshua ordered that all Canaanites be destroyed. This order was given to purge the immoral worship of the Canaanites from the land.

The Lachish Letters—In the excavations of Lachish, a city in southwestern Canaan, the most astonishing finds consisted of letters embedded in a layer of burned charcoal and ashes. Written in Hebrew of the ancient Phoenician script, the documents throw additional light on the life and times of the prophet Jeremiah. The letters were inscribed on pieces of broken pottery called ostraca. Most of the letters were written by a citizen named Hoshayahu, who was stationed at a military outpost. He sent these letters to Yaosh, evidently a high-ranking officer in the garrison at Lachish.

The Babylonians had attacked and partly burned Lachish some ten years earlier during the reign of King Jehoiakim of Judah. These letters were found in the layers of ashes that represent the final destruction of the city. This dates them from 588–586 B.C., when Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon made his final siege of the Hebrew cities of Jerusalem, Lachish, and Azekah.

One letter lists names, the majority of which are found in the Old Testament; two letters consist largely of greetings; another letter describes movements of troops and makes an interesting reference to an unnamed prophet and his word of warning. The Lachish Letters give an independent view of conditions in Judah during the last days before the fall of Jerusalem.

The prophet Jeremiah conducted his ministry in these times. His reference to Azekah and Lachish says, “When the king of Babylon’s army fought against Jerusalem and all the cities of Judah that were left, against Lachish, and Azekah: for only these fortified cities remained of the cities of Judah” (Jer. 34:7).

Tell ez-Zakariyeh has been identified as the ancient city of Azekah. It had a strong inner fortress buttressed with eight large towers. The Lachish Letters concern the time just prior to the fall of the city and present the same conditions of turmoil and confusion that are revealed in the Book of Jeremiah. This information is of immense value in explaining historical backgrounds and illuminating Old Testament Scripture.

The Dead Sea Scrolls—The greatest manuscript discovery of modern times began with the uncovering of the Dead Sea Scrolls in 1947. A young shepherd boy stumbled upon a cave south of Jericho containing numerous leather scrolls of Hebrew and Aramaic writing and some 600 fragmentary inscriptions. Great excitement quickly spread throughout the archaeological world. In 1952, new caves containing fragments of later scrolls in Hebrew, Greek, and Aramaic were found enclosed in jars. These startling discoveries have been followed by the uncovering of other manuscripts around the Dead Sea area, particularly at QUMRAN.

After intensive study, scholars dated the manuscripts from as early as 250 B.C. to as late as A.D. 68. Although attacks have been made against the age and authenticity of the manuscripts, two lines of evidence establish their integrity. Radiocarbon count, a scientific method of dating, places the linen in which some of the scrolls were wrapped in the general period of 175 B.C. to A.D. 225. Scholars of ancient writing (paleographers) date documents by the form of the letters and the method of writing. This line of evidence also places the Dead Sea Scrolls during the period of time about three centuries before A.D. 70.

The scrolls contain ancient texts of parts of the Old Testament, as well as writing that originated between the Old and New Testament periods. The biblical section contains two scrolls of Isaiah, one complete, and fragments of several Old Testament books. Coins found at the site at Qumran reveal that the settlement was founded about 135 B.C. It was abandoned during the Jewish war with the Romans in A.D. 66–73.

The scrolls discovered near the Dead Sea were part of the library of the people who lived at Qumran, possibly the ESSENES, a religious group mentioned by ancient writers. The sect was even stricter in its interpretation of the religious laws than the PHARISEES of the New Testament. Some scholars believe that John the Baptist may have lived among these people before beginning his work of announcing the ministry of Jesus.

The Essenes expected the coming of a new age, ushered in by a ruler who would serve as a prophet and a priest. Although the finds at Qumran do not relate directly to any events described in the Bible, they throw useful light on the way certain people thought during the period between the Old and New Testaments.

A full text of the Book of Isaiah is the best known of the discoveries at Qumran, although other texts discovered are also significant. As a group, the documents make up the oldest existing manuscripts of the Bible in any language. One of the caves yielded eighteen scraps of papyri written entirely in Greek. Some have identified them as fragments of the earliest New Testament version yet discovered, claiming that one of them, a fragment of Mark's Gospel, dates from about fifteen years after the events recorded. Although this dating is disputed by many, the Dead Sea material in general has had a stabilizing effect upon New Testament criticism.

The thrilling story of biblical archaeology is not completed. Scholars are now studying thousands of clay tablets found at Ebla in northern Syria—a task that will require a generation of careful study and analysis. Dialogue between the biblical text and archaeological finds must continue because each can help us understand and interpret the other. The Bible helps us appreciate the archaeologist's discoveries, while biblical archaeology helps us understand and interpret the message of God's inspired Word.

In spite of its great contribution to biblical studies, there are certain things that archaeology cannot do. In general, it cannot prove that a particular Bible event happened or that a specific person mentioned in the Bible actually existed. This is true because of the small amount of evidence archaeology can really recover. Many objects do not survive long enough for a modern archaeologist to discover.

Paper, wood, and clothing will rot away quickly unless they are buried in extremely dry conditions. Also, archaeology discovers only a small portion of the things that do survive. For example, the careful and detailed exploration at Hazor, an ancient city in Israel, between 1956 and 1970 uncovered only a small fraction of the whole mound. It has been estimated that to excavate every area of Hazor's twenty-one strata would take 800 years.

The truth of the Bible is not only a matter of facts, but of their interpretation. Even if we could prove the accuracy of the entire Bible, its redemptive significance would not be proven. Because the Christian faith is based on historical events, Christians should welcome any supportive evidence that archaeology can provide—but they do not anchor their faith to it.

Neither lack of evidence nor critical skepticism can disprove God's Word. It is better to emphasize how archaeology helps us understand the Bible than to believe that it proves the Bible true. It is heartening, however, to note that so far there has been no instance of an archaeological discovery conclusively proving the Bible to be in error.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• An archaeologist carefully uncovers a skeleton at an excavation near Caesarea Maritima.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- An archaeologist's notebook, containing detailed records of everything uncovered in an excavation.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- A coin specialist cleans and sorts ancient artifacts at the site of an archaeological dig.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- Even minute particles, such as these microflints and bones, must be carefully sorted and analyzed after they are uncovered by archaeologists.

ARCHANGEL—in the celestial hierarchy, a spiritual being next in rank above an angel. The word “archangel” occurs several times in the Bible. In the New Testament the voice of an archangel and the sounding of the trumpet of God will signal the coming of Christ for His people (1 Thess. 4:16). Michael the archangel disputed with the devil about the body of Moses (Jude 9). In the Old Testament, Michael is described as having great power and authority (Dan. 10:13) and is the guardian of Israel (Dan. 10:21), especially in the “time of trouble” in the last days (Dan. 12:1).

ARCHELAUS [ar key LAY us] (people’s chief)—the elder son of King Herod the Great by Malthace (Matt. 2:22). When Herod died in 4 B.C., his kingdom was divided among his sons. Archelaus was made ethnarch, inheriting the largest portion, Judea and Samaria. Because the Jews resented the Herod family so strongly, Archelaus wisely waited to assume the throne and petitioned the emperor Augustus in Rome before taking it for himself. However, a riot broke out during the Passover celebration, and a large contingent of Jews petitioned him to intervene and stop the conflict. In the battle that followed, nearly 3,000 people were killed. Because of this, the Jews sent a delegation to Rome to demand that Archelaus not be permitted to inherit the kingdom. However, Augustus gave the largest portion of the kingdom of Judea to Archelaus, but only as ETHNARCH (governor), a position inferior to king.

The Jewish historian Josephus records that because of his disappointment at being made ethnarch only, Archelaus treated both the Jews and Samaritans cruelly. In A.D. 6, the ninth year of his reign, he was removed from office following the complaints of a delegation of Jews and Samaritans. He was banished to Vienne in southern France, and his wealth was confiscated by Rome.

ARCHER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

ARCHEVITES [AR keh vites]—KJV translation for "people of Erech" (Ezra 4:9). The Archevites probably were Babylonian colonists sent by Ashurbanipal (Osnapper), king of Assyria, to settle in Samaria after the fall of Israel.

ARCHIPPUS [ar KIP pus] (chief groom)—a Christian at Colosse who held an official position in the church. The apostle Paul called him "our fellow soldier" (Philem. 2) and exhorted him to fulfill his ministry in the Lord (Col. 4:17).

ARCHITECTURE—the art and science of designing and building structures, especially ones in which people live and work. The words "architecture" and "architect" do not occur in the Bible except in Hebrews 11:10 (NIV, REB, NASB). The focus of the Bible is on people's relationship to God and not on the physical aspects of human culture. But a study of the architecture of the Bible is important because of the insights it can give on how people lived during these ancient times.

What Bible students know about architecture comes almost entirely from the numerous excavations that have taken place in the Near East during the past 150 years. Today that knowledge is considerable. As archaeology has matured and its techniques have improved, scholars are in the position to learn a great deal about life during biblical times. But our understanding is still very incomplete.

Bible students are limited because the vast majority of the available information still lies buried under the earth. Of the scores of known cities and villages in the Near East, only a fraction have been touched by trained archaeologists. Virtually all of those that have been excavated have been only partially done. Archaeologists project that it would take 800 years to excavate Hazor at the current rate of excavation.

Scholars are also limited in their understanding of the architecture of the ancient Near East because destruction and the passing of time leave very little to uncover and study. Usually little more than the foundations of an ancient structure remain. This offers limited opportunity to learn about such things as doors, windows, walls, and the roof or how the entire structure was built.

In spite of its difficulties, studying the architecture of Bible times is a worthwhile undertaking. Its greatest value consists of the light it throws on difficult biblical passages. For example, Rahab's house in Jericho was described as if it were a part of the city wall. She lowered the Israelite spies down from a window and let them escape (Josh. 2:1–15). Archaeologists have discovered that some cities of that time had casemate walls—a type of construction in which two parallel walls about five or more feet apart were tied together with short walls at regular intervals. This created a cavity with a series of rooms. Sometimes these rooms were used as houses built inside the wall. Apparently such an arrangement was in use at Jericho at the time when Joshua and the Israelites captured the city.

The architecture of a people at any one time represents a blend of many different factors. One factor was the available building materials. Stone and mud were common in Bible times, so these are what the builders used. Climate also played a major role. The mild climate of Canaan allowed many activities to take place in the open air; so a courtyard served as an essential part of most houses. The lack of rain during half the year, and no significant snowfall, made a flat roof a practical architectural feature in Canaan.

Tradition is another major consideration. Change did not take place rapidly in ancient times. The housing of one period is generally about the same as that from several centuries earlier. Often changes in architecture came as a result of contact with the outside world. Contact through trade, conquest, or political alliances could bring major changes. The widespread use of cut stones in public buildings during the early part of the United Kingdom under David and Solomon can be traced to Israel's close contacts with the Phoenicians, who were expert stoneworkers.

Although architects of the ancient world designed and guided the construction of public buildings, the ordinary person usually built his own home with the help of friends. He was more interested in whether the house would be safe and comfortable for his family than he was in its appearance. Only the wealthy could afford to beautify their homes and hire craftsmen to include some of the features found in royal palaces.

Building Materials. Israel is a rugged, rocky land with many mountains. Because of the scarcity of forests, wood was not plentiful enough to be used as the major building material. The Israelites used two materials that were more common—clay and rock. The typical building had walls made of limestone rocks, piled on top of one another. Holes between the rocks were filled with smaller rocks. Then the entire wall was covered with a layer of mud or plaster. Only rarely were the stones cut or shaped in any way.

The neighbors of the Israelites, the Phoenicians and the Canaanites, were experts at stone working. Unlike the Israelites, they used cut stone in their public buildings and palaces. Limestone is an excellent stone for such purposes because it is soft enough to be chiseled easily. Often the stones were squared on the sides that touched other stones in the wall while the two faces were left rough.

Walls in Old Testament times were sometimes made of rectangular blocks in what is called the header-stretcher method. Two blocks set perpendicular to the wall were placed on top of three blocks placed parallel to the wall, with the next course staggered a bit so that the joints did not align. Because earthquakes were common in the area, occasionally wood beams were used to tie the whole wall together. At times squared stones were used at the corners of buildings, and the section of wall between the corners was made of rubble or odd-shaped stones.

Squared stone was used in Israel during periods of the nation's close contact with Phoenicia. Solomon, for instance, employed large crews of Phoenicians in his building projects, which made extensive use of such stone. The same practice was followed during the reign of Ahab, whose wife Jezebel was a Phoenician princess. But during most other periods of their history, the Israelites used uncut stones in their buildings.

The most prolific builder in Palestine was Herod the Great, king of Judea from about 37 B.C. to 4 B.C. A Bible student can visit few places in the Holy Land without being near the ruins of something he built. The stoneworkers he employed were true craftsmen. Without modern equipment or power tools, these men cut and moved large rectangular stones weighing several tons and placed them together without mortar. The joints of those ruins are so tight even today that it is difficult to slip a knife blade between the layers of stone.

In areas of Canaan where stone was lacking or unsuitable, mud bricks were the dominant building material. Mud bricks were familiar to the Hebrew people because their ancestors had spent many years constructing large buildings for the king of Egypt. Bricks were made by preparing a suitable clay, adding water, and mixing them to the right consistency. Straw was sometimes added as a bonding agent. The bricks were formed in square or rectangular molds and then placed in the sun to dry.

In the civilizations that flourished between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers, such as ancient Babylon, bricks were often stamped with the name of the reigning king. When the bricks were to be subjected to the weather or heavy use, they were baked. Mud bricks usually were joined with mud for mortar, although occasionally bitumen was used. Bitumen was a natural tar-like substance.

The problem with mud bricks is that they tend to dissolve when subjected to water over a period of time. Walls were sometimes sealed with a layer of waterproof plaster to prevent this. Otherwise, the homeowner had to repair the lower part of the wall periodically because of water erosion. When archaeologists excavate a site, they must take great care not to dig through mud-brick walls, since these are very similar to the ground around them.

City walls were sometimes built from both mud bricks and stone. The foundation and lower courses would be made of stone, with the upper part formed of mud bricks. It is hard to know how common this building method was in Israel, since archaeologists rarely find walls still standing that are more than a few feet high.

Roofs in buildings of all periods in Canaan were usually flat. They were constructed by placing logs or squared beams on top of walls. Next came a layer of branches, thatch, or reeds, and finally a layer of packed clay or plaster. If clay was used as the final layer, it had to be repaired frequently. Large stone rollers that were used to pack the clay have been found by archaeologists.

Arched roofs first appeared in Palestine around the fifth century B.C. during the time of Persian domination. By the time of Christ they were common in the homes of the wealthy. Sometimes these roofs were constructed from mud bricks or stone, and sometimes from beams, thatch, and mud, like the typical flat roof.

Pillars were used when the room was too wide to be spanned easily with the shorter beams available. This construction technique was first used long before the time of Abraham. Pillars were made of a variety of materials, including squared slabs of limestone, mud bricks, and stone bases topped by wooden posts.

Construction of Fortifications. During Old Testament times, most cities were surrounded by two walls, the outer being the thicker. Sometimes the two walls were tied together at regular intervals by short connecting walls, forming what archaeologists call a casemate wall. A typical casemate wall might have an outer wall five feet thick, an inner wall four feet thick, and connecting joints between them about every five feet. Such a wall had greater strength than just the outer wall by itself. Walls of this type have been uncovered at Megiddo, Hazor, and other cities from the period of the United Kingdom in Israel’s history.

But casemate walls were generally abandoned in favor of a single, more massive wall. The Assyrians introduced an improved battering ram that enabled them to break down ordinary casemate walls in a matter of days. Casemate walls continued in use in some places, such as at Masada. Sometimes an existing casemate wall was used, but the gaps within the casemate were filled with rubble.

The wall that replaced the casemate wall is called the offset-inset wall. This wall was considerably thicker and had a series of offsets, or projecting towers, that added strength and allowed a city’s defenders, in many places, to fire on the attackers from three sides.

City walls were usually built of massive boulders piled on top of one another. Smaller stones were used at the top of the wall and to fill in the gaps between the larger rocks at the bottom. The whole wall, from top to bottom, was generally plastered with a limestone and mud mixture. King Solomon used squared stones in the walls of Megiddo, Gezer, and other fortified cities, but this was the exception rather than the rule until some time after the fall of Jerusalem in 586 B.C. Occasionally mud bricks were used in a wall's construction. The city wall at Dan during the time of Abraham and his immediate descendants is a good example of this type.

Builders of city walls made the approaches to the city as difficult as possible for the attackers. Most cities were located on high ground as a defensive measure. As cities were destroyed, leveled, and rebuilt, the ground upon which they were situated rose higher. During the period after 1000 B.C., many old cities, such as Beth Shan and Hazor, sat on more than nine meters (thirty feet) of ruins from previous occupations. These steep slopes (glacis) were often plastered to make them smooth and then covered by the defenders with oil to make them difficult to climb.

If the wall was not protected by a natural slope, the defenders sometimes dug a wide, dry moat around the wall as an additional defensive measure. This was very common in Canaan at the time of the patriarchs when some cities expanded greatly in size. At Hazor, a huge, dry moat was dug on the western side of the lower city. The dirt from this moat was heaped up around the wall to continue the slope and to create an artificial ridge. A defensive wall was then built on top of this ridge.

The city gate was a favorite target for an attacking army. To prevent direct attack on the gate, the defenders often placed the road leading up to the gate parallel to the wall. The road was then arranged so it made a turn just in front of the gate. This allowed the defenders to get a good shot at the attackers just before they reached the gate.

Often a series of two or three gates were built through the walls. After the attackers had battered down the first gate and were working on the second, they could be hit from all sides by the defenders. The attackers were also greatly limited by this arrangement because only a few at a time could work in the cramped space to break down the second gate. Virtually identical quadruple gateways have been discovered at Megiddo, Hazor, and Gezer (1 Kin. 9:15).

Another element of a city’s defense system was the citadel, or upper city, which had its own walls and gates. It was a smaller city within the larger city. Often this upper section was the original city, and the lower part represented an expansion as the population had increased. The palace, or the residence of the king or other ruling officials, and related buildings frequently were located in this area. If the outer walls were broken, the defenders would fall back to the citadel and use it as their new line of defense.

Construction of Palaces. Little is known about the royal palaces of Samaria and Jerusalem besides the few facts gleaned from the Bible itself. While the remains of Solomon’s palace in Jerusalem have been destroyed, King Saul’s palace-fortress at Gibeah, 4.5 kilometers (3 miles) north of Jerusalem, has been uncovered by archaeologists. It consisted of a large rectangular courtyard surrounded by a casemate wall, with a large square tower in each corner.

The excavators found only one corner of the palace intact. Only the first floor storage area was found. Much of the rest had eroded. The second floor, where the living quarters of Saul would have been located, was gone. What remained spoke of a rustic, simple existence—nothing like the lavish palace of Solomon. Saul’s royal palace was probably much like the palace of Jebusite Jerusalem from which David reigned after he captured the city.

Because of the clear Phoenician influence during Solomon’s reign, Syrian palaces from Solomon’s time should provide a glimpse of what Solomon’s palace might have looked like. The typical layout for palaces in northern Syria at that time is called the bit-hilani palace. A number of these palaces have been excavated, and all have basically the same plan.

The approach to the palace was by means of a short flight of stairs that led to a recessed porch enclosed by the building on three sides. The porch was supported by one to three pillars. To the side of this porch was a flight of stairs that led to the royal apartments upstairs. Straight ahead was the entrance to the throne room, which was situated at right angles to the entrance. This meant that a person entering the building had to turn to face the throne. Around the throne room were a number of administrative and storage rooms, as well as the royal quarters. The servants’ quarters were located at one end of the palace, out of sight.

The lower part of the walls in public areas of the royal palace were frequently covered with large slabs of carved, decorated stone. The walls had foundations and lower courses of stone, but the upper walls were constructed of a pattern of mud bricks and squared wooden beams. The wood did not show because the whole wall was covered with plaster and usually painted. Some scholars believe wood may have been included to make the palace earthquake-proof.

Solomon built an elaborate royal palace for himself in Jerusalem after he constructed the temple. Jerusalem was built on the southern end of a long ridge that ran from north to south. The temple was located on a higher area to the north of the old, original city. Solomon built his palace between the city and the temple in an area where the ridge narrowed. He widened the ridge by building a sloping stone wall that ran down into the Kidron Valley.

Most of this sloping wall has been uncovered by archaeologists. Unfortunately, the top of the ridge had been stripped to bedrock and quarried extensively at some time in the past, so nothing remains of Solomon's palace and most of the original city of Jerusalem.

Judging from the biblical description of Solomon's palace in 1 Kings 7, archaeologists know it consisted of a series of public and private rooms built around several courtyards. There was an official throne room, a hall of pillars, and a house of the forest of Lebanon, as well as the royal private quarters for Solomon himself and separate quarters for his many wives. First Kings 7:1–12 specifically names a complex for the Egyptian princess whom he married. A large section of housing must have been provided also for Solomon's many servants and craftsmen who kept the royal household running. Administrative and storage sections were probably also a part of the palace complex.

After the northern tribes split from Judah to form their own nation of Israel, they eventually chose Samaria as their capital. Samaria was partially excavated in the 1930s. Unlike Jerusalem, the city was almost entirely taken up with official buildings. Portions of the royal palaces of Omri and his son Ahab came to light.

Architecture of Temples. The site of the temple in Jerusalem is covered today by the Dome of the Rock, a Muslim holy place, making excavation impossible. But judging from the description of the temple in 1 Kings 6, this structure consisted of two parts—the Holy Place and the Holy of Holies. In front of the temple stood a porch with two pillars known as Jachin and Boaz (1 Kin. 7:21). But the description from the Bible is not complete enough to help scholars make an accurate reconstruction, although several attempts have been made.

With the discovery of a Syrian temple that had a plan very similar to the Jerusalem temple, most scholars today look to palaces of the same time for help in understanding the appearance of Solomon's temple. This is a sensible approach, because Solomon employed a number of Phoenician craftsmen from the territory of the Syrians to help build the temple. The man responsible for all the bronze objects in the structure was a half-Israelite from Tyre named Hiram.

In the temple from Syria discovered at Tell Tainat, the porch was enclosed on three sides, like the porch of a bit-hilani palace. The two columns in front supported the roof of this porch and were not freestanding. A Canaanite shrine from Hazor that dates to about the time of Moses followed a similar plan. The walls of this shrine had timbers placed between courses of stone, just like the design of Solomon's palace (1 Kings 12).

An Israelite temple has been discovered at Tell Arad in southern Judah. The overall plan was similar to that of the tabernacle and the temple. It had an outer courtyard with an altar, an inner courtyard, two bases for pillars to flank the entrance to the temple, a Holy Place, and a Holy of Holies. The Holy of Holies contained two incense altars, a small raised area, and a stone pillar. This temple was built when the Israelites occupied the site around 1000 B.C. It apparently continued in use until the time of Hezekiah and Josiah of Judah about 700 B.C. These two kings sought to eliminate the numerous regional worship places scattered throughout the country in order to concentrate worship of God in the temple at Jerusalem and prevent idolatry in the land.

The temple of Solomon in Jerusalem was renovated several times before its destruction by the invading Babylonians in 586 B.C. When the Jews rebuilt it upon their return to Jerusalem about 50 years later, it was a much more modest structure (Hag. 2:3). Nothing is known about the appearance of the second temple. Herod the Great, king of Judea from 37 B.C. to 4 B.C., started a total rebuilding of the temple, enlarging the outer court considerably. Work on this temple was still being done under other Roman officials when Jesus was crucified in Jerusalem.

The structure was not completed until A.D. 64, just six years before it was destroyed by the Romans when they put down a revolt by the Jews.

Bits and pieces of this temple have been found in excavations that have taken place outside the walls of the temple enclosure. The only known ancient description of “Herod’s temple” comes from the Jewish historian Josephus. Impressive because of its extensive use of gold and other expensive materials, it was considered an architectural marvel at that time.

Houses. During the 2,000 years from Abraham’s time until Jesus’ earthly ministry, the home of the common people in Palestine did not change a great deal. They sometimes contained two stories and consisted of several rooms arranged around a courtyard. The walls were made of stone rubble and covered with plaster or mud, although in some areas of the nation the walls were constructed of mud bricks.

The floors of these houses were generally made of packed clay. The flat roof was formed by placing logs across the tops of the walls, which were covered first by boards or branches, then thatch or reeds, and finally a layer of clay. Most homes were owner-built.

In the mild climate of Palestine, many family activities took place outside the house in the courtyard. Here food was prepared and the children played. The flat roof provided another place for outside activities. As a safety measure, it was surrounded by a low wall, in keeping with the Jewish law, to prevent people from falling off the roof. In the crowded cities, families slept on the roofs during hot summer nights. A food storage room or extra bedroom might also be located on the roof. If the house had two stories, the family generally lived upstairs. Downstairs was reserved for storage and the family’s domestic animals. By modern standards, these houses were plain and unimpressive. Walls might be plastered and whitewashed to make the interior brighter, but ornate trim and other frills were reserved for the wealthy.

The homes of wealthy families had more variety. The largest houses in Palestinian cities at the time of Abraham were similar to homes in Mesopotamia. At the time of Christ, they resembled those found throughout the Roman Empire, with arched roofs, tiled floors, and porches surrounding the courtyards.

The only authentically Israelite house was the four-room house. This type of structure first appeared in Israelite towns about 1000 B.C. and continued essentially unchanged for several centuries.

A four-room house consisted of a long, rectangular courtyard with a row of rooms on each side. The house was entered through a door in one of the narrow walls of the courtyard. At the other end of the courtyard was another row of rooms. The resulting house was U-shaped, with the courtyard in the middle. Sometimes the rooms along one side were left open on the courtyard side. These were probably used as a stable area for the livestock. Many of these four-room houses had a second story with the bedrooms located upstairs.

The typical house of this style had about 900 to 1,500 square feet, depending on whether it was one or two stories. But this area included the courtyard, the stables, and a large food storage area as well as living space. And if the family practiced a trade, this was also carried out in a room at home.

◆

• Massive stones, carefully cut and fitted into place, were used extensively in the architecture of the ancient world.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- Ancient Baalbek, the site of a temple dedicated to Jupiter, contains excellent examples of classical Roman architecture.

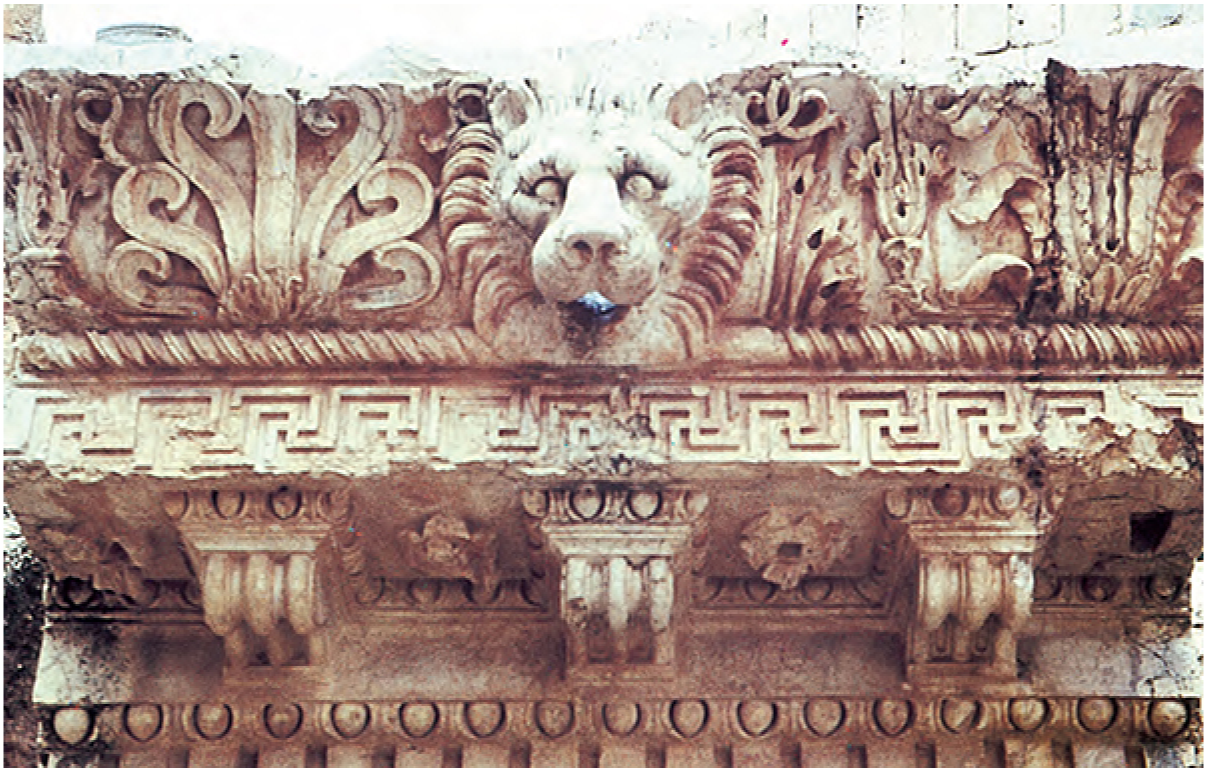

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• The columns of the temple to Jupiter at Baalbek were capped by this elaborate carving. The lion’s head served as a downspout for the gutters.

Photo by Howard Vos

• The palace of King Darius I at Persepolis, showing the distinctive Persian style of architecture.

ARCHITES [AR kites]—members of the clan of Ataroth in Ephraim (Josh. 16:2; Arkites, NIV). Hushai the Archite was King David's "secret agent" in Absalom's rebellion (2 Sam. 17:14). Ahithophel advised Absalom to pursue and destroy David's army, but Hushai encouraged Absalom to wait (2 Sam. 15:32; 1 Chr. 27:33). Absalom waited and was defeated (2 Sam. 18:1–18).

ARCHWAY—a roofed and partially enclosed section in the temple in Jerusalem that was described by the prophet Ezekiel in his vision (Ezek. 40:16–36; portico, NIV). Other words used to describe this part of the temple are arch (1 Kin. 6:3, KJV) and vestibule (1 Chr. 28:11, NKJV). Also see ARCHITECTURE.

ARCTURUS [ark TOO rus] (bear keeper)—KJV translation of a Hebrew word meaning "crowd," and referring to a constellation of stars. The NKJV translates the word as "the Bear" (Job 9:9) and "the Great Bear with its cubs" (Job 38:32)—the "cubs" being a reference to the seven main stars of this constellation.

ARD [ard]—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Benjamin (Gen. 46:21).
2. A son of Bela and a grandson of Benjamin (Num. 26:40), also called Addar (1 Chr. 8:3).

ARDITE [ARD ite]—a descendant of ARD (Num. 26:40).

ARDON [AR dun]—a son of Caleb (1 Chr. 2:18).

ARELI [a REE lih] (heroic)—a son of Gad (Gen. 46:16) and founder of the tribal family known as the ARELITES (Num. 26:17).

ARELITES [a REE lites]—descendants of ARELI (Num. 26:17).

AREOPAGITE [air ee OP ah gyte]—a member of the court, or council, of the AREOPAGUS (Acts 17:34). Also see DIONYSIUS.

AREOPAGUS [air ee OP ah gus] (hill of the god Ares)—a limestone hill in Athens situated between the ACROPOLIS and the AGORA; by association, also the council which often met on or near the hill. The apostle Paul addressed the Areopagus in his "philosophical sermon" that attempted to meet the objections of the Epicurean and Stoic philosophers to the gospel (Acts 17:16–34).

Paul's speech before the Areopagus (Acts 17:22–31) is a good example of the council meeting to discuss and evaluate a philosophical issue. Paul argued about the nature of God and the way God relates to human beings, especially through Jesus Christ. Paul's argument must have made an impact on the council. "Dionysius the Areopagite" was among those who joined Paul and believed in Christ (Acts 17:34).

Paul's argument on the Areopagus is extremely important. It identifies the decisive difference between Greek philosophy and the Christian faith. Apparently the philosophers were not greatly troubled by Paul's talking about God or God's relationship to people. But when he spoke of the resurrection of Jesus, they mocked him, although some apparently gave his words careful thought (Acts 17:32). The resurrection of Jesus was, and continues to be, a decisive element in Christian theology. It always provokes controversy among unbelievers.

Today Paul’s speech is affixed in Greek on a tablet at the entrance to the Areopagus. With the benches carved into the rock and the worn steps to the summit, it stands as a monument to a time when the Athenians deliberated before the gods and missed the significance of the One whom Paul identified with the “unknown God�� (Acts 17:23).

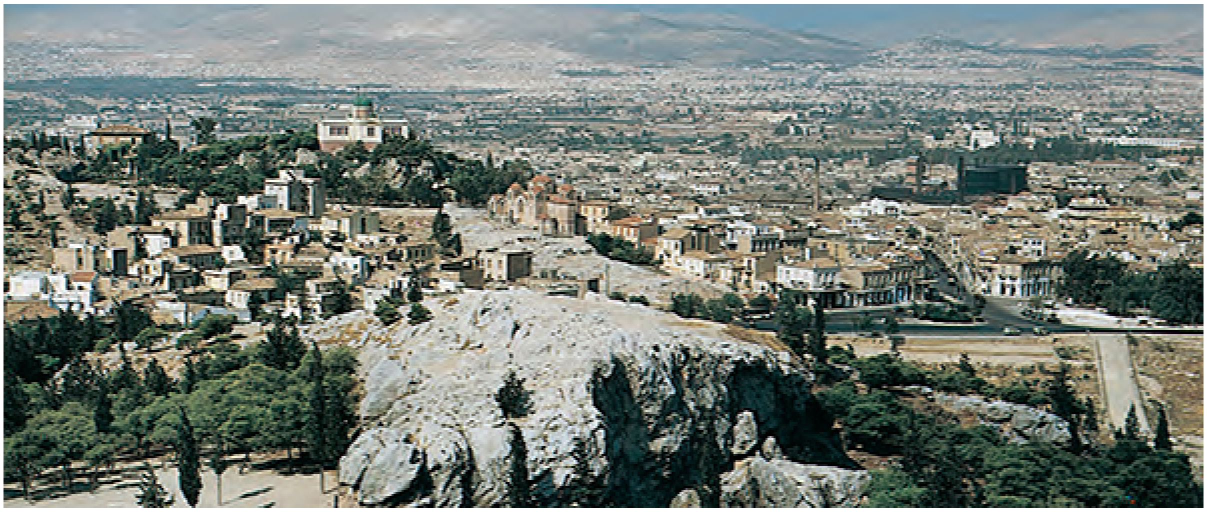

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• The Areopagus (Mars’ Hill) is a little hill near the acropolis in Athens where Paul may have been brought before the philosophers of this city (Acts 17:16–34). Paul may have been brought before the philosophers of this city (Acts 17:16–34).

ARETAS [AIR ee tus]—a name borne by Arabian kings at Damascus and Petra. The Aretas mentioned in 2 Corinthians 11:32–33 was Aretas IV (9 B.C.—A.D. 40).

ARGOB [AR gob]—the name of a place and a man in the Old Testament:

1. A district in the kingdom of Og, in northern TRANSJORDAN. It was either a part of Bashan or was a word for the region of Bashan itself.
2. A man mentioned in connection with the murder of Pekahiah (2 Kin. 15:25).

ARIDAI [a RID a eye]—a son of Haman who was hanged like his father (Esth. 9:9).

ARIDATHA [a RID ah thah]—a son of Haman who was hanged like his father (Esth. 9:8).

ARIEH [a RIE ee] (lion)—a man mentioned in connection with the murder of Pekahiah (2 Kin. 15:25).

ARIEL [AIR ih el]—the name of a city and three men in the Bible:

1, 2. Two men of Moab killed by Benaiah. They are called "lion-like heroes" (2 Sam. 23:20; 1 Chr. 11:22). Because of uncertainty about the exact meaning of the phrase, it is translated as "sons of Ariel" (NASB), "two sons of Ariel" (NRSV), and "best men" (NIV).

3. The man whom Ezra sent to Iddo at Casiphia (Ezra 8:16).
4. A symbolic name of Jerusalem (Is. 29:1–2, 7), perhaps meaning "city of God" or "lion of God."

ARIMATHEA [air ih mah THEE ah] (height)—a city in the Judean hills northwest of Jerusalem (see Map 6, A–4). It was the home of Joseph, a member of the Jewish Sanhedrin in Jerusalem, who placed the body of Jesus in his new tomb (Luke 23:50).

ARIOCH [AIR ih ock]—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. The king of Ellasar, a city probably located in southern Babylonia. Arioch was an ally of CHEDORLAOMER in his fight to regain control over the rebellious kings of Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboiim, and Bela (Gen. 14:1–9).
2. The captain of Nebuchadnezzar's bodyguard (Dan. 2:14–15, 24–25).

ARISAI [a RIS ah eye]—a son of Haman who was hanged like his father (Esth. 9:9).

ARISTARCHUS [air ihs TAR kus] (best ruler)—a Macedonian of Thessalonica who traveled with the apostle Paul on his third missionary journey through Asia Minor (Acts 19:29; 20:4; 27:2). He was with Paul during the riot at Ephesus (Acts 19:29); later, he preceded Paul to Troas (Acts 20:4–6). A faithful companion and friend, Aristarchus accompanied Paul to Rome (Acts 27:2), where he attended the apostle and shared his imprisonment.

ARISTOBULUS [a ris tow BUE lus] (best adviser)—a Roman to whose household Paul sent greetings (Rom. 16:10). According to an old tradition, Aristobulus was a brother of Barnabas, and he was ordained a bishop by Paul and Barnabas.

ARK OF THE COVENANT—a sacred portable chest which—along with its two related items, the MERCY SEAT and CHERUBIM—was the most important sacred object of the Israelites during the wilderness period. It was also known as the ark of the Lord (Josh. 6:11), the ark of God (1 Sam. 3:3), and the ark of the Testimony (a synonym of covenant; Ex. 25:22).

The ark of the covenant was the only article of furniture in the innermost room, or Holy of Holies, of Moses' tabernacle and of Solomon's temple. From between the two cherubim that were on the ark of the Testimony, God spoke to Moses. Once a year, on the Day of Atonement, the high priest could enter the Holy of Holies, but only with sacrificial blood that he sprinkled on the mercy seat for the atonement of sin (Leviticus 16).

Description. The Hebrew word translated as ark is also translated as coffin. In the last verse of the Book of Genesis, this word is used of the coffin in which Joseph's embalmed body was placed after he died in Egypt (Gen. 50:26). The ark of the covenant was also a "coffin," or chest $2^1/_2$ cubits long, $1^1/_2$ cubits wide, and $1^1/_2$ cubits deep (or, in inches, about 45 by 27 by 27). The builder of the ark was a man named Bezaleel (Ex. 37:1).

The ark was made of acacia wood (shittim wood, KJV) overlaid with gold. It had four rings of gold through which carrying poles were inserted (Ex. 37:1–9). These poles were never removed from the rings, apparently to show that the ark was a portable sanctuary. Even when the ark was placed in Solomon's temple, the poles stayed in place, and they could be seen from a certain point outside the inner sanctuary (1 Kin. 8:8).

The ark had a gold cover known as the "mercy seat" (Ex. 25:17–22) because the blood of a sacrificial animal was applied to it on the Day of Atonement, signifying the mercy of God to forgive sin. The ark had a gold molding or "crown" surrounding the top edge. The mercy seat was a slab of pure gold that fit exactly within the crown of the ark, so the mercy seat could not slide around during transportation.

Of one piece with the mercy seat were two angelic statues called cherubim. They stood at opposite ends of the mercy seat, facing each other with wings outstretched above and their faces bowed toward the mercy seat. They marked the place where the Lord sat enthroned (1 Sam. 4:4; 2 Sam. 6:2) as well as the place where He communicated with Moses.

Contents. Within the ark were the two stone tablets containing the Ten Commandments (Ex. 25:16, 21), considered to be the basis of the covenant between God and His people Israel. Thus the ark was often called the ark of the Testimony. The golden pot of MANNA, which God miraculously preserved as a testimony to future generations (Ex. 16:32–34), was also deposited in the ark. The third item in the ark was AARON'S ROD that budded to prove that Aaron was God's chosen (Num. 17:1–11).

While the New Testament states that the ark contained these three items (Heb. 9:4), the ark must have lost two of them through the years. At the dedication of Solomon's temple, Aaron's rod and the golden pot of manna were gone: "There was nothing in the ark except the two tablets of stone which Moses put there at Horeb" (1 Kin. 8:9).

History. The ark was carried by the sons of Levi during the wilderness wanderings (Deut. 31:9). Carried into the Jordan River by the priests, the ark caused the waters to part so Israel could cross on dry ground (Josh. 3:6—4:18). During the conquest of the land of Canaan, the ark was carried at the fall of Jericho (Josh. 6:4–11); later it was deposited at Shiloh, which had become the home of the tabernacle (Josh. 18:1).

Trusting the “magic power” of the ark rather than God, the Israelites took the ark into battle against the Philistines and suffered a crushing defeat (1 Sam. 4:1–11). The Philistines captured the ark, only to send it back when disaster struck their camp (1 Samuel 5–6). It remained at Kirjath Jearim until David brought it to Jerusalem (1 Chr. 13:3–14; 15:1–28). Solomon established it in the Holy of Holies of the temple that he built.

Nothing is known of what became of the ark. It disappeared when Nebuchadnezzar’s armies destroyed Jerusalem in 586 B.C. and was not available when the second and third temples were built. Synagogues today continue the centuries-old tradition of providing a special place for a chest or ark containing the Torah (scrolls of the Law).

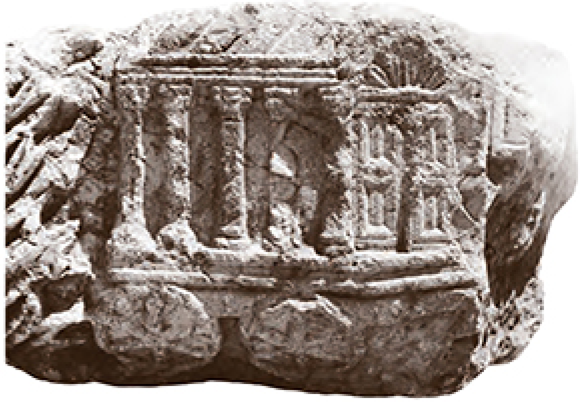

Photo: Levant Photo Service

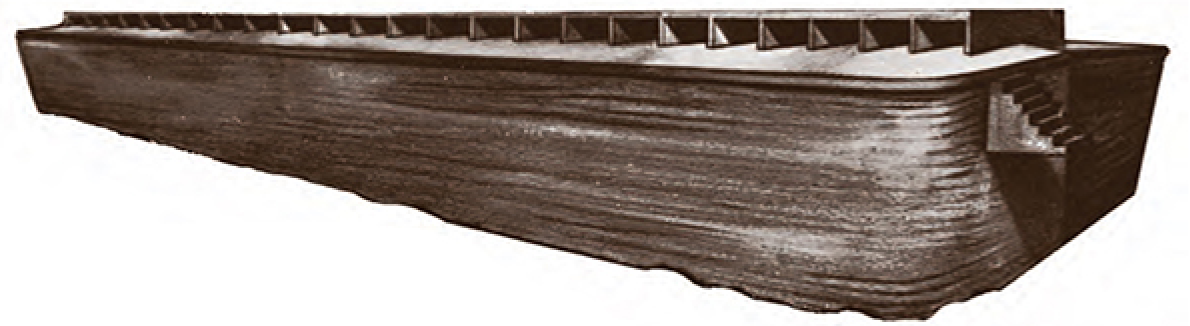
- A stone carving that may represent the Ark of the Covenant, discovered at the excavation of a synagogue in Capernaum.

ARK OF MOSES—a small basket-like container in which Moses was hidden by his mother to save him from the slaughter of Hebrew children by the Egyptian Pharaoh (Ex. 2:3–6). The basket was made of woven PAPYRUS reeds and sealed with a tar-like pitch. The lid on the basket kept insects and the sun off the child so he could sleep. The ark was discovered by the daughter of Pharaoh when she came to bathe at the river.

ARK, NOAH'S—a vessel built by Noah to save him, his family, and animals from the Flood (Gen. 6:14—9:18). God commanded Noah to make the ark of gopherwood (Gen. 6:14). Many scholars believe gopherwood is cypress, which was noted for its lightness and durability and therefore was used extensively in shipbuilding by the Phoenicians.

Noah's ark was 300 cubits long, 50 cubits wide, and 30 cubits high (Gen. 6:15)—about 450 feet long, 75 feet wide, and 45 feet high. The ark was constructed with three "decks," or stories (Gen. 6:16). When Noah and his family and all the animals entered the ark, God himself shut its door to ensure their safety against the raging flood (Gen. 7:16). In this way God sealed the judgment against the ungodly who had refused to heed Noah's warnings. When the waters subsided after the Flood, the ark rested on the mountains of ARARAT (Gen. 8:4).

In the New Testament, Jesus spoke of the Flood and of Noah and the ark, comparing "the days of Noah" with the time of "the coming of the Son of Man" (Matt. 24:37–38; Luke 17:26–27). The ark is a striking illustration of salvation through Christ, who preserves us from the flood of divine judgment.



• An artist's conception of Noah's ark, based on information from an explorer who claimed he saw the ark on Mt. Ararat in 1908.

ARK OF THE TESTIMONY (see ARK OF THE COVENANT).

ARKITES [AR kights]—a tribe descended from Canaan (Gen. 10:17; 1 Chr. 1:15). They lived at Arka, in PHOENICIA. The modern site is Tell 'Arka, located about 19 kilometers (12 miles) north of Tripolis, in Syria. Also see ARCHITES.

ARM—a word frequently used in the Bible as a symbol of God's power, strength, or might (Ps. 89:13; Is. 53:1). The most common reference is to His deliverance during the Exodus, when He redeemed Israel from bondage in Egypt (Ps. 77:15; Is. 63:12).

ARMAGEDDON [ar mah GED un] (mountain of Megiddo)—the site of the final battle of this age in which God intervenes to destroy the armies of Satan and to cast Satan into the bottomless pit (Rev. 16:16). Scholars disagree about the exact location of this place, but the most likely possibility is the valley between Mount Carmel and the city of Jezreel. This valley (known as the Valley of Jezreel and sometimes referred to as the Plain of Esdraelon) was the crossroads of two ancient trade routes and thus was a strategic military site and the scene of many ancient battles.

Because of this history, Megiddo became a symbol of the final conflict between God and the forces of evil. According to the Book of Revelation, at Armageddon “the cup of the wine of the fierceness of His [God’s] wrath” (Rev. 16:19) will be poured out, and the forces of evil will be overthrown and destroyed.

ARMENIAN VERSIONS (see BIBLE VERSIONS AND TRANSLATIONS).

ARMONI [ar MOE nih]—a son of King Saul by his concubine Rizpah, daughter of Aiah (2 Sam. 21:1, 8–9).

ARMOR (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

ARMOR BEARER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

ARMOR OF GOD—an expression that symbolizes the combat equipment of a Christian soldier who fights against spiritual wickedness; the full resources of God that are available to all who take up the cross and follow Christ. Because our spiritual enemy is stronger than we are, we must “put on the whole armor of God” (Eph. 6:11, 13).

ARMORER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

ARMORY—an official storehouse, or treasury, for military weapons (2 Kin. 20:13; Is. 39:2; arsenal, NIV). In Jeremiah 50:25, the word “armory” and the term “weapons of His indignation” are used as a symbol of God’s wrath and judgment over Israel’s sin. Also see DAVID, TOWER OF.

ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE—weapons of war used for offense and defense. Since warfare is mentioned so frequently in the Bible, arms and armor are also frequently mentioned.

Knowledge about arms and armor in ancient Canaan and surrounding nations comes from archeological discoveries, engravings showing battle scenes, and references and descriptions in the Bible and other documents from the ancient world.

The forms and uses of weapons and armor changed from the beginning of the Old Testament period until the end of the New Testament period. Certain weapons that were very important in one period became outdated and fell from use in a later time. This occurred because nations competed with one another in developing more effective weapons. When one nation developed a shield that could not be penetrated effectively by the arrows of an enemy, then the enemy set out to develop a more powerful bow and better arrows. The weapons race is nothing new. It has been with people and nations since earliest history.

The following offensive and defensive weapons and armor are mentioned in the Bible. This list is keyed to the New King James Version, with cross-references from five additional popular translations—KJV, NASB, REB, NIV, and NRSV.

Arrow (see Bow).

Ax. Battle ax (Jer. 51:20, NKJV, KJV, REB) and war club (Jer. 51:20, NIV, NASB) are names used by various translations of the Bible for the ancient ax, also known as the mace. Maces and axes are simple extensions of the club. A mace is a club with a metal head for greater efficiency in hand-to-hand combat. A mace was used frequently in the period before Abraham. But with the development of helmets, the mace was less effective. Maces continued to serve a symbolic function. For instance, the scepter, a symbol of authority used by ancient kings, probably had its origin in the war mace.

Axes remained important military weapons throughout the Old Testament period. An ax also served as a domestic tool (1 Chr. 20:3). One major problem in making axes was the fastening of ax heads to the handles. A fascinating miracle recorded in the Old Testament concerns a poorly fastened ax head that flew off its handle into the Jordan River. The prophet Elisha recovered the ax head by causing it to float (2 Kin. 6:5–7).

The ax remained an important military weapon because of its ability to pierce armor. The Old Testament describes the Egyptian (Jer. 46:22) and Babylonian armies (Ezek. 26:9) as attacking with axes. During Israel’s early history, few axes existed in Canaan because the Philistines had a monopoly on metalwork (1 Sam. 13:19–23).

Battering Ram. The battering ram was a war machine used to destroy a city’s walls (Ezek. 26:9; engine of war, KJV). Although the battering ram was made in many shapes and sizes, a typical one featured a long, pointed pole that was driven with great force against a fortified city’s massive stone walls. It took a crew of several men to operate the battering ram. Many models provided extensive protection for the crew, since the city’s defenders usually fired upon them as they worked. The whole machine was mounted on wheels for easy movement. The prophet Ezekiel showed a knowledge of the use of battering rams (Ezek. 4:2; 21:22).

Battle Ax (see Ax).

Battle Bow (see Bow).

Belt (see Body Armor).

Body Armor. By about 3000 B.C., primitive body armor was worn by soldiers in many nations of the ancient world. The term armor may describe anything from thick leather clothing to metal mail. General terms for body armor used in different translations of the Bible include coat of mail (Ex. 28:32, NKJV, NASB); habergeon (Ex. 28:32, KJV); and brigandine (Jer. 46:4, KJV).

Specific pieces of armor for the body mentioned in the Bible include: breastplate (Neh. 4:16, NASB); belt, a wide piece of metal that protected a warrior's lower trunk and stomach (1 Sam. 18:4; girdle, NRSV); and greaves, protective devices for the legs (1 Sam. 17:6).

Bow. Bows were the most characteristic weapons of warfare in the Old Testament period, serving often as the decisive element in a battle. Simple bows were used in the prehistoric period, mostly for hunting.

Simple bows, composed of a piece of wood and string, were easy to make. Bows like this did not have much power or range; so the composite bow was developed early in the history of the Near East. The composite bow was a combination of wood and animal horn. This combination of materials provided the bow with the flexibility and strength needed for effective combat. But a composite bow was difficult to use. Thus certain units within an army were specially trained to shoot the bow.

The bow was usually the first weapon fired in an open-field battle, because the archers of the hostile armies could send arrows from long distances. Chariot troops often were equipped with bows. This combination of mobility and firepower made the army a potent war machine. When attacking a city, the archers of the attacking army would try to pick city defenders off the walls. Archers of the defending city would use their bows to try to keep the army from getting close enough to break down the city's defenses.

The destructive agent of a bow was the arrow, a long, slender shaft of wood with a tip of sharp stone or metal. The archer was also equipped with a quiver, a deep, narrow basket constructed especially for arrows.

Bows, arrows, and archers are mentioned often in the Old Testament, beginning with the boy Ishmael, who “became an archer” (Gen. 21:20; expert with the bow, NRSV). Another term for bow used by some translations is “battle bow” (Zech. 9:10, NKJV, NRSV, NIV).

Breastplate (see Body Armor).

Brigandine (see Body Armor).

Buckler (see Shield).

Chariot. The chariot rivalled the composite bow in its effectiveness as a weapon. But only wealthier nations could establish and maintain a chariot force.

Chariots were introduced in MESOPOTAMIA (the land between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers) about 2800 B.C. These machines of war served as mobile firing platforms. The advantage of the chariot is that it can bring great firepower quickly to the key point of the battle. Chariots came in many different forms. They could be two-wheeled or four-wheeled, drawn by two to four horses. Some chariots would carry as many as four warriors.

In combat a chariot usually carried two soldiers—a driver who controlled the reins and a warrior who needed both arms free to fire his bow. In some cases, depending on the nation and the period of history, a third person might serve as a shield-bearer to protect both the warrior and the driver. The warrior was usually equipped with a bow, as well as a medium-range weapon, such as the javelin or spear.

The first chariots mentioned in the Bible belonged to Egypt. Joseph rode in a chariot behind the Pharaoh (Gen. 41:43). A later Pharaoh pursued Moses and the Israelites with his chariot corps (Ex. 14:6–9).

At first, the nation of Israel rejected chariots as tools of warfare (Josh. 11:4–9). Most of Canaan was not suitable for chariot warfare because of its high hills and deep ravines. Also, the spirit of conquest under Joshua was such that the use of a powerful weapon like the chariot might have led Israel to boast in their own power rather than God’s. Solomon, however, developed a chariot corps in his army (1 Kin. 4:26; 9:19). But the chariots in the armies of Judah and Israel had radically diminished by a later time in the history of God’s people (2 Kin. 13:7).

Club. The most primitive weapon of all was the club, consisting in its early development of little more than a piece of wood especially shaped for hand-to-hand combat. In later years metal was added to these primitive weapons, and they evolved into a type of war club (Prov. 25:18, NRSV) or mace. Another variation on the club was the staff, generally used by shepherds to care for their flocks but also mentioned in the Bible as a weapon of war (2 Sam. 23:21; 1 Chr. 11:23). Other words for club used by different translations of the Bible include maul (Prov. 25:18, KJV) and cudgel (Matt. 26:47, REB).

Coat of Mail (see Body Armor).

Cudgel (see Club).

Dagger/Sword. Different translations of the Bible speak of the dagger and the sword as if these two weapons were basically the same. A sword was a piercing or cutting weapon, with which a warrior might stab or slash an enemy. Some swords were designed to pierce, others to slash. All swords had two parts, a handle or hilt and a blade. The blade was usually straight, but one unusual variation was the sickle sword. This weapon featured a curved blade with the sharp edge on the outside. Swords were the basic weapon of a Hebrew soldier. The Biblical phrase that identified a man as a soldier was that he “drew the sword” (2 Kin. 3:26).

Daggers were similar to swords in that they were composed of a hilt and a blade and were used to stab. Their advantage over swords was their ability to be hidden. EHUD, the judge, exploited this advantage by hiding a dagger and stabbing the oppressor Eglon (Judg. 3:16–22).

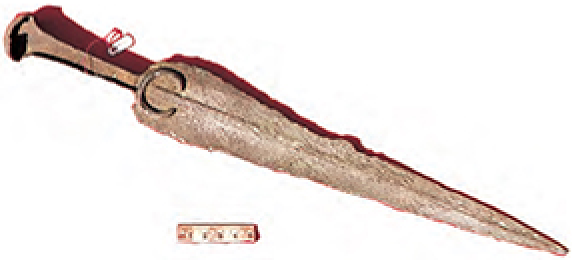

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- A bronze dagger. Daggers and swords were common weapons in Bible times.

Dart (see Javelin/Spear).
Engine of War (see Battering Ram).
Girdle (see Body Armor).
Greaves (see Body Armor).
Handpike (see Javelin/Spear).
Handstaff (see Javelin/Spear).

Helmet. The helmet was a type of hat worn by warriors to protect their heads from physical blows in a military battle (1 Sam. 17:5; Jer. 46:4). Helmets came in all shapes and sizes and were made from many different materials, although metal was the most effective. Since the head is the most vulnerable part of the body, it was the first area covered by armor.

Javelin/Spear. In various translations of the Bible, these two terms are used interchangeably to refer to the same basic weapon—a long, slender shaft with a metal point. The only difference between them is that a spear was heavier and larger than a javelin. Therefore, a spear was used as a thrusting weapon as well as a throwing weapon.

Spears and javelins are mentioned often in the Old Testament. At God’s command, Joshua stretched out his spear toward Ai to show that the city would fall to the Israelites (Josh. 8:18, 19). In a fit of jealousy, Saul tried to kill David with a spear (1 Sam. 18:10, 11).

Other words for spear or javelin used in various translations of the Bible are dart (2 Sam. 18:14, KJV, spear, NRSV); handpike (Ezek. 39:9, NRSV); handstaff (Ezek. 39:9, KJV); lance or lancet (Judg. 5:8, REB; 1 Kin. 18:28, NKJV); and throwing stick (Ezek. 39:9, REB).

Lance, Lancet (see Javelin/Spear).

Mace (see Ax).

Maul (see Club).

Quiver (see Bow).

Shield. The shield was a hard object, generally made of metal, with which a warrior protected his body from the weapons of the enemy. In the biblical period, shields came in all sizes and shapes. Some shields were made of leather or wood. Another word for shield is buckler (1 Chr. 5:18, KJV; 1 Kin. 10:17, REB).

Sling. The sling was first developed and used by shepherds for protecting their livestock against wild animals. This was a simple weapon, composed generally of a small piece of leather or animal hide. Small stones or pebbles were generally used as ammunition in a sling. While the sling is a simple weapon in terms of construction, it is difficult to fire with accuracy. Only trained and experienced soldiers were equipped with slings.

Next to archers, the slingmen were the most effective long-range warriors in Old Testament times. The advantage of such a long-range weapon is illustrated by the most famous sling story of all—David's victory over Goliath. The young, inexperienced David killed the giant because of his trust in God. David also had a decided advantage in the contest because Goliath was armed with a spear and a sword, both of which were short-range weapons.

Slingers were important elements in the Israelite army. The Benjamites also had a unit of 700 left-handed slingers who could "sling a stone at a hair's breadth and not miss" (Judg. 20:16).

Spear (see Javelin/Spear).

Staff (see Club).

Sword (see Dagger/Sword).

Throwing Stick (see Javelin/Spear).

War Club (see Club).

In addition to their military application, arms and armor are also spoken of in a figurative or symbolic way in the Bible. For example, the Bible itself is often called a sword (Eph. 6:17). God's Word, like a sword, is able to slash to the very depths of the human heart (Heb. 4:12). Jesus Christ is portrayed as bearing a sword in His mouth (Rev. 1:16; 19:15). The sword also is an image for God's Word. The Psalms often refer to God as a shield because He protects His people (3:3; 28:7; 33:20).

The fullest development of armor imagery occurs in the Epistle to the Ephesians in the New Testament. The apostle Paul compared the Christian's struggles with evil to a battle in which God provides the believer with the armor and weapons needed to protect oneself against the enemy, Satan: "Put on the whole armor of God, that you may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil" (Eph. 6:10).

◆

Photo by Howard Vos

- A Roman soldier in battle gear, demonstrating some of the pieces of "spiritual armor" mentioned by the apostle Paul (Eph. 6:10–18).

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- A reconstructed Roman catapult. While catapults are not mentioned in the Bible, these war machines were used in ancient times to hurl huge stones at the enemy.

ARMY—a large body of warriors organized and trained for warfare. The nation of Israel developed a regular standing army at a relatively late time in its history. One reason for this is that the nation lacked political unity until the time of the United Kingdom under David and Solomon. The sense that God was the Divine Warrior and would protect His people regardless of their military strength may have been another reason why they were slow to develop an army.

Thus, from the time of Abraham to the beginning of Saul's reign there was no regular army continually prepared to respond to foreign attacks. Instead, the call would go out at the moment of crisis; and able-bodied, nonexempt males would gather in response. The first example comes from Genesis 14, when Abraham's nephew Lot was kidnapped by Chedorlaomer, king of Elam, and his allies. Abraham rallied to Lot's aid by gathering 318 trained men of his household and defeating the foreign forces.

During the years of the Exodus, wilderness wanderings, and conquest of the land of Canaan, the whole nation was temporarily changed into an army. All the men from every tribe participated in the warfare. Numbers 2 pictures the nation of Israel camped as an army in battle, with their Heavenly Commander in the center and the various divisions (individual tribes) dwelling under their battle banners. The same chapter describes the position of each tribe marching behind the ARK OF THE COVENANT as they traveled toward Canaan and holy war. At this time the army was under the command of Moses, and later of Joshua; but each tribal division had its own leader as well.

The period of the judges that followed was characterized by lack of unity and purpose. This was true militarily as well as politically and religiously. At times of military crisis, God would raise up a military leader, called a JUDGE, who would then seek the aid of the tribes in order to gather an army. Judges 5 (particularly vv. 15–18) shows that Deborah, one of these judges, was met with reluctance or indifference from some of the tribes.

The development of a regular standing army in Israel came only after a strong, centralized political system had developed. This came with kings Saul, David, and Solomon. Although Saul began his reign as a type of gifted leader, as were the earlier judges, he soon began to form a permanent army (1 Sam. 13:2; 24:2; 26:2). Nevertheless, the army had to be supported by food and other supplies from the homes of individual soldiers (1 Sam. 17:17–19).

What Saul began, David continued. He increased the army, brought in hired troops from other regions who were loyal to him alone (2 Sam. 15:19–22), and turned over the direct leadership of his armies to a commander-in-chief (Joab). Under David Israel also became more aggressive in its offensive military policies, absorbing neighboring states like Ammon (2 Sam. 11:1; 1 Chr. 20:1–3). David established a system of rotating troops with 12 groups of 24,000 men serving one month of the year (1 Chronicles 27). Although Solomon's reign was peaceful, he further expanded the army, adding chariots and horsemen (1 Kin. 10:26).

The standing army came into existence with these three kings. It continued (though divided along with the kingdom after the death of Solomon) until 586 B.C., when Israel ceased to exist as a political entity.

The most important army to the faithful Israelite was not a human army; it was God’s holy army. The human army could not succeed unless the Lord of hosts led his troops into battle. Thus Joshua conferred with the “commander of the army of the Lord” before the battle of Jericho (Josh. 5:13). David awaited the movement of God’s army in the balsam trees before attacking the Philistines (2 Sam. 5:24). The prophet Elisha prayed that God would open the eyes of Gehazi so he might be comforted by seeing the power of God’s army (2 Kin. 6:8–23).

ARNAN [Ar nan]—a descendant of David through Zerubbabel and founder of a tribal family (1 Chr. 3:21).

ARNON [Ar none]—a swift river that runs through the mountains of TRANSJORDAN and empties into the Dead Sea (see Map 2, C–1). It served as the boundary between Moab and Ammon (Num. 21:24). Now known as the Wadi el-Mojib, it flows through the rugged sandstone ravine that rises more than 503 meters (1,650 feet) above the river.

AROD [AY rod]—a son of Gad (Num. 26:17) and founder of the Arodites (Num. 26:17). He is also called Arodi (Gen. 46:16).

ARODI [AR oh dih]—a form of AROD.

AROER [ah ROW er]—the name of three towns in the Old Testament:

1. A town on the northern bank of the Arnon River (see Map 3, C–5) taken from Sihon, king of the Amorites, and assigned to the tribes of Reuben and Gad (Deut. 2:36; 3:12). Because Aroer was the southernmost town of the northern kingdom of Israel and on the east side of the Jordan River, it was known as “the Beersheba of the East.”
2. A town of Gilead situated east of Rabbah. Following Israel’s conquest of the Promised Land, it was restored and enlarged by the descendants of Gad (Num. 32:34).
3. A town in southern Judah about 19 kilometers (12 miles) southeast of Beersheba (1 Sam. 30:28).

AROERITE [ah ROW er ite]—a native or inhabitant of Aroer. Hotham is referred to as “the Aroerite” (1 Chr. 11:44).

ARPAD [AR pad]—a fortified city in northern Syria, identified as modern Tell Erfad, situated about 40 kilometers (25 miles) north of Aleppo. Arpad was captured in 740 B.C., following a three-year siege by Tiglath-Pileser III of Assyria (Is. 36:19; Arphad, KJV).

ARPHAD [Ar fad]—a form of ARPAD.

ARPHAXAD [ar FAK sad]—a son of Shem (Gen. 10:22) and the father of Salah. Arphaxad was the first patriarch born after the Flood, and he lived for 438 years. He was an ancestor of Jesus (Luke 3:36).

ARROW (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

ARSENAL (see ARMORY; DAVID, TOWER OF).

ART—the conscious use of skill and creative imagination, especially in the creation of beautiful objects. Bible students find it difficult to gain a clear picture of the art of the Hebrew people. Except for the descriptions of the tabernacle and the temple in the Bible, art is really not discussed at all in the Scriptures. Most of what is known on this subject has been gathered from the work of archaeologists.

Even archaeology has uncovered very few samples of the artistic skills of the Israelites. By the time a site is excavated, most writings, paintings, and drawings—even works of art that might have been plastered on walls—have long since disappeared.

Another factor that makes this subject a difficult study is the commandment from the Old Testament Law that directed the Hebrew people not to make any graven image (Ex. 20:4). This commandment caused the Israelites to shun certain forms of art, such as painting and sculpture. They expressed their artistic talents and skills through such pursuits as architecture, pottery, metalworking, and bone and ivory carving.

Architecture. The most significant building project for Israel was the temple. Solomon spent seven years and huge sums of money in building God’s house in Jerusalem. God felt it important that a lengthy description of both the temple and its predecessor, the tabernacle, be included in the Bible (Exodus 35–38).

Unfortunately, these descriptions, while giving the dimensions and a number of details, do not reveal very much about the artistic abilities of the Israelites. Native craftsmen did fashion the furnishings used in the tabernacle. But King Solomon hired thousands of craftsmen to assist in building the temple. He sent to Phoenicia and summoned Hiram of Tyre, a master craftsman who cast the bronze objects and fashioned the latticework that served as furnishings for the temple (1 Kin. 7:13–45). Also see ARCHITECTURE.

Pottery. Pottery was a common art form in Canaan. Because pottery does not decay like wood, it has become a major focus of archaeologists in the Near East. It is used to establish the age of a site and to trace cultural influences. Much of the pottery used by the Israelites was drab and unimaginative, indicating it was viewed in practical instead of artistic terms.

The most common forms of Israelite pottery were lamps, bowls, saucers, plates, and cooking pots of various sizes, jugs and decanters for holding and pouring liquids, and chalices or goblets for drinking. Some types of pottery were burnished so they had a glossy finish, usually red in color. Some were painted with geometric patterns, while others had pictures of human-headed lions, palm trees, bulls, or fish.

The pottery of New Testament times showed a sharp improvement in quality. The vessels were made of finer clays and gave evidence of better firing techniques.

Metalworking. Although the Israelites were experts in the working of metal, few examples of their craftsmanship have survived. Since metal can be easily melted down and recast, this was the probable fate of most metal works of art.

Probably the biggest metalworking project the Israelites undertook was the casting of the BRONZE SEA for the temple in Jerusalem after it was constructed by Solomon (1 Kin. 7:23–26; 2 Chr. 4:2–5). This massive bowl, about 4.5 meters (14 feet) in diameter, rested on the backs of 12 oxen, also cast from bronze. The pillars of JACHIN and BOAZ, which flanked the entrance to the temple, were also cast from this metal (1 Kin. 7:21; 2 Chr. 3:17). Gold and silver were used for smaller objects and as decorative trim on other objects in the temple. Gold leaf was used to cover the doors of the temple and the cherubim (1 Kin. 6:23–35).

Since iron was a difficult metal to work with, the Israelites usually used it for objects that required great strength, such as plow points and ax heads. They apparently learned the art of ironworking from the Philistines.

Bone and Ivory Carving. The carving of bone and ivory was an art practiced very early in human history. The ivory came from Syria, where elephants were common. The Canaanites and Phoenicians were masters of this craft. A number of ivory pieces were discovered by archaeologists at Samaria, the capital of Israel, from the time of Ahab.

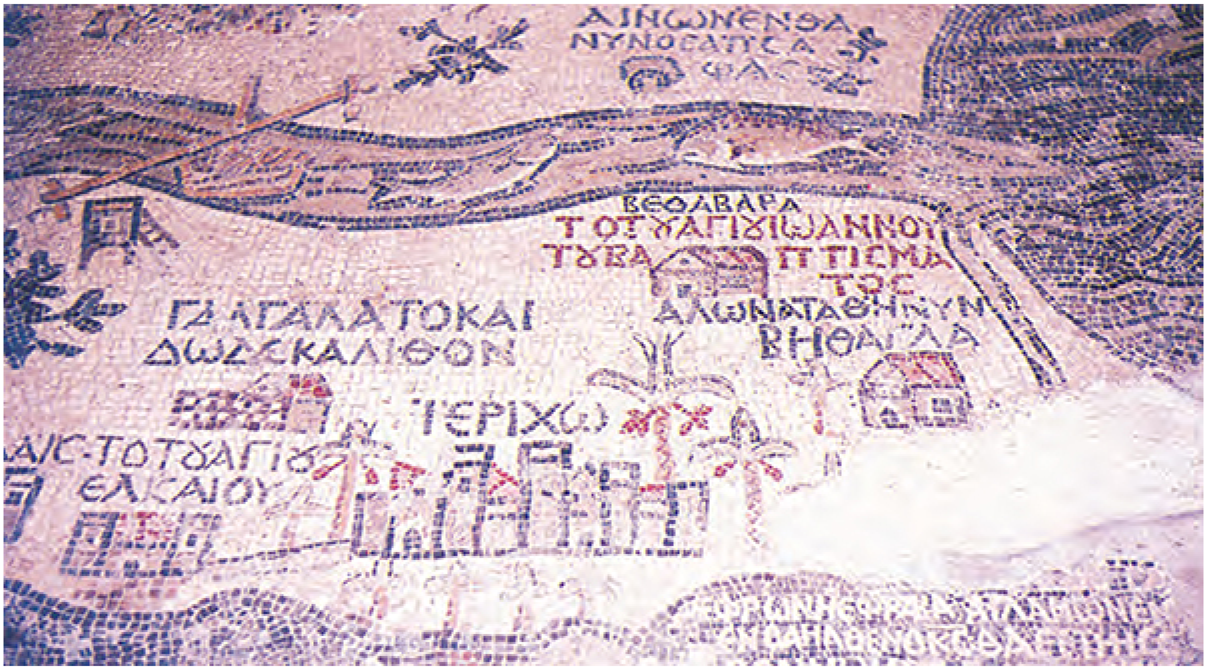
Ivory was sometimes carved into small objects, such as combs and cosmetic palettes. An especially fine example is an ointment jar with a hand-shaped stopper found at the ancient city of Lachish. More common was the use of ivory inlays in furniture and wall panels. The prophet Amos condemned the excessive wealth and materialism of Israel. One of the examples he pointed to were the beds and houses of ivory (Amos 3:15; 6:4). He was probably referring to the use of such ivory inlays among the wealthy citizens of Samaria, Israel's capital city.

Also see ARCHITECTURE.

◆

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• Artistic craftsmanship from the ancient world is evident in this golden bull's head on a lyre, discovered at ancient Ur.



ΑΙΝΩΝ ΕΝΘΑ
ΝΥΝ Ο ΣΑΠΣΑ
ΦΑΣ
ΒΕΘΑΒΑΡΑ
ΤΟ ΤΟΥ ΑΓΙΟΥ ΙΩΑΝΝΟΥ
ΤΟΥ ΒΑΠΤΙΣΜΑ
ΤΟΣ
ΓΑΛΓΑΛΑ ΤΟ ΚΑΙ
ΔΩΔΕΚΑΛΙΘΟΝ
ΑΛΩΝ ΑΤΑΘ Η ΝΥΝ
ΒΗΘΑΓΛΑ
ΙΕΡΙΧΩ
ΤΟ ΤΟΥ ΑΓΙΟΥ
ΕΛΙΣΑΙΟΥ

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• A fine example of mosaic art, this map shows Palestine in the sixth century A.D. Note the city of Jericho in the lower part of the mosaic. Note the city of Jericho in the lower part of the mosaic.

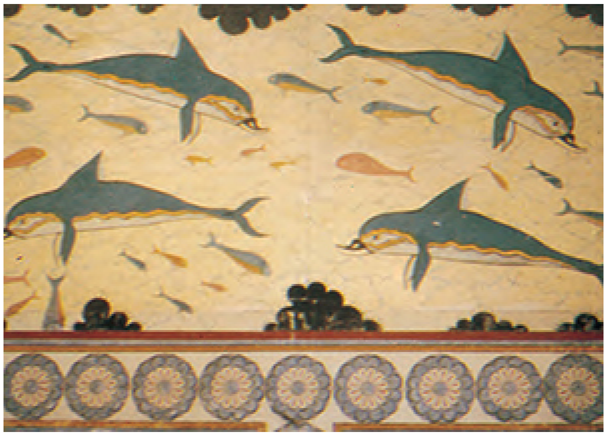


Photo by Howard Vos

- A colorful dolphin fresco from the queen’s chamber of the Minoan palace at Knossos, Crete, 15th century B.C.

ARTAXERXES [ar tuh ZERK sees]—a king of Persia in whose court EZRA and NEHEMIAH were officials (Ezra 7:1, 7). Known as Artaxerxes I Longimanus (long-handed), he temporarily halted the rebuilding program at Jerusalem that Cyrus, his predecessor, had encouraged (Ezra 4:7–23) but later allowed it to continue (Ezra 6:14). In the seventh year of his reign (458 B.C.), he authorized the mission of Ezra to lead a large number of Israelites back from the CAPTIVITY to Jerusalem (Ezra 7:1–28).

In the twentieth year of the reign of Artaxerxes (445 B.C.), he allowed Nehemiah to return to Jerusalem and to begin rebuilding the walls of that city (Neh. 2:1–10; 13:6). The SEPTUAGINT consistently has Artaxerxes instead of Ahasuerus (KJV) throughout the Book of Esther. Most scholars today believe the reference in Esther is to Xerxes I, the father of Artaxerxes I Longimanus.

Photo by Howard Vos

• The tomb of Artaxerxes, cut into the cliffs above the ruins of Persepolis, Persia’s ancient capital.

ARTEMAS, ARTEMIS [AR teh mas, AR teh mis] (see GODS, PAGAN).

ARTIFICER, ARTISAN (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

ARUBBOTH [ah RUB ohth] (lattices)—one of the many districts from which Solomon secured food for his large household (1 Kin. 4:10; Aruboth, REB). Arubboth probably is to be identified with Arrabeh, situated between Megiddo and Samaria.

ARUMAH [a ROO mah]—a town where Abimelech stayed when he was expelled from Shechem (Judg. 9:41).

ARVAD [AR vad]—a Phoenician city on a small island 3 kilometers (2 miles) off the Syrian coast and about 200 kilometers (125 miles) north of Tyre (Ezek. 27:8, 11). Arvad was renowned for its magnificent buildings. Its people, called ARVADITES, were known for their artistic abilities and their success as warriors and sailors. The modern city of Ruwad is located on this island.

ARVADITES [AR va dites]—a Canaanite tribe named after the city of ARVAD (Gen. 10:18).

ARZA [AR zah]—the steward of the house of Elah in the city of Tirzah (1 Kin. 16:9).

ASA [AY sah]—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. The third king of Judah (911–870 B.C.) and the son of Abijam, king of Judah. Asa was the grandson of King Rehoboam and Maachah (1 Kin. 15:8–24). The first ten years of Asa's reign were peaceful and prosperous. He led many religious reforms, "banished the perverted persons from the land" (1 Kin. 15:12), and tore down pagan images and idols.

   When he received further direction and encouragement from the prophet Azariah, Asa became more zealous in his call for revival. He restored the temple altar and called upon the tribes of Judah and Benjamin to renew their COVENANT with God at Jerusalem. When Israelites from the tribes of Ephraim, Manasseh, and Simeon saw how God had blessed Asa, they joined him in renewing their loyalty to the covenant. He was one of the four most godly kings of Judah.

   Asa had two major confrontations with foreign nations. When the Ethiopian king Zerah attacked Asa with superior forces, Asa put his trust in God and dealt the Ethiopians a humiliating blow (2 Chr. 14:11–12). But his second confrontation did not yield such glorious results. When Baasha, king of Israel, fortified Ramah in an attempt to blockade Asa and prevent anyone from traveling to or from Jerusalem, Asa hired Ben-Hadad, king of Syria, to thwart Baasha's plans (2 Chr. 16:1–6). Ben-Hadad invaded northern Israel and forced Baasha to withdraw from Ramah. When the prophet (seer) Hanani rebuked him for relying on Ben-Hadad instead of the Lord, Asa was enraged and put Hanani into prison (2 Chr. 16:7–10).

   When Asa contracted a disease in his feet in the 39th year of his reign, he did not seek the Lord and, instead, only consulted physicians (2 Chr. 16:12). Shortly thereafter, he died and was buried in Jerusalem.

2. A son of Elkanah and a Levite who lived in one of the villages of the Netophathites (1 Chr. 9:16).

ASAHEL [AS ah hell] (God has made)—the name of four men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Zeruiah, David's half-sister, and the brother of Joab and Abishai. Asahel was "as fleet of foot as a wild gazelle" (2 Sam. 2:18), but his ability to run swiftly was his downfall. When Asahel pursued Abner in battle, Abner killed him with his spear (2 Sam. 2:23).
2. One of the Levites sent by King Jehoshaphat to teach the Law to the people (2 Chr. 17:8).
3. A Levite appointed by King Hezekiah as an overseer of the temple offerings (2 Chr. 31:13).
4. The father of Jonathan. Jonathan opposed Ezra (Ezra 10:15).

ASAHIAH [as ah HIGH ah]—a form of ASAIAH.

ASAIAH [as EYE ah] (the Lord has made)—the name of four men in the Old Testament:

1. An officer of King Josiah. Asaiah inquired of HULDAH the prophetess about the Book of the Law discovered in the temple (2 Kin. 22:12, 14; Asahiah, KJV, NRSV).
2. A descendant of Simeon (1 Chr. 4:36).
3. A descendant of Merari. Asaiah helped move the ARK OF THE COVENANT from the house of Obed-Edom to Jerusalem (1 Chr. 15:6, 11–12).
4. A Shilonite who lived in Jerusalem after the captivity (1 Chr. 9:5). He was also called Maaseiah (Neh. 11:5).

ASAPH [AY saf] (God has gathered)—the name of five Old Testament men:

1. The father of Joah (2 Kin. 18:18, 37).

2. A Levite and the son of Berachiah the Gershonite (2 Chr. 20:14). Asaph sounded cymbals before the ARK OF THE COVENANT when it was moved from the house of Obed-Edom to Jerusalem (1 Chr. 15:16–19). Asaph's family became one of the three families given responsibility for music and song in the temple (1 Chr. 25:1–9). Following the captivity, 128 singers from this family returned from Babylon and conducted the singing when the foundations of Zerubbabel's temple were laid (Ezra 2:41; 3:10). Twelve psalms (Psalms 50; 73–83) are attributed to the family of Asaph.
3. A Levite whose descendants lived in Jerusalem after the captivity (1 Chr. 9:15).
4. A Levite descendant of Kohath (1 Chr. 26:1).
5. The keeper of the king's forest under the Persian king ARTAXERXES I Longimanus (Neh. 2:8).

ASAREEL [ah SAY reh el]—a form of ASAREL.

ASAREL [AS ah rel] (God has joined)—a son of Jehaleleel in the genealogy of Judah (1 Chr. 4:16, Asareel, KJV).

ASARELAH [as ah RAY lah]—a form of ASHARELAH.

ASCENSION OF CHRIST—the dramatic departure of the risen Christ from His earthly, bodily ministry among His followers. Since His birth in Bethlehem by the miracle of the INCARNATION, Christ had lived physically on earth. But forty days after the resurrection, His earthly ministry ceased with His ascension into heaven (Mark 16:19; Luke 24:50–51; Acts 1:9–11). To a large extent the ascension was for the benefit of Jesus' followers. They could no longer expect His physical presence. They must now wait for the promised Holy Spirit through whom the work of Jesus would continue.

Jesus' departure into heaven was a bodily ascension in His resurrection body. Stephen and Paul both reported seeing Jesus in bodily form after His ascension (Acts 7:56; 9:27; 1 Cor. 15:8).

The ascension marked the beginning of Christ's intercession for His followers at the right hand of God. There He makes continual intercession for all believers (Rom. 8:34; Heb. 4:14; 6:20; 7:25). Although Christ is not physically present with His people today, He is no less concerned for them or less active on their behalf. Christians enjoy peace, hope, and security because Christ is their advocate with the Father (1 John 2:1).

The ascension set in motion the coming of the Holy Spirit with His gifts for believers (John 14:16–18, 26; 16:7–15; Acts 2:23; Eph. 4:11–12). God determined that the presence of Jesus would be replaced by the presence of the Holy Spirit, who could be everywhere at the same time. Jesus' followers now enjoy the presence of the Spirit and the operation of the Spirit's gifts through them.

One additional result of the ascension is that Jesus began His heavenly reign at the right hand of the Father (1 Cor. 15:20–28). This reign will last until His SECOND COMING, when He will return to the earth as the reigning Messiah (Acts 3:20–21).

Finally, the ascension of Christ is the pledge of His Second Coming: "This same Jesus, who was taken up from you into heaven, will so come in like manner as you saw Him go into heaven" (Acts 1:11). Jesus will return to earth in bodily form just as He ascended into heaven.

Also see RESURRECTION; SECOND COMING.

ASCENSION OF ISAIAH (see APOCALYPTIC LITERATURE).

ASCENT OF AKRABBIM [ack RAB im] (see AKRABBIM, ASCENT OF).

ASCENTS, SONG OF—a phrase that occurs in the titles of fifteen psalms (Psalms 120–134). "Ascents" translates the Hebrew word ma'aloth, which means "goings up." These songs may have been "Pilgrim Psalms" sung by those who were "going up" to Jerusalem and "ascending" to the temple (1 Sam. 1:3; Is. 30:29).

ASENATH [AS ih nath]—the Egyptian wife of Joseph and the mother of Manasseh and Ephraim (Gen. 41:45, 50–52; 46:20). Asenath was the daughter of Poti-Pherah, priest of On. Pharaoh himself may have arranged the marriage between Joseph and Asenath to help Joseph adjust to life in Egypt.

ASER [AY zer]—Greek form of ASHER.

ASH (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

ASHAN [AY shan] (smoke)—a city of the Levites in the SHEPHELAH, or low country, of Judah (Josh. 15:42). Ashan was first allotted to the tribe of Judah, but later it was assigned to the tribe of Simeon (Josh. 19:7). It may be the same city as Chorashan (1 Sam. 30:30; Bor Ashan, NIV). The site is identified with Khirbet Asan, situated about 8 kilometers (5 miles) northwest of Beersheba.

ASHARELAH [ash ah REE la]—a son of Asaph appointed by King David to be in charge of the temple music (1 Chr. 25:2, 14; Asarelah, Jesharelah, KJV; Jesarelah, NIV).

ASHBEA [ASH bih ah]—the name given to a family of "linen workers" of the house of Ashbea (1 Chr. 4:21). It probably refers to the place where they lived.

ASHBEL [ASH bell] (man of Baal)—a son of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:1) and the ancestor of a tribal family known as the ASHBELITES (Num. 26:38).

ASHBELITES [ASH bell ites]—descendants of ASHBEL (Num. 26:38).

ASHCHENAZ [ASH keh nazz]—a form of ASHKENAZ.

ASHDOD [ASH dahd]—one of the five principal Philistine cities (1 Sam. 6:17), situated 5 kilometers (3 miles) from the Mediterranean coast and 32 kilometers (20 miles) north of Gaza (see Map 3, A–4). The city's military and economic significance was enhanced by its location on the main highway between Egypt and Syria.

Joshua and the Israelites drove the Canaanites out of the hill country of Judah, but the ANAKIM—a group of Canaanites—remained in Ashdod, Gaza, and Gath (Josh. 11:22). During the time of Eli and Samuel, the ARK OF THE COVENANT accompanied Israel's army (1 Sam. 4:3). When the Philistines defeated Israel, they took the ark to the temple of DAGON in Ashdod (1 Sam. 5:1–7).

Uzziah, the powerful king of Judah, captured Ashdod (2 Chr. 26:6). The prophet Amos predicted the destruction of the city because of its inhumane treatment of Israelites (Amos 1:8; 3:9). When Sargon II, king of Assyria, destroyed Ashdod in 711 B.C., he fulfilled this prophecy (Is. 20:1).

In New Testament times, Ashdod was renamed AZOTUS. Philip the evangelist preached in all the cities from Azotus to Caesarea (Acts 8:40).

ASHDODITES [ASH dodd ites]—natives or inhabitants of ASHDOD (Josh. 13:3; Ashdothites, KJV; Neh. 4:7).

ASHDOTH-PISGAH [ASH dahth PIZ gah]—the slopes of a mountain at PISGAH, near the northeastern shore of the Dead Sea (Josh. 12:3; 13:20).

ASHER [ASH err] (happy)—the name of a man and a city in the Bible:

1. The eighth son of Jacob, the second by Leah's maidservant, Zilpah (Gen. 30:13). On his deathbed Jacob blessed Asher: "Bread from Asher shall be rich, and he shall yield royal dainties" (Gen. 49:20).
2. A city situated east of Shechem on the road to Beth Shean, in the half-tribe of Manasseh west of the Jordan River (Josh. 17:7).

ASHER, TRIBE OF—a tribe descended from Asher and that part of Canaan where the tribe of Asher lived (Josh. 19:24, 31–34). The territory of Asher extended to the northern boundary of Canaan; its southern border was the tribe of Manasseh and the mountains of Mount Carmel. Asher was bounded on the west by the Mediterranean Sea and on the east by the tribe of Naphtali. The Asherites never succeeded in expelling the inhabitants of the Phoenician strongholds—such as Tyre, Sidon, and Acco (Judg. 1:31–32)—which were in their territory.

ASHERAH, ASHERIM, ASHEROTH [ash EH rah, ash EH rim, ash EH rahth] (see GODS, PAGAN).

ASHERITES [ASH err ites]—descendants of ASHER and members of his tribe (Judg. 1:32).

ASHES—the powdery residue of burned material; the ashes that remained after the sacrifice of animals as burnt offerings were carried away and disposed of by a priest.

The word "ashes" is also used figuratively in the Bible. Ashes were a sign of mourning, as when Mordecai tore his clothes, put on sackcloth and ashes, and cried out with a loud and bitter cry (Esth. 4:1). In the Book of Job, ashes are symbolic of dejection (2:8) as well as repentance (42:6).

The prophet Isaiah spoke of the idolater as a person who “feeds on ashes” (Is. 44:20)—a figure of vanity and deceit. The Messiah is one who gives “beauty for ashes” (Is. 61:3)—a symbol of the change God brought through Jesus.

ASHHUR [ASH shure]—a son of Hezron and Abiah and the father of TEKOA (1 Chr. 2:24; 4:5; Ashur, KJV). Ashhur probably was the “father” of Tekoa, a city in Judah situated between Bethlehem and Hebron, in the sense of being its settler or founder.

ASHIMA, ASHIMAH [a SHIH mah] (see GODS, PAGAN).

ASHKALONITES [ASH kuh lon ites]—a form of ASHKELONITES.

ASHKELON [ASH kuh lon]—one of the five principal cities of the Philistines (Josh. 13:3). Situated on the seacoast (see Map 3, A–4) 19 kilometers (12 miles) north of Gaza, Ashkelon and her sister cities (Ashdod, Gath, Gaza, and Ekron) posed a serious threat to the Israelites during the period of the JUDGES. Shortly after Joshua’s death, Ashkelon was captured and was briefly controlled by the tribe of Judah (Judg. 1:18). A few years later Samson killed thirty men from this city (Judg. 14:19). During most of the Old Testament era, however, Ashkelon remained politically and militarily independent of Israel.

In the eighth century B.C. Ashkelon was denounced by the prophet Amos (Amos 1:8). Shortly before the Babylonian captivity, Zephaniah prophesied that the Jews would return from Babylonia and occupy the ruins of Ashkelon (Zeph. 2:4, 7). Zechariah also prophesied the destruction of Ashkelon (Zech. 9:5).

ASHKELONITES [ASH kuh lon ites]—natives or inhabitants of ASHKELON (Josh. 13:3; Ashkalonites, KJV).

ASHKENAZ [ASH keh nazz]—the oldest son of Gomer and a grandson of Japheth. Ashkenaz also became the name of a people that settled in the vicinity of Armenia. It is also spelled Ashchenaz (1 Chr. 1:6, KJV; Jer. 51:27, KJV, NKJV).

ASHNAH [ASH nah]—the name of two cities in the Book of Joshua:

1. A village in the SHEPHELAH, or lowland plain, of Judah (Josh. 15:33).
2. A village situated farther south in the Shephelah (Josh. 15:43).

ASHPENAZ [ASH peh nazz]—the master of the eunuchs at Babylon during the reign of King Nebuchadnezzar. The king entrusted the people of Israel who had been taken captive to his care (Dan. 1:3).

ASHRIEL [ASH rih ell]—a form of ASRIEL.

ASHTAROTH [ASH tah rahth]—the plural form of Ashtoreth, a pagan goddess. First Samuel 31:10 connects her with the Philistines, and 1 Kings 11:5 connects her with the Sidonians. She was often considered the companion or partner of the male god BAAL (Judg. 2:13).

Apparently the worship of these goddesses was practiced by the Israelites from time to time. Solomon compromised his faith by worshiping at the altar of Ashtaroth (1 Kin. 11:5, 33). Along with the Baalim (the plural of Baal), the Ashtaroth were thought by the Philistines to be responsible for fertility and the growth of crops and herds.

The Ashtaroth were worshiped by other peoples under such names as Astarte (Phoenicians), Inanna (Sumerians), Ishtar (Babylonians), Aphrodite (Greeks), and Venus (Romans). All these were goddesses of sensual love and fertility. Also see GODS, PAGAN; IDOLATRY.

ASHTAROTH, CITY OF [ASH tah rahth]—a city in the northern TRANSJORDAN area of Israel. In Joshua's time, Ashtaroth was the home of OG, king of Bashan (Josh. 9:10).

ASHTERATHITE [ASH teh rah thite]—a native or inhabitant of ASHTAROTH, an ancient city of BASHAN situated northeast of the Sea of Galilee. Uzzia, one of David's mighty men, was an Ashterathite (1 Chr. 11:44).

ASHTEROTH KARNAIM [ASH tah rahth kar NAY em] (Ashtaroth of the two horns)—a city in which the REPHAIM lived during the invasion of Chedorlaomer (Gen. 14:5). It probably was located in Bashan, east of the Jordan River. It may also have been the same place as Astaroth (Deut. 1:4) or Ashtaroth (Josh. 9:10).

ASHTORETH [ASH toh rehth]—the singular form of ASHTAROTH.

ASHUR [ASH shure]—a form of ASHHUR.

ASHURBANIPAL [a shoor BAN ih pal] (Asshur is creating an heir)—the last of the great kings of Assyria (668–626 B.C.). He was the son and successor of the Assyrian king Esarhaddon. Most scholars now identify him with the “great and noble” OSNAPPER of Ezra 4:10. Apparently, Ashurbanipal was the monarch who made King Manasseh of Judah, along with twenty-one other kings, pay tribute to him and kiss his feet.

A large part of Ashurbanipal’s reign was spent in a tug-of-war with his own brother, Shamash-shum-ukin, who was viceroy of Babylon. Outright rebellion against Ashurbanipal broke out in 652 B.C. and ended in 648 B.C. following a two-year siege of Babylon by the Assyrians that resulted in famine.

The mighty Assyrian Empire disintegrated under Ashurbanipal’s son, Sinsharishkun (627[?]–612 B.C.). Upon his death Babylon fell immediately to Nabopolassar, founder of a new Babylonian Empire; and the Medes and Babylonians destroyed NINEVEH, the capital city of Assyria.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- King Ashurbanipal of Assyria is anointed by divine creatures, in this carving from his era.

ASHURITES [ASH err ites]—one of the peoples over whom Saul's son Ishbosheth was made king (2 Sam. 2:9). They lived in northern Israel and may be the same as the Asherites (Judg. 1:32) or the Asshurim (Gen. 25:3).

ASHURNASIRPAL [ash er NAS ir pal] (Asshur is guarding an heir)—a king of Assyria who reigned early in the ninth century B.C., when Assyria was at the height of its power (about 884–860 B.C.). King Jehoshaphat of Judah (873–848 B.C.) and King Ahab of Israel (874–853 B.C.) were his contemporaries.

Photo by Howard Vos

• King Ashurnasirpal of Assyria pursues the royal sport of lion hunting, in this carving from his palace at Nimrud.

ASHVATH [ASH vath]—a son of Japhlet, of the tribe of Asher (1 Chr. 7:33).

ASIA [AY zyuh]—a Roman province in western ASIA MINOR which included Mysia, Lydia, Caria, and the coastal islands as well as western Phrygia. The borders of this province were, for the most part, those of the earlier kingdom of Pergamos.

The kingdom of Pergamos gained its independence from the SELEUCIDS with help from the Romans. By the time of AUGUSTUS, the first Roman emperor (27 B.C.—A.D. 14), Asia had become a senatorial province (a Roman political division governed by a proconsul), with Pergamos as its capital.

Three cities continued to compete for the role of principal city: Ephesus, Smyrna, and Pergamos—the first three cities mentioned in the Book of Revelation (see Rev. 1:11; 2:1–17). Eventually, Ephesus became the chief commercial center and was known as the most prominent city of the province. The Roman Senate granted both Ephesus and Pergamos the right to have three imperial temples for the worship of the emperors.

Although scholars disagree on the time when Ephesus became the capital, it probably occurred after the death of the apostle Paul and perhaps as late as the time of the emperor Hadrian (about A.D. 129). The fact that the martyr Antipas is mentioned in connection with Pergamos (Rev. 2:13) argues for the capital's being at Pergamos during the time the Book of Revelation was written.

The governor of a senatorial province was called a PROCONSUL, and the proconsulship of Asia became one of the most prized among all in the Roman Empire. The wealth and culture of Asia was legendary. When the New Testament mentions the officers of Ephesus, the term used is asiarchs (local elected authorities), or "officials of Asia" (Acts 19:31).

The seven cities mentioned in the Book of Revelation follow two principal north-south roads of Asia, beginning with Ephesus, the largest city, and ending inland with Laodicea. John must have known these cities of Asia fairly well, because each of the letters (Revelation 2–3) alludes to some important fact about that city.

At the beginning of his second missionary journey, the apostle Paul was "forbidden by the Holy Spirit to preach the word in Asia" (Acts 16:6). Thus, he made his way to Troas, the northwestern seaport of Asia, and entered Europe (Acts 16:6–10). On his return trip, however, he visited Ephesus (Acts 18:9). On his third missionary journey, he spent more than two years in ministry in this region. During this time, "all who dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks" (Acts 19:10).

ASIA MINOR—a peninsula, also called Anatolia, situated in the extreme western part of the continent of Asia. Asia Minor was bounded on the north by the Black Sea, the Sea of Marmara, and the Dardanelles; the Aegean Sea on the west; and Syria and the Mediterranean Sea on the south.

Roughly identical with the modern nation of Turkey, Asia Minor was a high plateau crossed by mountains, especially the Taurus Mountains near the southern coast. In the Old Testament period, it was the home of the Hittites. In the New Testament, the term Asia is ambiguous, sometimes referring to the peninsula of Asia Minor as a whole (Acts 19:26–27), but more often referring to proconsular Asia, situated in the western part of the peninsula (Acts 2:9; 6:9). The writer of Acts appears to use the term Asia to describe the region of the province of Asia around Ephesus. He refers to other regions of the province as Phrygia and Mysia (Acts 2:9–10; 16:6–7). Also see SEVEN CHURCHES OF ASIA.

Photo by Howard Vos

- The Taurus Mountains north of Tarsus in Cilicia, in the Roman province of Asia.

ASIARCHS [AY zih arks] (rulers of Asia)—city officials in the Roman province of Asia (Acts 19:31; officials of Asia, NKJV; officials of the province, NIV; dignitaries of the province, REB) who befriended the apostle Paul at Ephesus.

ASIEL [AY zih el] (God is maker)—a descendant of Simeon and an ancestor of Jehu (1 Chr. 4:35).

ASNAH [AS nah]—one of the NETHINIM (temple servants) whose descendants returned to Jerusalem after the captivity in Babylonia (Ezra 2:50).

ASNAPPER [as NAP per]—a form of OSNAPPER, the biblical name for ASHURBANIPAL.

ASP (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

ASPATHA [as PAY thah]—a son of Haman who was hanged like his father (Esth. 9:7).

ASPEN (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

ASPHALT (see MINERALS OF THE BIBLE).

ASPHODEL (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

ASRIEL [AS rih ell]—a man of the tribe of Manasseh, of the house of Gilead, who was listed in the second census (Josh. 17:2; Ashriel, 1 Chr. 7:14, KJV).

ASRIELITES [AS rih ell ites]—the family name of the descendants of ASRIEL (Num. 26:31).

ASS (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

ASSASSINS—a fanatical group of Jewish nationalists in the first century A.D. Four thousand of them followed an Egyptian who promised to lead them in a rebellion against the Romans (Acts 21:38; terrorists, NIV). The Roman commander at Jerusalem wondered whether the apostle Paul was a member of this group (Acts 21:38).

ASSEMBLY (see CONGREGATION).

ASSHUR [AS shoor]—the name of a people, a man, and a foreign god:

1. A word denoting ASSYRIA, a city of Assyria, or the Assyrians as a people (Gen. 10:11; Num. 24:22, 24; Ezra 4:2; Assur, KJV).
2. A descendant of Shem (1 Chr. 1:17). He is regarded as the ancestor of the Assyrians.
3. The chief god of the Assyrians. Asshur was a god of war, conquest, and military strength.

Also see GODS, PAGAN.

ASSHURIM [a SHOO rim]—a son of Dedan or an obscure tribe that traced its family tree to him (Gen. 25:3).

ASSIR [AS err]—the name of three Old Testament men:

1. A son of Korah (Ex. 6:24; 1 Chr. 6:22).
2. A son of Jehoiachin, king of Judah (1 Chr. 3:17).
3. A son of Ebiasaph (1 Chr. 6:23, 37).

ASSOS [AS ohs]—a seaport of the Roman province of MYSIA in Asia Minor, not far from Troas (see Map 8, C–2). While on his third missionary journey, the apostle Paul walked overland from Troas to Assos while Luke and the others took the longer trip around the cape (Acts 20:13–14).

ASSUMPTION OF MOSES (see PSEUDEPIGRAPHA).

ASSUR [AS err]—a form of ASSHUR.

ASSURANCE—the state of being assured; freedom from doubt and uncertainty. As a theological concept, assurance is one of the richest doctrines of the Bible. It refers to the believers' full confidence and conviction that the penalty of their sins has been paid and that heaven has been secured as their eternal destiny by Christ's death and resurrection.

Assurance means that Christians not only possess salvation, but that they also know what they possess—they are assured of this salvation. First John 5:12 speaks of security ("He who has the Son has life") and the following verse speaks of assurance ("you may know that you have eternal life").

The basis of assurance must never be our own subjective experience, which can waver with fear, doubt, and uncertainty. True assurance is founded on the Word of God alone—the Holy Spirit bearing witness to our spirits that the Word of God is true and reliable. When believers, by faith, stand upon the Word of God (such passages as John 10:27–29 and Romans 8:35–39 speak clearly of the assurance of our faith), they gain a joyous freedom to live the Christian life. They have been forgiven by God in Christ and are now free to forgive others, to love as they have first been loved by God.

Assurance, then, is not just a "theological" concept but a practical matter. As long as people are uncertain about their own standing before God, they are defensive and self-centered. But fully assured of God's salvation, the believer can begin to walk in the footsteps of Christ (1 John 4:17–19).

ASSYRIA [as SIHR ih ah]—a kingdom between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers that often dominated the ancient world (see Map 1, D–1). After defeating the northern kingdom of Israel in 722 B.C., the Assyrians carried away thousands of Israelites and resettled them in other parts of the Assyrian Empire. This was a blow from which the nation of Israel never recovered.

The early inhabitants of Assyria were ancient tribesmen (Gen. 10:22) who probably migrated from Babylonia. They grew powerful enough around 1300 B.C. to conquer Babylonia. For the next 700 years they were the leading power in the ancient world, with their leading rival nation, Babylonia, constantly challenging them for this position.

Tiglath-Pileser I (1120–1100 B.C.) built the Assyrian kingdom to the most extensive empire of the age. But under his successors, it declined in power and influence. This decline offered the united kingdom of Judah, under the leadership of David and Solomon, the opportunity to reach its greatest limits. If the Assyrians had been more powerful at that time, they probably would have interfered with the internal affairs of Israel, even at that early date.

After the Assyrians had languished in weakness for an extended period, Ashurnasirpal (844–860 B.C.) restored much of the prestige of the empire. His son, Shalmaneser III, succeeded him, and reigned from about 860 to 825 B.C. Shalmaneser was the first Assyrian king to come into conflict with the northern kingdom of Israel.

In an effort to halt the Assyrian expansion, a group of surrounding nations formed a coalition, of which Israel was a part. Ahab was king of Israel during this time. But the coalition eventually split up, allowing the Assyrians to continue their relentless conquest of surrounding territories.

During the period from 833 to 745 B.C., Assyria was engaged in internal struggles as well as war with Syria. This allowed Israel to operate without threat from the Assyrian army. During this time, Jeroboam II, king of Israel, was able to raise the Northern Kingdom to the status of a major nation among the countries of the ancient Near East.

The rise of Tiglath-Pileser III (745–727 B.C.) marked the beginning of a renewed period of Assyrian oppression for the nation of Israel. Tiglath-Pileser, known also in the Bible as PUL (2 Kin. 15:19), set out to regain territories previously occupied by the Assyrians. He was resisted by a coalition led by Rezin of Damascus and Pekah of Israel. These rulers tried to force Ahaz, king of Judah, to join them. When Ahaz refused, Rezin and Pekah marched on Jerusalem, intent on destroying the city. Against the counsel of the prophet Isaiah, Ahaz enlisted the aid of Tiglath-Pileser for protection. This protection cost dearly. From that day forth, Israel was required to pay tribute to Assyria. Israel also was forced to adopt some of the religious practices of the Assyrians (2 Kings 16).

Tiglath-Pileser was succeeded by his son, Shalmaneser V (727–722 B.C.). When Hoshea, king of Israel, who had been placed on the throne by Tiglath-Pileser, refused to pay the required tribute, Shalmaneser attacked Samaria, the capital of Israel. After a long siege, Israel fell to Assyria in 722 B.C., perhaps to Sargon II; and 27,000 inhabitants of Israel were deported to Assyrian territories. This event marked the end of the northern kingdom of Israel. Most of the deported Israelites never returned to their homeland.

Israel’s sister nation, the southern kingdom of Judah, also felt the power of the Assyrian Empire. In 701 B.C., Sennacherib, king of Assyria (705–681 B.C.), planned an attack on Jerusalem. However, the Assyrian army was struck by a plague, which the Bible referred to as “the angel of the Lord" (2 Kin. 19:35). Sennacherib was forced to retreat from his invasion when 185,000 Assyrian soldiers died. Thus, Jerusalem was saved from Assyrian oppression by divine intervention.

The religion of the Assyrians, much like that of the Babylonians, emphasized worship of nature. They believed every object of nature was possessed by a spirit. The chief god was Asshur. All other primary gods whom they worshiped were related to the objects of nature. These included Anu, god of the heavens; Bel, god of the region inhabited by people, animals, and birds; Ea, god of the waters; Sin, the moon-god; Shamash, the sun-god; and Ramman, god of the storms. These gods were followed by five gods of the planets. In addition to these primary gods, lesser gods also were worshiped. In some cases, various cities had their own patron gods. The pagan worship of the Assyrians was soundly condemned by several prophets of the Old Testament (Is. 10:5; Ezek. 16:28; Hos. 8:9).

The favorite pursuits of the Assyrian kings were war and hunting. Archaeologists have discovered that the Assyrians were merciless and savage people. The Assyrian army was ruthless and effective. Its cruelty included burning cities, burning children, impaling victims on stakes, beheading, and chopping off hands. But, like Babylonia, which God used as an instrument of judgment against Judah, Assyria became God's channel of punishment and judgment against Israel because of their sin and idolatry.

Because of the cruelty and paganism of the Assyrians, Israel harbored deep-seated hostility against this nation. This attitude is revealed clearly in the Book of Jonah. When God instructed Jonah to preach to Nineveh, the capital of Assyria, Jonah refused and went in the opposite direction. After he finally went to Nineveh, the prophet was disappointed with God because He spared the city.

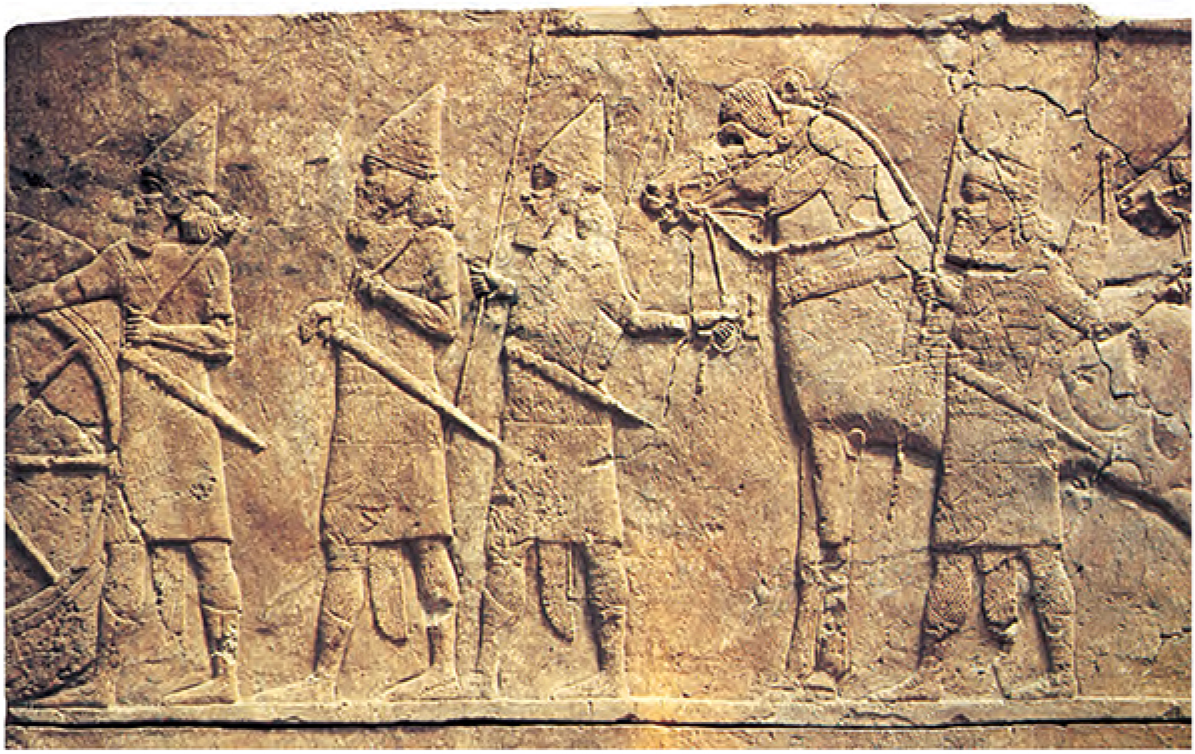

Photo by Howard Vos

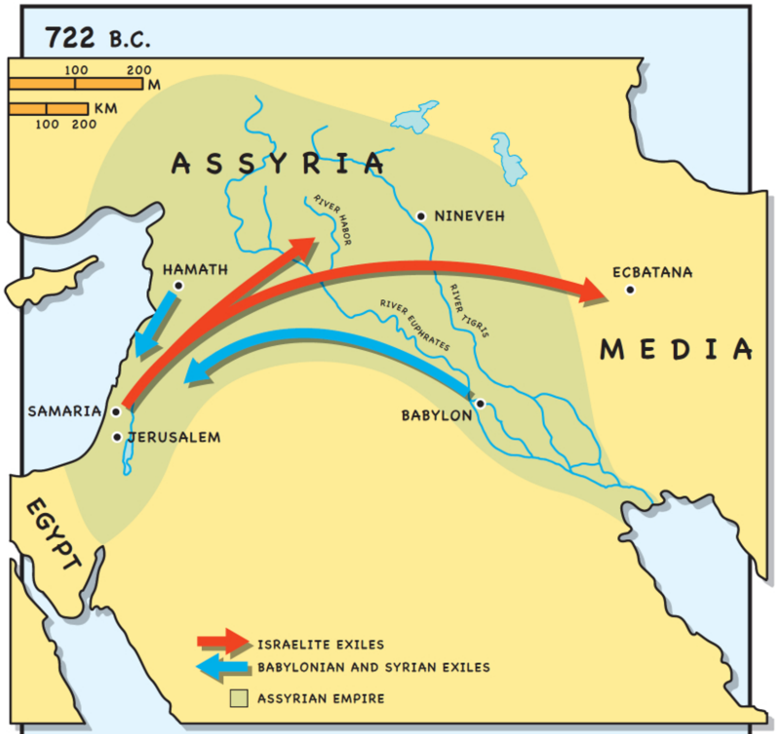
- King Sennacherib of Assyria under escort of his royal guard, in a carving from Sennacherib’s palace in Nineveh.

ISRAEL DRAGGED INTO EXILE



722 B.C.
100
200
M
KM
100
200
ASSYRIA
RIVER HABOR NINEVEH
HAMATH
ECBATANA
RIVER TIGRIS
RIVER EUPHRATES
MEDIA
SAMARIA
JERUSALEM
BABYLON
EGYPT
ISRAELITE EXILES
BABYLONIAN AND SYRIAN EXILES
ASSYRIAN EMPIRE

The prophets Amos and Hosea had predicted that Israel would be destroyed. The people had betrayed their faith, worshipping false gods and oppressing the poor of the land. They did not trust God, but instead relied on foreign alliances.

Hosea had warned: 'Israel flutters about like a silly dove; first her people call on Egypt for help, and then they run to Assyria! But I will spread out a net and catch them like birds . . . '

The net fell in 722 B.C. Assyrian records claim that 27,290 Israelites were taken into captivity. They were deported to the region of the river Habor and to Media. For those who were taken to Media, this meant a journey of over 800 miles on foot.

Israel became a province of the Assyrian empire. The land was filled with foreign exiles forcibly removed from Babylon and Syria.

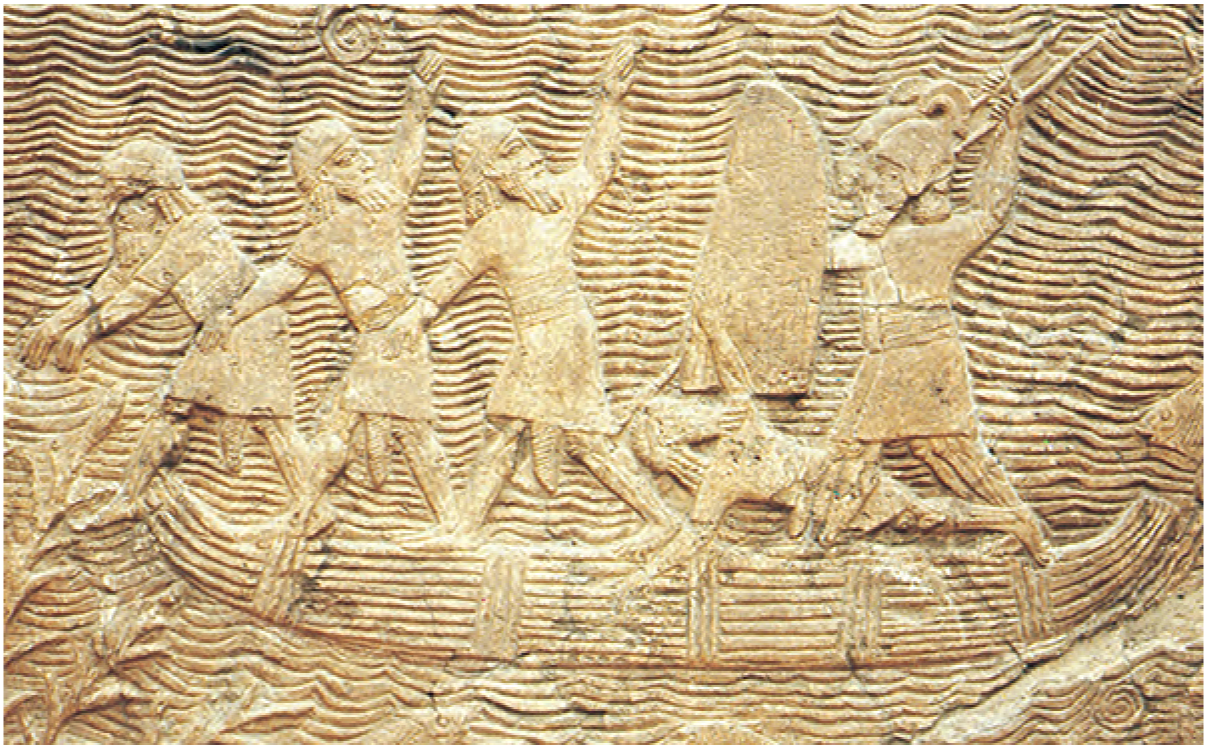

Photo by Howard Vos

• Assyrian warriors in battle with an enemy force aboard a papyrus boat, in this carving from Sennacherib's palace at Nineveh.

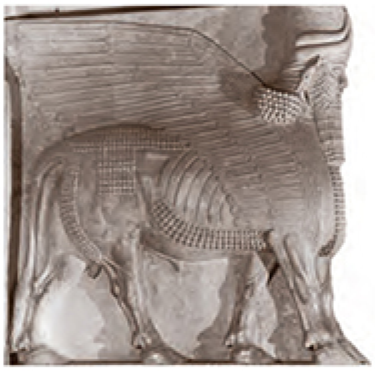

Photo by Howard Vos

• A gigantic winged bull, symbol of the Assyrian Empire.

ASTAROTH (see ASHTEROTH KARNAIM).

ASTARTE [as TAR teh] (see GODS, PAGAN).

ASTROLOGER (see ASTROLOGY; OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

ASTROLOGY—the study of the sun, moon, planets, stars, and constellations in the belief that they influence individuals and the course of human events. Astrology attempts to predict the future by analyzing the movements of these heavenly bodies.

Although the word “astrology” does not appear in the Bible, the word “astrologers” does. The prophet Isaiah taunted the Babylonians to go to the powerless “astrologers, the stargazers, and the monthly prognosticators” (Is. 47:13) for their salvation. The word is found eight times in the book of Daniel, in association with “magicians,” “sorcerers,” “Chaldeans,” “wise men,” and “soothsayers” (Dan. 1:20; 2:2, 10, 27; 4:7; 5:7, 11, 15). Some Bible scholars believe the “wise men” or Magi who saw the star of the infant Jesus (Matt. 2:1–12) were astrologers. We do know that the earliest records of astrology have come from Mesopotamia—the land between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers where the ancient Babylonians flourished.

The attempt to forecast the future from the stars probably arose very naturally in the ancient world. These beliefs would have come from observing that the signs in the heavens and events on earth are sometimes related. For instance, it is evident that the winter season begins at the same time when the sun begins to set low in the sky. It takes only one step of logic to conclude that when the sun begins to dip low in the sky, it causes winter to come. Given the lack of scientific thought in the ancient Near East, it required only one further step of logic to conclude that other movements of the sun, moon, or stars affect historical events. An example of this kind of reasoning is found in a letter addressed to the Assyrian king ESARHADDON. “If the planet Jupiter is present during an eclipse,” the letter stated, “it is good for the king because an important person in court will die in his stead.”

The close association in Babylonian thought between the stars and the gods led ancient skywatchers to stress their impact on human affairs. This association may be seen clearly in the unique script used to write their language. The sign used to distinguish a god's name was the sign of the star.

The Bible classes astrology with other techniques for predicting the future. Going to the stars for guidance was the same as idolatry to biblical writers. Samuel equated the two in his denunciation of Saul (1 Sam. 15:23).

The Bible's contempt for astrology is most clearly seen in its prohibition of any technique to aid in predicting the future. Astrology assumes that God does not control history. It assumes that history is governed by the affairs of the pagan gods as revealed in the movement of the planets. The believer knows that a sovereign God rules this world. He also knows that resorting to astrology is a denial of the life of faith by which one trusts God and not his lucky stars for the future.

Also see ASTRONOMY; GODS, PAGAN; MAGIC, SORCERY, AND DIVINATION.

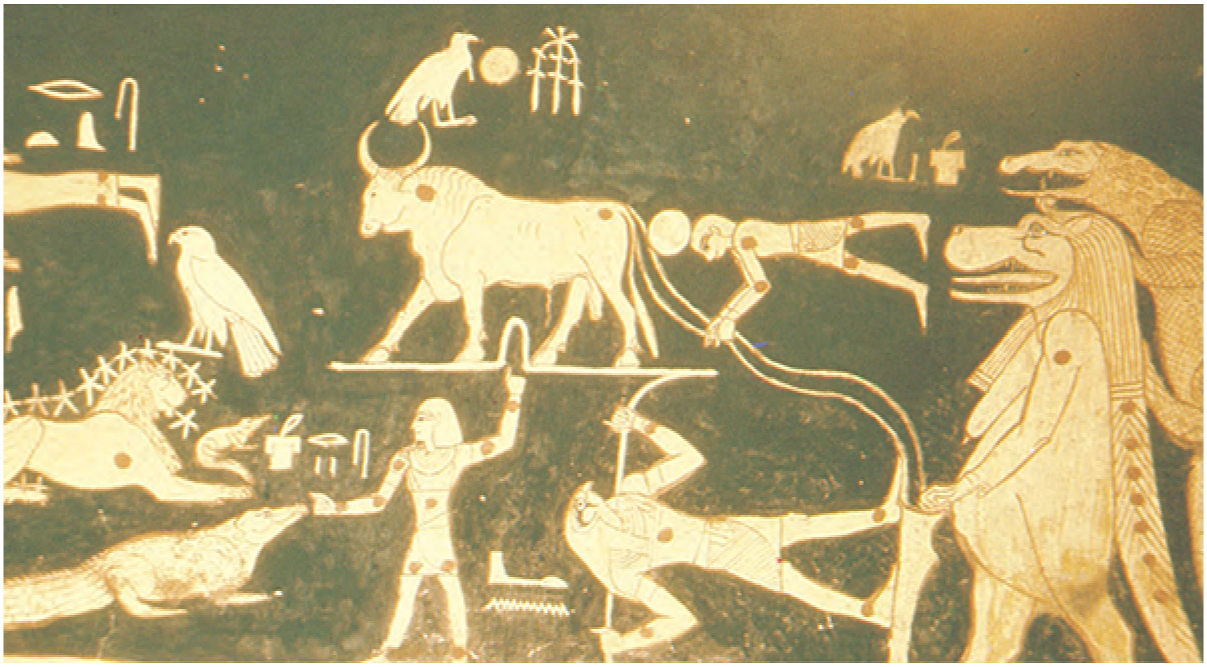

Photo by Howard Vos

• Egyptian signs of the zodiac, from the tomb of the Pharaoh Seti I at Thebes.

ASTRONOMY—the scientific study of the solar system and the systematic arrangement of information about the nature, size, and movements of the earth, moon, sun, and stars.

Origins. Modern astronomy began with the work of Nicolaus Copernicus (1473–1543), a Polish scientist whose discoveries revolutionized science's view of the universe. Prior to Copernicus, Ptolemy, a Greco-Egyptian astronomer of the second century A.D., had proposed that the earth was stationary at the center of the universe, and that the planets moved around it. Ptolemy compiled a series of more than eighty observations of the positions of planets and solar and lunar eclipses in a thirteen-volume work called the Almagest. The details that Ptolemy provided made it possible for modern historians to establish reliable dates for many events of ancient history.

Ptolemy's view of our solar system was accepted for over 1,000 years by both scientists and the church until it was overturned by Copernicus' famous proof that the earth revolves around the sun. This event marked the beginning of astronomy as a modern science.

Early Astronomers. Although the model of the universe accepted by ancient peoples was inaccurate, their attempts to explain how the universe works can be traced back thousands of years. In ancient times, the positions of the planets in relation to one another was thought to have an impact on the course of history. This accounts for astronomy's origins in ASTROLOGY and similar mystical practices.

The earliest recorded observations of the heavens relate to the rising and setting of Venus. These date from around 1650 B.C., and they were probably conducted in an attempt to predict the future. But these observations were also useful in establishing an ancient calendar based on the movement of the sun and stars. Lacking technical devices and a system of mathematics, these ancient astronomers relied solely upon the naked eye for their observations. This meant that only a few thousand stars were visible to them.

Importance in Bible Study. The value of astronomy for the study of Scripture lies in astronomy's ability to fix absolute dates for some biblical events. Ancient chronologies of major world events were kept carefully. But they usually dated from the year a king was crowned or the year he died; in some cases they date from a great natural disaster.

Since those fixed times are no longer precisely known, it is difficult to assign accurate dates for them, although they are well-documented.

The process by which scholars determine the date of biblical events using astronomical data from the past is very technical. It is probably sufficient to point out that by comparing Ptolemy's observations with certain biblical passages, scholars have determined that the last year of the reign of King Ahab of Israel was 853 B.C. The first year of Jehu, who took the throne by force from the family of Ahab, was 841 B.C. Based on these dates, the chronology of Scripture dates back to 931 B.C. as the year in which Jeroboam I led the northern tribes in a revolt from Rehoboam, Solomon's son.

Biblical References. The basic orientation of the Bible to astronomy is clearly illustrated in the Book of Genesis, which explains why God created the heavenly bodies (Genesis 1–2). The Bible makes only scattered references to them, and none are scientific in the modern sense. Many of these passages refer to the regular movements of the sun and moon to indicate the passage of time. Ancient Israel had a lunar calendar that tied religious events to certain seasons of the year. The times for their annual FEASTS AND FESTIVALS depended on the new moon, the full moon, and the position of the sun in both spring and autumn. The planets, by contrast, are referred to by the Bible as objects of idolatry (2 Kin. 23:5), probably because the ancient Babylonians were known to practice such forms of idolatry.

Astronomical references in the Bible are often poetic (Amos 5:8). Their purpose is to show God's glory, not to provide scientific details about the universe. The important truth for the Hebrews as they observed the stars was that "the heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament shows His handiwork" (Ps. 19:1). Through the beauty of the heavens and the regular movement of the sun and stars, they could see God at work in His world.

The prophet Joel may have referred to total eclipses of the sun and moon (Joel 2:31). Falling stars are mentioned in both the Old and New Testaments (Is. 34:4; Rev. 6:13). Many scholars believe the star that marked the place where Jesus was born was an astronomical event, perhaps occurring when Saturn and Jupiter lined up along their orbits in the sky. Scientists have documented that such a phenomenon did occur at about the time of Jesus' birth in Bethlehem.

ASUPPIM, HOUSE OF [a SUP im] (storehouses)—buildings for storing temple goods, located near the southern door of the temple in the outer court (1 Chr. 26:15, 17, KJV). Asuppim is the transliteration of a Hebrew word that most modern versions translate as STOREHOUSE or storehouses.

ASYLUM (see CITIES OF REFUGE).

ASYNCRITUS [a SIN cry tus] (incomparable)—a Christian in Rome to whom the apostle Paul sent greetings (Rom. 16:14).

ATAD [A tad]—either a person or a place referred to in Genesis 50:10–11. The "threshing floor of Atad," apparently situated east of the Jordan River, was used as a campsite by Joseph and his brothers as they prepared to take Jacob's body back to Canaan. The place was renamed Abel Mizraim, meaning "mourning of the Egyptians" or "meadow of Egypt."

ATARAH [AT a rah] (crown)—the second wife of Jerahmeel and mother of Onam (1 Chr. 2:26–28).

ATAROTH [AT ah rahth] (crowns, diadems)—the name of four places in the Old Testament:

1. A town east of the Jordan River in the territory of Reuben. Ataroth was rebuilt and fortified by the tribe of Gad (Num. 32:3, 34). It has been identified as the modern Khirbet Attarus.
2. A place on the border between Ephraim and Benjamin (Josh. 16:2). It is probably the same place as Ataroth Addar (Josh. 16:5) and Ataroth Adar (Josh. 18:13).
3. A place in northeast Ephraim near Jericho (Josh. 16:7).
4. A place connected with the descendants of Caleb (1 Chr. 2:54, KJV).

ATAROTH ADAR [AT ah rahth AY dar]—a place along the border of Ephraim and Benjamin (Josh. 18:13), also spelled Ataroth Addar (Josh. 16:5).

ATER [AY tehr]—the ancestor of a family that returned from Babylonia after the captivity (Neh. 7:21).

ATHACH [AY thak]—a village of Judah befriended by David (1 Sam. 30:30). Some scholars identify the city with Ether (Josh. 15:42; 19:7), but this is uncertain.

ATHAIAH [a THAY yah]—a son of Uzziah and a member of the tribe of Judah in Nehemiah's time (Neh. 11:4). He may be the same person as Uthai (1 Chr. 9:4).

ATHALIAH [ath ah LIE ah] (the Lord is strong)—the name of one woman and two men in the Old Testament:

1. The queen of Judah for six years (2 Kin. 11:1–3). Athaliah was the daughter of King Ahab of Israel. Presumably, Jezebel was her mother.

   Athaliah married Jehoram (or Joram), son of Jehoshaphat, king of Judah. Jehoram reigned only eight years and was succeeded by his son Ahaziah, who died after reigning only one year. Desiring the throne for herself, Athaliah ruthlessly killed all her grandsons—except the infant Joash, who was hidden by his aunt (2 Kin. 11:2).

   Athaliah apparently inherited Jezebel's ruthlessness. She was a tyrant whose every whim had to be obeyed. As her mother had done in Israel, Athaliah introduced Baal worship in Judah and in so doing destroyed part of the temple.

   Joash was hidden in the house of the Lord for six years (2 Kin. 11:3), while Athaliah reigned over the land (841–835 B.C.). In the seventh year, the high priest Jehoiada declared Joash the lawful king of Judah. Guards removed Athaliah from the temple before killing her, to avoid defiling the temple with her blood (2 Kin. 11:13–16; 2 Chr. 23:12–15).

   Athaliah reaped what she sowed. She gained the throne through murder and lost her life in the same way. She also failed to thwart God's promise, because she did not destroy the Davidic line, through which the Messiah was to be born.
2. A son of Jeroham, a Benjamite (1 Chr. 8:26).
3. The father of Jeshaiah (Ezra 8:7).

ATHARIM [ATH ah rim]—a place mentioned in connection with the Exodus. Moses led the Israelites from Kadesh by way of Mount Hor on their way to Canaan by “the road to Atharim” (Num. 21:1). The king of Arad attacked the Israelites while they journeyed on that road.

ATHEIST—one who denies the existence of God. The only occurrence in the New Testament of the Greek word atheoi—“atheists” or “godless ones”—is in Ephesians 2:12, where those who are separated from Christ are described as “having no hope and without God.” The early Christians were often called “atheists” because they refused to worship the pagan gods of their neighbors.

ATHENIANS [uh THEE knee uns]—natives or inhabitants of ATHENS (Acts 17:21).

ATHENS [ATH ins]—the capital city of the ancient Greek state of Attica and the modern capital of Greece (see Map 7, B–2). It was the center of Greek art, architecture, literature, and politics during the golden age of Greek history (the fifth century B.C.) and was visited by the apostle Paul on his second missionary journey (Acts 17:15—18:1).

Even today the visitor to Athens is impressed by the city’s ancient glory. The ACROPOLIS (the great central hill)—with its Parthenon (the temple dedicated to the virgin Athena, the goddess of wisdom and the arts), its Erechtheion (the unique double sanctuary dedicated to Athena and Neptune), its Propylaea (the magnificent entrance), and its small temple to Wingless Victory (symbolizing the Athenian hope that victory would never leave them)—stand as monuments to the city’s glorious past.

The history of Athens goes back before 3000 B.C., when a small village grew up on the slopes of the Acropolis. As it developed, Athens became a sea power with its port at Piraeus about 8 kilometers (5 miles) distant and its navy stationed at Phaleron. Its government developed in stages and in about 509 B.C. Cleisthenes provided a new constitution that became the basis of Athenian democracy.

Athens’ history involved a number of battles with other city-states, such as Sparta, and with the Persians, who were led by Darius and Xerxes. In the sea battle with the Persians at Salamis (480 B.C.), the Athenians won decisively, but the retreating Persians burned Athens.

The rebuilding of Athens began under Themistocles, and Athens started its golden age under Pericles (about 495–429 B.C.). Learning was stimulated and philosophers found Athens a congenial home (with the exception of Socrates, whom the Athenians put to death in 399 B.C.). Plato founded his famous school, the Academy, in 388 B.C.

As one visits the museum in Athens filled with statues and the theater of Dionysus with the heads of the gods removed, one recalls Paul’s assessment of Athens as a city “given over to idols” (Acts 17:16). As one walks through the Agora (marketplace) and visits the reconstructed porch of Attalus, one remembers that in porches like these the ancient Greek philosophers used to debate. Acts 17:18, for instance, describes Paul’s encounter with “certain Epicurean and Stoic philosophers.” In fact, the Stoics, the followers of Zeno (324?–270? B.C.), took their name from these porches. In this area, between the Acropolis and the Agora, lies the hill known as the AREOPAGUS (Mars’ Hill), where Paul may have made his defense before the council of Athens (Acts 17:22–31).

Photo by Howard Vos

• The beautiful Parthenon in Athens, dedicated to the Greek goddess Athena.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• The Porch of the Maidens, connected to the temple known as the Erechtheum in Athens.

ATHLAI [ATH lay eye] (the Lord is strong)—a son of Bebai who divorced his pagan wife (Ezra 10:28).

ATONEMENT—the act by which God restores a relationship of harmony and unity between Himself and human beings. The word can be broken into three parts that express this great truth in simple but profound terms: “at-one-ment.” Through God’s atoning grace and forgiveness, we are reinstated to a relationship of at-one-ment with God, in spite of our sin.

Human Need. Because of Adam’s sin (Rom. 5:18; 1 Cor. 15:22) and our own personal sins (Col. 1:21), no one is worthy of relationship with a holy God (Eccl. 7:20; Rom. 3:23). Since we are helpless to correct this situation (Prov. 20:9) and can do nothing to hide our sin from God (Heb. 4:13), we all stand condemned by sin (Rom. 3:19). It is human nature (our sinfulness) and God’s nature (His holy wrath against sin) that makes us “enemies” (Rom. 5:10).

God's Gift. God's gracious response to the helplessness of His chosen people, the nation of Israel, was to give them a means of RECONCILIATION through Old Testament covenant Law. This came in the sacrificial system where the death or "blood" of the animal was accepted by God as a substitute for the death (Ezek. 18:20) the sinner deserved: "For the life of the flesh is in the blood, and I have given it to you upon the altar to make atonement for your souls" (Lev. 17:11).

The Law required that the sacrificial victims must be free from defect, and buying them always involved some cost to the sinner. But an animal's death did not automatically make people right with God in some simple, mechanical way. The hostility between God and people because of sin is a personal matter. God for His part personally gave the means of atonement in the sacrificial system; men and women for their part personally are expected to recognize the seriousness of their sin (Lev. 16:29–30; Mic. 6:6–8). They must also identify themselves personally with the victim that dies: "Then he shall put his hand on the head of the burnt offering, and it will be accepted on his behalf to make atonement for him" (Lev. 1:4).

In the Old Testament, God Himself brought about atonement by graciously providing the appointed sacrifices. The priests represented Him in the atonement ritual, and the sinner received the benefits of being reconciled to God in forgiveness and harmony.

Although Old Testament believers were truly forgiven and received genuine atonement through animal sacrifice, the New Testament clearly states that during the Old Testament period God's justice was not served: "For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and goats could take away sins" (Heb. 10:4). Atonement was possible "because in His forbearance God had passed over the sins that were previously committed" (Rom. 3:25). However, God's justice was served in the death of Jesus Christ as a substitute: "Not with the blood of goats and calves, but with His own blood He entered the Most Holy Place once for all, having obtained eternal redemption" (Heb. 9:12). "And for this reason He is the Mediator of the new covenant" (Heb. 9:15).

Our Response. The Lord Jesus came according to God's will (Acts 2:23; 1 Pet. 1:20) "to give His life a ransom for many" (Mark 10:45), or "for all" (1 Tim. 2:6). Though God "laid on Him the iniquity of us all" (Is. 53:6; also 2 Cor. 5:21; Gal. 3:13), yet Christ "has loved us and given Himself for us, an offering and a sacrifice to God” (Eph. 5:2), so that those who believe in Him (Rom. 3:22) might receive atonement and “be saved from [God’s] wrath” (Rom. 5:9) through “the precious blood of Christ” (1 Pet. 1:19).

No believer who truly understands the awesome holiness of God’s wrath and the terrible hopelessness that comes from personal sin can fail to be overwhelmed by the deep love of Jesus for each of us, and the wonder of God’s gracious gift of eternal atonement through Christ. Through Jesus, God will present us “faultless before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy” (Jude 24).

ATONEMENT, DAY OF (see FEASTS AND FESTIVALS).

ATROTH BETH JOAB [AT rawth beth JOE ab] (the crowns of the house of Joab)—a town of Judah, apparently near Bethlehem (1 Chr. 2:54).

ATTAI [AT ay eye]—the name of three Old Testament men:

1. A grandson of Sheshan the Jerahmeelite through Sheshan’s daughter Ahlai and her husband Jarha (1 Chr. 2:35–36).
2. A Gadite soldier who joined David at Ziklag (1 Chr. 12:8).
3. The second son of King Rehoboam by his second wife, Maacah (2 Chr. 11:20).

ATTALIA [at ah LIE ah]—a city on the seacoast of Pamphylia in modern Turkey. Attalia derived its name from Attalus Philadelphus, the king of Pergamos (159–138 B.C.). At the end of Paul’s first missionary journey, he preached in Attalia (Acts 14:25). From there he sailed to Antioch, where the journey had begun (Acts 14:26). Known today by the name Adalia, Attalia is the main seaport on the Gulf of Adalia.

ATTENDANT (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

ATTIRE (see DRESS OF THE BIBLE).

AUGURY (see MAGIC, SORCERY, AND DIVINATION).

AUGUSTAN REGIMENT—one of five cohorts, or regiments, of the Roman army stationed at or near CAESAREA. While the apostle Paul was being transported to Rome as a prisoner, he was put in the charge of "one named Julius, a centurion of the Augustan Regiment" (Acts 27:1). A regiment, or cohort, was made up of about 600 infantrymen.

AUGUSTUS [aw GUS tus] (consecrated, holy, sacred)—a title of honor bestowed upon Octavian, the first Roman emperor (27 B.C. –A.D. 14). Luke refers to him as "Caesar Augustus" (Luke 2:1). A nephew of Julius Caesar, Octavian was born in 63 B.C. In 43 B.C., Octavian, Lepidus, and Mark Antony were named as the Second Triumvirate, the three rulers who shared the office of emperor. Octavian eventually became the sole ruler of Rome and reigned as emperor for more than forty-four years, until his death in A.D. 14. It was during his reign that Jesus was born (Luke 2:1).

Augustus reigned during a time of peace and extensive architectural achievements. After his death, the title "Augustus" was given to all Roman emperors. The "Augustus Caesar" mentioned in Acts 25:21, 25, for instance, is not Octavian but Nero.

Also see CAESAR.

• Bust of Augustus Caesar, first emperor of the Roman Empire.

AUNT—an uncle's wife (Lev. 18:14; 20:20) or a father's sister (Ex. 6:20). Also see FAMILY.

AUTHORITY—the power or right to do something, particularly to give orders and see that they are followed. The word "authority" as used in the Bible usually means a person's right to do certain things because of the position or office held by that person. This word emphasizes the legality and right, more than the physical strength, needed to do something.

The two basic forms of authority are intrinsic authority (belonging to one's essential nature) and derived authority (given to one from another source). Since "there is no authority except from God" (Rom. 13:1), every kind of authority other than that of God Himself is derived and therefore secondary to God's power (John 19:11).

God's authority is absolute and unconditional (Ps. 29:10; Isaiah 40). He has authority over nature (Job 38), governments (Dan. 4:17, 34–35), and history (Acts 1:7; 17:24–31); and He has the power to send people to hell (Luke 12:5). Jesus Christ has the same intrinsic authority as the Father (John 10:25–30), although this authority is said to be given to Christ from His Father, just as the authority of the Holy Spirit is given to Him from the Father and the Son (John 14:26; 15:26; 16:13–15).

Christ has the authority to forgive sins (John 5:26–27), to lay down His life and take it up again (John 10:17–18), and to give eternal life (John 17:2). The people were astonished at the authority Jesus revealed when He taught and performed miracles (Matt. 7:28–29; 8:27; Luke 4:36).

In addition to the intrinsic authority of God, the Bible speaks of many kinds of derived power. Some of the most important of these are the authority of civil governments (Rom. 13:1–7), parents (Eph. 6:1–4), employers (Eph. 6:5–9), church leaders (Heb. 13:7, 17), angels (Luke 1:19–20), Satan (Luke 4:6), and evil spirits other than Satan (Eph. 6:11–12). There are vast differences among these kinds of authority. Some are permitted by God only for a time.

One derived authority is above every other kind of derived authority, and that is the Bible. Because the Bible is inspired by God (2 Tim. 3:16; 2 Pet. 1:20–21), it has divine power and authority. God did not give the Scriptures to be read only, but to be believed and obeyed.

Christians are often given certain authority to exercise. This includes the authority of a parent or a church leader. The most noble use of authority is for serving others. “Let him . . . who governs,” Jesus said, be “as he who serves . . . I am among you as the One who serves” (Luke 22:26–27). The Christian who seeks to follow Christ’s example will learn to use authority with others more than over others. The wise Christian remembers that all derived authority will one day be returned to the God who gave it (1 Cor. 15:24–28). But the rewards of faithful service will endure throughout eternity (1 John 2:17).

AUTHORIZED VERSION (see BIBLE VERSIONS AND TRANSLATIONS).

AVA [AY vah]—a city (or perhaps a district or province) of the Assyrian Empire. Sargon II, king of Assyria, brought settlers from Ava to colonize Samaria after the nation of Israel fell to his forces (2 Kin. 17:24). The province is also identified as Ivah (2 Kin. 18:34). Ava is spelled Avva in some translations.

AVEN [AY ven] (wickedness)—the name of two cities and one valley in the Old Testament:

1. The ancient Egyptian city of ON, called Heliopolis (city of the sun) by the Greeks. It was one of the principal centers of Egyptian sun-worship (Ezek. 30:17). “Aven” is thought to be a deliberate misvocalization for the word “On.” On was located just north of Memphis at the southern edge of the Nile Delta.
2. A shortened form of BETH AVEN (Hos. 10:8). Hosea used this name contemptuously of Bethel (“house of God”) to declare that it had become a house of idolatry.
3. A town after which a valley near Damascus was named (Amos 1:5).

AVENGER OF BLOOD—a relative responsible for avenging an injury to a member of his family or clan—especially murder (Deut. 19:6, 12; 2 Sam. 14:11).

A kind of primitive justice existed among the various families, clans, and tribes of the ancient Hebrews in the Old Testament. Being related by blood, each of these groups was responsible for the care and protection of its own members, even to the point of avenging wrongs inflicted upon the clan. This responsibility fell to the victim’s closest relative, who would seek to find and kill the murderer (Judg. 8:18–21). The trouble with this primitive system of justice is that the avenger of blood, having killed the murderer of his kinsman, might himself be killed by a member of the opposing clan, thus setting in motion a vicious blood feud.

Plainly, vengeance could not be allowed to flourish, or it would lead to chaos. The Law of Moses established certain guidelines or limits concerning the avenger of blood. Six cities of refuge were established to which the slayer could flee for protection: Kedesh, Shechem, Kirjath Arba (also called Hebron), Bezer, Ramoth in Gilead, and Golan (Josh. 20:1–9). If someone killed another by accident, he was not necessarily liable to punishment (Deut. 19:4–6). The community would decide if the crime was murder or manslaughter (Num. 35:24). If it was manslaughter, the slayer could stay safely in one of these cities of refuge, where the avenger of blood could not hurt him (Deut. 4:41–43; Josh. 20:1–9).

But if a person was guilty of murder, he could not be saved by fleeing to a city of refuge (Ex. 21:14). Even if he were to flee to the tabernacle (or temple) and take "hold of the horns of the altar" (1 Kin. 1:50–51; 2:28)—both an appeal for mercy and a claim to the protection of the sanctuary—he could be put to death by the avenger (1 Kin. 2:25, 34).

In contrast to these provisions of the Old Testament law, Jesus taught us to love our enemies (Matt. 5:44). We must forgive one another, not merely "up to seven times, but up to seventy times seven" (Matt. 18:22). Only by love, forgiveness, and mercy can the vicious cycle of hatred and revenge be broken.

Also see CITIES OF REFUGE; KINSMAN.

AVIM [AV em]—the name of a tribe and a town in the Old Testament:

1. A native tribe of the Canaanites who lived on the Philistine plain "as far as Gaza" (Deut. 2:23). Most of the Avim were destroyed or driven off by the Philistines. The reference to the Avites (Josh. 13:3; Avvim, REB, NRSV) is to these same Avim.
2. A town of the territory of Benjamin, probably situated near Bethel (Josh. 18:23; Avvim, REB, NRSV).

AVITES [AV ites]—the name of two tribes in the Old Testament:

1. A native tribe of the Canaanites who lived on the Philistine plain (Josh. 13:3). The NKJV also translates this tribe as AVIM (Deut. 2:23; Avvim, NRSV, REB).
2. The people of AVA, a city of the Assyrian Empire from which people were brought to help colonize Samaria (2 Kin. 17:31; Avvites, NRSV, REB, NIV).

AVITH [AY vihth]—the capital city of Hadad, king of Edom (1 Chr. 1:46).

AVVA [AV vah]—a form of AVA.

AVVIM [AV vem]—a form of AVIM and AVITES.

AVVITES [AV vites]—a form of AVITES.

AWL (see TOOLS OF THE BIBLE).

AX (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE; TOOLS OF THE BIBLE).

AXLE—a supporting shaft upon which wheels revolve. Solomon's temple had ten bronze carts, each with four bronze wheels and axles of bronze (1 Kin. 7:30, 32; axletrees, KJV).

AYIN [EYE yin]—the 16th letter of the Hebrew alphabet, used as a heading over Psalm 119:121–128 (Ain, KJV). In the original Hebrew language, each of these eight verses began with the letter ayin. Also see ACROSTIC.

AYYAH [EYE yah] (heap, ruin)—one of the towns settled by the tribe of Ephraim (1 Chr. 7:28; Gaza, KJV, REB). Some scholars suggest that Ayyah may be the same place as Aija (Neh. 11:31), another spelling of AI, a city near Jericho.

AZAL [AY zal]—a place near Jerusalem (Zech. 14:5).

AZALIAH [az ah LIE ah] (the Lord is noble)—a son of Meshullam and the father of Shaphan the scribe (2 Kin. 22:3).

AZANIAH [AZ ah NIE ah] (the Lord has heard)—a Levite who sealed the covenant under Nehemiah (Neh. 10:9).

AZARAEL [AZ ar ay el]—a form of AZAREL.

AZAREEL [a ZAY reh el] (God is helper)—the name of three men in the Old Testament:

1. A Levite of the family of Korah (1 Chr. 12:6; Azarel, NRSV, NIV).
2. A son of Bani. Azareel divorced his pagan wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:41; Azarel, NRSV, NIV).
3. A priest of the family of Immer (Neh. 11:13; Azarel, NRSV, NIV).

AZAREL [AZ ah rel] (God is helper)—the name of three men in the Old Testament:

1. A priest responsible for the song service of the temple (1 Chr. 25:18; Azareel, KJV, REB). He is also called Uzziel (1 Chr. 25:4).
2. A son of Jehoram, who was the chief of the tribe of Dan (1 Chr. 27:22; Azareel, KJV, REB).
3. A musician who played the trumpet at the dedication of the new temple (Neh. 12:36; Azarael, KJV).

AZARIAH [az ah RYE ah] (the Lord has helped)—the name of 28 men in the Old Testament:

1. One of Solomon’s officials (1 Kin. 4:2).
2. A son of Nathan (1 Kin. 4:5). Azariah was in charge of the officers who oversaw Solomon’s twelve districts (1 Kin. 4:5).
3. An alternate name for UZZIAH, king of Judah (2 Kin. 14:21; 1 Chr. 3:12).
4. A son of Ethan of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 2:8).
5. A descendant of Jerahmeel (1 Chr. 2:38–39).
6. A son of Ahimaaz and grandson of Zadok (1 Chr. 6:9).
7. A son of Johanan and grandson of Azariah (1 Chr. 6:10–11).
8. A son of Hilkiah and high priest under King Josiah (1 Chr. 6:13–14; 9:11; Ezra 7:1).
9. A Levite and an ancestor of Heman the musician (1 Chr. 6:36).
10. The son of Oded (2 Chr. 15:1). Azariah was the prophet who encouraged King Asa of Judah to continue his religious reform.
11. A son of King Jehoshaphat of Judah who was killed when his brother, Jehoram, succeeded to the throne (2 Chr. 21:2).

12. Another son of King Jehoshaphat (2 Chr. 21:2, Azaryahu, NKJV, NASB; Azariahu, NIV).
13. A son of Jehoram (2 Chr. 22:6). In this verse, Azariah appears to be a copyist's error for Ahaziah.
14. A son of Obed (2 Chr. 23:1). Azariah was an army officer who helped overthrow Queen Athaliah and make Joash king of Judah.
15. A son of Jehoram who assisted in the same conspiracy (2 Chr. 23:1).
16. A chief priest under King Uzziah (2 Chr. 26:17, 20).
17. A son of Johanan (2 Chr. 28:12). Azariah was an Ephraimite chief.
18. The father of Joel (2 Chr. 29:12).
19. A son of Jehalelel (2 Chr. 29:12). Azariah was a Levite who assisted in temple reform under Hezekiah.
20. The "chief priest" and "ruler of the house of God" (2 Chr. 31:10, 13) during the reign of Hezekiah, king of Judah.
21. A son of Meraioth (Ezra 7:3), an ancestor of Ezra.
22. A son of Maaseiah (Neh. 3:23–24).
23. An Israelite who returned to Jerusalem with Zerubbabel after the captivity (Neh. 7:7).
24. A priest who explained the Law as Ezra read it to the people (Neh. 8:7).
25. A priest who sealed the covenant under Nehemiah (Neh. 10:2).
26. A prince of Judah who assisted in the dedication of Jerusalem's rebuilt walls (Neh. 12:33).
27. A son of Hoshaiah (Jer. 43:2) and a person who opposed the prophet Jeremiah.
28. The Hebrew name of ABED-NEGO, whom Nebuchadnezzar placed in the fiery furnace (Dan. 1:6–7, 11, 19; 2:17).

AZARIAH, PRAYER OF (see APOCRYPHA).

AZARIAHU [az uh RYE uh hoo] (see AZARYAHU).

AZARYAHU [ah ZAR yuh hoo] (the Lord is help)—a son of King Jehoshaphat of Judah (2 Chr. 21:2; Azariah, KJV, NRSV, REB; Azariahu, NIV). Azaryahu was killed by his brother Jehoram, who seized the throne at Jehoshaphat's death.

AZAZ [AY zaz] (God is strong)—a son of Shema in the genealogy of Reuben (1 Chr. 5:8).

AZAZEL [AZ ah zel]—NRSV, KJV word for SCAPEGOAT.

AZAZIAH [az ah ZIE ah] (the Lord is strong)—the name of three men in the books of Chronicles:

1. A Levite in the musical service of the tabernacle when David moved the ARK OF THE COVENANT to Jerusalem (1 Chr. 15:21).
2. The father of Hoshea (1 Chr. 27:20).
3. A Levite in charge of the temple offerings during the reign of King Hezekiah (2 Chr. 31:13).

AZBUK [AZ buck]—the father of Nehemiah (Neh. 3:16).

AZEKAH [a ZEE kah]—a fortified city of Judah near Socoh, situated in the lowland country between Lachish and Jerusalem (Josh. 15:35; Neh. 11:30) (see Map 3, A–4). Azekah is mentioned in connection with Joshua's pursuit of the Canaanites (Josh. 10:10–11), with the Philistine camp in Goliath's time (1 Sam. 17:1), with Rehoboam, who fortified it (2 Chr. 11:9), and with Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, who beseiged the city (Jer. 34:7).

AZEL [AY zel]—a son of Eleasah and a descendant of King Saul through Jonathan. Azel was the father of six sons (1 Chr. 8:37–38).

AZEM [AY zem]—a form of EZEM.

AZGAD [AZ gad] (Gad is strong)—the name of three men who lived in the time of Ezra and Nehemiah:

1. A man whose descendants returned from the captivity with Zerubbabel (Ezra 2:12; Neh. 7:17).
2. An ancestor of Johanan, who accompanied Ezra back to Jerusalem (Ezra 8:12).
3. A man who sealed the covenant after the captivity (Neh. 10:15).

AZIEL [AY zi el]—a Levite musician who helped transport the ARK OF THE COVENANT to Jerusalem (1 Chr. 15:20). His full name was Jaaziel (1 Chr. 15:18).

AZIZA [a ZIE zah] (powerful)—a son of Zattu who divorced his pagan wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:27).

AZMAVETH [az MAH veth] (strong as death)—the name of three or four men and one village in the Old Testament:

1. One of David’s mighty men. He was from Bahurim, a small village near Jerusalem (2 Sam. 23:31; 1 Chr. 11:33).
2. A son of Jehoaddah (1 Chr. 8:36), or Jarah (1 Chr. 9:42). Azmaveth was a descendant of King Saul.
3. The father of Pelet and Jeziel (1 Chr. 12:1–3). He may be the same person as No. 1.
4. A treasury official during David’s reign (1 Chr. 27:25).
5. A village near the border of Judah and Benjamin, about 8 kilometers (5 miles) northeast of Jerusalem. Forty-two men of Azmaveth returned from the captivity with Zerubbabel (Ezra 2:24). Musicians and singers from this village helped dedicate the rebuilt wall of Jerusalem (Neh. 12:29). This village was also called Beth Azmaveth (Neh. 7:28).

AZMON [AZ mun]—a place on the southwest border of Judah, between Hazar Addar and the “Brook of Egypt” (Num. 34:4–5; Josh. 15:4).

AZNOTH TABOR [AZ nohth TAY bor] (peaks of Tabor)—a place near the southern boundary of Naphtali (Josh. 19:34). It may be Umm Jebeil, near Mount Tabor.

AZOR [AY zor]—an ancestor of Jesus (Matt. 1:13–14).

AZOTUS [a ZOH tus]—the Greek name of ASHDOD (Acts 8:40).

AZRIEL [AZ rih el] (God is helper)—the name of three Old Testament men:

1. A chief of the tribe of Manasseh (1 Chr. 5:24).
2. An ancestor of Jerimoth (1 Chr. 27:19).
3. The father of Seraiah (Jer. 36:26).

AZRIKAM [AZ rih kam] (my help has risen)—the name of four men in the Old Testament:

1. A descendant of King David through Zerubbabel (1 Chr. 3:23).
2. The oldest son of Azel and a descendant of King Saul (1 Chr. 8:38; 9:44).
3. A Levite who lived in Jerusalem after the captivity (1 Chr. 9:14; Neh. 11:15).
4. The governor of the house of Ahaz (2 Chr. 28:7).

AZUBAH [a ZOO buh] (forsaken)—the name of two women in the Old Testament:

1. The mother of Jehoshaphat, a king of Judah (1 Kin. 22:42).
2. Caleb's first wife and the mother of his three sons, Jesher, Shobab, and Ardon (1 Chr. 2:18–19).

AZUR [AY zer] (helper)—the father of Hananiah the false prophet (Jer. 28:1; AZZUR, NRSV, NIV, REB).

AZZAN [AZ an]—the father of Paltiel, of the tribe of Issachar. Paltiel helped Eleazar and Joshua divide the land among the tribes (Num. 34:26).

AZZUR [AZ err] (helper)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. An Israelite who sealed the covenant under Nehemiah (Neh. 10:17).
2. The father of Jaazaniah, a prince whom Ezekiel saw in a vision (Ezek. 11:1; Azur, KJV).

B

BAAL [BAY uhl] (lord, master)—the name of one or more false gods, a place, and two people in the Old Testament:

1. A fertility and nature god of the Canaanites and Phoenicians. Also see GODS, PAGAN.
2. A city in the tribe of Simeon (1 Chr. 4:33), the same place as Baalath Beer (Josh. 19:8).
3. A descendant of Reuben (1 Chr. 5:5–6).
4. A descendant of Benjamin listed in the family tree of King Saul (1 Chr. 8:30; 9:36).

BAAL–BERITH [BAY uhl BEE rith] (see GODS, PAGAN).

BAAL GAD [BAY uhl gad] (lord of Gad)—a town "in the Valley of Lebanon below Mount Hermon" (Josh. 11:17). Joshua marched as far north as this city in his conquest of Canaan (Josh. 12:7; 13:5).

BAAL HAMON [BAY uhl HAY mahn] (lord of abundance)—a place where Solomon had a fertile vineyard (Song 8:11).

BAAL–HANAN [BAY uhl HAY nun] (Baal is gracious)—two men in the Old Testament:

1. A king of Edom (Gen. 36:38–39; 1 Chr. 1:49–50).
2. A man appointed custodian of olive and sycamore trees by David (1 Chr. 27:28).

BAAL HAZOR [BAY uhl HAY zor] (lord of Hazor)—a place (2 Sam. 13:23) where Amnon was murdered by Absalom's servants in revenge for Amnon's rape of Tamar (2 Sam. 13:14, 29).

BAAL HERMON [BAY uhl HUR mon] (lord of Hermon)—the name of a mountain and a city in the Old Testament:

1. A mountain east of Lebanon (Judg. 3:3).
2. A city near Mount Hermon (1 Chr. 5:23).

BAAL MEON [BAY uhl ME own] (lord of Meon)—an Amorite city on the northern border of Moab assigned to the tribe of Reuben (Num. 32:38). Baal Meon is also called Beon (Num. 32:3), Beth Baal Meon (Josh. 13:17), and Beth Meon (Jer. 48:23).

BAAL OF PEOR [BAY uhl, PEA ore] (see GODS, PAGAN).

BAAL PERAZIM [BAY uhl PER uh zem] (lord of breaches)—a place near the valley of Rephaim where King David won a great victory over the Philistines (2 Sam. 5:20; 1 Chr. 14:11).

BAAL SHALISHA [BAY uhl SHALL ih shah] (lord of Shalisha)—a village of Ephraim, near Gilgal. A man from this place brought the prophet Elisha “bread of the firstfruits” to eat (2 Kin. 4:42).

BAAL TAMAR [BAY uhl TAY mar] (lord of the palm tree)—a place in Benjamin, between Bethel and Gibeah, where the Israelites prepared for battle (Judg. 20:33) before attacking the city of GIBEAH.

BAAL–ZEBUB [BAY uhl ZEE bub] (see GODS, PAGAN).

BAAL ZEPHON [BAY uhl ZEE fon] (Baal of the north)—a place in Egypt that was “opposite,” or in front of, the Israelites while they were camped “before Pi Hahiroth, between Migdol and the sea” (Ex. 14:2, 9), just before they crossed the Red Sea (see Map 2, B–1).

BAALAH [BAY uh lah] (lady, mistress)—a feminine form of Baal that refers to three different places in Canaan:

1. Another name for the town KIRJATH JEARIM (Josh. 15:9–10).
2. A hill in southern Judah, between Ekron and Jabneel (Josh. 15:11).
3. A town in southern Judah, near the border of Edom (Josh. 15:29). It was also called Balah (Josh. 19:3) and Bilhah (1 Chr. 4:29).

BAALATH [BAY uh lath] (lady, mistress)—a town near Gezer (Josh. 19:44) that became one of Solomon’s storage cities (1 Kin. 9:18; 2 Chr. 8:6).

BAALATH BEER [BAY uh lath BEER] (mistress of a well)—a border town of the tribe of Simeon, sometimes called “Ramah of the South”

(Josh. 19:8; 1 Sam. 30:27). It is identical with the city of Baal (1 Chr. 4:33). Also see BEALOTH.

BAALBEK [BAY uhl beck]—an ancient city of Lebanon, situated north of Damascus. The city is not mentioned in the Bible, but it was notable in Roman days.

BAALE JUDAH [BAY uh leh JOO duh] (lords of Judah)—a town from which David brought the ARK OF THE COVENANT to Jerusalem (2 Sam. 6:2).

BAALI [BAY uh lih] (my lord, my master)—a term used in the KJV that refers to a subservient relationship either to a ruler or master or to BAAL. Because of Israel's idolatry, the prophet Hosea used the term to explain God's relationship to the nation as one of a master over a servant, rather than one of a loving husband (Hos. 2:16).

BAALIM [BAY uh lem] (see GODS, PAGAN).

BAALIS [BAY uh lis]—a king of the Ammonites at the time when Jerusalem was destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon (Jer. 40:14). His name was recently found on an Ammonite inscription.

BAANA [BAY uh nah]—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. Solomon's supply officer, in the area of the plain of Esdraelon (1 Kin. 4:12).
2. The father of Zadok (Neh. 3:4).

BAANAH [BAY UH nah]—the name of four men in the Old Testament:

1. A captain in the army of ISHBOSHETH, the son of King Saul. Baanah was one of the murderers of Ishbosheth; David had him put to death for his crime (2 Sam. 4:1–12).
2. One of David's mighty men (2 Sam. 23:29).
3. Solomon's supply officer (1 Kin. 4:16).
4. A captive who returned to Jerusalem with Zerubbabel (Ezra 2:2; Neh. 7:7; 10:27).

BAARA [BAY uh rah] (burning one)—a Moabite wife of Shaharaim, a Benjamite (1 Chr. 8:8).

BAASEIAH [BAY ah SIGH yah]—a descendant of Gershon (1 Chr. 6:43) and an ancestor of Asaph the musician (1 Chr. 6:40).

BAASHA [BAY uh shah]—the son of Ahijah, of the tribe of Issachar, and the third king of the northern kingdom of Israel. Baasha succeeded Nadab, the son of Jeroboam I, as king by assassinating him. Then he murdered every member of the royal house, removing all who might claim his throne (1 Kin. 15:27–29).

Baasha's 24-year reign (909–885 B.C.) was characterized by war with Asa, king of Judah (1 Kin. 15:32; Jer. 41:9). He fortified RAMAH (2 Chr. 16:1), 6 kilometers (4 miles) north of Jerusalem, to control traffic from the north to Jerusalem during a time of spiritual awakening under Asa (2 Chr. 15:1–10). When the Syrian king, Ben-Hadad, invaded Israel, Baasha withdrew to defend his cities (1 Kin. 15:16–21).

Baasha's dynasty ended as it began; his son Elah was murdered by a servant, and the royal household of Baasha came to an end (1 Kin. 16:8–11).

BABBLER—a term of ridicule and contempt hurled at the apostle Paul by the Stoic and Epicurean philosophers at Athens (Acts 17:18). The Greek word for this term means "seed-picker." The philosophers were calling Paul an ignorant parasite who peddles scraps of information that he does not understand.

BABEL, TOWER OF [BAY buhl]—an ancient tower symbolizing human pride and rebellion. It was built during the period after the FLOOD.

The narrative of the Tower of Babel appears in Genesis 11:1–9 as the climax to the account of early mankind found in Genesis 1–11. The geographical setting is a plain in the land of Shinar (Gen. 11:2). In the light of information contained in Genesis 10:10, Shinar probably refers to Babylonia.

The tower was constructed of brick, because there was no stone in southern Mesopotamia. It corresponds in general to a notable feature of Babylonian religion, the ZIGGURAT or temple tower. The one built at Ur in southern Mesopotamia about 2100 B.C. was a pyramid consisting of three terraces of diminishing size as the building ascended, topped by a temple. Converging stairways on one side led up to the temple. Its surviving lower two terraces were about 21 meters (70 feet) high. The outside of the structure was built of fired bricks and bituminous mortar, just like the tower described in Genesis 11:3.

The narrative in Genesis 11 is told with irony and with a negative attitude toward the people involved. Human beings delight in bricks, but the narrator and readers know that these are an inferior substitute for stone (Is. 9:10). To people the tower is a skyscraper (Deut. 1:28), but to God it is so small that He must come down from heaven to catch a glimpse of this tiny effort. The construction of the tower and city is described as an act of self-glorification by the builders (Gen. 11:4). People seek for their own security in community life and culture, independent of God. This is human initiative apart from God (Ps. 127:1). As such, the activity is evil and sinful.

The account moves from a description of the sin to a narration of the punishment. God has to step in to prevent mankind from seizing yet more power for themselves and going beyond the limits of their creaturehood (Gen. 3:22; 11:5–8). Their communication with each other to advance their efforts is frustrated because they begin to speak different languages. Finally, they abandon the building of the city and go their own way, becoming scattered over the earth.

The climax of the story occurs when the city is identified with Babel, the Hebrew name for Babylonia. This nation's sophisticated culture and power deliberately excluded God. Just as the Old Testament prophets foresaw the future downfall of Babylonia in spite of its glory (Is. 13:19; Rev. 18), this downfall is anticipated in Genesis 11: the end corresponds to the beginning. Babel derives ultimately from an Akkadian word that means "gateway to God." A similar Hebrew word, balal, means "confuse" and provides the author with a useful wordplay that stresses God's confusing of the builders' languages and His scattering of them throughout the earth (Gen. 11:9).

God's rejection of the nations symbolized by the Tower of Babel is reversed in Genesis 12:1–3 by the call of Abraham, through whom all nations would be blessed. Ultimately the sinful and rejected condition of mankind, which is clearly shown by the diversity of human language and territory described in this account, needed PENTECOST as its answer. On this day the Holy Spirit was poured out on all people so they understood one another, although they spoke different languages (Acts 2:1–11; Eph. 2:14–18). The barriers that divide people and nations were thus removed.

BABOON (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BABYLON, CITY OF [BAB uh lon]—ancient walled city between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers and capital of the Babylonian Empire. The leading citizens of the nation of Judah were carried to this city as captives in 586 B.C. after Jerusalem fell to the invading Babylonians. Biblical writers often portrayed this ancient capital of the Babylonian people as the model of paganism and idolatry (Jer. 51:44; Dan. 4:30).

Babylon was situated along the Euphrates River about 485 kilometers (300 miles) northwest of the Persian Gulf and about 49 kilometers (30 miles) southwest of modern Baghdad in Iraq. Its origins are unknown. According to Babylonian tradition, it was built by the god Marduk. The city must have been built some time before 2300 B.C., because it was destroyed about that time by an invading enemy king. This makes Babylon one of the oldest cities of the ancient world. Genesis 10:10 mentions Babel (the Hebrew spelling of Babylon) as part of the empire of Nimrod.

Sometime during its early history, the city of Babylon became a small independent kingdom. Its most famous king was HAMMURAPI (about 1792–1750 B.C.), who conquered southern Mesopotamia and territory to the north as far as Mari. He was known for his revision of a code of law that showed concern for the welfare of the people under his rule. But the dynasty he established declined under his successors. It came to an end with the conquest of Babylon by the Hittite king Murshilish I about 1595 B.C. Then the Kassites took over for a period, ruling southern Mesopotamia from the city of Babylon as their capital. The Assyrians attacked and plundered Babylon about 1250 B.C., but it recovered and flourished for another century until the Assyrians succeeded in taking over the city with their superior forces about 1100 B.C.

After Tiglath–Pileser I of Assyria arrived on the scene, the city of Babylon became subject to Assyria by treaty or conquest. Tiglath–Pileser III (745–727 B.C.) declared himself king of Babylon with the name Pulu (Pul, 2 Kin. 15:19), deporting a number of its citizens to the subdued territory of the northern kingdom of Israel (2 Kin. 17:24).

In 721 B.C. a Chaldean prince, Marduk–apal–iddina, (Hebrew Merodach–Baladan), seized control of Babylon and became a thorn in Assyria's side for a number of years. He apparently planned a large-scale rebellion of eastern and western parts of the Assyrian Empire (2 Kin. 20:12). In retaliation against this rebellion, Sennacherib of Assyria (704–681 B.C.) attacked Babylon in 689 B.C., totally destroying it, although it was rebuilt by his successor Esarhaddon (680–669 B.C.). After this, Assyrian power gradually weakened, so the city and kingdom of Babylonia grew stronger once again.

In 626 B.C. Nabopolassar seized the throne of Babylon. He was succeeded by Nebuchadnezzar II (605–562 B.C.), the greatest king of Babylon, who enlarged the capital city to an area of six square miles and beautified it with magnificent buildings. This period of the city's development has been the focal point of all archaeological research done in ancient Babylon. The city's massive double walls spanned both sides of the Euphrates River. Set into these walls were eight major gates. One of the numerous pagan temples in the city was that of the patron god Marduk, flanked by a ZIGGURAT or temple-tower. To this temple a sacred processional way led from the main gate, the Ishtar Gate. Both the gate and the walls facing the way were decorated with colored enameled bricks picturing lions, dragons, and bulls.

The city of Babylon also contained a palace complex, or residence for the king. On the northwest side of this palace area, the famous terraced "hanging gardens" may have been situated. They were one of the Seven Wonders of the ancient world. According to tradition, Nebuchadnezzar built these gardens for one of his foreign wives to remind her of the scenery of her homeland.

Babylon's glory reflected the king's imperial power. Captured kings were brought to his court at Babylon. These included Jehoiachin (2 Kin. 24:15) and Zedekiah (2 Kin. 25:7), kings of Judah. During the reign of Nabonidus (555–539 B.C.), while Belshazzar was co-regent (Daniel 5), the city surrendered to the Persians without opposition.

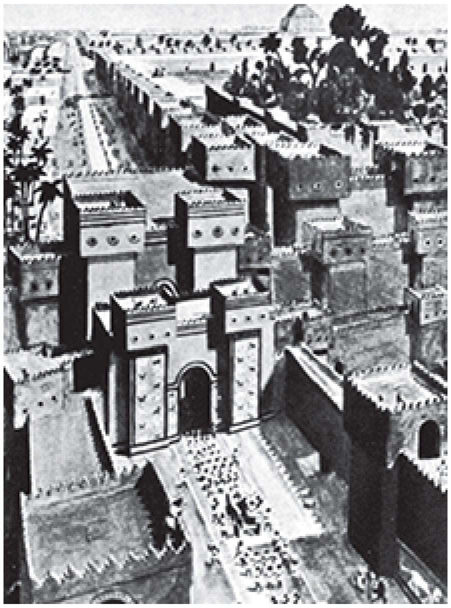
Eventually the balance of power passed from the Persians to Alexander the Great, to whom Babylon willingly submitted in 331 B.C. Alexander planned to refurbish and expand the city and make it his capital, but he died before accomplishing these plans. The city later fell into insignificance because one of Alexander's successors founded a new capital at Seleucia, a short distance away.

The books of Isaiah and Jeremiah predicted the downfall of Babylon. This would happen as God's punishment of the Babylonians because of their destruction of Jerusalem and their deportation of the citizens of Judah (Is. 14:22; 21:9; 43:14; Jer. 50:9; 51:37). Today, the ruins of this city stand as an eloquent testimony to the passing of proud empires and to the providential hand of God.

◆

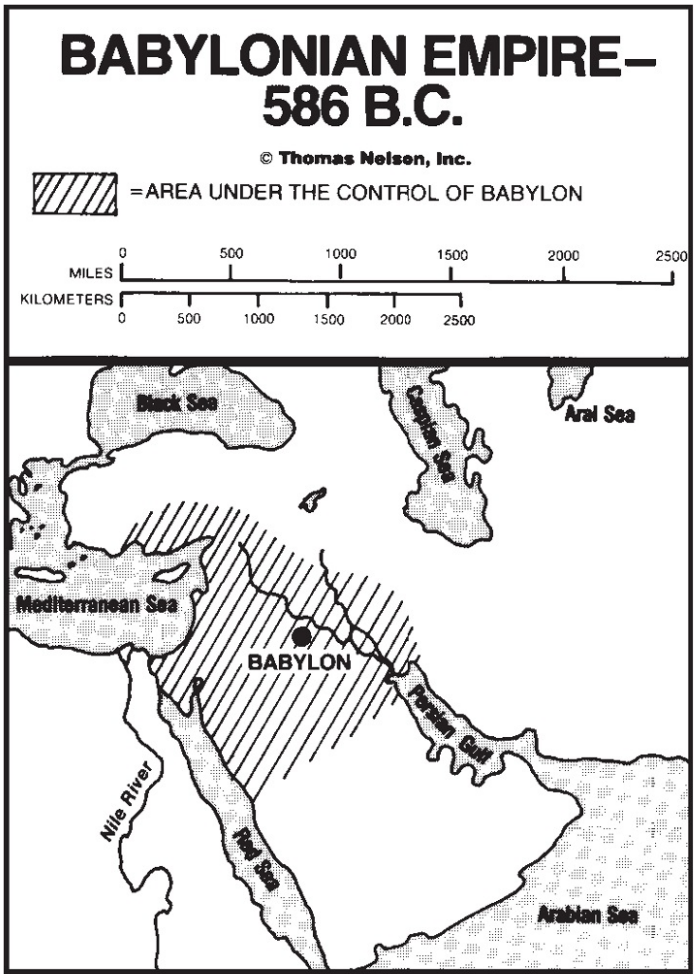
Photo by Ben Chapman

- A glazed relief of a bull, discovered in the excavation of ancient Babylon.



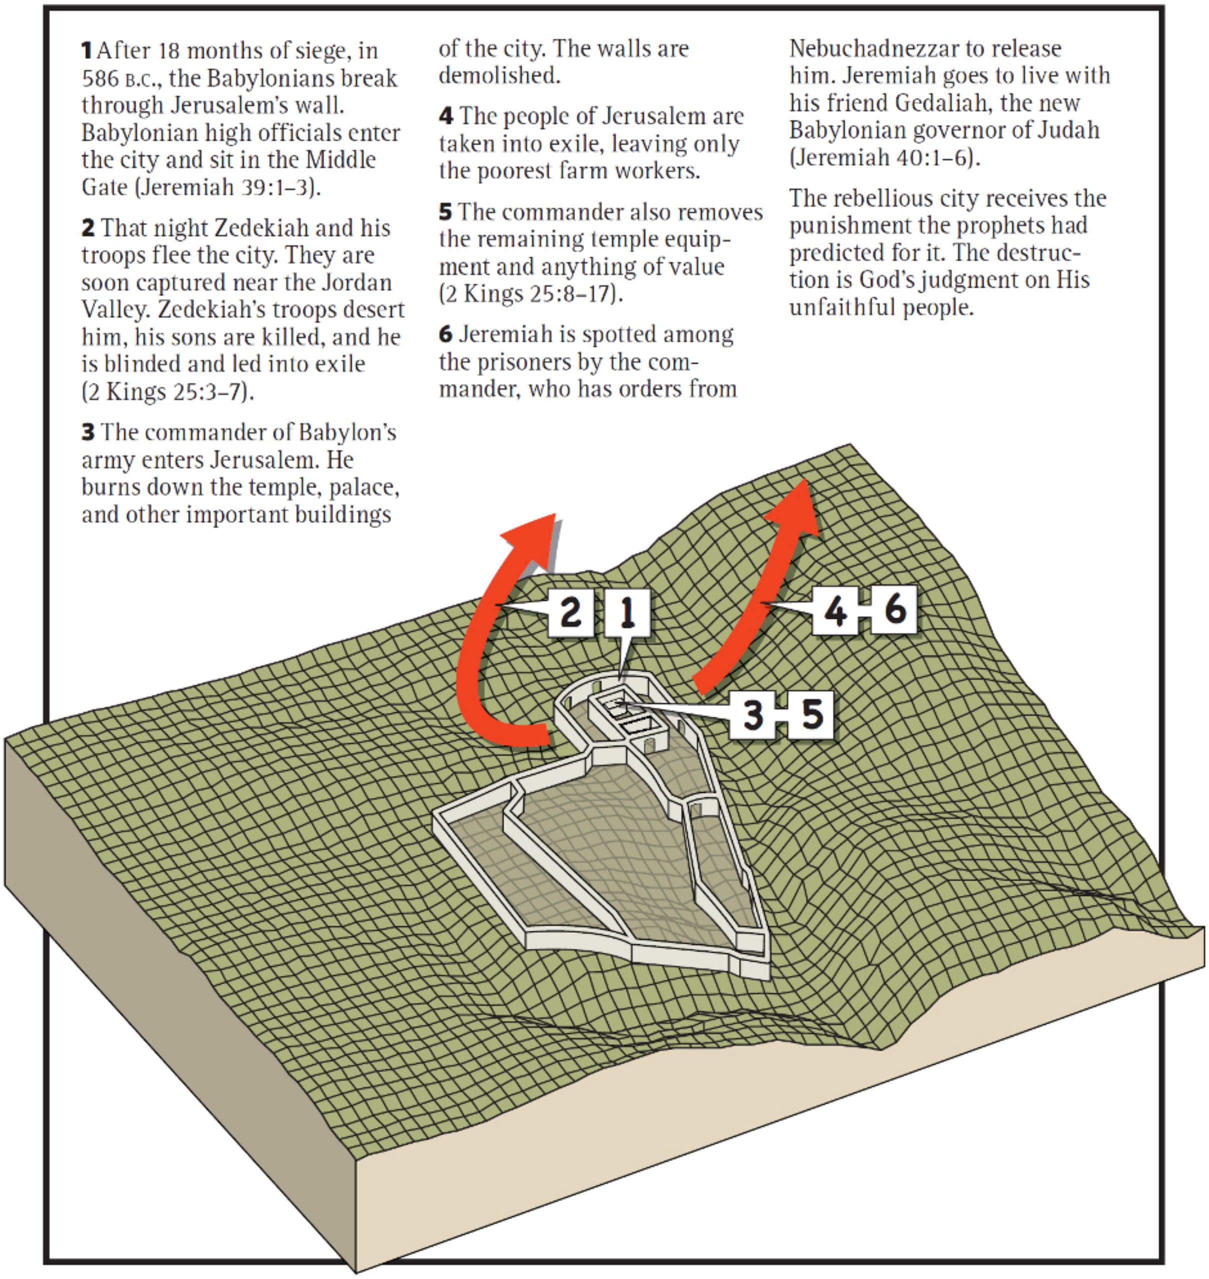
• This drawing of Babylon shows the main avenue of the city, passing through the Gate of Ishtar in the city wall.

Babylonian Empire—586 B.C.



BABYLONIAN EMPIRE–586 B.C.
© Thomas Nelson, Inc.
=AREA UNDER THE CONTROL OF BABYLON
MILES
0
500
1000
1500
2000
2500
KILOMETERS
0
500
1000
1500
2000
2500
Black Sea
Caspian Sea
Aral Sea
Mediterranean Sea
BABYLON
Persian Gulf
Nile River
Red Sea
Arabian Sea

JERUSALEM FALLS



1 After 18 months of siege, in 586 B.C., the Babylonians break through Jerusalem's wall. Babylonian high officials enter the city and sit in the Middle Gate (Jeremiah 39:1–3).

2 That night Zedekiah and his troops flee the city. They are soon captured near the Jordan Valley. Zedekiah's troops desert him, his sons are killed, and he is blinded and led into exile (2 Kings 25:3–7).

3 The commander of Babylon's army enters Jerusalem. He burns down the temple, palace, and other important buildings of the city. The walls are demolished.

4 The people of Jerusalem are taken into exile, leaving only the poorest farm workers.

5 The commander also removes the remaining temple equipment and anything of value (2 Kings 25:8–17).

6 Jeremiah is spotted among the prisoners by the commander, who has orders from Nebuchadnezzar to release him. Jeremiah goes to live with his friend Gedaliah, the new Babylonian governor of Judah (Jeremiah 40:1–6).

The rebellious city receives the punishment the prophets had predicted for it. The destruction is God's judgment on His unfaithful people.

1 After 18 months of siege, in 586 B.C., the Babylonians break through Jerusalem's wall. Babylonian high officials enter the city and sit in the Middle Gate (Jeremiah 39:1–3).

2 That night Zedekiah and his troops flee the city. They are soon captured near the Jordan Valley. Zedekiah's troops desert him, his sons are killed, and he is blinded and led into exile (2 Kings 25:3–7).

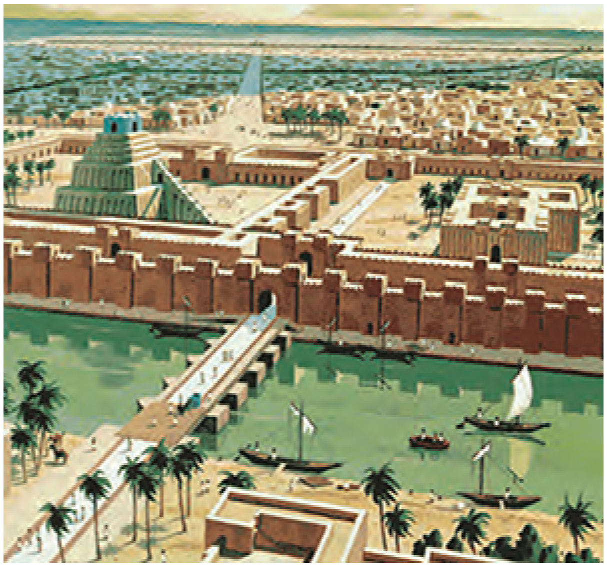
3 The commander of Babylon's army enters Jerusalem. He burns down the temple, palace, and other important buildings of the city. The walls are demolished.

4 The people of Jerusalem are taken into exile, leaving only the poorest farm workers.

5 The commander also removes the remaining temple equipment and anything of value (2 Kings 25:8–17).

6 Jeremiah is spotted among the prisoners by the commander, who has orders from Nebuchadnezzar to release him. Jeremiah goes to live with his friend Gedaliah, the new Babylonian governor of Judah (Jeremiah 40:1–6).

The rebellious city receives the punishment the prophets had predicted for it. The destruction is God's judgment on His unfaithful people.



• This reconstruction of Babylon from the time of King Nebuchadnezzar II shows the huge ziggurat on the left and the temple of the pagan god Marduk on the right.

BABYLON IN THE NEW TESTAMENT—In the Book of Revelation the world in rebellion against God is called “Babylon.” The Old Testament prophets often prophesied the fall of Babylon, the capital of an empire that destroyed God’s city, Jerusalem, and carried His people away as captives. So in Revelation Babylon is a word-picture for a society that persecuted God’s people but that God will eventually destroy.

When the Book of Revelation was written, Babylon may have been a kind of code name for pre-Christian Rome, which was built on seven hills (Rev. 17:9) and which was already persecuting the church. Since that time, generations of Christians have been able to identify their own Babylons and have found reassurance in Revelation’s message.

In Revelation 14:8 Babylon’s power to make people resist God’s claims in the gospel is admitted, but its doom is certain. In Revelation 16:19 Babylon is a “great city” that falls because God remembers its sin and brings His punishment. Throughout chapters 17–18 Babylon is prominent, pictured as a prostitute because it seduces people away from God with its glamor. But it is a false union that cannot satisfy.

“Babylon” stands over against the church, the “New Jerusalem” (Rev. 21:2), which is “the bride, the Lamb’s wife” (Rev. 21:9). God reveals the “mystery” or divine truth (Rev. 17:5) about it and all such manmade societies that are organized independently of God. Its fall is celebrated by God’s people (Rev. 18:20; 19:1–5).

In Matthew 1:11–12, 17, Judah’s captivity in Babylon is mentioned in Jesus’ genealogy. In Acts 7:43 Babylon appears in Stephen’s famous speech about the history of the Jewish people. In 1 Peter 5:13 “Babylon” probably refers to the city of Rome.

BABYLONIA [bab i LOW nih uh]—ancient pagan empire between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers in southern Mesopotamia. The Babylonians struggled with the neighboring Assyrians for domination of the ancient world during much of their history. At the height of their power, the Babylonians overpowered the nation of Judah, destroyed Jerusalem, and carried God’s Covenant People into captivity in 586 B.C.

The fortunes of the Babylonians rose and fell during the long sweep of Old Testament history—from about 2000 B.C. to about 500 B.C.

References to these people—their culture, religion, and military power—occur throughout the Old Testament.

Babylonia was a long, narrow country about 65 kilometers (40 miles) wide at its widest point and having an area of about 8,000 square miles. It was bordered on the north by Assyria, on the east by Elam, on the south and west by the Arabian desert, and on the southeast by the Persian Gulf.

Among the earliest inhabitants of this region were the Sumerians, whom the Bible refers to as the people of the "land of Shinar" (Gen. 10:10). Sargon I (the Great), from one of the Sumerian cities, united the people of Babylonia under his rule about 2300 B.C. Many scholars believe Sargon was the same person as Nimrod (Gen. 10:8).

In 1792 B.C. HAMMURAPI emerged as the ruler of Babylonia. He expanded the borders of the Empire and organized its laws into a written system, referred to by scholars as the Code of Hammurapi. Abraham had earlier left UR, one of the ancient cities in lower Babylonia, and moved to Haran, a city in the north. Abraham eventually left Haran and migrated into the land of Canaan under God's promise that he would become the father of a great nation (Gen. 12:1–20).

Any account of Babylonia must also mention Assyria, which bordered Babylonia on the north. Assyria's development was often intertwined with the course of Babylonian history. About 1270 B.C., the Assyrians overpowered Babylonia. For the next 700 years, Babylonia was a second-rate power as the Assyrians dominated the ancient world.

In 626 B.C., Babylonian independence was finally won from Assyria by a leader named Nabopolassar. Under his leadership, Babylonia again became a great empire. In 605 B.C., Nebuchadnezzar, the son of Nabopolassar, became ruler and reigned for forty-four years. Under him the Babylonian Empire reached its greatest strength. Using the treasures he took from other nations, Nebuchadnezzar built BABYLON, the capital city of Babylonia, into one of the leading cities of the world. The famous "hanging gardens" of Babylon were known as one of the Seven Wonders of the ancient world.

In 586 B.C., the Babylonians destroyed Jerusalem and carried the leading citizens of the nation of Judah as captives to Babylon. During this period of captivity, the Persians conquered Babylonia, and the Babylonians passed from the scene as a world power.

During its long history, Babylonia attained a high level of civilization that was influential beyond its borders. Sumerian culture was its basis, which later Babylonians regarded as traditional. In the realm of religion, the Sumerians already had a system of gods, each with a main temple in a particular city. The chief gods were Anu, god of heaven; Enlil, god of the air; and Enki or Ea, god of the subterranean ocean. Others were Shamash, the sun-god; Sin, the moon-god; Ishtar, goddess of love and war; and Adad, the storm-god. The Amorites promoted the god Marduk at the city of Babylon, so that he became the chief god of the Babylonian religion, beginning about 1100 B.C.

Babylonian religion was temple-centered, with elaborate festivals and many different types of priests, especially the exorcist and the diviner, whose function was to drive away evil spirits.

Babylonian literature was dominated by mythology and legends. Among these was a “creation” myth called Enuma Elish, written to glorify a god known as Marduk. According to this myth, Marduk created heaven and earth from the corpse of the goddess Tiamat. Another work was the Gilgamesh Epic, which includes a flood story and was written about 2000 B.C. Scientific literature of the Babylonians included treatises on astronomy, mathematics, medicine, chemistry, botany, and zoology.

An important aspect of Babylonian culture was a codified system of law. Hammurapi’s code was the successor of earlier collections of laws going back several centuries. The Babylonians used art for the celebration of great events and glorification of the gods. It was marked by stylized and symbolic representations, but it expressed realism and spontaneity in the depiction of animals.

The Old Testament contains many references to Babylonia. Genesis 10:10 mentions four Babylonian cities: Babel (Babylon), Erech (Uruk), Accad (Agade) and Calneh. These, along with Assyria, were ruled by Nimrod.

Photo: Matson Photo Collection

- The ruins of Babylon, once the proud capital city of the mighty Babylonian Empire.

BACA, VALLEY OF [BAH kah]—a valley in Canaan, thought by some scholars to be the same place as the Valley of Rephaim (2 Sam. 5:22–24; Ps. 84:6).

BACHRITES [BACK rites]—descendants of BECHER, a son of Ephraim (Num. 26:35).

BACKBITE—to speak slanderously or spitefully about a person (Ps. 15:3; Rom. 1:30). Backbiting involves an element of deceit and cowardice. It should be avoided by Christians.

BACKSLIDE—to revert to sin or wrongdoing; to lapse morally or in the practice of religion. “Backsliding” is a term found mainly in the Book of Jeremiah (2:19; 31:22; 49:4). It refers to the lapse of the nation of Israel into paganism and idolatry.

BADGER (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BAG—a small satchel or sack in which food, clothes, and other provisions for a journey were carried. Usually made of leather, it was slung over the shoulder or fastened to a belt. When David was a shepherd, he carried such a bag (1 Sam. 17:40).

Jesus prohibited His disciples from taking with them such traveling bags (Matt. 10:10; Mark 6:8; Luke 9:3). He asked them if their needs had been met. In spite of the absence of their provision bag, they affirmed they had lacked for nothing.

Also see PURSE.

BAGPIPE (see MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS OF THE BIBLE).

BAHARUM [bah HAH rum]—a form of BAHURIM.

BAHARUMITE [bah HAH rum ite]—a person who lived in BAHURIM (2 Sam. 23:31; 1 Chr. 11:33; of Baharum, NRSV).

BAHURIM [bah HOO rim] (young men)—a village near the Mount of Olives, located east of Jerusalem in the territory of Benjamin (2 Sam. 3:16). During Absalom’s rebellion, King David fled along the old Jerusalem-to-Jericho road and passed through Bahurim. Later Jonathan and Ahimaaz hid themselves in a well at Bahurim when they were fleeing the forces of Absalom (2 Sam. 17:18–21).

BAJITH [BAY jith] (house)—the KJV spelling of a place in Moab. The NKJV has “the temple [house] of Dibon” (Is. 15:2).

BAKBAKKAR [back BACK ur]—a Levite who returned from the captivity (1 Chr. 9:15), possibly the same person as Bakbukiah (Neh. 11:17).

BAKBUK [BACK buk] (flask)—one of the NETHINIM (temple servants) whose descendants returned from the captivity (Ezra 2:51; Neh. 7:53).

BAKBUKIAH [back bue KIE uh] (the Lord's flask)—the name of one or more men in the Old Testament:

1. A Levite who lived in Jerusalem after the captivity (Neh. 11:17), possibly the same person as Bakbakkar (1 Chr. 9:15).
2. A Levite who returned from the captivity with Zerubbabel (Neh. 12:9).
3. A Levite who watched over the temple storerooms (Neh. 12:25).

Any two, or all three, of these men may be the same person.

BAKER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES; BREAD).

BALAAM [BAY lum]—a magician or soothsayer (Josh. 13:22) who was summoned by the Moabite king BALAK to curse the Israelites before they entered Canaan (Num. 22:5—24:25; Deut. 23:4–5). Recently, a plaster inscription concerning Balaam that dates to the eighth century B.C. has been found at Tell Deir Alla in Jordan.

Balaam lived in ARAM in the town of Pethor on the Euphrates River. A curious mixture of good and evil, Balaam wavered when he was asked by Balak to curse the Israelites. But he finally agreed to go when the Lord specifically instructed him to go to Balak (Num. 22:20).

The exact meaning of the account of Balaam's "stubborn" donkey is not clear. After telling Balaam it was all right to go, God either tried to forbid him from going or wanted to impress upon him that he should speak only what he was told to say. When the angel of the Lord blocked their way, the donkey balked three times and was beaten by Balaam, who had not seen the angel. Finally, after the third beating, the donkey spoke, reproving Balaam.

When the angel told Balaam, "Your way is perverse before Me" (Num. 22:32), Balaam offered to return home. The angel told him to go on, however, and reminded him to speak only the words God gave him to speak.

Balaam and Balak met at the River Arnon and traveled to "the high places of Baal" (Num. 22:41). From there they could see part of the Israelite encampment at Acacia Grove (Num. 25:1). After sacrificing on seven altars, Balaam went off alone. When he heard the word of God, he returned to Balak and blessed the people whom Balak wanted him to curse.

The New Testament mentions Balaam in three passages. Peter speaks of false teachers who "have forsaken the right way and gone astray, following the way of Balaam" (2 Pet. 2:15). Jude speaks of backsliders who "have run greedily in the error of Balaam for profit" (Jude 11). Balaam's error was greed or covetousness; he was well paid to bring a curse upon the people of Israel.

The nature of Balaam's curse is made clear by John in the Book of Revelation. It refers to some members of the church in Pergamos who held "the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balak to put a stumbling block before the children of Israel" (Rev. 2:14).

Before leaving Balak, Balaam apparently told the Moabite leader that Israel could be defeated if its people were seduced to worship Baal, "to eat things sacrificed to idols and to commit sexual immorality" (Rev. 2:14). Indeed, this was exactly what happened: "The people [of Israel] began to commit harlotry with the women of Moab. They invited the people to the sacrifice of their gods, and the people ate and bowed down to their gods. So Israel was joined to Baal of Peor, and the anger of the Lord was aroused against Israel" (Num. 25:1–3).

In condemning "the way of Balaam," the New Testament condemns the greed of all who are well paid to tempt God's people to compromise their moral standards.

BALADAN [BAL uh dan]—the father of MERODACH–BALADAN (2 Kin. 20:12; Is. 39:1), king of Babylon during the reign of HEZEKIAH, king of Judah.

BALAH [BAY luh]—a town in southern Judah (Josh. 19:3), also called Bilhah (1 Chr. 4:29) and Baalah (Josh. 15:29).

BALAK [BAY lack]—the king of Moab near the end of the wilderness wanderings of the Israelites. Because Balak feared the Israelites, he hired BALAAM the soothsayer to curse Israel (Num. 22–24; Josh. 24:9). But Balaam blessed Israel instead.

BALANCES—devices to measure weight. At the time of the Exodus and following, the Israelites probably used the common balances of Egypt. These balances consisted of a vertical stand and a horizontal crossbeam, from each end of which a pan was suspended.

In the Bible, "balances" are often used in a figurative way. The Lord told the Israelites, "You shall have just balances, just weights" (Lev. 19:36; Ezek. 45:10). The "just balances" symbolize honesty, righteousness, justice, and fair dealing (Job 31:6; Ps. 62:9; Prov. 16:11). "False balances" symbolize evil and bring the displeasure and judgment of God (Prov. 11:1; Mic. 6:11). "A pair of scales" (Rev. 6:5), used in connection with the sale of wheat and barley (v. 6), symbolize famine.

BALDNESS—the condition of having no hair on one's head. Because the Israelites regarded the hair as a special ornament and glory, the condition of baldness carried a stigma of shame. This way of thinking probably expressed Israel's disgust for the practices of certain pagans, who customarily shaved their heads. To shave one's head was to behave like a Canaanite—a person associated with idolatrous and immoral practices.

One of the duties of a priest was to distinguish between natural baldness and baldness caused by leprosy (Lev. 13:40–44). "Baldhead" was a term of contempt and derision hurled by some youths at the prophet Elisha (2 Kin. 2:23). The prophets mention baldness as a sign of mourning (Is. 15:2; Jer. 7:29). Baldness is also used symbolically to indicate the barrenness of Philistia after the judgment of God (Jer. 47:5).

BALM (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

BALM OF GILEAD—a plant product of GILEAD exported to such nations as Egypt and Phoenicia. After Joseph's brothers cast him into a pit, they saw an Ishmaelite caravan "coming from Gilead with their camels, bearing spices, balm, and myrrh on their way to carry them down to Egypt" (Gen. 37:25).

Apparently, the balm of Gilead was an aromatic resin used as an incense and a medical ointment used for the healing of wounds. Its identity, however, has not been clearly established. The prophet Jeremiah asked, "Is there no balm in Gilead,/ Is there no physician there?" (Jer. 8:22). The New Testament declares that there is a Balm in Gilead: Jesus Christ, the Great Physician.

BALSAM (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

BAMAH [BAY muh] (high place)—a “hill-shrine” (Ezek. 20:29, REB), or place of worship, usually idolatrous. Ezekiel used the word as a term of contempt. Compare the great “high place” at Gibeon (1 Kin. 3:4; 2 Chr. 1:3). Also see HIGH PLACES.

BAMOTH [BAY moth] (high places)—a city of Moab, situated east of the Jordan River near Mount Nebo. Bamoth was the site of an encampment during the wilderness journey of the Hebrew people (Num. 21:19–20). The city probably is identical with Bamoth Baal, “the high places of Baal” (Num. 22:41; Josh. 13:17).

BAMOTH BAAL [BAY moth BAY uhl] (see BAMOTH).

BAN—a vow or pledge under which property or persons devoted to pagan worship were destroyed. The Levitical law stated, “No person under the ban [devoted to destruction, NIV] shall be redeemed, but shall surely be put to death” (Lev. 27:29). This was probably the authority under which Joshua destroyed many of the settlements throughout Canaan as the Hebrew people conquered the land (Josh. 6:17–21). Also see ANATHEMA.

BANI [BAY nee] (built)—the name of several Old Testament men:

1. A Gadite who was one of David’s mighty men (2 Sam. 23:36).
2. A Levite of the Merari family and a son of Shamer (1 Chr. 6:46).
3. A descendant of Judah through Perez (1 Chr. 9:4).
4. The founder of a family that returned with Zerubbabel from captivity in Babylonia (Ezra 2:10). Some members of his family had taken foreign wives (Ezra 10:29). A representative of this family sealed the covenant (Neh. 10:14). The family is also called BINNUI (Neh. 7:15).
5. A descendant of No. 4 who married a foreign wife while in captivity (Ezra 10:34, 38).
6. The father of Rehum, who was one of the Levites who helped repair part of Jerusalem’s walls (Neh. 3:17; 8:7).
7. A Levite who sealed the covenant and regulated the people’s devotions after Ezra explained the Law (Neh. 10:13). He may be the same person as No. 6.

8. A Levite of the sons of Asaph (Neh. 11:22). He may be the same person as No. 6 or No. 7.

BANISH—to condemn to exile. Unlike the law codes of the Greeks and Romans, the Mosaic Law made no provision for legal banishment. In effect, however, those who were driven off the land by war were "banished" (Is. 16:3–4), as were those who became self-exiled in fleeing from their crimes (2 Sam. 13:37–38; 14:13–14). According to a strong tradition in the early church, the apostle John was exiled, or banished, to the island of Patmos, where he wrote the Book of Revelation (Rev. 1:9).

BANKER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

BANKING—the business of a bank; the occupation of a banker. Institutional banking was not known in ancient Israel until the time of the captivity (586 B.C.). The lending of money at interest, a traditional function of banks, was forbidden in Old Testament law, at least among native Israelites (Ex. 22:25; Deut. 23:19–20). People protected their valuable possessions by burying them (Matt. 13:44; Luke 19:20) or depositing them in temples or palaces.

During the captivity the Israelites became familiar with Babylonian banking institutions. Some Jews even joined the banking industry and became prominent officers. By New Testament times banking was an established institution. Jesus' parable of the talents (or minas) shows that bankers received money for safekeeping and also paid interest (Matt. 25:27; Luke 19:23). They were also involved in moneychanging (Matt. 21:12).

BANNER—a flag, ensign, streamer, or emblem attached to the end of a standard. Banners served as rallying points for military, national, or religious purposes. Four large banner-bearing standards (one on each of the four sides of the tabernacle of meeting) were used by the twelve tribes of Israel during their wilderness journeys (Num. 1:52; 2:2–3). A smaller standard, or banner, was used by each separate tribe (Num. 2:2, 34).

The most common use of banners was for military campaigns. A large signal flag usually was erected on a hill or other high place; it served as a signal for the war trumpets to be blown (Is. 5:26; 18:3; Jer. 4:6).

When the Israelites fought the Amalekites at REPHIDIM, Moses held up his hand, thus becoming a living banner symbolizing God's presence to help His people win the victory (Ex. 17:8–16). After the battle, Moses built an altar and called it "Jehovah-nissi" (Ex. 17:15, KJV; The Lord Is My Banner; NKJV).

BANQUET—an elaborate meal, frequently given in honor of an individual or for some other special occasion.

Notable Old Testament banquets include that of AHASUERUS (Xerxes I), at which Vashti refused to allow herself to be displayed (Esth. 1); the two banquets of ESTHER, at which she exposed the plot of Haman to destroy the Jews (Esth. 5:4; 7:2); and that of Belshazzar, at which the gold and silver vessels stolen from the temple by Nebuchadnezzar were used and at which the handwriting appeared on the wall (Dan. 5).

The New Testament speaks of the messianic banquet—a banquet at the end of this age—at which the patriarchs and all the righteous will be guests, but from which the wicked will be excluded (Matt. 8:11; Luke 13:29). The Book of Revelation concludes with all people invited to one or the other of the two banquets. At "the supper of the great God" (Rev. 19:17), the scavenger birds are invited to devour the defeated kings of the earth and their armies; at "the marriage supper of the Lamb" (Rev. 19:9), Christ will have fellowship with the faithful.

BAPTISM—a ritual practiced in the New Testament church that is still used in various forms by different denominations and branches of the Christian church. Baptism involves the application of water to the body of a person. It is frequently thought of as an act by which the believer enters the fellowship of a local congregation or the universal church. Widely differing interpretations of the act exist among Christian groups. They have different views on the nature of baptism, who should be baptized, and the appropriate method by which baptism should be administered.

The Nature of Baptism. Three major positions on the nature of baptism exist among Christian groups.

The sacramental view—According to this belief, baptism is a means by which God conveys grace. By undergoing this rite, the person baptized receives REMISSION of sins, and is regenerated or given a new nature and an awakened or strengthened faith. Both Roman Catholics and Lutherans have this view of the nature of baptism.

The traditional Roman Catholic belief emphasizes the rite itself—that the power to convey grace is contained within the sacrament of baptism. It is not the water but the sacrament as established by God and administered by the church that produces this change.

The Lutherans, on the other hand, concentrate on the faith that is present in the person being baptized. They also emphasize the value of the preaching of the word. Preaching awakens faith in a believer by entering the ear to strike the heart. Baptism enters the eye to reach and move the heart.

One Scripture especially important to the advocates of the sacramental view of baptism is John 3:5: “Unless one is born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God.” They also believe that the act of baptism itself produces a change in the life of the believer.

The covenantal view—Other Christian groups think of baptism not as a means by which salvation is brought about, but as a sign and seal of the COVENANT. The covenant is God’s pledge to save humankind. Because of what He has done and what He has promised, God forgives and regenerates. On the one hand, baptism is a sign of the covenant. On the other, it is the means by which people enter into that covenant.

The benefits of God’s covenant are granted to all adults who receive baptism and to all infants who, upon reaching maturity, remain faithful to the vows made on their behalf at baptism. The covenant, rather than the sacrament or another person’s faith, is seen as the means of salvation; and baptism is a vital part of this covenant relationship.

In the covenantal view, baptism serves the same purpose for New Testament believers that circumcision did for Old Testament believers. For the Jews, circumcision was the external and visible sign that they were within the covenant that God had established with Abraham. Converts to Judaism (or proselytes) also had to undergo this rite. But now under the new covenant, baptism instead of circumcision is required.

Circumcision refers to a cutting away of sin and a change of heart (Deut. 10:16; Ezek. 44:7, 9). Similarly, baptism also depicts a washing away of sin (Acts 2:38; Titus 3:5) and a spiritual renewal (Rom. 6:4; Col. 2:11–12). In fact, these two procedures are clearly linked in Colossians 2:11–12: “In Him you were also circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, by putting off the body of the sins of the flesh, by the circumcision of Christ, buried with Him in baptism, in which you also were raised with Him through faith in the working of God, who raised Him from the dead.”

The symbolic view—This view stresses the symbolic nature of baptism by emphasizing that baptism does not cause an inward change or alter a person’s relationship to God in any way. Baptism is a sign, or an outward indication, of the inner change that has already occurred in the believer’s life. It serves as a public identification of the person with Jesus Christ, and thus also as a public testimony of the change that has occurred. It is an act of initiation. It is baptism into the name of Jesus.

According to the symbolic view, baptism is not so much an initiation into the Christian life as into the Christian church. A distinction is drawn between the invisible or universal church, which consists of all believers in Christ, and the visible or local church, a gathering of believers in a specific place.

This position explains that the church practices baptism and the believer submits to it because Jesus commanded that this be done and He gave us the example by being baptized Himself. Thus, baptism is an act of obedience, commitment, and proclamation, symbolizing the believer’s identification with Christ in His death, burial and resurrection. A key text is Romans 6:3–4: “Or do you not know that as many of us as were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into His death? Therefore we were buried with Him through baptism into death, that just as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life.”

According to this understanding of baptism, no spiritual benefit occurs because of baptism. Rather than producing REGENERATION of faith, baptism always comes after faith and the salvation that faith produces. The only spiritual value of baptism is that it establishes membership in the church and exposes the believer to the values of this type of fellowship.

The Subjects of Baptism. Another issue over which Christian groups disagree is the question of who should be baptized. Should only those who have come to a personal, conscious decision of faith be baptized? Or, should children be included in this rite? And if children are proper subjects, should all children, or only the children of believing parents, be baptized?

Infant baptism—Groups that practice baptism of infants baptize not only infants but also adults who have come to faith in Christ. One of the arguments proposed in favor of baptizing infants is that entire households were baptized in New Testament times (Acts 16:15, 33). Certainly such households or families must have included children. Consequently, groups who hold this position believe this practice should be extended to the present day.

A second argument cited is Jesus' treatment of children. Jesus commanded the disciples to bring the children to Him. When they did so, He blessed them (Mark 10:13–16). Because of this example from Jesus, it would seem inconsistent to deny baptism to children today.

A third argument put forth by covenant theologians is that children were participants in the Old Testament covenant: "And I will establish My covenant between Me and you and your descendants after you in their generations, for an everlasting covenant, to be God to you and your descendants after you" (Gen. 17:7). They were present when the covenant was renewed (Deut. 29:10–13; Josh. 8:35). They had a standing in the congregation of Israel and were present in their religious assemblies (Joel 2:16). The promises of God were given to children as well as adults (Is. 54:13; Jer. 31:34). Circumcision was administered to infants in the Old Testament (Gen. 17:12). Since baptism has now replaced circumcision, it is natural that it should be administered to children, according to those who practice infant baptism.

Those who believe in baptismal regeneration (Catholics especially) argue that baptism of infants is necessary. In traditional Roman Catholic teaching, unbaptized infants who die cannot enter heaven in this state, but are instead consigned to a state of limbo. If this fate is to be avoided, they must be baptized in order to remove the guilt of their sins and receive new life.

Although Lutherans also believe in baptismal regeneration, they are not as certain that God's grace is communicated through this sacrament. They believe that God may have some method, perhaps not yet revealed to us, of producing faith in the unbaptized. But this, if it is true, would apply only to children of believers. Lutherans are careful to affirm that this whole area of belief is a mystery, known only to God.

A final argument presented in support of infant baptism is the historical evidence. Infant baptism has been practiced in the church from early times, certainly as early as the second century, according to those groups that baptize infants.

An issue that divides those groups that practice infant baptism is the question of which infants should be baptized. In general, the covenant theologians (Presbyterians, Lutherans, and the various Reformed groups) insist that only the children of believing parents (hence, members of the covenant) should be included. Roman Catholics, however, tend to baptize even infants and children whose parents have not made such a commitment. These different positions on this question show how these groups feel about the role of personal faith in one's salvation.

For Roman Catholics, this question presents no real difficulty, since they believe the sacrament of baptism has power in itself to bring about salvation. The only faith necessary is that someone has enough faith to bring and present the child. Faith is also necessary for the person administering baptism. He must believe that the sacrament has saving power.

Lutherans, however, with their strong emphasis on faith as the means of salvation, face a more difficult problem. It is obvious that an infant does not have faith. One way of handling this problem is to resort to the concept of unconscious faith. Reasoning power and self-consciousness, they point out, must not be thought of as faith. Luther observed that people do not cease to have faith when they are asleep or preoccupied or working strenuously. Thus Lutherans believe the Bible teaches the implicit faith of infants (Matt. 18:6; Luke 1:15; 1 John 2:13). If Jesus could speak of "these little ones who believe in Me" (Matt. 18:6), and if John the Baptist was filled with the Holy Spirit even from his mother's womb, then little children can have implicit faith. Lutherans also believe that the faith necessary for the salvation of children can be communicated through their parents.

For covenant theologians, the problem of the faith of children is not a difficult issue. It is a potential faith. So also is their salvation. God promises to give the benefits signified in baptism to all adults who receive it by faith. This same promise is extended to all infants who, when they grow to maturity, remain faithful to the vows that were made on their behalf at the time of their baptism. In this view, baptism's saving work depends on the faith that will be, rather than upon the faith that is.

Believer's baptism—Those who hold to this view believe that baptism should be restricted to those who actually exercise faith. This approach excludes infants, who could not possibly have such faith. The proper candidates for baptism are those who already have experienced the new birth on the basis of their personal faith and who give evidence of this salvation in their lives.

Both positive and negative arguments are advanced in support of this view. The positive approach argues from evidence in the New Testament. In every instance of New Testament baptism in which the specific identity of the persons was known, the persons being baptized were adults. Further, the condition required for baptism was personal, conscious faith. Without this, adherents of believer's baptism point out, baptism was not administered. This is especially evident in the Book of Acts (2:37–41; 8:12; 10:47; 18:8; 19:4–5), as well as Matthew 3:2–6 and 28:19. In the New Testament, church repentance and faith came first, followed by baptism.

The negative arguments given to support believer's baptism are generally responses to the arguments for infant baptism. One of these revolves around the household baptism issue. Paul spoke the word to the Philippian jailer and all the people in his house. And the jailer "rejoiced, having believed in God with all his household" (Acts 16:34). Crispus, the synagogue ruler, also "believed on the Lord with all his household" (Acts 18:8). Those who hold to believer's baptism only point out that these passages do not state specifically that infants were included among those baptized. All the people in these households could have been adults.

The other argument concerns Jesus' blessing of the children. The believer's baptism position on this incident from Jesus' life is that baptism is not mentioned or even implied. These children illustrate simplicity and trust, like that which all believers should display. Jesus blessed the children, these groups agree, but that was not baptism.

Many believer’s baptism groups do practice a ritual known as child dedication, which is more a dedication of the parents than of the child.

The Form of Baptism. The final major issue is the method or form of baptism—whether by immersion, pouring, or sprinkling. On this issue, Christian groups organize into two major camps—those that insist upon the exclusive use of immersion, and those that permit and practice other forms.

The immersionist position—This group insists that immersion is the only valid form of baptism. One of their strongest arguments revolves around the Greek word for baptism in the New Testament. Its predominant meaning is “to immerse” or “to dip,” implying that the candidate was plunged beneath the water. But there are also other arguments that strongly suggest that immersion was the form of baptism used in the early church.

The Didache—a manual of Christian instruction written in A.D. 110–120 that stated immersion should be used generally and that other forms of baptism should be used only when immersion was not possible.

In addition, the circumstances involved in some of the biblical descriptions of baptism imply immersion. Thus, John the Baptist was baptizing in Aenon near Salim, “because there was much water there” (John 3:23). Jesus apparently went down into the water to be baptized by John (Matt. 3:16). The Ethiopian said, “See, here is water. What hinders me from being baptized?” (Acts 8:36).

The symbolism involved in baptism also seems to argue that immersion was the biblical mode, according to those groups that practice immersion exclusively. Romans 6:4–6 identifies baptism with the believer’s death (and burial) to sin and resurrection to new life, as well as the death and resurrection of Christ. Only immersion adequately depicts this meaning, according to the immersionist position.

The pluralist position—Holders of this view believe that immersion, pouring, and sprinkling are all appropriate forms of baptism. They point out that the Greek word for baptism in the New Testament is sometimes ambiguous in its usage. While its most common meaning in classical Greek was to dip, to plunge, or to immerse, it also carried other meanings as well. Thus, the question cannot be resolved upon linguistic grounds.

These groups also argue from inference that immersion must not have been the exclusive method used in New Testament times. For example, could John have been physically capable of immersing all the persons who came to him for baptism? Did the Philippian jailer leave his jail to be baptized? If not, how would he have been immersed? Was enough water for immersion brought to Cornelius' house? Or, did the apostle Paul leave the place where Ananias found him in order to be immersed?

Those groups that use sprinkling or pouring also point out that immersion may not be the best form for showing what baptism really means. They see the major meaning of baptism as purification. They point out that the various cleansing ceremonies in the Old Testament were performed by a variety of means—immersion, pouring, and sprinkling (Mark 7:4; Heb. 9:10). Others note the close association between baptism and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, which was from above. Thus, in their view, true baptism requires the symbolism of pouring rather than immersion.

◆

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• A baptistry, or bath, used for purification ceremonies in the Essene community at Qumran.

Photo by Howard Vos

- A baptistry in the form of a cross in the Church of St. John at Ephesus.

BAPTISM OF FIRE—a concept used by John the Baptist to describe the work of Christ: “He [Christ] will baptize you with the Holy Spirit and fire” (Matt. 3:11; Luke 3:16). Some scholars believe that two different baptisms are mentioned here: “the baptism of the Holy Spirit” (the baptism that brings mercy, forgiveness, and life) and “the baptism of fire” (the baptism that brings judgment, condemnation, and death). When this interpretation is followed, the baptism of the Holy Spirit belongs to the present age of grace and the baptism of fire belongs to a future age of judgment.

Other scholars believe that only one baptism is meant: Christ baptizes “with the Holy Spirit and fire.” They point to the experience of the Day of Pentecost when “there appeared to them divided tongues, as of fire, and one sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit” (Acts 2:3–4). These scholars see this as a reference to the work of the Holy Spirit in purifying God’s people.

BAPTISM FOR THE DEAD. A practice mentioned by the apostle Paul (1 Cor. 15:2). The exact meaning of this passage is uncertain. Some scholars believe it refers to a re-baptism of Christians for the benefit of people who had died unbaptized but already believing. But other scholars insist it refers to a baptismal formula in the Corinthian church that promised that believers would rise from the dead at the end of time to reign with Christ.

BAR– [bahr]—the Aramaic equivalent of the Hebrew ben, which also means "son (of)." In the New Testament, Bar frequently occurs as the prefix to names of persons, such as Barabbas and Bar–Jonah.

BARABBAS [buh RAB bas]—a "robber" (John 18:40) and "notorious prisoner" (Matt. 27:16) who was chosen by the mob in Jerusalem to be released instead of Jesus. Barabbas had been imprisoned for insurrection and murder (Luke 23:19, 25; Mark 15:7). Pilate offered to give the crowd either Jesus or Barabbas. The mob demanded that he release Barabbas and crucify Jesus. Ironically, the name Barabbas probably means "son of the father." There is no further mention of Barabbas after he was released.

BARACHEL [BAR ah kell] (God has blessed)—the father of Elihu, who was one of Job's "friends" (Job 32:2, 6).

BARACHIAH [bar ah KIE uh]—a form of BERECHIAH.

BARACHIAS [bar ah KIE us]—a form of BERECHIAH.

BARAK [BAR ack] (lightning)—a son of Abinoam of the city of KEDESH. Barak was summoned by DEBORAH, a PROPHETESS who was judging Israel at that time. Deborah told Barak to raise a militia of 10,000 men to fight JABIN, king of Canaan, who had oppressed Israel for 20 years. The commander-in-chief of Jabin's army was SISERA.

Apparently during the battle, the Lord sent a great thunderstorm. The rain swelled the Kishon River and the plain surrounding the battle area, making Sisera's 900 iron chariots useless (Judg. 5:21). The Israelites routed the Canaanites. The victory is described twice: in prose (Judges 4) and in poetry, the beautiful "Song of Deborah" (Judges 5). Barak is listed in the New Testament among the heroes of faith (Heb. 11:32). Also see BEDAN.

BARBARIAN—a person who is different from the dominant class or group. Originally, this term (barbaros) had no negative connotation. The Greeks used it to describe anyone who did not speak the Greek language. Later, when Rome conquered Greece and absorbed its culture, the word "barbarian" signified those whose lives were not ordered by Greco–Roman culture.

When the apostle Paul used the phrase "Greeks and barbarians" (Rom. 1:14), he was speaking of all mankind. The "barbarians" (Acts 28:4, KJV) who aided the apostle Paul on the island of Melita do not appear to have been uncivilized. In this instance the word meant something very similar to the word "foreigner." It is good to remember the apostle Paul's declaration that in Christ all human distinctions disappear (Gal. 3:26–29).

BARBER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

BAREFOOT—wearing nothing on one's feet. To go barefoot outside was a sign of great distress. The prophet Isaiah "walked naked and barefoot three years" (Is. 20:2–4) to portray the distress and embarrassment that would fall on Egypt and Ethiopia. Going barefoot also was a sign of mourning (2 Sam. 15:30; Ezek. 24:17, 23) and poverty (Luke 15:22).

BARHUMITE [bar HOO mite]—an inhabitant of BAHURIM, a city in the territory of Benjamin (2 Sam. 23:31).

BARIAH [buh RIE ah]—a son of Shemaiah, of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 3:22).

BAR–JESUS [bar GEE zus] (son of Jesus)—a false prophet who opposed Barnabas and Paul at Paphos, a town on the island of Cyprus (Acts 13:4–12). He is also called Elymas, which means "magician" or "sorcerer." Bar–Jesus was temporarily struck blind because of his opposition to the gospel.

BAR–JONAH [bar JO nuh] (son of Jonah)—the family name of the apostle PETER (Matt. 16:17; John 1:42; 21:15–17).

BARKOS [bar KOS]—an ancestor of a family of servants in the temple who returned from the captivity with Zerubbabel (Ezra 2:53; Neh. 7:55).

BARLEY (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

BARN—a storehouse for seed or grain (Luke 3:17). In biblical times, such granaries or storerooms were usually underground. Also see STOREHOUSE, STORAGE CITY.

BARNABAS [BAR nuh bus] (son of encouragement)—an apostle in the early church (Acts 4:36–37; 11:19–26) and Paul's companion on his first missionary journey (Acts 13:1—15:41). A LEVITE from the island of Cyprus, Barnabas' given name was Joseph, or Joses (Acts 4:36). When he became a Christian, he sold his land and gave the money to the Jerusalem apostles (Acts 4:36–37).

Early in the history of the church, Barnabas went to Antioch to check on the growth of this early group of Christians. Then he journeyed to Tarsus and brought Saul (as PAUL was still called) back to minister with him to the Christians in Antioch (Acts 11:25). At this point Barnabas apparently was the leader of the church at Antioch, because his name is repeatedly mentioned before Paul's in the Book of Acts. But after Saul's name was changed to Paul, Barnabas' name is always mentioned after Paul's (Acts 13:43).

Because of his good reputation, Barnabas was able to calm the fear of Saul among the Christians in Jerusalem (Acts 9:27). He and Saul also brought money from Antioch to the Jerusalem church when it was suffering a great famine (Acts 11:27–30). Shortly thereafter, the Holy Spirit led the Antioch church to commission Barnabas and Paul, along with John Mark, Barnabas' cousin (Col. 4:10), to make a missionary journey (Acts 13:1–3) to Cyprus and the provinces of Asia Minor.

A rift eventually developed between Barnabas and Paul over John Mark (Col. 4:10). Barnabas wanted to take John Mark on their second missionary journey. Paul, however, felt John Mark should stay behind because he had left the first mission at Cyprus (Acts 13:13). Paul and Barnabas went their separate ways, and Barnabas took John Mark with him on a second mission to Cyprus (Acts 15:36–39). A pseudepigraphic epistle named after Barnabas is falsely attributed to him.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- The tomb of Barnabas on the island of Cyprus in the Mediterranean Sea.

BARRACKS—a building or group of buildings used for lodging soldiers. The word appears in the Book of Acts, where it refers to the Fortress of ANTONIA in Jerusalem (Acts 21:34; 22:24; 23:10; castle, KJV). The Antonia overlooked the temple area; it contained the Roman troops that were stationed in Jerusalem to curb any outbreak of violence in the city. When the apostle Paul was threatened by a mob of Jews, soldiers from Antonia rescued him and took him into the barracks for protection. Also see CASTLE.

BARREL—the KJV translation of the Hebrew word kad, which means “an earthen jar.” The NKJV uses bin (1 Kin. 17:12, 14, 16) and WATERPOTS (1 Kin. 18:33).

BARREN—the condition of being unable to bear children. In the Bible, the term is also applied figuratively to anything that is unproductive, such as land (2 Kin. 2:19) or a nation (Is. 54:1). In the Old Testament, barrenness was looked on as a curse or punishment from God (Gen. 16:2; 20:18; 1 Sam. 1:5–7). Old Testament women who are described as barren include Sarah, Rebekah, Rachel, and Hannah (Gen. 11:30; 25:21; 29:31; Judg. 13:2–3; 1 Sam. 2:5).

BARSABAS [BAR sah bus] (son of the sabbath)—the name of two men in the New Testament:

1. Joseph, surnamed Justus, one of the two disciples nominated to replace Judas Iscariot as an apostle (Acts 1:23; Barsabbas, NASB, REB).
2. A disciple who, along with Silas, was sent as a delegate to accompany Paul and Barnabas to Antioch of Syria (Acts 15:22, 27). These delegates carried a letter from the JERUSALEM COUNCIL to the Gentile Christians in Antioch, Syria, and Cilicia, informing them of the council's action (Acts 15:23).

BARSABBAS [bar SAH bus]—a form of BARSABAS.

BARTHOLOMEW [bar THOL oh mew] (son of Tolmai)—one of the twelve apostles of Jesus, according to the four lists given in the New Testament (Matt. 10:3; Mark 3:18; Luke 6:14; Acts 1:13). Many scholars equate Bartholomew with NATHANAEL (John 1:45–49), but no proof of this identification exists, except by inference. According to church tradition, Bartholomew was a missionary to various countries, such as Armenia and India. He is reported to have preached the gospel along with Philip and Thomas. According to another tradition, he was crucified upside down after being flayed alive.

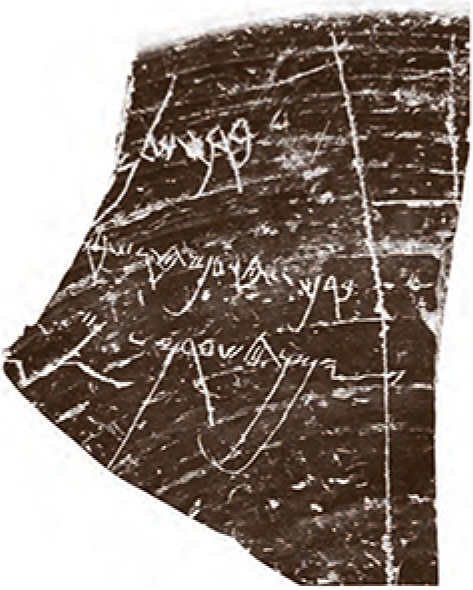
BARTHOLOMEW, GOSPEL OF (see APOCRYPHA).

BARTIMAEUS [bar tih MEE us] (son of Timaeus)—a blind man of Jericho healed by Jesus (Mark 10:46–52). As he sat by the road begging, Bartimaeus cried out, "Jesus, Son of David, have mercy on me!" (v. 47). Jesus replied, "Go your way; your faith has made you well" (v. 52).

BARTIMEUS [bar tih MEE us]—a form of BARTIMAEUS.

BARUCH [bah RUKE] (blessed)—the name of three or four men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Zabbai. Baruch helped Nehemiah repair the walls of Jerusalem (Neh. 3:20).
2. A man who sealed the covenant with Nehemiah (Neh. 10:6). He may be the same person as No. 1.
3. A son of Col–Hozeh and a returned captive of the tribe of Judah (Neh. 11:5).
4. The scribe or secretary of Jeremiah the prophet (Jer. 32:12–16; 36:1–32; 45:1–5). A son of Neriah, Baruch was a member of a prominent Jewish family. In the fourth year of the reign of Jehoiakim, king of Judah (605 B.C.), Baruch wrote Jeremiah's prophecies of destruction from the prophet's dictation (Jer. 36:1–8). Baruch read Jeremiah's words publicly on a day of fasting, then read them to the officials of the king's court. A clay seal inscribed "Baruch son of Neriah the scribe," dating from Jeremiah's time and clearly belonging to his secretary (see Jer. 36:32), was recently discovered in a burnt archive in Israel.



• Inscribed pottery from Samaria from the eighth century B.C. Two lines of the inscription begin with the name Baruch.

BARUCH, APOCALYPSE OF (see APOCALYPTIC LITERATURE).

BARUCH, BOOK OF (see APOCRYPHA).

BARZILLAI [bar ZILL ay eye] (made of iron)—the name of three men in the Old Testament:

1. A Meholathite whose son was married to one of King Saul's daughters (1 Sam. 18:19; 2 Sam. 21:8).
2. A member of the tribe of Gilead from Rogelim who brought provisions to David and his army at Mahanaim, where they had fled from Absalom (2 Sam. 17:27–29). On his deathbed, David remembered Barzillai's kindness and reminded Solomon to care for his children (1 Kin. 2:7).
3. A priest whose genealogy was lost during the captivity (Ezra 2:61; Neh. 7:63). Apparently he married a daughter of No. 2 and adopted his wife's family name.

BASEMATH [BASE math]—the name of three women in the Old Testament:

1. One of Esau's wives and the daughter of Elon the Hittite (Gen. 26:34; Bashemath, KJV). She is also called Adah (Gen. 36:2). Esau married her out of spite because Isaac, Esau's father, was displeased with Esau's other wives, who were Canaanites.
2. One of Esau's wives and the daughter of Ishmael (Gen. 36:3–4, 10, 13, 17; Bashemath, KJV). She is also called Mahalath (Gen. 28:9).
3. A daughter of Solomon and wife of Ahimaaz (1 Kin. 4:15; Basmath, KJV).

BASHAN [BAY shan]—the territory east of the Jordan River and the Sea of Galilee (see Map 3, C–2).

At the time of the Exodus, King Og ruled Bashan. His kingdom included sixty cities (Num. 21:33; Deut. 3:4; 29:7). His capital was at Ashtaroth. When Og was defeated at Edrei (Deut. 3:1–3), the territory was given to the half-tribe of Manasseh (Deut. 3:13), except for the cities of Golan and Be Eshterah, which were given to the Levites (Josh. 21:27). In the days of Jehu, the region was captured by the Aramean king, Hazael (2 Kin. 10:32–33).

A rich, fertile tableland about 490 to 700 meters (1600 to 2300 feet) above sea level, with abundant rainfall and volcanic soil, Bashan became the "breadbasket" of the region. Wheat fields and livestock were abundant. But in the Old Testament, the prosperity of Bashan became a symbol of selfish indulgence and arrogant pride. Evil persons who attacked the righteous were compared to "strong bulls of Bashan" (Ps. 22:12). The pampered, pleasure-seeking women of Samaria were called "cows of Bashan" (Amos 4:1).

BASHAN, MOUNTAIN OF—probably another name for Mount Hermon, situated along the northern border of Bashan (Ps. 68:15).

BASHEMATH [BASH eh math]—a form of BASEMATH.

BASIN—a round, shallow container, such as a cup or bowl, used primarily for holding liquids. Basins were used for washing (John 13:5), for holding wine and other liquids (Ex. 24:6), and for receiving the blood of sacrifices (Zech. 9:15). Usually basins were fashioned out of bronze or clay, although the priests used vessels of silver as well (Num. 7:13). The vessels for Solomon's temple were of gold (1 Chr. 28:17).

The Gospel of John tells how Jesus "poured water into a basin and began to wash his disciples' feet" (John 13:5), teaching them the importance of humility and loving service. When Jesus was eating with His disciples, while dipping His hand in a dish that most likely was a basin, He predicted His betrayal and death (Matt. 26:21–25).

BASKET—a container made of woven cane or other fibers. The Bible provides sparse information about the size and shape of baskets. They were fashioned out of various materials: willow, rush, palm-leaf twigs, and even a mixture of straw and clay. Some had handles and lids. These baskets served various purposes and were known by different names.

Baskets were used for carrying bread (Gen. 40:17), for grape-gathering (Jer. 6:9), for holding the offered firstfruits (Deut. 26:2), for carrying various fruits (Jer. 24:1), for carrying clay to the brickyard (Ps. 81:6), or for holding bulky articles (2 Kin. 10:7). The most ingenious use of these containers was when Paul was lowered in a basket over a wall to escape his foes (Acts 9:25; 2 Cor. 11:33).

When God said to Moses, "Blessed shall be your basket and your kneading bowl" (Deut. 28:5), He emphasized that abundance is the reward of obedient service. But the reverse is indicated in the warning, "Cursed shall be your basket and your kneading bowl" (Deut. 28:17); disobedience leaves empty hands and desolate hearts.

BASKETMAKER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

BASMATH [BAHS math]—a form of BASEMATH.

BASTARD—a person of illegitimate birth. The term may refer to the offspring of incest. Such a person was not allowed to enter the Lord's assembly: "A bastard shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD" (Deut. 23:2, KJV). "A bastard shall dwell in ASHDOD" (Zech. 9:6, KJV) refers to the "mixed race" (other translations are "mongrel people" and "half-breeds") who would settle in the Philistine city.

In the New Testament, the word bastards (Heb. 12:8, KJV) translates the Greek noun nothoi, which means "sons born out of wedlock." The "illegitimate children" (NIV) mentioned in this verse are those who do not experience the chastening or discipline of the Lord—those who do not share the privileges of God's children.

BAT (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BATH (see WEIGHTS AND MEASURES).

BATHING—a washing or soaking of the body in water for cleansing. Water was scarce in Bible times, but laws of ritual demanded much washing. The Israelites washed their hands after returning from the market, before meals, and at many other times; and they immersed their bodies before entering the synagogue or temple courts. Archaeologists have discovered such ritual baths close to the broad steps leading up to Herod's temple, as well as many other archaeological sites.

Bathing for the purpose of physical cleansing or hygiene is seldom mentioned in the Bible. Bathsheba was bathing when David spied her from his rooftop (2 Sam. 11:2). Pharaoh's daughter was on her way to the river to bathe when she found the baby Moses (Ex. 2:5, NRSV). At Masada, Herod had splendid Greco–Roman baths with hot and cold water rooms. Archaeologists have discovered a swimming pool in Herod's palace at Jericho. According to the Jewish historian Josephus, it was the scene of Herod's murder of a young priest by drowning.

Even before Abraham's time, the homes of Ur in ancient Mesopotamia had a tile drain in the entryway. A servant met visitors, removed their sandals, and washed their feet. Jesus taught the lesson of becoming a servant by washing the disciples' feet (John 13:3–17). If the home had no servant, it was the wife's duty to perform this task. Therefore, Paul describes the faithful widow as one who has "brought up children . . . lodged strangers . . . washed the saints' feet" (1 Tim. 5:10).

Photo by Howard Vos

• Part of the elaborate bath complex of Herod the Great, discovered at New Testament Jericho.

BATH RABBIM [bath RAB beam] (daughter of multitudes)—a gate in the ancient city of Heshbon. Near this gate were the pools to which the "beloved" compared the beautiful eyes of the SHULAMITE woman (Song 7:4).

BATHSHEBA [bath SHE buh] (daughter of oath)—a wife of Uriah the Hittite and of King David (2 Sam. 11; 12:24). Standing on the flat roof of his palace in Jerusalem one evening, David saw the beautiful Bathsheba bathing on the roof of a nearby house. With his passion aroused, David committed adultery with Bathsheba. Out of that union Bathsheba conceived a child.

When David discovered her pregnancy, he hurriedly sent for Uriah, who was in battle with the Ammonites. But Uriah refused to engage in marital relations with his wife while his companions were involved in battle. When David's attempt to trick Uriah failed, he sent him back into battle. This time, David ordered that Uriah be placed at the front of the battle and that his fellow soldiers retreat from him, so that he might be killed. After a period of mourning, Bathsheba became David's wife (2 Sam. 11:27). But the child conceived in adultery died.

When Nathan the prophet confronted David with the enormity of his sin, David repented (2 Sam. 12:13). God blessed them with four more children—Shammua (or Shimea), Shobab, Nathan, and Solomon (1 Chr. 3:5). The New Testament mentions Bathsheba indirectly in the genealogy of Jesus (Matt. 1:6). Bathsheba is also called Bathshua (1 Chr. 3:5).

BATHSHUA [BATH shoo uh]—the name of two women in the Old Testament:

1. A variant form of BATHSHEBA, third wife of King David (1 Chr. 3:5).
2. A wife of Judah (1 Chr. 2:3, NRSV).

BATTERING RAM (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

BATTLE—armed combat between two enemy forces. Canaan was the scene of numerous battles. Conflict was so frequent in Old Testament times that the spring of the year was known as "the time when kings go out to battle" (2 Sam. 11:1; 1 Chr. 20:1), probably because the ground had dried out after the winter rains and therefore chariots and troops would not be slowed down by mud. The first battle mentioned in the Bible is the one in which CHEDORLAOMER and three other kings attacked the five kings who ruled over the cities of the plain (Gen. 14:8). The last mentioned is the battle of ARMAGEDDON, also called "the battle of that great day of God Almighty" (Rev. 16:14; also Rev. 20:8). Also see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE; WAR, WARFARE.

◆

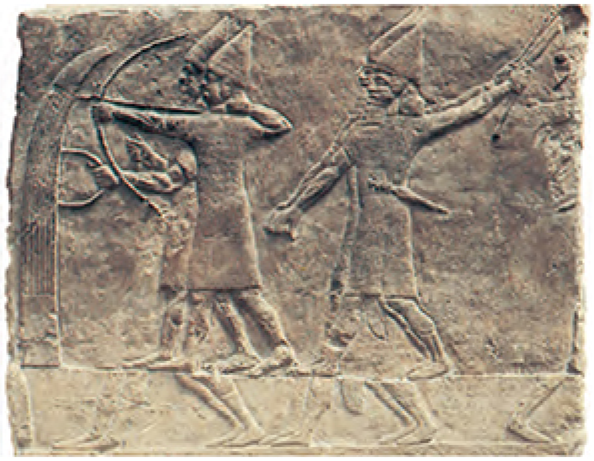

Photo by Howard Vos

• Assyrian archers and slingers in a battle scene from the palace of King Sennacherib at Nineveh.

• These six-inch high wooden models of an Egyptian infantry unit were discovered in an Egyptian tomb that dated to about 1800 B.C.

BATTLE AX, BATTLE BOW (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

BATTLEMENT—a protective wall surrounding the flat roofs of houses in Bible times. This wall was required by law (Deut. 22:8, KJV) to prevent accidental injuries by falling. “Battlements” (Jer. 5:10, KJV) on a city wall protected soldiers from enemy attack (Song 8:9, NKJV, NRSV).

BAVAI [BAHV ay eye]—an Israelite who helped rebuild the wall of Jerusalem (Neh. 3:18; Bavvai, NASB, RSV).

BAVVAI [BAHV ay eye]—a form of BAVAI.

BAY TREE (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

BAZLITH [BAZ lihth]—one of the NETHINIM (temple servants) whose descendants returned from the captivity (Ezra 2:52; Neh. 7:54).

BDELLIUM (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

BEALIAH [bee ah LIE uh] (the Lord is Lord)—a Benjamite warrior who joined David at Ziklag (1 Chr. 12:5).

BEALOTH [BEE uh loth] (possessors)—the name of two towns in the Old Testament:

1. A town in southern Judah (Josh. 15:24). It may be identical with Baalath Beer (Josh. 19:8).
2. A town associated with the territory of Asher (1 Kin. 4:16, NRSV; Aloth NKJV). Baanah was in charge of this administrative district under Solomon.

BEAM—a huge timber that supports the roof and floor of a large building. Heavy wooden beams, cut from the famed cedars of Lebanon, were used in the construction of the temple in Solomon's time (1 Kin. 6:36). Also see ARCHITECTURE.

BEAN (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

BEAR (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BEARD—the hair on a man's face. In biblical times most adult males of Israel wore full beards. An oiled and well-kept beard was a mark of pride (Ps. 133:2). The Law of Moses required Israelite men not to "disfigure the edges" of their beards (Lev. 19:27), a common practice of Israel's pagan neighbors.

To shave or pull out part of the beard was a sign of grief (Jer. 48:37–38), and to cut off someone's beard was to insult him (2 Sam. 10:4–5). Isaiah 7:20 pictures God's judgment on Israel as a shaving of the nation's beard, an intentional disgrace. The word "beard" does not appear in the New Testament.

• Plaster head discovered in the excavation of Mari in Mesopotamia, showing the full beard worn by ancient Amorite and Hebrew men.

BEAST—literally, an animal; figuratively, a symbol, often prophetic. The word "beast" is used literally in three ways in the Bible: (1) any animal, both CLEAN and UNCLEAN (Gen. 6:7; 7:2; Lev. 11:1–8); (2) a wild animal, as distinguished from domesticated animals (Gen. 1:24; 7:21; 37:20; Ex. 23:11); and (3) a domesticated animal (Gen. 1:24; 2:20; Ex. 19:13).

As a prophetic symbol, the word beast is used especially in the Book of Daniel and the Book of Revelation. The four beasts of Daniel symbolize four cruel, tyrannical governments: (1) a lion (Babylon); (2) a bear (Medo–Persia); (3) a leopard (Greece); and (4) a dreadful and terrible beast (Rome; Dan. 7:3–7). In the Book of Revelation, two beasts are described in detail: the beast from the sea, a composite of the four beasts of Daniel (Rev. 13:1–10), and the beast from the land (Rev. 13:11–18). Apparently, these two beasts symbolize political and religious power respectively.

In John's day, at the time when he wrote the Book of Revelation, the two "beasts" that opposed and persecuted the church were the Roman Empire (the political "beast from the sea") and the cult of emperor worship (the religious “beast from the land”). Together with the Dragon (Satan), they formed an unholy trinity that tried to destroy God’s people.

The Bible often uses the word beast in other symbolical or figurative ways. For instance, the psalmist wrote, “I was like a beast before You” (Ps. 73:22), referring to his foolish, ignorant, and brutish behavior. The apostle Paul wrote, “I have fought with beasts at Ephesus” (1 Cor. 15:32)—a metaphor for the enemies who fought ferociously against him and the gospel of Christ that he preached.

Also see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE.

BEATING—a form of physical punishment commonly used throughout the ancient world. Beating was administered with a rod, as distinguished from scourging, which was administered with a whip. The Law of Moses recognized beating as a legal punishment. The offender was forced to lie down, then was beaten with forty blows (Deut. 25:2–3). Later Jewish practice reduced such beatings to thirty-nine blows —“forty stripes minus one,” lest the Law of Moses be broken through an oversight. Thus the apostle Paul was beaten “forty stripes minus one” on five occasions (2 Cor. 11:24). Also see SCOURGE.

BEATITUDES, THE—the eight declarations of blessedness made by Jesus at the beginning of the Sermon on the Mount (Matt. 5:3–12), each beginning with “Blessed are . . .” Some scholars speak of seven, nine, or ten beatitudes, but the number appears to be eight (verses 10–12 of Matthew 5 being one beatitude).

The Greek word translated “blessed” means “having spiritual well-being and prosperity,” the deep joy of the soul (see also Luke 6:20–22). The blessed have a share in salvation, and have entered the kingdom of God, experiencing a foretaste of heaven. Some scholars render each beatitude as an exclamation: “O the bliss [or blessedness] of. . . .”

The Beatitudes describe the ideal disciple, and his rewards, both present and future. The person whom Jesus describes in this passage has a different quality of character and lifestyle than those still “outside the kingdom.”

As a literary form, the beatitude is also found often in the Old Testament, especially in the Psalms (1:1; 34:8; 65:4; 128:1), and often in the New Testament also (John 20:29; Rom. 14:22; James 1:12; Rev. 14:13). Also see SERMON ON THE MOUNT.

BEAUTIFUL GATE (see GATES OF JERUSALEM AND THE TEMPLE).

BEBAI [BEE buh eye]—the name of two or three men in the Old Testament:

1. An ancestor of Israelites who returned from the captivity. The people of Bebai numbered 623 (Ezra 2:11) or 628 (Neh. 7:16).
2. An ancestor of other Israelites who returned from the captivity (Ezra 8:11; 10:28). This may be the same person as No. 1.
3. One who sealed the covenant after the captivity (Neh. 10:15).

BECHER [BECK ur] (youth)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. The second son of Benjamin (Gen. 46:21; 1 Chr. 7:6, 8; Beker, NIV). Becher went to Egypt with Jacob. Some scholars believe he married an Ephraimite heiress, whose family had been decimated by the Philistines, in order to raise up children to her clan.
2. A son of Ephraim and head of the family of the Bachrites (Num. 26:35; Beker, NIV). He is also called Bered (1 Chr. 7:20).

BECHERITES [BECK ur ites]—a form of BACHRITES.

BECHORATH [beh KOE rath] (firstborn)—an ancestor of Saul, the first king of Israel (1 Sam. 9:1; Becorath, NASB, NRSV, NIV).

BECORATH [beh KOE rath]—a form of BECHORATH.

BED, BEDROOM—a place for reclining and sleeping. Even the best beds in Bible times would be considered uncomfortable by modern standards. Most people slept on a mat spread on the floor. During the day, the mats were rolled up and stored. Sometimes the mats were placed on a raised platform above cold drafts during the wintertime.

The wealthier classes often had an actual bed to sleep on. The simplest bed was a rectangular wooden frame on legs. Ropes or webs of cloth were stretched across the frame, on which a mat was placed. Some of the wealthy had very elaborate bed frames with gold and silver trim and ivory inlay. Amos, in speaking of beds of ivory (Amos 6:4), probably referred to the ivory trim that decorated their beds.

Poor people usually slept in their clothes with a cloak or cover to ward off the cold. Most people of this class had a single cloak that served as both their coat and also as their cover at night. The Mosaic law forbade the Israelites from keeping a cloak, taken to secure a debt, beyond sunset to make sure the person had a cover to sleep under (Ex. 22:26–27; Deut. 24:13).

In the summer, it was common for people to move onto the roof and sleep in the open. Roofs were usually flat, serving as living quarters when the weather allowed. The houses of the wealthy would frequently have separate sleeping quarters. If the house had two floors, the second story was the preferred location for a bedroom. A Shunammite woman provided Elisha with his own separate room on the roof because he frequently stayed with the woman and her elderly husband. The room was furnished with a bed, a table, a chair, and a lampstand (2 Kin. 4:10). This represented well-equipped sleeping quarters in that day. This is in keeping with the description of the lady as “a notable woman” (v. 8), one of social prominence and wealth.

In the Bible the bed is seen not only as a place to sleep, but also as a place of meditation and prayer. For instance, David meditated on his bed late at night (Ps. 63:6); and the prophets received revelations from God while lying on their beds (1 Sam. 3:3). A bed was also a place of ease and luxury (Amos 6:4), laziness (Prov. 26:14), and scheming (Ps. 36:4).

BEDAD [BEE dad]—the father of Hadad, king of Edom (Gen. 36:35; 1 Chr. 1:46).

BEDAN [BEE dan] (son of judgment)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A judge of Israel (1 Sam. 12:11), probably the same as BARAK.
2. A son of Ulam of the tribe of Manasseh (1 Chr. 7:17).

BEDEIAH [bee DIE yuh]—a son of Bani who divorced his pagan wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:35).

BEE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BEELIADA [bee uh LIE ah duh] (Baal knows)—a son of David (1 Chr. 14:7). He is also called Eliada (2 Sam. 5:16; 1 Chr. 3:8).

BEELZEBUB [bee EL zih bub]—Greek form of Baal–Zebub (see GODS, PAGAN).

BEELZEBUL [bee EL zih buhl]—Greek form of Baal–Zebub (see GODS, PAGAN).

BEER [BEE ear] (a well)—the name of two places in the Old Testament:

1. A place in the land of Moab where the Israelites camped during their wanderings (Num. 21:16–18). Beer is possibly the same place as Beer Elim (Is. 15:8).
2. A town in the tribe of Judah to which Jotham fled from his brother Abimelech (Judg. 9:21).

BEER ELIM [BEE ear EH leum]—a village of southern Moab (Is. 15:8), possibly the same place where the Israelites rested during their wilderness journey (Num. 21:16). See BEER No. 1.

BEER LAHAI ROI [BEE ear lah HIGH roy] (the well of the Living One who sees me)—a well in the wilderness between Kadesh Barnea and Bered in the Desert of Shur (Gen. 16:14). It received its name when an angel appeared to Hagar in this place. Hagar's son Ishmael lived here both before and after the death of Abraham his father (Gen. 24:62; 25:11).

BEERA [bee EAR ah]—a descendant of Asher (1 Chr. 7:37).

BEERAH [bee EAR ah]—a chieftain of the Reubenites who was deported to Assyria by TIGLATH–PILESER III (1 Chr. 5:6).

BEERI [bee EAR ih] (man of a well)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A Hittite, the father of Judith (Gen. 26:34).
2. The father of HOSEA the prophet (Hos. 1:1).

BEEROTH [bee uh ROTH] (wells)—the name of two places in the Old Testament:

1. A place on the border of Edom where Israel camped during its wilderness wandering (Deut. 10:6). This place is variously translated as “Beeroth of the children of Jaakan” (KJV); “the wells of Bene Jaakan” (NKJV); “the wells of the Jaakanites” (NIV); and “Beeroth-bene-jaakan” (REB). Beeroth may possibly be the modern Birein, located north of Kadesh Barnea.
2. A city of Gibeon assigned to the tribe of Benjamin. It was one of four cities of the Hivites that deceived Joshua into making a treaty of peace (Josh. 9:17; 18:25; 2 Sam. 4:2–3), perhaps modern Bireh north of Jerusalem.

BEEROTH-BENE-JAAKAN [bee uh ROTH BEN e JAY uh can]—a form of BEEROTH No. 1.

BEEROTHITE [bee uh ROTH ite]—a native or inhabitant of BEEROTH (2 Sam. 4:2–3; 23:37), also spelled Berothite (1 Chr. 11:39).

BEERSHEBA [BEE ur SHE buh] (well of the seven or well of the oath)—the chief city of the NEGEV (see Map 2, C–1). Beersheba was situated in the territory of Simeon (Josh. 19:1–2) and was “at the limits of the tribe of the children of Judah, toward the border of Edom in the South” (Josh. 15:21, 28). Midway between the Mediterranean Sea and the southern end of the Dead Sea, Beersheba was considered the southern extremity of the Promised Land, giving rise to the often-used expression, “from Dan [in the north] to Beersheba” (Judg. 20:1) or “from Beersheba to Dan” (1 Chr. 21:2).

In Beersheba Abraham and Abimelech, king of GERAR (in Philistia), made a covenant and swore an oath of mutual assistance (Gen. 21:31). Abraham pledged to Abimelech seven ewe lambs to bear witness to the sincerity of his oath; from this transaction came the name Beersheba. It was in the Wilderness of Beersheba that Hagar wandered as she fled from Sarah (Gen. 21:33). Abraham dug a well and also planted a tamarisk tree here (Gen. 21:33), and he returned to Beersheba after God prevented him from offering Isaac as a sacrifice on Mount Moriah (Gen. 22:19).

At Beersheba a number of important encounters took place between God and various people. Here God appeared to Hagar (Gen. 21:17), Isaac (Gen. 26:23–33), and Jacob (Gen. 46:1–5). Ancient Beersheba has been identified with a large tract known as Tell es-Saba, situated about 3 kilometers (2 miles) east of the modern city.

Photo: Levant Photo Service

- Excavations at ancient Beersheba near Jerusalem in southern Israel.

BEETLE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BEGGAR (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

BEGINNING—a title for Christ that declares His existence before time began. The Gospel of John declares that Jesus was present with the Father in the “beginning,” and, therefore, the Creator of all things (John 1:2). Christ is called “the Beginning” (Col. 1:18), “the Beginning of the creation of God” (Rev. 3:14), and “the Beginning and the End” (Rev. 1:8; 21:6; 22:13).

BEGOTTEN, ONLY—a New Testament phrase that describes Christ as the only, or unique, Son of His heavenly Father (John 1:14, 18; 3:16–18; 1 John 4:9, one and only, NIV). The Greek word expresses the idea of distinctiveness—“one of a kind.” As the unique, sinless Son, Jesus accomplished our salvation through His death on the cross.

BEHEMOTH [bee uh MOTH] (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BEKAH [beh KAH] (see MONEY OF THE BIBLE; WEIGHTS AND MEASURES).

BEKER [BECK ur]—a form of BECHER.

BEL [bell] (see GODS, PAGAN).

BEL AND THE DRAGON (see APOCRYPHA).

BELA [BEE lah]—the name of three men and one place in the Old Testament:

1. One of the cities of the plain near the Dead Sea; it is identified as Zoar (Gen. 14:2).
2. A king of Edom (Gen. 36:32–33; 1 Chr. 1:43–44) who reigned in the city of Dinhabah, possibly situated just south of the River Arnon.
3. The oldest son of Benjamin and the head of the family of Belaites (Gen. 46:21; Num. 26:38, 40). The name is also spelled Belah (Gen. 46:21).
4. A son of Ahaz, of the tribe of Reuben (1 Chr. 5:8).

BELAH [BEE lah]—a form of BELA.

BELAITES [BEE luh ites]—descendants of BELA No. 3 (Num. 26:38).

BELIAL [BEE lih uhl] (worthlessness)—an Old Testament term designating a person as godless or lawless. The NKJV translates corrupt (1 Sam. 2:12), perverted (Judg. 19:22), rebel (2 Sam. 20:1), scoundrel (1 Kin. 21:10, 13), worthless men (1 Sam. 30:22), and worthless rogues (2 Sam. 16:7). A “daughter of Belial” (1 Sam. 1:16, KJV) means a wicked woman (NKJV, NIV), one who is worthless (NASB, NRSV).

Belial sometimes takes the form of a proper name (or a personification), applied to a demon or to Satan (Nah. 1:15; 2 Cor. 6:15). Many scholars believe that Belial is another name for SATAN.

BELIEVE, BELIEVER—to place one’s trust in God’s truth; one who takes God at His word and trusts in Him for salvation.

Mere assent to God’s truth is not saving faith, according to the Bible (John 8:31–46; Acts 8:13–24; James 2:14–26). Neither is total commitment of oneself to Jesus as Lord a form of saving faith. Such a view places too much emphasis on the act of belief, as opposed to the object of belief—Jesus Christ. This view also goes beyond the biblical evidence of faith as reception of a gift (John 4:1–42; Eph. 2:8–10).

A belief that saves is one that rests in the finished work of Christ; it trusts God alone for salvation (John 3:16). Believers are those who have trusted God with their will as well as their mind (Rom. 1:16; 3:22; 1 Thess. 1:7). Additional references dealing with belief, or faith, are Gen. 15:6; Ex. 14:31; Hab. 2:4; John 3:36; Acts 16:31; Rom. 3:21—5:1; Gal. 2:16, 20; and 1 John 5:1.

BELL (see MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS OF THE BIBLE).

BELLOWS (see TOOLS OF THE BIBLE).

BELLY—the stomach or abdominal region of the human body (Judg. 3:21–22; Ps. 17:14). The word rendered as “belly” in some translations is translated as “heart” in others. In the New Testament, John used belly (KJV; heart, NKJV) as a figure of a person’s true inner self—one’s intellectual and emotional life (John 7:38). The apostle Paul thought of the belly, or the heart, as the seat of one’s physical appetites, sensual pleasures, and worldly satisfactions (Rom. 16:18; Phil. 3:19).

BELOVED DISCIPLE—a title for one of the twelve disciples of Jesus (John 13:23; 19:26; 20:2; 21:7, 20). Many scholars believe it refers to the apostle JOHN.

BELSHAZZAR [bell SHAZ zur] (Bel, protect the king)—the oldest son of Nabonidus and the last king of the Neo-Babylonian Empire (Dan. 5:1–2; 7:1; 8:1). According to Daniel 5, Belshazzar was a king given to sensual pleasure. He held a drunken banquet involving his wives, concubines, and a thousand of his lords, or “nobles” (Dan. 5:1, NASB, NIV, REB). At the banquet Belshazzar and his guests drank from the sacred vessels that his “father” (Dan. 5:2)—or grandfather—Nebuchadnezzar had brought from the temple in Jerusalem, thus insulting the captive Jews and their God.

In the midst of the revelry, the fingers of a hand began writing these words on the wall: "MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN" (Dan. 5:25). Daniel tells us that upon seeing these words Belshazzar became troubled "so that the joints of his hips loosened and his knees knocked against each other" (Dan. 5:6).

At the queen's advice, Belshazzar sent for Daniel, who interpreted the writing as a signal of doom for the Babylonian Empire: "MENE: God has numbered your kingdom, and finished it; TEKEL: You have been weighed in the balances, and found wanting; PERES: Your kingdom has been divided, and given to the Medes and Persians" (Dan. 5:26–28). That very night, the soldiers of DARIUS the Mede—possibly another name for Cyrus the Persian—captured Babylon and Belshazzar was killed.

BELT (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE; DRESS OF THE BIBLE).

BELTESHAZZAR [bell tuh SHAZ zur]—the Hebrew form of the Babylonian name given to DANIEL by the chief of Nebuchadnezzar's eunuchs (Dan. 1:7; 5:12). This name should not be confused with BELSHAZZAR.

BEN [ben] (son)—the name of a man and a Hebrew word used as a prefix in the Old Testament:

1. A Levite at the time when the ARK OF THE COVENANT was brought to Jerusalem (1 Chr. 15:18).
2. A Hebrew word that means "son." Usually it referred to a male descendant, as a prefix in proper names, such as Ben-Ammi, "son of my people" (Gen. 19:38); and Ben-Oni, "son of my sorrow" (Gen. 35:18). Occasionally, however, the word is used as a term of endearment, as when Eli called Samuel "my son" (1 Sam. 3:6, 16). When preceding a word that defines some quality, ability, or characteristic, ben can be used descriptively. For example, "sons of Belial" (Judg. 19:22, KJV) means "perverted men."

BEN-ABINADAB [BEN ah BIN uh dab] (son of Abinadab)—a son-in-law of King Solomon and one of the twelve officers who provided food for the king and his household (1 Kin. 4:11).

BEN-AMMI [ben AHM ih] (son of my people or kinsman)—a son of Lot and founder of the AMMONITES (Gen. 19:32–38).

BEN-DEKAR [ben dih CAR]—a form of BEN-DEKER.

BEN-DEKER [ben DECK ur] (son of Deker)—one of the twelve officers who provided food for King Solomon and his household (1 Kin. 4:9; Ben-dekar, REB).

BEN-GEBER [ben GHE bur] (son of a strong man)—one of Solomon's supply officers who provided food for the royal household (1 Kin. 4:13).

BEN-HADAD [ben HAY dad] (son of [the god] Hadad)—the name of two or three kings of Damascus in Syria during the ninth and eighth centuries B.C. Because more than one king had this name, it is not always possible to be certain which king is indicated by a given reference in the Old Testament.

1. Ben-Hadad I (900–860? B.C.), "the son of Tabrimmon, the son of Hezion, king of Syria" (1 Kin. 15:18). Ben-Hadad I was king of Damascus during the reign of Israel's King BAASHA (909–886 B.C.). These two kings joined in an alliance to invade Judah, but King Asa of Judah persuaded Ben-Hadad to change sides by paying him to invade Israel instead (1 Kin. 15:19–20; 2 Chr. 16:1–4). This forced Baasha to withdraw from Judah to protect his own interests. This Ben-Hadad is also known from the famous stone monument he erected after making a treaty with King Pygmalion of Tyre about 860 B.C.
2. Ben-Hadad II (860–843? B.C.), the son of Ben-Hadad I. Ben-Hadad I may have reigned as long as fifty-seven years (900–843 B.C.). If so, the information given here about Ben-Hadad II would properly refer to Ben-Hadad I. However, it is likely that Ben-Hadad I died sometime during the reign of King Ahab of Israel (874–852 B.C.) and was succeeded by a son, Ben-Hadad II. The Bible does not mention this transition, but Assyrian records from 853 B.C. do mention HADADEZER as king of Damascus. This was probably the throne name used by a new king, Ben-Hadad II.

This Ben-Hadad also continued to invade and oppress the northern kingdom of Israel each year during the reign of King Ahab. Finally, Ahab defeated the Syrians in two successive years and captured Ben-Hadad (1 Kin. 20:1–33). As a price for releasing Ben-Hadad, Ahab received the right for Israelite merchants to trade in the marketplaces of Damascus (1 Kin. 20:34).

In 853 B.C. Ben-Hadad II led a coalition of neighboring nations, including Israel, in a major battle at QARQAR in Syria against the forces of Shalmaneser III, king of Assyria. Shalmaneser, who had been exacting tribute from Syria and Israel under the threat of military destruction, was driven out of Israel. Some time later, Ahab of Israel and King JEHOSHAPHAT of Judah joined forces to attack Ben-Hadad II. Their object was to regain RAMOTH GILEAD, originally part of Israel. Ahab and Jehoshaphat ignored the unpleasant warning of defeat spoken by MICAIAH, a true prophet of the Lord, and were defeated by Ben-Hadad II. Ahab also lost his life in the battle (1 Kin. 22:1–38).

Ben-Hadad II is probably the unnamed "king of Syria" whose officer Naaman was healed of leprosy by the Lord through the prophet Elisha (2 Kin. 5:1–19). Ben-Hadad himself also sent a servant, HAZAEL, to inquire of Elisha concerning his own illness (2 Kin. 8:7–10). Hazael later murdered Ben-Hadad and became king of Damascus (Syria), just as Elisha had prophesied (2 Kin. 8:12–15). Hazael also oppressed Israel during his reign (2 Kin. 10:32; 13:22). Hazael reigned as king of Syria from about 843 B.C. to about 798 B.C.

3. Ben-Hadad III, the son of Hazael. He succeeded his father as king of Damascus about 798 B.C. When the Israelite king JOASH (798–782 B.C.) came to power, he won back Israelite territory from Ben-Hadad III, defeating him in battle three times (2 Kin. 13:25). Joash's son, King JEROBOAM II, also was successful in battle against Ben-Hadad III and expanded Israel to its full borders (2 Kin. 14:13–28).

Having failed in his battles against Israel, Ben-Hadad III led a coalition of Syrian kings against Zakir, the king of Hamath, who had attempted to expand his kingdom at the expense of the other kings. Ben-Hadad lost this war also. An Aramaic stone monument mentions Ben-Hadad III by name. Eventually, "the palaces of Ben-Hadad" (Amos 1:4) in Damascus were destroyed by invading Assyrian armies, just as the prophet Amos had predicted.

BEN-HAIL [ben HAY ill] (son of strength)—a prince and teacher during the reign of King Jehoshaphat of Judah (2 Chr. 17:7; Ben-hayil, REB).

BEN-HANAN [ben HAY nan] (son of grace)—a son of Shimon, of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 4:20).

BEN-HAYIL [ben HAY ill]—a form of BEN-HAIL.

BEN-HESED [ben HEE sid] (son of faithfulness)—one of Solomon's twelve supply officers, in charge of three cities in the Plain of Sharon: Arubboth, Sochoh, and Hepher (1 Kin. 4:10).

BEN-HUR [ben HER] (son of Hur)—one of Solomon's twelve supply officers responsible for providing food for the royal household (1 Kin. 4:8).

BEN-JAHAZIEL [ben juh HAY zih el] (son of Jahaziel)—a chief of the people who returned from the captivity in Babylon (Ezra 8:5).

BEN JOSIPHIAH [ben joe zy FIE uh] (son of Josiphiah)—one of the sons of Bani who returned from the captivity with Ezra (Ezra 8:10).

BEN-ONI [ben OWN ih] (son of my pain)—the name given by the dying Rachel to her son (Gen. 35:18). Jacob changed the name to BENJAMIN.

BEN-ZOHETH [ben ZOE heth] (son of Zoheth)—a son of Ishi, of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 4:20).

BENAIAH [beh NIE yuh] (the Lord has built)—the name of twelve men in the Old Testament:

1. One of David's mighty men (2 Sam. 23:30; 1 Chr. 27:14).
2. A loyal supporter of David and Solomon (1 Kin. 1:8; 4:4; 1 Chr. 27:5). Benaiah commanded the CHERETHITES and the PELETHITES, David's bodyguard (2 Sam. 8:18; 20:23; 1 Chr. 18:17; 27:5–6). A

Levite, Benaiah remained loyal to David when David's son Absalom rebelled. When another of David's sons, Adonijah, tried to seize the king's throne and prevent Solomon from becoming king, Benaiah escorted Solomon to Gihon, where he was anointed king (1 Kin. 1:32–45). Benaiah carried out Solomon's orders to execute Adonijah (1 Kin. 2:25) and Joab (1 Kin. 2:34). Solomon then made Benaiah commander-in-chief over the army (1 Kin. 2:35; 4:4). Benaiah was famous for three courageous deeds: (1) climbing down into a pit and killing a lion; (2) killing two lion-like warriors of Moab; and (3) killing an Egyptian giant with the giant's own weapon (2 Sam. 23:20–22; 1 Chr. 11:22–24).

3. The head of a family of the tribe of Simeon during Hezekiah's reign (1 Chr. 4:36).
4. A priest who played the harp before the ARK OF THE COVENANT when it was being brought by David to Jerusalem (1 Chr. 15:18, 20, 24; 16:5–6).
5. The father of one of David's counselors (1 Chr. 27:34).
6. The grandfather of JAHAZIEL (2 Chr. 20:14).
7. A Levite overseer of offerings in the temple during Hezekiah's reign (2 Chr. 31:13).
8, 9, 10, 11. Four men who had married pagan wives during the captivity and who heeded Ezra's call to divorce them. They were sons of Parosh, Pahath–Moab, Bani, and Nebo respectively (Ezra 10:25, 30, 35, 43).
12. The father of PELATIAH (Ezek. 11:1, 13).

BENCH—the rowing bench of a ship (Ezek. 27:6, KJV). The same word is used for the "boards" of acacia wood in the tabernacle (Ex. 26:15).

BENE BERAK [ben eh BEH rack] (sons of lightning)—a town allotted to the tribe of Dan (Josh. 19:45). It is now identified with Ibn Ibrak, situated about 6 kilometers (4 miles) east of modern Jaffa (Joppa).

BENE JAAKAN [ben eh JAY ah can]—a place on the border of Edom where the wandering Israelites camped (Num. 33:31–32). JAAKAN, one of the sons of Ezer, apparently gave his name to this place (1 Chr. 1:42); he is called Akan in Genesis 36:27. Also see BEEROTH.

BENE-KEDEM [ben eh KED um] (sons of the East)—a people or peoples, often mentioned together with the Midianites and the Amalekites, who lived east of the Jordan River (Judg. 6:3).

BENEDICTION—a prayer that God may bestow certain blessings on His people. In Old Testament times, a regular part of the temple service was pronouncing the benediction. The form of the priestly benediction was prescribed in the law: "The LORD bless you and keep you; / The LORD make His face shine upon you, / And be gracious to you; / The LORD lift up his countenance upon you, / And give you peace" (Num. 6:24–26).

The so-called Apostolic benediction is often used at the conclusion of a Christian worship service: "The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit be with you all. Amen" (2 Cor. 13:14).

BENEFACTOR—a title bestowed upon gods, kings, and people of outstanding achievement. Jesus spoke of Gentile kings who exercise power and authority over their subjects as "benefactors" (Luke 22:25). He contrasted this earthly system with the kingdom of God. His disciples should not seek to be served but to serve others.

BENINU [beh NIE noo] (our son)—a Levite who sealed the covenant after returning from the captivity (Neh. 10:13).

BENJAMIN [BEN juh mun] (son of the right hand or son of the south)—the name of three or four men in the Old Testament:

1. Jacob's youngest son, born to his favorite wife, RACHEL (Gen. 35:18, 24). After giving birth to Benjamin, the dying Rachel named him Ben-Oni (Gen. 35:18), which means "son of my pain." But Jacob renamed him Benjamin. When Jacob lost his beloved son JOSEPH, he became very attached to Benjamin because Benjamin was the only surviving son of Rachel. When his sons went to Egypt in search of food to relieve a famine, Jacob was reluctant to let Benjamin go with them (Gen. 43:1–17).

It is apparent that Joseph also loved Benjamin, his only full brother (Gen. 43:29–34). During this trip Joseph ordered that his silver cup be planted in Benjamin's sack. The reaction of Jacob and Benjamin's brothers shows the great love they had for Benjamin (Gen. 44). Benjamin had five sons and two grandsons, and he became the founder of the tribe that carried his name (Gen. 46:21; Num. 26:38–41; 1 Chr. 7:6–12; 8:1–40).

2. A son of Bilhan, a Benjamite (1 Chr. 7:10).
3. A son of Harim who lived in Jerusalem following the return from the captivity. Benjamin divorced his pagan wife at Ezra's urging (Ezra 10:31–32).
4. A priest during the time of Nehemiah (Neh. 12:34) who helped repair and dedicate the wall of Jerusalem (Neh. 3:23). He may be the same person as No. 3.

BENJAMIN, TRIBE OF—the tribe descended from Benjamin (Num. 1:36–37; Judg. 1:21). Its northern boundary ran westward from the Jordan River through Bethel and just south of Lower Beth Horon; its western boundary picked up at this point to Kirjath Jearim; its southern border ran eastward to the northern point of the Dead Sea; and its easternmost limit was the Jordan River (Josh. 18:11–20). The chief towns in this hilly, fertile region were Jerusalem, Jericho, Bethel, Gibeon, Gibeah, and Mizpah (Josh. 18:21–28).

Saul, Israel's first king, was a Benjamite, and the Benjamites supported Saul over David (2 Sam. 2:9, 15; 1 Chr. 12:29). Although the Benjamites continued to show some unrest throughout David's reign (2 Sam. 20:1; Ps. 7), most of the tribe remained loyal to the house of David and became part of the southern kingdom of Judah when Israel divided into two nations (1 Kin. 12:21; Ezra 4:1). Saul of Tarsus, who later became known as the apostle Paul, was a Benjamite (Phil. 3:5).

BENJAMIN'S GATE (see GATES OF JERUSALEM AND THE TEMPLE).

BENJAMITE [BEN juh mite]—any person who belonged to the tribe of BENJAMIN (Judg. 3:15; 19:16; Benjaminite, NRSV).

BENO [BEE noe] (his son)—a descendant of the tribe of Levi through MERARI (1 Chr. 24:26–27).

BEON [BEE ahn]—an ancient Amorite city situated east of the Jordan River on the frontier of Moab (Num. 32:3). It was also known as BAAL MEON (Num. 32:38; 1 Chr. 5:8; Ezek. 25:9) and Beth Baal Meon (Josh. 13:17).

BEOR [BEE or]—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. The father of Bela, king of Edom (Gen. 36:32; 1 Chr. 1:43).
2. The father of Balaam, the seer hired by Balak to curse the Israelites (Deut. 23:4; Josh. 24:9). Beor is also called Bosor (2 Pet. 2:15, KJV).

BERA [BEE rah]—a king of Sodom (Gen. 14:2). During the time of Abraham he was defeated by Chedorlaomer in the Valley of Siddim.

BERACAH [BEHR ah kah]—a form of BERACHAH.

BERACHAH [BEHR ah kah] (blessing)—the name of a man and a place in the Old Testament:

1. A Benjamite who joined David's army at Ziklag (1 Chr. 12:3; Beracah, NASB, NIV, NRSV).
2. A valley in Judah near Tekoa (2 Chr. 20:26). King Jehoshaphat named this place when his people assembled here to bless the Lord after the defeat of their enemies.

BERACHIAH [behr ah KIE uh]—a form of BERECHIAH.

BERAIAH [beh RIE uh] (the Lord has created)—a chief of the tribe of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:21).

BEREA [beh REE ah]—a city of Macedonia (see Map 7, B–1) about 73 kilometers (45 miles) west of Thessalonica (modern Salonika). On his first missionary journey, the apostle Paul preached at Berea (Acts 17:10) with much success. The Bereans were "more fair-minded than those in Thessalonica," because they "searched the Scriptures daily to find out whether these things were so" (Acts 17:11).

BERECHIAH [behr ah KIE uh] (the Lord has blessed)—the name of seven men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Zerubbabel and a descendant of David (1 Chr. 3:20).
2. A Levite who lived in Jerusalem after the captivity (1 Chr. 9:16).
3. A Levite, the father of Asaph the singer (1 Chr. 15:17), also called Berachiah (1 Chr. 6:39).
4. One of the "doorkeepers for the ark" (1 Chr. 15:23) in David's time.
5. A chief of the tribe of Ephraim (2 Chr. 28:12).
6. The father of Meshullam (Neh. 3:4, 30; 6:18).
7. A son of Iddo and the father of Zechariah (Zech. 1:1, 7; Matt. 23:35; Barachias, KJV; Barachiah, NRSV; also see JEBERECHIAH, Is. 8:2).

BERED [BEH rid] (hail)—the name of a place and a person in the Old Testament:

1. A place (perhaps a town) in the Wilderness of Shur or the southern desert of Canaan. Between Bered and Kadesh Barnea lay the well called BEER LAHAI ROI (Gen. 16:14).
2. A descendant of Ephraim (1 Chr. 7:20). Bered is also called BECHER (Num. 26:35).

BERI [BEH rih]—a son of Zophah, of the tribe of Asher (1 Chr. 7:36).

BERIAH [beh RYE uh]—the name of four men in the Old Testament:

1. A descendant of Asher and the father of Heber and Malchiel (Gen. 46:17; Num. 26:44–45; 1 Chr. 7:30–31). Beriah was the head of the family of Beriites (Num. 26:44).
2. A descendant of Ephraim (1 Chr. 7:23), born after his brothers were killed by the Philistines.
3. A descendant of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:13, 16).
4. A Levite, a son of Shimei the Gershonite (1 Chr. 23:10–11).

BERIITES [BEH rih ites]—the family name of Beriah, the son of Asher (Num. 26:44).

BERITES [BEH rites] (belonging to Bichri)—the descendants of BICHRI. The only mention of this clan is when Joab visited them in his pursuit of Sheba, the son of Bichri (2 Sam. 20:14; Bichrites, NRSV, REB).

BERITH [beh REETH] (see GODS, PAGAN).

BERNICE [ber NIECE] (victorious)—the oldest daughter of Herod Agrippa I, who ruled Palestine A.D. 37–44 (Acts 25:13). According to the historian Josephus, she was first married to a man named Marcus and later to her uncle Herod, king of Chalcis, who soon afterward died. She later married Polemo, king of Cilicia, but deserted him shortly after their wedding. Then she made her way to Jerusalem, where she lived with Agrippa II. She was with Agrippa II when the apostle Paul made his defense before him (Acts 25:13, 23; 26:30).

Bernice eventually became a mistress of the Roman emperor Vespasian, then of his son Titus. Bernice and her sister Drusilla (Acts 24:24) were two of the most corrupt and shameless women of their time.

BERODACH–BALADAN [bih ROE dak BAL uh dan]—a form of MERODACH–BALADAN.

BEROTHAH [beh ROW thah] (wells)—a town in Syria between Damascus and Hamath. The prophet Ezekiel saw it as the northernmost area of the restored promised land (Ezek. 47:16; Berothah, REB). It is also called Berothai (2 Sam. 8:8), or Cun (1 Chr. 18:8).

BEROTHAI [beh ROW thigh]—a form of BEROTHAH.

BEROTHITE [beh ROW thite]—a native or inhabitant of BEEROTH. A man referred to as Naharai the Berothite was Joab’s armorbearer (1 Chr. 11:39; also spelled Beerothite, 2 Sam. 23:37).

BERUTHA [beh ROO thuh]—a form of BEROTHAH.

BERYL [BEHR ul] (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

BESAI [BEE sigh]—a man whose descendants returned to Jerusalem with Zerubbabel after the captivity (Ezra 2:49; Neh. 7:52).

BESODEIAH [bes oh DEE yuh] (in the intimate counsel of the Lord)—the father of Meshullam, who helped repair the Old Gate of Jerusalem (Neh. 3:6).

BESOM [BEE some]—KJV, REB rendering of "broom" (Is. 14:23). Isaiah predicted that "the besom [broom] of destruction" would sweep Babylon away as so much rubbish before the Lord's purifying anger.

BESOR, THE BROOK [BEE sawr]—a wadi, or dry riverbed, south of Ziklag where David and 600 of his men battled the Amalekites (1 Sam. 30:9, 21).

BESTIALITY—sexual intercourse between a human being and an animal. According to the Mosaic Law, both the beast and the guilty person were to be put to death for this abomination (Ex. 22:19; Lev. 18:23; Deut. 27:21).

BETAH [BEE tah] (trust, confidence)—a city of Syria that David captured from HADADEZER (2 Sam. 8:8). It is identical to Tibhath (1 Chr. 18:8).

BETEN [BEE tehn] (abdomen)—a village of the tribe of Asher (Josh. 19:25). Beten may be the present-day Abtun, about 18 kilometers (11 miles) south of Akko (Acre), not far from Mount Carmel.

BETH [beth] (house)—the name of a Hebrew letter and a prefix used in Hebrew names:

1. The second letter of the Hebrew alphabet, used as a heading over Psalm 119:9–16. In the Hebrew text, each of these eight verses begins with beth.
2. A prefix used in many compound words, such as Beth Anath (house of Anath) or Beth Arabah (house of the desert). Also see ACROSTIC.

BETH ACACIA [beth ah KAY shuh] (house of acacia)—a town in the Jordan Valley between Zerarah and Jezreel, noted for its acacia trees (Judg. 7:22; Beth-shittah, NASB, REB, NIV, KJV, NRSV). The MIDIANITES fled to this town to escape Gideon.

BETH ANATH [beth AY nath] (house of [the goddess] Anath)—a fortified city in the territory of Naphtali, situated between Horem and Beth Shemesh (Josh. 19:38). The Canaanites were not expelled from this city during Israel's conquest of the land.

BETH ANOTH [beth AY noth] (house of [the goddesses] Anoth)—a town in the hill country of Judah, near Hebron (Josh. 15:59).

BETH APHRAH [beth AF ruh] (house of dust)—a Philistine city (Mic. 1:10; Beth-le-aphrah, NASB, NRSV; Aphrah, KJV; Beth Ophrah, NIV). Some scholars, however, believe an allusion to Bethel or Ophrah may be intended.

BETH ARABAH [beth AIR uh bah] (house of the desert)—a city in the wilderness of Judah (Josh. 15:61–62). Since Beth Arabah is also named as a city of Benjamin (Josh. 18:18), it must have been on or near the boundary between the territories of Judah and Benjamin, at the north end of the DEAD SEA. It may be identified with Ain el-Gharabah, southeast of Jericho.

BETH-ARAM [beth A ram]—a form of BETH HARAM and BETH HARAN.

BETH ARBEL [beth ARR bell]—a town plundered by Shalman (Hos. 10:14). Some scholars believe this Shalman was a king of Moab and that the town was Arbela in the region of Pella in TRANSJORDAN. Others argue that Shalman was Shalmaneser V of Assyria and that Beth Arbel was Arbela of Galilee.

BETH AVEN [beth A ven] (house of idols)—a town in the hill country of Benjamin east of Bethel and west of Michmash (Josh. 7:2). Some scholars believe Beth Aven was an older name for Ai. The prophet Hosea used the name symbolically to say that Bethel (“house of God”) had become Beth Aven (“house of idols”) because of the golden calf set up at Bethel by Jeroboam, the first king of the northern kingdom of Israel (1 Kin. 12:28–29).

BETH AZMAVETH [beth az MAY veth] (house of Azmaveth)—a town near Jerusalem between Anathoth and Geba (Neh. 7:28), also called Azmaveth (Ezra 2:24; Beth-azmoth, REB).

BETH-AZMOTH [beth AZ moth]—a form of BETH AZMAVETH.

BETH BAAL MEON [beth BAY uhl ME ahn] (Baal’s dwelling place) —an Amorite city east of the Jordan River on the northern border of Moab allotted to the Reubenites (Josh. 13:17). It also was called Beon (Num. 32:3), Baal Meon (Num. 32:38), and Beth Meon (Jer. 48:23).

BETH BARAH [beth BAH rah]—a place in the Jordan River Valley near the site of Gideon's victory over the Midianites (Judg. 7:24). Beth Barah may have been a ford or crossing near the place where the brook Far'ah ran into the JORDAN; RIVER. Beth Barah should not be confused with "Bethabara (Bethany, NASB, REB, NIV, NRSV) beyond the Jordan" (John 1:28), a place east of the Jordan River.

BETH-BIREI [beth BEER ih eye]—a form of BETH BIRI.

BETH BIRI [beth BIH rih]—a town of southern Judah assigned to the tribe of Simeon (1 Chr. 4:31; Beth-birei, REB, KJV). It is perhaps the same as Beth Lebaoth (Josh. 19:6) or Lebaoth (Josh. 15:32).

BETH CAR [beth CAR] (house of a lamb)—a place near MIZPAH where Israel pursued the Philistines during the battle of EBENEZER (1 Sam. 7:11–12).

BETH DAGON [beth DAY gun] (house of [the god] Dagon)—the name of two towns in the Old Testament:

1. A town in the lowlands of Judah near Philistine territory (Josh. 15:41). It may be modern Khirbet Dajun.
2. A town on the border between Asher and Zebulun (Josh. 19:27). It probably is modern Jelamet el-Atika at the foot of Mount Carmel.

BETH DIBLATHAIM [beth dib lah THAY em] (house of two fig cakes)—a Moabite town associated with Dibon and Nebo (Jer. 48:22), perhaps the same place as Almon Diblathaim (Num. 33:46–47).

BETH EDEN [beth EE dun] (house of delight)—a city-state in Mesopotamia. It is mentioned in Assyrian records by the name Bit–Adini, situated on both sides of the Euphrates River north of the Balikh River. According to the prophet Amos, the people of the Aramean city would be taken captive and exiled to Kir by the Assyrians under Tiglath–Pileser (Amos 1:5).

BETH EKED OF THE SHEPHERDS [beth EE ked] (house of shearing)—a place on the road from Jezreel to Samaria where Jehu met and killed forty-two relatives of King Ahaziah of Judah (2 Kin. 10:12–14; the shearing house, KJV; a shepherds' shelter, REB). Jehu killed them at the well of Beth Eked, leaving no survivors. Some scholars identify this site with Beit–Qad, about 26 kilometers (16 miles) northeast of Samaria.

BETH EMEK [beth EE meck] (house of the valley)—a town of Asher near the border of Zebulun, in the Valley of Jipthah El (Josh. 19:27). It may be the modern Tell Mimas, located about 10.5 kilometers (6.5 miles) northeast of Acre (modern Akko).

BETH EZEL [beth EE zul]—a town of southern Judah mentioned with other towns in the SHEPHELAH and Philistine plain (Mic. 1:11).

BETH GADER [beth GAY dur] (house of walls)—a town of Judah (1 Chr. 2:51), perhaps the same place as Geder (Josh. 12:13).

BETH GAMUL [beth GAY mull] (place of recompense)—an unwalled city on the plain of Moab about 11 kilometers (7 miles) east of Dibon (Jer. 48:23).

BETH HACCEREM [beth HACK uh rim]—a form of BETH HACCHEREM.

BETH HACCHEREM [beth HACK uh rim] (house of the vineyard)—a village near Jerusalem where signal fires were sent up to warn of an invasion (Jer. 6:1; Neh. 3:14; Beth Haccerem, NRSV). Beth Haccherem is present-day Ramet Rahel, situated about 3 kilometers (2 miles) south of Jerusalem.

BETH HAGGAN [beth HAG un] (garden house)—a town toward which King AHAZIAH fled as he escaped from Jehu (2 Kin. 9:27).

BETH HAKKEREM [beth HACK uh rim]—a form of BETH HACCHEREM.

BETH HARAM [beth HAR em]—a town of Canaan allotted to the tribe of Gad in Joshua's time (Josh. 13:27; Beth-aram, KJV), probably the same place as BETH HARAN (Num. 32:36).

BETH HARAN [beth HAY ran]—an Amorite city captured and fortified by the tribe of Gad (Num. 32:36; Beth Haram, Josh. 13:27; Beth-aram, KJV).

BETH-HOGLA [beth HOG luh]—a form of BETH HOGLAH.

BETH HOGLAH [beth HOG luh]—a city of the tribe of Benjamin about 6 kilometers (4 miles) southeast of Jericho near the border of Judah (Josh. 15:6; Beth-hogla, KJV).

BETH HORON [beth HOE run] (house of [the god] Horon)—twin towns named after Horon, the Canaanite god of the underworld. The two towns, Upper and Lower Beth Horon (Josh. 16:3, 5), were separated by only a few miles. The towns were situated at the west end of the Ephraimite mountains on the boundary line between the territories of Benjamin and Ephraim. They were assigned to Ephraim and given to the KOHATHITES (Josh. 21:20–22).

These twin towns were called Upper and Lower because of the great difference in elevation between them. Upper Beth Horon was approximately 615 meters (2,000 feet) above sea level, while Lower Beth Horon was only 369 meters (1,200 feet) above sea level. The steep descent between them provided the best pass through the mountains from Jerusalem to Joppa (modern Jaffa) and the Mediterranean Sea. For this reason both towns became heavily fortified at various periods in history as a means of defense for Jerusalem.

The historical record of these cities reads like a page out of a war manual. When Joshua overcame the Amorites, in the battle where the sun stood still, “the LORD routed them before Israel, killed them with a great slaughter at Gibeon, [and] chased them along the road that goes to Beth Horon” (Josh. 10:10). When the Philistines fought against King Saul at Michmash, they sent a company of soldiers along the “road to Beth Horon” (1 Sam. 13:18).

BETH JESHIMOTH [beth JEHSH ih moth] (house of wastelands)—a town situated in the ABARIM mountain range east of the place where the Jordan River flows into the Dead Sea (Num. 33:49; Beth Jesimoth, NKJV). It was one of the limits of Israel’s encampment before the people crossed the Jordan.

BETH JESIMOTH [beth JESS ih moth]—a form of BETH JESHIMOTH.

BETH-LE-APHRAH [beth leh AF ruh]—a form of BETH APHRAH.

BETH LEBAOTH [beth leh BAY oth] (house of lionesses)—a town of southern Judah assigned to the tribe of Simeon (Josh. 19:6). The city is also known as Lebaoth (Josh. 15:32). Located near Sharuhen, it may be identical with Beth Biri (1 Chr. 4:31).

BETH MARCABOTH [beth MAR kuh both] (house of chariots)—a town of the Simeonites in southern Judah mentioned along with Hazar Susah as a city in the NEGEB near Ziklag (Josh. 19:5).

BETH MEON [beth ME ahn] (place of habitation)—a city of Moab (Jer. 48:23). Also see BAAL MEON; BEON; BETH BAAL MEON.

BETH MILLO [beth MILL oh] (place of a mound)—an ancient fortification in or near Shechem, a city in central Canaan, in the hill country of Ephraim (Judg. 9:6). The reference may be to the fortified citadel of Shechem, whose inhabitants were among those who proclaimed Abimelech king. Also see MILLO.

BETH NIMRAH [beth NIM rah] (house of the leopard)—a fortified city built by the Gadites in Gilead, east of the Jordan River (Num. 32:36). It is also called Nimrah (Num. 32:3).

BETH OPHRAH [beth OAF rah]—a form of BETH APHRAH.

BETH PAZZEZ [beth PAZ ez]—a border town in Issachar (Josh. 19:21), near En Haddah and Mount Tabor. It may be modern Kerm el-Haditheh.

BETH PELET [beth PEH let] (house of escape)—a town in the NEGEB of Judah, toward the border of Edom (Josh. 15:27; Neh. 11:26; Beth-phelet, KJV).

BETH PEOR [beth PEA oar]—a town of Moab near Pisgah that was allotted to the tribe of Reuben. The Israelites maintained their main encampment near this site while warring against Sihon and Og (Deut. 4:46). It was "in a valley in the land of Moab, opposite Beth Peor" (Deut. 34:6) that Moses was buried.

BETH-PHELET [beth FEH let]—a form of BETH PELET.

BETH-RAPHA [beth RAY fuh] (house of healing)—a man listed in the genealogy of Judah. He was a son of Eshton (1 Chr. 4:12).

BETH REHOB [beth REE hob] (place of a street)—a place in the Jordan River Valley north of the Sea of Galilee near Dan (Judg. 18:28). It was also called REHOB (Num. 13:21). Apparently, Beth Rehob was one of the small kingdoms of Aram or Syria, located east of Gilead (2 Sam. 10:6).

BETH SHAN [BETH shan]—a city at the junction of the Jezreel and Jordan valleys. Beth Shan shows evidence of occupation from prehistoric times throughout the biblical period. Archaeologists unearthed eighteen separate levels of occupation. This continuous occupation probably was due to natural and geographic factors. The many springs in the area, combined with the intense heat that is characteristic of the Jordan Valley, made Beth Shan a garden paradise.

Beth Shan's location at the crossroads of Canaan's two great valleys meant that all traffic through Canaan—from Egypt to Damascus and from the Mediterranean coast to the East—had to pass by the city.

After the Egyptian pharaoh Thutmose III's victory at MEGIDDO (about 1482 B.C.), the fortress at Beth Shan passed into Egyptian hands for three centuries. Joshua was unable to capture Beth Shan; his infantry could not cope with its iron chariots (Josh. 17:16). Later, the Philistines occupied the city; and after Saul's tragic last battle near Mount Gilboa, the Philistines "put his armor in the temple of ASHTAROTH as an offering and "fastened his body to the wall of Beth Shan" (1 Sam. 31:10). That Israel eventually gained control of the city is evidenced by the garrison that Solomon kept here (1 Kin. 4:12). In some places the name occurs as Beth Shean (Josh. 17:11, 16; Judg. 1:27).

During the intertestamental period, the name of Beth Shan was changed to Scythopolis (city of Scythians), which Josephus called the largest of the DECAPOLIS, perhaps meaning it was the capital. In spite of its importance, this city is not mentioned in the New Testament.

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

• A theater from the Roman period, with the mound of ancient Beth Shan (1 Sam. 31:8–10) in the background.

BETH SHEAN [beth SHEEN]—a form of BETH SHAN.

BETH SHEMESH [beth SHEH mesh] (house of the sun-god)—a name for three or four cities in the Old Testament:

1. A town in the Valley of Sorek, 24 kilometers (15 miles) west of Jerusalem (see Map 3, A–4). It was situated northwest of Judah’s territory near the Philistine border (Josh. 15:10). It was probably the same city as Ir Shemesh (Josh. 19:41), which was allotted to the tribe of Dan. Later, Judah gave Beth Shemesh to the Levites (Josh. 21:16).

After their victory at APHEK (1 Sam. 4), the Philistines took the ARK OF THE COVENANT to Ashdod and Ekron, cities upon which God's judgment quickly fell (1 Sam. 5). The ark was removed then to Beth Shemesh (1 Sam. 6:10—7:2), where it remained until it was taken to KIRJATH JEARIM. Later, Beth Shemesh was in the second administrative district of Solomon (1 Kin. 4:9). At Beth Shemesh Israel's king, JEHOASH, and Judah's king, AMAZIAH, met in battle (2 Kin. 14:11–14).

2. A city in Issachar located between MOUNT TABOR and the Jordan River (Josh. 19:22).
3. A Canaanite city in Naphtali whose inhabitants were not driven out of the land (Josh. 19:38; Judg. 1:33). Some scholars identify this city with No. 2.
4. The Hebrew rendering of the name of the Egyptian city of On, called Heliopolis in Greek, at which the temple of the sun-god Ra was situated. Jeremiah prophesied that the Lord would break the images of this Beth Shemesh and burn the houses of Egypt's gods (Jer. 43:13).

BETH-SHITTAH [beth SHE tah]—a form of BETH ACACIA.

BETH TAPPUAH [beth TAP you ah] (house of apricots)—a town in the hill country of Judah about 6 kilometers (4 miles) northwest of Hebron (Josh. 15:53).

BETH ZUR [beth ZOOR] (house of rock)—the name of a person and a place in the Old Testament:

1. A city in the mountains of Judah. Beth Zur commanded the road from Beersheba to Jerusalem. King Rehoboam strengthened its fortifications (Neh. 3:16).
2. A son of Maon (1 Chr. 2:45).

BETHABARA [beth AB ah ruh]—an unidentified place on the eastern bank of the Jordan River where John the Baptist baptized (John 1:28, KJV, NKJV). It is the same as BETHANY No. 2.

BETHANY [BETH ah nih]—the name of two villages in the New Testament:

1. A village on the southeastern slopes of the MOUNT OF OLIVES (see Map 6, B–4) about 3 kilometers (2 miles) east of Jerusalem near the road to Jericho (Mark 11:1). Bethany was the scene of some of the most important events of Jesus' life. It was the home of Martha, Mary, and Lazarus and the place where Jesus raised Lazarus from the dead (John 11). During Jesus' final week, He spent at least one night in Bethany (Matt. 21:17). At Bethany Jesus was anointed by Mary in the home of Simon the leper (Matt. 26:6–13). From a site near Bethany, He ascended into heaven (Luke 24:50).
2. A village in TRANSJORDAN where John the Baptist was baptizing (John 1:28, NIV; Bethabara, KJV, NKJV).

BETHEL [BETH uhl] (house of God)—the name of two cities in the Old Testament:

1. A city of Canaan about 19 kilometers (12 miles) north of Jerusalem (see Map 3, B–4). Bethel is mentioned more often in the Bible than any other city except Jerusalem. It is first mentioned in connection with Abraham, who "pitched his tent with Bethel on the west and . . . built an altar to the LORD" (Gen. 12:8; 13:3). The region around Bethel is still suitable for grazing by livestock.

   Jacob, Abraham's grandson, had a life-changing experience at this site. He had a vision of a staircase reaching into the heavens with the angels of God "ascending and descending on it" (Gen. 28:12). Jacob called the name of that place Bethel, "the house of God" (Gen. 28:19). He erected a pillar at Bethel to mark the spot of his vision (Gen. 28:22; 31:13). Jacob later built an altar at Bethel, where he worshiped the Lord (Gen. 35:1–16).

   During Israel's war with the Benjamites in later years (Judg. 20), the children of Israel suffered two disastrous defeats (Judg. 20:21, 25). They went to Bethel (the house of God, NKJV) to inquire of the Lord, for the ARK OF THE COVENANT was located there (Judg. 20:26–27). At Bethel they built an altar and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings before the Lord. The third battle ended in disaster for the Benjamites. At the end of the war the Israelites returned to Bethel (the house of God, NKJV), built an altar, and again offered burnt offerings and peace offerings (Judg. 21:1–4).

After the death of Solomon and the division of his kingdom, Jeroboam, the king of Israel (the Northern Kingdom), set up two calves of gold, one in Bethel and one in Dan (1 Kin. 12:29, 32–33). Thus, Bethel became a great center of idolatry (1 Kin. 13:1–32; 2 Kin. 10:29) and the chief sanctuary of Israel (Amos 7:13), rivaling the temple in Jerusalem.

The prophets Jeremiah and Amos denounced Bethel for its idolatries (Jer. 48:13; Amos 5:5–6). Hosea, deploring its great wickedness (Hos. 10:5, 15), called it BETH AVEN ("house of idols"), because of the golden calf set up there. Bethel, the house of God, had deteriorated into Beth Aven, the house of idols.

In a religious reformation that sought to restore the true worship of God, King Josiah broke down the altar at Bethel (2 Kin. 23:15). Still later in Israel's history, Bethel was occupied by Jewish people who returned from the captivity in Babylon with Zerubbabel (Ezra 2:28; Neh. 7:32). The place again reverted to the Benjamites (Neh. 11:31). The city was destroyed about 540 B.C. by a great fire. This destruction may have been the work of Nabonidus of Babylon or of the Persians in the period just before Darius. Today the site of Bethel is occupied by a small village called Beitin.

The New Testament does not refer to Bethel, but Jesus must have gone through this area on His trips. The city was situated on the main road from Shechem to Jerusalem.

2. A city in the territory of Simeon (1 Sam. 30:27). Scholars believe this Bethel is a variant reading for Bethul (Josh. 19:4) or Bethuel (1 Chr. 4:30). See BETHUEL No. 2.

Photo by Howard Vos

- Archaeologists excavate the ancient Canaanite sacrificial center at Bethel.

BETHER [BEE thur]—a small range of hills between Bethlehem and Jerusalem (Song 2:17).

BETHESDA [buh THEZ duh] (house of grace)—a pool in the northeastern part of Jerusalem, near the Sheep Gate. At this pool Jesus healed the man "who had an infirmity thirty-eight years" (John 5:5). Archaeologists have discovered two pools in this vicinity, 16$^1/_2$ and 19$^1/_2$ meters (55 and 65 feet) long respectively. The shorter pool had five arches over it with a porch beneath each arch, corresponding to the description given in John 5:2. The Crusaders later built a church on this site to commemorate the healing miracle that took place.

The man who had been lame for thirty-eight years came to the pool hoping to be cured by its miraculous waters; instead he was healed by the word of Jesus (John 5:1–15).

BETHLEHEM [BETH luh hem] (house of bread or house of [the god] Lahmu)—the name of two cities and possibly one man in the Bible:

1. The birthplace of Jesus Christ (see Map 3, B–4). Bethlehem was situated about 8 kilometers (5 miles) south of Jerusalem in the district known as Ephrathah in Judah (Mic. 5:2), a region known for its fertile hills and valleys.

   Bethlehem was the burial place of Rachel, the wife of Jacob (Gen. 35:19). The original home of Naomi and her family, it was also the setting for much of the Book of Ruth. Bethlehem also was the ancestral home of David (1 Sam. 17:12) and was rebuilt and fortified by King Rehoboam (2 Chr. 11:6).

   The most important Old Testament figure associated with Bethlehem was David, Israel's great king. At Bethlehem Samuel anointed David as Saul's successor (1 Sam. 16:1, 13). Although David made Jerusalem his capital city, he never lost his love for Bethlehem. Second Samuel 23:14–17 is a warm story about David's longing for a drink of water from the well of Bethlehem, which was a Philistine garrison at the time. But when three of David's mighty men broke through the Philistine lines to draw a drink of water, David refused to drink it because it symbolized "the blood of the men who went in jeopardy of their lives" (2 Sam. 23:17).

The prophet Micah predicted that Bethlehem would be the birthplace of the Messiah (Mic. 5:2), a prophecy quoted in Matthew 2:6. It is significant that the King of kings, who was of the house of David, was born in David's ancestral home. According to Luke 2:11, Jesus was born in "the city of David," Bethlehem. Christ, who is the Bread of Life, was cradled in a town whose name means "house of bread."

The Church of the Nativity, which marks the birthplace of the Savior, is one of the best authenticated sites in the Holy Land. The present structure, built over the cave area that served as a stable for the inn, goes back to the time of the Roman emperor Justinian (sixth century A.D.). This church replaces an earlier building, built in A.D. 330 by Helena, the mother of the Roman emperor Constantine.

2. A town in the land of Zebulun (Josh. 19:15).
3. A son of Salma, a descendant of Caleb (1 Chr. 2:51). As the "father" of Bethlehem, Salma may have been the founder of Bethlehem rather than being the father of a son named "Bethlehem."

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- Bethlehem, in the hill country of Judah—the home of David and the birthplace of Jesus (1 Sam. 16:1, 4; Luke 2:11).

BETHLEHEMITE [BETH luh hem ite]—a native or inhabitant of BETHLEHEM (1 Sam. 16:1).

BETHPHAGE [beth FAY jeh]—a village near Bethany, on or near the road from Jerusalem to Jericho. It has been described as a “suburb” of Jerusalem. The site is mentioned only in connection with Jesus’ triumphal entry (Matt. 21:1). From Bethphage Jesus sent two of His disciples into the next village to obtain a colt for Him to ride on the Sunday before His crucifixion.

BETHSAIDA [beth SAY ih duh] (house of fishing)—the name of one or possibly two cities in the New Testament:

1. Bethsaida, which was later called Julias, was situated 3 kilometers (2 miles) north of the Sea of Galilee and east of the Jordan River (see Map 6, C–2). The name Julias was given to it by the tetrarch Philip (Luke 3:1), after Julia, the daughter of Caesar Augustus. In the wilderness near Bethsaida, Jesus fed the 5,000 and healed the multitudes (Luke 9:10–17). It was also in Bethsaida that He restored sight to a blind man (Mark 8:22).
2. The gospels of Mark, Luke, and John seem to speak of another Bethsaida which was the home of Philip, Andrew, and Peter (John 1:44) and perhaps of James and John (Luke 5:10). This city was situated northwest of the Sea of Galilee in the fertile plain of Gennesaret (Mark 6:45, 53) near Capernaum (John 6:17) in the province of Galilee (John 12:21).

   Some scholars argue that there was only one city called Bethsaida. The Jewish historian Josephus identified the Bethsaida developed by Philip as being near the Jordan in “Lower Gaulanitis.” Yet, the gospels seem to indicate that there was another Bethsaida west of the Jordan River (for example, see Mark 6:45, 53). Philip, Peter, and Andrew were from “Bethsaida of Galilee” (John 12:21). Bethsaida–Julias could not be considered to be “of Galilee.” The close connection of Bethsaida with CHORAZIN (Matt. 11:21) and CAPERNAUM (Matt. 11:23) as the center of Jesus’ ministry in Galilee is strong evidence for another Bethsaida situated closer to them.

BETHUEL [beh THUE el] (house of God)—the name of a person and a place in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Nahor and Milcah. Bethuel also was Abraham’s nephew and the father of Laban and Rebekah (Gen. 22:22–23).
2. A city in the territory of Simeon near Hormah and Ziklag (1 Chr. 4:30; Josh. 19:4, Bethul, KJV, NKJV, NIV). Also see BETHEL No. 2.

BETHUL [beh THOOL]—a form of BETHUEL.

BETONIM [BET oh nim]—a town east of the Jordan River in northern Gad (Josh. 13:26), probably the same place as Khirbet Batneh or Batana.

BETROTHAL—a mutual promise or contract for a future marriage (Deut. 20:7; Jer. 2:2; Luke 1:27).

The selection of the bride was followed by the betrothal, not to be entirely equated with the modern concept of engagement. A betrothal was undertaken by a friend or agent representing the bridegroom and by the parents representing the bride. It was confirmed by oaths and was accompanied with presents to the bride and often to the bride’s parents.

The betrothal was celebrated by a feast. In some instances, it was customary for the bridegroom to place a ring, a token of love and fidelity, on the bride’s finger. In Hebrew custom, betrothal was actually part of the marriage process. A change of intention by one of the partners after he or she was betrothed was a serious matter, subject in some instances to penalty by fine.

The most important instance of betrothal in the Bible is the one between Joseph and Mary (Matt. 1:18–19). A Jewish betrothal could be dissolved only by the man’s giving the woman a certificate of divorce. A betrothal usually lasted for one year. During that year the couple were known as husband and wife, although they did not have the right to be united sexually.

Betrothal was much more closely linked with marriage than our modern engagement. But the actual marriage took place only when the bridegroom took the bride to his home and the marriage was consummated in the sexual union.

Also see MARRIAGE; WEDDINGS.

BEULAH [BUE luh] (married)—Isaiah’s name for the Promised Land after the captivity—a symbol of Israel’s future blessedness and prosperity (Is. 62:4).

BEWITCH—to hypnotize, charm, or cast an evil spell. The “foolish Galatians” (Gal. 3:1) had been bewitched, or led into theological and moral error, by the false teachings of the JUDAIZERS.

BEZAANANNIM [bee za ah NAN em]—a form of ZAANANNIM.

BEZAI [BEE zay eye]—the founder of a family of Israelites who returned from the captivity (Ezra 2:17; Neh. 7:23).

BEZALEEL [BEZ uh leel] (in the shadow of God)—the name of two Old Testament men:

1. The chief architect and designer of the tabernacle (Ex. 36:1–2; Bezalel, NASB, REB, NIV, NRSV). Along with Aholiab of the tribe of Dan, Bezaleel supervised the tabernacle’s construction and the manufacture of its furniture.
2. A man who divorced his pagan wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:30).

BEZALEL [BEZ uh lel]—a form of BEZALEEL.

BEZEK [BEE zeck] (lightning)—the name of a town and a place in the Old Testament:

1. A town in the territory allotted to the tribe of Judah (Judg. 1:4–5).
2. The place where Saul assembled his army on the eve of a great victory over Nahash the Ammonite. At this battle JABESH GILEAD was saved from the Ammonites (1 Sam. 11:8).

BEZER [BEE zur]—the name of a man and a city in the Old Testament:

1. A fortified city within the territory of Reuben (see Map 3, C–4), set apart by Moses as one of three cities of refuge east of the Jordan River (Deut. 4:40–43).
2. A son of Zophah, one of the chiefs of Asher (1 Chr. 7:37).

BIBLE, THE—the sacred Book, or collection of books, accepted by the Christian church as uniquely inspired by God, and thus authoritative, providing guidelines for belief and behavior.

Major Divisions. The Bible contains two major sections known as the Old Testament and the New Testament. The books of the Old Testament were written over a period of about 1,000 years in the Hebrew language, except for a few selected passages, which were written in Aramaic. The Old Testament tells of the preparation that was made for Christ's coming.

The New Testament was written over a period of about sixty years. The original language in which it was written was Greek. This portion of the Bible tells of Christ's coming, His life and ministry, and the growth of the early church.

The English word "testament" normally refers to a person's will, the document that bequeaths property to those who will inherit it after the owner's death. But the meaning of "testament" from both the Hebrew and the Greek languages is "settlement," "treaty," or "covenant." Of these three English words, COVENANT best captures the meaning of the word "testament." Thus, the two collections that make up the Bible can best be described as the books of the old covenant and the books of the new covenant.

The old covenant is the covenant sealed at Mount Sinai in the days of Moses. By this covenant, the living and true God, who had delivered the Israelites from slavery in Egypt, promised to bless them as His special people. They were also to worship Him alone as their God and to accept His law as their rule for life (Ex. 19:3–6; 24:3–8).

The new covenant was announced by Jesus as he spoke to His disciples in the upper room in Jerusalem the night before His death. When He gave them a cup of wine to drink, Jesus declared that this symbolized "the new covenant in My blood" (Luke 22:20; 1 Cor. 11:25).

Between the times of Moses and Jesus, the prophet Jeremiah foresaw a day when God would make a new covenant with His people. Under this new covenant, God would inscribe His laws on the hearts of people rather than on tablets of stone (Jer. 31:31–34). In the New Testament, this new covenant of which Jeremiah spoke is identified with the covenant inaugurated by Jesus (Heb. 8:6–13).

While these two covenants, the old and the new, launched great spiritual movements, Christians believe these movements are actually two phases of one great act through which God has revealed His will to His people and called for their positive response. The second covenant is the fulfillment of what was promised in the first.

In the form in which it has been handed down among the Jewish people, the Old Testament, or Hebrew Bible, contains three divisions: the Law, the Prophets, and the Writings. The Law consists of Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy; this section of the Old Testament is also known as the PENTATEUCH. The Prophets fall into two subdivisions: the former prophets (Joshua, Judges, First and Second Samuel, and First and Second Kings) and the latter prophets (Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and the Book of the Twelve Prophets—Hosea through Malachi). The rest of the books are gathered together in the Writings: Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Song of Solomon, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, Esther, Daniel, Ezra–Nehemiah (counted as one book), and First and Second Chronicles.

The arrangement of the Old Testament with which readers today are most familiar has been inherited from the pre-Christian Greek translation of the Old Testament (the SEPTUAGINT)—an arrangement that was also followed by the later Latin Bible (the Vulgate). This arrangement has four divisions: the Pentateuch, the historical books, poetry, and prophecy. The thirty-nine books in this latter arrangement, however, are exactly the same as the twenty-four of Jewish tradition.

The New Testament opens with five narrative books—the four gospels and the Acts of the Apostles. The gospels deal with the ministry, death, and resurrection of Jesus. The Book of Acts continues the story of the development of the early church across the next thirty years. Acts serves as a sequel to the gospels in general; originally it was written as a sequel to the Gospel of Luke in particular.

Twenty-one letters, or epistles, follow the historical narratives. Thirteen of these letters bear the name of the apostle Paul as writer, while the remaining eight are the work of other apostles or of authors associated with apostles. The last book in the New Testament, the Revelation of John, portrays through visions and symbolic language the accomplishment of God’s purpose in the world and the ultimate triumph of Christ.

◆

A Glance at the Major Divisons and Individual Books of the Bible

OLD TESTAMENT

Books of the Pentateuch, or the Law

BOOK	SUMMARY
Genesis	Creation and the establishment of the covenant relationship
Exodus	Deliverance of the people of Israel from slavery in Egypt
Leviticus	The ceremonial law
Numbers	Wandering of God's people in the wilderness
Deuteronomy	The second giving of the law by Moses before the people occupy the Promised Land

Books about the History of Israel

BOOK	SUMMARY
Joshua	The conquest and division of the Promised Land
Judges	The nation of Israel is rescued by a series of judges, or military leaders
Ruth	A beautiful story of God's love and care
1, 2 Samuel	The early history of Israel, including the reigns of Saul and David
1, 2 Kings	A political history of Israel, focusing on the reigns of selected kings from the time of Solomon to the captivity of the Jewish people by Babylonia
1, 2 Chronicles	A religious history of Israel, covering the same period of time as 2 Samuel and 1 and 2 Kings
Ezra	The return of the Jewish people from captivity in Babylonia
Nehemiah	The rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem after the exiles returned from Babylonia
Esther	God's care for His people under Gentile rule

Books of Wisdom

BOOK	SUMMARY
Job	An examination of the problems of evil and human suffering
Psalms	The song book or hymnal of ancient Israel
Proverbs	Wise sayings and observations designed to develop proper attitudes and behavior
Ecclesiastes	A philosophical description of the emptiness of life without God
Song of Solomon	A love song portraying the beauty of a human love relationship as a symbol of divine love

Books of the Major Prophets

BOOK	SUMMARY
Isaiah	The outstanding prophecy of condemnation and Messianic consolation
Jeremiah	A message of judgment against Judah's moral and spiritual decay

Lamentations	Five poems of lament over fallen Jerusalem
Ezekiel	A prophecy of judgment during the Babylonian Captivity
Daniel	A book of prophecy about the end times

Books of the Minor Prophets

BOOK	SUMMARY
Hosea	A message of Israel's condemnation followed by God's forgiveness
Joel	A prediction of foreign invasion as a form of judgment by God
Amos	Pronouncements of judgment against the nations, especially Israel
Obadiah	A book prophesying the total destruction of Edom
Jonah	A story about a reluctant prophet who led Nineveh to repentance
Micah	A prediction of judgment and a promise of Messianic restoration
Nahum	A prophecy of the destruction of Nineveh
Habakkuk	A prophet who questioned God and praised His approaching judgment against Judah
Zephaniah	A prediction of destructive judgment followed by tremendous blessing
Haggai	After the return from Babylonia, a call to rebuild the Temple
Zechariah	A Messianic prophecy calling for the completion of construction on the Temple
Malachi	A prophecy of destruction followed by Messianic blessing

NEW TESTAMENT

The Gospels

BOOK	SUMMARY
Matthew	Christ presented as the fulfillment of Old Testament Messianic prophecy
Mark	Probably the earliest of the gospels, focusing on Christ's ministry
Luke	Fullest biography of Christ, focusing on His perfection and ministry of salvation
John	The most symbolic gospel, which presents Christ as the divine Son of God

History of the Early Church

BOOK	SUMMARY
Acts	A history of the expansion of the early church

Epistles (Letters) of the Apostle Paul

BOOK	SUMMARY
Romans	An explanation of the Christian faith for both Jews and Gentiles, addressed to the church at Rome

1 Corinthians	Instructions to the church at Corinth dealing with problems among Christians
2 Corinthians	Paul’s defense and explanation of his apostleship
Galatians	An account of the necessity of justification by faith rather than works
Ephesians	A letter to the church at Ephesus explaining the believer’s position in Christ
Philippians	A joyful letter to the church at Philippi, telling of Paul’s conquering faith during imprisonment
Colossians	An account of the supremacy of Christ, written to the church at Colossae
1, 2 Thessalonians	Instructions to the church at Thessalonica about the coming of the Lord
1, 2 Timothy	Manuals of leadership for the young pastor at Ephesus
Titus	A manual of Christian conduct for church leaders, written to a young pastor on Crete
Philemon	An appeal for Christian unity and forgiveness for a runaway slave

General Epistles (Letters)

BOOK	SUMMARY
Hebrews	A presentation of Jesus Christ as High Priest, addressed to Jewish believers
James	Practical instructions for applied Christianity
1 Peter	Encouragement and comfort from Peter to suffering Christians
2 Peter	Peter’s warning against false teachers
1 John	John’s reminder of the full humanity of Christ
2 John	John’s letter of encouragement and approval
3 John	John’s personal note of appreciation to Gaius
Jude	A strong warning against false teachers
Revelation	An encouraging prophecy of the final days and God’s ultimate triumph

Authority of the Bible. The authority of the Bible follows naturally from its inspiration. It is implied by its title, “the Word of God.” It is the written record of the Word of God that came to prophets, apostles, and other spokesmen, and that “became flesh” in Jesus Christ. Christians believe Jesus Christ was the Word of God in a unique sense. Through Jesus, God communicated the perfect revelation of Himself to mankind (Heb. 1:1–3). For Christians the authority of the Bible is related to the authority of Christ. The Old Testament was the Bible that Jesus used—the authority to which He made constant appeal and whose teachings He followed and proclaimed. When Jesus was arrested in the Garden of Gethsemane and led away to His execution, He submitted with the words,

"The Scriptures must be fulfilled" (Mark 14:49). He saw His mission in the world as a fulfillment of the predictions of the Old Testament.

The New Testament presents the record of Jesus' life, teachings, death, and resurrection; a narrative of the beginning of the Christian church with the coming of the Holy Spirit; and the story of the extension of the gospel and the planting of the church during the following generation. It also contains the written teachings of Jesus' apostles and other early Christians who applied the principles of His teaching and redemptive work to their lives.

Revelation and Response. According to the Bible, God has made Himself known in a variety of ways. "The heavens declare the glory of God" (Ps. 19:1). "For since the creation of the world His invisible attributes are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even His eternal power and Godhead" (Rom. 1:20). But while God is revealed in His creation and through the inner voice of human conscience, the primary means by which He has made Himself known is through the Bible.

God has revealed Himself through His mighty acts and in the words of His messengers, or spokesmen. Either of these ways is incomplete without the other. In the Old Testament record, none of the mighty acts of God is emphasized more than the EXODUS—God's deliverance of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage. As He delivered His people, God repeatedly identified Himself as their redeemer God: "I am the LORD your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. You shall have no other gods before Me" (Ex. 20:2–3).

If they had been delivered with no explanation, the people of Israel would have learned little about the God who redeemed His people. The Israelites might have guessed that in such events as the plagues of Egypt and the parting of the waters of the Red Sea, some supernatural power was at work on their behalf. But they would not have known the nature of this power or God's purpose for them as a people.

God also communicated with His people, the nation of Israel, through Moses, to whom He had already made Himself known in the vision of the burning bush. God instructed Moses to tell his fellow Israelites what had been revealed to him. This was no impersonal force at work, but the God of their ancestors, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. In fulfillment of His promises to them, God was acting now on behalf of their descendants.

In communicating with His people, God revealed both His identity and His purpose. His purpose was to make the Israelites a nation dedicated to His service alone. This message, conveyed to the Israelites through Moses, would have been ineffective if God had not delivered them personally. On the other hand, His deliverance would have been meaningless without the message. Together both constituted the Word of God to the Israelites—the saving message of the God who both speaks and acts.

This pattern of God's mighty acts and the prophetic word interacting with each other continues throughout the course of biblical history. The Babylonian CAPTIVITY is a good example of this process. A succession of prophets warned the people that if they did not mend their ways, captivity would come on them as judgment. But even during the years of the captivity the prophets continued to speak, encouraging the captives and promising that God would deliver them from their plight.

The prophets were God's primary spokesmen to the people of Israel in Old Testament times. But they were not His only messengers. Priests and sages, or wise men, were other agents through whom God's will was made known. The teachings of many of these messengers are preserved in the Bible.

In addition to God's revelation of Himself through the Bible, God's Word also records the response of those to whom the revelation was given. Too often the response was unbelief and disobedience. But at other times, people responded in faith and obedience. The Psalms, especially, proclaim the grateful response of people who experienced the grace and righteousness of God. These faithful people sometimes voiced their appreciation in words addressed directly to God. At other times they reported to others what God had come to mean to them.

In the New Testament writings, revelation and response came together in the person of Jesus Christ. On the one hand, Jesus was God's perfect revelation of Himself—He was the divine Word in human form (John 1:1, 14). His works of mercy and power portrayed God in action, especially His supreme act of sacrifice to bring about "the redemption that is in Christ Jesus" (Rom. 3:24). His teaching expressed the mind of God.

The words and acts of Jesus also proclaimed the meaning and purpose of His works. For example, His act of casting out demons “with the finger of God” (Luke 11:20) was a token that the kingdom of God had come upon them. He also declared that His death, which he interpreted as the fulfillment of prophetic Scripture (Mark 14:49), was “a ransom for many” (Mark 10:45).

In his life and ministry, Jesus also illustrated the perfect human response of faith and obedience to God. Jesus was “the Apostle [God’s Messenger to us] and High Priest [our Representative with God] of our confession” (Heb. 3:1). Thus, Jesus performed the mighty acts of God and He spoke authoritatively as God’s Messenger and Prophet.

Preservation of the Bible. The Bible is a written, authoritative record by which any teaching or theory may be judged. But behind the writing lay periods of time when these messages were circulated in spoken form. The stories of the patriarchs were passed from generation to generation by word of mouth before they were written. The messages of the prophets were delivered orally before they were fixed in writing. Narratives of the life and ministry of Christ were repeated orally for two or three decades before they were given literary form. But in part, the Bible owes its preservation to the fact that oral narratives were eventually reduced to writing. Just as God originally inspired the Bible, He has used this means to preserve His Word for future generations.

The first person in the Bible to write anything down was Moses. God instructed Moses to write as a permanent memorial the divine vow that the name of Amalek would be blotted out (Ex. 17:14). From that time until the end of the New Testament age, the writing of the many books and parts of the Bible continued.

None of the original biblical documents—referred to by scholars as the “original autographs”—has survived. No scrap of parchment or papyrus bearing the handwriting of any of the biblical authors has been discovered. But before the original documents disappeared, they were copied. Scribes exercised the utmost care as they laboriously and lovingly copied the Scriptures and handed them down from generation to generation. Their best copies are the texts on which current translations of the Bible are based.

The process of copying and recopying the Bible has continued to our time. Until the middle of the 15th century A.D., all the copying was done by hand. Then, with the invention of printing in Europe, copies could be made in greater quantities by using this new process. Each copy of the Bible had to be produced slowly by hand with the old system, but now the printing press could produce thousands of copies in a short time. This made the Scriptures available to many people, rather than just the few who could afford handmade copies.

The older handwritten copies of Bible texts are called manuscripts. Early manuscripts for the books of the Bible were written on papyrus or skin. Papyrus was a type of ancient paper manufactured from a reed plant that grew in the Nile Valley and similar environments. Papyrus was inexpensive, but it was not very durable. It rotted quickly when exposed to dampness.

The ancient papyrus manuscripts that have been discovered were found in the dry sands of Egypt and other arid places. Great quantities of inscribed papyri have been recovered from the Egyptian sands during the last hundred years dating from the period shortly before and after the beginning of the Christian era, about A.D. 30. A few scraps of papyri containing ancient texts of the Bible have been among the recovered manuscripts.

The skins of animals proved to be a much more durable writing material than papyrus. Many different writing materials were manufactured from such skins. Some were a coarse form of leather. Others were subjected to a special refining process, emerging as a writing material known as parchment. Vellum, another valued writing material, was made from calfskin. Some of the most important manuscripts of the Bible were written on vellum.

The Canon of the Bible. The word “canon” means a “rod”—specifically, a rod with graduated marks used for measuring length. This word refers to the list of individual books that were eventually judged as authoritative and included in the Old Testament and the New Testament.

The early formation of the canon of the Old Testament is not easy to trace. Its threefold division in its early history—the Law, the Prophets, and the Writings—may reflect the three stages of its formation. From the beginning, the Law was accepted, even if it was not always obeyed. Evidence of its acceptance would include Moses’ reading of “the Book of the Covenant” to the people at Mount Sinai and the people’s response, “All that the LORD has said we will do, and be obedient” (Ex. 24:7).

Further evidence of acceptance of the Law includes the discovery of the “Book of the Law,” probably the Book of Deuteronomy, in the temple of Jerusalem during King Josiah's reign and the religious reform that followed the discovery (2 Kin. 22:8—23:25). Also, following the return of the Jewish people from the Babylonian captivity, "the Book of the Law of Moses" was read to the people of Jerusalem under Ezra's direction. This book became the constitution of their new nation (Neh. 8:1–18).

The second division of the Old Testament accepted by the Jewish people was the Prophets. The prophets' words were preserved from the beginning by their disciples, or by others who recognized the prophets as messengers of God. In general, their words were probably written shortly after they were spoken, for their authority as God's messengers came before their widespread acceptance by the Jewish people. The words of the prophets were not regarded as authoritative because they were included in the Old Testament; they were included because they were considered to be authoritative.

The third division of the Hebrew Old Testament, the Writings, may have remained "open" longer than the first two. Scholars know less about the formation of this division than the first two.

The "Bible" Jesus used was the Hebrew Old Testament. He left no instructions about forming a new collection of authoritative writings to stand beside the books that He and His disciples accepted as God's Word. The Old Testament was also the Bible of the early church, but it was the Old Testament as fulfilled by Jesus. Early Christians interpreted the Old Testament in the light of His person and work. This new perspective controlled the early church's interpretation to such a degree that, while Jews and Christians shared the same Bible, they understood it so differently that they might almost have been using two different Bibles.

The works and words of Jesus were first communicated in spoken form. The apostles and their associates proclaimed the gospel by word of mouth. Paul taught the believers orally in the churches he founded when he was present. But when he was absent, he communicated through his letters.

Quite early in its history, the church felt a need for a written account of the teachings of Jesus. His teachings did provide the basis for the new Christian way of life. But the church grew so large that many converts were unable to rely on the instructions of those who had heard and memorized the teachings of Jesus. From about A.D. 50 onward, probably more than one written collection of sayings of Jesus circulated in the churches. The earliest written gospel appears to have been the Gospel of Mark, written about A.D. 64.

An individual gospel, a letter from an apostle, or even several works circulating independently, would not amount to a canon, or an authoritative list of books. A canon implies a collection of writings. There is evidence that two collections of Christian writings circulated among the churches at the beginning of the second century. One of these was the gospel collection—the four writings commonly called the four gospels. The other collection was the Pauline collection, or the letters of the apostle Paul. The anonymous letter to the Hebrews was added to this second collection at an early date.

Early Christians continued to accept the Old Testament as authoritative. But they could interpret the Old Testament in the light of Jesus' deeds and words only if they had a reliable record of them. So, alongside Moses and the prophets, they had these early writings about Jesus and letters from the apostles, who had known Jesus in the flesh.

When officials of the early church sought to make a list of books about Jesus and the early church that they considered authoritative, they retained the Old Testament, on the authority of Jesus and His apostles. Along with these books they recognized as authoritative the writings of the new age—four gospels, or biographies on the life and ministry of Jesus; the thirteen letters of Paul; and letters of other apostles and their companions. The gospel collection and the apostolic collection were joined together by the Book of Acts, which served as a sequel to the gospel story, as well as a narrative background for the earlier epistles. The whole was concluded by the Book of Revelation.

The primary standard applied to a book was that it must be written either by an apostle or by someone close to the apostles. This guaranteed that their writing about Jesus and the early church would have the authenticity of an eyewitness account. As in the earliest phase of the church's existence, "the apostles' doctrine" (Acts 2:42) was the basis of its life and thought. The apostolic writings formed the charter, or foundation documents, of the church.

None of the books written after the death of the apostles were included in the New Testament, although early church officials recognized they did have some value as inspirational documents. The fact that they were written later ruled them out for consideration among the church's foundation documents. These other writings might be suitable for reading aloud in church because of their edifying character, but only the apostolic writings carried ultimate authority. They alone could be used as the basis of the church’s belief and practice.

Behind the Bible is a thrilling story of how God revealed Himself and His will to human spokesmen and then acted throughout history to preserve His Word and pass it along to future generations. In the words of the prophet Isaiah, “The grass withers, the flower fades, but the word of our God stands forever” (Is. 40:8).

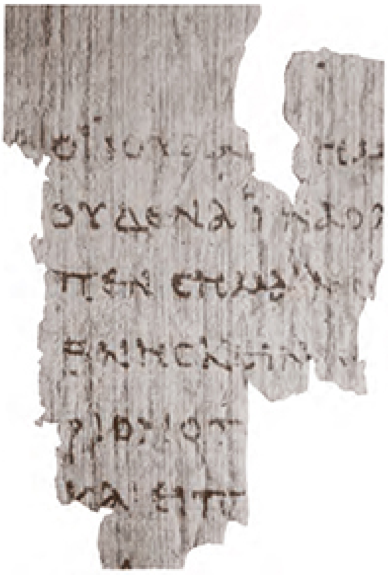

Photo by Howard Vos

• Papyrus fragments of portions of John 18 that date from about A.D. 125–150

Photo: Levant Photo Service

• Hills near the village of Anathoth, home of the prophet Jeremiah (Jer. 1:1).

BIBLE, INTERPRETATION OF THE, OR HERMENEUTICS—the science and art of biblical interpretation. Correct Bible interpretation should answer the question, "How can I understand what this particular passage means?" Because there are rules that govern its use, it is a science. Because knowing the rules is not enough, it also is an art. Practice to learn how to use the rules is also required.

The question of how to interpret the Bible is not a minor issue. It is, in a sense, one of the battlegrounds for our souls. If Satan had a list of what he does not want us to do, Bible study would be at the top, along with prayer and worship. Through study of Scripture we learn who Jesus is and are enabled to become like Him. How can we become like Him, if we do not know what He is like? Devotional studies are important, but they must result from a serious study of Scripture. The apostle Paul prayed that the Colossians might be "filled with the knowledge of His will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding" (Col. 1:9).

Knowing Scripture as well as obeying it are the twin foundations of a godly life. A godly life produces the further desire to study God's Word.

Bible interpretation done properly, therefore, takes the student from study to application back to study and on to further application in a mounting spiral toward God. Satan's attempt to take away our desire to study Scripture is nothing less than an attempt to remove the basis of our spiritual growth and stability.

The Basic Principles of Bible Study. Six basic principles are at the heart of a sound method of biblical interpretation.

1. Because Scripture is a divine book, and because of our limitation as humans, prayer is an absolute necessity as we study the Bible. Paul teaches that the non-Christian and the spiritually immature Christian are limited in their ability to know Christian things (1 Cor. 2:14—3:3). Therefore, we must pray that God will bridge the gap that separates us from understanding spiritual things, by having the Holy Spirit teach us (John 14:26; 16:13). Without this illumination or insight from God's Spirit, we cannot learn. This need for insight was the concept Paul referred to when he told Timothy to "reflect on what I am saying, for the Lord will give you insight into all this" (2 Tim. 2:7, NIV).
2. The Bible is also a human book and, to a degree, must be interpreted like any other book. This brings us to the principle of common sense. For example, the grammatical–historical method of studying the Bible instructs us (a) to look at the grammar of a passage carefully to see what it says, and (b) to understand a biblical statement in light of its historical background. We understand a historical statement as a straightforward statement and do not change its literal, grammatical sense. This is "common sense."

   Another example of the common sense principle is illustrated when Jesus says Christians can have anything for which they ask (John 15:7). Common sense tells us that there must be some limitation on this statement because we realize that Christians in fact do not have whatever they would like. (First John 5:14 confirms that the limitation is God's will.) Using the common sense principle in this way can be dangerous because it could become an excuse for cutting out any portion of Scripture we do not happen to like. But if our common sense is controlled by God, it is a valid principle to use for interpreting the Bible.

3. We interpret the Bible properly when we learn to ask the right questions of the text. The problem here is that many people do not know what the right questions are, or they are too lazy to learn. Biblical interpretation is a science, and the rules it uses take time, energy, and a serious commitment to learn. But when learned, there is much more satisfaction in asking the right questions than in merely guessing.
4. The primary rule of biblical interpretation is "context." This cannot be emphasized too strongly. If the Bible student would merely let a passage speak for itself within the context of the paragraph, chapter, or book, the majority of all errors in interpretation would be avoided.

   The problem is our bias, or our subjectivity. Many times we approach a passage thinking we already understand it. In the process we read our own meaning into the passage. This is called eisegesis. (Eis is a Greek preposition meaning "into.") But interpreting the Bible correctly demands that we listen to what the text itself is saying, and then draw the meaning out of the passage. This is called exegesis. (Ex is a Greek preposition meaning "out of.") If we let a passage be defined by what it and the surrounding verses say, then we have taken a large step toward interpreting the Bible properly. Only by watching the context carefully and by letting the passage speak for itself do we give Scripture the respect it deserves.

   Of course, it is impossible to dismiss totally our own bias and subjectivity. Our interpretation will always be colored by our culture and our opinions about the passage, or perhaps by our theological beliefs, which are partially based on the passage. But this should not discourage our attempt to let the passage speak for itself as freely as possible, without being weighed down with our personal opinions and views.
5. These four key words—observation, interpretation, evaluation, and application—are the heart of all approaches to finding out what the Bible means. They provide the structure of what questions you ask of the text, and when.

   Observation: Do I understand the basic facts of the passage such as the meaning of all the words? Interpretation: What did the author mean in his own historical setting? Evaluation: What does this passage mean in today's culture? Application: How can I apply what I have learned to how I live my life?

6. Interpreting the Bible correctly is a two-step process. We must first discover what the passage meant in the day and age of the author. Then we must discover its message for us in today's culture. Observation and interpretation apply to the first step; evaluation and application apply to the second.

   Why are these two steps important? First, the Bible was not actually written directly to us, and it makes sense to put ourselves in the shoes of the original audience if we are to understand its message properly. Second, these steps force us to understand the meaning of the passage before we apply it to our lives. Surprisingly, this step is often overlooked. Third, the two steps separate us from the text, thereby helping to prevent eisegesis, since it separates what the text says from how it affects us today.

The Four Stages of Biblical Interpretation. Using the four key words in their proper sequence, we are ready to interpret the Bible correctly.

1. Stage one: observation—The questions asked in this stage are, Do I understand all the facts in this passage? Do I know the context before and after this passage? Do I know the meanings of all the words? Do I understand the general flow of the discussion? Do I understand the cultural background? It is necessary to clear up all the factual problems before moving into the theological meaning of the passage.

   For example, in 1 Corinthians 8 the apostle Paul discusses eating meat that had been offered to idols. What is the background? When meat was sacrificed to an idol, that which was not eaten by the priests was sold at the market. Some Corinthian Christians said it was permissible to eat the meat since idols are nothing but wood and stone. Others thought it was not permissible because it might appear they were still involved in pagan worship. Only after we understand these facts may we go on to the next stage of interpretation.
2. Stage two: interpretation—The basic question asked in this stage is, What did the author mean in his own historical setting? We must put ourselves in the shoes of Scripture's original audience. To answer this question, there are two further questions we may ask. The first is, What does the passage actually say? Many times we forget to look carefully at what a passage says. Some cite Matthew 5:21–22 as proof that to think bad is just as wrong as doing it. Is anger as bad as murder? Of course not. (Common sense tells us that, if nothing else.) But the text does not actually say they are the same. It says the law against murder is not fully obeyed by mere outward obedience, but by maintaining the proper attitude of not being angry, which in turn prohibits the outward act of murder.

The second question is, Does the context help define the meaning of the passage? For example, what does Scripture mean when it says, "There is no God" (Ps. 53:1)? Context shows this is a statement made by a fool. What does Paul mean when he says Jesus will return like "a thief in the night" (1 Thess. 5:2)? Context shows it means His coming will be sudden (v. 3). Should women remain totally silent in the church (1 Cor. 14:34)? No, since the context of 1 Corinthians 11:5 shows that women may pray or prophesy.

Does Jesus' statement, "When you fast, do not be like the hypocrites" (Matt. 6:16) demand that His disciples fast? No, because Matthew 9:14 shows that Jesus' disciples did not fast while He was alive. (The beauty of using Scripture to interpret Scripture is that when the Bible answers its own questions, then we know the answer is correct.) The twin matters of what the text actually says and the passage's context help complete the second stage of interpretation.

There are times when even these two questions will not help us understand the meaning of a passage. Sometimes we have to read between the lines and make an educated guess as to what the passage means. This is fine when necessary. But we must remember that we are guessing, and we must keep an open mind to other possible interpretations.

Integrity is also a necessary element in all biblical interpretation. If we tell someone about what a friend said, we should try to be as accurate as possible. If we are not sure about a certain point, we should say, "I think this is what he said." We all do this with our friends. So why then, when we interpret Scripture, do many of us lose that integrity? Why do we not read the text carefully? Why do we read between the lines, make fanciful interpretations that are more a product of our imagination than reverent study, and then insist that this is what the text actually says?

In interpreting the Bible, we must never forget whose letters we are reading. They have come from God Himself, and they demand respect. They demand to speak for themselves. They demand that we be honest and have integrity. We must not put our guesswork on the same level as the words of God.

How do we interpret 1 Corinthians 8? Once we understand the facts and background of the passage, once we have asked what the passage actually is saying and what is its context, then we see that Paul is teaching the principle of voluntarily refraining from a practice that, although not wrong in and of itself, might be harmful to a fellow Christian. We have completed the first step of interpretation. We have seen what the passage meant in the day and age of the author.

3. Stage three: evaluation—The stage of evaluation asks, What does the passage signify in today's culture? It is the issue of whether a passage of Scripture applies to us today, or whether it is limited to the culture in which it was originally written.

The question raised by the evaluation process is answered one of two ways. Either the passage is applied directly to our culture, or it must be reapplied because of cultural differences. The vast majority of New Testament teaching can be applied directly to twenty-first-century culture. If we love God, regardless of when or where we live, then we must obey His commandments (John 14:15). This teaching is true in any culture for all times.

But sometimes a biblical teaching is directed so specifically to the culture of the ancient world that another culture cannot understand it. For example, Western culture today generally does not sacrifice meat to idols, and therefore the meaning of 1 Corinthians 8 may be lost. How then do we evaluate its meaning for us?

It is helpful at this point to define two terms. A "cultural expression" is a statement that can be understood only within a certain cultural context. An "eternal principle" is a principle that God uses to govern the world regardless of culture. "I will never again eat meat, lest it make my brother stumble" (1 Cor. 8:13), is a cultural expression because it is understandable only within those cultures that offer meat to idols. "God is love" (1 John 4:8) is an eternal principle because it is understandable in all cultures.

But we should clearly understand that every cultural expression in the Bible is the result of some eternal principle. And even though a cultural expression cannot be carried over directly to another culture, the eternal principle behind it can. Just because it is cultural does not mean it can be ignored.

A good example of this important principle might be the teaching that we should always be polite when we are guests for dinner. In America, this principle could express itself as “Eat all the food on the table lest you insult your host’s cooking.” But in Uganda it is important that food be left on the serving plates lest it appear your host has not sufficiently provided for you.

Therefore, whereas the principle shows itself in America as “Eat all the food,” the same principle shows itself in Uganda as “Leave some of the food on the serving plates.” The task of the Biblical interpreter is to look through any cultural expression to the eternal principle that gave rise to it, and to reapply the principle in his own culture. This is the process of evaluation. Is it cultural? If it is, how does the eternal principle that gave rise to the cultural expression reapply in the new culture?

Two implications can be drawn from this. First, if a statement is cultural, then there must be a principle that gave rise to the cultural statement. But if no principle can be found, then what was thought to be cultural must in fact be an eternal principle. Second, if the interpreter is not sure whether a statement is cultural, would it not be better to be safe and view the statement as eternal, lest a command of God be ignored?

We should also remember that just as a biblical passage can be set in its culture, so interpreters are likewise controlled to some extent by their own culture. Many people today do not believe that the biblical accounts of miracles are true. For example, some scholars argue that miracles were a part of first-century culture and were believed by the people in Jesus’ day. This is the twenty-first century and people do not believe in miracles in this culture. But these scholars’ views on the impossibility of the supernatural are likewise influenced by the materialistic, science-oriented culture in which they live. We must be careful not to allow our own culture to influence our view of Scripture.

4. Stage four: application—Up to this point, the process of interpreting the Bible has been academic. But it is absolutely essential to recognize that the purpose and goal of Bible study is a godly life. Study is not complete until we put into practice what we have learned.

The question to ask at this stage of interpretation is, “How can I apply what I have learned to how I live my life?” The academic and the practical are thus fused into a meaningful approach to the Bible’s message. Some people dismiss the academic as boring and trivial. Others reject the application as unnecessary. Both extremes are equally wrong. The Bible interpreter must walk the tightrope between these approaches. A three-act play is unsatisfying without the final act. The last act, without the first two, does not make sense. Sometimes in Bible study it is necessary to emphasize the academic when the passage is difficult to understand, or to emphasize the application when the passage’s practical relevance is confusing. But one of these approaches should never be used to the exclusion of the other.

Special Problems in Interpreting the Bible. Scripture, like any other book, uses figures of speech and different types of literature that can be difficult to understand. These call for special rules for the Bible interpreter.

1. Hyperbole—A hyperbole is an exaggeration used for effect—an overstatement. “I’m so hungry I could eat a horse” obviously is not literally true. It is an exaggeration used to convey the idea of extreme hunger. Most hyperboles are easily recognized because we use them all the time. But sometimes they are not. For example, the apostle John made a statement something like this in his gospel: If everything Jesus ever did were written down, the world could not hold all the books that would be written (John 21:25). Surely John expected us to see that he was overstating his point. It is a graphic picture of how much Jesus did, but one painted in hyperbolic fashion.
2. Metaphor—A simile makes a comparison by using a word such as “like”: “Life is like a circus.” A metaphor is a similar comparison, except that it omits the word “like”: “The world is a stage.” Metaphors such as “I am the door” (John 10:9) are easily recognized. But what about Jesus’ words at the Last Supper: “This is My body” (Luke 22:19)? Jesus probably intended this statement to be understood metaphorically rather than literally or physically.
3. Anthropomorphism—Do rivers have hands to clap (Ps. 98:8)? Does God have eyes (Ps. 33:18), although He is spirit (John 4:24)?

Anthropomorphisms in the Bible describe nonhuman objects as though they have human characteristics. But how do we understand those verses that say God “repents” (Ex. 32:12; Jer. 18:8; relents, regrets, NKJV)? Does God change His mind? Or do these verses describe God from a human point of view?

4. Parable—“Once upon a time in a faraway land there lived a fairy princess.” We do not understand this sentence in a scientific or literal sense. We recognize that it comes from a certain type of literature, and thus we do not interpret it historically. Different types of literature fall into different categories, each of which has its own rules of interpretation.

   Parables are one type of literature in the Bible. We interpret them properly by picturing the story in our minds as if we lived in Jesus’ day, finding the one main point, and not giving meaning to all the details. The difference between allegory and parable is important to understand. An allegory is a totally made-up story. Even the details of an allegory may be significant. Pilgrim’s Progress is the classic example of allegory in which even minute details refer to other things. But a parable is a story taken from everyday life. In a parable the speaker may not treat the details as important. They may be given to help the reader picture the situation more clearly.

   Although a few parables have allegorical elements, most parables teach only one main point. The parable of the sower (Matt. 13:3–23) is part allegory because the sower, seed, ground, birds, sun, and weeds all stand for something else: Jesus, the Word, Jesus’ audience, Satan, persecution, and the cares of the world. But what about the parable of the judge (Luke 18:1–14)?

   If the woman represents the disciple, is God the unjust judge? Is the purpose of the parable of the rich man and Lazarus (Luke 16:19–31) to teach that you cannot travel between heaven and hell? The standard procedure for interpreting parables is to find the one main point and to view the details of the story simply as illustrations, but not as the direct teaching of the parable.

5. Prophecy—There are two points to remember when interpreting prophecy. The first is that what the prophet foresaw as one event may actually be two or more. The Old Testament thought of the “Day of the Lord” (Is. 2:12) as one event. But the last days actually began at Pentecost (Acts 2:20) and will conclude at Christ's return (2 Thess. 2:2).

The second point to remember is that although much Old Testament prophecy is fulfilled in the New Testament, much was fulfilled in the Old Testament and then again in the New. Isaiah's prophecy in 7:14 was fulfilled in Isaiah's day (Is. 8:8), and again by Jesus' birth (Matt. 1:23). Isaiah's prophecy had a more complete meaning in that it was to be fulfilled again at a more distant time in the future.

6. Poetry—Hebrew poetry does not concentrate on rhythm or rhyme. It expresses itself by parallelism. Two phrases are joined so that the second repeats the first with different words (Ps. 95:2), the second states the opposite of the first (Prov. 15:5), or the second adds a new thought to the first (Prov. 15:3). Sometimes the couplet will be arranged with the second phrase reversing the order of the first (Prov. 15:21). Therefore, when interpreting poetry, the Bible student must recognize the type of parallelism being used, since the phrases interpret each other. In addition, poetry often stresses emotional flow rather than logical precision.

7. Apocalyptic—This type of literature in the Bible is the most misunderstood by interpreters today because it is no longer used. It has specific rules of interpretation. Its most noticeable characteristic is its use of strange, symbolic figures, such as those in the Book of Revelation.

   The key to interpreting these figures lies in the Book of Revelation itself. In 1:20 the seven stars are interpreted as representing the seven angels, and the seven lampstands stand for the seven churches. In 17:9–10 the seven-headed beast stands for the seven hills, and in 17:18 the woman is identified as the city that rules the earth. Therefore, to understand APOCALYPTIC LITERATURE, and Revelation in particular, we must interpret the imagery as very figurative. The images are describing things and spiritual realities in figurative language.

   Some might object that this is not understanding the Bible literally. But since the Book of Revelation interprets its own images in figurative terms, the images must serve as figurative descriptions of real things. Therefore, to understand the book literally, we must understand it figuratively.

8. Wisdom—Old Testament wisdom literature is found mainly in Job, Proverbs, and Ecclesiastes. Since wisdom gives practical hints on how to cope with life and its problems, it often consists of rules of thumb rather than universally applicable promises. For example, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it" (Prov. 22:6) is not a categorical imperative that works in every situation. Biblical wisdom sayings must therefore be used with due caution and great discernment (Prov. 1:1–6).

In interpreting the Bible, we must remember from whom it comes. We are handling the Lord's message. This demands an attitude of respect and our willingness to subject ourselves to its authority.

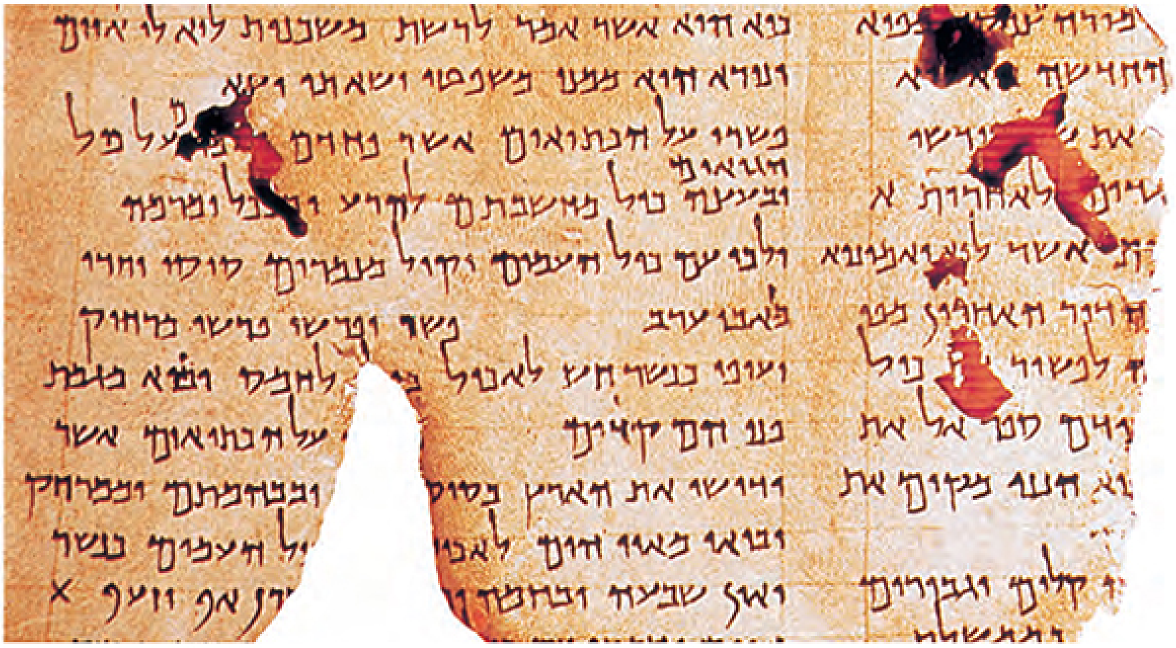

Photo by Howard Vos

• Portions of a commentary on the Book of Habakkuk—one of the ancient documents included among the Dead Sea Scrolls.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Starting blocks for runners at a stadium in the Greek city of Delphi. The apostle Paul used imagery from these races in his writings (2 Tim. 4:7).

Photo: Levant Photo Service

• The mound, or tell, of Mizpah—an ancient fortified city in the Kingdom of Judah during King Asa’s time (1 Kin. 15:22).

Photo: Levant Photo Service

• Arch over a Roman road near the New Testament city of Thessalonica. The modern city is now called Salonika.

BIBLE VERSIONS AND TRANSLATIONS—The Bible was written across a period of several centuries in the languages of Hebrew and Aramaic (Old Testament) and Greek (New Testament). With the changing of nations and cultures across the centuries, these original writings have been translated many times to make the Bible available in different languages. Following are the major versions and translations of the Bible that have been issued during the past 2,200 years. Just as God inspired people to write His Word, He also has preserved the Bible by using human instruments to pass it on to succeeding generations.

Ancient Versions. Ancient versions of the Bible are those that were produced in classical languages such as Greek, Syriac, and Latin. The following ancient versions were issued during a 600-year period from about 200 B.C. to A.D. 400.

Greek—The oldest Bible translation in the world was made in Alexandria, Egypt, where the Old Testament was translated from Hebrew into Greek for the benefit of the Greek-speaking Jews of that city. A Jewish community had existed in Alexandria almost from its foundation by ALEXANDER the Great in 331 B.C. In two or three generations this community had forgotten its native Palestinian language. These Jews realized they needed the Hebrew Scriptures rendered into the only language they knew—Greek. The first section of the Hebrew Bible to be translated into Greek was the PENTATEUCH, or the first five books of the Old Testament, some time before 200 B.C. Other parts were translated during the next century.

This version is commonly called the SEPTUAGINT, from septuaginta, the Latin word for seventy (LXX). This name was selected because of a tradition that the Pentateuch was translated into Greek by about seventy elders of Israel who were brought to Alexandria especially for this purpose.

Only a few fragments of this version survive from the period before Christ. Most copies of the Greek Old Testament belong to the Christian era and were made by Christians. The John Rylands University Library, Manchester, England, owns a fragment of Deuteronomy in Greek from the second century B.C. Another fragment of the same book in Greek dating from about the same time exists in Cairo. Other fragments of the Septuagint have been identified among the texts known as the DEAD SEA SCROLLS, discovered in 1947.

When Christianity penetrated the world of the Greek-speaking Jews, and then the Gentiles, the Septuagint was the Bible used for preaching the gospel. Most of the Old Testament quotations in the New Testament are taken from this Greek Bible. In fact, the Christians adopted the Septuagint so wholeheartedly that the Jewish people lost interest in it. They produced other Greek versions that did not lend themselves so easily to Christian interpretation.

The Septuagint thus became the “authorized version” of the early Gentile churches. To this day it is the official version of the Old Testament used in the Greek Orthodox Church. After the books of the New Testament were written and accepted by the early church, they were added to the Old Testament Septuagint to form the complete Greek version of the Bible.

The Septuagint was based on a Hebrew text much older than most surviving Hebrew manuscripts of the Old Testament. Occasionally, this Greek Old Testament helps scholars to reconstruct the wording of a passage where it has been lost or miscopied by scribes as the text was passed down across the centuries. An early instance of this occurs in Genesis 4:8, where Cain's words to Abel, "Let us go out to the field," are reproduced from the Septuagint in the NRSV, NIV, and other modern versions. These words had been lost from the standard Hebrew text, but they were necessary to complete the sense of the English translation.

Aramaic targums—The word targum means "translation." After their return from CAPTIVITY in Babylonia, many Jews spoke Aramaic, a sister language, instead of the pure Hebrew of their ancestors. They found it difficult to follow the reading of the Hebrew Scriptures at worship. So they adopted the practice of providing an oral paraphrase into Aramaic when the Scriptures were read in Hebrew. The person who provided this paraphrase, the Turgeman, was an official in the synagogue.

One of the earliest examples of such a paraphrase occurs in Nehemiah 8:8. Because of the work of Ezra, the Pentateuch, or the first five books of the Old Testament, was officially recognized as the constitution of the Jewish state during the days of the Persian Empire. This constitution was read publicly to the whole community after their return to Jerusalem. The appointed readers "read distinctly [or, with interpretation] from the book, in the Law of God; and they gave the sense, and helped them understand the reading."

The phrase "with interpretation" appears as a marginal reading in several modern versions (for example, the RSV), but it probably indicates exactly what happened. The Hebrew text was read, followed by an oral paraphrase in Aramaic so everyone would be sure to understand.

This practice continued as standard in the Jewish synagogue for a long time. The targum, or paraphrase of the Hebrew, was not read from a written document, lest some in the congregation might think the authoritative law was being read. Some religious leaders apparently held that the targum should not be written down, even for use outside the synagogue.

In time, all objections to a written targum disappeared. A number of such paraphrases began to be used. Official Jewish recognition was given to two in particular—the Targum of Onkelos on the Pentateuch and the Targum of Jonathan on the Prophets. Some were far from being word-for-word translations. As expanded paraphrases, they included interpretations and comments on the biblical text.

Some New Testament writers indicate knowledge of targumic interpretations in their quotations from the Old Testament. For example, "Vengeance is Mine, I will repay" (Rom. 12:19; Heb. 10:30) is a quotation from Deuteronomy 32:35; but it conforms neither to the Hebrew text nor to the Greek text of the Septuagint. This particular phrase comes from the Targum. Again, the words of Ephesians 4:8, "When He ascended on high, He led captivity captive, and gave gifts to men," are taken from Psalm 68:18. But the Hebrew and Septuagint texts speak of the receiving of gifts. Only the Targum on this text mentions the giving of gifts.

Syriac—The term Syriac describes the Eastern Aramaic language spoken in Northern Mesopotamia, the land between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers northeast of the land of Palestine. Large Jewish settlements were located there. At some point, the Old Testament must have been translated into Syriac for their benefit.

As Christianity expanded, this area became an important center of Christian life and action. The Christians in northern Mesopotamia inherited the Syriac Old Testament and added a Syriac translation of the New Testament to it. This "authorized version" of the Syriac Bible is called the Peshitta (the "common" or "simple" version). In its present form, it goes back to the beginning of the fifth century A.D. But there were earlier Syriac translations of parts of the New Testament. Two important manuscripts of the Gospels exist in an Old Syriac version, which probably goes back to about the second century A.D.

The Syriac-speaking church was very missionary-minded. It carried the gospel into Central Asia, evangelizing India and parts of China. It translated portions of the Bible from Syriac into the local languages of the areas it evangelized. The earliest forms of the Bible in the languages of Armenia and Georgia (north of Armenia) were based on the Syriac version.

Coptic—Coptic was a highly developed form of the native language of the ancient Egyptians. Christianity was planted in Egypt while some of the twelve apostles were still alive, although there is no record of how it was carried there. With the development of a Christian community in Egypt, the need arose for a Bible in the Coptic tongue. To this day the Coptic Church of Egypt uses the Bohairic version of the Coptic Bible, translated in the early centuries from the Septuagint and the Greek New Testament into the dialect of Lower Egypt. Earlier still is the Sahidic version, in the dialect of Upper Egypt.

Gothic—Across the Rhine and Danube frontiers of the Roman Empire lived a race of people known as the Goths. The evangelization of the Ostrogoths, those who lived north of the Danube River, began in the third century. About A.D. 360 Bishop Ulfilas, "the apostle to the Goths," led his converts south of the Danube to settle in what is now Bulgaria. There he translated the Bible into their language. The Gothic version was the first translation of the Bible into a language of the Germanic family. English, German, Dutch, and Scandinavian belong to this language group.

Latin—The need for a Latin Bible first arose during the second century A.D., when Latin began to replace Greek as the dominant language of the Roman Empire. The first Old Testament sections of the Latin Bible were considered unreliable, since they were actually a translation of a translation. They were based on the Septuagint, which, in turn, was a translation of the Hebrew Bible into Greek. Since the New Testament was written originally in Greek, it was translated directly into the Latin language. Several competing New Testament translations were in use throughout the Latin-speaking world as early as about A.D. 250.

The task of producing one standard Latin Bible to replace these competing translations was entrusted by Damasus, bishop of Rome (366–384), to his secretary Jerome. Jerome undertook the task unwillingly, knowing that replacing an old version with a new is bound to cause offense, even if the new is better. He began with a revision of the gospels, followed by the Psalms. After completing the New Testament, Jerome mastered the Hebrew language in order to translate the Old Testament into Latin. He completed this work in A.D. 405.

Jerome's translation of the Bible is known as the Latin Vulgate. It did not win instant acceptance. Many were suspicious of it because it varied so much from the version with which they were familiar. But in time its superior merits caused it to gain popularity.

The best surviving manuscript of the Latin Vulgate, the Codex Amiatinus, is now in the Laurentian Library of Florence, Italy. Written in a monastery in Northumbria, England, it was presented to Pope Gregory II in 716.

The Latin Vulgate is especially important because it was the medium through which the gospel arrived in Western Europe. It remained the standard version in this part of the world for centuries. In 1546 the Council of Trent directed that only “this same ancient and vulgate edition . . . be held as authentic in public lecture, disputations, sermons and expository discourses, and that no one make bold or presume to reject it on any pretext.” Until the twentieth century no translations of the Bible except those based on the Vulgate were recognized as authoritative by the Roman Catholic Church.

The Old English Versions. Until the beginning of the sixteenth century, all Bible versions in the languages of the masses of Western Europe were based on the Latin Vulgate. Among these, the Old English versions are of special interest. Most of these versions consisted of only parts of the Bible, and even these had limited circulation. In this period few of the people of ancient England could read. Many of the familiar stories of the Bible were turned into verse and set to music so they could be sung and memorized.

Caedmon, the unlettered poet of Whitby, is said to have turned the whole history of salvation into song in the seventh century. Bede, the monk of Jarrow, the most learned man of his day in Western Europe, devoted the last ten days of his life to turning the gospels into English so they could be read by the common people.

Alfred the Great, king of a large part of southern and western England, defeated the Danish invaders in 878. He published a code of laws that was introduced by an Old English translation of the Ten Commandments and other brief passages from the Bible.

The parts of the Bible most favored for translating during this period were those often read or recited during worship services, especially the Psalms and the gospels. An Old English version of the Psalms by Bishop Aldhelm dates from soon after 700. A manuscript called the Wessex Gospels dates from the middle of the tenth century.

Some of the earliest Old English versions of Scripture were written between the lines of Latin-language manuscripts. The manuscript known as the Lindisfarne Gospels (now in the British Museum, London) was produced originally in Latin shortly before 700. Two and a half centuries later a priest named Aldred wrote between the lines of the text a literal translation in the Northumbrian dialect of Old English. Bible texts of this type, with some letters decorated in gold and silver, are known as illustrated manuscripts.

Wycliffe's Versions. In the early Middle Ages, parts of the Bible were translated from Latin into several of the dialects of Western Europe. These included versions in the Bohemian, Czech, and Italian languages, as well as the Provençal dialect of southeastern France. But none of these compare in importance with the work of John Wycliffe, pioneering reformer who translated the entire Bible from Latin into the English language.

Wycliffe (c. 1330–1384), master of Balliol College, Oxford, was a distinguished scholar and preacher. But he was also a social reformer who wanted to replace the feudal organization of state and church with a system that emphasized people's direct responsibility to God. The constitution of this new order would be the law of God, which Wycliffe equated with the Bible. Before this could happen, the law of God had to be accessible to the laity as well as the clergy, the unlearned as well as the learned. This called for a Bible in English as well as Latin, so Wycliffe and his associates undertook the task of translating the entire Bible from the Latin Vulgate into contemporary English.

There were actually two Wycliffe versions of the Bible—an earlier one, produced between 1380 and 1384 during Wycliffe's lifetime, and a later version completed in 1395, eleven years after his death.

The earlier version is a thoroughly literal translation. Wycliffe followed the Latin construction without attempting to render the meaning into good English idiom. The translators produced a literal version because it was intended to serve as the lawbook of the new order. The Latin text of the lawbook was already established, and the English text had to follow it word for word. About two thirds of this version was produced by one of Wycliffe's supporters, Nicholas of Hereford. Wycliffe himself may have done some of the translation work on the remaining portion. By the time this first translation was completed, the movement with which this English social reformer was associated was condemned by the authorities.

The second Wycliffe version was the work of his secretary, John Purvey. It was based on the earlier version, but it rendered the text into idiomatic English. Purvey's version became very popular, although its circulation was restricted by church officials. It was suppressed in 1408 by a document known as the “Constitutions of Oxford,” which forbade anyone to translate or even to read any part of the Bible in English without the permission of a bishop or a local church council. These constitutions remained in force for more than a century.

From Wycliffe to King James. More than 200 years passed from the time that Wycliffe’s second English version was issued (1395) until the historic King James Version was published in 1611. These were fruitful years for new versions of the Bible. The stage was set for the monumental King James Bible by five different English translations that were issued during these years.

Tyndale—The years from about 1450 onward brought exciting cultural changes in Western Europe. The revival of interest in classical and biblical learning was already under way when it received a stimulus from the migration of Greek scholars to the West after the fall of Constantinople to the Turks in 1453. With the invention of printing in Germany, the promoters of the new learning found a new technology at their disposal.

Among the first products of the printing press were editions of the Bible. The first major work to be printed was the famous Gutenberg edition of the Latin Bible, in 1456. The following decades brought printed editions of the Hebrew Bible, the Greek New Testament, and the Septuagint. The leaders of the Protestant Reformation were quick to take advantage of this new invention to help advance their efforts in church reform.

Making the Bible available in the tongue of the common people was a major strategy in the Reformers’ policy. Martin Luther, leader of the Reformation, translated the New Testament from Greek into German in 1522 and the Old Testament from Hebrew into German the following years. What Luther did for the Germans, William Tyndale did for the people of England.

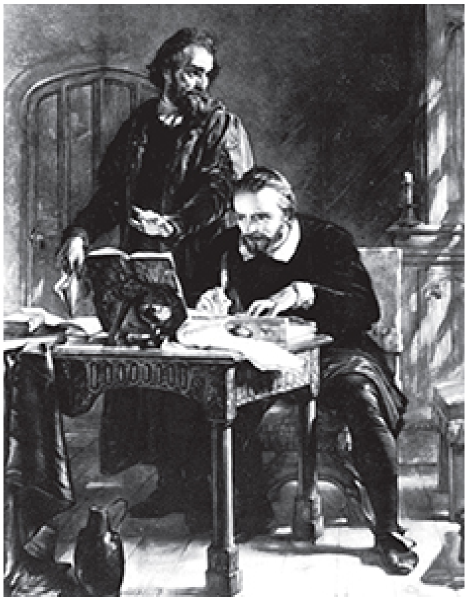
After completing his studies at the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, William Tyndale (c. 1495–1536) devoted his time and talents to providing his fellow Englishmen with the Scriptures in their own language. He hoped that Bishop Tunstall of London would sponsor his project of translating the Bible, but the bishop refused to do so. Tyndale then went to Germany in 1524 to undertake his project. By August of 1525 his English New Testament was complete.

Tyndale began printing his new version at Cologne, but this was interrupted by the city authorities. The printing work was then carried through by Peter Schoeffer in Worms, who produced an edition of 6,000 copies. Soon this new Bible was selling in England, although it had been officially banned by the church.

Tyndale's translation differed in two important respects from the versions of Wycliffe. It was rendered not from the Latin language but from the Greek original, and it circulated in printed form, not as a handcopied manuscript. From the New Testament, Tyndale moved to the Old, issuing an edition of the Pentateuch, then the Book of Jonah, and a revision of Genesis. Later, in 1534, Tyndale issued a revision of his New Testament, justly described as "altogether Tyndale's noblest monument."

A further revision of the New Testament appeared in 1535. In May of that year Tyndale was arrested. After an imprisonment of seventeen months, he was sentenced to death as a heretic; he was strangled and burned at the stake at Vilvorde, near Brussels, on October 6, 1536.

Tyndale started a tradition in the history of the English Bible that has endured to this day. What is commonly called "Bible English" is really Tyndale's English. His wording in those portions of the Bible which he translated was retained in the King James Version to a great degree. The latest in the succession of revisions that stand in the Tyndale tradition is the New King James Version. But even those versions that did not set out to adhere to his tradition, such as the New International Version, show his influence.



• William Tyndale, shown seated in this painting, translates the New Testament into English—one of the first versions to be published in the language of the common people.

Coverdale and Matthew—At the time of Tyndale's death, a printed edition of the English Bible, bearing a dedication to King Henry VIII, had been circulating in England for nearly a year. This was the first edition of the Bible issued by Miles Coverdale (1488–1568), one of Tyndale's friends and associates. This English version reproduced Tyndale's translation of the Pentateuch and the New Testament; the rest of the Old Testament was translated into English from Latin and German versions.

Coverdale's Bible of 1535 was the first complete English Bible in print. A second and third edition appeared in 1537. The title page bore the words: "Set forth with the King's most gracious licence." But this was not the only English Bible to appear in 1537 with these words on the title page. Another of Tyndale's associates, John Rogers, published an edition of the Bible that year under the name, "Thomas Matthew." "Matthew's Bible" was similar to Coverdale's with one exception: its translation of the historical books from Joshua to 2 Chronicles was one that Tyndale had finished without publishing before his death.

The Great Bible—Official policy toward the translation and circulation of the Bible in England changed quickly. King Henry's break with the Roman Catholic pope in Rome in 1534 had something to do with it, but deeper factors were also involved. A landmark in the history of the English Bible was the royal injunction of September 1538, directing that "one book of the whole Bible of the largest volume in English" should be placed in every parish church in England where the people could have access to it. When this decree was issued, another version of the Bible—the "Great Bible"—was being prepared so this commandment could be followed.

Publication of the Great Bible was delayed because French officials halted its production in Paris, where it was being printed. The printing was then transferred to London, where the Great Bible appeared in 1539. The Great Bible was Coverdale's revision of Matthew's Bible, which means that it was essentially a copy of Tyndale's translation. It quickly became the "authorized version" of the English Bible.

One part of the Great Bible remained in use long after the version as a whole had been replaced by later and better versions. To this day the Psalter in the Book of Common Prayer that is sung in the services of the Church of England is the Psalms contained in the Great Bible.

The Geneva Bible—During the reign of Mary Tudor of England (1553–1558), many English Reformers sought refuge in other parts of Europe because of her policy of persecution. One community of English refugees settled in Geneva, Switzerland, where John Knox was pastor of the English congregation and where John Calvin dominated theological study. Many of these English refugees were fine scholars, and they began work on a new English version of the Bible. A preliminary edition of the New Testament (Whittingham's New Testament) was published in 1557. This was the first edition of any part of the English Bible to have the text divided into verses. The whole Bible appeared in 1560.

This "Geneva Bible" was the first English Bible to be translated in its entirety from the original biblical languages. Widely recognized as the best English version of the Bible that had yet appeared, it quickly became the accepted version in Scotland. In England it also attained instant popularity among the people, although it was not accepted by church officials. After the publication of the King James Version in 1611, the Geneva Bible remained popular. This was the Bible which the Pilgrims took with them to the New World in 1620; to them the King James Version was a compromise and an inferior production. The Geneva Bible was printed until 1644 and was still found in use thirty years later.

The Bishops' Bible—The rival version to the Geneva Bible sponsored by church leaders in England was published in 1568. It was called the Bishops' Bible because all the translators were either bishops at the time or became bishops later. It was a good translation, based throughout on the original languages; but it was not as sound in scholarship as the Geneva Bible.

The King James Version—Shortly after James VI of Scotland ascended the throne of England as James I (1603), he convened a conference to settle matters under dispute in the Church of England. The only important result of this conference was an approval to begin work on the King James Version of the English Bible (KJV).

A group of forty-seven scholars, divided into six teams, was appointed to undertake the work of preparing the new version. Three teams worked on the Old Testament; two were responsible for the New Testament, and one worked on the Apocrypha. They used the 1602 edition of the Bishops' Bible as the basis of their revision, but they had access to many other versions and helps, as well as the texts in the original biblical languages. When the six groups had completed their task, the final draft was reviewed by a committee of twelve. The King James Version was published in 1611.

The new version won wide acceptance among the people of the English-speaking world. Nonsectarian in tone and approach, it did not favor one shade of theological or ecclesiastical opinion over another. The translators had an almost instinctive sense of good English style; the prose rhythms of the version gave it a secure place in the popular memory. Never was a version of the Bible more admirably suited for reading aloud in public.

Although there was resistance to the King James Version at first, it quickly made a place for itself. For more than three centuries it remained "The Bible" throughout the English-speaking world.

THE HOLY BIBLE,
Conteyning the Old Teſtament,
AND THE NEW.

• Title page from an early copy of the King James Version of the Bible, published originally in 1611.

Catholic Versions. A generation before the appearance of the King James Bible, an English version of the Bible for Roman Catholics was undertaken by the faculty of the English College at Douai, France. Unlike the Geneva Bible, which was translated from the original languages, the Douai (or Douay) Bible was translated from the Latin Vulgate. The translator of the Douai Bible was Gregory Martin, formerly an Oxford scholar, who translated two chapters a day until the project was finished. Each section was then revised by two of his colleagues. The New Testament portion of this version was issued in 1582 and the Old Testament in 1609–10.

The Douai Bible was scholarly and accurate, but the English style and vocabulary were modeled on Latin usage. It would not have become popular among the Catholic laity if it had not been for the work of Richard Challoner (1691–1781), who revised it thoroughly between 1749 and 1772. What has generally been called the Douai Bible since Challoner's day is in fact the Douai Bible as revised by Challoner. In several respects it was a new version. Until 1945 this Douai revision by Challoner remained the only version of the Bible officially sanctioned for English-speaking Catholics.

Nineteenth-Century Revisions. During the eighteenth century and the earlier part of the nineteenth century, several private attempts were made at revising the King James Version. The reasons for revision included the outdated English of the KJV, the progress made by scholars in understanding the original languages of the Bible, and the availability of better texts in the original biblical languages, especially the Greek text of the New Testament.

One of the most influential private revisions was Henry Alford's New Testament (1869). In the preface to this translation, Alford expressed the hope that his work would be replaced soon by an official revision of the KJV.

This hope was fulfilled in 1870 when the Church of England initiated plans for a revision. Two groups of revisers were appointed, one for the Old Testament and one for the New. Representatives of British churches other than the Church of England were included on these committees. Before long, parallel companies of revisers were set up in the United States. At first these groups worked under the hope that one version might be produced for both England and the United States. But this was not to be. The American scholars, conservative as they were in their procedure, could not be bound by the stricter conservatism of their British counterparts. The three installments of the British revision (RV) appeared in 1881, in 1885, and in 1894. The American revision, or American Standard Version (ASV), was released in 1901, but did not include the Apocrypha.

The RV and ASV were solid works of scholarship. The Old Testament revisers had a much better grasp of Hebrew than the original translators of the King James Bible. The New Testament revision was based on a much more accurate Greek text than had been available in 1611. Although the RV and ASV were suitable for Bible study, they did not gain popular acceptance, mainly because their translators paid little attention to style and rhythm as they rendered the biblical languages into English.

Twentieth-Century Private Translations. The first half of the twentieth century was marked by a succession of brilliant private enterprises in translation—both for the New Testament alone and for the whole Bible.

Twentieth Century New Testament—The earliest of these was the Twentieth Century New Testament, a project conducted by a group of intelligent laypersons who used Westcott and Hort's edition of the Greek New Testament (1881) as their basic text. They were concerned that no existing version (not even the RV) made the Bible plain to young people, and they set out to supply this need. They completed their work in 1901; a revised edition appeared in 1904.

Weymouth—Richard Francis Weymouth, a Greek scholar, published an edition of the Greek New Testament called The Resultant Greek Testament in 1886. Later he issued a modern translation of this text, The New Testament in Modern Speech, which appeared in 1903, shortly after his death. The "modern speech" into which this translation was rendered was dignified contemporary usage and it paid special attention to accuracy in the translation of details such as the definite article and tenses.

Moffatt—Much more colloquial than Weymouth's version was The New Testament: A New Translation (1913) by James Moffatt. Moffatt was a Scot, and his translation bore traces of the idiom of his native land. While his unique expressions shocked some readers accustomed to more dignified Bible English, they brought home the meaning of the text with greater clarity than ever before.

In 1924 Moffatt added The Old Testament: A New Translation; in 1928 the whole work appeared in one volume, entitled A New Translation of the Bible. In both Testaments Moffatt occasionally took greater liberties with the wording and order than was proper for a translator; yet to this day one of the best ways to get a quick grasp of the general sense of a book of the Bible is to read it through in Moffatt's translation.

Goodspeed—Edgar J. Goodspeed of the University of Chicago produced The New Testament: An American Translation in 1923. He was convinced that most Bible versions were translated into "British English"; so he tried to provide a version free from expressions that might be strange to Americans. A companion work, The Old Testament: An American Translation, edited by J. M. Powis Smith and three other scholars, was issued in 1927. In 1938 Goodspeed's translation of the Apocrypha appeared. This was the final contribution to The Complete Bible: An American Translation.

The Revised Standard Version. The Revised Standard Version (RSV) is one of the last versions in the long line of English Bible translations that stem from William Tyndale. Although it is a North American production, it has been widely accepted in the whole English-speaking world.

The RSV was launched as a revision of the KJV (1611), RV (1885), and ASV (1901). Authorized by the International Council of Religious Education, it is copyrighted by the Division of Christian Education of the National Council of Churches in the USA. The New Testament first appeared in 1946, the two Testaments in 1952, and the Apocrypha in 1957. A new edition in 1962 incorporated eighty-five minor changes in wording.

A Catholic edition of the RSV New Testament appeared in 1964, followed by the whole Bible in 1966. In 1973 a further edition of the RSV appeared (including revisions made in the 1971 edition of the New Testament). This version of the Bible was approved for use by Protestants, Roman Catholics, and the Greek Orthodox Church, making it an English Bible for all faiths. A completely revised edition (NRSV) was published in 1990.

New Catholic Versions. Several new versions of the English Bible designed especially for Catholic readers have appeared during the 20th century.

Knox—In 1940 Ronald Knox, an English priest with exceptional literary gifts, was commissioned by his superiors to undertake a new Bible translation. At that time it was out of the question for a translation for Catholic readers to be based on anything other than the Latin Vulgate. The Vulgate served as the base of Knox's version, but he paid attention to the original Greek and Hebrew texts. His New Testament appeared in 1945, followed by the Old Testament in 1949.

Knox had a flair for adapting his English expressions to the rigid restrictions of the Latin Vulgate style. But the progress of the biblical movement in the Catholic Church in recent years has made his translation outdated. No longer must all Catholic versions of the Bible be based on the Latin Vulgate.

The Jerusalem Bible—The Jerusalem Bible was originally a French translation of the Bible, sponsored by the Dominican faculty of the Ecole Biblique et Archeologique in Jerusalem. A one-volume edition of the work, with fewer technical notes, was issued in 1956. The English counterpart to this volume, prepared under the editorship of Alexander Jones, was published in 1966. The biblical text was translated from the Hebrew and Greek languages, although the French version was consulted throughout for guidance where variant readings or interpretations were involved.

The Jerusalem Bible is a scholarly production with a high degree of literary skill. While it is the work of Catholic translators, it is nonsectarian. Readers of many religious traditions use the Jerusalem Bible. The New Jerusalem Bible (NJB) is now available.

The New American Bible—The New American Bible (NAB) was launched as a revision of the Douai (or Douay) Bible for American readers. In the beginning the revision was sponsored by the Episcopal Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, and the resulting work was called the Confraternity Version. The translators were scholars who belonged to the Catholic Biblical Association of America.

The New Testament of this translation first appeared in 1941. While it was a revision of the Douai text, which was based in turn on the Latin Vulgate, the translators at times went back to the Greek text behind the Latin. They drew attention in their notes to places where the Greek and Latin texts differed.

As the project progressed, the translators moved away from the Latin Vulgate as their text, basing it instead on the Greek and Hebrew text. So radical was this fresh approach that a new name seemed appropriate for the version when the entire Bible was completed in 1970. It was no longer called the Confraternity Version but the New American Bible. This new name may have been influenced also by the title of the New English Bible, which had appeared earlier in the same year.

The New English Bible—When the copyright of the British Revised Version was about to expire (1935), the owners of the copyright, the Oxford and Cambridge University Presses, consulted scholars about the possibility of a revision to bring this translation up to date. Later the scope of the project changed so that an entirely new translation, rather than a revision of an old translation, was commissioned.

The initiative in this enterprise was taken by the Church of Scotland in 1946. It approached the British churches, and a joint committee was set up in 1947 to make plans for a new translation of the Bible into modern English. The joint committee included representatives of the principal non-Roman churches of Great Britain and Ireland, agents of Bible societies, and officials of Oxford and Cambridge University Presses. The translators' goal was to issue a version "genuinely English in idiom . . . a 'timeless' English, avoiding equally both archaisms and transient modernisms."

The New Testament of the New English Bible (NEB) was published in March 1961; the whole Bible, together with the Apocrypha, appeared in March 1970. Between 1961 and 1970 the New Testament received some further revision. A thoroughly revised edition, the Revised English Bible (REB) was published in 1989.

In one respect the New English Bible reverted to the policy of the translators of the King James Version; sometimes they rendered the same Hebrew or Greek word with different English words. This means the student who cannot use the Hebrew or Greek texts will be unable to use this version for detailed word study. Sometimes the NEB makes a useful distinction in its selection of words, as when "church" is reserved for the universal company of Christian believers and "congregation" is used for a local group of believers. But a useful distinction made by the RV, ASV, and RSV is sometimes obscured by the NEB. A good example is when the same word, "devil or devils," is used by the NEB for Satan as well as the beings that should more correctly be called "demons." Two different Greek words for these beings are used in the original texts, and there is no good reason why they should be called the same thing by the NEB.

Paraphrases and Simplified Versions. Some translators have attempted to bring out the meaning of the biblical text by using either simplified or amplified vocabularies. Other translations that fall into this category are those that use lists of words considered basic to the English language.

Williams—Charles B. Williams, in The New Testament in the Language of the People (1937), tried to express the more delicate shades of meaning in Greek tenses by using a fuller wording. Thus, the command of Ephesians 4:25, "Let every one speak the truth with his neighbor" (RSV), is expressed, "You must . . . each of you practice telling the truth to his neighbor."

Wuest—What Williams did for Greek tenses, Kenneth S. Wuest did for all parts of speech in his Expanded Translation of the New Testament (1956–59). In this translation, the familiar Bible phrase, "Husbands, love your wives" (Eph. 5:25), appears as, "The husbands, be loving your wives with a love self-sacrificial in its nature."

—In The Amplified Bible (1958–65), a committee of twelve editors working for the Lockman Foundation of La Habra, California, incorporated alternative translations or additional words that would normally appear in margins or footnotes into their translation of the text. One fault of this translation is that it gives the reader no guidance to aid in choosing the proper alternative reading for specific passages.

New Testament in Basic English—Basic English is a simplified form of the language, created by C. K. Ogden, which attempts to communicate ideas with a simplified vocabulary of 850 words. In the 1930s Ogden's foundation, the Orthological Institute, commissioned an English biblical scholar, S. H. Hooke, to produce a Basic English version of the Bible. For this purpose the basic vocabulary of 850 words was expanded to 1,000 by adding special Bible words and others helpful in the reading and understanding of poetry. The New Testament in Basic English appeared in 1940; the complete Bible was published in 1949.

Williams—Charles Kingsley Williams, who had experience in teaching students whose native tongue was not English, produced The New Testament: A New Translation in Plain English in 1952. He used a "plain English" list of less than 1,700 words in this translation.

Phillips—J. B. Phillips, an Anglican clergyman, relieved the tedium of fire-watching and similar nighttime duties during World War II by turning Paul's letters into English. This work was not a strict translation but a paraphrase that made the apostle's arguments meaningful for younger readers. He published Letters to Young Churches in 1947, and it became an instant success. The style was lively and forceful; the apostle Paul came across as a real man who had something important to say.

Phillips followed up on his initial success by releasing other parts of the New Testament. The Gospels in Modern English followed in 1952; The Young Church in Action (the Book of Acts) appeared in 1955; and The Book of Revelation was published in 1957. In 1958 the whole work appeared in one volume, The New Testament in Modern English. A completely revised edition of this paraphrase was issued in 1972, but many readers prefer the earlier edition.

The Living Bible—Like J. B. Phillips' work, The Living Bible is a paraphrase that began with a rendering of the New Testament letters—Living Letters (1962). The translator, Kenneth N. Taylor, prepared this paraphrase initially for his own children, who found it difficult to follow the apostle Paul's thought when his letters were read in family worship. Taylor went on to paraphrase the rest of the New Testament, then the Old Testament, until The Living Bible was published complete in 1971. This paraphrase is especially popular with young people. Many adults have also found that it brings the message of the Bible home to them in language they can understand.

The Good News Bible—In 1966 the American Bible Society issued Today's English Version (also entitled Good News for Modern Man), a translation of the New Testament, in simple, contemporary English. The aim of this version was similar to the preceding basic English and plain English versions, but The Good News Bible used no limited vocabulary list. In 1976 the entire Bible in Today's English Version was published.

The translators of The Good News Bible worked to achieve "dynamic equivalence." They wanted this translation to have the same effect on modern readers that the original text produced on those who first read it. The Good News Bible has gained wide acceptance, and similar translations have been produced in a number of other languages.

Miscellaneous Simplified Versions—Other simplified translations of the Bible include Clarence Jordan's Cotton Patch Version (1968–70), which renders portions of the New Testament into the unique idiom of the American South. Also included in this category is Carl Burke's God Is For Real, Man (1967) and Treat Me Cool, Lord (1969). These were written in the unique language of prison inmates while Burke was serving as a jail chaplain.

Prominent Recent Translations. Three versions in particular fall into this category.

New American Standard Bible—An editorial board of fifty-four scholars began work on this translation in the 1960s. They were determined to issue a new and revised translation based on the American Standard Version of 1901 in order to keep that version alive and usable among the Bible-reading public. Sponsored by the Lockman Foundation, the complete Bible of the NASB was published in 1971 after eleven years of careful, scholarly work. The translators used the most dependable Hebrew and Greek texts available. The editorial board has continued to function since publication of the Bible, making minor revisions and refinements in the translation as better texts of the original languages of the Bible became available.

New International Version—The New International Version (NIV) is a translation of the Bible sponsored by the International Bible Society. It is the work of an international and transdenominational team of scholars, drawn mainly from the United States but also including scholars from Canada, Britain, Australia, and New Zealand. The sponsors of the NIV claim it is “written in the language of the common man,” but its language is more literary than the “common English” of the Good News Bible.

The translators of the NIV were familiar with traditional Bible English. They used the language of the King James Version where it was “accurate, clear, and readable.” But they made many significant changes. Unlike the RSV and NEB (which retained “thee,” “thou,” and “thy” when God was being addressed), the NIV uses “you” and “your.” The New Testament of this version was published in 1973; the whole Bible appeared in 1978. It underwent a modest revision in 1984 and again in 2011.

—The original King James Version, first published in 1611, has been the favorite translation among English-speaking peoples for more than three centuries. During its long history, the King James Bible has been updated and revised several times to reflect changes in speech as well as growing knowledge of the original text of the Scriptures. Previous major revisions of this translation were issued in 1629, 1638, 1762, and 1769.

During the 1970s, Thomas Nelson Publishers of Nashville, Tennessee, sensed the need for a fifth major revision. Over 130 Bible scholars were selected to work on the New King James Version. The translators worked from the earliest and most trustworthy Hebrew and Greek texts available and also used the 1769 King James revision as a general guide to make sure the new edition preserved the majestic style and devotional quality of the original King James.

The most noticeable change in the New King James is replacement of “thee’s” and “thou’s” and other archaic pronouns with their modern English equivalent. The “-est” and “-eth” verb endings also were eliminated in favor of more contemporary English idioms. The New Testament with Psalms was released in 1980, followed by the Old Testament in 1982.

New Century Version—Word Publishing’s easy-to-read translation seeks to maintain faithfulness to the original languages while using a simplified vocabulary. The NCV provides clarity with regard to ancient customs, words that have changed in meaning, and difficult figures of speech, and is appropriate for use by children as well as adults.

Contemporary English Version—In 1995, the American Bible Society and Thomas Nelson Publishers introduced a new dynamic equivalent translation of the Bible that uses clear, contemporary vocabulary to express complex ideas—making it valuable for evangelistic outreach and discipleship—especially when readers are new to the Bible, or those to whom English is a second language. The CEV is particularly good for reading aloud, as God’s Word is expressed in clear and simple English.

The Voice translation—A dynamic translation that pays attention to oral transmission of Scripture and includes skilled writers among the translation team. Ecclesia Bible Society and Thomas Nelson Publishers released the New Testament in 2008, and the full Bible was published in 2012.

Miscellaneous Translations. Many English translations have not been mentioned in this article. Among Jewish translations of the Hebrew Bible, special reference should be made to A New Translation of the Holy Scriptures according to the Masoretic Text, produced in installments since 1963 by a committee working under the chairmanship of H. M. Orlinsky. The Authentic New Testament (1955) is a translation by a well-known Jewish scholar, Hugh J. Schonfield.

Brief mention should also be made of the following translations: The Penguin Classics edition of The Four Gospels, by E. V. Rieu (1952) and The Acts of the Apostles, by C. H. Rieu (1957); the Berkeley Version (New Testament, 1945; Bible, 1959), revised as The Modern Language Bible (1969); the New World Translation of Jehovah’s Witnesses (1961); The New Testament in the Language of Today, by William F. Beck, a Lutheran scholar (1963); and The New Testament in the translation of William Barclay (1968–69).

Photo by V. Gilbert and Arlisle F. Beers

- The Jordan River valley south of Jericho near the Dead Sea.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- A Hebrew scroll of the Book of Esther, read in synagogues during the Feast of Purim.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• An archaeological excavation underway at the site of ancient Zaretan (Josh. 3:16) in southern Israel.

Photo: Levant Photo Service

• The mound of Ziklag, a base of operation for David’s army during the early years of his reign (1 Sam. 27:6).

Photo: Levant Photo Service

• Roman ruins at Hierapolis, a city in the province of Asia mentioned by the apostle Paul (Col. 4:13).

Photo: Levant Photo Service

• Abraham's Well at the ancient city of Beersheba.

BIBLICAL CRITICISM—the application of one or more techniques in the scientific study of the Bible. These techniques are not peculiar to Bible study; they would be equally helpful in the study of the writings of Homer or Shakespeare. Their primary intention is to help the reader of the Bible understand it better; for that reason biblical criticism examines the Greek and Hebrew texts (textual criticism), the historical setting of the various parts of the Bible (historical criticism), and various literary questions regarding how, when, where, and why the books of the Bible were first written (literary criticism). These methods of study, when done with reverence for Scripture, should assist a student's appreciation for the INSPIRATION of the Bible.

Textual Criticism. This is the attempt to determine, as accurately as possible, the wording of the text of the Bible as first written down under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit. Since none of the original documents has survived and the text is available only in copies, it is necessary to compare the early copies with each other. This allows the textual critic to classify these early copies into groups exhibiting certain common features and to decide why their differences occurred and what the original wording most likely was.

The early copies on which textual critics work consist mainly of manuscripts in the original languages, translations into other languages, and biblical quotations made by Jewish and Christian writers. (Also see BIBLE, THE; BIBLE, INTERPRETATION OF THE.)

Historical Criticism. The examination of the Bible in light of its historical setting. This is particularly important because the Bible was written over a period of more than one thousand years. The story the Bible records extends from the beginning of civilization in the ancient world to the Roman Empire of the first century A.D.

Historical criticism is helpful in determining when the books of the Bible were written. It is also helpful in determining a book's "dramatic date"—that is, when the people it describes lived and its events happened. The dramatic date of Genesis, for instance, is much earlier than the date when it was written. Historical criticism asks if the stories of the patriarchs—Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Joseph—reflect the conditions of the times in which they lived.

The consensus is that these stories better reflect their dramatic date than the dates of their writing, just as the picture presented in the New Testament best reflects what is known about the early part of the first century A.D.

Literary Criticism. The study of how, when, where, and why the books of the Bible were written. Literary criticism may be divided into questions concerning sources, tradition, redaction, and authorship.

1. Source criticism attempts to determine whether the writers of the books of the Bible used earlier sources of information and, if so, whether those sources were oral or written. Some biblical books clearly indicate their dependence on earlier sources: 1 and 2 Chronicles, Luke, and Acts. Some of the sources for the Chronicles are still available to us in 1 and 2 Samuel and 1 and 2 Kings, which were written earlier. The author of Luke and Acts says that much of his information was handed on by "those who from the beginning were eyewitnesses and ministers of the word" (Luke 1:2).

However, these sources usually have not survived independently and their identification and reconstruction cannot be certain. It is fairly clear, however, that the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke draw on common sources; their two most widely agreed sources are one that related the story of Jesus and one that contained a collection of His teachings.

2. Tradition criticism (including form criticism) studies how information was passed from one generation to another before it was put in its present form. Tradition is simply that which is handed down; it may be divinely authoritative, or it may be merely "the tradition of men" (Mark 7:8; Col. 2:8). Sometimes a tradition was handed on by word of mouth for several generations before it was written down, as in the record of the patriarchs in Genesis. Sometimes a tradition was handed on by word of mouth for only twenty or thirty years, as in the records of the works and words of Jesus before the gospels were written.

   Tradition criticism attempts to trace the stages by which these traditions were handed down, the forms they took at those various stages, and the forms in which they reached the people who committed them to writing.

   Form criticism is the branch of tradition criticism that examines the various "forms"—e.g. parables, miracles, discourses—by which the traditions took shape. Form criticism has been applied to many areas of the biblical literature, such as the composition of the Psalms, the prophets' calls to their ministries, and the contents of the gospels. Some scholars have, for instance, classified various psalms as "Royal" psalms, "Lament" psalms, "Torah" (Law) psalms, "Praise" psalms, etc.

   Classifying sections of the Bible according to the form they take can provide an additional perspective from which one can better understand the text of Scripture. However, this method must be used with great caution and restraint to avoid imposing the interpreter's own assumptions on the Bible.

3. Redaction criticism attempts to understand the contribution to the finished manuscript made by the person who finally committed the oral or written traditions to writing. This may be illustrated from the Gospel of Luke. Luke makes no claim to have been an eyewitness of the events of Jesus' ministry; everything he records in the Gospel was received from others. Tradition criticism studies what Luke received and the state in which he received it. Redaction criticism studies what he did with what he received. Luke (and the same can be said of the other evangelists) was a responsible author who set the stamp of his own personality on what he wrote.

It is important to remember that an author's personal contribution to the finished book was no less reliable (and, hence, no less authoritative) than the tradition which he received. Unfortunately, some redaction critics make the error of assuming that the author's work is inauthentic, ignoring the work of the Holy Spirit in inspiring the writers of the Bible.

4. Authorship and destination criticism involve the attempt to determine the authorship of a work, as well as the person, group, or wider public for whom it was written. Sometimes there is no need for inquiry into these matters; Paul's letter to the Romans, for example, is clearly the work of the apostle Paul and was sent by him to the Christians in Rome. But the judicious use of literary criticism will throw further light on the circumstances that led to the writing of the book and the purpose for which Romans was sent. When, however, a work is anonymous, critical inquiry may help us to discover what sort of person the author was. For example, we do not know for certain who wrote the letter to the Hebrews. However, by looking critically at Hebrews we can learn much about the character of the author and a little about the character and situation of the people to whom the letter was written.

Photo by Howard Vos

- The Wilderness of Sin, an uninhabited region through which the Israelites passed between Elim and Mt. Sinai (Ex. 16:1).

Photo by Howard Vos

- Remains of a Roman warehouse at Ostia, Italy, a city situated at the mouth of the Tiber River.

BIBLICAL ETHICS—living righteously—doing what is good and refraining from what is evil—in accordance with the will of God. The term refers not to human theories or opinions about what is right and wrong but to God's revealed truth about these matters. Questions of human conduct prevail throughout the Bible. God's revelation through His written Word narrates the story of ethical failure on the part of human beings, God's redeeming grace, and the ethical renewal of His people.

God's people are called to holiness because they are God's people: "You shall therefore be holy, for I am holy" (Lev. 11:45). The New Testament counterpart to this principle is found in Matthew 5:48: "Therefore you shall be perfect, just as your Father in heaven is perfect."

God gave the Law to the nation of Israel as a standard of righteousness. This was the revealed will of God for His people. But His commandments were given in a context of GRACE. When the TEN COMMANDMENTS were given through Moses, they were introduced with a statement supporting the relationship that had already been established between God and His people whom He delivered from Egypt (Ex. 20:2; Deut. 5:6). God's commandments are always given to those who are already His people by grace.

This truth carries through to the New Testament. Jesus' ethical teaching in the Sermon on the Mount was preceded by the BEATITUDES, which reminded Jesus' disciples that God's grace comes before His commands (Matt. 5:3–12).

This connection between God's demands and His grace means that biblical ethics must always be understood in terms of what God has already done for His people. Grace precedes Law, just as doctrine always precedes ethics in the letters of the New Testament. So ethics should not be regarded as the center of the Christian faith. Correct behavior is the outflow or product of grace—the proper response in those who have experienced God's grace.

For the Christian the ultimate standard of ethics is Jesus Christ and His teachings. The Christian is not under the Law of the Old Testament (Eph. 2:14–16). But since the ethical teachings of Jesus sum up the true meaning of the Old Testament Law, following His teachings fulfills the Law. So there is a direct relationship between the concept of righteousness as revealed in the Old Testament and later in the New.

The Ten Commandments, for example, are referred to as positive ethical instruction in the New Testament (Rom. 13:9). Yet the commandment concerning the SABBATH is no longer in force (Col. 2:15–16). And the ceremonial law, involving sacrificial rituals in the temple, no longer is in effect because of the ultimate sacrifice of Christ (Heb. 10:12–18).

Jesus' commandment to love is the essence of Christian ethics. When a Pharisee asked Jesus to identify "the great commandment in the law," Jesus answered, " 'You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, with all your soul, and with all your mind.' This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like it: 'You shall love your neighbor as yourself.' On these two commandments hang all the Law and the prophets" (Matt. 22:37–40). The apostle Paul also declared that all the commandments are "summed up in this saying, namely, 'You shall love your neighbor as yourself.' Love does no harm to a neighbor; therefore love is the fulfillment of the Law" (Rom. 13:9–10). This great love commandment summarizes and fulfills the intention of the Old Testament Law.

While love is the summary of Christian ethics, the New Testament contains many specific ethical instructions. A basic pattern for this ethical teaching is the contrast between our old existence before faith in Christ and our new existence in Him. Christians are called to leave behind their old conduct and to put on the new (Eph. 4:22–24), to walk in newness of life (Rom. 6:4), and to exhibit the fruit of the Spirit (Gal. 5:22–23).

Although as Christians we are free from the Law, we are not to use that liberty "as an opportunity for the flesh, but through love" to "serve one another" (Gal. 5:13). Love is best expressed through service and self-giving (Matt. 20:26–27). These points lead naturally to the observation that Jesus Himself is the supreme example of righteousness. Christian ethics are summed up not only in His teaching, but in His life as well. So true discipleship consists of following Jesus (Eph. 5:2) and being conformed to His image (Rom. 8:29).

The call for righteousness is directed to the individual, but ethics also has an important social dimension. The centrality of love indicates this very clearly. The prophets of the Old Testament emphasized the connection between righteousness and social justice (Amos 2:6–8; 5:24). The ethical teachings of the Bible as followed by Christians will have an impact on the world (Matt. 5:13–16). But in spite of all these truths, the Bible does not call for a social program to be imposed upon the world. The ethics of the Bible are for the people of God. The Sermon on the Mount is for disciples of Christ. As Christians follow biblical ethics, the world will be affected for good by them.

Also see HOLY; RIGHTEOUSNESS; SERMON ON THE MOUNT.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• Secluded site of the monastery of Koziba on an old road from Jerusalem to Jericho in southern Israel.

BIBLICAL THEOLOGY—theology as it is understood from the perspective of the biblical writers themselves. This category of theology must be carefully distinguished from systematic theology, which systematizes and re-expresses the teachings of the Bible through the use of modern concepts and categories. Biblical theology is biblical because it states the theology of the Bible by limiting itself to the language, categories, and perspectives of the biblical writers. It attempts to arrive at this understanding without modern theological biases or assumptions.

Biblical theology is historical in its orientation. It attempts to get into the minds of the authors of Scripture in order to arrive at the meanings they intended for their original readers. This means that biblical theology is dependent upon careful interpretation of the biblical texts in their original languages. But biblical theology is much more complex than merely compiling Bible verses on various themes or subjects in the Bible, followed by a summary of this material. This approach would not be sensitive to the various historical contexts and specific emphases of the biblical writers.

Biblical theology does attempt to systematize, but only to the extent that this can be done without imposing an artificial structure upon the biblical writers. The biblical theologian will go no further than these writers went in systematizing their material. Biblical theology wants to represent their perspectives as clearly and as faithfully as possible.

Unity and Diversity. Biblical theology is divided into Old Testament theology and New Testament theology, although the relation between the two also concerns biblical theologians. Further specialization also occurs within both Old Testament and New Testament theologies. Biblical theologians often speak of the theologies of Deuteronomy, Isaiah, Paul, or Matthew. This is in keeping with the emphasis of biblical theology upon the distinctives of the individual biblical writers.

But a big part of the task of biblical theology is to pull together the common emphases of the biblical writers and to seek the unity of their writings. Although these inspired writers have different contributions to make to the subject of God and His revelation, their writings are compatible with each other. Thus biblical theology focuses on the diversity that exists within the larger unity of Scripture, and tries to set forth that which unifies, without ignoring the diversity.

Method. As long as the interpreter gives sufficient attention to the distinctives of the various writers, biblical theology can organize its work topically, according to main subjects. But because biblical theology is primarily interested in historical understanding, it is better to proceed chronologically. Thus, biblical theologians work their way progressively through the Bible, tracing the progress of revelation and the development of theological thought, from the earliest writers to the latest. Biblical theology thus becomes the history of progressive revelation progressively set forth. The focus is not on the religious experience of the people, but on the revelation of God and His people's understanding of His acts.

History of Salvation. Biblical theologians seek to find the best organizing principle or idea that serves as the center of a biblical theology. Old Testament theologians have suggested such ideas as the covenant, the lordship of God, the presence of God, and the people of God. New Testament theologians have mentioned the kingdom of God, grace, salvation, resurrection, and kerygma (a summary of the main points in the preaching of the earliest Christians in the Book of Acts).

Any of these concepts can be used as an organizing principle, for all the central concepts of the Bible are related. But certainly one of the most helpful suggestions to come from biblical theologians is the idea of "salvation history." This refers to the saving acts of God in history. It is an ideal organizing principle for both Old and New Testaments.

Many biblical theologians believe the most effective way to look at the Bible is in terms of God's special acts of salvation on behalf of His people Israel and the church. But they see these various individual events as a unity, moving from promise to completion. Thus, "salvation history" is a single great plan of salvation that finds its ultimate fulfillment in the work of Christ. Following is a broad overview of the events in this salvation history.

The Old Testament as Promise: Israel. Two basic theological truths of the Old Testament are God as Creator and God as Redeemer. The created order is God's not only because He created it, but also because He is in the process of redeeming it from its rebellion and sin. The Bible is the story of God setting right what went wrong with His creation because of the fall of Adam.

The history of salvation begins with the call of Abraham and the covenant between Abraham and God (Gen. 12:1–3). This story reaches its conclusion in the coming of Jesus Christ. The election of the nation of Israel as God's special people is not for their sake alone, but for the sake of all the peoples of the world ("in you all the families of the earth shall be blessed," Gen. 12:3). This blessing is ultimately experienced by the church through faith in Jesus Christ.

The great redemptive act of the Old Testament is the EXODUS, the deliverance of God's people from bondage in Egypt. This is the Old Testament counterpart to the deliverance brought about by Christ through His death on the cross. Through the Exodus, God revealed not only His sovereign power, but also his faithfulness and the depth of His covenant love for Israel. This was followed immediately by the covenant between God and His people renewed at Mount Sinai and the giving of the Law. God had already entered into covenant relationship with His people and had miraculously delivered them. This means that obedience to the Law cannot be understood as a requirement for becoming the people of God and enjoying His favor. The Law was given in the context of God's grace.

From the perspective of the New Testament, the Law may be interpreted as having several purposes. It was given to instruct the people about the absolute holiness of God and the sinfulness of humanity. The Law also set Israel apart from the surrounding nations in order that its people might be the pure channel by which the Messiah could come and accomplish His saving work for all humanity.

Through the prophets of the Old Testament the work of Christ was anticipated most clearly. They cautioned the people against presuming upon their relationship with God, as though being a member of the chosen race were a virtue in itself (Amos 3:1–2). And they tried to lift the people's eyes from their national and political concerns to God's love for all nations. God's intent was to transform the entire fallen creation; He was not concerned only with the political sovereignty of the nation of Israel.

All along God was up to something far greater than Israel realized. He was planning to do a new thing (Is. 42:10; 65:17). The prophet Jeremiah expressed this truth by referring to a "new covenant" that God would establish in the future (Jer. 31:31–34). The old covenant, particularly the Law, could not accomplish the goal that God had for His people and His creation. In the new covenant His Law would be written on the hearts of His people, and they would enjoy the lasting forgiveness of their sins.

God preserved His people through the experiences of the division of the kingdom, the destruction of the nations of Israel and Judah, the CAPTIVITY, and the resettlement of His people in Jerusalem. He continued to reveal Himself and His purposes through the prophets, who increasingly spoke of what God would do in the near future. In this spirit of anticipation His people entered the New Testament era with its great announcement of fulfillment and hope in Jesus Christ.

The New Testament as Fulfillment: the Church. The New Testament announced the ministry of Jesus as the turning point of the ages, the beginning of the great fulfillment proclaimed by the prophets. It is impossible to exaggerate the centrality of this theme of fulfillment in the New Testament. The use of more than 300 quotations from the Old Testament in the New Testament clearly demonstrates this point.

According to the first three gospels, the message of Jesus was that the kingdom of God had arrived. The kingdom was expressed in both the words and deeds of Jesus. The presence of the kingdom depends directly on the presence of the messianic King. With His arrival, the fulfillment of the end time has already begun, although it is clear that the final realization of God's purpose remains yet in the future.

The death of Jesus was important as the basis of the kingdom. The rule of God in the human heart cannot be experienced in any age, present or future, without the atoning sacrifice that reconciles sinners with a holy God. Thus the death of Jesus became central for the theology of the New Testament. But the resurrection was equally important. In this event, the new order of the new creation broke directly into the present age. The resurrection of Christ was assurance of the truths He had proclaimed, as well as the resurrection of the dead at the end of time.

The pouring out of the Holy Spirit at PENTECOST depended on the finished work of Christ in His death and resurrection. This was a certain sign of the new age brought by Christ and the mark of the new people of God, the church. The ministry of the Spirit guarantees that the results of Christ's work are experienced in the believer's life until Jesus returns to earth.

In the sermons preached by the first Christians (in the first half of the Book of Acts), we see the main points of the faith of the early church. In fulfillment of prophecy, Jesus was born of the line of David, was crucified, died, and was buried. But He arose from the dead and will return some day as Judge. The possibility of repentance and salvation is thus founded directly on these saving acts of God in His Son.

The letters of the New Testament contain interpretation and application of these events. Many of the letters, or epistles, are divided into two main sections—doctrine and ethics. In the doctrinal sections of these letters, the meaning of Christ's work is described. The ethical sections always build on the doctrinal foundations, instructing Christians on how to live the Christian life.

In both the doctrinal and ethical sections of the epistles, the excitement of the fulfillment experienced through Jesus Christ is always foremost. The work of Christ, particularly in the cross and the resurrection, is considered the saving act of God. These are compared to the saving acts of God in the Old Testament. Thus, in biblical theology, the promises of God in the Old Testament are fulfilled in God's great act of redemption through His Son in the New.

◆

Photo by Howard Vos

- The great theater at Ephesus, where Paul was almost mobbed by the worshipers of the pagan goddess Diana (Acts 19:21–41).

Photo: Levant Photo Service

• Typical desert scene in the land of the ancient Edomites in the region south of the Dead Sea.

BICHRI [BICK rih]— (firstborn)—a Benjamite, the father of Sheba who rebelled against King David (2 Sam. 20:1–22; Bicri, NIV).

BICHRITES [BICK rites]—a form of BERITES.

BIDKAR [BID car]—one of Jehu's captains. Bidkar threw the body of King JORAM (Jehoram) into the field of Naboth the Jezreelite after Jehu killed him (2 Kin. 9:25).

BIER [beer]—a stand on which a corpse or a coffin containing a corpse is placed before burial; a coffin together with its stand (2 Sam. 3:31; 2 Chr. 16:14; Luke 7:14, KJV; coffin, NIV).

BIGTHA [BIG thuh] (gift of God)—one of the seven eunuchs, or chamberlains, who had charge of the harem of King Ahasuerus (Xerxes) of Persia (Esth. 1:10).

BIGTHAN [BIG than] (gift of god)—one of the two eunuchs or chamberlains who conspired to take the life of King Ahasuerus (Xerxes) of Persia. They were executed for their treachery when Mordecai discovered their conspiracy (Esth. 2:21; 6:2; Bigthana, NIV).

BIGVAI [BIG vah eye]—the head of one of the families who returned from Babylonia with Zerubbabel (Ezra 2:2).

BILDAD [BILL dad]—the second of the "friends" or "comforters" of Job. In his three speeches to Job (Job 8:1–22; 18:1–21; 25:1–6), Bildad expressed the belief that all suffering is the direct result of one's sin. He had little patience with the questionings and searchings of Job. He is called "Bildad the Shuhite" (Job. 2:11), which means he belonged to an Aramean nomadic tribe that lived in the TRANSJORDAN area southeast of Canaan. Also see ELIHU; ELIPHAZ; ZOPHAR.

BILEAM [BILL ee ahm]—a city in the western half of the tribe of Manasseh. West of the Jordan River, Bileam was assigned to the Kohathite Levites (1 Chr. 6:70). It probably is the same place as IBLEAM (Josh. 17:11).

BILGAH [BILL guh]—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. Chief of the fifteenth group of priests officiating in temple service in King David's time (1 Chr. 24:14).
2. A chief of the priests who returned from the captivity with Zerubbabel (Neh. 12:5, 18). He is also called BILGAI (Neh. 10:8).

BILGAI [BILL gay eye]—a priest who sealed the covenant after the captivity (Neh. 10:8). He is also called Bilgah (Neh. 12:5, 18).

BILHAH [BILL hah]—the name of a woman and a town in the Old Testament:

1. A slave girl, or CONCUBINE (Gen. 30:3–5, 7), who bore two of Jacob's sons, DAN and NAPHTALI (Gen. 35:25).
2. A town inhabited by the family of Simeon (1 Chr. 4:29), also called Baalah (Josh. 15:29) and Balah (Josh. 19:3).

BILHAN [BILL han]—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Ezer, a descendant of Seir the Horite (1 Chr. 1:42).
2. A son of Jediael, of the tribe of Benjamin (1 Chr. 7:10).

BILSHAN [BILL shan]—an Israelite leader who returned from captivity in Babylonia to Jerusalem with Zerubbabel (Ezra 2:2).

BIMHAL [BIM hal]—a son of Japhlet, an Asherite (1 Chr. 7:33).

BINDING AND LOOSING—a phrase describing the authority and power that Jesus assigned to His disciples, allowing them to forbid or allow certain kinds of conduct.

This phrase occurs only twice in the New Testament. In the first instance (Matt. 16:19), Jesus gave Peter "the keys of the kingdom of heaven" and told him "whatever you bind on earth will be bound [literally, "shall have been bound"] in heaven, and whatever you loose on earth will be loosed ["shall have been loosed"] in heaven." This means that Peter was granted the authority to pronounce the freedom or condemnation of a person, based on that person's response to the gospel. The tense of the verbs "shall have been" indicates that this fact was already established in the will of the Father.

In Matthew 18:18 the same words were spoken by Jesus to all the disciples, granting them authority in matters of church discipline.

BINEA [BIN ee ah]—a descendant of Jonathan, Saul's son, in the genealogy of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:37).

BINNUI [BIN you eye] (building up)—the name of five men in the Old Testament:

1. A Levite whose son was among those who weighed the gold and silver vessels brought from Babylonia by Ezra (Ezra 8:33).
2. A son of Pahath–Moab who divorced his pagan wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:30).
3. A son of Bani who divorced his pagan wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:38).
4. One of the family of Henadad who returned from Babylonia with Zerubbabel (Neh. 12:8).
5. One whose descendants returned from Babylonia to Jerusalem with Zerubbabel (Neh. 7:15). He is also called Bani (Ezra 2:10).

BIRDS (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BIRSHA [BURR shah]—a king of Gomorrah who fought against Chedorlaomer, king of Elam (Gen. 14:2). Birsha's name (or namesake) has apparently been found in the EBLA tablets.

BIRTH—the act of bringing forth young from the womb. Although birth can be quick (Ex. 1:19), in the Bible it can also be preceded by hard labor, pain, and anguish (Gen. 3:16), and birth is often used as a symbol of pain and suffering (Ps. 48:6). But it also can be a time of joy and celebration because "a human being has been born into the world" (John 16:21).

One also enters a new life with Jesus Christ by the process of the NEW BIRTH, a birth by the Holy Spirit rather than by one's parents (John 3:1–21).

Also see REGENERATION; VIRGIN BIRTH.

Photo: Cyprus Dept. of Antiquities

• A woman giving birth with the assistance of a midwife, in this eighth century B.C. clay statue from Cyprus.

BIRTH, NEW (see NEW BIRTH).

BIRTH, VIRGIN (see VIRGIN BIRTH).

BIRTHDAY—the day or anniversary of one's birth. The word "birthday" is used three times in the Bible: once of Pharaoh (Gen. 40) and twice of Herod Antipas (Matt. 14:6; Mark 6:21). The birthdays of kings and other high officials were regularly celebrated, especially in Egypt and Persia. But the anniversary of a common person's birth apparently was not celebrated as much as it is today.

BIRTHRIGHT—a right, privilege, or possession to which a person, especially the firstborn son, was entitled by birth in Bible times. In Israel, as in the rest of the ancient world, the firstborn son enjoyed a favored position. His birthright included a double portion of his father's assets upon his death (Deut. 21:17). Part of the firstborn's benefits also were a special blessing from the father (Gen. 27:27) and the privilege of leadership of the family (Gen. 43:33).

The inheritance rights of the firstborn were protected by law, so the father could not give his benefits to a younger son (Deut. 21:15–17). The firstborn himself, however, could lose the birthright. Because he committed incest with his father's concubine (Gen. 35:22), Reuben lost his favored position (1 Chr. 5:1–2), while Esau sold his birthright to his younger brother Jacob for a stew of lentils (Gen. 25:29–34), or for "one morsel of food" (Heb. 12:16).

Jesus was both the firstborn of his heavenly Father (John 3:16), and his earthly mother, Mary (Luke 2:7); so he enjoyed the rights and privileges of the Jewish birthright. All Christians are His brothers, sharing in His spiritual inheritance (Rom. 8:17). They are counted as "firstborn" by God's grace (Heb. 12:23).

BIRTHSTOOL—an object ("two stones" in Hebrew) upon which a woman sat during childbirth (Ex. 1:16). It may have been of Egyptian origin. The same Hebrew word is also found in Jeremiah 18:3, where it refers to a potter's wheel.

BIRZAITH [burr ZAY ihth] (well of the olive tree)—a man listed in the genealogy of the tribe of Asher. Birzaith was a son of Malchiel, a grandson of Beriah, and a great-grandson of Asher (1 Chr. 7:31).

BISHLAM [BISH lum] (son of peace)—a resident of Palestine at the time when Zerubbabel returned from captivity. Bishlam wrote a letter of protest to Artaxerxes, king of Persia, because the Jews were rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem (Ezra 4:7).

BISHOP—an overseer, elder, or pastor charged with the responsibility of spiritual leadership in a local church in New Testament times.

Before the church was founded, the Greek word for bishop was used in a general sense to refer to local gods as those who watched over people or countries. The word was later applied to men, including those who held positions as magistrates or other government offices. And eventually the term was extended to refer to officials in religious communities with various functions, including those who supervised the revenues of pagan temples.

The SEPTUAGINT (Greek translation of the Old Testament) uses "bishop" to refer to those who exercise power; sometimes it indicates those who hold positions of authority. It represents a Hebrew term that refers to those who are overseers or officers (Num. 4:16; Neh. 9:9).

In the New Testament, Jesus is called the "Overseer of your souls" (1 Pet. 2:25). In this passage the word is associated with the term shepherd. It is also used to identify the leader of a Christian community or the one who filled the office of overseer. In Acts 20:28 the elders of the church at Ephesus summoned to meet Paul are identified as overseers. Their responsibility, given by the Holy Spirit, was "to shepherd the church of God." In Philippians 1 bishops are associated with deacons, and the qualifications are outlined in 1 Timothy 3:2–7 and Titus 1:7–9. Included are standards for his personal and home life, as well as the bishop's relationships with nonbelievers.

In Acts 20:17, 28 and Titus 1:5, 7, the terms bishop and elder are used synonymously. Also the word "bishop," or its related words, appears to be synonymous with the word "shepherd," or its equivalents (Acts 20:28; 1 Pet. 2:25; 5:2).

In his work, the bishop was to oversee the flock of God, to shepherd his people, to protect them from enemies, and to teach, exhort, and encourage. He was to accomplish this primarily by being an example to his people. He was to do this willingly and with an eager spirit, not by coercion or for financial gain. To desire a position as bishop, the apostle Paul declared, was to desire a good work (1 Tim. 3:1). Also see ELDER.

BISHOP'S BIBLE (see BIBLE VERSIONS AND TRANSLATIONS).

BIT AND BRIDLE—the bridle refers to the headgear of a harness; the bit is the metal mouthpiece by which the bridle works to control an animal. These two words appear together in Psalm 32:9. James applied the term “bridle” as a symbol of the believer’s submission to God’s control: “If anyone . . . thinks he is religious, and does not bridle his tongue . . . this one’s religion is useless” (James 1:26).

BITHIAH [bih THIH uh] (daughter of the Lord)—a daughter of Pharaoh who was married to Mered, a descendant of Judah (1 Chr. 4:18). Some scholars feel that “daughter of Pharaoh” is a euphemism for “Egyptian woman” and does not necessarily imply that she was a member of the royal family.

BITHRON [BITH run]—a gorge or ravine by which Abner and his men approached Mahanaim following Asahel’s death (2 Sam. 2:29). Bithron was probably in the ARABAH (southern wilderness) on the east side of the Jordan River, in the territory of Gad.

BITHYNIA [bih THIN ih uh]—a coastal province in northwestern ASIA MINOR (see Map 7, C–1). Bithynia was bounded on the north by the Black Sea, on the south and east by Phrygia and Galatia, and on the west by Mysia. While at Mysia, Paul and Silas decided to go into Bithynia “but the Spirit did not permit them” (Acts 16:7). Later, however, the gospel reached the province; and many of the citizens of Bithynia became Christians (1 Pet. 1:1–2). The experience of Paul and Silas illustrates that God’s delays are not always denials.

BITTER HERBS—herbs eaten by the Israelites during the celebration of PASSOVER. Those herbs helped them remember their bitter experience as an enslaved people in Egypt (Ex. 1:14; 12:8; Num. 9:11). These herbs may have included such plants as sorrel, dandelions, and horseradish.

BITTERN (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BITTERNESS—in the Old Testament, a symbol of hard bondage, misery, and the ruin that follows immorality (Ex. 1:14). The Passover was to be eaten with “bitter herbs” (Num. 9:11), representing the affliction of Egyptian bondage. The waters of Marah were “bitter,” probably meaning salty, briny, brackish (Ex. 15:23). Because of the bitter circumstances in which she found herself, Naomi (“pleasant”) wanted to be called Mara (“bitter”) (Ruth 1:20). A “bitter day” (Amos 8:10) was a time of lamentation and mourning. “A bitter . . . nation” (Hab. 1:6) described the Chaldeans as a fierce, warlike people who brought misery and destruction wherever they went.

In the New Testament, the “gall of bitterness” (Acts 8:23, KJV) describes a spiritual poisoning—a heart of great wickedness—in Simon the sorcerer. A “root of bitterness” (Heb. 12:15) is a wicked person or a sin that leads to denial of the faith.

BITTERWEED (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

BITUMEN (see MINERALS OF THE BIBLE).

BIZIOTHIAH [BIHZ ih oh thigh ah]—a form of BIZJOTHJAH.

BIZJOTHJAH [bihz JOTH jah]—a town in southern Judah near Beersheba (Josh. 15:28; Biziothiah, NASB, NIV, NRSV).

BIZTHA [BIHZ thah]—one of the seven eunuchs, or chamberlains, who had charge of the harem of King Ahasuerus (Xerxes) of Persia (Esth. 1:10).

BLACK (see COLORS OF THE BIBLE).

BLACK VULTURE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BLACKSMITH (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

BLAINS (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

BLASPHEMY—the act of cursing, slandering, reviling or showing contempt or lack of reverence for God. In the Old Testament, blaspheming God was a serious crime punishable by death (Lev. 24:15–16). It was a violation of the Third Commandment, which required that the name and reputation of the Lord be upheld (Ex. 20:7).

The unbelieving Jews of Jesus’ day charged Him with blasphemy because they thought of Him only as a man while He claimed to be God’s Son (Matt. 9:3). Actually, the lawlessness of the Jews themselves was causing God’s name to be blasphemed among the Gentiles (Rom. 2:24). By their bitter opposition to Jesus and His gospel, they themselves were guilty of blasphemy (Acts 18:6). Jesus condemned as blasphemy their attributing the work of the Holy Spirit to Satan (Matt. 12:31–32).

Christians are commanded to avoid behavior that blasphemes the Lord’s name and teaching (1 Tim. 6:1).

BLAST, BLASTING—the withering of plant life caused by a hot, dry wind from the desert (Amos 4:9). In his dream in Egypt, the Pharaoh saw seven heads of grain “blighted [blasted, KJV] by the east wind” (Gen. 41:6). Joseph interpreted this to mean seven years of famine.

BLASTUS [BLAS tus]—servant—literally “the one over the bedchamber”—of Herod Agrippa I (Acts 12:20).

BLEACHER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

BLEMISH (see DISABILITIES AND DEFORMITIES).

BLESS, BLESSING—the act of declaring, or wishing, favor and goodness upon others. The blessing is not only the good effect of words; it also has the power to bring them to pass. In the Bible, important persons blessed those with less power or influence. The patriarchs pronounced benefits upon their children, often near their own deaths (Gen. 49:1–28). Even if spoken by mistake, once a blessing was given it could not be taken back (Gen. 27:33).

Leaders often blessed people, especially when getting ready to leave them. These included Moses (Deut. 33), Joshua (22:6–7), and Jesus (Luke 24:50). Equals could bless each other by being friendly (Gen. 12:3). One can also bless God, showing gratitude to Him (Deut. 8:10) in songs of praise (Ps. 103:1–2).

God also blesses people by giving life, riches, fruitfulness, or plenty (Gen. 1:22, 28). His greatest blessing is turning us from evil (Acts 3:25–26) and forgiving our sins (Rom. 4:7–8).

Cases of the opposite of blessing, or cursing, are often cited in the Bible (Deut. 27:11–26). Although the natural reaction to a curse is to curse back, Christians are called to bless—to ask for the person’s benefit (Matt. 5:44).

BLESSING, CUP OF—a technical term for the third of the cups drunk at the Jewish PASSOVER. It was used by Paul in his description of the LORD'S SUPPER (1 Cor. 10:16). Also see CUP.

BLIGHT—a reference to two kinds of diseases that attack grain. The phrase "blighted by the east wind" (Gen. 41:6, 23, 27) indicates the withering or burning of ears of grain caused by a scorching, destructive wind. Blight also refers to a pestilence similar to mildew that turns grain yellow and causes it to stop growing (Amos 4:9).

BLINDNESS (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

BLOOD—the red fluid circulating in the body that takes nourishment to the body parts and carries away waste. The word "blood" is often used literally in Scripture. Sometimes the word refers to the blood of animals (Gen. 37:31); at other times it refers to human blood (1 Kin. 22:35). The word is also used figuratively in the Bible. It may mean "blood red" (Joel 2:31) or murder (Matt. 27:24). The phrase "flesh and blood" means humanity (Heb. 2:14).

But the most important biblical concept in regard to blood is the spiritual significance of the blood of sacrificial animals. Although some scholars believe the blood primarily means the animal's life, most agree that blood refers to the animal's death. Most of the Old Testament passages that discuss sacrifices mention the death of the animal, not its life (Lev. 4:4–5). The Bible makes it clear that the satisfaction or payment for human sins was made by the death of a specified animal substitute: "For the life of the flesh is in the blood, and I have given it to you upon the altar to make atonement for your souls; for it is the blood that makes atonement for the soul" (Lev. 17:11).

In the New Testament, this Old Testament idea of sacrifice is applied to Christ's blood. References to the "blood of Christ" always mean the sacrificial death of Jesus on the cross. References to the blood of Christ were made by Paul (Rom. 3:25); Peter (1 Pet. 1:19); John (Rev. 1:5) and the author of Hebrews (Heb. 9:14). Although all have sinned, "we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins" (Eph. 1:7).

Photo by Howard Vos

- Ancient altar from Phoenicia, showing a water jar at one end and a receptacle for catching blood from animal sacrifices at the other.

BLOOD, AVENGER OF (see AVENGER OF BLOOD).

BLOOD, FLOW OF, BLOODY FLUX (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

BLOODY SWEAT—Jesus' heavy drops of perspiration as He agonized in prayer over His approaching death (Luke 22:44). Luke did not mean to imply that Jesus literally sweat blood. Rather, His distress was so great that drops of sweat fell from His brow like blood runs from a deep wound. This shows clearly that doing the will of God is not always easy or enjoyable. But in spite of His distress, Jesus refused to reject His mission. He desired above all else to fulfill God's plan.

BLUE (see COLORS OF THE BIBLE).

BOANERGES [boh uh NUR jeez] (sons of thunder)—the name given by Christ to the sons of Zebedee—James and John (Mark 3:17)—referring to their fervent spirit and boldness (Matt. 20:20–24; Mark 9:38; Luke 9:54).

BOAR (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BOAT—a small vessel propelled by oars or a sail; a fishing boat. In the NKJV the word "boat" is found only in the New Testament, in the four gospels. The boats mentioned are usually associated with the ministry of Jesus and His disciples in the area around the Sea of Galilee. At least four of Jesus' disciples were fishermen—Simon Peter, Andrew, James, and John (Matt. 4:18–22; Mark 1:16–20). On one occasion, when the multitude pressed too closely to Him, Jesus got into a boat and taught the people (Matt. 13:2; Mark 4:1). Also see SHIP.

BOAZ [BOE az] (in him is strength)—the name of a prominent man and an object in the temple:

1. A wealthy and honorable man of Bethlehem from the tribe of Judah. He was a kinsman of Elimelech, Naomi's husband, and he became the husband of RUTH, Naomi's widowed daughter-in-law (Ruth 2–4). Through their son Obed, Boaz and Ruth became ancestors of King David and of the Lord Jesus Christ (Matt. 1:5; Booz, KJV).
2. One of the two bronze pillars that stood in front of King Solomon's magnificent temple (2 Chr. 3:17). The name of the other was JACHIN.

Photo by Howard Vos

• The fields of Boaz, near the city of Bethlehem (Ruth 2:1–4).

BOCHERU [BAHK ih roo]—one of the six sons of Azel, a Benjamite of the family of King Saul (1 Chr. 8:38; Bokeru, NIV).

BOCHIM [BOE kem] (weepers)—a place on the mountain near Bethel where the Angel of the Lord rebuked the nation of Israel and the people repented and wept (Judg. 2:1, 5; Bokim, REB, NIV).

BODY—the material or physical part of a person, whether alive or dead. Some religions consider the body evil or inferior to the soul, but the Bible teaches that the body is God's good gift to us (Gen. 1:31). It is a necessary ingredient for a fully human existence (Gen. 2:7). In the Old Testament the word "body" sometimes means "corpse" (Num. 6:6). Occasionally the reference is to the body as that part of a person that is involved in reproduction (Deut. 28:4).

In the New Testament these Old Testament meanings are carried forward, but new insights appear. Paul teaches that the body is often the instrument of sin (1 Cor. 6:18); that the body must die as a penalty for sin (Rom. 7:24); and that sin dishonors a person's body (Rom. 1:24). On the other hand, believers in Christ may "put to death the deeds of the body” (Rom. 8:13) and present their bodies as holy sacrifices that please God (Rom. 12:1).

Since human life requires a body, sometimes the term “body” symbolizes the whole person. Both Jesus and Paul used the word in this way (Matt. 6:22–23; Phil 1:20). The Bible reveals little about existence after the death of the body. But complete salvation and full humanity begin not at death but at the return of Christ. Only then do believers receive their eternal resurrection bodies (1 Cor. 15:35–49).

Also see BODY OF CHRIST; BODY, SPIRITUAL.

BODY ARMOR (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

BODY OF CHRIST—a phrase used in three senses in the Bible:

1. The phrase refers to the physical body of Jesus. Not to believe He has had such a human body is heresy (1 John 4:3). His glorified body is the model for the resurrection bodies of Christians (Phil. 3:11).
2. “Body of Christ” is used of the bread of the Lord’s Supper (1 Cor. 10:16).
3. The apostle Paul uses the phrase as a symbol of the church. In Romans 12:14–15 and 1 Corinthians 12:12–27, he emphasizes the church’s unity, even though there are varied gifts, ministries, and personalities. In Ephesians 4:4–12 and Colossians 1:18–24, Christ as the head of the church is the focus of Paul’s ministry.

BODY, SPIRITUAL—the body of a person after its resurrection and glorification, no longer subject to sin, disease, and death. After His resurrection, Jesus was not a ghost or a spirit; he was able to eat “a piece of a broiled fish and some honeycomb” (Luke 24:42). And yet Jesus’ body already had certain spiritual qualities. Even before His ascension He was able to enter a room where His disciples were assembled, although the doors were shut (John 20:19).

The apostle Paul specifically mentions the “spiritual body” in his first epistle to the Corinthians (1 Cor. 15:42–44). Paul made it clear that the spiritual body is not subject to sin or death. Paul encouraged believers to hold fast to their faith in Christ, who will give them their spiritual body in the life to come.

BOHAN [BOE han] (thumb)—a son or descendant of Reuben for whom a boundary stone—apparently marking the boundary between the territories of Judah and Benjamin—was named (Josh. 18:17).

BOILS (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

BOKERU [BOAK ih roo]—a form of BOCHERU.

BOKIM [BOE kem]—a form of BOCHIM.

BOLT (see LOCK).

BOND—an obligation or restraint of any kind. In the Bible, the word is used literally, of the fetters and chains of prisoners (Judg. 15:14). In a figurative sense, it refers to the bonds of sin and wickedness (Is. 58:6), covenant obligation (Ezek. 20:37), and peace and love (Eph. 4:3).

BONDAGE, BONDMAN, BOND SERVANT (see SLAVE, SLAVERY).

BONE, BONES—the skeletal framework of the human body. The bones of Joseph were revered by the Israelites (Ex. 13:19). In the prophet Ezekiel's vision of the valley of dry bones (Ezek. 37:1–14), the dead bones came to life, showing that the Jews would be restored as a nation after their years of CAPTIVITY in Babylon.

BONNET—KJV word for TURBAN, a distinctive type of headdress worn by men in Bible times.

BOOK—a collection of written sheets, bound together along one edge and protected by a cover. In Bible times a book was almost anything in written form, usually preserved on a scroll, a roll of papyrus, leather, or parchment.

Old Testament references to a book were more comprehensive than our modern usage of the word. For example, the Bible uses "scroll" and "book" almost interchangeably to specify a certificate or a bill—any written notice certifying a contract or a decision (Ex. 17:14). By these standards, a simple sales receipt could be called a book.

Book and scroll were used interchangeably until the second century A.D. when the CODEX was introduced. The codex was the first attempt to stack sheets, fasten them together, and bind them on one edge. This forerunner of today’s book eliminated the problem of rolling and unrolling several bulky scrolls in order to read a written document.

The Bible sometimes uses the idea of book in a figurative manner. To “eat a book” (Jer. 15:16; Ezek. 2:8—3:3) refers to the need to absorb the Word of God into one’s system, just as the body digests food. The Hebrew nation understood exactly what this meant; on their first day of school six-year-old boys were given small cakes with Old Testament verses written on them to eat. They also licked honey off their slates and were admonished to absorb the teachings of the Old Testament just as they had eaten these cakes and honey.

Some references to symbolic language also appear in Bible passages that mention the “Book of Life” (Phil. 4:3). All Jewish people were registered in the citizenship book (Jer. 22:30). Heaven is the city whose citizens are recorded in the Book of Life, including the ones already there and those on the way.

The Bible also speaks of a “sealed book”—one with its contents unrevealed (Dan. 12:4). However, these unsealed books can be understood with the right key. In Revelation 5:5 and 22:10, only the Son of God was worthy to open the seals of the book of the future.

The “book of the genealogy” was a book containing a family’s genealogical record. It could even be the record of a nation, such as a history book (Matt. 1:1).

A “book of remembrance” refers to a book with the names and deeds of people who had done special favors for the king. This custom originated in ancient Persia. The name of MORDECAI was written in King Ahasuerus’ book when he saved the king’s life by reporting a plot to kill him (Esth. 6:1–2). Malachi 3:16 refers to such a “book of remembrance” in which the names of those who fear the Lord and meditate on His name are recorded.

Luke 1:1 refers to a “narrative” of the account of the life of Christ. John 21:25 indicates that such an account would be so long that “even the world itself could not contain the books that would be written.”

Also see LIBRARY; WRITING.

BOOK OF THE COVENANT (see COVENANT, BOOK OF).

BOOK OF LIFE—a heavenly book in which the names of the righteous (the redeemed or saved) are written. The concept of God’s having a “Book of Life” was probably first enunciated by Moses, who prayed that God would blot him out of God’s book rather than dooming his fellow Israelites (Ex. 32:32–33). This concept likely arose from the practice of registering people by genealogy (Jer. 22:30; Neh. 7:5, 64) and keeping a record of priests and Levites (Neh. 12:22–23).

At the end of time (Rev. 20:11–15), those whose names are not written in the Book of Life will be “cast into the lake of fire” (Rev. 20:15). But those whose names appear there (Rev. 21:27) will be allowed to enter the New Jerusalem.

BOOTH—a temporary shelter made of shrubs and tree branches, which protected cattle against the weather (Gen. 33:17). Booths were used also by keepers of vineyards (Is. 1:8) and soldiers on the battlefield (2 Sam. 11:11).

During the Feast of Tabernacles (or Feast of Booths), the Israelites made booths and lived in them for seven days. This was to remind them of their temporary dwellings in the wilderness, when God delivered them from Egyptian bondage (Neh. 8:13–18). The Book of Job uses “booth” as a symbol of the transitory, impermanent security of the wicked (Job 27:18).

Also see FEASTS AND FESTIVALS.

BOOTHS, FEAST OF (see FEASTS AND FESTIVALS).

BOOTY—plunder and spoils of war. Booty consisted of everything of value taken in battle—gold and silver, clothing, food, household items, weapons, implements of agriculture, camels, sheep, cattle, and men, women, and children to be used as slaves (Gen. 14:11–12; Jer. 49:32).

BOOZ [BOE ohz]—Greek form of BOAZ.

BOR ASHAN [bore AY shan]—a form of ASHAN.

BORDER—a word referring to an enclosed place (Gen. 10:19), a boundary line (Num. 34:3–12), a landmark (Hos. 5:10), or the fringe of a garment (Luke 8:44). In the ancient world, boundary stones were often used to mark property lines (Deut. 19:14).

BORN AGAIN (see NEW BIRTH).

BORROW—to receive something with the intention of returning it. In ancient Israel borrowing was not done to set up or expand a business; instead, it was to allow peasant farmers to survive through periods of poverty. Therefore, biblical regulations emphasize neighborliness and helpfulness (Deut. 15:1–11). When loans were made, the borrowers gave the creditors a pledge to guarantee that the loan would be repaid (Ex. 22:26–27). This pledge was returned once the loan was repaid.

By New Testament times, the economy had changed drastically and commercial loans were common (Luke 16:1–8). Jesus did not condemn charging interest (Luke 19:23). However, he did admonish lenders to be fair with creditors and to show them the love and respect they expected themselves (Luke 6:31).

BOSCATH [BAHS kath]—a form of BOZKATH.

BOSOM—another word for the chest of the human body, usually used symbolically in the Bible to suggest closeness or intimacy. Receiving something into the bosom means accepting it completely (Is. 40:11). The word "bosom" may also imply a person's inner thoughts (Ps. 35:13, KJV; heart, NKJV). "Abraham's bosom" symbolizes a place of honor (Luke 16:22–23). Bosom also suggests the intimacy between Jesus and His heavenly Father (John 1:18).

BOSOM, ABRAHAM'S (see ABRAHAM'S BOSOM).

BOSOR [BOH sore]—a form of BEOR.

BOTCH (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

BOTTLE—a container for carrying liquids (Jer. 13:12). Bottle is actually a mistranslation, since glass bottles as we know them were not in use in Old Testament times. Liquid-carrying containers were made of pottery or leather.

Large pottery jugs were used to carry water from the village well and to store it in the house. Job 38:37 describes the storm clouds as the "bottles of heaven."

As pottery was breakable and unsuitable for many uses, some "bottles" were animal skins (usually goatskins) sewn together and sealed to make them watertight. The Bible contains many references to these skins containing wine (Josh 9:4), water (Ps. 33:7), or milk (Judg. 4:19).

Jesus recognized that wineskins, once they had been used, tend to become brittle. When subjected to the increasing pressure caused by the fermenting process of winemaking, they would burst, causing the loss of the wine (Luke 5:37–38). New skins were more resilient and flexible, able to take the pressure of such fermentation.

Small pottery flasks were used for oil (1 Kin. 17:12) or honey (1 Kin. 14:3). The prophet Jeremiah spoke of one of these honey jars in his object lesson about God's certain destruction of the nation of Judah (Jer. 19:1, 10).

Also see POTTERY; WINESKIN.

BOTTOMLESS PIT (see ABYSS).

BOUNDARY STONES—rocks that mark the boundary lines between fields, districts, and nations (Gen. 31:51–52). In Bible times, removing boundary stones was prohibited by the Mosaic Law (Deut. 19:14; Prov. 23:10). Also see BORDER; LANDMARK.

BOW (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

BOWELS—the internal parts of a person's body. Symbolically, the bowels were considered the seat of emotions and feelings, much like the use of the word "heart." Hence "bowels" means pity, compassion, and tenderness.

BOWING—the practice of bowing down or bending the knee. In a more pronounced form, it involved prostration, the practice of falling upon the knees, gradually inclining the body, and touching the forehead to the ground. In Bible times such practices were intended to convey an attitude of reverence, respect, humility, and homage toward others. When he met Esau, Jacob "bowed himself to the ground seven times" (Gen. 33:3).

BOWL—a shallow container for holding food or fluids. In the Old Testament, bowls are often spoken of in connection with the sanctuary and its services. Vessels holding the olive oil for the seven-branched lampstand in the Holy Place were called bowls (Ex. 25:29–34), and the sacrifices offered by the leaders of Israel at the dedication of the tabernacle were made in silver bowls (Num. 7:13–85).

The word “bowl” sometimes designates a kneading trough or bread bowl (Ex. 12:34) or a large banquet bowl (Judg. 5:25; Amos 6:6). Also see BASIN; CUP; VESSEL.

BOWSHOT—the distance an arrow can be shot (Gen. 21:16).

BOX—a container for holding oil, perfume, or a similar substance. Elisha the prophet sent an apprentice prophet with a box (2 Kin. 9:1, 3, KJV) of oil to anoint Jehu as king of Israel. Other translations are flask (NKJV; NIV; NRSV; and REB). Also see FLASK.

BOX TREE (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

BOZEZ [BOE zez] (shining)—one of two sharp rocks in the mountain pass between Michmash and Gibeah that Jonathan, the son of Saul, climbed in his attack upon the Philistines (1 Sam. 14:4–5).

BOZKATH [BAHZ kath]—a town between Eglon and Lachish (Josh. 15:39) and the birthplace of Adaiah, the mother of King Josiah (2 Kin. 22:1; Boscath, KJV).

BOZRAH [BAHZ ruh]—the name of two cities in the Old Testament:

1. The royal city of Edom (see Map 4, B–5), on which several of the prophets pronounced divine judgment (Jer. 49:13, 22). The Lord is represented as coming from Bozrah, wearing blood-sprinkled garments, having trodden the winepress of His wrath upon the Gentile nations (Is. 63:1–6).
2. A city in the tableland of Moab, which also received prophecy of coming divine judgment (Jer. 48:24).

BRACELET—a piece of jewelry, usually of gold or silver, worn on the wrist of women in Bible times (Gen. 24:22; Is. 3:19). King Saul is also described as wearing a bracelet (2 Sam. 1:10), but this was probably an armband worn by the Israelite warriors of his day. Also see JEWELRY.

BRANCH—a secondary stem or limb growing from the trunk of a tree. The arms of the golden lampstand made for the tabernacle are also described as branches (Ex. 37:17–22). But the most significant use of this word in the Bible is a symbolic title for the MESSIAH.

This messianic usage apparently originated with the prophet Isaiah (4:2; 11:1). It reappeared in the prophecies of Jeremiah, where it referred to a future king in the line of David, whose coming would bring judgment and righteousness (Jer. 23:5–6). After the captivity, the term was a recognized title of the Messiah (Zech. 3:8). By this time it had taken on priestly, as well as kingly, connotations. Both parts of this expectation are fulfilled by Christ, the Son of David, who is also our great High Priest.

BRASS (see METALS OF THE BIBLE; MINERALS OF THE BIBLE.)

BRAY—to utter the loud, harsh cry of a donkey (Job 6:5). The same word is used to describe the empty words of those who mocked and ridiculed Job (Job 30:7).

BRAZEN SEA (see BRONZE SEA).

BRAZEN SERPENT (see BRONZE SERPENT).

BREAD—a staple food made from flour or meal and mixed with a liquid, usually combined with leaven and kneaded into dough, then shaped into loaves and baked.

Bread played an important role in Israel's worship. During the celebration of PENTECOST, "two wave loaves of two-tenths of an ephah . . . of fine flour . . . baked with leaven" were offered with the animal sacrifices (Lev. 23:17). A type of ritualistic bread known as SHOWBREAD consisted of twelve loaves baked without leaven by the Levites and placed weekly in the tabernacle, and later in the temple (Ex. 25:30). When removed at the end of the week, the loaves were eaten by the priests. The purpose of the showbread was to symbolize God's presence with His people.

When fleeing from bondage in Egypt, the Israelites made unleavened bread, or bread without yeast (Ex. 12:8; 13:6–7). For that reason, the EXODUS was remembered annually by eating unleavened bread for a period of seven days (Lev. 23:6). This celebration was called "the Days of Unleavened Bread" (Acts 12:3).

In the New Testament, Satan tempted Jesus by saying, "If You are the Son of God, command that these stones become bread." But Jesus answered, "It is written, 'Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceeds from the mouth of God' " (Matt. 4:3–4).

In the Lord's Prayer, Jesus taught his disciples to pray, "Give us this day our daily bread" (Matt. 5:11). In the Gospel of John, Jesus called Himself “the true bread from heaven” (6:32), “the bread of God” (6:33), “the bread of life” (6:35), and “the bread which came down from heaven” (6:41). The Old Testament background for these references is the MANNA that fell miraculously from heaven to sustain God’s people during the Exodus (Exodus 16). Symbolically, Jesus is the heavenly manna, the spiritual or supernatural bread given by the heavenly Father to those who ask, seek, and knock (Rev. 2:17).

On the night before His crucifixion, Jesus instituted the Lord’s Supper: “And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, blessed it and broke it, and gave it to the disciples and said, ‘Take, eat; this is My body’ ” (Matt. 26:26). By His sacrifice, Christ became the Bread of Life for His people, that they may eat of Him and find forgiveness of sin and eternal life.

Bread is also spoken of often in figurative language in the Bible. “The bread of tears” (Ps. 80:5) and “the bread of sorrows” (Ps. 127:2) refer to food eaten in grief and distress. The “bread of mourners” (Hos. 9:4) is bread eaten at the time of death. The “bread of adversity” symbolizes hardship (Is. 30:20). The virtuous woman does not eat “the bread of idleness” (Prov. 31:27); she is diligent, hard-working, and productive.

Securing bread “without money and without price” (Is. 55:1) is finding that free gift of God that not only satisfies spiritual needs, but also bestows abundant life.

Photo by Howard Vos

- Mills for grinding wheat at an ancient bakery in Ostia, Italy.

BREAD, FEAST OF UNLEAVENED (see FEASTS AND FESTIVALS).

BREAST—a word for the chest of the human body. The word is usually used literally in the Bible. Beating one's breast was a sign of intense sorrow (Luke 23:48). The disciple whom Jesus loved leaned on Jesus' breast (John 13:23, 25), indicating a feeling of love and close comradeship.

BREASTPLATE (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

BREASTPLATE OF HIGH PRIEST (see PRIEST, HIGH).

BREATH—air drawn into the body to sustain life. Since breathing is the most obvious sign of life, the phrase "breath of life" is used frequently in the Bible to mean "alive" or "living" (Gen. 2:7; 6:17). Breath is recognized as the gift of God to His creatures (Job 12:10). But since breath is usually invisible, it also may symbolize something without substance or a temporary state of existence (Ps. 144:4).

In a different sense, the "breath of God" (Job 37:10) signifies God's power. This stands in striking contrast to heathen gods, which have neither power nor life. The word "breath" may be used figuratively, as when Jesus "breathed" the Holy Spirit upon His disciples (John 20:22).

BREECHES—KJV word for TROUSERS. Also see DRESS OF THE BIBLE.

BRETHREN (see BROTHER).

BREWER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

BRIBE—a payment—such as money or a favor—given to people to induce them to act dishonestly. The Bible frequently condemns the giving and receiving of bribes (Amos 5:12). The psalmist spoke of sinners and bloodthirsty men, each of "whose right hand is full of bribes" (Ps. 26:10).

BRICK—a common building material in the ancient world, usually rectangular in shape and composed of clay or mud, along with other ingredients such as straw (Ex. 5:7–9) or sand. Bricks were usually baked by the sun; but they could also be fired in a kiln, or oven, to produce greater strength and hardness. Fired bricks were most common in Roman times, although they were made earlier, especially in Mesopotamia. An allusion to the process of firing bricks is found in the story of the Tower of Babel (Gen. 11:3).

The earliest bricks were shaped by hand; later, they were formed with wooden molds. Brickmaking involved several stages. A good clay source was absolutely necessary; then the clay was sifted and mixed to the desired consistency by adding water. Generally, a temper, often straw, was added; this temper acted as a binder for poor clays and prevented warping and cracking during the drying process. Following this, the bricks were shaped and then dried. Bricks were often inscribed with an official's name, the name of a building, or a dedicatory inscription.

The Bible contains a few references to brickmaking. David forced the defeated Ammonites to labor at the brickworks (2 Sam. 12:31). The Pharaoh in Egypt withheld straw from the Israelite brickmakers while demanding that they maintain the daily quota of brick production (Ex. 5:7–9).

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• A brick from ancient Babylon impressed with the name of King Nebuchadnezzar.

BRICKMAKER, BRICKWORKER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

• An Egyptian brickmaker using the ancient method of drying bricks in the sun.

BRIDE—a woman who has recently been married or is about to be married. In biblical times, it was customary for fathers to select wives for their sons (Gen. 38:6). Occasionally, a son might express his preference for a bride to his father, and his father would negotiate with the parents or guardians of the young woman in question (Gen. 34:4, 8). The father of the young woman also might initiate wedding proposals (Ex. 2:21).

On her wedding day, the bride bathed and put on white robes, often richly embroidered. She put her bridal girdle around her waist, covered her face with a veil, and adorned her head with a garland.

The bridegroom, attended by his friends, set out from his house to the house of his bride's parents. The procession was a happy occasion and was often accompanied by singers and musicians. He took his bride back to his own (or his parents') house accompanied by singing, the playing of musical instruments, and dancing. The wedding festivities continued for a week or more (Judg. 14:12).

In the Old Testament, the word "marriage" is used to describe God's spiritual relationship with his chosen people, Israel (Ps. 45; Is. 54:6). When God's people fell into sin, especially idolatry, the sin was likened to adultery on the part of a wife (Jer. 3:1–20).

In the New Testament, the analogy is continued: Christ is the Bridegroom (John 3:29), and the church is His bride (Eph. 5:25–33; Rev. 21:2). The apostle Paul counsels husbands and wives to imitate the spiritual closeness and love that Christ has for His bride, the church (Eph. 5:22–33).

BRIDEGROOM—a man who has recently been married or is about to be married. The term is applied symbolically to the MESSIAH. John the Baptist called Jesus the "bridegroom" (John 3:29). Jesus referred to Himself as the "bridegroom" (Matt. 9:15). Jesus' bride, of course, is the church—those who are spiritually united with Him by faith.

BRIDEGROOM, FRIEND OF THE—the "best man" in the wedding ceremony of the ancient world. He was the one who assisted in planning the marriage. In John 3:29, the reference is to John the Baptist (the "bridegroom" being Jesus).

BRIDLE (see BIT AND BRIDLE).

BRIER (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

BRIGANDINE (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

BRIMSTONE (see MINERALS OF THE BIBLE).

BROIDERED (see NEEDLEWORK).

BROKEN-FOOTED, BROKEN-HANDED (see DISABILITIES AND DEFORMITIES).

BRONZE (see MINERALS OF THE BIBLE).

BRONZE SEA—a huge basin made of cast bronze near the entrance of the temple and in front of the altar (1 Kin. 7:23–26). The bronze sea, about 4$^1/_2$ meters (15 feet) in diameter, was cast by Hiram, a bronze worker employed by Solomon (1 Kin. 7:13–14). The bronze sea was supported by twelve oxen—or bulls—consisting of three animals pointing toward each of the four points of the compass. According to 2 Chronicles 4:6, the purpose of the sea was "for the priests to wash in." The Babylonians broke the bronze sea and carried the pieces to Babylon (2 Kin. 25:13).

BRONZE SERPENT—a metal image that Moses raised on a pole in the wilderness at God's command to save the Israelites from death (Num. 21:4–9).

Israel's unbelief and rebellion during the Exodus from Egypt resulted in God's judgment. God sent "fiery serpents" (Num. 21:6; poisonous or venomous snakes, REB, NIV), and many Israelites were bitten. Because they repented and begged for deliverance, God instructed Moses to make a bronze serpent (serpent of brass, KJV) and place it on a pole. All who looked at the bronze serpent were saved from death.

When the Israelites entered the land of Canaan, they carried the bronze serpent with them and preserved it until the time of Hezekiah, king of Judah (715–686 B.C.). During his religious reform, Hezekiah destroyed the image because it had been turned into an idol that the people regarded with superstitious reverence (2 Kin. 18:4).

Jesus compared His coming crucifixion to this saving event in the wilderness: "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up, that whoever believes in Him should not perish but have eternal life" (John 3:14–15). Just as the bronze serpent brought deliverance from poisonous snakes, so the Son of Man would be raised to deliver His people from sin. Just as the Israelites had to look in faith at the bronze serpent to be saved from death, so we must look in faith at the crucified Christ to have eternal life.

BRONZE WORKER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

BROOK—a small stream, running through a valley, such as the Arnon (Num. 21:13), Jabbok (Num. 21:24), and Kidron (2 Sam. 15:23). The word “brook” can also refer to the bed of such a stream, called a wadi in Arabic—a stream that is usually dry except during the rainy season.

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

• A flock of goats drinking from the Brook Kidron, which begins northeast of Jerusalem and empties eventually into the Dead Sea.

BROOM (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

BROTHER—a male offspring of one’s parents or of one’s father or mother. Famous brothers of the Bible include Moses and Aaron (Ex. 6:20), and Peter and Andrew (Matt. 4:18). The term “brother” was also used in the early church to refer to the love of Christian believers for one another (Acts 9:17). Also see FAMILY.

BROTHERLY LOVE—the love of brothers (or sisters) for each other; the love of fellow Christians for one another, all being children of the same Father in a special sense. Occasionally the New Testament uses the word “brother” to refer simply to another human being, whether a Christian or not (Matt. 25:40), or to one’s fellow countryman (Rom. 9:3). Usually, however, it is used of a fellow believer in Christ. This is true of all places where the concept of brotherly love, or brotherly kindness, appears.

In the Old Testament, Israelites were taught not to hate their brothers: “You shall not hate your brother in your heart . . . but you shall love your neighbor as yourself" (Lev. 19:17–18). This emphasis is continued and is made even more positive in the New Testament. Believers are exhorted to "be kindly affectionate to one another with brotherly love" (Rom. 12:10), to "let brotherly love continue" (Heb. 13:1), to "love the brotherhood" (1 Pet. 2:17), and to "love as brothers" (1 Pet. 3:8).

Brotherly love is to be the badge, or hallmark, of a Christian (John 13:35). The Greek word for brotherly love (Philadelphia) appears as the name of a city in the province of Asia mentioned in the Book of Revelation (Rev. 1:11).

BROTHERS, LORD'S—Jesus' half-brothers, sons of Mary and Joseph. In 1 Corinthians 9:5 Paul mentions in passing the ministry of "the brothers of the Lord." Also, in Galatians 1:19 Paul calls James "the Lord's brother." The gospels list four brothers in all—"James, Joses (or Joseph, NASB, REB, NIV, NRSV), Simon, and Judas" (Matt. 13:55), in addition to unnamed sisters.

Some have questioned whether "brothers" should be understood in a literal sense. Those who argue that Mary remained a virgin throughout her life take the word "brothers" to refer either to sons of Joseph by a prior marriage or to cousins of Jesus. But both these possibilities are unlikely.

The gospels do not suggest that Mary was a perpetual virgin. The designation of Jesus as Mary's "firstborn Son" implies that she had other sons as well (Matt. 1:25). No New Testament evidence can be cited in support of the "sons of Joseph" theory. Likewise, the possibility that they were the cousins of Jesus finds no New Testament confirmation. Other words in the Greek language are generally used to indicate "cousin" (Col. 4:10), "sister's son" (Acts 23:16), or the more general "relatives" (Mark 6:4). The gospels probably would not have called these four the "Lord's brothers" if, in fact, they were really cousins.

Finally, the incident recorded in Matthew 12:46–50 is decisive. Here, as elsewhere (Mark 3:31–35; Luke 8:19–21; John 2:12; Acts 1:14), Jesus' mother is mentioned along with his brothers as if they were all in one family. Jesus grew up in a typical family of the time. This formed part of His training as one who was fully human as well as fully divine.

BROTHER'S WIFE—a biblical term for "sister-in-law" (Deut. 25:7). During Old Testament days, if a man died with no male heir, his brother was obligated to marry his widow and produce a son. This son would continue the family's name and would honor the dead brother. This custom was known as LEVIRATE MARRIAGE. The marriage of Boaz to Ruth is a good example of this practice (Ruth 4:1–10). Also see FAMILY.

BROWN (see COLORS OF THE BIBLE).

BRUISE—a surface wound. In Bible times, animals with bruises were unacceptable sacrifices (Lev. 22:24). But the sacrificial death of Jesus required him to be "bruised for our iniquities" (Is. 53:5), a fulfillment of Genesis 3:15 (also see Is. 53:10). The prophet Isaiah also spoke of the bruised body of the nation of Judah to indicate its sin and moral decay (Is. 1:6).

BUCK (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BUCKET—a container made of animal skin and used for drawing water from a well or cistern (Num. 24:7; Is. 40:15). The mouth of the leather bucket was kept open by two sticks or crosspieces. A similar kind of container is still used in some parts of Israel.

BUCKLER (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

BUFFALO (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BUGLE (see MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS OF THE BIBLE).

BUILDER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

BUKKI [BUHK eye]—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A chief of the tribe of Dan appointed by Moses to help divide the inheritance among the tribes (Num. 34:22).
2. A son of Abishua (1 Chr. 6:5, 51).

BUKKIAH [buh KIE ah]—a son of Heman and a musician in the temple (1 Chr. 25:4, 13).

BUL [bool]—the Canaanite name of the eighth month of the Israelite year (1 Kin. 6:38). Also see CALENDAR.

BULL, BULLOCK (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BULRUSH (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

BULRUSHES, ARK OF (see ARK OF MOSES; PAPYRUS).

BULWARKS—towers built along city walls from which defenders shot arrows and hurled large stones at the enemy (Ps. 48:13; Is. 26:1).

BUNAH [BYOO nuh] (understanding)—the head of a family of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 2:25).

BUNNI [BUHN eye] (my understanding)—the name of two or three men in the Old Testament:

1. A contemporary of Ezra who was present when the Book of the Law was read (Neh. 9:4).
2. A leader of the people who sealed the covenant with Nehemiah (Neh. 10:15).
3. The father of Hashabiah and a temple official (Neh. 11:15), perhaps the same person as No. 1.

BURDEN—a heavy load or weight. This weight can be a literal burden (Ex. 23:5) or a figurative burden (Num. 11:11, 17). The prophets frequently spoke of their messages as burdens. A prophetic utterance or oracle usually was ominous and foreboding, a denouncing of evil and a pronouncing of judgment against a place or a people (Is. 13:1; Ezek. 12:10; Hos. 8:10).

BURGLARY (see CRIME).

BURIAL—the interment of the dead. Due to the hot climate of Canaan, dead bodies decayed rapidly, so burial usually took place within a few hours after death. If someone died late in the day, burial took place the next day, but always within twenty-four hours after death.

When death occurred, the oldest son or nearest of kin closed the eyes of the dead (Gen. 46:4), and the mouth was closed and the jaws bound up (John 11:44). After the body was washed (Acts 9:37), it was usually wrapped in cloth. The wealthy used linen with spices placed between the folds (John 19:40).

The Hebrews did not follow the Greek custom of cremation, except in an emergency, such as in the case of Saul and his sons, who were slain by the Philistines (1 Sam. 31:12). After the valiant men had burned the bodies of Saul and his sons, however, they buried their bones (1 Sam. 31:13).

Neither did the Israelites generally use coffins or embalm their dead. The only biblical mention of a COFFIN (KJV) is in the Egyptian context of Genesis 50:26, where it may refer to a sarcophagus made of limestone. After it was wrapped, the body was placed on a BIER and taken to the burial place (2 Sam. 3:31–32).

Depending upon economic and social status, burial was either in a shallow grave covered with stones or in a cave or tomb hewn out of stone. A tomb was made secure by rolling a circular stone over the entrance and sealing it (Mark 16:3–4). This was done to secure the body from animals. Graves were often marked with a large, upright stone.

For a body not to be buried was considered a great shame and a sign of God’s judgment (1 Kin. 14:11; 2 Kin. 9:36–37). Unburied bodies polluted the land (Ezek. 39:11–16).

The Egyptians and the Babylonians took great pains to prepare their dead for the afterlife. Personal belongings, as well as food and drink, were often placed in the graves. The Egyptians perfected the intricate process of mummification, which included EMBALMING. In the interiors of the pyramids, the mummified bodies of Egyptian royalty were buried. Babylonians, Greeks, and Romans often cremated their dead and deposited their ashes in ornate funeral urns.

BURN—to consume with fire. The words are used often in a literal way, as in the case of the burning bush (Ex. 3:2) and the fiery furnace (Dan. 3:20–25). They are also used figuratively, of anger (Ex. 32:10–11), jealousy (Ps. 79:5), and strong emotion (Luke 24:32).

BURNING BUSH—the flaming shrub at Mount Horeb through which Moses became aware of the presence of God (Ex. 3:2–4). Attracted by the phenomenon, Moses turned aside to see why the bush did not burn. Some scholars believe the burning bush symbolized Israel, which had endured and survived the "fiery trial" of Egyptian bondage. The bush may have been a thornbush. Also see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE.

BURNT OFFERING (see SACRIFICIAL OFFERINGS).

BUSHEL (see WEIGHTS AND MEASURES).

BUSTARD (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BUSYBODY—a gossipy, meddlesome person; one who pries into the affairs of others (2 Thess. 3:11). This type of behavior is not appropriate for Christians.

BUTLER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

BUTTER—a food made by churning milk. Abraham offered butter and milk and freshly cooked veal to his three heavenly guests (Gen. 18:8). Some references to "butter" in the KJV are translated by the NKJV as "curds" (Deut. 32:14) and "cream" (Judg. 5:25). In making butter, milk was taken from a camel, cow, goat, or sheep and poured into an animal skin. The skin was then suspended between two poles and pushed back and forth until the butter was ready.

BUYING—the act of taking possession of goods or property in exchange for money. The Bible contains many references to the practices of buying and selling. Abraham bought the cave of Machpelah, near Hebron (Gen. 23), and David bought the threshing floor of Araunah the Jebusite (2 Sam. 24:18–25). The prophet Amos denounced those who cheated the poor in their acts of buying and selling (Amos 8:5–6).

The world of commerce provides one of the most beautiful descriptions of the sacrifice of Christ to be found in the Bible. The church founded by Jesus, according to the apostle Paul, was "purchased with His own blood" (Acts 20:28). This purchase price is a measure of the importance that God places on His people.

BUZ [buhz]—the name of two men and one place in the Old Testament:

1. The second son of Milcah and Nahor (Gen. 22:21).

2. A son of Abihail in the genealogy of the tribe of Gad (1 Chr. 5:14).
3. A place mentioned in Jeremiah 25:23 from which Elihu's father, "the Buzite," came (Job 32:2, 6). Buz probably was in northern Arabia, although the exact location is uncertain.

BUZI [BYOO zie]—the father of the prophet Ezekiel (Ezek. 1:3).

BUZITE [BYOO zite]—one who belonged to the Aramean tribe of BUZ (Job 32:2, 6; Jer. 25:23).

BUZZARD (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

BYBLOS [BIB lohs]—a form of GEBAL.

C

CABBON [KAB on]—a town in the Shephelah, or lowland plain, of Judah near Eglon and Lachish (Josh. 15:40).

CABUL [ka BUL]—the name of a town and a district in the Old Testament:

1. A border town in the territory of Asher (Josh. 19:27), still known as Kabul, a village located about 14 kilometers (9 miles) southeast of Acre.
2. A district in Galilee (or Naphtali) made up of twenty cities. After Hiram, king of Tyre, received these cities as a gift from King Solomon, he gave the name Cabul to this region (1 Kin. 9:11–13; 2 Chr. 8:2).

CAESAR [SEE zur]—a title applied to several emperors of the Roman Empire, beginning with Augustus. Several of these emperors are mentioned in the New Testament:

1. Augustus (27 B.C.—A.D. 14), who issued a decree for the registration of all persons within the bounds of the Roman Empire (Luke 2:1). This involved the province of Judea in Palestine, thus affecting the lives of Joseph and Mary, who traveled to Bethlehem to register. During this trip Jesus was born.
2. Tiberius (A.D. 14–37), the stepson of Augustus, is the "Caesar" mentioned in the Gospels (except for Luke 2:1). He was suspicious of rivals and severe in discipline of offenders (Matt. 22:17; Luke 3:1; 20:22; 23:2; John 19:12).
3. Claudius (A.D. 41–54), who attempted to reduce strife within the empire, as shown by his decree mentioned in Acts 18:2. He is also mentioned in Acts 11:28.
4. Nero (A.D. 54–68), known more for his various artistic pursuits than for his role as emperor. In the final years of his reign, his mind deteriorated and he ended his life by suicide. He was the first Roman emperor to persecute Christians (in Rome, A.D. 64). The apostle Paul appealed to Nero for Roman justice (Acts 25:11), probably about A.D. 60. Also see Acts 17:7; 25:8, 12, 21; 26:32; 27:24; 28:19.

Also see AUGUSTUS; CLAUDIUS; NERO; TIBERIUS.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Ruins of the palaces of the Caesars, emperors of the Roman Empire, in the capital city of Rome.

CAESAREA [sess uh REE uh] (pertaining to Caesar)—an important biblical seaport located south of modern Haifa (see Map 6, A–3). Built at enormous expense by HEROD the Great between 25 and 13 B.C., and named in honor of Caesar Augustus, the city was sometimes called Caesarea of Palestine to distinguish it from Caesarea Philippi.

Herod spent twelve years building his seaport jewel on the site of an ancient Phoenician city named Strato's Tower. He constructed a huge breakwater. The enormous stones he used in this project were 15.25 meters (50 feet) long, 5.5 meters (18 feet) wide and 2.75 meters (9 feet) deep. Some of them still can be seen extending 45.75 meters (150 feet) from the shore.

Caesarea frequently was the scene of disturbances, as cities of mixed Jewish–Gentile population tended to be. When Pilate was prefect (governor) of Judea, he lived in the governor's residence at Caesarea. In 1961, a stone inscribed with his name was found in the ruins of an ancient amphitheater there. Philip the evangelist preached there (Acts 8:40), and Peter was sent there to minister to the Roman centurion CORNELIUS (Acts 10:1, 24; 11:11). Herod Agrippa I died at Caesarea, being "eaten of worms" (Acts 12:19–23).

Caesarea was prominent in the ministry of the apostle Paul as well. After Paul's conversion, some brethren brought him to the port at Caesarea to escape the Hellenists and sail to his hometown of Tarsus (Acts 9:30). Paul made Caesarea his port of call after both his second and third missionary journeys (Acts 18:22; 21:8). Felix sent Paul to Caesarea for trial (Acts 23:23, 33) and the apostle spent two years in prison before making his celebrated defense before Festus and Agrippa (Acts 26). Paul sailed from the harbor in chains to appeal his case before the emperor in Rome (Acts 25:11; 26:1–13).

• These man-made breakwaters built by the Romans turned Caesarea into a major Mediterranean port city.

CAESAREA PHILIPPI [sess uh REE uh FILL uh pie] (Caesar's city of Philip)—a city on the southwestern slope of Mount Hermon (see Map 6, C–1) and at the northernmost extent of Jesus' ministry (Matt. 16:13; Mark 8:27). In New Testament times the city was known as Paneas, although Philip the tetrarch renamed the city Caesarea Philippi, in honor of the Roman emperor Augustus Caesar. Agrippa II later changed its name to Neronias, in honor of Nero. The present-day village of Baniyas is built on the same site. It was near Caesarea Philippi that Jesus asked His disciples who He was and received the inspired answer from Simon Peter: "You are the Christ, the Son of the living God" (Matt. 16:16).

CAESAR'S HOUSEHOLD—all the slaves and freemen in the emperor's palace on the Palatine Hill at Rome. Paul sent his greeting to them at the close of his letter to the Philippians (Phil. 4:22; in the emperor’s service, REB). Some scholars believe the term also referred to the imperial servants who lived in the rest of Italy and the provinces.

CAGE—an enclosure for confining birds (Jer. 5:27) and other animals. Ezekiel’s poetic description of a “young lion” that is captured and put in a cage (Ezek. 19:2–9) is a reference to King Jehoiachin of Judah, who was taken captive by Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon. The Hebrew word frequently rendered “cage” is translated as “basket” in Amos 8:1–2.

CAIAPHAS [KY uh fuhs]—the high priest of Israel appointed about A.D. 18 by the Roman procurator, Valerius Gratus. Caiaphas and his father-in-law, Annas, were high priests when John the Baptist began his preaching (Matt. 26:3, 57; Luke 3:2). Caiaphas also was a member of the Sadducees.

After Jesus raised LAZARUS from the dead, the Jewish leaders became alarmed at Jesus’ increasing popularity. The SANHEDRIN quickly called a meeting, during which Caiaphas called for Jesus’ death. As High Priest, Caiaphas’ words carried great authority, and his counsel was followed (John 11:49–53). Subsequently, Caiaphas plotted the arrest of Jesus (Matt. 26:3–4) and was a participant in the illegal trial of Jesus (Matt. 26:57–68).

The final appearance of Caiaphas in the New Testament was at the trial of Peter and John. He was one of the leaders who questioned the two disciples about the miraculous healing of the lame man “at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful” Acts 4:6–7). In 1990, an ornate ossuary bearing the name of Caiaphas and containing the bones of a sixty-year-old man was found outside of Jerusalem. The bones may be those of Caiaphas himself.

CAIN [kane] (metalworker)—the name of a person and a city in the Old Testament:

1. The oldest son of Adam and Eve and the brother of Abel (Gen. 4:1–25). Cain was the first murderer. A farmer by occupation, Cain brought fruits of the ground as a sacrifice to God. His brother Abel, a shepherd, sacrificed a lamb from his flock. The Lord accepted Abel’s offering but rejected Cain’s (Gen. 4:7). The proof of Cain’s wrong standing before God is seen in his impulse to kill his own brother Abel when his own offering was rejected (Gen. 4:8). Cain was the ancestor of a clan of metalworkers (Gen. 4:18–19, 22).

The New Testament refers to Cain in three places. Abel's offering to God was "a more excellent sacrifice" than Cain's because Abel was "righteous." His heart was right with God, and Cain's was not (Heb. 11:4). John calls Cain "the wicked one" and asks why he murdered his brother; the answer was, "Because his works were evil, and his brother's righteous" (1 John 3:12). Jude warns his readers to beware of those who have "gone in the way of Cain" (Jude 11).

2. A town in the mountains of southern Judah, also spelled KAIN (Josh. 15:57).

CAINAN [kay EYE nuhn]—the name of two men in the Bible:

1. A son of Enosh and an ancestor of Jesus (Gen. 5:9–14; Luke 3:37), also spelled Kenan (1 Chr. 1:2, KJV, NIV).
2. A son of Arphaxad and an ancestor of Jesus (Luke 3:36).

CAKE—a small, round piece of BREAD, baked in a pan or on a griddle (Lev. 24:5).

CALAH [KAY luh]—a city of Assyria that, according to Genesis 10:8–12, was built by Nimrod. Located where the Tigris and Zab rivers come together, Calah was rebuilt and fortified by SHALMANESER I (about 1274–1245 B.C.) and was made the place where the Assyrian king lived by ASHURNASIRPAL (about 884–859 B.C.). The ruins of this city, now called Nimrud, are situated approximately 29 kilometers (18 miles) south of Nineveh.

CALAMUS (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

CALCOL [KAL kahl]—a descendant of Judah (1 Chr. 2:6), also spelled Chalcol (1 Kin. 4:31).

CALDRON—a ceramic or metal container for boiling meat, either for ceremonial or domestic purposes (2 Chr. 35:13; Mic. 3:3). Metallic pots for cooking have been found in Egypt and Mesopotamia.

CALEB [KAY lubb] (dog)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. One of the twelve spies sent by Moses to investigate the land of Canaan (Num. 13:6, 30; 14:6, 24, 30, 38). Ten of the twelve spies frightened the Israelites with reports of fortified cities and gigantic peoples. Compared to the giants in the land, they saw themselves as "grasshoppers" (Num. 13:33).

   Joshua and Caleb also saw the fortified cities in the land, but they reacted in faith rather than fear. They advised Moses and Aaron and the Israelites to attack Canaan immediately (Num. 13:30). The Israelites listened to the spies rather than the two, and the Lord viewed their fear as a lack of faith and judged them for their spiritual timidity. Of all the adults alive at that time, only Caleb and Joshua would live to possess the land (Josh. 14:6–15).

   Caleb was also part of the group selected by Moses to help divide the land among the tribes. He was eighty-five years old when Canaan was finally conquered. Hebron was given to Caleb as a divine inheritance.
2. A son of Hezron of the family of Perez of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 2:18–19, 42). Descended from this Caleb were Aaron's associate Hur and Hur's grandson Bezaleel, a skilled craftsman. An alternate spelling of the name is Chelubai (1 Chr. 2:9).

CALEB EPHRATHAH [KAY lubb EF ray thuh]—according to the NKJV, the place where HEZRON died (1 Chr. 2:24; Caleb–Ephratah, KJV). The NRSV and the REB, however, follow the Septuagint and translate the Hebrew phrase to refer to Caleb's relation with the wife of Hezron: "After the death of Hezron, Caleb went in to [had intercourse with] Ephrathah, the wife of Hezron his father, and she bore him Ashur, the father [founder] of Tekoa" (1 Chr. 2:24).

CALENDAR—a system of reckoning time, usually based on a recurrent natural cycle (such as the sun through the seasons or the moon through its phases); a table, or tabular register, of days according to a system usually covering one year and referring the days of each month to the days of the week.

From the beginning of recorded history, the calendar has been used to keep records and predict the time for the changing of the seasons. The calendar provided a framework in which people could plan their work. It was an effective timetable for marking various religious festivals that were to be celebrated at regular intervals.

Calendar Units

The day—In calendar terms, the day is the smallest and most consistent unit of time. In the ancient world, the term "day" was used in at least two senses. It described a twenty-four-hour period, as well as daylight in contrast to the night (Gen. 1:5). The beginning point of the twenty-four-hour day varied. The Bible contains references to the day beginning in the morning (Gen. 19:34; Acts 23:32) as well as in the evening (Neh. 13:19). In the time of the Roman Empire, the day may have begun at midnight, as indicated by the Gospel of John (4:6; 19:14).

The dawn was the twilight before sunrise (1 Sam. 30:17; Matt. 28:1). The evening was the late afternoon (Deut. 16:6) between the day and the night (Jer. 6:4; Prov. 7:9), or it could mean literally "late" in the day (Mark 11:19) just before the stars came out (Neh. 4:21). Noon was the end of the morning (1 Kin. 18:26) and marked mealtime (Gen. 43:16). Noon was also referred to as "midday" (Neh. 8:3), "broad daylight" (Amos 8:9), and "heat of the day" (2 Sam. 4:5).

The day was divided into three parts: evening, morning, and noon (Ps. 55:17). Midnight was the midpoint of the night (Matt. 25:6; Acts 20:7). In the Old Testament the night was divided into three watches (Judg. 7:19; Ex. 14:24), while it was divided into four watches in the New Testament (Matt. 14:25; Mark 13:35). The term "hour" was used to mean "immediately" (Dan 3:6, 15), or it could express the idea of one-twelfth of daylight (John 11:9).

The week—The week was a seven-day unit begun at the time of creation (Gen. 1:31—2:2). The word "week" means "seven" (Gen. 29:27; Luke 18:12). In the Bible the days of the week were called the "first day," "third day," and so forth (Gen. 1:8–31; Matt. 28:1), although the seventh day was known as "sabbath" (Ex. 16:23; Matt. 12:1). The day before the Sabbath was called "the Preparation Day" (Mark 15:42), and Christians referred to the first day of the week as "the Lord's Day" (Rev. 1:10).

The month—The month was a unit of time closely tied to the moon. The Hebrew word for "month" also meant "moon" (Deut. 33:14, NIV, NASB). The reason for the connection between the month and the moon is that the beginning of a month was marked by a new moon. The moon was carefully observed by the people of Bible times. When it appeared as a thin crescent, it marked the beginning of a new month.

The lunar month was about twenty-nine days long. Therefore, the first crescent of the new moon would appear twenty-nine or thirty days after the previous new moon. At times the crescent was not visible because of clouds. But this was allowed for with a rule that the new moon would never be reckoned as more than thirty days after the last new moon. This prevented too much variation in the calendar.

The year—The Hebrew word for year comes from the idea of change or repeated action. Thus the year expresses the concept of "a complete cycle of change." Due to the repeated seasons, people set up a calendar to account for yearly events and to alert them of the coming seasons. The calendar revolved around the agricultural cycles. People observed the climatic changes and the length of days in their planting and harvesting. Religious festivals were also established to parallel the agricultural year. No major religious festival, for example, was celebrated during the busy harvest season. People observed that there were four seasons and that the year was about 365 days long. Although the calendars were not always precise, adjustments were made periodically to account for the lack of precision.

Calendar Systems

In the Old Testament—The marking of time in Old Testament days revolved primarily around the months, seasonal religious festivals, and the year. The month was marked by the first appearance of the crescent of the new moon at sunset. The first day of each month was considered a holy day marked by special sacrifices (Num. 28:11–15), and it was to be announced with the blowing of trumpets (Num. 10:10; Ps. 81:3).

Normally the months were designated numerically: first (Ex. 12:2), second (Ex. 16:1), third (Ex. 19:1), fourth (2 Kin. 25:3), fifth (Jer. 28:1), sixth (1 Chr. 27:9), seventh (Gen. 8:4), eighth (Zech. 1:1), ninth (Ezra 10:9), tenth (Gen. 8:5), eleventh (Deut. 1:3) and twelfth (Esth. 3:7).

The first month of the Hebrew calendar was in the spring, around March/April. In their early history the Israelites adopted Canaanite names for the months, which were connected with agriculture and climate. Only four of these names are mentioned in the Old Testament. The month Abib (Ex. 13:4; 23:15) was the first month (around March/April), which was at the time of barley harvest. The word Abib means “ripening of grain” (Lev. 2:14). The month Ziv (1 Kin. 6:1, 37; Zif, KJV) was the second month (April/May). Ethanim (1 Kin. 8:2) was the seventh month (September/October), which occurred during the rainy season. Bul (1 Kin. 6:38) was the eighth month (October/November), which was between the early and latter rains. These four names for the months were associated with the most important agricultural times of the year.

In its later history the nation of Israel adopted all twelve months of the Babylonian calendar as their civil calendar. But not all of the names of these months are listed in the Bible. The seven that occur are: Nisan, the first month (Neh. 2:1); Sivan, the third month (Esth. 8:9); Elul, the sixth month (Neh. 6:15); Chislev, the ninth month (Zech. 7:1); Tebeth, the tenth month (Esth. 2:16); Shebat, the eleventh month (Zech. 1:7); and Adar, the twelfth month (Ezra 6:15). The first month of this calendar also fell during the springtime.

Since Israel was an agricultural society, its calendar worked well for the people and their religious festivals. In the first month (coinciding with our March/April), the fourteenth day was Passover (Ex. 12:18); the fifteenth day through the twenty-first day was Unleavened Bread (Lev. 23:6); the sixteenth day was Firstfruits (Lev. 23:10–14), dedicating the first-ripe barley sprigs. The second month (April/May) marked the celebration of a later Passover, in case some had missed the first celebration (Num. 9:10–11).

On the sixth day of the third month (May/June), the people celebrated Pentecost, which was also called the Feast of Weeks (Lev. 23:15–22), in commemoration of the completion of the barley and wheat harvests. In the seventh month (September/October), the first day was the Feast of Trumpets (Lev. 23:23–25; Num. 29:1), celebrating the New Year; the tenth day was the Day of Atonement (Lev. 16:29–34; 23:26–32); the fifteenth to the twenty-second days were the Feast of Tabernacles or Ingathering (Lev. 23:33–43) in commemoration of all the harvests of the year. Thus, the feasts revolved around the harvests.

With regard to the year, the Jewish historian Josephus stated that Israel had two New Years—the commercial New Year, which began in the fall (seventh month), and the religious New Year, which began in the spring (first month). Since the months were based on the lunar system and since each month averaged 29$^1/_2$ days, the year would be 354 days long, or 11 days short of the solar year. In just three years the calendar would be off more than a month.

To reconcile the lunar month with the solar year, Babylonia had a sophisticated system where seven months would be added to the calendar over a nineteen-year cycle, resulting in an error of only two hours and four minutes by the end of the cycle. This is remarkable accuracy for that day. Israel must have adjusted her calendar in a similar fashion by adding a “Second Adar” month whenever necessary.

Between the Testaments—During the period when the Greeks ruled the ancient world, the Seleucid calendar system was most widely used. Two basic systems were used for reckoning time in the Seleucid era—the Macedonian calendar and the Babylonian calendar. It is difficult to be dogmatic as to which system was used, but the Jewish people seem to have used the Macedonian calendar. This means the Seleucid era in Jewish history began on the first day of their seventh month, Tishri, about 312/311 B.C.

In the New Testament—The New Testament contains no references to the Roman or Gentile calendar or to the Jewish calendar, except in speaking of the days of the week. There is also one reference to the “new moon” (Col. 2:16). The Sabbath, Saturday, is mentioned about sixty times (for instance, Matt. 12:1–12). The New Testament also mentions the “first day,” Sunday (Mark 16:2; Luke 24:1; Acts 20:7; 1 Cor. 16:2), “the Lord’s Day,” Sunday (Rev. 1:10), and the “Day of Preparation,” or “Preparation Day,” Friday (Matt. 27:62; Mark 15:42; Luke 23:54; John 19:14, 31, 42). However, these are references to the cultic aspects of the Jewish calendar. Frequent mention is made, especially in the Gospel of John, of the Passover (John 2:13, 23; 6:4; 11:55; 12:1; 13:1; 18:39). Other festivals mentioned in the New Testament are Unleavened Bread (Matt. 26:17; Mark 14:1, 12), Pentecost (Acts 2:1; 20:16; 1 Cor. 16:8), Feast of Tabernacles (John 7:2), and the Feast of Dedication (John 10:22).

Although the New Testament makes no references to the Roman or Gentile calendar, it does refer to the reigns of rulers. The most specific example is Luke 3:1, which speaks of "the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Caesar." This refers to the time of the rulers then in office in Judea and the surrounding territories and to the beginning of the ministry of John the Baptist. This must have been in A.D. 28–29, assuming that Luke used either the Julian calendar, which began in January, or the regnal calendar, which began in August. The most general references speak not of the year but of the reigns of emperors Caesar Augustus (Luke 2:1) and Claudius Caesar (Acts 11:28), of provincial governors Quirinius (Luke 2:1–2) and Gallio (Acts 18:12), of King Herod (Matt. 2:1; Luke 1:5), and of the ethnarch Aretas (2 Cor. 11:32).

One New Testament calendar problem is that the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke portray Jesus as having celebrated the Passover with His disciples on the eve of His betrayal (Matt. 26:19–20; Mark 14:16–17; Luke 22:13–15), whereas the Gospel of John pictures the Jews as not having celebrated the Passover at this time (John 18:28). Many attempts have been made to reconcile this problem.

Possibly, the solution is that the first three gospels reckoned their timetable of the crucifixion events according to the Galilean method (beginning the day at sunrise) which was used by Jesus, the disciples, and the Pharisees. But John may have reckoned according to the Judean method (beginning the day at sunset), a system used by the Sadducees. If this is true, different calendar systems may have been in use at the same time within the nation of Israel.

CALF (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CALF WORSHIP (see GOLDEN CALF).

CALL, CALLING—an important theological idea with several different meanings in the Bible:

1. God's call of individuals to SALVATION, made possible by the sacrifice of Jesus Christ on the cross (Rom. 8:28–30; 1 Thess. 2:12).

God's call to salvation also involves believers in the high calling of living their lives in service to others (1 Cor. 7:20).

2. To call on God for help, or to pray (Ps. 55:16–17). The Bible contains numerous examples of people who, in their distress, called upon the name of the Lord. God is portrayed as a compassionate, concerned, and personal Deliverer who hears the prayers of His people.
3. To name or to call by name (Gen. 17:5; Luke 1:13). People have been given the right to name because they are created in the image of God. Their role as namers is one of the ways in which they exercise their dominion over the world (Gen. 2:19).

Also see ELECTION.

CALNEH [KAL neh]—a city in Mesopotamia whose exact location is unknown. In Genesis 10:10 it is included among the cities of the kingdom of NIMROD, the mighty hunter. This suggests a location in southern Mesopotamia. However, Amos 6:1–2 includes Calneh in a list of cities in northern Mesopotamia. There may have been two places with this name, or perhaps the northern town was later named after the earlier settlement. Calno (Is. 10:9) may be identical with Calneh.

CALNO [KAL no]—a city conquered by the Assyrians (Is. 10:9). Isaiah the prophet reported the arrogant boast of the Assyrians, who said that just as Calno had fallen, so would Jerusalem. Calno is probably the same place as Calneh (Gen 10:10; Amos 6:2).

CALVARY [KAL vuh rih] (from the Latin word calvaria, "the skull") —the name used in the KJV and NKJV for the place outside Jerusalem where the Lord Jesus was crucified (Luke 23:33; the Skull, NIV). No one knows for sure why this place was called "the skull." The most likely reason is that the site was a place of execution; the skull is a widely recognized symbol for death. The site may have been associated with a cemetery, although its location near Jerusalem makes it improbable that skulls could be viewed there. Perhaps the area was an outcropping of rock that in some way resembled a skull.

Mark 15:40 and Luke 23:49 indicate that some people viewed Jesus' crucifixion from a distance. John 19:20 says the place was "near the city” of Jerusalem; and Hebrews 13:12 reports that our Lord “suffered outside the gate,” which means outside the city walls. From Matthew’s reference to “those who passed by” (27:39), it seems the site was close to a well-traveled road. It also is reasonable to think that Joseph’s tomb (John 19:41) was quite close. But the Bible does not clearly indicate exactly where Jesus died.

Sites of the crucifixion have been proposed on every side of Jerusalem. One factor that makes it difficult to pinpoint the site is that Jerusalem was destroyed in A.D. 70 by the Romans, and another Jewish revolt was crushed in a similar manner in A.D. 135. Many geographical features and the location of the city walls were greatly changed because of these and a series of conflicts that continued for centuries.

Except in areas that have been excavated, Jerusalem’s present walls date from more recent times. The presence of modern buildings prevents digging to find where the walls were located during New Testament times. Some groups claim to have found the very place where Jesus died, but these complicating factors make it unlikely.

At present, Christian opinion is divided over two possible sites for Calvary. One is on the grounds of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher. The other, called “Gordon’s Calvary,” is about 229 meters (250 yards) northeast of the Damascus Gate in the old city wall.

A tradition going back to the fourth century says that a search was initiated by the Christian historian Eusebius and that the site was found by Bishop Macarius. Later the Roman Emperor Constantine built a church on the site. Previously the place was the location of a temple to Aphrodite. Tradition also has it that while looking for Jesus’ tomb, Constantine’s mother Helena found part of “the true cross” on which Jesus died. These traditions are very old, but their historical value is uncertain. The Church of the Holy Sepulcher is now inside what is called “the old city,” but supporters claim the location was outside the walls of the city in New Testament times.

Following an earlier lead, a British general, Charles Gordon, in 1885 strongly advocated the other major site, which is outside the present existing city walls. The place is a grass-covered rocky knoll that, due to excavations (perhaps mining) some time during the past three centuries, now looks something like a skull when viewed from one direction. Beside the hill is what has been called “Jeremiah’s Grotto,” where an ancient tomb has been recently landscaped to produce a garden setting. This area is sometimes called the “Garden Tomb.”

The site known as “Gordon’s Calvary” has commended itself especially to some Protestant groups, while the location at the Church of the Holy Sepulcher is highly regarded by the Roman Catholic and Orthodox churches.

For Christians, it is the fact of our Lord’s self-sacrifice—“that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that He was buried, and that He rose again” (1 Cor. 15:3–4)—not the location, that should concern us. At “Calvary,” Golgotha’s cross—“the emblem of suffering and shame”—became the symbol of love, blessing, and hope.

The Aramaic name for the place where Jesus was crucified is Golgotha (Matt. 27:33; Mark 15:22; John 19:17), which like Calvary, also means “the skull.”

CAMEL (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CAMEL DRIVER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CAMEL’S HAIR—hair taken from the back, hump, and underside of a camel. It was woven into a coarse cloth used for tent covers and coats for camel drivers and shepherds. A “robe of coarse hair” (Zech. 13:4) was an appropriate article of clothing for a prophet. John the Baptist wore a garment of camel’s hair in the wilderness (Matt. 3:4; Mark 1:6). Jesus contrasted John’s dress with the “soft garments” of those who live in king’s houses (Matt. 11:8; Luke 7:25).

CAMEL-THORN (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

CAMON [KAY mun]—the burial place of Jair the Gileadite, who judged Israel for twenty-two years (Judg. 10:5; Kamon, NASB, REB, NIV, NRSV).

CAMP, ENCAMPMENT—a temporary dwelling place. The sites where the Hebrew people stopped during their escape from Egypt and the period of the wilderness wandering are called camps.

As the twelve tribes journeyed toward the land of Canaan, their temporary camps were to be set up in a specific manner. The tabernacle of meeting was erected in the center, surrounded by the Levites in their own encampment. The next circle consisted of the twelve tribes themselves, three tribes on each side of the tabernacle (Num. 1:50—2:34). The Book of Numbers also contains specific instructions for breaking camp and the order of their march (Num. 2:1—3:51; 10:21–28). In later times some of the language from the Book of Numbers was used to describe the service of the Levites at the temple (1 Chr. 9:18–19).

Acts 21:34 uses the common Greek word for camp, although most modern English versions translate the word as barracks (NIV, NKJV, NRSV, NASB). Hebrews 13:11–13 uses the figure of the Hebrew camp to compare the death of Jesus "outside the gate" with the burning of the carcasses of sacrificial animals "outside the camp" in Old Testament times (Ex. 29:14; Num. 19:3, 7). In Revelation 20:9 the reference to "the camp of the saints" symbolizes the triumphant church at the end of time.

CANA [KANE nuh] (place of reeds)—a village of Galilee (see Map 6, B–2) where Jesus performed his first miracle—turning water into wine (John 2:1, 11). Cana was the home of Nathanael, one of the Twelve (John 21:2). Its probable location, Kfar Kanna, is about 13 kilometers (8 miles) northeast of Nazareth.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- Cana of Galilee, the village where Jesus performed His first miracle.

CANAAN [KANE un] (land of purple)—the name of a man and a land or region in the Old Testament:

1. The fourth son of Ham and the grandson of Noah (Gen. 9:18–27; 10:6, 15). Ham's descendants were dispersed into several distinctive tribes, such as the Jebusites and the Zemarites. These people became known collectively in later years as the CANAANITES, pagan inhabitants of the land that God promised to Abraham and his descendants. Under the leadership of Joshua, the people of Israel occupied the land of Canaan and divided it among the twelve tribes.
2. The region along the Mediterranean Sea (see Map 1, C–2) occupied by the Canaanites before it was taken and settled by the Israelite people (Gen. 11:31; Josh. 5:12). The land of Canaan stretched from the Jordan River on the east to the Mediterranean Sea on the west. From south to north, it covered the territory between the Sinai Peninsula and the ancient coastal nation of Phoenicia. Much of this territory was dry, mountainous, and rocky, unfit for cultivation. But it also contained many fertile farmlands, particularly in the river valleys and the coastal plains along the sea. While leading the people of Israel toward the land of Canaan, Moses sent scouts, or spies, into the territory on a factfinding mission. They returned with grapes, pomegranates, and figs to verify the fertility of the land (Num. 13:2, 17, 23).

The land of Canaan was ideally situated on the trade routes that stretched from Egypt in the south to Syria and Phoenicia in the north and the ancient Babylonian Empire to the east. This location gave the small region a strategic position in the ancient world. After the Israelites captured the land of Canaan, they developed a thriving commercial system by trading goods with other nations along these routes. The finest royal purple dye was manufactured in Canaan, giving the territory is name.

CANAANITES [KANE un ites]—an ancient tribe that lived in the land of Canaan before they were displaced by the nation of Israel. The Canaanites, along with the Amorites, settled the land well before 2000 B.C. Archaeological exploration of their native land and adjacent territories has provided information on many aspects of their culture. Among the numerous sites excavated in ancient Canaan, or the present-day Holy Land, are Hazor, Megiddo, Beth Shan, Jericho, Jebus (Jerusalem), Debir, Lachish, and Arad. Sites in the northern part of ancient Canaan include Byblos and Ras Shamra (Ugarit) along the coast of the Mediterranean Sea and Hamath on the Orontes River.

Although both Canaanites and Amorites were established in Canaan before 2000 B.C., the Canaanites established their civilization as dominant during the Middle Bronze age (about 2100 to 1550 B.C.). Their society had several classes, ranging from the ruling nobility to the peasants. The northern Canaanites used a particular CUNEIFORM script, featuring a wedge-shaped alphabet. Their land was also dotted with walled cities. Several of these served as the centers of city-states, each having its own king, or mayor, and army.

The Canaanites, therefore, were a highly civilized people in many ways when Joshua led the Israelites across the Jordan River to conquer the people and settle the land. Canaanite history ended with the Israelite conquest. But certain segments of Canaanite culture remained to make both positive and negative impacts on the life of God’s Covenant People.

Canaanite Language and Literature. Knowledge of Canaanite language and literature was enhanced by the discovery of the Ugaritic texts at Ras Shamra (ancient Ugarit), a site on the Mediterranean coast in modern Syria. Accidental discovery of a vaulted room by a farmer while plowing his field on the top of Ras Shamra led to several full-scale excavations by Claude F. A. Schaeffer, the first in 1929. These excavations resulted in the recovery of a store of religious texts and other documents on clay tablets. These writings have yielded a great deal of knowledge about Canaanite life, particularly their form of religion.

The Canaanite language in written form, as revealed by the Ugaritic texts of Ras Shamra, is an alphabetic cuneiform (wedge-shaped) type of writing. This form contrasts markedly with the syllabic cuneiform of the ancient Babylonian and Assyrian languages. It does have many similarities to other ancient languages of the Middle Eastern world during this period, but it also has many significant differences. These differences are so significant that archaeologists can say with certainty that the Canaanites developed a language all their own.

The Ugaritic texts from Ras Shamra are by far the most significant literary sources of the Canaanite language in the alphabetic cuneiform script. These texts go back to the fourteenth century B.C. or earlier. Most of them are of a religious nature, providing valuable details on both the literature and the religion of the Canaanites. These texts have also given Bible scholars a better understanding of Old Testament writings and background.

The texts of greatest importance for giving details on Canaanite religion are three mythologies: (1) the Baal Epic, an account of the activities of Baal, including his building of a temple; (2) the Legend of Aqhat, the only son of an ancient Canaanite king; and (3) the Legend of King Keret of Hubur, who suffered the loss of his family and who later obtained another wife by conquest. In doing so, however, he displeased the gods.

Comparative studies between these texts and Old Testament writings, particularly early Hebrew poems and the Psalms, show how the Old Testament has been influenced by its ancient setting. But they also show that the Israelites’ faith in their one Redeemer God was a dramatic contrast to the pagan religion of the Canaanites.

Canaanite Religion. The Canaanite religion featured many gods. These gods were worshiped with elaborate ritual. Various kinds of cultic personnel, or priests, officiated at these pagan ceremonies. Their religious system also featured many different places of worship, varying from simple outdoor altars to massive stone temples.

The Old Testament refers frequently to Baal (Num. 22:41), Baals (Hos. 2:13, 17), or a Baal of a particular place, such as Baal of Peor (Num. 25:3, 5). The Old Testament also refers to Asherah (1 Kin. 18:19), Ashtoreth (1 Kin. 11:5, 33), and the Ashtoreths (Judg. 2:13). References to these Canaanite gods and goddesses always carry strong denunciations by the biblical writers. But these names mentioned in the Old Testament are only a few of the many additional names for Canaanite gods that appear in the Ugaritic texts.

The highest of all the Canaanite gods was El, as shown clearly by the Ugaritic texts. But El chose to remain in the background, conferring power and authority upon his brood of gods and goddesses. The main goddess by whom El fathered children was Asherah. She and El were the parents of more than seventy other deities. The Baal mentioned frequently in the Old Testament was lord among the gods because of authority granted by El. Baal was known chiefly as the god of fertility and as god of the storm. Temples were built in his name at a number of sites, including one at Ugarit.

Three Canaanite goddesses mentioned frequently in the Ugaritic texts are Anath (Judg. 3:31), Asherah, and Astarte (Ashtoreth of the Old Testament). Among the many other deities of the Canaanites were Resheph, god of pestilence, and Mot, god of drought and death.

Canaanite religion had a number of features that were similar to certain practices of the religious system of the Israelites. Like the Israelites, the Canaanites offered various kinds of offerings to their gods. Animals offered included sheep, cattle, and certain wild animals. A high priest among the Canaanites served as the head of twelve priestly families. Other important worship leaders who served in the Canaanite temples included singers, who used liturgy or a form of psalmody; consecrated persons—in effect, male and female prostitutes; vestment makers and sculptors; and priest-scribes, who were responsible for preserving important literary traditions. Like the Hebrew feasts and festivals, the celebrations of the Canaanites also paralleled the seasons or cycles of the agricultural year.

But in other important ways, Canaanite and Hebrew religion were poles apart. The religion of these pagan people was basically a fertility cult. At temples scattered throughout their land, Canaanite worshipers actually participated in lewd, immoral acts with “sacred” prostitutes. Theirs was a depraved form of worship that appealed to the base instincts of sinful human nature. They also practiced human sacrifice, and their religion sanctioned unbelievable cruelty in warfare. In contrast, the Hebrews worshiped a holy God who insisted on purity and righteousness among His people.

Although the Israelites were called to a high ethical plane in their worship, at times the sensual appeal of the Canaanite cults enticed them into sin and idolatry. This explains the strong appeal Joshua made to the people of Israel in his farewell speech. Joshua had led them to take the land, but many of the Canaanites still remained. The aging warrior knew their form of pagan worship would be a strong temptation to the people. Thus he declared, “Put away the foreign gods which are among you, and incline your heart to the LORD God of Israel” (Josh. 24:23).

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- A statue of Baal, a prominent pagan god of the ancient Canaanites.

- Excavation of a temple of the Canaanites at Beth Shan from the 14th century B.C.

CANAANITESS [KANE un ight ess]—a woman of CANAAN (1 Chr. 2:3; a Canaanite woman, REB, NIV).

CANAANITE, SIMON THE [KANE un ite] (see SIMON).

CANALS—the NRSV and NIV translation of a Hebrew word referring to the branches, or delta arms, of the Nile River (Ex. 7:19; 8:5). The word refers especially to the lesser, slower-moving channels that form a connecting network of waterways in the Egyptian delta.

CANANAEAN [kane uh NEE uhn] (see SIMON).

CANCER—a malignant growth, or tumor, that invades healthy body tissue or cells. The apostle Paul described the "godless chatter" (2 Tim. 2:16; NIV, NRSV) of worldly people, and the false message they proclaim, as a "cancer" (2 Tim. 2:17; gangrene, NASB, REB, NIV, NRSV) that threatened the health and vitality of the church. Also see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE.

CANDACE [KAN duh see]—a queen of Ethiopia (Acts 8:27). Candace, a title, did not refer to a particular queen but to a line of queens. The eunuch of the Candace in Acts was converted to Christianity by Philip the evangelist (Acts 8:26–39).

CANDLE—a mass of tallow or wax containing a linen or cotton wick that is burned to give light. The people of biblical times did not use candles as such. The NKJV translates as "lamp" (Job 18:6; Prov. 20:27; Luke 8:16).

The lamps of the ancient world were shallow bowls with a pinched rim. A wick was laid in these grooves, with one end extending above the lip of the lamp while the other end rested in the olive oil, which provided fuel. Also see LAMP.

CANDLESTICK (see TABERNACLE).

CANE (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

CANKER (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

CANKERWORM (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CANNEH [KAN eh]—a place mentioned in Ezekiel 27:23 along with Eden and Haran, which suggests a location in Mesopotamia.

CANON (see BIBLE, THE).

CANOPY—any high, overarching covering. A canopy covered the vestibule on Solomon's Hall of Pillars (1 Kin. 7:6). A wooden canopy was on the front of the vestibule outside Ezekiel's temple (Ezek. 41:25). The word is used figuratively twice. Elihu proclaimed God's majesty by referring to "the thunder from his canopy" (Job 36:29). The psalmist, in speaking of God the sovereign Creator, declared, "His canopy around him was dark waters" (Ps. 18:11).

CANTICLES—another name for SONG.

CAPERBERRY (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

CAPERNAUM [kuh PURR nay uhm] (village of Nahum)—the most important city on the northern shore of the Sea of Galilee (see Map 6, C–2) in New Testament times and the center of much of Jesus' ministry. Capernaum is not mentioned in the Old Testament, and the Nahum after whom it was named is probably not the prophet Nahum. In all likelihood, Capernaum was founded sometime after the Jews returned from captivity.

By the New Testament era, Capernaum was large enough that it always was called a "city" (Matt. 9:1; Mark 1:33). It had its own synagogue, in which Jesus frequently taught (Mark 1:21; Luke 4:31–38; John 6:59). Apparently the synagogue was built by the Roman soldiers garrisoned in Capernaum (Matt. 8:8; Luke 7:1–10). The synagogue was a center for the Roman system of taxation; for it had a permanent office of taxation (Matt. 9:9; Mark 2:14; Luke 5:27), and itinerant tax collectors operated in the city (Matt. 17:24). Ruins of a later synagogue cover those of the one where Jesus worshiped, although sections of the latter can still be seen today.

After being rejected in His hometown, Nazareth, Jesus made Capernaum the center of His ministry in Galilee. He performed many miracles here, including the healing of the centurion's paralyzed servant (Matt. 8:5–13), a paralytic carried by four friends (Mark 2:1– 12), Peter's mother-in-law (Matt. 8:14–15; Mark 1:29–31), and the nobleman's son (John 4:46–54).

As Jesus walked by the Sea of Galilee near Capernaum, He called the fishermen Simon, Andrew, James, and John to be his disciples (Mark 1:16–21, 29). It was also in "His own city" (Capernaum) that Jesus called the tax collector Matthew (Matt. 9:1, 9; Mark 2:13–14). Immediately following the feeding of the five thousand, Jesus delivered His discourse on the Bread of Life near this city (John 6:32).

Although Jesus centered His ministry in Capernaum, the people of that city did not follow him. Jesus pronounced a curse on the city for its unbelief (Matt. 11:23–24), predicting its ruin (Luke 10:15). So strikingly did this prophecy come true that only recently has Tell Hum been identified confidently as ancient Capernaum.

Photo by Werner Braun

• Aerial view of the ruins of ancient Capernaum, a city on the shore of the Sea of Galilee.

CAPH [kaf]—an alternate spelling of KAPH.

CAPHTOR [KAF tawr]—the island or maritime area from which the Philistines originally came (Deut. 2:23; Jer. 47:4; Amos 9:7). Scholars are divided concerning the location of Caphtor. The most probable location is the island of CRETE, together with the nearby Aegean isles. The SEPTUAGINT, however, reads Cappadocia, a province in eastern Asia Minor, instead of Caphtor (Deut. 2:23; Amos 9:7). The Caphtorim (Gen. 10:14; Deut. 2:23; 1 Chr. 1:12) were people who came from Caphtor.

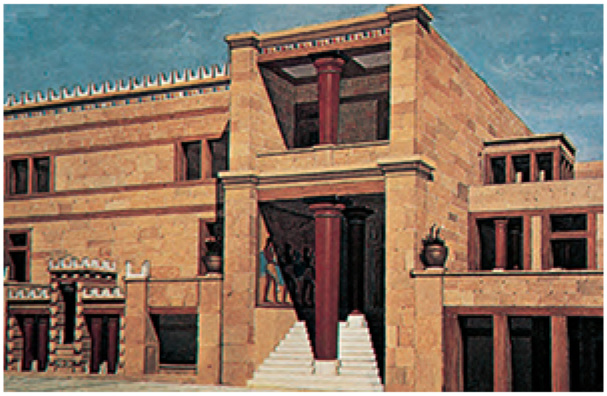

Photo by Howard Vos

• Reconstruction of the royal palace on the island of Crete, or Caphtor, showing stairs leading to the throne room.

CAPITAL—the decorative crown at the top of a supporting pillar in a large building. The huge pillars known as JACHIN AND BOAZ that stood in front of Solomon’s temple in Jerusalem featured such ornamental capitals, cast from bronze (1 Kin. 7:16). Also see ARCHITECTURE.

CAPPADOCIA [kap uh DOH shih uh]—a large Roman province in eastern Asia Minor (see Map 7, D–2). It was bounded on the north by Pontus and the mountains along the Halys River, on the east by Armenia and the Euphrates River, on the south by Cilicia and the Taurus Mountains, and on the west by Lycaonia and Galatia. Visitors from Cappadocia were at Jerusalem on the Day of PENTECOST (Acts 2:1, 9), and the apostle Peter included this province in his first letter to the converts of the DISPERSION (1 Pet. 1:1). Christianity apparently spread northward into Cappadocia from Tarsus of Cilicia, through the Cilician Gates (a gap in the Tarsus Mountains), and then on to Pontus and Galatia.

CAPSTONE—the uppermost stone in a building, sometimes used to tie two intersecting walls together (Zech. 4:7). As the top stone of a structure or wall, the capstone was the crowning point.

CAPTIVE—a person taken and held as a prisoner, especially by an enemy in war (2 Sam. 8:2; 1 Kin. 20:32; 2 Kin. 25:7). The word is used of the MESSIAH in Psalm 68:18: “You have led captivity captive,” speaking of the freedom Jesus would bring (Eph. 4:8).

CAPTIVITY—the state or condition of being in bondage to one’s enemies, especially if this involves deportation to a foreign land. The term “captivity” is commonly used to describe two periods when the nations of Israel (722 B.C.) and Judah (605 B.C. and later) were taken away from their native lands and into Exile.

The Captivity of Israel, the Ten Northern Tribes. The first captivity was partly the result of Assyria’s march toward Palestine in an attempt to reduce the power of the Syrian Empire. Since about 950 B.C., the Syrians had extended their borders eastward to Assyria. On the south and west they had attacked the kingdom of Israel.

Syria and Israel quickly forgot their quarrel in the face of Assyria’s threat. They formed an alliance and fought a great battle against the Assyrians in 853 B.C. at Qarqar in Syria. The Assyrians were fought to a draw, effectively checking their threat for several years. Soon the old hostility between Syria and Israel flared anew.

In 841 B.C. the Assyrians began another campaign. This time King Jehu of Israel (about 841–814 B.C.) chose to pay tribute to Assyria and not join with Syria. For four years the Assyrians attacked the Syrians without success. For a short period Syria was dominant in the Near East, but its power ended when a new Assyrian king, Tiglath–Pileser III, ascended to the throne.

The new king was determined to crush the power of Syria and its allies. Accordingly, he attacked King Menahem of Israel (who reigned from about 752–742 B.C.), who quickly paid tribute to Assyria. The Syrians tried to persuade Judah to ally with them against Assyria; they even marched through Judah and occupied the port of Elath on the Gulf of Aqaba to show their strength. Instead, King Ahaz of Judah (who ruled from about 732–716 B.C.) urgently appealed to the Assyrians for help. Tiglath–Pileser responded by attacking the Syrians and besieging their capital, Damascus.

When Damascus fell in 732 B.C., Tiglath–Pileser then attacked Israel, preventing it from further aiding the Syrians. He took the tribes of Gad and Reuben and the half-tribe of Manasseh to Mesopotamia as captives (2 Kin. 15:29). He also made the remaining tribes pay tribute. However, when Tiglath–Pileser died (727 B.C.), the Israelites stopped sending tribute to Assyria. Instead, they allied themselves secretly with Egypt. Assyria reacted quickly and attacked Samaria; in 722 B.C., the city finally fell. The rest of the Israelite tribes were taken captive to Assyria, and the Northern Kingdom came to an end. The Hebrew prophets interpreted this event as God's punishment for Israel's idolatry (2 Kin. 17:7–23) and rejection of covenant spirituality (Amos 5:1–15). There is no record of the people of the northern tribes of Israel ever returning to the land in large numbers.

The Captivity of Judah, the Southern Kingdom. Israel's collapse ought to have served as a warning to rebellious Judah, which now had no protection against attack by the Assyrians. Assyria was determined to reduce Egypt's influence in Judah and Syria. Since Judah already had political contact with Egypt, the slightest move toward Egypt would bring the wrath of the Assyrians. In an astute move, King Hezekiah of Judah (about 716–686 B.C.) took advantage of the tension between Egypt and Syria and made Judah independent of both. He also regained control of the Philistine cities in the land.

When Sennacherib succeeded Sargon II in 705 B.C. as king of Assyria, he continued Assyria's westward expansion. Assyria, however, was under increasing pressure from the east. The Babylonian Empire was reviving, and its king sought to draw Judah and Egypt into an alliance against Assyria. In 701 B.C. the Assyrian armies got as far as the Mediterranean but failed to conquer Jerusalem (2 Kin. 19:20–36).

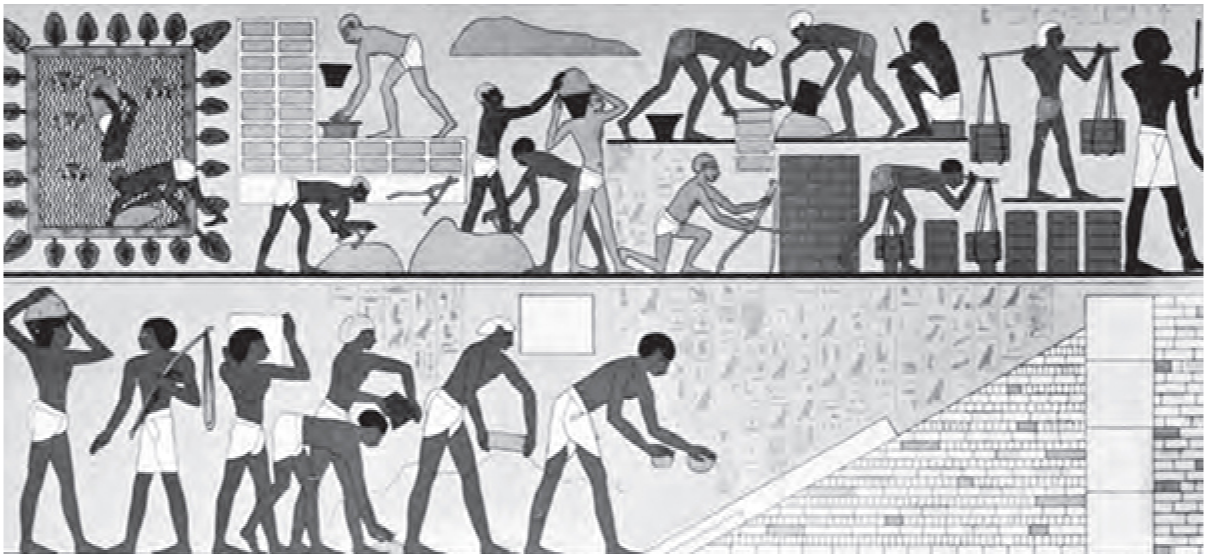
About 650 B.C. Judah and Egypt revolted against Assyrian domination, but Assyria quickly crushed that attempt. Assyria's power, however, was on the decline; and its end occurred when Babylon gained its independence about 626 B.C. The battles of the next sixteen years resulted in the complete collapse of the Assyrian Empire.

Pharaoh Necho of Egypt allied with the faltering Assyrian armies in order to protect his own interests, but his action could not prevent disaster. Instead, he attracted the attention of the Babylonians, who defeated the Egyptian armies at Carchemish in 605 B.C., placed Judah under tribute, and deported a number of Judah's nobles (Dan. 1:1–5). Three years later King Jehoiakim of Judah rebelled, and in 597 B.C. powerful Babylonian armies conquered Jerusalem and took "three thousand and twenty-three Jews" captive to Mesopotamia (Jer. 52:28). A third (586 B.C.) and fourth (581 B.C.) deportation involved 832 and 745 captives, respectively (Jer. 52:29–30), and ended the kingdom of Judah.

Little is known about Israel and Judah's life during the captivity. Captivity meant a shameful and humiliating punishment for this disobedient, idolatrous people. The royal court of Judah was taken into captivity, along with the priests, skilled workers, and anyone else who might ever lead a revolt against Babylon. The captives realized that God had finally brought the long-standing covenant curses (Deut. 28:15–68) to bear upon them. Torn from their homes and familiar surroundings, they were forced to travel across a hot desert to a strange land. Many of them had to work for their conquerors.

The punishment of captivity lasted seventy years for Judah (Jer. 25:11–12; Dan. 9:2), after which the penitent were allowed to return to their homeland under the leadership of Zerubbabel and others (Ezra 2:1–2). Israel's tribes, however, never returned and became lost to history.

Also see DISPERSION.



• Scene from a tomb depicting brickmaking in ancient Egypt. During their years of enslavement in Egypt, the Hebrew people performed these brickmaking chores.

CARAVAN—a company of people, often merchants with pack animals such as donkeys and camels, traveling together, especially through desert or hostile regions (Job 6:19). Genesis 37:25 mentions “a company of Ishmaelites, coming from Gilead with their camels, bearing spices, balm, and myrrh, on their way to carry them down to Egypt.”

The main trade routes connecting Egypt and Arabia with Syria and Babylonia passed through Canaan. Arab caravans carrying all sorts of spices and incense regularly traveled through Canaan on these routes; their presence was a natural part of life in Israel.

Photo by Olsjon

• Silhouette of a camel caravan moving slowly across the Arabian desert.

CARBUNCLE (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

CARCAS [KAHR cuss]—one of the seven eunuchs, or chamberlains, who had charge of the harem of King Ahasuerus (Xerxes) of Persia (Esth. 1:10; CARKAS, NRSV).

CARCASS—the dead body of an animal or a human being (Gen. 15:11; 1 Kin. 13:22), in the latter case usually called a corpse. The Book of Leviticus lists those animals that are forbidden as food and whose carcasses one must not touch, lest one become unclean (Lev. 11:4–40). A person was also rendered unclean if he touched a bone of a dead person, or a grave.

CARCHEMISH [KAHR kem ish] (city of [the god] Chemosh)—a city west of the Euphrates River in northwest Mesopotamia (2 Chr. 35:20; Is. 10:9; Jer. 46:2). Carchemish was the ancient capital of the HITTITES; later it became a fortified city of the Assyrians. It was the site of one of the most important battles of ancient history.

In 605 B.C., the army of Pharaoh Necho of Egypt and the army of Nebuchadnezzar II of Babylon collided at Carchemish, and the Egyptians suffered a crushing defeat. This victory allowed the Babylonians to assume control of the Syrian–Palestinian region. Before the battle of Carchemish, King Josiah of Judah tried to block the advance of Pharaoh Necho in his march northward. He was fatally wounded in the Valley of Megiddo (2 Chr. 35:20–24).

CARE—a burden, worry, or anxiety. In the New Testament, “care” is the English translation of the Greek noun merimna, which means “drawn in different directions,” therefore, division, distraction, worry, anxiety. The gospels use this word in Jesus’ parable of the sower; Jesus speaks of the cares of the world that choke the word of the kingdom of God (Matt. 13:22; Mark 4:19; Luke 8:14). God cares for His people and asks them to cast all their cares on Him.

CAREAH [keh REE ah]—a form of KAREAH.

CARGO—the goods carried in a merchant ship or other vehicle. When a storm battered the ship on which Jonah traveled, the sailors were afraid “and threw the cargo [wares, KJV] that was in the ship into the sea, to lighten the load” (Jon. 1:5).

CARKAS [KAHR cuss]—a form of CARCAS.

CARMEL [KAHR muhl] (garden/orchard of God)—the name of a mountain range and a town in the Old Testament:

1. A town in the hill country of Judah (Josh. 15:55; 1 Sam. 25:2, 5, 7, 40). It has been identified as present-day Khirbet el-Kermel, about 13 kilometers (8 miles) southeast of Hebron. Carmel, near Maon, was the home of a very rich and very foolish man named NABAL. This man was a stubborn, churlish fellow who insulted David by refusing to show hospitality to David’s servants. The Lord struck Nabal so that “his heart died within him, and he became like a stone” (1 Sam. 25:37). After Nabal’s death, David sent for Abigail the Carmelitess, widow of Nabal, to take her as his wife. Abigail, “a woman of good understanding and beautiful appearance” (1 Sam. 25:3), became one of David’s wives. Hezrai (2 Sam. 23:35), or Hezro (1 Chr. 11:37), one of David’s mighty men, also came from Carmel.
2. A mountain range stretching about 21 kilometers (13 miles) from the Mediterranean coast southeast to the Plain of Dothan (see Map

3, B–2). At the Bay of Accho (Acre), near the modern city of Haifa, this mountain range juts out into the Mediterranean Sea in a promontory named Mount Carmel. It rises sharply from the seacoast to a height of 143 meters (470 feet) near Haifa. The mountain range as a whole averages over 1,000 feet above sea level, with 530 meters (1,742 feet) being the summit.

The Canaanites built sanctuaries to pagan deities on this mountain. Thus, Carmel was an appropriate site for a confrontation between Elijah, the prophet of the Lord, and the "prophets of Baal" (1 Kin. 18:19–20), the idolatrous Canaanite priests. It was also from the top of Mount Carmel that Elijah saw a sign of the coming storm: "a cloud, as small as a man's hand, rising out of the sea" (1 Kin. 18:44), a cloud that signaled the end of a prolonged drought. The prophet Elisha also visited Mount Carmel (2 Kin. 2:25; 4:25).

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

- A modern highway on a pass through Mount Carmel, near Megiddo.

CARMELITE [KAHR muhl ite]—a native or inhabitant of the town of Carmel in Judah. NABAL, the husband of Abigail (1 Sam. 30:5; 2 Sam. 2:2; 3:3), and HEZRAI (2 Sam. 23:35), or HEZRO (1 Chr. 11:37), one of David's mighty men, were both Carmelites.

CARMELITESS [KAHR muhl ite ess]—a female inhabitant or native of the town of Carmel in Judah. Abigail, the widow of Nabal, is the only person in Scripture to have this designation (1 Sam. 27:3; 1 Chr. 3:1).

CARMI [KAHR mye] (vineyard owner, vinedresser)—the name of two or three men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Reuben who went to Egypt with Jacob (Gen. 46:1–9).
2. A descendant of Judah and the father of Achan (Josh. 7:1, 18), or Achar (1 Chr. 2:7).
3. A son of Judah (1 Chr. 4:1). He may be the same person as Carmi No. 2, although some scholars see this Carmi as an alternative form of Caleb.

CARNAL—sensual, worldly, nonspiritual; relating to or given to the crude desires and appetites of the FLESH or body. The apostle Paul contrasts "spiritual people"—that is, those who are under the control of the Holy Spirit—with those who are "carnal"—those under the control of the flesh (1 Cor. 3:1–4; Rom. 8:5–7). The word "carnal" is usually reserved in the New Testament to describe worldly Christians.

CARPENTER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CARPUS [KAHR puhs] (fruit)—a resident of TROAS with whom the apostle Paul left his cloak. Paul later sent for the cloak (2 Tim. 4:13).

CARRIAGE—KJV word for baggage that is packed, assembled, and carried on a journey. NKJV translations of this word include "supplies" (1 Sam. 17:22), "equipment" (Is. 10:28), "goods" (Judg. 18:21), and "carriages" (Is. 46:1).

CARRION VULTURE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CARSHENA [kahr SHE nuh]—a high Persian official at Shushan (Susa). He was one of seven princes "who had access to the king's presence" (Esth. 1:14). The "king" was Ahasuerus, generally identified as Xerxes I (485–464 B.C.).

CART—a two-wheeled vehicle used for transporting goods in Bible times (Num. 7:3, 6–8). The first mention of a cart in the Bible is the reference to the carts that Joseph gave to the "sons of Israel" to bring his father Jacob and their wives and children to Egypt (Gen. 45:19, 21, 27; 46:5).

Normally made of wood (1 Sam. 6:14), carts had either two or four wheels. If they were used to carry passengers, they might have a canopy to protect the riders from the weather (Num. 7:3). But they were generally used to carry the crops from the fields (Amos 2:13) or to transport heavy objects for some distance (1 Sam. 6:6–16). Oxen were usually used to pull a cart.

The reference in Isaiah 5:18 to sinning "as if with a cart rope" may mean "big sins," since heavy rope was needed to hitch the cart to an animal.

Also see WAGON.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• Several passengers in a cart cross the river at Philippi near the site of the ancient New Testament city.

CARVER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CASEMENT—KJV term for the small opening in a wall that allowed an outside view and provided for ventilation (Prov. 7:6; lattice, NKJV, NIV).

CASIPHIA [kuh SIF ih uh]—an unidentified place (perhaps a city or a district) in Babylonia, "by the river that flows to Ahava" (Ezra 8:15). Ezra sent for priests from this place, with a view toward their accompanying him to Jerusalem and serving in the temple (Ezra 8:17). Apparently, Casiphia was on or near the road between Babylon and Jerusalem.

CASLUHIM [KASS loo him]—a tribe descended from MIZRAIM (the regular Hebrew word for Egypt), son of Ham. The Bible speaks of the "Casluhim (from whom came the Philistines) and [the] Caphtorim" (Gen. 10:14; 1 Chr. 1:12). The Casluhim may have lived in Upper Egypt.

CASSIA (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

CASTAWAY—KJV word for DISQUALIFIED (1 Cor. 9:27).

CASTLE—a large fortified building. Fortified towers were often situated on a country's borders, or in other strategic places such as mountain passes, to guard against invading armies (2 Chr. 27:4). They served as the first line of Israel's defense. First Chronicles 11:5, 7 refers to the castle, or stronghold, of Jerusalem. Larger cities in biblical times often had an upper and a lower city. The upper city was usually on an elevated site where the earlier town had been situated; it was called the castle or fortress. With its own wall system, the upper city served as a second line of defense if the outer wall protecting the lower city was broken or scaled.

The word "castle" also appears in the Book of Acts, referring to the Fortress of ANTONIA in Jerusalem. This fortress overlooked the temple area. Roman troops were stationed here to curb any outbreaks of violence. When the apostle Paul was threatened by a mob in Jerusalem, soldiers from Antonia rescued him and took him into the fortress, or CASTLE, for protection (Acts 21:34; 22:24; 23:10, KJV; barracks, NKJV, NIV).

Also see BARRACKS.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Excavations of the castle, or fortress palace, of Herod the Great, showing the site of the royal gardens in the foreground.

CASTOR AND POLLUX [KASS tur, POL uks] (see GODS, PAGAN).

CAT (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CATACOMBS—deep, underground tunnels and vaults intended, for the most part, for the burial of the dead. The famous catacombs of Rome, extending for hundreds of miles, were used as places of refuge by the early Christians, who sought to escape persecution from the Roman Empire. They also conducted religious services there. These catacombs are situated outside the city gates, about 7.6 to 20 meters (25 to 65 feet) below the ground. The catacombs are not mentioned in the Bible.

CATERPILLAR (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CATHOLIC EPISTLES—the traditional designation of seven letters in the New Testament: James; 1 and 2 Peter; 1, 2, and 3 John; and Jude. The word “catholic” means “general, worldwide, universal” (in contrast to specific). When applied to these non-Pauline epistles, it means they were circulated generally throughout the whole of Christendom and not just sent to a specific local church. Also see EPISTLE.

CATTLE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CAUDA [KAW duh]—a form of CLAUDA.

CAUL—KJV word that refers to the fatty lobe attached to the liver (Ex. 29:13, 22; covering, NIV) and the fleshy sac surrounding the heart (Hos. 13:8).

CAUSEWAY—a raised road. The only causeway in the Bible was one that ascended from the lower city of Jerusalem to the temple (1 Chr. 26:16, 18). The NKJV translation is highway (upper road, NIV). It is also called entryway (2 Chr. 9:4) and walkway (2 Chr. 9:11).

CAVALRY—warriors or soldiers on horseback, assigned to battles that require great mobility. The Bible mentions the cavalry units of Solomon (1 Kin. 9:19, 22; 2 Chr. 8:6, 9), Ben–Hadad the king of Syria (1 Kin. 20:20), and the Chaldeans (Hab. 1:8; horsemen, KJV, NRSV, NIV). Both the Egyptians and the Canaanites had cavalries that threatened the Israelites at various times (Ex. 14:9; 15:19; Judg. 4:15). Most of the references to "cavalry" in the Old Testament probably intend "charioteers," since the use of soldiers on horseback was a relatively late development.

CAVE—a natural underground chamber open to the surface; a cavern or hollow place in the side of a hill or cliff. Because of the abundance of limestone in which caves easily form, the land of Israel has many caves.

The principal caves mentioned in the Bible are: Machpelah, the burial place of Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebekah, Jacob and Leah (Gen. 23:9–20; 49:30; 50:13); Makkedah, where five Amorite kings hid from Joshua (Josh. 10:16–27); and Adullam, where David hid from King Saul (1 Sam. 22:1).

After the destruction of Sodom, Lot and his two daughters lived in a cave (Gen. 19:30). When Elijah the prophet was threatened by Jezebel, he fled to a cave in Mount Horeb (1 Kin. 19:9, 13). The tomb of Lazarus was a cave at Bethany (John 11:38).

Photo by E. B. Trovillion

• In prehistoric times, families lived in some of these caves in the vicinity of Mount Carmel.

CEDAR (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

CEILING—the covering or lining of the interior upper surface of a room. This word is used to describe the construction of Solomon’s TEMPLE in Jerusalem. He paneled the walls with cedar wood “from the floor . . . to the ceiling” (1 Kin. 6:15). Also see ARCHITECTURE.

CELEBRATE (see WORSHIP).

CELLAR—KJV word for an underground storage area for oil or wine (1 Chr. 27:27–28; supply store, NKJV).

CENCHREA [SEN krih uh]—a seaport town in Greece about 11 kilometers (7 miles) east of Corinth. During his second missionary journey, the apostle Paul sailed from Cenchrea on his return to Syria (Acts 18:18; Cenchreae, NRSV). Phoebe was a servant of the church in this town (Rom. 16:1).

Photo by Howard Vos

• The Saronic Gulf at Cenchrea, which served as the port for the city of Corinth.

CENCHREAE [SEN krih eye]—a form of CENCHREA.

CENSER—a container, probably a ladle or shovel-like device, used for carrying live coals of fire, in which incense was burned (Num. 16:6, 17–18, 37–39, 46). The censers of the tabernacle were of bronze (Ex. 27:3; Lev. 16:12); those of the temple were "of pure gold" (1 Kin. 7:50; 2 Chr. 4:22).

In the temple worship, the use of the censer and the right to burn incense were jealously guarded prerogatives of the priests, the sons of Aaron. When UZZIAH (or Azariah), king of Judah, unlawfully entered the temple of the Lord and presumed to take a censer in his hand and burn incense on the altar, he was stricken with leprosy as punishment (2 Chr. 26:16–23). The censer was used in the purification ritual on the Day of Atonement (Lev. 16:12–14).

CENSUS—an official counting and registration of citizens; a property evaluation for tax purposes in early Rome.

The first numbering of the people in the Old Testament occurred at the time of the EXODUS. All men twenty years of age or older who were able to go to war were counted (Num. 1:2–46). One purpose of this census was to help in the distribution of the land (Num. 26:52–56). After the CAPTIVITY, there was another census (Ezra 2) of men to show how many had returned from Babylonian captivity and also as an aid for the distribution of the land.

In New Testament times the Roman government conducted periodic countings of the people to assess the amount of tax their country should pay to the treasury of the Roman Empire. The New Testament mentions two censuses. At the time of Jesus' birth, Joseph and Mary went to Bethlehem to be registered (Luke 2:1–5). This was probably a census required of all nations under the rule of Rome. All citizens were required to return to their places of birth for an official registration of their property for tax purposes.

The second Roman census was conducted to make an assessment of the property of Judea in A.D. 6. At this time Judea came under direct Roman rule. Because of this, Judas of Galilee incited a revolt, stating that the Jews should be ruled by God rather than by a foreign power (Acts 5:37).

The Roman system of taking census began in 10–9 B.C. Such a registration took place every fourteen years.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Huge storage jars discovered in the storage area of a royal palace on the Island of Crete.

CENTURION (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CEPHAS [SEE fuhs] (rock)—the Aramaic name of Simon the son of Jonah (John 1:42), given to him by Christ.

CHAFF—the fine, dry material, such as husks (seed coverings) and other debris, that is separated from the seed in the process of threshing grain. In the Bible, chaff symbolizes worthless, evil, or wicked persons (or things) that are about to be destroyed (Ps. 1:4; Matt. 3:12; Luke 3:17). It is a fitting figure of speech to describe complete destruction by judgment. "The ungodly," said the psalmist, "are like the chaff which the wind drives away" (Ps. 1:4). Also see WINNOWING.

CHAINS—a word with several different meanings in the Bible:

1. An insignia of office. Pharaoh put a chain of gold around Joseph's neck—a sign of royal favor (Gen. 41:42). Belshazzar did the same for Daniel (Dan. 5:7, 16, 29). Ezekiel used the word to symbolize God's sovereign love for Jerusalem (Ezek. 16:11).
2. An ornament (Prov. 1:9; Song 1:10). Two braided chains of pure gold fastened the BREASTPLATE of the high priest to the EPHOD (Ex. 28:14, 22; 39:17). Seven ornamental chains were used to decorate the capitals of the two bronze pillars that stood in front of the temple (1 Kin. 7:17; 2 Chr. 3:5, 16). Idols were often decorated with silver chains (Is. 40:19).
3. Fetters to bind prisoners. The apostle Paul was bound to a Roman soldier by a chain (Acts 28:20; 2 Tim. 1:16). Describing himself as "an ambassador in chains" (Eph. 6:20), Paul wished that King Agrippa could be altogether as he was, "except for these chains" (Acts 26:29). The apostle Peter was bound between two Roman soldiers by two chains (Acts 12:6–7).

Photo: Haifa Maritime Museum

• These slave chains from the Roman era were found underwater off the coast of Israel.

CHALCEDONY [KAL seh dough knee] (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

CHALCOL [KAL kahl]—a form of CALCOL.

CHALDEA [kal DEE uh]—originally, the lower Tigris and Euphrates valley, or the southern portion of Babylonia. Later, beginning with the reign of Nebuchadnezzar II (king of Babylonia from 605 to 562 B.C.), the term Chaldea came to include practically all of Babylonia and was virtually synonymous with the Neo-Babylonian Empire.

In the NKJV the term Chaldea is found only in the books of Jeremiah and Ezekiel. Jeremiah prophesied the fall of Babylon by saying, “Chaldea shall become plunder” (Jer. 50:10) and “I will repay Babylon, and all the inhabitants of Chaldea for all the evil they have done” (Jer. 51:24). In a vision, the Spirit of God took Ezekiel into Chaldea to his fellow Jews in captivity (Ezek. 11:24). Ezekiel later referred to “the Babylonians of Chaldea” (Ezek. 16:29; 23:15–16).

Also see BABYLONIA; CHALDEANS.

CHALDEAN ASTROLOGERS [kal DEE uhn] (see ASTROLOGY).

CHALDEANS [kal DEE unz] (conquerors)—one of the ancient peoples that formed the dominant population in Babylonia, especially beginning with the empire of Nebuchadnezzar II (king of Babylonia from 605 to 562 B.C.).

The Chaldeans are first mentioned in secular literature in the annals of the Assyrian King Ashurnasirpal II (who reigned from 884/883 to 859 B.C.). Earlier documents refer to the same area as the “sea lands.” In 850 B.C. Shalmaneser III, king of Assyria (reigned from 859 to 824 B.C.), raided Chaldea and reached the Persian Gulf, which he called the “Sea of Kaldu.” On the accession of Sargon II (reigned from 721 to 705 B.C.) to the Assyrian throne, the Chaldean Marduk-apla-iddina II—in the Bible called Merodach–Baladan (Is. 39:1) or Berodach–Baladan (2 Kin. 20:12)—a ruler of Bit–Yakin (a district of Chaldea), rebelled against the Assyrians and became king of Babylonia.

In spite of Assyrian opposition, Merodach–Baladan held power from 721 to 710 B.C. In 712 B.C. (2 Kin. 20:12–19; Is. 39:1–8) he sent an embassy to Hezekiah, king of Judah, inviting him to join a confederacy with Babylonia, Phoenicia, Moab, Edom, Philistia, and Egypt against Assyria. After Merodach–Baladan seized power, the Chaldeans became the dominant power in Babylon (Is. 13:19; 47:1, 5; 48:14, 20). He finally fled, however, and Bit–Yakin was placed under Assyrian control.

When Assyrian power declined, a Chaldean governor, Nabopolassar (the father of Nebuchadnezzar) led a revolt. In 626 B.C., he became king of Babylonia and founded a Chaldean (Neo-Babylonian) dynasty that lasted until the Persian invasion of 539 B.C., led by Cyrus the Great (king of Persia from 550 to 529 B.C.). The prestige of Nabopolassar’s successors, Nabu-kudurri-usur (Nebuchadnezzar; king of Babylonia from 605 to 562 B.C.) and Nabonidus (King of Babylonia from 556 to 539 B.C.), was such that the term Chaldean became synonymous with the term Babylonian.

Nebuchadnezzar was the king involved in the capture of Jerusalem and the deportation of its inhabitants into Babylonian captivity (2 Kin. 24:1–2; Jer. 25:1; 26:9–11; 52:30). The son of Nebuchadnezzar, Awel–Marduk (called Evil–Merodach in 2 Kin. 25:27 and Jer. 52:31), freed Jehoiachin, king of Judah, from prison after he had been there for 37 years. He gave Jehoiachin a daily allowance of food for the rest of his life.

In the Bible the term Chaldeans is first mentioned in connection with Haran—the son of Terah and brother of Abram—who “died before his father Terah in his native land, in Ur of the Chaldeans” (Gen. 11:28). The Book of Genesis tells us that “Terah took his son Abram [Abraham] and his grandson Lot, the son of Haran, and his daughter-in-law Sarai [Sarah], his son Abram’s wife, and they went out . . . from Ur of the Chaldeans to go to the land of Canaan” (Gen. 11:31). Abraham lived in Ur of the Chaldeans before the Chaldeans dominated Babylonia.

The term Chaldean also was used by several ancient authors to denote the priests and other persons educated in the classical Babylonian literature, especially in traditions of astronomy and astrology (Dan. 2:2, 4–5, 10). Some scholars believe the “wise men [magoi] from the East” (Matt. 2:1) who came to Jerusalem at the time of Jesus’ birth may have been Chaldean astrologers.

In the Bible most of the references to Chaldeans appear in the Book of Jeremiah (21:4, 9; 35:11; 51:4, 54). Jeremiah identified the Chaldeans with the Babylonians, who besieged the city of Jerusalem during the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, looted the temple, and carried the Israelites into captivity.

CHALDEANS, UR OF THE [kal DEE uhns] (see UR).

CHALKSTONE (see MINERALS OF THE BIBLE).

CHAMBER—a ROOM inside of, or on the roof of, a house or a public building (Gen. 43:30). The upper chamber was a room on the roof, often favored because of its cool location (2 Kin. 23:12). “Chamber” is also used symbolically in the Bible; the psalmist praised God for sending rain on the earth from “His upper chambers” (Ps. 104:13). Also see HOUSE.

CHAMBERLAIN (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CHAMELEON; CHAMOIS (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CHAMPION (go-between)—a word used to describe the Philistine giant Goliath (1 Sam. 17:4, 23, 51).

CHANCELLOR (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CHANGERS, MONEY (see MONEYCHANGERS).

CHANT (see MUSIC).

CHARCOAL—a dark carbon substance usually prepared from wood by charring in a kiln (Prov. 26:21; coals, KJV; coal, REB). Charcoal was used for heating (Is. 47:14; John 18:18) and cooking (Is. 44:19; John 21:9) and by blacksmiths (Is. 44:12; 54:16).

CHARGER—KJV word for PLATTER.

CHARIOT (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

CHARIOTEER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CHARIOTS OF THE SUN—articles removed from the entrance to the temple by Josiah, king of Judah, and burned. These articles may have been idolatrous golden images of some king (2 Kin. 23:11). Both the Mesopotamian and the Greek cultures believed in a sun-god who drove his chariot across the sky. Apparently a cult of sun worshipers also thrived in Israel at times (Deut. 17:3; Ezek. 8:16).

CHARITY—KJV word for LOVE.

CHARM (see MAGIC, SORCERY AND DIVINATION).

CHARRAN [KAR uhn]—a form of HARAN.

CHASTE—inwardly pure. While this purity is inward in nature, it also affects a person's conduct (1 Pet. 3:2). As commonly understood, the word "chaste" is applied to sexuality; the chaste person is innocent of sexual impurity, in desire, imagination, and action (2 Cor. 11:2; Titus 2:5). Some modern translations use the word "pure" where the KJV uses "chaste."

CHASTEN (see CHASTISEMENT).

CHASTISEMENT—an infliction of punishment (as by whipping or beating). In the Bible the term chastisement usually refers to punishment or discipline brought by God for the purpose of (1) education, instruction, and training (Job 4:3); (2) corrective guidance (2 Tim. 2:25); and (3) discipline, in the sense of corrective physical punishment (Prov. 22:15; Heb. 12:5–11; Rev. 3:19).

One marvelous passage that does not fit into any of these three categories is Isaiah's portrait of the Suffering Servant: "He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement for our peace was upon Him, and by His stripes we are healed" (Is. 53:5). Christians believe that Isaiah was speaking of Jesus Christ, who died in our place, and for us.

CHEBAR [KEE bahr] (great)—a "river" of Chaldea. The Jewish captives, including the prophet Ezekiel, lived along the banks of this river at the village of Tel Abib (Ezek. 1:1, 3; 3:15, 23). It was here that Ezekiel saw several of his remarkable visions (Ezek. 10:15, 20, 22; 43:3; Kebar, NIV). The Chebar was most likely not a river at all, but the famous Grand Canal of Nebuchadnezzar that connected the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers.

CHECKER WORK—KJV words for LATTICE NETWORK.

CHEDORLAOMER [ked awr LAY oh muhr] (servant of [the Elamite God] Lagamar)—a king of ELAM, a country east of Babylonia, in Abraham's day (Gen. 14:1, 4–5, 9, 17; Kedorlaomer, NIV). Allied with three other Mesopotamian kings—Amraphel of Shinar, Arioch of Ellasar, and Tidal of "nations"—Chedorlaomer led a campaign against southern Canaan and defeated the inhabitants in the Valley of SIDDIM near the Dead Sea. The conquered people served Chedorlaomer for twelve years, but in the thirteenth year they rebelled (Gen. 14:4).

Chedorlaomer came again with his allies and conquered the region east of the Jordan River from Bashan southward to the Red Sea as well as the plain around the Dead Sea, thus gaining control of the lucrative caravan routes from Arabia and Egypt through Canaan. In making this conquest, Chedorlaomer captured Lot, Abraham's nephew. Aided by his allies and numerous servants, Abraham launched a night attack on Chedorlaomer at Dan, defeating him and recovering Lot and the spoils.

Although Chedorlaomer has not been identified in references outside the Old Testament, the elements of his name are typically Elamite.

CHEEK—either side of the face between the eye, mouth, and ear. To smite someone on the cheek was a serious insult (Job 16:10; Mic. 5:1). Jesus' command to turn the other cheek when struck (Matt. 5:39) is an important statement of how those who follow Him are to respond to insult.

CHEESE—a food produced from curdled milk (1 Sam. 17:18; 2 Sam. 17:29; Job 10:10). In the desert climate of Canaan, cheesemaking preserved surplus milk for future use without refrigeration. Although the word occurs only three times in the Bible, cheese was probably more common in ancient Israel than this might indicate. The Tyropoeon [literally, cheesemakers] Valley of Jerusalem apparently was the center of the cheesemaking industry.

Jewish tradition prohibited the eating of cheese made by a Gentile because it may have been made from the milk of an animal offered to idols. Modern orthodox Jews still require rigid controls over cheesemaking.

CHELAL [KEE lal] (completeness)—an Israelite who divorced his pagan wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:30; Kelal, NIV).

CHELLUH [KEL oo]—a form of CHELUH.

CHELUB [KEE luhb] (bird's cage)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A brother of Shuhah, a Judahite (1 Chr. 4:11).
2. The father of Ezri, a supervisor of those who tilled the soil during David's reign (1 Chr. 27:26; Kelub, NIV).

CHELUBAI [kih LOO bye]—a son of Hezron and grandfather of Caleb (1 Chr. 2:9). Chelubai is also spelled Caleb (1 Chr. 2:18–19, 42).

CHELUH [KEL oo] ([Jehovah is] perfect)—a Levite who divorced his pagan wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:35; Chelluh, KJV; Cheluhi, NRSV, NASB; Keluhi, NIV, REB).

CHELUHI [keh LOU high]—a form of CHELUH.

CHEMARIM [KEM uh rim]—the KJV transliteration of the Hebrew word kemarim (Zeph. 1:4; idolatrous priests, NRSV, NKJV, NIV, NASB; heathen priests, REB). The word also refers to the idolatrous priests (2 Kin. 23:5, NKJV) appointed by the kings of Judah for the worship at the high places, and to the priests (Hos. 10:5, NKJV) of the calf-idols at Bethel.

CHEMOSH [KEE mahsh] (see GODS, PAGAN).

CHENAANAH [kih NAY uh nuh]—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. The father or ancestor of Zedekiah (1 Kin. 22:11, 24; 2 Chr. 18:10, 23).
2. A son of Bilhan, listed in the family of Benjamin (1 Chr. 7:10; Kenaanah, NIV).

CHENANI [kih NAY nigh]—a Levite who assisted at Ezra's public reading of the Book of the Law (Neh. 9:4; Kenani, NIV).

CHENANIAH [ken uh NYE uh] (the Lord has established)—a chief Levite during the days when David brought the ARK OF THE COVENANT to the temple (1 Chr. 15:22, 27; Kenaniah, NIV).

CHEPHAR HAAMMONI [KEE fur ha AM uh nye] (village of the Ammonites)—a town assigned to the tribe of Benjamin (Josh. 18:24; Kephar Ammoni, NIV).

CHEPHIRAH [kih FYE ruh] (village, town)—a city of Gibeon given to the tribe of Benjamin (Josh. 9:17; 18:26; Ezra 2:25; Neh. 7:29; Kephirah, NIV). It is identified as modern Khirbet Kefireh, about 8 kilometers (5 miles) southwest of el-Jib (ancient Gibeon).

CHERAN [KEE ruhn]—a son of Dishon (Gen. 36:26; 1 Chr. 1:41; Keran, NIV).

CHERETHITES [KER ih thites] (Cretans)—a tribe inhabiting the NEGEV (or southern area) of Philistia (1 Sam. 30:14; Ezek. 25:16; Zeph.

2:5). The tribe probably emigrated from the island of Crete. Along with the PELETHITES, the Cherethites formed the basis of David's mercenary army (2 Sam. 8:18; 15:18; 20:7; Kerethites, NIV).

CHERITH [KEE rith] (gorge, trench)—a wadi (dry riverbed) of Gilead, east of the Jordan River, where the prophet ELIJAH hid from King Ahab and was fed by ravens (1 Kin. 17:3, 5; Kerith, NIV). It is probably the same as Wadi Yabis, near Beth Shan.

CHERUB [CHAIR ub]—a place in Babylonia where some Jewish citizens lived during the captivity. The persons who returned to Judah from this place could not prove their Israelite descent (Ezra 2:59; Neh. 7:61; Kerub, NIV).

CHERUBIM [CHAIR oo beam]—winged angelic beings, often associated with worship and praise of God. The cherubim are first mentioned in the Bible in Genesis 3:24. When God drove Adam and Eve from the Garden of Eden, He placed cherubim at the east of the garden, "and a flaming sword which turned every way, to guard the way to the tree of life." They were similar in appearance to the statues of winged sphinxes that flanked the entrances to palaces and temples in ancient Babylonia and Assyria.

Symbolic representations of cherubim were used in the TABERNACLE in the wilderness. Two cherubim made of gold were stationed at the two ends of the MERCY SEAT, above the ARK OF THE COVENANT in the HOLY OF HOLIES (Ex. 25:17–22; 1 Chr. 28:18; Heb. 9:5). Artistic designs of cherubim decorated the ten curtains (Ex. 26:1; 36:8) and the veil (Ex. 26:31; 2 Chr. 3:14) of the tabernacle.

When Solomon built the temple, he ordered that two cherubim be made of olive wood and overlaid with gold. Each measured ten cubits (4.6 meters or 15 feet) high with a wingspread of ten cubits (1 Kin. 6:23–28; 8:6–7; 2 Chr. 3:10–13; 5:7–8). These gigantic cherubim were placed inside the inner sanctuary, or in the Most Holy Place in the temple. Their wings were spread over the ark of the covenant. Cherubim functioned as the armrests of the throne of the invisible Lord God of Israel, the true Ruler and King of His People (1 Sam. 4:4; 2 Sam. 6:2). The woodwork throughout the temple was decorated with engraved figures of cherubim, trees, and flowers (1 Kin. 6:29–35; 7:29, 36; 2 Chr. 3:7).

A careful comparison of the first and tenth chapters of the book of Ezekiel shows clearly that the “four living creatures” (Ezek. 1:5) were the same beings as the cherubim (Ezekiel 10). Each had four faces—that of a man, a lion, an ox, and an eagle ((Ezek. 1:10; also 10:14)—and each had four wings. In their appearance, the cherubim “had the likeness of a man” (Ezek. 1:5). These cherubim used two of their wings for flying and the other two for covering their bodies (Ezek. 1:6, 11, 23). Under their wings the cherubim appeared to have the form, or likeness, of a man’s hand (Ezek. 1:8; 10:7–8, 21).

The imagery of Revelation 4:6–9 seems to be inspired, at least in part, by the prophecies of Ezekiel. The “four living creatures” described here, as well as the cherubim of Ezekiel, served the purpose of magnifying the holiness and power of God. This is one of their main responsibilities throughout the Bible. In addition to singing God’s praises, they also served as a visible reminder of the majesty and glory of God and His abiding presence with His people.

In some ways, the cherubim were similar to the SERAPHIM, another form of angelic being mentioned in the Bible. Both were winged beings, and both surrounded God on His throne (Is. 6:2–3). But the seraphim of the prophet Isaiah’s vision were vocal in their praise of God, singing “Holy, holy is the LORD of hosts” (Is. 6:3). Nowhere else in the Bible do the seraphim break forth in such exuberant praise. They apparently played a quieter, more restrained role in worship.

CHESALON [KESS uh lahn]—another name for Mount Jearim on the northern boundary of Judah (Josh. 15:10; Kesalon, NIV). The name is preserved in that of modern Kesla, about 15 kilometers (9 miles) west of Jerusalem.

CHESED [KEE sed]—the fourth son of Nahor and a nephew of Abraham (Gen. 22:22; Kesed, NIV).

CHESIL [KEE sil]—a village in southern Judah, named with Eltolad, Hormah, and Ziklag (Josh. 15:30; Kesil, NIV).

CHEST—a word with two distinct meanings in the Bible:

1. The trunk, or rib cage, of the human body (Dan. 2:32).
2. A wooden box, or container (2 Chr. 24:3–11).

Also see COFFER.

CHESTNUT (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

CHESULLOTH [kih SUHL ahth]—a town between Jezreel and Shunem in the territory assigned to Issachar (Josh. 19:18; Kesulloth, NIV). This site is identified as modern Iksal, about 5 kilometers (3 miles) southeast of Nazareth.

CHETH [hayth]—a form of HETH.

CHEZIB [KEE zib]—a form of ACHZIB.

CHICKEN (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CHIDON [KYE dun] (a javelin)—the name of the threshing floor where Uzza (or Uzzah) was struck dead for touching the ARK OF THE COVENANT (1 Chr. 13:9; Kidon, NIV). In a parallel account the name is given as Nachon (2 Sam. 6:6; Naeon, NIV).

CHIEF—the leader of a family, clan, or tribe (Gen. 36:15–43); a chieftain, ruler, or prince of a people. The word is also used in various administrative titles, such as chief butler and chief baker (Gen. 40:2—41:10).

CHILD, CHILDREN—offspring born to a husband and wife in the marriage relationship. To the Hebrews, children were considered gifts from God, and to be childless was considered a reproach (Gen. 16:4; Luke 1:25). Jesus clearly expressed his love and respect for children (Mark 9:36–37). He used the innocence and openness of children to illustrate the attitude necessary for entering the KINGDOM OF GOD (Matt. 18:2–3). Also see FAMILY.

CHILDBEARING—the act of giving birth to offspring (Gen. 18:11; 1 Tim. 2:15). A birth is a joyful occasion (John 16:21). But it is also a painful event, characterized by agony and travail, following God’s curse on Eve (Gen. 3:16). This agony is so well-known that childbearing became symbolic of any time of sorrow and suffering (Ps. 48:6; Is. 13:8). The prophet Jeremiah was especially fond of this analogy (Jer. 4:31; 13:21; 49:24; 50:43). In His Olivet Discourse, Jesus applied this image to the sorrows that start the Messianic age (Matt. 24:8). The apostle Paul twice used this figure of speech (Rom. 8:22; Gal. 4:19).

Midwives were generally present to assist mothers at the time of birth (Gen. 35:17; 38:28). When Israel suffered in Egypt, God blessed two midwives and removed some of the effects of Eve's curse by giving Israelite women easier childbirth (Ex. 1:19).

Also see BIRTH; TRAVAIL.

CHILDREN OF GOD (see SONS OF GOD).

CHILEAB [KIL ih ab]—a son of David and Abigail (2 Sam. 3:3; Kileab, NIV); he also was called Daniel (1 Chr. 3:1).

CHILION [KIL ih ahn] (wasting away)—the younger son of Elimelech and Naomi and the husband of Orpah, Ruth's sister-in-law (Ruth 1:2, 5; 4:9–10; Kilion, NIV).

CHILMAD [KIL mad]—a place, apparently in Mesopotamia, that traded with Tyre (Ezek. 27:23; Kilmad, NIV). It is mentioned in connection with Eden, Haran, and Assyria.

CHIMHAM [KIM ham]—a friend and political supporter of David, perhaps the son of Barzillai the Gideadite. After Absalom's defeat, he returned from beyond the Jordan River with David to Jerusalem (2 Sam. 19:37–40; Kimham, NIV). The "habitation [or lodging place] of Chimham" (Jer. 41:17; Geruth Kimham, NIV) may have been an inn given to Chimham by David as a reward for his loyalty.

CHIMNEY—an opening in an outside wall of a house through which smoke from a fire could escape (Hos. 13:3). An opening like this was generally a feature in poorer households, which used wood as a fuel. The wealthy classes often lit a fire in the outside court for warmth at night (Mark 14:54; Luke 22:55). Also see HOUSE.

CHINNERETH, CHINNEROTH, CINNEROTH [CHIN uh reth, CHIN uh roth, SIN uh roth] (lute, harp)—the name of a lake (see Map 3, C–2), a region, and a city in the Bible:

1. The early name of the SEA OF GALILEE (Num. 34:11; Josh. 12:3; 13:27; Kinnereth, NIV). It was also called the "Lake of Gennesaret" (Luke 5:1) and the "Sea of Tiberias" (John 6:1; 21:1). The lake is shaped like the outline of a harp.
2. A fortified city of Naphtali on the northwest shore of the Sea of Galilee (Deut. 3:17; Josh. 19:35).
3. A region in or near the territory of Naphtali commonly identified with the Plain of Gennesaret (1 Kin. 15:20).

CHIOS [KYE ahs]—an island in the Aegean Sea—between Greece and Asia Minor (see Map 8, C–2)—at the entrance to the Gulf of Smyrna (modern Izmir). On his return to Jerusalem during his third missionary journey, the apostle Paul "sailed . . . opposite Chios" (Acts 20:15; Kios, NIV). Situated between the islands of Lesbos and Samos, Chios rests about 8 kilometers (5 miles) from the mainland of Asia Minor. The island was famous for its wine, wheat, figs, and gum mastic.

CHISEL (see TOOLS OF THE BIBLE).

CHISLEV [KIZZ lehv]—the ninth month in the Hebrew calendar (Neh. 1:1; Zech. 7:1; Chisleu, KJV; Kislev, NIV). Also see CALENDAR.

CHISLON [KIZ lahn]—the father of ELIDAD (Num. 34:21; Kislon, NIV).

CHISLOTH TABOR [KISS lahth TAY bawr]—a place on the border of Zebulun, probably near Mount Tabor (Josh. 19:12; Kisloth Tabor, NIV).

CHITLISH [KIT lish]—a form of KITHLISH.

CHITTIM [KIT im]—a form of KITTIM.

CHIUN [KYE uhn] (see GODS, PAGAN).

CHLOE [KLOH ee]—a woman, presumably a Christian, possibly from Corinth or Ephesus, who knew of the divisions and dissensions within the church at Corinth (1 Cor. 1:11).

CHOINIX (see WEIGHTS AND MEASURES).

CHORASHAN [kawr ASH uhn]—a form of ASHAN.

CHORAZIN [koh RAY zin]—a city north of the Sea of Galilee (see Map 6, C–2) where Jesus performed many "mighty works" (Matt. 11:21; Luke 10:13; Korazin, NIV). It has been identified as present-day Khirbet Kerazeh, about 3 kilometers (2 miles) north of Capernaum (present-day Tell Hum). Jesus pronounced judgment upon Chorazin because it did not repent and believe.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• Ruins of Chorazin, a town condemned by Jesus because of its unbelief (Matt. 11:21).

CHOSEN (see ELECTION).

CHOSEN PEOPLE—a name for the people of Israel, whom God chose as His special instruments. As a holy people set apart to worship God, they were to make His name known throughout the earth (Ex. 19:4–6; Deut. 7:6–8; Ps. 105:43). In the New Testament, Peter describes Christians as members of a "chosen generation" (1 Pet. 2:9; chosen people, NIV).

CHOZEBA [koh ZEE buh] (deceitful)—a village of Judah (1 Chr. 4:22), probably the same as Achzib (Josh. 15:44; Mic. 1:14) and Chezib (Gen. 38:5). Another spelling is Cozeba (NRSV, NIV).

CHRIST (anointed one)—a name for Jesus that showed that He was the long-awaited king and deliverer. For centuries the Jewish people had looked for a prophesied Messiah, a deliverer who would usher in a kingdom of peace and prosperity (Ps. 110; Is. 32:1–8; 61:1–3; Amos 9:13). Jesus was clearly identified as this Messiah in Peter's great confession, "You are the Christ, the Son of the living God" (Matt. 16:16). Also see JESUS CHRIST; MESSIAH.

CHRIST, ASCENSION OF (see ASCENSION OF CHRIST).

CHRIST, CRUCIFIXION OF (see CRUCIFIXION OF CHRIST).

CHRIST, DEATH OF (see ATONEMENT; CRUCIFIXION OF CHRIST).

CHRIST, DIVINITY OF (see INCARNATION; JESUS CHRIST).

CHRIST, HUMANITY OF (see INCARNATION; JESUS CHRIST).

CHRIST, PERSON OF (see INCARNATION; JESUS CHRIST).

CHRIST, TEMPTATION OF (see TEMPTATION OF CHRIST)

CHRISTIAN—an adherent or follower of Christ. The word occurs three times in the New Testament: "The disciples were first called Christians in Antioch" (Acts 11:26); Agrippa said to Paul, "You almost persuade me to be a Christian" (Acts 26:28); Peter exhorted, "If anyone suffers as a Christian, let him not be ashamed" (1 Pet. 4:16). In each instance, the word Christian assumes that the person called by the name was a follower of Christ. Christians were loyal to Christ, just as the Herodians were loyal to Herod (Matt. 22:16; Mark 3:6; 12:13).

The designation of the early followers of Christ as Christians was initiated by the non-Christian population of Antioch. Originally it may have been a term of derision. Eventually, however, Christians used it of themselves as a name of honor, not of shame. Prior to their adoption of the name, the Christians called themselves believers (Acts 5:14), brothers (Acts 6:3), or saints (Acts 9:13), names that also continued to be used.

In modern times the name Christian has been somewhat emptied of its true meaning as a follower of Christ. To some today, Christian means little more than a European or American who is not Jewish, while others have sought to make its proper use the name of a particular denomination. However, its original meaning is a noble one, of which any follower of Christ can rightly be proud.

CHRISTIANITY—the Christian religion, based on Jesus Christ, the only Savior and Mediator between God the Father and sinful humankind.

Christianity is unique among all the religions of the world. Most of them emphasize the life of the founder, but Christianity is based on the death of Jesus Christ. The death of Jesus is unique, for it was prophesied in the opening pages of the Bible (Gen. 5) and came to pass in the New Testament age thousands of years later.

Not only is the death of Christ absolutely essential to Christianity, so is His resurrection. His death and resurrection are so important that all four gospels—Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John—devote at least one-fifth of their teachings to this combined subject. Mark 10:45 summarizes this unique mission of Christ's: "For even the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve, and to give His life a ransom for many."

The world already had plenty of religions and gods at the time of Jesus' birth. The Romans had combined their gods with those of the Greeks, and thousands of deities were worshiped. None of these gods had ever lived; most were based on imagination or heroic stories. But Jesus had actually lived in Palestine, had been crucified under Pontius

Pilate (the Roman governor of Judea), and had been raised from the dead by the power of God the Father.

People who worshiped the mythical gods actually chose to ignore the visible signs of truth that pointed them toward God and eventually to salvation through grace (Rom. 1:20–21). This plan of salvation came to full maturity on the cross.

In the apostle Paul’s time there was a grave danger that Jewish converts to Christianity would make the new religion nothing more than an extension of Judaism. Paul fought to keep salvation-by-grace-plus-nothing the essence of Christianity (Eph. 2:8–9).

Paul’s conflict was with a group of converts called JUDAIZERS (Acts 15; Galatians 2), who thought a Gentile convert had to be circumcised before he could become a Christian. Paul, Barnabas, and others traveled to Jerusalem, the center of Judaism, to settle the issue with the church leaders. In effect, Christianity was declared to be a full-grown, independent religion, not simply an extension of the Jewish faith.

Today, Paul’s battle cry still rings forth as the banner of the Christian faith: “A man is not justified by the works of the law but by faith in Jesus Christ” (Gal. 2:16). Salvation is available only through Christ (Acts 4:12), made possible by His death, burial, and resurrection. Christianity is more than a creed, more than a religion; it is a way of life for all who accept Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior.

Photo by Scaliger

• Early Christians may have been forced to fight in gladiatorial contests in the Colosseum, an amphitheater in the city of Rome.

Photo: Hemera Technologies

• Interior view of the massive Colosseum, which covered about six acres and reflected the splendor of ancient Rome.

CHRONICLES, BOOKS OF FIRST AND SECOND—two historical books of the Old Testament that may be characterized as “books of hope.” In broad, selective strokes, these books trace the history of humankind from Adam to the CAPTIVITY and Restoration. Much of this material is a repetition of that found in the books of 1 and 2 Samuel and 1 and 2 Kings. But the writer of Chronicles apparently wrote his history to encourage the exiles who had returned to Jerusalem after seventy years of captivity in Babylon. This selective history reminded them of Israel’s glorious days from the past and gave them hope for the future as they pondered God’s promises to His Covenant People.

Structure of the Book. The books of 1 and 2 Chronicles were written originally as one unbroken book. In later translations of the Bible, however, this long narrative was divided into two shorter books. Each of these books falls naturally into two major divisions.

The first nine chapters of 1 Chronicles contain long genealogies, or family histories, that are composed of information from the earliest historical books of the Bible. These genealogies take the reader from the descendants of Adam up through the ancestors of King DAVID. Special attention is given to the families of priests and Levites (6:1–81; 9:1–34), Saul's family, and particularly to the family of David (chaps. 2–3). The second major section of the book (chaps. 10–29) focuses on the reign of King David. This long account begins with the death of Saul (chap. 10), omitting the historical facts that preceded this event. Saul's death is reported to establish the fact that he was unqualified for office and that David was God's choice for this responsibility (10:14).

The account of David's reign is presented in a positive light, with all the details about David's great sin omitted. First Chronicles also lists the names of all those associated with him as mighty men (chaps. 11–12), and records his great victories (chaps. 14, 18–20). This section of the book also lists the names of the Levites, priests, and musicians in David's administration (chaps. 23–26), as well as other state officials (chap. 27). Also included is David's work in establishing Jerusalem as his capital city (11:4–9), and as the center of worship (chaps. 13, 15–16, 22, 28–29).

The Book of 2 Chronicles also contains two major sections. Chapters 1–9 focus on the rule of King SOLOMON, whose greatest accomplishment was the building of the TEMPLE in Jerusalem. Included is correspondence between Solomon and Hiram, king of Tyre, about building materials (chap. 2), as well as a full account of the dedication service when the temple was completed (chaps. 5–7). The second major section (chaps. 10–36) is a highly selective account of the kings of Judah—from Rehoboam (chaps. 10–12) until the time of the captivity (chap. 36). Kings given prominence in this narrative include Abijah (chap. 13), Asa (chaps. 14–16), Jehoshaphat (chaps. 17–20), Joash (chaps. 23–24), Amaziah (chap. 25), Uzziah or Azariah (chap. 26), Hezekiah (chaps. 29–32), and Josiah (chaps. 34–35). The book ends with the proclamation of King Cyrus of Persia allowing the return of the Jews to rebuild their temple in Jerusalem (36:22–23).

One particularly interesting fact about the Book of 2 Chronicles is that it includes little information about the kings of the Northern Kingdom, Israel. And the facts it gives about the kings of Judah are mostly positive. This indicates the author was interested in tracing the line of David and showing that Judah was the nation that remained faithful to the covenant between God and His people. This fact would have been encouraging to the exiles who returned to Jerusalem to rebuild the temple. They felt they were continuing the forms and traditions that set them apart as the true worshipers of God and gave them a sense of identity as God's Covenant People.

Authorship and Date. The author of the Books of 1 and 2 Chronicles is unknown, although EZRA the priest and scribe (Ezra 7:1–6, 10–11) seems the most likely possibility. As in 1 and 2 Chronicles, the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah were written originally as one unbroken book in the Hebrew language. And the last two verses of 2 Chronicles are repeated in the first three verses of the Book of Ezra, probably indicating that the latter was originally a continuation of the former. Most scholars agree that these four books were written and compiled by the same person, but not all accept the theory of Ezra's authorship.

Ezra, however, remains the best candidate for this honor because of his important role among the community of exiles in Jerusalem. After leading a group to return to their homeland, he worked with another Jewish leader, Nehemiah, to strengthen the people's commitment to God's law (Ezra 10:17–19; Neh. 8:1–8; 9:1–3). He must have written all four of these books—1 and 2 Chronicles, Ezra and Nehemiah—some time after he arrived in Jerusalem about 458 B.C. and led the reforms among the people.

The chronicler used many sources in writing his book, including the Books of Samuel and Kings. He also used court histories, as did earlier writers, and prophetic narratives. One illustration of this procedure can be observed in 2 Chronicles 9:29, at the end of the story of Solomon.

Historical Setting. The Books of 1 and 2 Chronicles cover several centuries of the history of God's Covenant People—from the founders of the nation until the end of their captivity in Babylonia and Persia about 538 B.C. But the books were written with a specific purpose in mind—to give comfort and hope to those who returned to Jerusalem.

The stage was set for the return of the Jewish people to Jerusalem after the Persians defeated Babylonia and became the dominant power of the ancient world. The Babylonians had held the Jewish people captive for seventy years, but the Persians had a different foreign policy. They believed in letting their subject nations live in their own native regions under the authority of a ruling governor. They allowed the Jewish people to return to Jerusalem in several different stages, beginning with the first wave under ZERUBBABEL in 538 B.C. (2 Chr. 36:22–23).

After they returned to Jerusalem and rebuilt the temple, the remnant of God's Covenant People needed constant encouragement. Keeping their faith and traditions alive required continual struggle. The situation called for determination and a strong sense of hope—hope that the promises of God to David would not be forgotten, and that a king from this royal line would rule again one day among God's people. This was the unique situation to which the Books of 1 and 2 Chronicles were addressed.

Theological Contribution. The Books of 1 and 2 Chronicles tie the entire sweep of the Old Testament together into one great affirmation of hope. These books should not only be read as histories, but for their insights into how God has kept faith with His Covenant People across the centuries. By selecting events that show how God has kept His promises, the author presents a beautiful doctrine of hope that begins with Adam (1 Chr. 1:1) and stretches to the end of the captivity of God's people thousands of years later (2 Chr. 36:23). The clear implication for Christians today is that He is still a God of hope whose ultimate purpose will prevail in the world and in the lives of His people.

The Books of 1 and 2 Chronicles emphasize such priestly interests as genealogies, the offices and duties of priests and Levites, the building and dedication of the temple and its furnishings, and the organization of temple leadership and worship. They virtually ignore the apostate rulers of the Northern Kingdom of Israel, giving at least minimal attention to each of the twenty rulers of the Southern Kingdom of Judah. Positive aspects of rule in the south are stressed, with the reigns of David the ideal king and Solomon his successor receiving the most attention. Honoring David and his dynasty is clearly high on the chronicler's agenda. As the last book in the Hebrew canon, Chronicles thus prepares the way for the book of "the genealogy of Jesus Christ, the Son of David" (Matt. 1:1).

1 Chronicles: A Study and Teaching Outline

Part One: From Adam to Saul (1:1—9:44)

I. The Family of Adam 1:1–27
A. From Adam to Noah 1:1–4
B. From Noah to Abraham 1:5–27

II. The Family of Abraham 1:28–54
A. From Abraham to Isaac 1:28–34
B. From Isaac to Israel 1:35–54

III. The Family of Israel 2:1–55
A. The Sons of Israel 2:1–2
B. The Sons of Judah 2:3–55

IV. The Family of David 3:1–24
A. The Sons of David 3:1–9
B. The Sons of Solomon 3:10–24

V. The Descendants of the Israelite Tribes 4:1—8:40
A. The Family of Judah 4:1–23
B. The Family of Simeon 4:24–43
C. The Family of Reuben 5:1–10
D. The Family of Gad 5:11–22
E. The Family of Manasseh 5:23–26
F. The Family of Levi 6:1–81
G. The Family of Issachar 7:1–5
H. The Family of Benjamin 7:6–12
I. The Family of Naphtali 7:13
J. The Family of Manasseh 7:14–19
K. The Family of Ephraim 7:20–29
L. The Family of Asher 7:30–40
M. The Family of King Saul 8:1–40

VI. The Descendants of the Remnant 9:1–34
A. The Family of the Tribes Who Returned 9:1–9
B. The Family of the Priests Who Returned 9:10–13
C. The Family of the Levites Who Returned 9:14–34

VII. The Family of Saul 9:35–44

Part Two: The Reign of David (10:1—29:30)

I. David Becomes King 10:1—12:40
A. Death of Saul 10:1–14

B. Anointing of David as King 11:1–3
C. Conquest of Jerusalem 11:4–9
D. Account of David’s Mighty Men 11:10—12:40

II. The Removal of the Ark of the Covenant 13:1—17:27
A. Improper Transportation of the Ark 13:1–14
B. Prosperity of David’s Reign 14:1–17
C. Proper Transportation of the Ark 15:1–29
D. Celebration of the Ark in Jerusalem 16:1–43
E. Institution of the Davidic Covenant 17:1–27

III. The Military Victories of King David 18:1—20:8
A. David’s Early Victories Summarized 18:1–17
B. David’s Latter Victories Summarized 19:1—20:8

IV. The Preparation and Organization of Israel for the Temple 21:1—27:34
A. Sinful Census of David 21:1–30
B. Material Provisions for Building the Temple 22:1–5
C. Leaders Are Charged to Build the Temple 22:6–19
D. Organization of the Temple Leaders 23:1—26:32
E. Organization of the Leaders of Israel 27:1–34

V. The Last Days of David 28:1—29:30
A. Final Exhortations of David 28:1–10
B. Final Provisions for the Temple 28:11—29:9
C. David’s Final Prayer of Thanksgiving 29:10–19
D. Coronation of Solomon 29:20–25
E. Death of King David 29:26–30

2 Chronicles: A Study and Teaching Outline

Part One: The Reign of Solomon (1:1—9:31)

I. The Succession of Solomon as King 1:1–17

II. The Completion of the Temple 2:1—7:22

III. The Glory of the Reign of Solomon 8:1—9:28

IV. The Death of Solomon 9:29–31

Part Two: The Reigns of Selected Kings of Judah (10:1—36:23)

I. The Reign of Rehoboam 10:1—12:16

II. The Reign of Abijah 13:1–22

III. The Reign of Asa 14:1—16:14

IV. The Reign of Jehoshaphat 17:1—20:37

V. The Reign of Jehoram 21:1–20

VI. The Reign of Ahaziah 22:1–9

VII. The Reign of Athaliah 22:10—23:15

VIII. The Reign of Joash 23:16—24:27

IX. The Reign of Amaziah 25:1–28

X. The Reign of Uzziah 26:1–23

XI. The Reign of Jotham 27:1–9

XII. The Reign of Ahaz 28:1–27

XIII. The Reign of Hezekiah 29:1—32:33

XIV. The Reign of Manasseh 33:1–20

XV. The Reign of Amon 33:21–25

XVI. The Reign of Josiah 34:1—35:27

XVII. The Reign of Jehoahaz 36:1–3

XVIII. The Reign of Jehoiakim 36:4–8

XIX. The Reign of Jehoiachin 36:9–10

XX. The Reign of Zedekiah 36:11–21

XXI. The Proclamation by Cyrus to Return to Jerusalem 36:22–23

◆

CHRONOLOGY, NEW TESTAMENT—the chronology of the New Testament has been debated over the centuries. This is due partly to the limited data given in the biblical record. The biblical writers were more interested in the events that occurred than in the exact dates when they took place. Many times specific chronological facts are given as incidental remarks in the Bible. From these facts scholars attempt to reconstruct a chronological framework.

The Chronology of the Life of Jesus. The first task the student of the New Testament faces is to construct a chronology of the life of Jesus. The following high points in His life and ministry, with approximate dates, are accepted by most New Testament scholars.

His birth—According to Matthew 2:1 and Luke 1:5, Jesus' birth happened before Herod the Great's death, whch was no later than March or April in 4 B.C. Luke 2:1–5 states that just before Jesus' birth, Quirinius took a census of Israel while he was governor of Syria. The date of Quirinius' governorship is debated. Some scholars believe Quirinius was governor of Syria twice: once around the time of Herod's death and then a decade later in A.D. 6–7.

Another chronological note is that when Herod was tricked by the wise men who visited the baby Jesus, he ordered all children two years and younger to be killed. Some think this would indicate that Jesus was born two years before Herod's order. This is not necessarily true, for Herod was more likely just making sure that he would not miss Jesus in this senseless slaughter. Furthermore, some try to make the star in the East a conjunction of several stars. Again, the text talks about one star that seemed special to the wise men. A conjunction of stars would not have signified the birth of a king, according to the astrology of that day.

In conclusion, it seems that Jesus was born some time around 6 to 4 B.C., with the probability that it was the winter of 5/4 B.C. just before Herod's death.

The beginning of His ministry—Luke 3:1–3 states that John the Baptist's ministry began in the fifteenth year of Tiberius Caesar. Tiberius began reigning in August in A.D. 14. So this would mean that John the Baptist's ministry began some time in A.D. 29. From the gospel narratives about Jesus, it seems that He was baptized and began His ministry shortly after John began preaching. Luke 3:23 states that Jesus was "about" thirty years of age when He began His ministry. If Jesus was born in the winter of 5/4 B.C. and began His ministry in the summer or fall of A.D. 29, He would have been 32.

The duration of His ministry—Although a few scholars hold to a one- or two-year ministry of Jesus, most think He had at least a three-year ministry. The Gospel of John records three specific Passover celebrations during Jesus' ministry (John 2:13; 6:4; 11:55), which would account for at least two years of His ministry. However, it is thought that an additional year must be added between the Passovers of John 2:13 and 6:4. The reasons for this additional year come from two notes about time in John.

In John 4:35 Jesus speaks of four months before harvest, which would mean that He was in Samaria around January or February after the Passover celebration of John 2:13. John 5:1 also mentions a “feast.” Although scholars disagree on the identification of this feast, it probably refers to Passover or the Feast of Tabernacles.

Thus, after the Passover of John 2:13 there is the reference to January or February of John 4:35 and a “feast” of John 5:1. This most likely refers to the Passover or Feast of Tabernacles before the Passover of John 6:4. Thus, there is a two-year interval between the Passovers of John 2:13 and 6:4 and a one-year interval between the Passovers of John 6:4 and 11:55. Therefore, if Jesus began His ministry in the summer or autumn of A.D. 29 and His first Passover is to be identified as the one mentioned in A.D. 30 and the last one in A.D. 33, the duration of His ministry would be about three and a half years.

Jesus’ ministry before the first Passover in A.D. 30 would include the temptation (Matt. 4:1–11; Mark 1:12–13; Luke 4:1–13), the call of His first disciples (Matt. 4:18–22; Mark 1:16–20; John 1:35–51), the wedding at Cana (John 2:1–11), and His journey to Capernaum (John 2:12) just before He went to Jerusalem for His first Passover (John 2:13).

After this Passover Jesus’ ministry was primarily in Jerusalem and Judea (John 3:1–26). Following John the Baptist’s imprisonment, Jesus moved to Galilee (Matt. 4:12–17; Mark 1:14–15; Luke 4:14–15; John 4:3–36). He continued His ministry in Galilee until John the Baptist was executed. Although the date of the beheading is not specified, it occurred at about the same time as the feeding of the 5,000 (Matt. 14:13–21; Mark 6:30–44; Luke 9:10–17), which happened sometime around the Passover of A.D. 32 (John 6:4).

After this Passover Jesus withdrew from public ministry to be with His disciples. Other events during the final year of His ministry included His journey to Phoenicia (Matt. 15:21–28; Mark 7:24–30), the feeding of the 4,000 (Matt. 15:32–39; Mark 8:1–10), Peter’s confession at Caesarea Philippi (Matt. 16:13–23; Mark 8:27–33; Luke 9:18–22), and the Transfiguration (Matt. 17:1–8; Mark 9:2–8; Luke 9:28–36).

Finally, Jesus went to Jerusalem to be crucified during the Passover celebration of A.D. 33 (John 11:55).

The date of His death—Since Jesus was tried by Pilate, His death occurred during Pilate's governorship, which lasted from A.D. 26 to A.D. 36. Astronomically, Jesus' death fits best with either A.D. 30 or 33. Because of the political situation and other facts surrounding Jesus' life, it seems that A.D. 33 is the best date for the crucifixion. The day of the week of His crucifixion has been debated. But it seems best to consider it as Friday, since His body was laid in the tomb on the evening of the "Day of Preparation" (technical term for Friday), the day before the Sabbath (Matt. 27:62; 28:1; Mark 15:42; Luke 23:54, 56; John 19:31, 42). Thus Jesus was crucified on Friday, April 3, in A.D. 33.

The Chronology of the Apostolic Age. Another important task in New Testament studies is to construct a chronology of the important events that ccurred during the lives of the apostles and the early years of the Christian church.

The Book of Acts and the New Testament epistles serve as the basis of the chronology of the apostolic period. References to the political leaders during this time help pinpoint the dates.

From Pentecost to Paul's second Jerusalem visit—Pentecost, which would have occurred on May 24, A.D. 33, is the starting point of the apostolic age. To establish the date of Paul's conversion, scholars have determined the time of Paul's first two visits to Jerusalem. The first visit occurred three years after his conversion (Acts 9:26–29; Gal. 1:18) when he escaped from Damascus while it was under Aretas' control (2 Cor. 11:32–33). The Romans let Aretas control Damascus from A.D. 37 until his death in A.D. 39. Thus Paul's conversion would have occurred sometime between A.D. 33 and A.D. 36.

Paul's second visit to Jerusalem was fourteen years after his conversion (Gal. 2:1–10) when he brought relief to the Christians suffering a famine (Acts 11:28–30; 12:25). According to the Jewish historian Josephus, Helena, queen of Adiabene, shipped figs from Cyprus and grain from Egypt, probably at the height of the famine (A.D. 47–48), or shortly thereafter. Paul brought contributions after the shipment from Helena and would have come to Jerusalem a second time around A.D. 47–48. Counting fourteen years between his conversion and this visit would mean that Paul's conversion occurred in A.D. 33 or 34, although it could have been later, since the ancients counted parts of years as whole years. Most likely Paul's conversion was sometime in A.D. 35, probably in the summer of that year.

The events in the first part of Acts may be summarized as follows: Peter's ministry in Jerusalem, A.D. 33–35 (Acts 2–5); Stephen's martyrdom in the spring of A.D. 35 (Acts 6–7); Paul's conversion in the summer of A.D. 35 (Acts 9:1–7); Paul in Damascus and Arabia, A.D. 35–37 (Acts 9:8–25; Gal. 1:16–17); Paul's first visit to Jerusalem and ministry in Tarsus and Syria–Cilicia, A.D. 37 (Acts 9:26–30; Gal. 1:18–21); Peter's ministry to the Gentiles, A.D. 40–41 (Acts 10:1—11:18); Barnabas' and Paul's journey to Antioch, A.D. 41–43 (Acts 19:19–26); Agabus' prediction of famine, A.D. 44 (Acts 11:27–28); James' martyrdom during Agrippa I's persecution, A.D. 44 (Acts 12); and Paul's second visit to Jerusalem and his return to Antioch, A.D. 47–48 (Acts 11:30; 12:25; Gal. 2:1–10).

Paul's first missionary journey—On his first missionary journey (Acts 13–14) Paul went from Antioch to Cyprus when Sergius Paulus ruled as proconsul before A.D. 51 and most likely in A.D. 46–48. Paul next went to the Galatian churches in Asia Minor and then returned to Antioch. This journey lasted from the spring of A.D. 48 to the fall of A.D. 49. Upon his return to Antioch, he saw Peter (Gal. 2:11–16) and wrote the Book of Galatians. Paul's third visit to Jerusalem in the autumn of A.D. 49 was to attend the Jerusalem Council (Acts 15), after which he returned and wintered at Antioch in A.D. 49/50.

Paul's second missionary journey—Paul's second missionary journey began in the spring of A.D. 50 and ended in the fall of A.D. 52 (Acts 15:36—18:22). He revisited the Galatian churches and went on to Troas. Crossing over into Europe, he founded churches at Philippi, Thessalonica, and Berea. He waited in Athens for Silas and Timothy and then went to Corinth and stayed there a year and a half (Acts 18:11), from the spring of A.D. 51 to the fall of A.D. 52. Paul wrote 1 and 2 Thessalonians in A.D. 51 while he was in Corinth. Two chronological notes need to be considered.

First, while at Corinth he met Priscilla and Aquila, who had fled Italy because of the persecution of the Jews in A.D. 49 (Acts 18:2). Hence, Paul could not have come to Corinth before A.D. 49. Second, Paul was tried before Gallio (Acts 18:12–16), who was the proconsul of Achaia from the summer of A.D. 51 to the summer of A.D. 52. Thus, Paul must have been in Corinth sometime during Gallio's rule. After his long stay in Corinth, Paul brought Priscilla and Aquila to Ephesus and then moved on to Jerusalem (fourth visit) and returned to Antioch for the winter in A.D. 52/53.

Paul's third missionary journey—Paul's third missionary journey was from the spring of A.D. 53 to the spring of A.D. 57 (Acts 18:23—21:16). Leaving Antioch, he revisited the Galatian churches, arriving in Ephesus around the fall of A.D. 53 and staying there until the spring of A.D. 56. Just before his departure from Ephesus, he wrote 1 Corinthians. Because of the riot at Ephesus, he left for Macedonia. From Macedonia he wrote 2 Corinthians (fall of A.D. 56). He traveled to Corinth, wintered there in A.D. 56/57, and wrote Romans. In the spring of A.D. 57 he revisited the churches in Macedonia, went to Miletus to meet the Ephesian elders, and then went on to Jerusalem (fifth visit) for the Feast of Pentecost in A.D. 57.

Paul's imprisonments—While in Jerusalem, Paul was arrested and taken to Caesarea, where he was tried by Felix and imprisoned for two years in A.D. 57–59 (Acts 21:26–27). Although there is debate concerning the time that Festus succeeded Felix, it is likely that this succession occurred in the summer of A.D. 59. Paul was heard first by Festus (Acts 25:7–12) and shortly afterwards by Agrippa II (Acts 26). Then he appealed to Caesar.

Paul went to Rome on a hazardous journey from August of A.D. 59 to February of A.D. 60 and was imprisoned from the spring of A.D. 60 to the spring of A.D. 62 (Acts 27–28). While in prison Paul wrote Ephesians, Colossians, Philemon, and Philippians.

Chronology from this point on is drawn from inferences in the epistles in the New Testament and other evidence from the early church. It seems likely that Paul was released after a two-year imprisonment in Rome and went to Ephesus and Colossae and then left for Macedonia. In the fall of A.D. 62 Paul wrote to Timothy at Ephesus. Also in A.D. 62, James, the brother of Jesus, was martyred during the time of anarchy between the death of Festus and Albinus' arrival. Peter probably went to Rome that year and remained there until his martyrdom in the persecution of the Roman emperor Nero in A.D. 64.

While Peter was in Rome, the Gospel of Mark may have been written under Peter's guidance. Also, Peter would have written his two epistles.

Paul moved to Asia Minor in the spring of A.D. 63 and remained there until the spring of A.D. 64. He then went to Spain from the spring of A.D. 64 to the spring of A.D. 66. Leaving Spain, he went to Crete with Titus and left Titus there while he went on to Asia Minor in the summer/autumn of A.D. 66. While there he wrote the Epistle to Titus. Paul spent the winter of A.D. 66/67 at Nicopolis (Titus 3:12), after which he went to Macedonia and Greece. But he was arrested and brought to Rome in the fall of A.D. 67 for his second Roman imprisonment. While there he wrote 2 Timothy. Paul was executed around the spring of A.D. 68.

About two years after Paul's death, Jerusalem was destroyed. At that time only a few remaining books of the New Testament had not been written. It is possible that the Gospel of John was written around A.D. 70. Jude may have been written about A.D. 75, the three epistles of John about A.D. 85–95, and the Book of Revelation about A.D. 95–96. This marked the end of the age of the apostles.

◆

Photo by Howard Vos

- Ephesus was a prominent city of the New Testament era. Still visible today is this beautiful marble street that led to the nearby harbor.

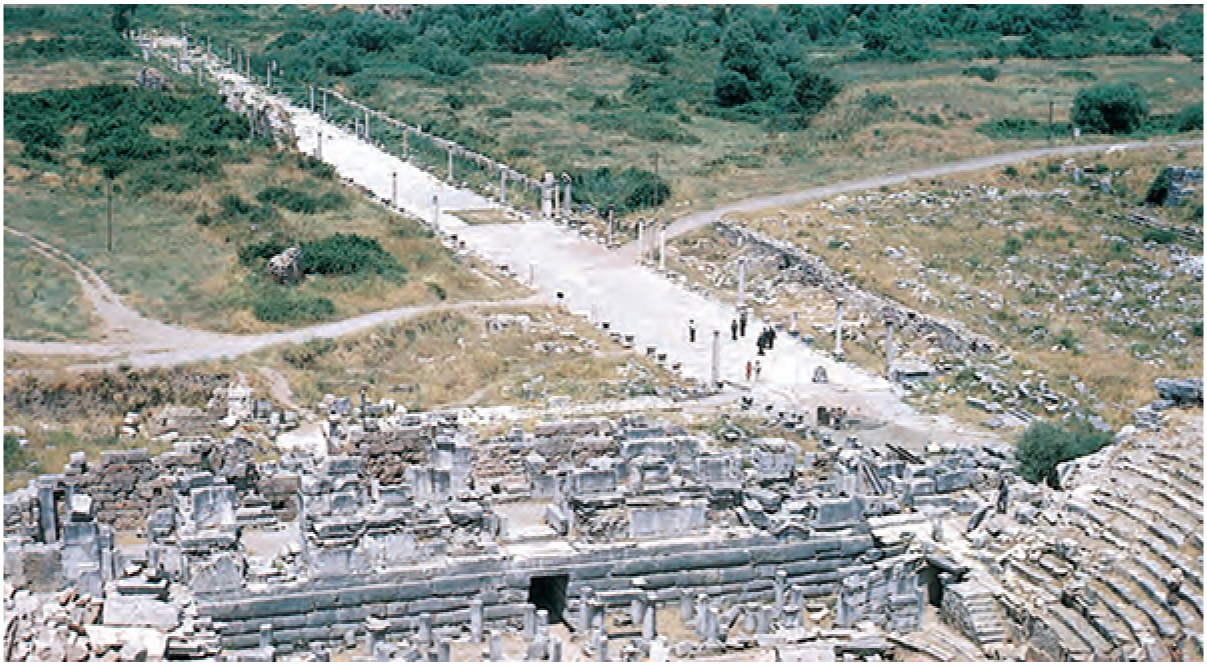

Photo by Howard Vos

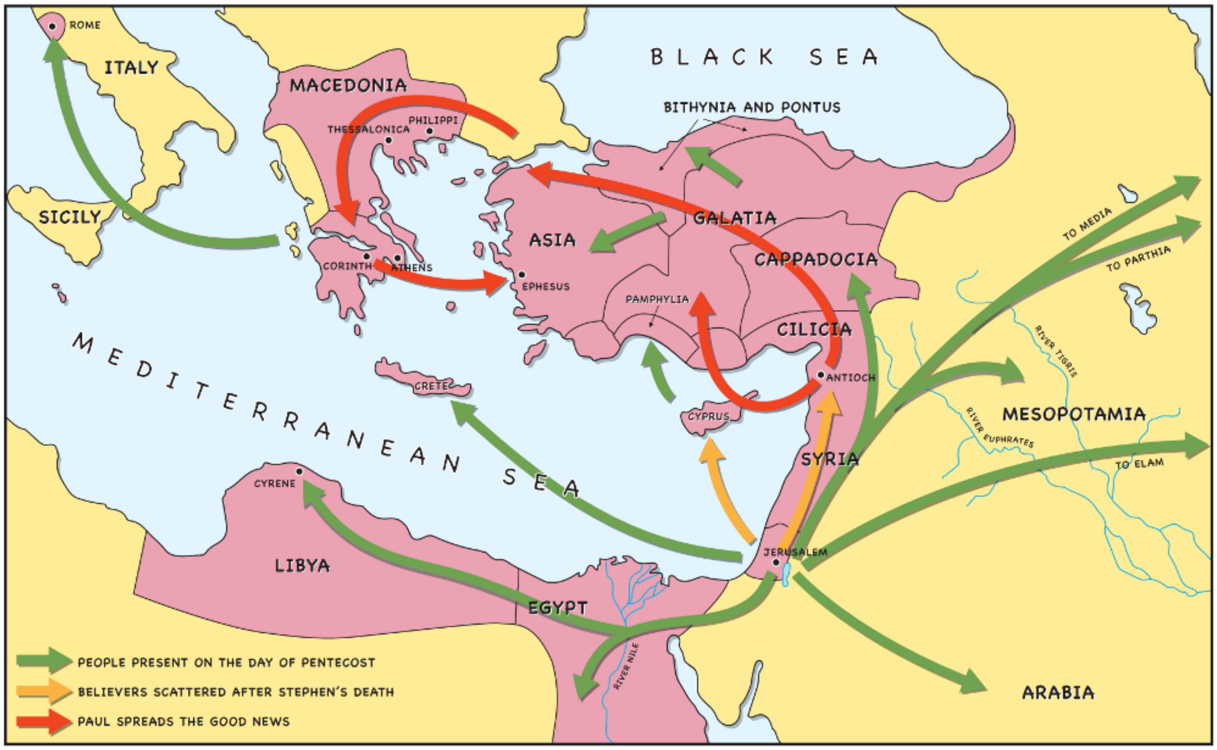
• Ruins of the great outdoor theater at Ephesus (bottom and lower right of photo), where Paul was almost mobbed by pagan worshipers because he proclaimed allegiance to the one true God (Acts 19:21–41).

THE MESSAGE EXPLODES



ROME
ITALY SICILY
MACEDONIA
THESSALONICA
PHILIPPI
BLACK SEA
BITHYNIA AND PONTUS
GALATIA
ASIA
CORINTH
ATHENS
EPHESUS
CAPPADOCIA
PAMPHYLIA
CILICIA
ANTIOCH
TO MEDIA
TO PARTHIA
RIVER TIGRIS
MESOPOTAMIA
RIVER EUPHRATES TO ELAM
MEDITERRANEAN SEA
CRETE
CYPRUS
SYRIA
CYRENE
LIBYA
JERUSALEM
EGYPT RIVER NILE
ARABIA
PEOPLE PRESENT ON THE DAY OF PENTECOST
BELIEVERS SCATTERED AFTER STEPHEN'S DEATH
PAUL SPREADS THE GOOD NEWS

CHRONOLOGY, OLD TESTAMENT—the scientific identification of the time when the events recorded in the Old Testament took place. With all the information the Old Testament contains, some of it detailed and lengthy, drawing up a settled list of dates for the events it reports might appear to be a simple task. Actually it is very difficult. Not only do we not have a sufficiently continuous record of events; much of the information we do have can be interpreted in different ways.

It is hard to relate specific events in Hebrew history to what was taking place in neighboring nations until about the eighth century B.C. In turn, dating the events of each of these nations presents its own problems. Finally, the systems by which Israel and its neighbors kept track of time and events are not clear.

Problems in Establishing a Chronology. The first of these obstacles can be illustrated from the work of the seventeenth-century Archbishop James Ussher, who treated the biblical genealogies as though they were modern records of generation-by-generation descent. Basing his work on that assumption, he calculated back to the time of CREATION, which he set at 4004 B.C. More recent information about ancient lists of descendants, however, indicates that unimportant family members often were omitted. This led to compressed lists that did not precisely conform to the period of time that they were supposed to cover.

Ussher also took the ages of the people who lived before the Flood at face value. Later research has shown that they appear to be based upon an ancient Sumerian system of reckoning—such as that used for the Sumerian king lists—which we do not yet fully understand. As a result, Ussher's chronology is totally inaccurate until the time of Moses—a period that itself is also a matter of considerable debate among scholars.

If it were possible to link the period of the biblical Flood with what was happening in the rest of the world, as described in Sumerian or Babylonian literature, Old Testament chronology would be a simple matter. But there are a number of reasons why this is impossible.

The first problem is that there was no uniform basis in the ancient world on which dates were reckoned. When attempts at dating were made, they were often expressed in phrases such as "after the earthquake," or "in the fourth year of the king." While these statements were perfectly clear to everyone who read them at the time of their writing, they are completely meaningless for comparing the events that took place in that culture with events that happened at the same time somewhere else. Consequently, the problems involved in trying to establish dates from the Ancient Near East in general also apply to the attempt to establish dates for Old Testament events.

Scholars who have tried to establish dating sequences for Babylonian history have found themselves embarrassed by two dating sequences for one of the earlier periods. There is a "high" chronology for the First Babylonian Dynasty; it is arrived at by connecting Amraphel, king of Shinar (Gen. 14:1), with HAMMURAPI of Babylon and dating him around 2100 B.C. By contrast, the "low" chronology places Hammurapi between about 1728 and 1686 B.C. Even this late date, however, is regarded as too high by some scholars, who interpret the data differently.

A similar situation is true for Egyptian history. Information provided by lists and annals of kings generally is notably unreliable for purposes of chronology, and just as much caution is needed when dealing with Egyptian sources as with their counterparts in MESOPOTAMIA (the region between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers). Historians have discovered that Egyptian records are not so much factual history as propaganda; they present the "official" view of events for the instruction of future Egyptian generations.

Historians have grouped the lists of Egyptian rulers into thirty-one dynasties. While this is a convenient way of looking at Egyptian history for the historian, the dates for events are not reliable until about the Saitic period (about 663–525 B.C.). Furthermore, both the First and Second Dynasties have "high" and "low" chronologies, the former supported by scholars who date the period between 3867 and 3100 B.C., and the latter supported by scholars who date the period between 2900 and 2760 B.C. Other difficulties in Egyptian dating include the Eighteenth Dynasty, which introduced the New Kingdom period (about 1570–1150 B.C.). This was the period of time during which pharaohs such as Amunhotep II, Akhenaten, Tutankhamun and others ruled.

In spite of these confusions, some dates in Near Eastern history can be established reasonably well. So skillful were the ancient Egyptians in determining the length of the solar year that the earliest precise year-date in human history can now be set as 1991 B.C., the beginning of the magnificent Twelfth Dynasty. Hammurapi of Babylon's forty-two-year reign was almost certainly 1792–1750 B.C. The fall of SAMARIA in 722 B.C. (2 Kin. 17:6) is confirmed by a statement in the annals of SARGON of Assyria for that year. Again, the first Babylonian attack on Jerusalem, resulting in the CAPTIVITY of 597 B.C., occurred on March 15–16 of that year, as recorded in the Babylonian Chronicle, a contemporary CUNEIFORM text. Unfortunately, such points of contact are few. It was unusual in ancient times for a defeated nation to record its losses.

First of all, if the war resulted in the extinction of one nation—as happened when the Sea Peoples brought the Hittite Empire to an end about 1200 B.C.—the conquered nation usually was unwilling—or unable—to record its defeat. Furthermore, it was the common practice among Ancient Near Eastern nations—with the exception of the Hebrews—to exaggerate victories and to ignore defeats. In those instances where both sides fought to a standstill, each usually counted the battle as a victory.

Another practice that seems very strange to the modern reader was the practice in some Near Eastern countries of including an accession year as part of a king's reign. This period was not necessarily a full calendar year; often it consisted only of the interval between the accession of the new king and the beginning of the next calendar year. This is why it is so difficult to compare and make sense of the list of kings in the books of 1 and 2 Kings and 1 and 2 Chronicles.

Another device that complicates the chronology of the Old Testament was the system of co-regencies. A king would begin his reign while his predecessor was still alive, governing with him several years before he died. This system is the reason for some of the obvious difficulties in harmonizing dates of kings in the Old Testament. Thus, in the history of Judah, Jehoshaphat (about 870–848 B.C.) actually was co-regent from 873 B.C., while Jehoram (Joram), who reigned from about 848 to 841 B.C., had been co-regent from 853 B.C.

But even after recognizing all these dating problems, the Bible student can rest assured that the ancient Near Eastern scribes worked with great care and precision in passing on the Old Testament. They furnish the patient modern interpreter with the information needed to gain a reliable picture of Old Testament history.

Time of the Patriarchs. Because of the problems involved, archaeological periods might be used to date the earliest history of the Old Testament. But these periods are general rather than precise, and archaeologists disagree about the length of each period. Therefore these archaeological descriptions may be used for the periods up to, and including, the Hebrew PATRIARCHS. These dates should be regarded as approximate.

A late period of the Old Stone Age known as Natufian (8000 B.C.) corresponds with the introduction of agriculture into the Near East. This period was followed by the pre-pottery Neolithic phase (8000–5000 B.C.) at Jericho and elsewhere. The Chalcolithic period (4500–3000 B.C.) was marked by the increasing use of metals in Mesopotamia and Egypt and by weaving and pottery-making in Mesopotamia. The Sumerians began draining the southern Mesopotamian marshes during this period. This led to the beginning of a culture that has left its mark on the rest of humanity. This civilization reached its height in the Early Bronze Age (3000–2100 B.C.), when the first Semitic kingdom was established in Babylonia.

The Sumerian words and phrases in the early chapters of Genesis show there was an important cultural connection between Sumer and Israel. The Flood may well have occurred about the middle of this period, but actual data is lacking. According to some scholars, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob lived at this time; but others place them in the Middle Bronze Age (2100–1550 B.C.). A few writers even think that they flourished toward the end of the Late Bronze Age (1550–1200 B.C.).

Four dates have been suggested for the Hebrew patriarchs. These are based upon two different dates for the EXODUS. The first and most likely date is 2166–1805 B.C., assuming a fifteenth-century B.C. date for the Exodus and a 430-year Hebrew settlement in Egypt. The archaeological background material used to support this date comes from Mesopotamia and Syria. The second, also assuming a fifteenth-century B.C. Exodus but reckoning a 215-year Egyptian settlement by the Hebrews, is 1952–1589 B.C. Once more, Mesopotamian archaeological materials are claimed as evidence.

The third date, assuming a thirteenth-century B.C. period for the Exodus, is 1950–1650 B.C. Advocates of this theory argue from archaeological evidence from the Middle Bronze Age. The fourth date, also assuming a thirteenth-century B.C. Exodus, is 1500–1300 B.C. Advocates of this date support their position with evidence from the Amarna Age culture of the fourteenth century B.C.

The Time of the Exodus. The two suggested dates for the Exodus must now be considered. The first is 1446 B.C., indicated by 1 Kings 6:1 and suggested by Judges 11:26. Mycenaean pottery from the Judges period at Jericho and Hazor appears to support this date. The second is 1280 B.C., relying upon archaeological evidence indicating that the Egyptian cities of Pithom and Raamses (Ex. 1:11) were rebuilt in the thirteenth century B.C., probably with Israelite labor. Furthermore, the Merneptah stele, which describes that Pharaoh's campaign in Palestine about 1220 B.C., regarded Israel as an already settled nation. This suggests an exodus from Egypt some sixty years earlier. On the basis of these two dates there obviously will be two corresponding dates for the wilderness wanderings, namely 1446–1406 B.C. and 1280–1240 B.C. The date of the Exodus is one of the most difficult problems in Old Testament history. It is made worse by the fact that solid evidence can be produced to support both positions, although that favoring the earlier date is somewhat more convincing.

This situation not only affects the dating of the Exodus and the WANDERING OF ISRAEL in the wilderness; it also affects the dates for the Conquest and the period of the Judges. Alternate dates have been suggested for both these events. The first alternative is 1406–1050 B.C., to accommodate all the judges (assuming that the works of the judges follow one another historically); the second is a shorter interval of 1230–1025 B.C. (assuming that their work overlapped). The earlier date is supported partly by the Mycenaean pottery at Hazor, which suggests a date for the Conquest shortly after 1400 B.C. The second date claims a great deal of evidence from archaeological studies at Bethel, Hazor, and several Philistine sites. In both instances the archaeological data are open to various interpretations.

The United Kingdom. Few problems are associated with the date of the United Kingdom. Saul probably was made king in 1050 B.C. He ruled for forty years (compare Acts 13:21), being succeeded by David in 1010 B.C. David was king for roughly the same length of time, as was Solomon his successor (970–931 B.C.). The year of the death of Solomon and the division of his Kingdom, 931 B.C., is the earliest precise year-date in biblical history. Following Solomon’s death, it again becomes difficult to set precise dates, due to the different methods the scribes used in their work.

The Divided Kingdom. When the Kingdom divided, Israel followed the Egyptian system of not counting accession years until the ninth century B.C. Then it changed to the Babylonian system, which did count accession years.

Under Rehoboam, Judah began by using the accession-year method, but in the ninth century B.C. it adopted the Egyptian system that Israel had abandoned. After a short interval, Judah returned to the accession-year method and continued to use it until the captivity. It also appears that the scribes also included co-regencies in their reckonings; in addition, two different calendars were involved. Israel's new year began in the spring (Nisan), and Judah's began in the autumn (Tishri).

In any event, Israel and Judah both kept careful records of the lengths of reign of their rulers. The Books of 1 and 2 Kings synchronized the records by cross-referencing them to each other.

Many of the kings in the separate nations of Judah and Israel also were mentioned in the annals or records of foreign nations. This proves their historicity and lays a foundation for an integrated system of Near Eastern dates.

The nation of Israel crumbled in 722 B.C. with their defeat by the Assyrians. Her sister nation, Judah, suffered the same fate about 150 years later, in 586 B.C., when Jerusalem fell to Babylonia. The leading citizens of Judah were carried into captivity by the Babylonians, beginning their period of exile in a foreign land.

Return from Captivity. The seventy-year Babylonian captivity (605–538 B.C.) ended with Babylon's fall to CYRUS, founder of the Persian Empire, and his proclamation of freedom to the captive peoples in Mesopotamia. The captives returned to Judea beginning in 538 B.C., and the prophets HAGGAI and ZECHARIAH (520 B.C.) encouraged the rebuilding of the temple, which was accomplished four years later (516/515 B.C.). The period of Xerxes (Ahasuerus) and Esther (486–465 B.C.) was followed in Judah by the work of Ezra and Nehemiah (458–445 B.C.). Together they rehabilitated the faithful community and established its life on the basis of the Law. Some scholars have tried to reverse the historical order of Ezra and Nehemiah by placing Ezra in the reign of Artaxerxes II (404–359 B.C.), but this requires an unnecessary alteration of the Hebrew text of Ezra 7:7.

From the Persians to the End of the Old Testament. The Persian period (539–331 B.C.) ended abruptly with the conquests of ALEXANDER the Great, and was replaced by the Greek period (331–65 B.C.). Alexander died in 323 B.C., and his empire was divided among his generals. Judah was controlled by the Egyptian PTOLEMIES until 192 B.C., when it was taken over by the SELEUCIDS OF SYRIA, who were led by Antiochus III the Great. He died in 190 B.C. while resisting the Romans and was later succeeded by his younger son ANTIOCHUS IV Epiphanes (175–163 B.C.).

The cruelty of Antiochus IV Epiphanes quickly caused a revolt by a Jewish family known as the MACCABEES (167–163 B.C.). This revolt ultimately secured Jewish independence from Syria. (The Dead Sea community at Qumran was probably founded about the time that Antiochus III died, although this is uncertain.) The Maccabees (or HASMONEANS) governed Judea for a century, from 142 B.C. Their rule was ended by the Roman occupation of Syria under Pompey in 63 B.C. This meant the beginning of the Roman period in Palestine. For the next century Roman soldiers were stationed in Jerusalem. Under the watchful eye of Rome, Herod the Great (37–4 B.C.) became governor of Galilee and controlled political life in Judea; the religious affairs of the nation were governed by the PHARISEES and SADDUCEES.

With the defeat of Antony and Cleopatra in 31 B.C., Octavian became the head of the Roman Empire. Under the title of AUGUSTUS, he brought a period of peace and prosperity to the Empire until his death in A.D. 14. During the reign of Augustus, and just before the death of Herod the Great, Jesus Christ was born (about 6 B.C.). With this event the chronology of the Old Testament formally comes to an end.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Statue of Amenhotep II of Egypt. Many scholars believe he was the ruling Pharaoh when the Hebrew people were delivered from slavery under the leadership of Moses.

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

• The lush Jordan Valley, with the river flowing between Israel and the modern nation of Jordan.

CHRYSOLITE, CHRYSOPRASE, CHRYSOPRASUS (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

CHUB [kub]—a people who allied with Egypt against the Babylonians in the time of Nebuchadnezzar (Ezek 30:5). scholars believe Chub is a textual error and should be read as in the SEPTUAGINT, Lub, that is, Libya (NIV, NRSV).

CHUN [kun]—a town in Syria from which David took bronze (1 Chr. 18:8; Cun, KJV, NIV).

CHURCH—a local assembly of believers as well as the redeemed of all the ages who follow Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord.

In the four gospels of the New Testament, the term "church" is found only in Matthew 16:18 and 18:17. This scarcity of usage in those books that report on the life and ministry of Jesus is perhaps best explained by the fact that the church as the body of Christ did not begin until the day of PENTECOST after the ASCENSION of Jesus (Acts 2:1–4).

That the church began on the day of Pentecost may be demonstrated in various ways: (1) Christ Himself declared the church to be yet future (Matt. 16:18); (2) it was founded upon the death, resurrection, and ascension of Christ, and such an accomplished fact was not possible until Pentecost (Eph. 1:15–23); (3) there could be no church until it was fully purchased with Christ's blood (Eph. 2:13).

Nature. The Greek word for church is ekklesia. This word is used 115 times in the New Testament, mostly in the Book of Acts and the writings of the apostle Paul and the general epistles. At least ninety-two times this word refers to a local congregation. The other references are to the church general, or all believers everywhere for all ages.

When the church general is implied, "church" refers to all who follow Christ, without respect to locality or time. The most general reference to the church occurs in Ephesians 1:22; 3:10–21; 5:23–32. Since the church general refers to all believers of all ages, it will not be complete until after the judgment; and the assembly of all the redeemed in one place will become a reality only after the return of Christ (Heb. 12:23; Rev. 21–22).

Because the church general will not become a tangible reality until after Christ’s return, the greatest emphasis in the New Testament is placed upon the idea of the local church. The local church is the visible operation of the church general in a given time and place.

Commission. Speaking to His followers after His resurrection, Jesus commissioned the church to make disciples and teach them what He had taught (Matt. 28:16–20). The entire Book of Acts is the story of the early church’s struggle to be loyal to this commission. As we read this book, we are impressed by the reality that Christ, through the presence of the Holy Spirit, continues to direct His church as it carries out its commission.

Activities. The early church met in the temple courts and Jewish synagogues, as well as private homes of believers (Acts 5:42). Later, in recognition of Christ’s resurrection on the first day of the week, Sunday became the principal time for public worship (1 Cor. 16:2). At these public worship services, missionary teachings and outreach in the name of Christ were offered to all within reach.

In the worship services of early Christians, prayer was offered, not only on the Lord’s Day, but on special occasions as well (Acts 12:5), and Scripture was read (James 1:22; 1 Thess. 5:27). The breaking of bread and the sharing of the cup on the Lord’s Day were observed as a continuing proclamation of Jesus’ death, an anticipation of His return, and a participation in His “body and blood” (1 Cor. 11:20–29). Offerings for the needy were also received (1 Cor. 16:2).

Organization. At first, church organization was flexible to meet changing needs. As the church became more established, however, church officers came into existence. These included the APOSTLES, PROPHETS, EVANGELISTS, ELDERS, BISHOPS, MINISTERS or teachers, DEACONS, and DEACONESSES.

Although church organization varies from denomination to denomination today, the pattern and purpose of the New Testament remains a model for churches as they pursue their mission in the world.

Photo: Richard Goodrich|Dreamstime.com

• In the early history of the church, believers used these underground catacombs as meeting places as well as burial sites.

CHURCH GOVERNMENT—the organizational pattern by which a church governs itself. At first, church organization and government in the New Testament was flexible to meet changing needs. But as the church became better established, it gave attention to the right structures and procedures that would help it accomplish its mission. In the earliest days, the APOSTLES directed the work of the church. Then seven men were chosen to fulfill the needs (Acts 6). Later, PROPHETS, EVANGELISTS, ELDERS, BISHOPS, and DEACONS were chosen.

No single pattern of government in the early church can be discovered by reading the New Testament. Thus, numerous forms of church government are used today to provide order and structure for the work of churches. Present expressions of church government may be classified into six forms.

Congregational. This form of organization allows a local congregation the freedom to determine what it considers the will of Christ. Thus, each congregation governs its own affairs. Congregational freedom does not imply that the local bodies are self-governing apart from the Lordship of Christ. But the members of each congregation have the right to determine what they consider to be the will of Christ.

Presbyterian. This form of church government recognizes that Christ alone is Head of the Church, and that He rules His church by His Word and Spirit. Thus, church officials (presbyters), operating through synods, have power, although it is ministerial and declarative, not legislative. They declare, explain, and apply Christ's will as the Spirit clarifies the Scripture to their understanding. They do not make new laws for the church. Presbyterians believe they find the authority for their form of church government in the Bible, but they do not claim that Presbyterian government is the only kind that God can bless.

Episcopalian. This system of church government views the bishop as the principal officer. Decisions are made at levels higher than the local church, but common sense often dictates that the will of God and the opinions of local priests and other church members should be given prayerful consideration.

Roman Catholic. Roman Catholics view the church as the continuing visible presence of Christ in the world. Christ maintains His life on earth through the church. The clergy form a hierarchy that governs the church with the pope as the highest authority. The pope is the "bishop" of Rome; his decisions are authoritative for the entire church. The papal office is believed to be passed from pope to pope. This authority is believed to have originated in Christ's declaration of Peter as the first pope, according to the Catholic interpretation of Matthew 16:18.

National Church Government. This form of government recognizes that the supreme authority for church matters is vested in the state and not the church itself. Supporters of this form of church government believe that representatives of the state have the right to rule on all religious matters connected with the church.

Quakers. The Quakers reject any type of church ruler or official and almost every form of physical organization. For the Quakers, everything depends on the "inner light" that any believer has the right and power to receive directly from God. They have no specific rules for receiving members. Decisions are arrived at by mutual agreement among the believers.

CHUZA [KOO zuh]—a steward (business manager) of Herod Antipas and evidently a man of position and wealth. His wife, Joanna, was one of the women who "provided for Him [Jesus] from their substance" (Luke 8:3; Cuza, NIV).

CILICIA [sih LISH ih uh]—a province in southeastern Asia Minor (modern Turkey, see Map 7, D–2). The capital of Cilicia was Tarsus, the birthplace of the apostle Paul (Acts 21:39; 22:3). Cilicia was bounded on the east by Syria, on the west by Pamphylia, and on the south by the Mediterranean Sea. On the north it is separated by the Taurus Mountains from Cappadocia, Lycaonia, and Isauria.

Geographically, Cilicia was divided naturally into two main regions: Cilicia Tracheia, a rugged mountainous area in the north and west, and Cilicia Pedias, a flat, fertile plain in the east.

The Jews of Cilicia formed part of a synagogue in Jerusalem called "the Synagogue of Freedmen" (Acts 6:9). Paul visited Cilicia soon after his conversion (Gal. 1:21) and again on his second missionary journey (Acts 15:41).

Photo by Howard Vos

• The falls of the Cydnus River just north of the city of Tarsus in the province of Cilicia.

CINNAMON (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

CINNEROTH [SIN uh roth]—a form of CHINNEROTH.

CIRCLE—to the ancient Hebrew mind, an invisible boundary that served as a line of separation between the heavens and the earth. The Old Testament writers portrayed God as sitting "above the circle of the earth" (Is. 40:22) to emphasize His power and majesty (Job 22:14; Prov. 8:27).

CIRCUIT—a word with several different meanings in the Bible:

1. A periodic tour or journey (1 Sam. 7:16; Mark 6:6).
2. The area around Jerusalem (1 Chr. 11:8, NRSV; Neh. 12:28, NRSV).
3. The sun's "orbit"—that is, the apparent daily revolution of the sun around the earth (Ps. 19:6).
4. The periodic changes of the winds (Eccl. 1:6).

CIRCUMCISION—the surgical removal of the foreskin of the male sex organ. This action served as a sign of God's COVENANT relation with His people.

Circumcision was widely practiced in the ancient world, including the Egyptian and Canaanite cultures. But among these people the rite was performed at the beginning of puberty, or about twelve years of age, for hygienic reasons or as a sort of initiation ceremony into manhood. In contrast, the Hebrew people performed circumcision on infants. This rite had an important ethical meaning to them. It signified their responsibility to serve as the holy people whom God had called as His special servants in the midst of a pagan world.

In the Bible's first mention of circumcision, God instructed Abraham to circumcise every male child in his household, including servants, "in the flesh of your foreskins" (Gen. 17:11). The custom was performed on the eighth day after birth (Gen. 17:12; 21:4; Phil. 3:5). At this time a name was given to the son (Luke 1:59; 2:21). In the early history of the Hebrew people circumcision was performed by the father. But the surgical task was eventually taken over by a specialist.

Circumcision of the Jewish male was required as a visible, physical sign of the covenant between the Lord and His people (Gen. 17:11). Any male not circumcised was to be "cut off from his people" (Gen. 17:14) and regarded as a covenant-breaker (Ex. 12:48).

Although circumcision was required by the Mosaic law, the rite was neglected during the days when the people of Israel wandered in the wilderness. Perhaps this was a sign that the nation had broken their covenant with God through their disobedience. The rite was resumed when they entered the land of Canaan, with Joshua performing the ritual on the generation born in the wilderness.

The Hebrew people came to take great pride in circumcision; in fact, it became a badge of their spiritual and national superiority. This practice fostered a spirit of exclusivism instead of a missionary zeal to reach out to other nations as God intended. A daily prayer of strict Jewish males was to thank God that he was neither a woman, a Samaritan, nor a Gentile.

Gentiles came to be regarded by the Jews as the "uncircumcision," a term of disrespect implying that non-Jewish peoples were outside the circle of God's love. The terms "circumcised" and "uncircumcised" became emotionally charged symbols to Israel and their Gentile neighbors. This issue later brought discord into the fellowship of the New Testament church.

Moses and the prophets used the term “circumcised” as a symbol for purity of heart and readiness to hear and obey. Through Moses the Lord challenged the Israelites to submit to “circumcision of the heart,” a reference to their need for repentance. “If their uncircumcised hearts are humbled, and they accept their guilt,” God declared, “then I will remember My covenant” (Lev. 26:41–42; also Deut. 10:16). Jeremiah characterized rebellious Israel as having “uncircumcised” ears (6:10) and being “uncircumcised in the heart” (9:26).

In the New Testament circumcision was faithfully practiced by devout Jews as recognition of God’s continuing covenant with Israel. Both John the Baptist (Luke 1:59) and Jesus (Luke 2:21) were circumcised. But controversy over circumcision divided the early church (Eph. 2:11), which included believers from both Jewish and Gentile backgrounds. Gentile believers regarded their Jewish brethren as eccentric because of their dietary laws, Sabbath rules, and circumcision practices. Jewish believers tended to view their uncircumcised Gentile brothers as unenlightened and disobedient to the law of Moses (Acts 15:5).

A crisis erupted in the church at Antioch when believers from Judea (known as Judaizers) taught the brethren, “Unless you are circumcised according to the custom of Moses, you cannot be saved” (Acts 15:1–2). In effect, the Judaizers insisted that a believer from a non-Jewish background (Gentile) must first become a Jew ceremonially (by being circumcised) before he could be admitted to the Christian brotherhood.

A council of apostles and elders was convened in Jerusalem to resolve the issue (Acts 15:6–29). Among those attending were Paul, Barnabas, Simon Peter, and James, pastor of the Jerusalem church. To insist on circumcision for the Gentiles, Peter argued, would amount to a burdensome yoke (Acts 15:10, 19). This was the decision handed down by the council, and the church broke away from the binding legalism of Judaism.

Years later, reinforcing this decision, the apostle Paul wrote the believers at Rome that Abraham, “the father of circumcision” (Rom. 4:12), was saved by faith rather than by circumcision (Rom. 4:9–12).

He declared circumcision to be of no value unless accompanied by an obedient spirit (Rom. 2:25, 26).

Paul also spoke of the “circumcision of Christ” (Col. 2:11), a reference to His atoning death, which “condemned sin in the flesh” (Rom. 8:3) and nailed legalism “to the cross” (Col. 2:14). In essence, Paul declared that the new covenant of Christ’s shed blood has provided forgiveness to both Jew and Gentile and has made circumcision totally unnecessary (Rom. 2:28–29; Gal. 5:6). All that ultimately matters for both Jew and Gentile, Paul says, is a changed nature—a new creation that makes them one in Jesus Christ (Eph. 2:14–18).

Photo: Egyptian National Museum

- A stone carving from Egypt, about 2200 B.C., showing two boys being circumcised with flint knives.

CIRCUMFERENCE—the distance around a round object (Jer. 52:21). In Solomon’s temple the two bronze pillars named JACHIN AND BOAZ each had a circumference of 12 cubits (1 Kin. 7:15), or about 5.5 meters (18 feet); the BRONZE SEA had a circumference of 30 cubits (1 Kin. 7:23; 2 Chr. 4:2), or about 13.7 meters (45 feet).

CISTERN—an artificial reservoir for storing liquids (especially water); specifically, an underground tank for catching and storing runoff rainwater. For about half the year, rainfall in Israel is scarce, falling mainly during the winter months. As a result, it was important that water be stored during the rainy months for the long dry season.

Before about 1200 B.C., cisterns were dug out of the soft limestone rock found in many parts of Canaan. Because of the porous nature of limestone, however, these cisterns often broke and became unsatisfactory for holding rainwater. About the time of Israel's conquest of the land of Canaan, a remarkable advance in cistern construction allowed the bottom and walls of the cistern to be sealed with plaster. This made it possible to build cisterns virtually anywhere and opened up many dry areas to permanent settlement.

A cistern differs from a well in that a well is fed by underground water seepage, while a cistern stores runoff rainwater. In most cities, each house generally had its own cistern. Rain falling on the roof was collected and channeled to the cistern, usually situated beneath the house. Cisterns were of great importance to fortified cities, enabling them to withstand a long military siege by an enemy.

Most references to cisterns in the Bible are symbolic. In writing of the peril of adultery, Proverbs 5:15 says, "Drink water from your own cistern, and running water from your own well." Jeremiah 2:13 describes God as a "fountain of living waters"—a cool, pure, natural spring. But Judah's unfaithfulness amounted to "broken cisterns that can hold no water."

Also see WELL.

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

- A sheepherder draws water for his flock from a cistern in the Negev, the southern desert region of Israel.

CITADEL [SIT uh dell]—the inner or final defensive system of a walled city. Protected by its own wall within the city's outer wall, the citadel was usually built on a hill for even greater protection. Here is where the residents would make their last stand if the enemy should break through the outer defenses. In capital cities like Jerusalem and Samaria, the king's palace was situated within the citadel (2 Kin. 15:25; palace, KJV).

CITIES OF THE PLAIN—a term used for five cities located near the DEAD SEA (Gen. 14:2, 8). Because of their great wickedness, four of these cities—Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboiim (Gen. 19:28–29)—were completely destroyed. Only Zoar escaped destruction (Gen. 19:21–22).

Prior to its destruction, this area was well-watered and productive; it was compared to the Garden of Eden and the rich Nile Delta of Egypt (Gen. 13:10). Today this area is totally barren and supports no life—an eloquent testimony of God's judgment upon the sin of these ancient peoples. Genesis 19 describes the complete destruction of the area; even today earthquakes are common.

Recent archaeological evidence locates the cities of the plain near the entrance to the Lisan, the tongue of land that juts out into the Dead Sea from its eastern shore.

CITIES OF REFUGE—six Levitical cities set aside to provide shelter and safety for those guilty of manslaughter. Of the forty-eight cities assigned to the Levites, six were designated as cities of refuge, three on either side of the Jordan River (Num. 35:6–7; Josh. 20:7–8). The three cities of refuge west of the Jordan were KEDESH in Galilee, in the mountains of Naphtali (Josh. 20:7; 21:32); SHECHEM, in the mountains of Ephraim (Josh. 20:7; 21:21; 1 Chr. 6:67); and HEBRON, also known as KIRJATH ARBA, in the mountains of Judah (Josh. 20:7).

The three cities east of the Jordan River were BEZER, in the wilderness on the plateau, or plain, of Moab, and assigned to the tribe of Reuben (Deut. 4:43; Josh. 20:8; 21:36); RAMOTH GILEAD, or Ramoth in Gilead, from the tribe of Gad (Deut. 4:43; Josh. 20:8; 21:38); and GOLAN, in Bashan, from the half-tribe of Manasseh (Deut. 4:43; Josh. 20:8; 21:27).

In the ancient Near East if a person were killed, it was the custom that the nearest relative became the “avenger of blood” (Num. 35:19, 21–27; Deut. 19:12). It became his duty to slay the slayer. However, if a person killed another accidentally or unintentionally, the cities of refuge were provided as an asylum, “that by fleeing to one of these cities he might live” (Deut. 4:42).

The regulations concerning these cities are found in Numbers 35, Deuteronomy 19:1–13, and Joshua 20. If the manslayer reached a city of refuge before the avenger of blood could slay him, he was given a fair trial and provided asylum until the death of the high priest. After that the manslayer was permitted to return home; but if he left the city of refuge before the death of the high priest, he was subject to death at the hands of the avenger of blood.

In the New Testament, the cities of refuge apparently became a type, or symbolic illustration, of the salvation that is found in Christ: “We . . . have fled for refuge to lay hold of the hope set before us” (Heb. 6:18). In other words, when the sinner flees to Christ Jesus for refuge he is safe from the divine Avenger of Blood. The apostle Paul wrote, “Having now been justified by his [Christ’s] blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him" (Rom. 5:9) and "There is therefore now no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus" (Rom. 8:1). Regardless of his sin, the sinner may find asylum and sanctuary in Christ; all who flee to Him find refuge: "The one who comes to Me I will by no means cast out" (John 6:37). The believer is safe forever in the heavenly city of refuge because the great High Priest, Jesus Christ, will never die: "He ever lives to make intercession for him" (Heb. 7:25).

CITIZENSHIP—the status of a native or adopted citizen—with its rights, privileges, and duties—as distinguished from that of a foreigner.

The word "citizenship" is found twice in the NKJV. When the Roman commander Claudius Lysias told the apostle Paul, "With a large sum I obtained this [Roman] citizenship," Paul said, "But I was born a [Roman] citizen" (Acts 22:28). And to the church at Philippi Paul wrote that all believers in Christ are citizens of the heavenly commonwealth (Phil. 3:20). Just as the city of Philippi was a colony of Rome, so the church at Philippi was a colony of heaven.

As a Roman citizen, Paul was entitled to the right to trial before punishment (Acts 16:35–39), freedom from interrogation by scourging (Acts 22:24–29), and the right to appeal to Caesar (Acts 24:10–12; 26:32).

CITRON (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

CITY—an inhabited place of greater size, population, or importance than a town or village; a center of population, commerce, and culture. In biblical times the thing that distinguished a city from a town or village was not the size of its population but whether it had walls for defense (Lev. 25:29–31; Ezek. 38:11). But most cities also became known by their size and the magnificence of their buildings.

In ancient Israel a large city was often called a "mother" (2 Sam. 20:19) that was encircled by a cluster of villages—all its surrounding settlements (Num. 21:25, NIV; all its dependent villages, REB). The original Hebrew word for villages literally means "daughters."

Cities were usually built on hills so they could be defended easily (1 Kin. 16:24; Matt. 5:14) and in areas where a supply of water was available (to help withstand a prolonged siege) and, preferably, where soil was fertile. City walls were often massive structures about 6 to 9 meters (20 to 30 feet) thick. The gates, just as massive, had bars with guardhouses atop the wall. Often the walls had towers (Deut. 1:28; Judg. 9:51; 2 Chr. 26:9).

Israelite cities were probably relatively small with narrow, crooked, unpaved streets (Eccl. 12:4; Is. 10:6). In fact, many of the streets appear to have been partially blocked off by the projecting corners of houses. Near the gate, the social center of the city, merchants sold their wares and courts were held (Gen. 23:10; Ruth 4:1–11).

An Israelite city was governed by a council of elders composed of judges who were required to be priests (Deut. 16:18). During the monarchy, cities seem to have had governors (1 Kin. 22:26; 2 Chr. 18:25). When Jerusalem was rebuilt after the captivity, Ezra appointed magistrates and judges as city officials (Ezra 7:25).

In larger cities with palaces or temples, there was a recognizable street, a “broad way.” This street probably was paved with stone. Many of the streets were divided into craftsmen’s sections—copper and ironworkers in one place, jewelers in another, etc. They were very much like today’s eastern bazaars. Some streets had marketplaces reserved for foreign merchants (Jer. 37:21; Ezek. 17:4).

Jericho is the earliest Palestinian town to be discovered thus far. Archaeologists believe a nine-acre city existed at the site of Jericho as early as 5500 B.C., long before Abraham’s time.

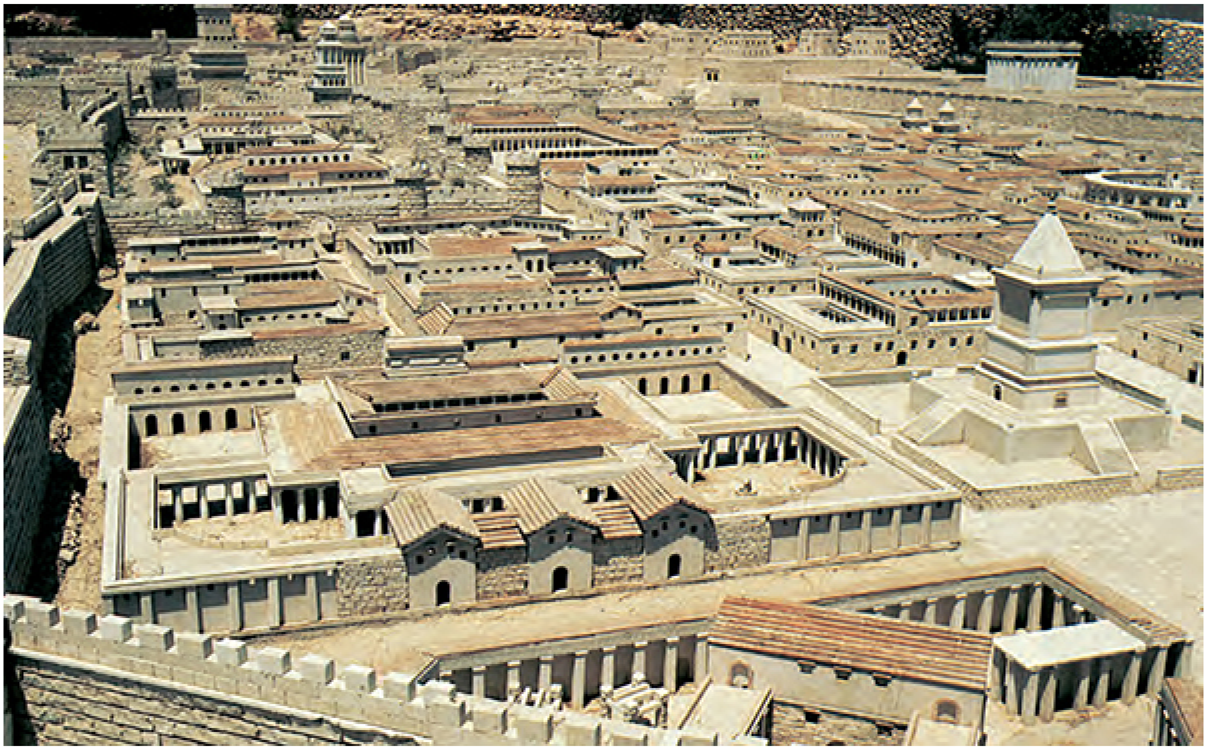

Photo by Ben Chapman

• This model of Jerusalem shows how a typical walled city of the ancient world might have looked during the days of Jesus' ministry.

CITY CLERK (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CITY OF DAVID—the name of two cities in the Bible:

1. The stronghold of ZION, the fortified city of the Jebusites, later known as Jerusalem. King David and his men captured it (2 Sam. 5:7, 9). The Jebusite fortress of Zion was situated on a hill overlooking the pool of Siloam, at the junction of the Kidron and Tyropoeon valleys (later in southeastern Jerusalem). The account of the capture of Zion implies that David's army entered the fortress by surprise (2 Sam. 5:8). The "water shaft" mentioned in this passage was apparently a tunnel leading from the underground spring of GIHON into the citadel. Joab was the one who went up the shaft first (1 Chr. 11:6); true to his promise, David made him the commander, or “chief,” of the armies of Israel.

After the capture of Zion, “David dwelt in the stronghold, and called it the City of David” (2 Sam. 5:9). Not only did David establish his residence here, but he also strengthened the city’s fortifications (1 Chr. 11:8). Solomon further strengthened the defenses of the city (1 Kin. 11:27). The site of Solomon’s temple was on the neighboring Mount Moriah, part of the same strong rock outcropping as Mount Zion.

2. Bethlehem, the birthplace or home of David (1 Sam. 16:1, 13; Luke 2:4, 11; John 7:42) and of Jesus, David’s greatest descendant.

CITY, HOLY—another name for JERUSALEM, the religious center of the Jewish people (Neh. 11:1; Dan. 9:24).

CITY OF SALT—a city in the Wilderness of Judah (Josh. 15:62). It is mentioned with EN GEDI and probably was not far from that city. Some scholars identify the City of Salt with Khirbet Qumran, about 21 kilometers (13 miles) north of En Gedi and about 16 kilometers (10 miles) south of Jericho. Other scholars, however, place the City of Salt much farther south, near the southern or southwestern end of the Dead Sea, in the VALLEY.

CITY OF WATERS—a phrase that refers to the lower part of the Ammonite city of RABBAH, as distinguished from the upper city, or CITADEL (2 Sam. 12:27, KJV, water city, NRSV; water supply, NKJV, NIV).

CLAUDA [CLAW duh]—a small island about 80 kilometers (50 miles) off the southwest coast of Crete (Acts 27:16; Cauda, NIV, NRSV). When the apostle Paul was on his voyage to Rome, the ship on which he was traveling sought protection under its shelter when caught in a storm.

CLAUDIA [CLAW dih uh]—a Roman Christian who joined Paul in sending Timothy Christian greetings (2 Tim. 4:21). Some scholars suggest that Claudia was the wife of the Pudens mentioned in the same verse and that Linus, who would become a bishop of Rome, was their son.

CLAUDIUS [CLAW dih us]—the fourth emperor of the Roman Empire (A.D. 41–54), Tiberius Claudius Nero Germanicus, who suppressed the worship activities of the Jewish people in the city of Rome.

Early in his reign as emperor, Claudius was favorable toward the Jews and their practice of religion. But he later forbade their assembly and eventually “commanded all the Jews to depart from Rome” (Acts 18:2). This edict may have extended also to Christians, who were considered a sect of the Jews at that time.

Aquila and Priscilla, who became friends of the apostle Paul, were refugees from Italy because of this order of the Roman emperor (Acts 18:1–2). The Book of Acts also refers to a great famine that “happened in the days of Claudius Caesar” (Acts 11:28). Also see CAESAR.

• Bust of Claudius, Roman emperor who expelled all the Jewish people from the city of Rome (Acts 18:2).

CLAUDIUS LYSIAS [CLAW dih us LISS ih us] (see LYSIAS).

CLAW—the sharp, curved nail on the toe of a bird or animal. The word is found only once in the NKJV—a reference to Nebuchadnezzar, whose “nails [had grown] like birds’ claws” (Dan. 4:33).

CLAY (see MINERALS OF THE BIBLE).

CLAY TABLETS—one of the world’s oldest known writing materials, perhaps originating in Mesopotamia. Made of clean, smooth clay, the tablets were imprinted with CUNEIFORM signs or symbols (by means of a stylus) while still wet, then allowed to dry slowly. When baked in an oven, they hardened into a strong, durable material. Such tablets were used by the Sumerians, Akkadians, Elamites, Hittites, Hurrians, and Canaanites of Ugarit. These writing materials are a major source of our knowledge about these civilizations.

CLEAN, CLEANNESS—pure, clear, uncontaminated. The distinctions between clean and unclean foods, animals, and people is elaborated in Leviticus 11–15. “Clean” refers to physical health as well as ceremonial purity, especially in the case of the diseased, notably lepers (Lev. 13:1–14, 57; 2 Kin. 5; Matt. 8:2–3). Clean hands (Ps. 24:4) and a clean heart (Ps. 51:10) refer to moral purity. When Jesus admonished the religious rulers to cleanse the inside of the cup and dish, He stressed the priority of the inward condition of a person (Matt. 23:25–26; Is. 1:16; 2 Cor. 7:1).

The prophets spoke of an inner cleansing from sin (Jer. 33:8; Ezek. 36:33; 37:23). Jesus pronounced the disciples clean (John 13:10) “because of the word” (John 15:3). Cleansing from sin is possible through the blood of Jesus for all who confess their sins (1 John 1:7–9).

Also see UNCLEAN, UNCLEANNESS.

CLEFT—an opening or space made by a division, as a crack in a building (Amos 6:11, KJV), a hollow place in a rock (Ex. 33:22), or the split in the hoof of an animal (Deut. 14:6, KJV).

CLEMENT [KLEM ent] (merciful)—a Christian who worked with the apostle Paul, apparently at Philippi (Phil. 4:3). Writers such as Origen, Eusebius, and Jerome supposed this Clement to be the apostolic father known as Clement of Rome. Modern scholars, however, believe this identification is highly unlikely.

CLEOPAS [KLEE uh pus]—one of the two disciples with whom Jesus talked on the Emmaus Road on the day of His resurrection (Luke 24:18). Cleopas is apparently not the same person as Cleophas—or Clopas (NRSV)—of John 19:25.

CLEOPHAS [KLEE uh fus]—a form of CLOPAS.

CLERK, CITY (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CLOAK (see DRESS OF THE BIBLE).

CLOPAS [KLOE puhs]—the husband of Mary, one of the women who was present at the crucifixion of Jesus (John 19:25; Cleophas, KJV). According to tradition, Clopas was the same person as Alphaeus, the father of James the Less and of Joses (Matt. 10:3; Mark 15:40). Most scholars agree that Clopas is not the same person as CLEOPAS (Luke 24:18).

CLOSET—KJV word for a bridal chamber (Joel 2:16; dressing room, NKJV). The word also refers to the most private rooms in a home (Matt. 6:6; secret place, NKJV; Luke 12:3, inner rooms, NKJV, NIV).

CLOTH—a fabric or material from which clothing is made. In biblical times cloth was made from the hair of goats, sheep, and camels and from linen, flax, hemp, and silk. Certain goats grew long black hair that produced a heavy waterproof cloth for making tents and outer garments.

The everyday clothing of the poor consisted of sheepskins and goatskins (Heb. 11:37). Cloaks of such material served as blankets (Ex. 22:26–27), saddle pads, and sleeping mats or pads. Perhaps it was such a garment that Paul asked Timothy to bring to him (2 Tim. 4:13). Goat-hair and camel-hair garments, being dark in color, were worn especially during a time of mourning and were called sackcloth (Gen. 37:34; 2 Sam. 3:31).

Perhaps the oldest and most common cloth of biblical times was made from wool—with the best wool coming from lambs. Judea was the wool-producing center, while Galilee was known for flax and linen. Wool was often prepared by a process of bleaching, rubbing, and dyeing and then spun into thread by means of a spindle. The rule against priests wearing wool suggests that woolen tunics (undergarments) were the garb of the common people (Ezek. 44:17).

Although cotton was known at an early time in China and India, most scholars question its use in ancient Canaan. They conclude that what is translated “cotton” in some Old Testament translations was really cloth made of flax or hemp.

Also see DRESS OF THE BIBLE.

CLOTHES, CLOTHING (see DRESS OF THE BIBLE).

CLOUD—a visible mass of fine droplets of water or particles of ice suspended above the earth’s surface. In the Bible, clouds are symbolic of many things.

The skies over Israel are virtually cloudless from the beginning of May until the end of September. Thus, Samuel’s calling forth the harvest rain (1 Sam. 12:17–18) was considered miraculous. The “cloud, as small as a man’s hand, rising out of the sea” (1 Kin. 18:44) that Elijah saw when he prayed for rain probably came sometime during this five-month cloudless period.

The cloud was symbolic of God’s presence. The pillar of cloud leading the Israelites in the wilderness (Ex. 13:21–22) was the same as God’s presence leading the people. When God wanted to reveal Himself to the Israelites, He used a pillar of cloud to do so (Num. 12:5; Deut. 31:15). Clouds also revealed God’s power and wisdom (Ps. 147:8; Prov. 8:28).

A “day of clouds” referred to a time marked by disaster and God’s judgment (Ezek. 30:3; Joel 2:2). Clouds are symbolic of armies and multitudes of people (Jer. 4:13; Heb. 12:1). “Clouds without water” (Jude 12) are people who do not perform up to their capabilities. Jude probably had in mind Proverbs 25:14: “Whoever falsely boasts of giving is like clouds and wind without rain.”

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

• Rain clouds in Upper Galilee, a mountainous region subject to sudden winds and severe storms.

CLOUD, PILLAR OF—a miraculous cloud, representing the presence of God, that led the Israelites during their journey in the wilderness following their escape from slavery in Egypt (Ex. 13:21). At the Red Sea the pillar of cloud came between the camp of the Egyptians and the camp of Israel (Ex. 14:20). When the tabernacle was completed in the wilderness, the cloud filled the building to show God's presence with His people (Ex. 40:34). Thereafter the cloud led Israel day and night on the journey toward the land of Canaan (Num. 9:22). Also see PILLAR OF FIRE AND CLOUD.

CLOUT—an obscure KJV word for a patch of cloth, leather, or other material hastily applied to mend a tear. Other translations are patched (Josh. 9:5) and rags (Jer. 38:11–12).

CLUB (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

CNIDUS [NYE dus]—a city of the province of CARIA (see Map 8, C–2); it was situated on the extreme southwestern tip of ASIA MINOR and was between the islands of Cos and Rhodes in the Aegean Sea. On his journey to Rome, the apostle Paul passed the harbor at Cnidus after leaving Myra (Acts 27:7).

COAL (see MINERALS OF THE BIBLE).

COAST—an inaccurate KJV word for border or boundary. Occasionally, it refers to the seacoast (Num. 34:6; Judg. 5:17).

COAT (see DRESS OF THE BIBLE).

COAT OF MAIL (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

COBRA, COCK, COCKATRICE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

COCKCROWING—a period of time between midnight and three o'clock in the morning; the third watch of the night. This reflects the Roman custom of dividing the night into four watches: late, midnight, cockcrowing, and early. (The Israelite practice divided the night into three watches.) In His parable of a man going to a far country, Jesus said, "Watch therefore, for you do not know when the master of the house is coming—in the evening, at midnight, at the crowing of the rooster, or in the morning" (Mark 13:35). In this parable, the "crowing of the rooster" refers to the third watch of the night.

All other New Testament references, however, describe an actual rooster that crowed (Matt. 26:34; Mark 14:30; Luke 22:34; John 13:38). The crowing of a rooster reminded Peter how easy it is to deny the Savior.

COCKLE—KJV word for foul-smelling weeds (Job 31:40; stinkweed, NASB). The word may refer to any of several different species of such weeds in the land of Canaan.

CODEX [COE dex]—the forerunner of the modern book. A codex was formed by folding several sheets of papyrus in the middle and sewing them together along the fold. More convenient for reading than the SCROLL, the codex (plural, codices) could also be written on both sides. Also see WRITING.

COFFER—KJV word for the CHEST in which the Philistines placed their guilt offering to the God of Israel (1 Sam. 6:8, 11, 15).

COFFIN—a casket in which a corpse is placed before burial (Gen. 50:26). Also see BIER.

COHORT (see REGIMENT).

COINS (see MONEY OF THE BIBLE).

COL-HOZEH [kole HOE zeh] (wholly a seer)—the name of one or two men in the Old Testament:

1. The father of Shallun, the man who repaired the Fountain Gate of Jerusalem after the captivity (Neh. 3:15).
2. The father of Baruch of the tribe of Judah (Neh. 11:5). This is possibly the same person as Col-Hozeh No. 1.

COLLECTION—money gathered for two distinctive purposes:

1. In the Old Testament, the word "collection" refers to a nonvoluntary religious tax collected from the people of Israel by the Levites (2 Chr. 24:6, 9). The Mosaic law also referred to this tax as "ransom" (Ex. 30:12) and "atonement money" (Ex. 30:16).
2. In the New Testament, "collection" refers to a voluntary contribution gathered from the churches of Gentile territories for distribution to needy Christians in Jerusalem. In his letters to the churches at Corinth and Rome, the apostle Paul explained the need for this collection and encouraged the Gentile Christians to give liberally for this worthy cause (Rom. 15:25–27; 1 Cor. 16:1–4; 2 Cor. 8:1–15).

   Paul also gave some helpful guidelines for Christian giving in his remarks. Giving should be on the first day of the week (Sunday) and according to a person's ability to give. Paul also taught that giving should be generous, voluntary, and in response to the grace of God and His "indescribable gift" (2 Cor. 9:15). These guidelines are still appropriate for all Christians.

COLLEGE—an inaccurate translation of the word mishneh (2 Kin. 22:14, KJV; 2 Chr. 34:22, KJV; Zeph. 1:10). The word refers to a district of JERUSALEM and actually means "Second Quarter" (NKJV; Second District, NIV).

COLONY—a group of emigrants or their descendants who settle in a distant land but remain subject to the parent country. In the New Testament the word occurs only once, in a reference to the city of Philippi (Acts 16:12). Here it has the specific meaning of a military settlement, or garrison city, of retired Roman legionnaires and other Roman citizens who were stationed in an area to maintain control over a conquered people. PHILIPPI became a Roman colony in 30 B.C., with the legal rights of Roman citizens and freedom from control by the provincial governor.

COLORS OF THE BIBLE—Color as an abstract idea or concept is spoken of rarely in the Bible. The most common word translated as "color" actually means "eye," "appearance," or "aspect" (Lev. 13:55). It expresses color in terms of comparison with some other material. The word describing gems as "colorful" (Is. 54:11) means "antimony" or "stibium" and probably refers to the dark background that was generally used to set off precious stones. A few objects in the Bible are described as variegated or multicolored (Prov. 7:16; Ezek. 27:24).

This general lack of color terminology in the Bible may be a result of God's commandment to the Hebrews not to make any graven images or idols (Ex. 20:4). The Hebrews were never known as an artistic or art-loving people. Perhaps their background as an enslaved people also contributed to their lack of artistic and color appreciation.

Rather than specific coloration, a color's brightness or dimness, lightness or darkness, brilliance or somberness is more often emphasized in the Bible. Shade, rather than hue, seems to be considered more important by the biblical writers.

Natural Colors. Individual colors mentioned in the Bible fall into two major types—natural colors and artificial colors.

Blue—Blueness (Prov. 20:30, KJV) may describe the color of a wound, but usually the word refers to the wound itself.

Brown—Brown is a dark, blackish color applied only to sheep (Gen. 30:32–33, 35, 40).

Black—Black is one of the more commonly used colors in Scripture. Black describes the color of the middle of the night (Prov. 7:9); diseased skin (Job 30:30); healthy hair (Song 5:11; Matt. 5:36); the blackness of corpses' faces (Lam. 4:8); the sky (Jer. 4:28); the darkening of the sun and the moon (Joel 2:10); horses (Zech. 6:2, 6; Rev. 6:5); and marble (Esth. 1:6).

Gray—Gray is used only to describe the hair of the elderly (Gen. 42:38).

Green—The words for green normally describe vegetation of some type. It is used of pastures (Ps. 23:2); herbage (2 Kin. 19:26); trees in general (Deut. 12:2; Luke 23:31; Rev. 8:7); the marriage bed (in a figurative sense, Song 1:16); a hypocrite compared to a papyrus plant (Job 8:16); and grass (Mark 6:39). A word meaning "greenish" describes plague spots (Lev. 13:49; 14:37) as well as the color of gold.

Red—Several words for red describe natural objects such as Jacob's stew (Gen. 25:30); the sacrificial heifer (Num. 19:2); wine (Prov. 23:31); newborn Esau (Gen. 25:25); Judah's eyes (Gen. 49:12, KJV); the eyes of the drunkard (Prov. 23:29); and the dragon (Rev. 12:3).

White—The words translated as white describe the color of animals (Gen. 30:35); manna (Ex. 16:31); both hair and pustules located in plague sores (Lev. 13:3–39); garments (Eccl. 9:8; Dan. 7:9); the robes of the righteous (Rev. 19:8, KJV); horses (Zech. 1:8; Rev. 6:2; 19:11); forgiven sins (Ps. 51:7; Is. 1:18); a refined remnant (Dan. 11:35; 12:10); the beloved one (Song 5:10); the white of an egg (Job 6:6); the shining garments of angels (Rev. 15:6, KJV) and of the transfigured Christ (Matt. 17:2); hair (Matt. 6); gravestones (Matt. 23:27); and the great throne of judgment (Rev. 20:11).

Yellow—A word translated as "yellow" indicates the greenish cast of gold (Ps. 68:13; shining, NIV). Another word for yellow describes the light-colored hair in a leprous spot (Lev. 13:30, 32).

In addition to black, red, and white horses, certain words suggesting color are used exclusively of horses. The term sorrel (Zech. 1:8; speckled, KJV; dappled, REB; brown, NIV) may refer more specifically to a pattern of reddish color mixed with white. Dappled (Zech. 6:3; grisled, KJV) probably speaks of a spotted pattern rather than color. The "pale" horse (Rev. 6:8; ashen, NASB) refers to the color of a corpse.

Artificial Colors. Artificial colors, such as paints and dyes, were used widely in the ancient world. In Babylonia, bricks were made in several different colors, some resulting from different kinds of clay, others from special manufacturing processes. Egyptians made dyes from numerous substances. The Israelites had an advanced textile industry. They were skilled not only in weaving but also in dyeing.

Since dyes were made from vegetable sources or from shellfish, quality control was difficult. The completed colors were often impure and inexact. These problems were compounded by the fact that many dyes were closely guarded family recipes that were sometimes lost or changed.

The following dyes or artificial colors are mentioned in the Bible.

Purple—The most precious of ancient dyes was purple. In Ugarit, a city of the Canaanites, wool was often dyed this color. Phoenicia derived its name from the source of the dye. The word “Canaan” probably means “land of purple.” The dye itself was derived from the murex shellfish found in the Mediterranean Sea. A total of 250,000 mollusks was required to make one ounce of the dye, which partly accounts for its great price. It was highly valued within the nation of Israel.

The Lord prescribed the use of purple in several features of the tabernacle, such as the curtains (Ex. 26:1) and the hangings (Ex. 27:16). It was also an essential part of the temple (2 Chr. 2:14).

Purple was the color of royal robes (Judg. 8:26), as well as the garments of the wealthy (Prov. 31:22; Luke 16:19), the vesture of the harlot (Rev. 17:4), and the robe placed upon Jesus (Mark 15:17, 20). Robes dyed purple were prescribed for the battle regalia of the Qumran priests, and purple was highly sought during the Maccabean period. In New Testament times, it was an important item of trade (Acts 16:14; Rev. 18:12).

Blue—During biblical times blue was another major dye, also derived from another species of shellfish. Fabric dyed this color was used as a part of the pattern for the tabernacle tapestries (Ex. 26:1) and for the hangings in the temple (2 Chr. 2:7). The color was also used for royal trappings (Esth. 1:6; 8:15) and clothing for the rich (Jer. 10:9; Ezek. 23:6, KJV).

Red—Red existed in several shades, and the dye was extracted from the bodies of insects. One of the red colors was crimson. Linen of this color was used in the temple trappings (2 Chr. 2:7, 14; 3:14). This artificial color must have been practically indelible or permanent (Jer. 4:30), since crimson is used figuratively of sin (Is. 1:18).

Another shade of red is called scarlet. It was the color of the cord tied around the wrist of Zerah (Gen. 38:28–30). Scarlet was used a great deal in the tabernacle (Ex. 25:4). It was the color of the cord extended from Rahab's window (Josh. 2:18). It was also a mark of prosperity (2 Sam. 1:24; Prov. 31:21). Scarlet also describes the robe placed upon Jesus (Matt. 27:28). Since the robe was also described as purple (Mark 15:17), these two colors were not always distinguished during New Testament times. The beast ridden by the harlot was scarlet in color (Rev. 17:3) as were some of the garments of the harlot herself (Rev. 17:4) and her followers (Rev. 18:16). Still another shade of red is called vermilion, used in decorating homes of the wealthy (Jer. 22:14) and in the paintings of idols (Ezek. 23:14).

Certain colors have symbolic significance in the Scriptures. White portrays purity, righteousness, and joy, and a white horse symbolizes victory. Black is a picture of famine and death. Red, the color of blood, often symbolizes life; it is also a picture of the carnage of war. The color blue sometimes describes the sky, just as purple is a symbol of royalty.

Photo by Howard Vos

• The Greeks painted their temples with bright colors, as demonstrated by this reconstruction of a section of the Parthenon in Athens.

COLOSSAE [kuh LAH see]—a form of COLOSSE.

COLOSSE—a city in the Roman province of ASIA (western Turkey), situated in the Lycus River Valley about 160 kilometers (100 miles) east of Ephesus. The apostle Paul wrote a letter to the church at Colosse (Col. 1:2; Colossae, NASB, REB, NRSV). The Christian community at Colosse apparently grew up under the leadership of Epaphras (Col. 1:7; 4:12) and Archippus (Col. 4:17; Philem. 2). Philemon and Onesimus lived at Colosse (Col. 4:9).

Colosse formed a triangle with two other cities of the Lycus Valley, Hierapolis and Laodicea, both of which are mentioned in the New Testament. As early as the fifth century B.C., Colosse was known as a prosperous city; but by the beginning of the Christian era it was eclipsed by its two neighbors. Thereafter its reputation declined to that of a small town.

Shortly after the apostle Paul sent his epistle to Colosse, the cities of the Lycus Valley suffered a devastating earthquake in A.D. 61. They were soon rebuilt, even Laodicea, which had suffered the greatest damage. Although Colosse was increasingly overshadowed by Laodicea and Hierapolis, it retained considerable importance into the second and third centuries A.D. Later, the population of Colosse moved to Chonai (modern Honaz), three miles to the south. The mound that marks the site of Colosse remains uninhabited today.

Photo: Levant Photo Service

• The mound of ancient Colosse, a city in Asia Minor where a church was established during the days of the apostle Paul.

COLOSSIANS, EPISTLE TO THE—one of four shorter epistles written by Paul while he was in prison, the others being Philippians, Ephesians, and Philemon. The Epistle to the Colossians focuses on the person and work of Jesus Christ. It reaches heights of expression that rival anything said of Christ elsewhere in Scripture. Colossians shares many similarities in style and content with Ephesians. Colossians probably was written as a companion to the brief letter to Philemon (compare Col. 4:7–13 and Philem. 12, 24).

Structure of the Epistle. Colossians is nearly divided, as are most of Paul's epistles, into doctrinal (chaps. 1–2) and practical (chaps. 3–4) sections. Following the opening address (1:1–2), Paul expresses his thankfulness for the faith, love, hope, and example of the Colossians (1:3–8). He then develops a majestic hymn to Christ, emphasizing His role in both creation and redemption (1:15–23). In light of the surpassing worth of Christ and His work, Paul willingly accepts the obligation to proclaim Christ and to suffer for Him (1:24—2:5). He also appeals to the Colossians to take root in Christ rather than in confusing speculations (2:6–23).

In the second section, Paul urges the Colossian Christians to mold their behavior to fit their beliefs. Since believers share in Christ's resurrection (3:1–4), Paul encourages them to continue living to please God. He urges them to "put to death" various vices and to "put on" the character of Christ (3:5–17). True Christianity also works itself out in social relationships between wives and husbands (3:18–19), children and parents (3:20–21), and slaves and masters (3:22—4:1). Paul concludes with a note on witnessing to unbelievers (4:2–6) and his customary greetings (4:7–18).

Authorship and Date. Colossians was written by Paul (and Timothy, 1:1) to a Christian community (perhaps "house churches," 1:2; 4:15) that he had not visited (2:1). Paul had established a resident ministry in Ephesus, 100 miles west of Colosse. For more than two years the influence of his ministry reached "all who dwelt in Asia" (Acts 19:10). Epaphras must have heard Paul in Ephesus and then carried the gospel to Colosse (1:7–8; 4:12–13).

Paul wrote the epistle from prison (4:3, 10, 18), but he did not indicate where he was imprisoned. Caesarea and Ephesus have been suggested, but the most probable place is Rome (Acts 28:30). This would date the epistle in the late 50s or early 60s.

Historical Setting. False teaching had taken root in Colosse. Such teaching combined Jewish observances (2:16) and pagan speculation (2:8); it is possible that this resulted in an early form of GNOSTICISM. This teaching pretended to add to or improve upon the gospel that, indirectly at least, had come from Paul. Some of the additions Paul mentions are feasts and observances, some of them related to ASTROLOGY (2:16), plus a list of rules (2:20). These practices were then included within a philosophy in which angels played a leading role (2:18); Paul calls this philosophy "the basic principles of the world" (2:8).

Theological Contribution. Paul unmasks the false teaching as "empty deceit . . . of men" (2:8), having the "appearance of wisdom" (2:23), but useless in fact. He declares that the addition of such things dilutes rather than strengthens the faith (2:20).

But Paul does more than denounce false teaching. The best corrective is a firm grip on who Jesus Christ is and what He did for our salvation. In Christ "are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge" (2:3), and "in Him all fullness" dwells (1:19). In fact, "He is the image of the invisible God" (1:15). He has stripped every power opposed to Him (2:15), wiped out every accusation against us (2:14), and actually "reconciled all things to Himself" (1:20). He is not only head of the church (1:18); but He stands before all time and above every power, and at the end of all history (1:16).

This beautiful epistle on the majesty of Jesus Christ speaks to us today as much as to the Colossians. It reminds us that Jesus Christ is sufficient for every need and is still the most powerful force in the world.

Colossians: A Study and Teaching Outline

Part One: Supremacy of Christ in the Church (1:1—2:23)

I. Introduction 1:1–14
  A. Paul's Greeting to the Colossians 1:1–2
  B. Paul's Thanksgiving for the Colossians 1:3–8
  C. Paul's Prayer for the Colossians 1:9–14

II. The Preeminence of Christ 1:15—2:3
  A. Christ Is Preeminent in Creation 1:15–18
  B. Christ Is Preeminent in Redemption 1:19–23
  C. Christ Is Preeminent in the Church 1:24—2:3

III. The Freedom in Christ 2:4–23

- A. Freedom from Enticing Words 2:4–7
- B. Freedom from Vain Philosophy 2:8–10
- C. Freedom from Human Judgment 2:11–17
- D. Freedom from Improper Worship 2:18–19
- E. Freedom from Human Doctrine 2:20–23

Part Two: Submission to Christ in the Church (3:1—4:18)

I. The Position of the Believer 3:1–4

II. The Practice of the Believer 3:5—4:6
- A. Put Off the Old Nature 3:5–11
- B. Put On the New Nature 3:12–17
- C. Personal Commands for Holiness 3:18—4:6
  - 1. Holiness in Family Life 3:18–21
  - 2. Holiness in Work Life 3:22—4:1
  - 3. Holiness in Public Life 4:2–6

III. Conclusion 4:7–18
- A. Commendation of Tychicus 4:7–9
- B. Greetings from Paul’s Friends 4:10–14
- C. Various Matters Regarding the Epistle 4:15–18

◆

COLT (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

COMFORTER (see HOLY SPIRIT).

COMMANDMENT—a law, edict, or statute; specifically, one of the Ten Commandments given by God through Moses (Ex. 20:3–17; Deut. 5:7–21). Also see COMMANDMENT, NEW; COMMANDMENTS, TEN.

COMMANDMENT, NEW—a commandment given by Jesus to His disciples, which is the commandment of Christian love—“that you love one another” (John 13:34).

COMMANDMENTS, TEN—the ten “words” (a technical term meaning “stipulations”) of the covenant that God made with His people (Ex. 34:28; Deut. 4:13; 10:4). These laws are often called the Decalogue, from the Greek word that means “ten words.” All ten were inscribed on each of two stone tablets (Ex. 31:18), one for the Sovereign (God) and the other for the subjects (Israel).

Although God gave the Ten Commandments to His people through Moses at Mount Sinai more than 3,000 years ago, they are still relevant today. They have an abiding significance, for God's character is unchangeable. These laws originate from God and from His eternal character; therefore, their moral value cannot change.

Almost 1,500 years after God gave the laws, Jesus upheld them, calling them the "commandments" and listing five of them for the rich young ruler (Matt. 19:16–19). And in the Sermon on the Mount, Jesus showed that His coming had not canceled the Commandments. He specifically mentioned the laws against killing (Matt. 5:21) and committing adultery (Matt. 5:27).

Jesus actually placed these laws on a higher plane by demanding that the spirit as well as the legal aspects of the law be kept (Matt. 5:17–28). Jesus placed His eternal stamp of approval on the law by declaring, "Do not think that I came to destroy the Law or the Prophets. I did not come to destroy but to fulfill" (Matt. 5:17–19).

The holy God uttered His Commandments from the top of Mount Sinai amid smoke and fire—visible expressions of His power, majesty, and authority (Ex. 19:16—20:17). Later the Commandments were engraved on two tablets of stone, "written with the finger of God" (Ex. 31:18). The awesome nature of the events surrounding the giving of the law is mentioned a number of times in the Bible, perhaps to emphasize the solemnity of the occasion (Ex. 19:16–19; Deut. 4:11–12).

The Ten Commandments form the heart of the special COVENANT between God and His people. He told them, "Now therefore, if you will indeed obey My voice and keep My covenant, then you shall be a special treasure to Me above all people. . . . And you shall be to Me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation" (Ex. 19:5). These verses also emphasize that their obedience to the Commandments was to be the basis of Israel's existence as the special people of God.

God never intended for the Ten Commandments to be a set of regulations by which the people of Israel would earn salvation. God's favor had already been freely granted (Ex. 20:1–2). This was overwhelmingly demonstrated by His deliverance of Israel from Egyptian bondage (Deut. 4:37). Therefore, at the heart of the covenant relationship lay an act of divine GRACE. God even prefaced the Ten Commandments with a reminder of His deliverance (Ex. 20:2).

The Ten Commandments (Ex. 20:3–17; Deut. 5:7–21) are still relevant today. The world desperately needs to see the name and character of God displayed in the lives of Christians who still take His Word seriously. These Commandments, particularly coupled with the teachings of Christ, are still the best guidelines for practical daily living known to humankind.

Although there is no universal agreement concerning how the passages containing the Ten Commandments (Ex. 20:3–17; Deut. 5:7–21) are to be separated into ten stipulations, the following division is perhaps the most common. The first four deal with our relationship to God, while the last six focus on our relationship to each other. Jesus likewise discerned two major emphases in the Decalogue with his stress on love for God and love for neighbor (Mark 12:28–31).

1. “You shall have no other gods before Me” (Ex. 20:3). God is one (Deut. 6:4) and unique (Deut. 4:38, 39), and therefore belief in and worship of other so-called gods is out of the question. Since God’s character forms the basis of the covenant with His people, He demands absolute loyalty. And when the intent of the heart is to put God first, a person’s outward actions will reveal it. Then others will see what God’s character is like through the actions of His people.
2. “You shall not make for yourself a carved image” (Ex. 20:4). The second commandment is necessary because people do not always keep the first. The Israelites made a golden calf to worship even as the Lord gave the laws to Moses. And since Israel had so many contacts with people who did worship images, including replicas of their earthly rulers, God gave them this law. God has never been a tangible, visible Being (Deut. 4:12), but always a Spirit (John 4:24). Idolatry therefore always misrepresents Him.
3. “You shall not take the name of the LORD your God in vain” (Ex. 20:7). God’s name and His character are inseparable. Using His holy name lightly in a vain, empty manner is insulting and degrading. This could be done by perjuring oneself in a court of law (Lev. 19:12) or by cursing. However, this commandment also applies to hypocritical worship, using God’s name in meaningless prayer and praise (Is. 29:13).

4. “Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy” (Ex. 20:8). Sabbath means “rest,” but God intended for this day to stand for more than an absence of work. It was to be a day of worship as well—a day for setting aside all thoughts of materialistic gain and thinking about Him. God Himself set the pattern by ceasing from His labors after creating the world. Why, then, must modern-day Christians feel that being busy is equated with being spiritual?
5. “Honor your father and your mother, that your days may be long upon the land” (Ex. 20:12). God established parents as the authority figures in the family unit. Children often get their first impressions about God from their parents. Parents who walk in the Spirit, honestly desiring to follow the guidelines of the Scriptures, will set better examples for their children. And children who want to please God will respect their parents, regardless of pressure from the world and their peers.
6. “You shall not murder” (Ex. 20:13). A person who cares about others, beginning with those in the home, does not want to harm them. This law reveals God’s attitude toward people created in His image. No one has the right to take that life from another (Gen. 9:6).
7. “You shall not commit adultery” (Ex. 20:14). Technically, this commandment refers to being sexually involved with a married person; but it is traditionally used by extension to prohibit all sexual relationships outside of marriage. Again, this commandment involves a right relationship with God and with others. Adultery is possible only if people are prepared to hurt others, to enjoy themselves at the expense of other people. A right attitude toward keeping God first and not harming others is tied together in several commandments. A person who does not steal will not take another’s mate. And he does not allow covetous thoughts to grow in his mind. He wants God to have his total allegiance.
8. “You shall not steal” (Ex. 20:15). Stealing involves taking something that does not belong to you. This could be another’s property, marriage partner, or reputation. This law also emphasizes the importance of getting all you own through lawful channels.
9. “You shall not bear false witness against your neighbor” (Ex. 20:16). A good relationship demands truthfulness and honesty in speaking of another. The old saying, “A man’s word is as good as his name," is sometimes a joke today. But God's people ought to cherish their own reputations and that of others. If people are unwilling to speak ill of someone, they are less likely to steal from that person or to commit murder.

10. "You shall not covet" (Ex. 20:17). Jesus elaborated on this commandment by stating, "You shall love your neighbor as yourself" (Matt. 22:39). The negative and the positive work together. You do not harm people you care about.

    This tenth commandment is an outgrowth of the first. If our hearts are fixed on the Lord, we will have the right attitude toward others. Consequently, the desires that rise from our hearts will not cause pain or loss to others. The right motive (pleasing God who is first in our lives) will result in obeying the other commandments (not hurting others).

    Jesus expounded on the idea prevalent in the Ten Commandments by emphasizing the heart attitude: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God" (Matt. 5:8). Christians have blessed joy on earth when their priorities are straight.

COMMERCE—the buying, selling, and trading of goods, especially on a large scale (as between nations) involving transportation from place to place.

Trade began well before recorded history in the ancient world. By the time of Abraham (about 2000 B.C.), trade was highly developed in such places as ancient Babylon and other cultures between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers. Canaan was the crossroads for important trade routes that connected Mesopotamia and Egypt; armies also made these trips as Egyptian and Mesopotamian rulers fought one another. Israel did not have many suitable harbors; so most of the sea trade went by way of the more northern ports like Tyre and Ugarit.

Israel did, however, export agricultural products such as wheat and olive oil (1 Kin. 5:11). Solomon was the most successful Israelite king in developing international trade relations (1 Kin. 5:10; 9:26–28), although later Ahab and Jehoshaphat also were apparently involved in trade (1 Kin. 20:34; 22:48). Ezekiel 27 (Tyre) and Revelation 18 (Babylon) give the most complete picture of commerce to be found in the Bible.

Also see SOLOMON.

Photo by Howard Vos

• The harbor of Sidon, center of the commercial shipping activities of the Phoenicians during Old Testament times.

COMMON-LANDS—the open lands outside the wall of a city (Lev. 25:34; Num. 35:2–7; Josh. 21:2–42; 1 Chr. 6:55–81; pasturelands, NIV; suburbs, KJV). The Hebrew word means “the place or area to which the city livestock could be driven.”

COMMON LIFE—the mutual relationship among Christians that issues from their participation in Christ’s body, the church. The words translated as “common,” “communion,” and “fellowship” express the idea of sharing. All Christians share together in the one living “body of Christ” (1 Cor. 12:27; Eph. 4:12) because they are joined to Jesus, their living Head. Also see COMMUNITY OF GOODS.

COMMUNION (see FELLOWSHIP; LORD'S SUPPER).

COMMUNITY OF GOODS—the voluntary practice through which some Christians of the New Testament unselfishly made their possessions available to all believers (Acts 2:44–47; 4:32—5:11).

The Book of Acts reported that "all who were possessors of lands or houses sold them," giving the proceeds to the apostles for distribution (Acts 4:34–35). This does not necessarily mean that all Christians sold every piece of real estate they owned. The reference seems to be to houses and lands other than their family dwellings.

The tragic story of ANANIAS and SAPPHIRA shows that the selling of land and other possessions by these early Christians was partial and voluntary (Acts 5:1, 4). However, there is a profound truth that must not be missed. "Neither did anyone say that any of the things he possessed was his own, but they had all things in common" (Acts 4:32). The emphasis should be placed not on their selling of possessions but on the unselfish attitude of the believers (Acts 2:45; 4:34). This is the spirit of true unity in Jesus Christ.

Also see COMMON LIFE.

COMPASS (see TOOLS OF THE BIBLE).

COMPASSION (see MERCY).

COMPTROLLER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CONANIAH [kone ah NYE ah] (the Lord establishes)—a chief of the Levites who assisted in the celebration of the Passover during the reign of King Josiah (2 Chr. 35:9). Also see CONONIAH.

CONCISION—a word for mutilation used by the apostle Paul to show his contempt for those who insisted a Gentile had to be circumcised before he could become a Christian (Phil. 3:2, KJV; mutilation, NKJV; those who mutilate the flesh, NRSV; those mutilators of the flesh, NIV).

CONCOURSES—open spaces where roads or paths meet. The word is found only once in the NKJV (Prov. 1:21; at the head of the noisy streets, NIV, NASB). The word also occurs in Acts 19:40 (KJV; commotion, NRSV, NIV; turmoil, REB; disorderly gathering, NASB, NKJV) in Paul’s description of the riot against him in Ephesus.

CONCUBINE [CON cue bine]—in Old Testament times, a female slave or mistress with whom a man was lawfully permitted to have sexual intercourse.

The first mention of a concubine occurs in Genesis 22:24, where Reumah is described as the concubine of Nahor, Abraham’s brother. Other men in the Old Testament who had these female slaves included Abraham (Gen. 25:6), Jacob (Gen. 35:22), Eliphaz (Gen. 36:12), Gideon (Judg. 8:31), and Saul (2 Sam. 3:7).

Sarai presented HAGAR, her Egyptian maidservant, to Abram as a concubine so he could father children through Hagar (Gen. 16:2–3). This apparently was a common practice during the patriarchal period in Israel’s history. The ancient Hebrews placed great value on having many children. If a couple remained childless after several years of marriage, the husband would often father children through a concubine.

By the time of the monarchy in Israel, the practice of keeping concubines apparently became a privilege of kings only. King SOLOMON is especially remembered for his many concubines (1 Kin. 11:3). Most of these concubines were foreign women. They led to Solomon’s downfall, because they brought their pagan religions, which introduced idolatry into the land (1 Kin. 11:1–13; Neh. 13:25–27).

In the ancient world concubines were protected by law; so they could not be sold if they were no longer of interest to the man. The Law of Moses also recognized the rights of concubines and guarded them from inhumane and callous treatment (Ex. 21:7–11; Deut. 10–14

CONCUPISCENCE—strong, passionate desire, especially sexual desire or lust. This word is found three times in the KJV (Rom. 7:8; Col. 3:5; 1 Thess. 4:5). Various modern translations have evil desire (Rom. 7:8; NKJV; Col. 3:5, NKJV), passionate lust (1 Thess. 4:5, NIV), covetousness (Rom. 7:8, NRSV), and covetous desire (Rom. 7:8, NIV).

CONDEMN, CONDEMNATION—to declare a person guilty and worthy of punishment. Condemn and condemnation are judicial terms, the opposite of JUSTIFY and JUSTIFICATION (Matt. 12:37; Rom. 5:16, 18).

God alone is the judge of people; in His demand for righteousness, sin leads invariably to condemnation and death.

The mission of Jesus was not to condemn the world but to save it by bearing on the cross the sin that belonged to His people (John 3:17–18). There is no condemnation for sinners who repent and believe in Him. Jesus not only bore the consequences of sin, but also condemned (destroyed) sin itself so that believers are released from its power (Rom. 8:1, 3). Since they have experienced a gracious pardon, believers are directed to practice forgiveness and to avoid vindictiveness: "Condemn not, and you shall not be condemned" (Luke 6:37).

CONDUIT—a water channel or tunnel. The biblical references to conduit describe the AQUEDUCT made by Hezekiah, king of Judah, to channel water from the upper pool, or spring, of Gihon to the southern part of Jerusalem (2 Kin. 18:17; Is. 7:3; 36:2, KJV; aqueduct, NKJV, NIV; also 2 Kin. 20:20, KJV; tunnel, NKJV, NIV). Also see AQUEDUCT.

CONEY (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CONFECTIONARY, CONFECTIONER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CONFESSION—an admission of sins (1 John 1:9); the profession of belief in the doctrines of a particular faith. In the Bible most of the uses of the word "confession" fall into one of these two categories. Examples of confession of sin may be found in Joshua's words to Achan (Josh. 7:19), in the confession during the Passover during Hezekiah's reign (2 Chr. 30:22), and in Ezra's call to the people to admit wrongdoing in marrying pagan wives (Ezra 10:11).

The Bible also uses the word "confession" to describe an open, bold, and courageous proclamation of one's faith. The apostle Paul wrote: "If you confess with your mouth the Lord Jesus and believe in your heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you will be saved. For with the heart one believes to righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made to salvation" (Rom. 10:9–10).

CONFIRM, CONFIRMATION—to establish, ratify, or strengthen a covenant. In the Bible the words are used of a vow or binding oath (Num. 30:13–14), a transaction of redeeming or exchanging (Ruth 4:7), a covenant or statute (Dan. 9:27; Gal. 3:15, 17), a person (Dan. 11:1), promises (Rom. 15:8), the testimony of Christ (1 Cor. 1:6), the gospel (Phil. 1:7), and salvation (Heb. 2:3).

CONGREGATION—a gathering or assembly of persons for worship and religious instruction; a religious community, such as the people of Israel or the Christian church.

In the Old Testament the English word "congregation" is the translation of several Hebrew words that carry the idea of "an appointed meeting" or "an assembly called together." These words point to Israel as the community of the Law, a "sacred assembly" gathered together by God and appointed to be His covenant people. As such, the term "congregation" was a constant reminder to Israel of the hand of God upon its destiny. Each time the Law of God was read in the solemn assembly of the congregation, Israel's sacred privilege as His people under His covenant promises was renewed.

A phrase such as "the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel" (Ex. 12:6; community, NIV) refers to the largest unit of the Hebrew people. An Israelite belonged, at the most basic level, to a house, then to a family (a collection of houses), then to a tribe (a collection of families), and then to the congregation (a collection of tribes). The "whole congregation of Israel," therefore, refers to the entire nation of Israel or the people of God as a whole.

In the New Testament the term "congregation" is used only three times in the NKJV (Acts 7:38; 13:43; Heb. 2:12 assembly, NIV). The two Greek words translated as congregation, however, occur often elsewhere in the New Testament. Originally these words—ekklesia and synagoge—were virtually interchangeable. But they began to take on separate and specialized meanings as the rift between the Christian church (ekklesia) and the Jewish synagogue (synagoge) became more antagonistic. The words soon referred to rival religious faiths.

Also see CHURCH.

CONGREGATION, MOUNT OF—the place where God is enthroned, whether in heaven or on earth (Is. 14:13; mount of assembly, NIV).

CONIAH [koe NYE ah]—a form of JEHOIACHIN.

CONONIAH [kone oh NYE ah] (the Lord establishes)—a Levite appointed overseer of the tithes and offerings at the temple during the reign of King Hezekiah (2 Chr. 31:12–13; Conaniah, NRSV, NIV).

CONSCIENCE—a person's inner awareness of conforming to the will of God or departing from it, resulting in either a sense of approval or condemnation.

The term does not appear in the Old Testament but the concept does. David, for example, was smitten in his heart because of his lack of trust in the power of God (2 Sam. 24:10). But his guilt turned to joy when he sought the Lord's forgiveness (Psalm 32).

In the New Testament the term "conscience" is found most frequently in the writings of the apostle Paul. Some people argue erroneously that conscience takes the place of the external law in the Old Testament. However, the conscience is not the ultimate standard of moral goodness (1 Cor. 4:4). Under both the old covenant and the new covenant the conscience must be formed by the will of God. The law given to Israel was inscribed on the hearts of believers (Heb. 8:10; 10:16); so the sensitized conscience is able to discern God's judgment against sin (Rom. 2:14–15).

The conscience of the believer has been cleansed by the work of Jesus Christ; it no longer accuses and condemns (Heb. 9:14; 10:22). Believers are to work to maintain pure consciences. They also must be careful not to encourage others to act against their consciences. To act contrary to the urging of one's conscience is wrong, for actions that go against the conscience cannot arise out of faith (1 Cor. 8:7–13; 10:23–30).

CONSECRATION—the act of setting apart, or dedicating, something or someone for God's use. In the Old Testament, the temple and its trappings were the most important objects consecrated to God (2 Chr. 7:5–9; Ezra 6:16–17); and Aaron and his sons were consecrated to the priesthood (Exodus 29; Leviticus 8). But even such items as the spoils of battle (Josh. 6:19; Mic. 4:13) and cattle could be consecrated (Lev. 27:28). Before the beginning of the priesthood in Israel's history, the firstborn of men and animals alike were consecrated (Ex. 13:2). But after the priesthood began, the tribe of Levi served as a substitute in this consecration (Num. 3:12).

In the New Testament, the supreme example of consecration is Christ himself (John 17:19; Heb. 7:28; 10:10). But believers are also consecrated by Christ (John 17:17; 1 Pet. 2:9), and are urged to consecrate themselves as well (Rom. 12:1; 2 Tim. 2:21). One of the results of our consecration by Christ is that we are now a priesthood of believers (1 Pet. 2:9) with direct access to our heavenly Father (Eph. 3:11–12).

CONSOLATION—comfort for the devout, mediated by the Holy Spirit (Luke 2:25, NIV).

CONSTELLATIONS (see ASTRONOMY).

CONSUMMATION (see ESCHATOLOGY).

CONSUMPTION (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

CONTENTMENT—freedom from anxiety or worry (1 Tim. 6:6). The idea of contentment comes from a Greek word that means "independence" or "self-sufficiency." But the apostle Paul used the word in a Christian sense to show that real satisfaction or sufficiency comes from God: "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me" (Phil. 4:13).

CONTRITE—the kind of spirit, or heart, pleasing and acceptable to God (Ps. 34:18; crushed, NRSV, NIV, REB, NASB; Ps. 51:17). People who have a contrite spirit weep over wrongdoing and express genuine sorrow for their sins (see also Matt. 5:4; Luke 6:21; 2 Cor. 7:10).

CONTROLLER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CONVERSATION—communication from one person to another. The word is used only twice in the NKJV (Jer. 38:27; Luke 24:17). But conversation is used often in the KJV to describe one's conduct, behavior, or way of life. Thus, the writer of the Book of Hebrews declared, "Let your conversation be without covetousness" (Heb. 13:5, KJV).

CONVERSION—the initial change of attitude and will that brings a person into right relationship with God. The word "conversion" appears as a noun only once in the New Testament, referring to the conversion of the Gentiles (Acts 15:3). But the Bible is filled with examples of persons who experienced conversion.

The fullest description of conversion occurs in the words spoken to Saul of Tarsus at his own conversion: “To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins and an inheritance among those who are sanctified by faith in me” (Acts 26:18).

Conversion involves turning away from evil deeds and false worship and turning toward serving and worshiping the Lord. Conversion marks a person’s entrance into a new relationship with God, forgiveness of sins, and new life as a part of the fellowship of the people of God.

Closely related to conversion are repentance and faith. Repentance is turning from sin; faith is turning to God. Thus, conversion is more than the exchange of one set of beliefs for another; it is a wholehearted turning to God.

The inward experience of conversion is sometimes referred to as the new birth (John 3:3–8). This phrase was used by Jesus in His conversation with Nicodemus. New birth refers to a change so radical that it can be described only by the figure of birth into a new life. As an infant enters the physical world with a totally new existence, so conversion is a new spiritual beginning in a person’s relationship to God.

The experience of conversion may differ with various individuals. Paul’s conversion was sudden and radical (Acts 9:1–6), while the conversion of Lydia (Acts 16:14–15) was gradual and gentle. But the results of conversion are always a clear change of attitude and a new direction for life.

CONVICTION—the process of being condemned by one’s own conscience as a sinner because of God’s demands. The idea of conviction is a major theme of Scripture, although the word is rarely used (Psalm 32; 51; Acts 2:37; Rom. 7:7–25). The agent of conviction is the Holy Spirit (John 16:7–11); and the means of conviction is either the Word of God (Acts 2:37) or God’s general revelation of His demands through nature and people’s inborn consciousness of a sense of right and wrong (Rom. 1:18–20; 2:15). The purpose of conviction is to lead people to repent of their sins (Acts 2:37–38; Rom. 2:1–4) and to turn to God for salvation and eternal life.

CONVOCATION—a sacred assembly or calling together of the people of Israel for rest and worship (Lev. 23:2, 4, 37). Wherever the word “convocation” appears in the Bible, it is preceded by the word “holy”; hence, “holy convocation.” On the great feast days the people were called together by silver trumpets (Num. 10:2). These convocations included the weekly SABBATHS (Lev. 23:3), the PASSOVER and the Feast of Unleavened Bread (Lev. 23:5–6), PENTECOST or Weeks (Lev. 23:15–21), the Feast of Trumpets (Lev. 23:24), the Feast of Tabernacles (Lev. 23:24), and the great feast day, the annual DAY OF ATONEMENT (Lev. 23:27).

Also see FEASTS AND FESTIVALS.

COOK (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

COOKING—preparation of food by the application of heat (Gen. 25:29). Roasting over an open fire was probably the first method of cooking used. But with the development of waterproof containers, boiling food became possible. The first Passover lamb was to be “roasted in fire” (Ex. 12:9), while during the period of the judges, some offerings were apparently boiled (1 Sam. 2:13). In the biblical period bread could be baked (Hos. 7:4) by placing the dough on a heated rock, or it might be cooked in a small, portable oven. No cooking took place on the Sabbath (Ex. 35:3).

Also see FOOD.

COOS [KOE os]—a form of COS.

COPPER (see MINERALS OF THE BIBLE).

COPPERSMITH (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

COR (see WEIGHTS AND MEASURES).

COR ASHAN [kor AY shan]—a form of ASHAN.

CORAL (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

CORBAN [KAWR bahn] (an offering brought near)—a word applied to a gift or offering in the temple that declared that gift dedicated to God in a special sense. Once a gift was offered under the special declaration of Corban, it could not be withdrawn or taken back; it was considered totally dedicated for the temple's special use.

Jesus condemned the Pharisees for encouraging the people to make such gifts to the temple while neglecting their responsibility to care for their parents (Mark 7:11–13). According to Jesus, this was a clear violation of a higher commandment, "Honor your father and your mother" (Mark 7:10).

CORD—a long line of twisted fiber used to bind or secure. In Bible times, cord and rope were made from flax, date tree fibers, or even strips of camel hide. They were used for a number of different purposes, including rigging boats (Acts 27:32), pulling carts (Is. 5:18), measuring (2 Sam. 8:2), and binding prisoners (Judg. 16:11). Cord or rope made from flax was especially strong and durable. It was often used to make fish nets.

A number of words in the original languages of the Bible are translated as rope, cord, or line, with the context often determining the exact translation. When Rahab lowered two spies from her window (Josh. 2:15), or when Jehoiakim's servants lowered Jeremiah into a cistern (Jer. 38:6, 11), a rope was required. But when the fine trappings of the court of Ahaseurus (Esth. 1:6) or the hangings of the tabernacle (Ex. 35:18) were described, cord carries the appropriate idea. Jesus made a whip of cords (John 2:15) to drive the money changers out of the temple.

CORE [KOE reh]—Greek form of KORAH.

CORIANDER (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

CORINTH [KAWR inth]—ancient Greece's most important trade city (Acts 18:1; 19:1; 1 Cor. 1:2; 2 Cor. 1:1, 23; 2 Tim. 4:20). Ideally situated on the Isthmus of Corinth between the Ionian Sea and the Aegean Sea (see Map 7, B–2), Corinth was the connecting link between Rome, the capital of the world, and the East. At Corinth the apostle Paul established a flourishing church, made up of a cross section of the worldly minded people who had flocked to Corinth to participate in the gambling, legalized temple prostitution, business adventures, and amusements available in a first-century navy town (1 Cor. 6:9–11).

Although the apostle Paul did not establish the church in Corinth until about A.D. 51 (Acts 18:1–18), the city's history dates back to prehistoric times, when ancient tribesmen first settled the site. Always a commercial and trade center, Corinth was already prosperous and famous for its bronze, pottery, and shipbuilding more than 800 years before Christ. The Greek poet Homer mentioned "wealthy Corinth" in 850 B.C.

In the following centuries Corinth competed for power with Athens, its stronger neighbor across the isthmus to the north. And in 146 B.C. invading Roman armies destroyed Corinth, killing the men and enslaving the women and children. Only a token settlement remained until 44 B.C., when Julius Caesar ordered the city rebuilt. Not only did he restore it as the capital city of the Roman province of Achaia; he also repopulated it with freed Italians and slaves from every nation. Soon the merchants flocked back to Corinth, too.

The city soon became a melting pot for the approximately 500,000 people who lived there at the time of Paul's arrival. Merchants and sailors, anxious to work the docks, migrated to Corinth. Professional gamblers and athletes, betting on the Isthmian games, took up residence. Slaves, sometimes freed but with no place to go, roamed the streets day and night. And prostitutes (both male and female) were abundant. People from Rome, the rest of Greece, Egypt, Asia Minor—indeed, all of the Mediterranean world—relished the lack of standards and freedom of thought that prevailed in the city.

These were the people who eventually made up the Corinthian church. They had to learn to live together in harmony, although their national, social, economic, and religious backgrounds were very different.

Perched on a narrow strip of land connecting the Peloponnesus, a peninsula of southern Greece, with central Greece and the rest of Europe, Corinth enjoyed a steady flow of trade. The city had two splendid harbor cities—Cenchreae, the eastern port on the Saronic Gulf; and Lechaeum, the western port on the Corinthian Gulf.

In the outlying areas around Corinth, farmers tended their grain fields, vineyards, and olive groves. But the pulse of Corinth was the city itself, enclosed by walls 10 kilometers (6 miles) in circumference. Most of the daily business was conducted in the marble-paved agora, or marketplace, in the central part of the city. Although only 1 percent of the ancient city has been excavated by archaeologists, some interesting discoveries give ideas of what the city was like when Paul arrived.

A marble lintel or crosspiece of a door was found near the residential section of Corinth. It bore part of the inscription, "Synagogue of the Hebrews." This may have been on the same site of the earlier synagogue in which Paul first proclaimed the gospel message to Corinth, accompanied by his newfound Jewish friends, Aquila and Priscilla (Acts 18:2).

Not far from the synagogue excavation site was the magnificent judgment seat, covered with ornate blue and white marble. There, the Roman proconsul of Achaia, Gallio, dismissed Paul's case (Acts 18:12–17). In the pavement of an amphitheater is inscribed the name Erastus, perhaps the official of Corinth mentioned in Romans 16:23 and 2 Timothy 4:20.

South of the marketplace were the butcher stalls (shambles, KJV; meat market, NKJV, NASB, NIV, REB, NRSV) that Paul mentioned in 1 Corinthians 10:25. Corinthians purchased their meat from these stalls. The meat was often dedicated to pagan idols before being sold. This presented a cultural problem for the Christians in Corinth (1 Corinthians 8).

Today the temple of Apollo, partially in ruins, towers above the ancient marketplace. Each fluted Doric column, about seven meters (almost twenty-four feet) tall, was cut from a single piece of stone in one of several quarries outside Corinth's walls.

Rising 457 meters (1,500 feet) above the city itself and to the south is the Acrocorinth, the acropolis or citadel. From there, the acropolis at Athens, about 73 kilometers (45 miles) away, can be seen. Also, the infamous temple of Aphrodite (or Venus) was located on top of this fortified hill. This pagan temple and its 1,000 "religious" prostitutes poisoned the city's culture and morals. For this reason, the apostle Paul sometimes had to deal harshly with the converts in the Corinthian church. Most of the Corinthians had lived in this godless society all their lives, and the idea of tolerating even incest had not seemed so terrible to them (1 Corinthians 5).

In spite of Corinth's notorious reputation, God used the apostle Paul to establish a vigorous church in the city about A.D. 51 (Acts 18:1–18). Later, Paul wrote at least two letters to the church at Corinth (see CORINTHIANS, EPISTLES TO THE). Both deal with divisions in the church, as well as immorality and the abuse of Christian freedom.

The Corinth that Paul knew was partially destroyed by an earthquake in A.D. 521, then totally devastated by another in 1858. Modern Corinth, rebuilt about 4 kilometers (2.5 miles) from the ancient site, is little more than a town. It is certainly not a thriving trade center, but the inhabitants only need to look at the ancient ruins to recall the former glory of their city. The success of the gospel at Corinth—bittersweet though it was—illustrates that the grace of God comes not so much to the noble as to the needy (1 Cor. 1:26–31).

◆

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• The ruins of Corinth, one of the wealthiest and most immoral of ancient cities (1 Cor. 5:1; 6:9–11).

Photo by Howard Vos

• The Temple of Apollo at Corinth and the acropolis of the city in the background.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Ruins of the civil law court known as the Julian Basilica in ancient Corinth. Some of the charges of the Corinthian Christians against one another (1 Cor. 6:1–11) may have been reviewed on this very site.

CORINTHIANS, EPISTLES TO THE—two letters of the apostle Paul addressed to the church in Corinth. First Corinthians is unique among the Pauline letters because of the variety of its practical concerns. Second Corinthians is one of Paul's most personal letters, containing a wealth of insights into the heart of Paul the pastor. Both letters reveal the degree to which Paul identified with his churches, suffering in their shortcomings and celebrating their victories. The Corinthian correspondence draws us into a world much like our own. Paul the anxious pastor wrote to young Christians who were concerned with problems involved in living the Christian life in a non-Christian environment.

Structure of the Epistles. Following the introduction (1 Cor. 1:1–9), Paul appealed to the Corinthians to mend the divisions within the church (1:10—4:21). Paul reminded the Corinthians that they were united by the simple, but life-changing, preaching of the cross (1 Cor. 1:18—2:16). Indeed, each church leader builds on the one foundation of Jesus (chap. 3), and consequently labors in behalf of Christ (chap. 4). In chapters 5 and 6 Paul took up two moral abuses in Corinth. He judged a man who had sexual intercourse with his father's wife (chap. 5), and he reproved the believers for generating arguments that wound up in court before nonbelieving judges (1 Cor. 6:1–11).

Paul then addressed certain questions which were brought to him by the Corinthians about sexuality (6:12–20), marriage (chap. 7), and eating food offered previously to idols (chap. 8). On such matters Paul appealed for a responsible use of Christian freedom—not for self-gain, but in consideration for the other. He reminded them that he conducted his own ministry in this way (chap. 9), and he warned against becoming fixed on anything that could lead to idolatry (chap. 10).

Paul then returned to other abuses, especially involving church order. In chapter 11 he developed the correct teaching on the Lord's Supper; in chapter 12 on spiritual gifts; in chapter 13 on love; in chapter 14 on the charismatic gifts of tongues and prophecy, and in chapter 15 on the resurrection. Finally, he reminded the Corinthians of the weekly collection for the saints in Jerusalem (16:1–4). He concluded with travel plans and greetings (16:5–24).

Second Corinthians is closely related to the circumstances that occasioned its writing. The letter begins with reference to a painful experience of rejection at Corinth (Paul's third visit). Paul gave thanks that the Corinthians were now reconciled to him (chap. 1), but he recalled his torment over their stubbornness (chap. 2). Chapters 3 and 4 are theological reflections on ministry, and chapters 5 and 6 on reconciliation. In chapter 7 Paul shared his joy at the church's repentance. Paul changed perspective in chapters 8 and 9 by turning to the matter of the collection for the church in Jerusalem.

The tone of 2 Corinthians changes in chapters 10–13. These chapters are laced with warnings to the Corinthians and Paul's opponents, defenses of his apostleship, and a rehearsal of Paul's sufferings as an apostle. If chapters 1–9 reveal Paul's joy and relief, chapters 10–13 let us see the wounds, both physical and emotional, which he bore as an apostle. The letter closes with the only trinitarian benediction in the Bible (2 Cor. 13:14).

Authorship and Date. First and Second Corinthians bear unmistakable marks of Pauline authorship (1 Cor. 1:1; 2 Cor. 2:1). The first epistle was written from Ephesus (1 Cor. 16:8) during Paul's third missionary journey, perhaps in A.D. 56. The second letter followed some twelve to fifteen months later from Macedonia, where Paul met Titus and received news of the church's repentance (2 Cor. 2:12–17).

Historical Setting. Acts 18:1–18 records the founding of the Corinthian church. During his second missionary journey, Paul went alone from Athens to Corinth in about A.D. 51. There he labored with a Jewish–Christian couple, Aquila and Priscilla, who recently had been expelled from Rome by the emperor Claudius because they were Jews. Silas and Timothy also joined Paul in Corinth. When Paul left Corinth eighteen months later, a Christian congregation flourished. The congregation was composed primarily of former pagans (1 Cor. 12:2), most of them apparently from the lower classes (1 Cor. 1:26–28). Some were slaves (1 Cor. 7:21). A few wealthier persons (1 Cor. 11:22–32) and Jews, however (8:1–13), were among the believers.

A bit of detective work enables us to reconstruct the circumstances of the Corinthian correspondence. It is reasonably certain that Paul wrote four letters and paid perhaps three visits to the church in Corinth.

During his third missionary journey, Paul received word about immorality in the young congregation at Corinth. He wrote a letter (which has since been lost) against mixing with fornicators (1 Cor. 5:9). The letter apparently failed to achieve its purpose. Some time later Paul learned (1 Cor. 1:11; 16:17) that the sexual problems persisted, along with others. Paul responded by writing a second letter (probably 1 Corinthians), in which he referred to various points raised by the Corinthians (see the sections beginning, "Now concerning," 1 Cor. 7:1, 25; 8:1; 12:1; 16:1). In addition, he condemned the Corinthians for their divisions (1 Cor. 1:10) and their gross sexual violations (1 Cor. 5:1).

This letter also failed to correct the abuses at Corinth. Paul then apparently made a visit to Corinth, during which he was rebuffed (2 Cor. 2:1). From Ephesus Paul then wrote a third letter in which he spared no punches in his contest with the willful Corinthians. This letter, which he sent by Titus, has also been lost. Many scholars believe it has been attached to 2 Corinthians and preserved as chapters 10–13 of his epistle.

In anxiety over the possible effect of this drastic letter, and impatient over Titus' delay in returning, Paul traveled north from Ephesus to Macedonia. There Titus met him and, to Paul's relief and joy, reported that the Corinthians had punished the ringleader of the opposition and repented (2 Cor. 2:5–11). Paul then wrote a fourth letter (2 Corinthians), recounting his former anxiety and expressing his joy over the reform in Corinth.

Theological Contribution. The problems Paul faced in the church at Corinth were complex and explosive. The correspondence that resulted is rich and profound in theological insight. While addressing the problems in Corinth, the apostle reaches some of the most sublime heights in all New Testament literature.

Corinth, like its neighboring city of Athens, symbolized Greek culture in its desire for wisdom and power. Paul must have been tempted to write to the Greeks as a Christian philosopher (1 Cor. 2:4). He rejected this tendency, however, and relied instead on the irony of the cross, "to the Jews a stumbling block and to the Greeks foolishness" (1 Cor. 1:23). The foolishness of the gospel—indeed, its offensiveness to cultured Greeks—was indication of its power to save. To those who respond, "Christ is the power of God and the wisdom of God" (1 Cor. 1:24). According to Paul, the preaching of the cross is not a human teaching but a revelation of the Spirit, who makes known the mind of Christ (1 Cor. 2:10–16). The centrality of the cross overcomes all divisions within the church.

Since many of the problems arising in Corinth concerned behavior and morals, Paul majored on ethical advice in his correspondence. The leading principle he uses is that "all things are lawful for me, but not all things are helpful" (1 Cor. 6:12; 10:23). Christians ought to use their freedom not for self-advantage, but for the glory of God and the good of their neighbors. This principle goes beyond legislating simple “dos and don’ts.” Instead, it cultivates a mature and responsible faith that will provide guidance for every moral problem.

First Corinthians is also important because of its teaching on the gifts of the Spirit (chap. 12) and the resurrection of the dead (chap. 15). Paul recognized a variety of gifts (12:4–10), but insisted that “one and the same Spirit” gives them. The body consists of different parts, but remains one organism. Likewise, Christ’s body of believers consists of members with different gifts, each given by the one Spirit.

First Corinthians 15 is our earliest record of the resurrection in the New Testament. Unless Christ has been resurrected, Paul maintained, the faith of Christians is empty (15:12–19). As death came through Adam, so new life comes through Christ (15:21, 45). The resurrection of Jesus is the “firstfruits” (15:20) of the victory to come. Because of the resurrection the believer can confess, “O death, where is your sting?” (15:55).

Second Corinthians is probably best known for its teaching on Christian ministry. Chapters 4 and 5 are unrivaled for their beauty of expression and grandeur of thought. Paul marvels at the treasure of the gospel that God entrusts to human servants. Indeed, the weakness of the servant only highlights the message of salvation (4:1–15). This message finds its most famous expression in 2 Corinthians 5:17, “If anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation; old things have passed away; behold, all things have become new.” The voltage of this truth transforms Christian messengers into ambassadors for Christ.

Special Considerations. As in the case with the resurrection, Corinthians also contains the earliest record of the Lord’s Supper (1 Cor. 11:23–26). The immortal last words of Christ, “This cup is the new covenant in my blood” (11:24–25), recall his past death and anticipate his future return.

First Corinthians also contains one of the best-known chapters in the New Testament. In poetic cadence Paul proclaims “the more excellent way” of agape (chap. 13). Love is not merely a feeling, but an attitude committed to patience, hope, and stability in the face of problems. Such love will outlast the world itself. Agape love is the greatest characteristic of Christian life and experience.

1 Corinthians: A Study and Teaching Outline

Part One: In Answer to Chloe’s Report of Divisions (1:1—4:21)

I. Introduction 1:1–9

II. Report of Divisions 1:10–17

III. Reasons for Division 1:18—4:21

A. Misunderstanding of the Gospel Message 1:18—3:4
B. Misunderstanding of the Gospel Messenger 3:5—4:5
C. Misunderstanding of Paul’s Ministry 4:6–21

Part Two: In Answer to Reports of Immorality (5:1—6:20)

I. On Incest 5:1—13

A. Deliver the Fornicators for Discipline 5:1–8
B. Separate Yourselves from Immoral Believers 5:9–13

II. Concerning Litigation Between Believers 6:1–11

III. Warning Against Sexual Immorality 6:12–20

Part Three: In Answer to the Letter of Questions (7:1—16:24)

I. Counsel Concerning Marriage 7:1–40

A. Principles for Married Life 7:1–9
B. Principles for the Married Believer 7:10–16
C. Principle of Abiding in God’s Call 7:17–24
D. Principles for the Unmarried 7:25–38
E. Principles for Remarriage 7:39–40

II. Counsel Concerning Spiritual Liberty 8:1—11:1

A. Principles of Liberty and the Weaker Believer 8:1–13
B. Illustration of Paul and His Liberty 9:1–27
C. Warning Against Forfeiting Liberty 10:1–13
D. Exhortation to Use Liberty to Glorify God 10:14—11:1

III. Counsel Concerning Public Worship 11:2—14:40

A. Principles of Public Prayer 11:2–16
B. Rebuke of Disorders at the Lord’s Supper 11:17–34
C. Principles of Exercising Spiritual Gifts 12:1—14:40

IV. Counsel Concerning the Resurrection 15:1–58

A. Fact of Christ’s Resurrection 15:1–11
B. Importance of Christ’s Resurrection 15:12–19
C. Order of the Resurrections 15:20–28

- D. Moral Implications of Christ’s Resurrection 15:29–34
- E. Bodies of the Resurrected Dead 15:35–50
- F. Bodies of the Translated Living 15:51–58

V. Counsel Concerning the Collection for Jerusalem 16:1–4

VI. Conclusion 16:5–24

◆

2 Corinthians: A Study and Teaching Outline

Part One: Paul’s Explanation of His Ministry (1:1—7:16)

I. Introduction 1:1–11

II. Paul’s Explanation of His Change of Plans 1:12—2:13
- A. Paul’s Original Plan 1:12–22
- B. Paul’s Change of Plans 1:23—2:4
- C. Paul’s Appeal to Forgive 2:5–13

III. Paul’s Philosophy of Ministry 2:14—6:10
- A. Christ Causes Us to Triumph 2:14–17
- B. Changed Lives Prove Ministry 3:1–5
- C. New Covenant Is the Basis of Ministry 3:6–18
- D. Christ Is the Theme of Ministry 4:1–7
- E. Trials Abound in Ministry 4:8–15
- F. Motivation in Ministry 4:16—5:21
- G. Giving No Offense in Ministry 6:1–10

IV. Paul’s Exhortations to the Corinthians 6:11—7:16
- A. Paul’s Appeal for Reconciliation 6:11–13
- B. Paul’s Appeal for Separation from Unbelievers 6:14—7:1
- C. Paul’s Meeting with Titus 7:2–7
- D. Corinthians’ Response to Paul’s Letter 7:8–16

Part Two: Paul’s Collection for the Saints (8:1—9:15)

I. Example of the Macedonians 8:1–6

II. Exhortation to the Corinthians 8:7—9:15
- A. Example of Christ 8:7–9
- B. Purpose of Giving 8:10–15
- C. Explanation of the Delegation 8:16—9:5
- D. Exhortation to Giving 9:6–15

Part Three: Paul’s Vindication of His Apostleship (10:1—13:14)

I. Paul Answers His Accusers 10:1–18
    A. The Charge of Cowardice Is Answered 10:1–2
    B. The Charge of Worldliness Is Answered 10:3–9
    C. The Charge of Personal Weakness Is Answered 10:10–18

II. Paul Defends His Apostleship 11:1—12:13
    A. Paul’s Declaration of His Apostleship 11:1–15
    B. Paul’s Sufferings Support His Apostleship 11:16–33
    C. Paul’s Revelations Support His Apostleship 12:1–10
    D. Paul’s Signs Support His Apostleship 12:11–13

III. Paul Announces His Forthcoming Visit 12:14—13:10
    A. Paul’s Concern Not to Be a Financial Burden 12:14–18
    B. Paul’s Concern Not to Find Them Carnal 12:19–21
    C. Paul’s Warning to Examine Themselves 13:1–10

IV. Conclusion 13:11–14

◆

CORMORANT (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CORN (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

CORNELIAN (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

CORNELIUS [kor NEEL yus]—a Roman soldier stationed in Caesarea who was the first recorded Gentile convert to Christianity (Acts 10:1–33).

Cornelius was a God-fearing man strongly attracted to the Jewish teaching of monotheism (the belief in one God), as opposed to pagan idolatry and immorality, and to the concern expressed in the law of Moses concerning helping the poor and needy (Acts 10:2). He is introduced in the Book of Acts as a representative of thousands in the Gentile world who were weary of paganism and who were hungry for the coming of the Messiah—the Christ who would deliver them from their sins and lead them into an abundant, Spirit-filled life.

God sent a heavenly vision both to Cornelius and to Simon Peter. Obeying his vision, Cornelius sent some of his men to Joppa, about 58 kilometers (36 miles) south of Caesarea, to find Peter. Peter, in turn, obeyed his own vision (which he interpreted to mean that Gentiles were to be included in Christ's message) and went to Cornelius. While Peter was still preaching to Cornelius and his household, "the Holy Spirit fell upon all those who heard the word" (Acts 10:44). And Peter commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord.

This incident marked the expansion of the early church to include Gentiles as well as Jews (Acts 10:34–35; 11:18). Peter alluded to Cornelius' conversion at the Jerusalem Council (Acts 15:7–11).

Also see CENTURION; ITALIAN REGIMENT.

CORNER GATE (see GATES OF JERUSALEM AND THE TEMPLE).

CORNER, UPPER ROOM AT THE—a roof-chamber (REB) at the junction of two walls at the northeast corner of the temple in Jerusalem (Neh. 3:31–32; room above the corner, NIV). This upper room (NRSV) was possibly a watchtower in Jerusalem's walls where Nehemiah finished his work of restoring the walls of Jerusalem.

CORNERSTONE—a stone placed at the corner, or the intersecting angle, where two walls of a building come together. In biblical times, buildings were often made of cut, squared stone. By uniting two intersecting walls, a cornerstone helped align the whole building and tie it together.

In his address before the Jewish SANHEDRIN, the apostle Peter quoted Psalm 118:22 and boldly proclaimed that "Jesus Christ of Nazareth," crucified and raised from the dead, was the stone rejected by the builders who has now become the chief cornerstone (Acts 4:11; capstone, NIV; Eph. 2:20). This chief cornerstone, Jesus Christ, is the foundation of the church, because "there is no other name under heaven given among men by which we must be saved" (Acts 4:12). In Him "the whole building, being joined together, grows into a holy temple in the Lord" (Eph. 2:21). All who believe in Jesus find a solid Rock on which to build their lives. Also see CAPSTONE.

CORNET (see MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS OF THE BIBLE).

CORRECTION—the act of reform or punishing. In the Old Testament, correction is equated with chastening (Prov. 3:11–12), reproof (Prov. 13:18; 15:10), and judgment (Hab. 1:12). The New Testament declares that all Scripture is profitable for correction (2 Tim. 3:16; reformation of manners, REB). The Word of God (the Bible) teaches us what is true and false.

CORRUPTION—decay of the body (Acts 2:27, 31) and degradation of human life through the power of sin (2 Pet. 1:4). But because of the resurrection of Christ our bodies, sown in corruption (subject to the decay and dissolution of organic matter), will be raised in incorruption (1 Cor. 15:42, 50–54).

CORRUPTION, MOUNT OF (see MOUNT OF CORRUPTION).

COS [kohs]—a small island between Miletus and Rhodes, in the archipelago opposite the coast of Caria in Asia Minor (see Map 8, C–2). It was a place that the apostle Paul passed during his voyage to Jerusalem (Acts 21:1; Coos, KJV). Cos was famous for its wines, ointments, and purple dyes, and for its fine textured silk and cotton.

COSAM [KOE sam]—a descendant of David and an ancestor of Jesus (Luke 3:28).

COSMETICS—items such as ointment, perfume, and eye paint used to enhance a person's appearance in Bible times (Esth. 2:3; Song 1:12). The biblical writers referred to disreputable women who used excessive eye paint (Jer. 4:30; Ezek. 23:40). Ointments or perfumes were expensive substances used for personal adornment as well as the anointing of bodies for burial (Song 1:13; Luke 7:37; John 19:39–40).

COTTAGE—KJV word for HUT.

COTTON—NRSV word for LINEN. While cotton was known in ancient India, it apparently was never grown or used in the Near East during the biblical period.

COUCH—KJV word for BED.

COUNCIL—an assembly of people who meet to discuss important matters and to make decisions (Acts 25:12). The Greek words usually translated as council can refer to the place where a council meets, the group itself, or the meeting. In the New Testament, council is a technical term that often refers to the supreme Jewish council, the SANHEDRIN.

In Roman times, the Sanhedrin was the highest governing Jewish body in the province of Judea in southern Palestine. The council, or Sanhedrin, was composed of high priests, elders, and scribes. This council had the highest authority in legal, governmental, and religious matters; and it could exercise these powers as long as it did not infringe on Roman authority. Normally Rome confirmed and carried out death sentences passed by the Jewish Sanhedrin.

Most of the references in the New Testament to the Sanhedrin appear in connection with the trial of Jesus (Matt. 26:59; Mark 14:55; 15:1; John 11:47) and opposition to the work of the early church (Acts 5:21). The Sanhedrin became the focus of Jewish opposition to early Christianity (Acts 4:15; 5:21; 6:12; 22:30; 23:1; 24:20).

The council can also be a gathering of people, as in Matthew 12:14 where the Pharisees, indignant at the healing and teaching activities of Jesus, went out of the synagogue and "held a council against him" (KJV). During Paul's trial before Festus, Festus consulted with such a council. This group probably was made up of political advisors in the district he governed.

COUNCIL OF JERUSALEM (see JERUSALEM COUNCIL, THE).

COUNSELOR—one who gives counsel or advises (Prov. 11:14), especially the king's adviser (2 Sam. 15:12; 1 Chr. 27:33), or one of the chief men of the government (Job 3:14; Is. 1:26). In Mark 15:43 (KJV) and Luke 23:50 (KJV), the word designates a "council member" (of the SANHEDRIN). The HOLY SPIRIT is also called "the Counselor" in the NRSV and NIV (John 14:16, 26; 15:26; 16:7). Also see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES.

COUPLINGS—KJV word for timbers used to tie a building together (2 Chr. 34:11; beams, NKJV). When the tabernacle was built in the wilderness, God also gave the Israelites detailed instructions on how the curtains around the altar were to be coupled, or joined, together (Ex. 26:3–24). Also see ARCHITECTURE.

COURAGE—the strength of purpose that enables one to withstand fear or difficulty. Physical courage is based on moral courage—a reliance on the presence and power of God and a commitment to His commandments (Josh. 1:6–7, 9, 18; 23:6; 2 Chr. 19:11).

COURSE—a word in the Bible with many different meanings, including the passage of time (2 Chr. 21:19); a straight path, as of a ship (Acts 16:11; 21:1); an unrestrained path (Eph. 2:2); and advancement or progress (2 Thess. 3:1).

COURT—an open space or courtyard enclosed by walls or buildings. Most of the references to court in the Bible are related to the TABERNACLE (Ex. 27:9–19) and the TEMPLE (1 Kin. 6:36). The tabernacle stood in a large courtyard approximately 44 meters (146 feet) long and 22 meters (73 feet) wide (Ex. 27:9–19). The sides of the courtyard were formed by a linen screen with an opening for a gate on the east.

Solomon's temple had an inner court (1 Kin. 6:36) and an outer court (Ezek. 10:5), as did the temple in the prophet Ezekiel's vision (Ezekiel 40–46). The Bible often used the plural form, referring to courts (Ps. 65:4; 84:2). The Jewish temple that Herod built had courts for Gentiles, women, Jewish men, and priests.

The word "court" also refers in Scripture to the yards of a prison (Jer. 32:2, 8, 12), a private house (2 Sam. 17:18), and a king's palace (Esth. 1:5).

Also see HOUSE.

COURT OF THE GENTILES—the outermost court of Herod's temple in Jerusalem. The temple consisted of a series of courts. As one entered the temple precincts and proceeded toward the interior, each court was higher than the previous one. Non-Jews could enter the Court of the Gentiles but were prohibited from going farther. At Jesus' death, the veil that separated the inner court from the outer court was split, showing that all people had equal access to God through Jesus Christ, the great Mediator and Redeemer (Matt. 27:51; Eph. 2:14). Also see TEMPLE.

COURT, SANCTUARY (see TABERNACLE; TEMPLE).

COURTIER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

COURTS, JUDICIAL (see LAW).

COUSIN—a child of one's aunt or uncle. The Greek word translated cousin (anepsios) occurs only once in Scripture: "Mark the cousin of Barnabas" (Col. 4:10; sister's son, KJV). Elizabeth was not Mary's cousin (Luke 1:36, KJV), but her kinswoman (REB) or relative (NKJV, NIV, NRSV, NASB). Jeremiah and Hanameel were cousins (Jer. 32:7–9, 12). Esther was "the daughter of Abihail the uncle of Mordecai" (Esth. 2:15; also Esth. 2:7). Mordecai was therefore Esther's cousin and not, as sometimes erroneously stated, her uncle.

COVENANT—an agreement between two people or two groups that involves promises on the part of each to the other. The Hebrew word for "covenant" probably means "betweenness," emphasizing the relational element that lies at the basis of all covenants. Human covenants or treaties were either between equals or between a superior and an inferior. Divine covenants, however, are always of the latter type, and the concept of covenant between God and His people is one of the most important theological truths of the Bible. Indeed, the word itself has come to denote the two main divisions of Christian Scripture: Old Covenant and New Covenant (traditionally, Old Testament and New Testament).

By making a covenant with Abraham, God promised to bless His descendants and to make them His special people. Abraham, in return, was to remain faithful to God and to serve as a channel through which God's blessings could flow to the rest of the world (Gen. 12:1–3). God's covenant with Abraham was made (Gen. 15:18) and confirmed (Gen. 17:2) to guarantee that Abraham's descendants would be innumerable and that they would receive the Promised Land. The Abrahamic covenant sign is circumcision (Gen. 17:11).

Even before Abraham's time, God also made a covenant with Noah. It illustrates three important principles: (1) All divine covenants originate with God (Gen. 9:9); (2) all of them are everlasting (Gen. 9:16); (3) all of them are memorialized with a visible sign, in this case the rainbow (Gen. 9:13). The purpose of the Noahic covenant was the divine promise that God would never again destroy all sinful humanity by a flood (Gen. 9:11).

Another famous covenant was between God and David, in which David and his descendants were established as the royal heirs to the throne of the nation of Israel (2 Sam. 7:12; 22:51). This covenant agreement reached its highest fulfillment when Jesus the Messiah, a descendant of the line of David, was born in Bethlehem about a thousand years after God made this promise to David the king (Matt. 1:1; 2:4–6; Luke 1:29–33).

God's covenant with Israel through Moses is the "old" or "first" covenant as contrasted with the "new" (Jer. 31:31–34; 2 Cor. 3:6–17; Gal. 4:24–31; Heb. 8:3—9:22). Its establishment (Ex. 19:3–25), stipulations (Ex. 20:1–17), exposition (Ex. 20:22—23:33), and confirmation (Ex. 24:1–12) constituted the formal basis of the redemptive relationship between the Lord and His CHOSEN PEOPLE until it was superseded by the new covenant (Heb. 8:3). The Mosaic covenant sign is the Sabbath (Ex. 31:13, 16–17). Israel's pledge to obey the Lord (Ex. 19:8; 24:3, 7), on the basis of which Moses sprinkled the "blood of the covenant" on them (Ex. 24:8), was broken soon (Ex. 32:1–31) and often (Jer. 31:32).

All biblical covenants were solemnized by slaying one or more animals and shedding their blood (Gen. 8:20; 15:9–10; Ex. 24:5; Jer. 34:18–20), the importance of which is reflected in the Hebrew idiom "cut a covenant" (Gen. 15:18; Jer. 34:18), uniformly translated "made a covenant." The blood-bought ratification of the earlier covenants prefigured the "new covenant in [Jesus'] blood" (Luke 22:20; 1 Cor. 11:25), shed as the sign and seal of our redemption once for all people and for all time (Heb. 10:5–19).

A covenant, in the biblical sense, implies much more than a contract or simple agreement. A contract always has an end date, while a covenant is a permanent arrangement. Another difference is that a contract generally involves only one part of a person, such as a skill, while a covenant covers a person's total being.

The Old Testament contains many examples of covenants between people who related to each other as equals. For example, David and Jonathan entered into a covenant because of their love for each other. This agreement bound each of them to certain responsibilities (1 Sam. 18:3). The striking thing about God's covenants with His people is that God is holy, all-knowing, and all powerful; but He consents to enter into covenants with people who are weak, sinful, and imperfect.

The New Testament makes a clear distinction between covenants of Law and covenants of Promise. The apostle Paul spoke of these “two covenants,” one originating “from Mount Sinai,” the other from “the Jerusalem above” (Gal. 4:24–26). Paul also argued that the covenant established at Mount Sinai, the Law, is a “ministry of death” and “condemnation” (2 Cor. 3:7, 9)—a covenant that cannot be obeyed because of human weakness and sin (Rom. 8:3).

But the “covenants of promise” (Eph. 2:12) are God’s guarantees that He will provide salvation in spite of people’s inability to keep their side of the agreement because of sin. The provision of a Chosen People through whom the Messiah would be born is the promise of the covenants with Adam and David (Gen. 3:15; 2 Sam. 7:14–15). The covenant with Noah is God’s promise to withhold judgment on nature while salvation is occurring (Gen. 8:21–22; 2 Pet. 3:7, 15). In the covenant with Abraham, God promised to bless Abraham’s descendants because of his faith (Gen. 12:1–3).

These many covenants of promise may be considered one covenant of grace, which was fulfilled in the life and ministry of Jesus. His death ushered in the new covenant under which we are justified by God’s grace and mercy rather than our human attempts to keep the law. And Jesus Himself is the Mediator of this better covenant between God and humankind (Heb. 9:15).

Jesus’ sacrificial death served as the oath, or pledge, that God made to us to seal this new covenant. He is determined to give us eternal life and fellowship with Him, in spite of our unworthiness. As the Book of Hebrews declares, “The word of the oath, which came after the law, appoints the Son who has been perfected forever” (Heb. 7:28). This is still God’s promise to any person who turns to Him in repentance and faith.

Also see COVENANT, NEW.

COVENANT, BOOK OF THE—a name for the code of laws in Exodus 20:22—23:33, given to Moses at Mount Sinai as an expansion and exposition of the Ten Commandments (Ex. 24:7). The Book of the Covenant discovered in the temple during the reign of King Josiah of Judah (640–609 B.C.), who used it in his restoration of true worship (2 Kin. 23:2–3, 21; 2 Chr. 34:30–31), may have included also some additional sections of Exodus as well as most or all of the Book of Deuteronomy.

COVENANT, NEW—the new agreement God has made with mankind, based on the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. The concept of a new covenant originated with the promise of the prophet Jeremiah that God would accomplish for His people what the old covenant had failed to do (Jer. 31:31–34). Under this new covenant, God would write His Law on human hearts. This promised action suggested a new level of obedience, a new knowledge of the Lord, and a new forgiveness of sin.

The New Testament, which itself means "new covenant," interprets the work of Jesus Christ as bringing this promised new covenant into being. In Luke 22:20, when Jesus ate the Passover meal at the Last Supper with His disciples, He spoke of the cup as "the new covenant in My blood." When the apostle Paul recited the tradition he had received concerning the Last Supper, he quoted these words of Jesus about the cup as "the new covenant in My blood" (1 Cor. 11:25).

But the Epistle to the Hebrews gives the new covenant more attention than any other book in the New Testament. It includes a quotation of the entire passage from Jeremiah 31:31–34 (Heb. 8:8–12; see also 10:16–17). Jesus is also referred to by the writer of Hebrews as "the Mediator of the new covenant" (Heb. 9:15; 12:24). The new covenant, a "better covenant . . . established on better promises" (Heb. 8:6), rests directly on the sacrificial work of Christ, according to Hebrews. The new covenant accomplished what the old could not: removal of sin and cleansing of the conscience (Jer. 31:34; Heb. 10:2, 22). The work of Jesus Christ on the cross thus makes the old covenant "obsolete" (Heb. 8:13) and fulfills the promise of the prophet Jeremiah.

Also see COVENANT.

COVENANT PEOPLE—a name often used for the Hebrew people, Abraham's descendants. They were chosen by God as instruments of His redemption of the world (Gen. 12:1–3).

In the New Testament, those who believe in Christ are people of a new and better covenant (Luke 22:20; 2 Cor. 3:6).

COVENANT OF SALT—an Old Testament expression for a covenant, or agreement, that was supposed to be honored forever (Num. 18:19). Salt apparently was used as a figure of speech for binding agreements because it was a basic part of the Israelite diet, and it was also used as a food preservative in the ancient world.

COVERING THE HEAD—the practice among women of wearing a head covering in early Christian worship services. The apostle Paul argued that a woman participating in the services ought to have her head covered (1 Cor. 11:5–16).

According to Paul, it was a "symbol of authority" (1 Cor. 11:10). The Christian woman had received a new freedom and spiritual authority from Christ (Gal. 3:28). Thus she was able to pray and prophesy in the services. By wearing the head covering, however, she would show that her authority had come from God; she had not seized it herself. Without the covering she might offend recent Jewish converts or others who held to the ancient tradition that women ought to always have their heads covered in public as a sign of modesty.

COVETOUSNESS—an intense desire to possess something (or someone) that belongs to another person. The Ten Commandments prohibit this attitude (Ex. 20:17; Deut. 5:21). Covetousness springs from a greedy self-centeredness and an arrogant disregard of God's law. The Bible repeatedly warns against this sin (Josh. 7:21; Rom. 7:7; 2 Pet. 2:10).

Many examples of covetousness appear in the Bible: Gehazi's greed (2 Kin. 5:20–27), Judas' betrayal of Jesus (Matt. 26:14–15), the rich fool (Luke 12:13–21), the rich young ruler (Luke 18:18–25), and the deceit of Ananias and Sapphira (Acts 5:1–11). The apostle Paul labeled this sin as idolatry (Col. 3:5). He warned believers not to associate with a covetous brother (1 Cor. 5:10–11).

The best way to avoid a self-centered, covetous attitude is to trust the Lord and to face one's responsibilities (Gal. 6:7–9; 2 Thess. 3:6–15). To those tempted by "covetousness" and "worthless things" (Ps. 119:36), Jesus declares, "Take heed and beware of covetousness, for one's life does not consist in the abundance of the things he possesses" (Luke 12:15).

COW (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

COZ [koz]—a form of KOZ.

COZBI [KOZ bih] (lying, deceitful)—a Midianite princess slain by Phinehas, the grandson of Aaron, because Zimri apparently took her to be his wife or concubine against the orders of Moses (Num. 25:15, 18).

COZEBA [ko ZEE buh]—a form of CHOZEBA.

CRACKNELS—KJV word for a kind of hard bread or cake (1 Kin. 14:3; cakes, NKJV; raisins, REB).

CRAFTINESS—the use of trickery or underhanded means to achieve an objective. The serpent was more crafty (Gen. 3:1, NASB, REB, NIV; subtle, KJV) than any wild creature that God made. The apostle Paul wrote, "The serpent deceived Eve by his craftiness" (2 Cor. 11:3).

CRAFTSMAN (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CRANE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CREATION—God's action in bringing the natural universe into being. The writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews in the New Testament declared, "By faith we understand that the world was framed by the word of God, so that the things which are seen were not made of things which are visible" (Heb. 11:3).

People of the pagan nations of the ancient world believed that matter was eternal and that the gods evolved out of natural processes. But the Bible teaches that God existed before creation and called the physical world into existence out of nothing. The main account of His acts of creation is found in the first two chapters of the Book of Genesis, although God as creator is a prominent theme in Isaiah 40–48 as well.

The phrase "God created" (Gen. 1:1, 21, 27) in Genesis 1 is eclipsed by another: "God said" (Gen. 1:3, 6, 7, 11, 14, 20, 24, 26, 29). Its frequency attests to its significance in stressing the way in which God created—simply by speaking a word (Ps. 33:6, 9; Heb. 11:3).

God's first act of creation was to bring into being the great watery chaos described in Genesis 1:2: "The earth was without form and void; and darkness was on the face of the deep.” His next creative act was to bring order out of chaos—to separate the land from the water. This set the stage for the creation of plant and animal life.

First God created inanimate life: grass, other vegetation, trees, and fruit trees. Then the sea was filled with living creatures, the air with flying things, and the earth with creeping things. Then God moved on in orderly fashion to create land animals.

The creation of man was left for the sixth and final day of creation because man was special and was to rule over the rest of creation. “Then God said, ‘Let us make man in Our image, according to Our likeness’ ” (Gen. 1:26). This statement has fascinated thinkers for centuries. Just what does the image of God mean? Since God is spirit—not a material substance—it must mean more than physical resemblance. To be created in God’s image means that men and women, though creatures, are akin to God.

God is Creator—the only being capable of making something from nothing. The Hebrew verb for “create” always and only has God as its subject. Yet, on a lesser level, people also have the capacity to be creative. This is one distinct meaning of the truth that we are created in God’s image. God is speaker and a ruler. People were also told to have dominion over the creation. God is holy, a moral and ethical God who is righteous. People are also morally and ethically responsible and must make moral choices. God has revealed that He is a social being (Father, Son, and Holy Spirit). People also are social beings who need relationships with others. Human experience and the biblical record suggest that these are some ways in which we reflect the image of God.

The Genesis writer also declared that God created humanity as “male and female” (Gen. 1:27). This account of creation does not give priority to either male or female. Both are needed to reflect the image of God. The most fundamental difference in humanity is not race but sex. The Greeks said that people once were androgynous—both male and female. Somehow they lost the female half and ever since have been looking for their other half. But the writer of Genesis pointed out that sex is an order of creation that is good and proper in God’s sight.

Genesis 2 contains what some scholars call a second creation account. But others point out that it focuses on specific events relating to creation as they unfolded in the Garden of Eden. It thus sets the stage for what follows in the accounts of human temptation and sin. A major emphasis of chapter 2 is the creation of woman as a companion for man. Man's incompleteness apart from woman is shown in his loneliness and frustration. None of the animals could meet Adam's need. Then the Lord created woman from Adam's rib.

Bible students have long seen symbolic truth in this rib imagery. Woman was taken from under man's arm to symbolize his protection of her. She was taken from near his heart that he might love and cherish her. She was not made from a head bone to rule over man, nor from his foot to be trampled on and degraded. Like the man, she reflects God's image. Together they formed the blessed pair needed to replenish and subdue the earth.

Many Bible students wonder about the six days of creation. Were these twenty-four-hour days or indefinite periods of time? It may help us in our interpretation if we remember that we use the word "day" in several ways, even as the ancient Hebrews did. We speak of the day of reckoning, the day of opportunity, and the day of trouble. These may signify more than a twenty-four-hour day. In similar fashion, the biblical writers spoke of the "day of the Lord" and "day of visitation."

Skeptics have ridiculed the creation story in Genesis because it reports that the creation occurred in six days. But the indefinite meaning of "day" takes care of this objection. Besides, Scripture says that with the Lord, "A day is as a thousand years and a thousand years as a day" (2 Pet. 3:8). The biblical writer was not writing a scientific journal. He was moved by God's Spirit to give a revelation of spiritual reality. His primary emphasis was not on the process by which the world was created but on the Creator and His purpose.

Many of the pagan nations of the ancient world had their own creation stories. But in these stories, their gods evolved out of natural processes connected with the world itself. Ancient people believed the material universe was eternal, and it brought their gods into being. But Genesis declares that God existed before creation and is in full control of the physical universe. He called the world into being by His word. His power is absolute. He does not have to conform to nature and cannot be threatened by it. God is sovereign and does not have to share His power with other supernatural beings.

Since God created the universe out of nothing, it is His and will always serve His purpose. As He shaped creation without any interference from anyone, He will bring creation to its desired end. No power can frustrate God in His purpose to complete the process started in creation and revealed in Scripture. Our hope rests in the sovereign power of Him who created the world and then re-created us through the saving power of His Son, Jesus Christ.

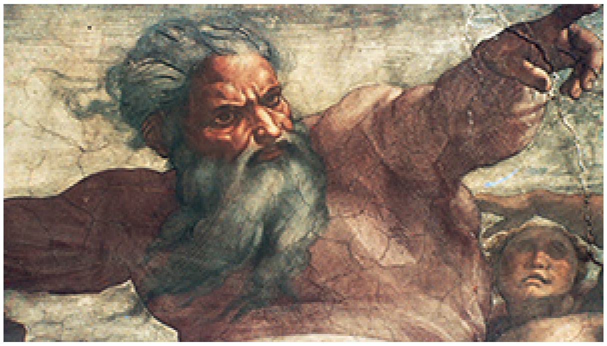

Photo by Howard Vos

• God the Creator, from a painting by Michelangelo in the Sistine Chapel in Rome.

CREATURE—any created being, humans included, brought into existence as a result of God's power and authority. The Bible declares that the Redeemer God is the sovereign Creator of all things. Through His might and power He brought the universe into existence (Gen. 1:3–24; Ps. 33:6; Heb. 11:3). Therefore, all beings, even angels, are His creatures (John 1:3; 1 Cor. 8:6). The creaturely status of all finite beings and things reveals the sovereign rule of God and the dependence of humankind and the world on Him.

Mankind, the pinnacle of God's creation, was created to have dominion in the world (Gen. 1:26–28; Ps. 8:3–8). But human beings "exchanged the truth of God for the lie and worshiped and served the creature rather than the Creator" (Rom. 1:25). God's plan for us to rule

His creation is now being fulfilled in Christ (1 Cor. 15:20–28; Phil. 2:5–11). He is establishing God's kingdom.

Redemption involves being made new creatures (2 Cor. 5:17), members of the new creation in Christ that God is bringing about through His power (Rom. 8:19). This universal kingdom of righteousness, peace, and joy will be fully revealed when Christ returns in triumph over all rebellious creatures and God creates a new heaven and earth (1 Cor. 15:20–28).

CREDITOR (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CREED—a brief, authoritative, formal statement of religious beliefs. The word "creed" comes from the Latin word credo ("I believe"), the first word of both the Nicene Creed and the Apostles' Creed.

The following are the three classic, or most historically important, creeds of the church:

The Nicene Creed. A creed adopted by the First Council of Nicaea (A.D. 325) and revised by the First Council of Constantinople (A.D. 381). The First Council of Nicaea, convened by the Roman emperor Constantine the Great (ruled A.D. 306–337), rejected a heresy known as Arianism, which denied the divinity of Jesus. The Nicene Creed formally proclaimed the deity of Christ and His equality among the persons of the Trinity.

Nicene Creed

I believe in one God the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth, and of all things visible and invisible.

And I believe in one Lord, Jesus Christ, the onlybegotten Son of God, born of the Father before all ages, God of God, Light of Light, true God of true God; begotten, not made, of one substance with the Father, by whom all things were made, who for us and for our salvation came down from heaven. And He became flesh by the Holy Spirit of the Virgin Mary and was made man. He was also crucified for us, suffered under Pontius Pilate, and was buried. And on the third day He rose again, according to the Scriptures. He ascended into heaven and sits at the right hand of the Father. He will come again in glory to judge the living and the dead. And of His kingdom there will be no end.

And I believe in the Holy Spirit, the Lord and Giver of life, who proceeds from the Father and the Son, who together with the Father and the Son is adored and glorified, and who spoke through the prophets, and one holy, Catholic, and Apostolic Church. I confess one baptism for the forgiveness of sins. And I await the resurrection of the dead. And the life of the world to come. Amen.

The Athanasian Creed. A Christian creed originating in Europe in the fourth century and relating especially to the doctrines of the Trinity and the bodily INCARNATION of Christ. This creed was originally ascribed to Saint Athanasius (A.D. 293?—373), but it is now believed to be the work of an unknown writer of the time.

Athanasian Creed

We believe and confess that our Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is at once both God and Man. He is God of the substance of the Father, begotten before the worlds, and He is man, of the substance of his Mother, born in the world; perfect God; perfect man, of reasoning soul and human flesh consisting; equal to the Father as touching His Godhead; less than the Father as touching His manhood, who, although He be God and man, yet He is not two, but is one Christ; one, however, not by change of Godhead into flesh but by taking of manhood into God; one altogether, not by confusion of substance, but by unity of person.

For as reasoning soul and flesh is one man, so God and man is one Christ; who suffered for our salvation, descended to the world below, rose again from the dead, ascended into heaven, and sat down at the right hand of the Father to come from thence to judge the quick and the dead, at whose coming all men shall rise again with their bodies, and shall give account for their own deeds. And they that have done good will go into life eternal; they that have done evil into eternal fire.

The Apostles' Creed. This well-known creed lies at the basis of most other religious statements of belief. Although it bears the name of the apostles, it did not originate with them. It was written after the close of the New Testament, and it held an important place in the early church. This creed has been appealed to by all branches of the church as a test of authentic faith.

Apostles' Creed

I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth, And in Jesus Christ His only Son our Lord; who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary, suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, died, and was buried. He descended into hell. The third day He rose again from the dead. He ascended into heaven, and sitteth on the right hand of God the Father Almighty; from thence He shall come to judge the quick and the dead.

I believe in the Holy Ghost, the holy Catholic Church, the communion of saints, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the body, and the life everlasting.

◆

CREEPING THINGS—a phrase in the Bible that designates a teeming mass of miscellaneous animal life that moves along the ground (Gen. 1:24–26). It apparently refers to smaller mammals, reptiles, and insects. According to the Book of Genesis, God gave human beings dominion over birds, fish, and cattle as well as "every creeping thing" (Gen. 1:26). Also see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE.

CRESCENS [KRESS enz]—a Christian mentioned by Paul (2 Tim. 4:10). For some reason, Crescens left Paul and departed for Galatia.

CRETANS [KREET uhns]—inhabitants of the island of CRETE in the Mediterranean Sea. The Book of Acts records that Cretans were among those present in Jerusalem on the Day of Pentecost (Acts 2:11). Cretan lifestyle was known for its excesses. In writing to Titus, Paul quoted from the Greek poet Epimenides of Knossos (about 600 B.C.) that "Cretans are always liars, evil beasts, lazy gluttons" (Titus 1:12). This must have presented a real challenge for Titus, who was assigned the responsibility to "set in order the things that are lacking" in the Cretan church (Titus 1:5).

CRETE [kreet]—an island in the Mediterranean Sea (see Map 7, C–2) where a ship on which the apostle Paul was sailing was struck by a storm. Crete is about 258 kilometers (160 miles) long and varies between 11 and 49 kilometers (7 and 30 miles) wide (Acts 27:7, 12–13, 21). It is probably to be identified with CAPHTOR (Deut. 2:23; Amos 9:7), the place from which the Philistines (Caphtorim) originated. A number of legends are associated with Crete, particularly those involving King Minos and the Minotaur (the half-bull, half-man monster).

The island was captured by the Romans in 68–66 B.C. and made a Roman province.

During his voyage to Rome, Paul's ship touched at Fair Havens, a harbor on the south coast of Crete (Acts 27:8). Not heeding Paul's advice about the weather, the Roman soldier who held Paul in custody agreed with the captain and set sail for Crete's large harbor at Phoenix. The result was a shipwreck at Malta (Acts 27:9—28:1).

Also see CRETANS.

Photo by Howard Vos

• The central plain of the island of Crete, with the ruins of the royal palace of Knossos in the foreground.

CRIB—a feeding trough for livestock (Is. 1:3; manger, NIV, NASB; stall, REB).

CRICKET (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CRIME—any act forbidden by civil law and punishable upon conviction. As used in the Bible, however, the word crime refers to any act against God's moral law as well as any transgression against God, or people, or both (Judg. 9:24; Ezek. 7:23; Acts 18:14). Specific crimes prohibited in the Bible include MURDER (Mark 15:7), theft (Josh. 7:21–25), LYING (Is. 28:15), FORNICATION (Gal. 5:19), and ADULTERY (Ex. 20:14).

CRIMINAL (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CRIMINALS, TWO—two men who were crucified at the same time as Jesus, one on His right hand and the other on His left (Luke 23:32–33, 39; malefactors, KJV). Apparently, these men not only broke the law but also were guilty of armed, violent rebellion against Roman rule.

CRIMSON (see COLORS OF THE BIBLE).

CRISPING PINS—KJV words for money bags (Is. 3:22; purses, NKJV, NIV; money purses, NASB; handbags, NRSV).

CRISPUS [KRIS pus]—the ruler of the Jewish synagogue at Corinth who was converted to Christ (Acts 18:8) and personally baptized by the apostle Paul (1 Cor. 1:14).

CRITICISM (see BIBLICAL CRITICISM).

CROCODILE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CROCUS (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

CROOKBACKED (see DISABILITIES AND DEFORMITIES).

CROP—a word in the Bible that means (1) the gullet of a bird (Lev. 1:16), (2) “to chop” or “pluck” (Ezek. 17:4, 22), and (3) the harvest of a land (Ex. 9:32; Matt. 13:8, 26).

CROSS—an upright wooden stake or post on which condemned people were executed. Before the manner of Jesus’ death caused the cross to symbolize the very heart of the Christian faith, the Greek word for cross referred primarily to a pointed stake used in rows to form the walls of a defensive stockade.

It was common in the biblical period for the decapitated bodies of executed persons to be publicly displayed by impaling them on stakes to discourage civil disobedience and to mock defeated military foes (Gen. 40:19; 1 Sam. 31:8–13). This gruesome practice may explain how the stake eventually came to be used as an instrument of civil and military punishment. Such stakes came to be eventually fitted with crossbeams as instruments of humiliation, torture, and execution for persons convicted as enemies of the state (foreign soldiers, rebels and spies, for example) or of civil criminals (such as robbers).

Usage in the Ancient World. During the Old Testament period, there is no evidence that the Jews fastened people to a stake or a cross as a means of execution. The Law directed death by stoning (Lev. 20:2; Deut. 22:24). But the Law did permit the public display (or "hanging") of a lawbreaker's body "on a tree" (Deut. 21:22), strictly commanding that the "body shall not remain overnight on the tree, but you shall surely bury him that day" (Deut. 21:23; also see John 19:31).

Grisly as such a practice seems today, it did set Israel apart from other nations. The degrading practice most often used throughout the ancient world was to allow the victim to rot in public. Persons so displayed (or "hanged") after execution by stoning for breaking Israel's Law were said to be "accursed of God" (Deut. 21:23). This helps explain the references to Jesus' being killed "by hanging on a tree" (Acts 5:30; 10:39) and the statement that Jesus was "cursed" in Galatians 3:13. Although Jesus died in a different manner, He was publicly displayed as a criminal and enemy of the state.

Ancient writers do not tell us much about how execution on a stake or cross was carried out. But excavated relief sculptures do show that the Assyrians executed their captured enemies by forcing their living bodies down onto pointed stakes. This barbaric cruelty was not crucifixion as we think of it today but impalement.

Scholars are not certain when a crossbeam was added to the simple stake. Jeremiah's mention of princes being "hung up by their hands" (Lam. 5:12) by the Babylonians may refer to the use of a crossbeam. But there is no way of knowing whether the prophet speaks of a method of execution or the dishonoring of bodies killed in battle. The classical Greek historians Herodotus and Thucydides refer to the stake or cross as a method of execution during the time of the Persians. But it is not clear whether the victim was tied or nailed to the wood or impaled.

Ezra 6:11 may imply that the Persians continued to use impalement as a method of execution. The references to "hanging" in Esther (2:23; 5:14) probably refer to either impalement or crucifixion. The "hangman's noose" was not commonly used in Persia during the biblical period. The word translated as "gallows" in the NKJV refers not to a scaffold for hanging with a rope, but a pole or stake for impaling.

Crucifixion on a stake or cross was practiced by the Greeks, notably Alexander the Great, who hung 2,000 people on crosses when the city of Tyre was destroyed. During the period between Greek and Roman control of Palestine, the Jewish ruler Alexander Jannaeus crucified 800 Pharisees who opposed him at Bethome. But these executions were condemned as detestable and abnormal by decent-minded people of Jannaeus's day as well as by the later Jewish historian, Josephus.

From the early days of the Roman Republic, death on the cross was used for rebellious slaves and bandits, although Roman citizens were rarely subjected to this method of execution. The practice continued well beyond the New Testament period as one of the supreme punishments for military and political crimes such as desertion, spying, revealing secrets, rebellion, and sedition. Following the conversion of the emperor Constantine to Christianity, the cross became a sacred symbol, and its use by Romans as a means of torture and death was abolished.

Death on a Cross. Those sentenced to death on a cross in the Roman period were usually beaten with leather lashes—a procedure that often resulted in severe loss of blood. Victims were then generally forced to carry the upper crossbeam to the execution site, where the central stake was already set up.

After being fastened to the crossbeam on the ground with ropes—or, in rare cases, nails through the wrist—the naked victim was then hoisted with the crossbeam against the standing vertical stake. A block or peg was sometimes fastened to the stake as a crude seat. The feet were then tied or nailed to the stake.

The recent discovery near Jerusalem of the bones of a crucifixion victim suggests that the knees were bent up side by side, parallel to the crossbeam, and the nail was then driven through the sides of the ankles. Death by suffocation or exhaustion normally followed only after a long period of agonizing pain.

The Shape of the Cross. In time the simple pointed stake first used for execution was modified. The four most important of the resulting crosses are: (1) the Latin cross (shaped like a lower case "t"), on which it seems likely that Jesus died for our sins, because of the notice placed above His head (Matt. 27:37); (2) the St. Anthony’s cross, which has the crossbeam at the top (shaped like a capital “T”); (3) the St. Andrew’s cross, which is shaped like a capital “X”; (4) the so-called Greek cross which has the crossbeam in the center (shaped like a plus sign).

Significance of the Cross. The authors of the gospels tell us that the Lord Jesus spoke of the cross before His death (Matt. 10:38; Mark 10:21; Luke 14:27) as a symbol of the necessity of full commitment (even unto death) for those who would be His disciples. But the major significance of the cross after Jesus’ death and resurrection is its use as a symbol of Jesus’ willingness to suffer for our sins (Phil. 2:8; Heb. 12:2) so that we might be reconciled (2 Cor. 5:19; Col. 1:20) to God and know His peace (Eph. 2:16).

Thus the cross symbolizes the glory of the Christian gospel (1 Cor. 1:17): the fact that through this offensive means of death (1 Cor. 1:23; Gal. 5:11), the debt of sin against us was “nailed to the cross” (Col. 2:14), and we, having “been crucified with Christ” (Gal. 2:20), have been freed from sin and death and made alive to God (Rom. 6:6–11).

The cross, then, is the symbol of Jesus’ love, God’s power to save, and the thankful believer’s unreserved commitment to Christian discipleship. To those who know the salvation that Christ gained for us through His death, it is a “wondrous cross” indeed. Also see CRUCIFIXION OF CHRIST.

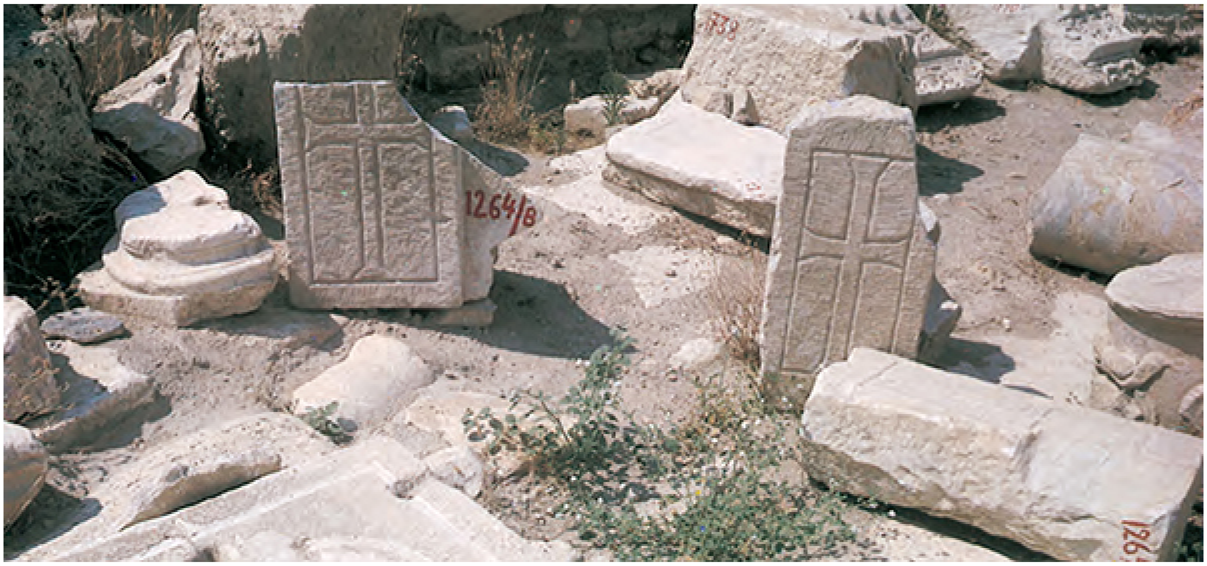

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

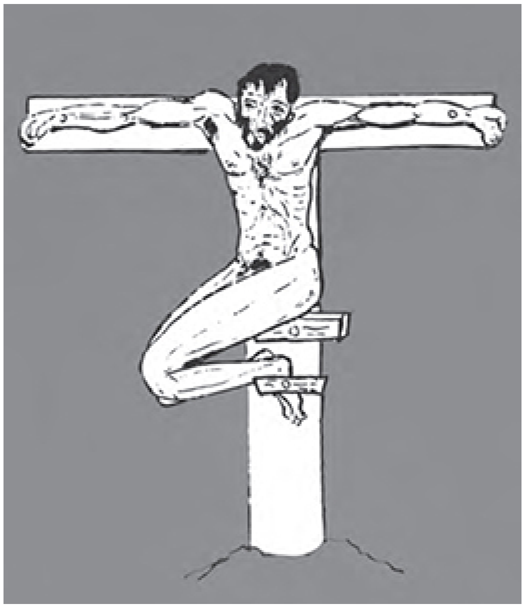
• Ruins of a church at Laodicea, showing engravings of two Latin crosses and the distinctive shape of a Greek cross in the foreground.



Drawing by Gaalyah Cornfeld

• This drawing of a crucifixion is based on the remains of a crucified man from the first century A.D. discovered in a cave in Jerusalem. Both of his feet had been pierced with a spike just below the heel.

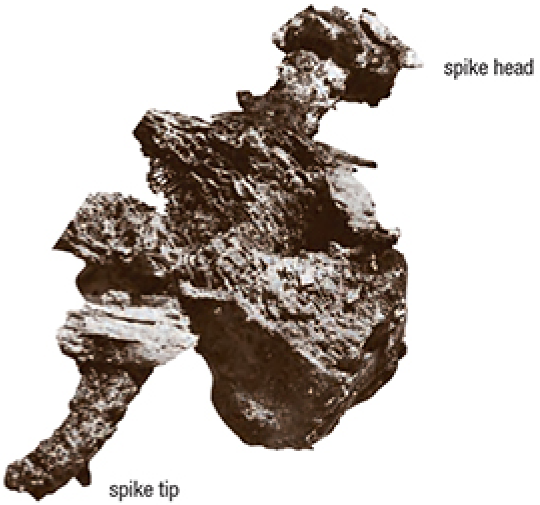


Photo by Gaalyah Cornfeld

• The actual remains of a crucifixion victim discovered by archaeologists, with one spike driven through the victim's feet bones.

CROW (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CROWN—special headgear used to symbolize a person's high status and authority. Several different words in the Hebrew and Greek languages of the Bible are translated as "crown." Persons in the Bible who are described as wearing crowns include Vashti (Esth. 1:11) and Esther (Esth. 2:17). The high priest and the king in the early history of the nation of Israel also apparently wore crowns as a mark of their office and authority (Lev. 8:9; 2 Sam. 1:10).

The wreath of leaves awarded the winner of an athletic competition in the Grecian games was also described by the apostle Paul as a crown (1 Cor. 9:25; 2 Tim. 4:8). The Roman soldiers mocked Jesus on the cross by placing a crown of thorns on His head, taunting Him as "King of the Jews" (Matt. 27:29; also Mark 15:17; John 19:2, 5).

The Book of Revelation portrays Christ with many crowns on His head, signifying His kingly authority (Rev. 19:12). Our inheritance as Christians who follow the will of our Lord is also described symbolically as a crown. As a reward for our faithfulness, we will receive an imperishable crown (1 Cor. 9:25), one that will not wither or fade away, and a crown of eternal life (James 1:12; 1 Pet. 5:4).

CROWN OF THORNS—a mock symbol of authority fashioned by the Roman soldiers and placed on Jesus' head shortly before His crucifixion (Matt. 27:29; Mark 15:17; John 19:2, 5). Crowns were symbols of honor and authority in the Greek and Roman worlds. Jesus' crown of thorns was probably meant to make Him an object of mockery and ridicule. "Hail, King of the Jews!" (Matt. 27:29; Mark 15:18; John 19:2) they scoffed, as they engaged in their cruel and brutal sport. But Jesus' love was so strong that He patiently endured this mockery to accomplish His mission on earth.

CRUCIFIXION OF CHRIST—the method of torture and execution used by the Romans to put Christ to death. At a crucifixion the victim usually was nailed or tied to a wooden stake and left to die.

Crucifixion was used by many nations of the ancient world, including Assyria, Media, and Persia. Alexander the Great of Greece crucified 2,000 inhabitants of Tyre when he captured the city. The Romans later adopted this method and used it often throughout their empire. Crucifixion was the Romans' most severe form of execution, so it was reserved only for slaves and criminals. No Roman citizen could be crucified.

Crucifixion involved attaching the victim with nails through the wrists or with leather thongs to a crossbeam attached to a vertical stake. Sometimes blocks or pins were put on the stake to give victims some support as they hung suspended from the crossbeam. At times the feet were also nailed to the vertical stake. As the victim hung dangling by the arms, the blood could no longer circulate to the vital organs. Only by supporting themselves on the seat or pin could victims gain relief.

But gradually exhaustion set in, and death followed, although usually not for several days. If victims had been severely beaten, they would not live this long. To hasten death, the executioners sometimes broke the victims' legs with a club. Then they could no longer support their bodies to keep blood circulating, and death quickly followed. Usually bodies were left to rot or to be eaten by scavengers.

To the Israelites, impalement was the most disgusting form of death: “He who is hanged is accursed of God” (Deut. 21:23). Yet the Jewish Sanhedrin sought and obtained Roman authorization to have Jesus crucified (Mark 15:13–15). As was the custom, the charge against Jesus was attached to the cross; He was offered a brew to deaden His senses, but He refused (Mark 15:23). There was no need for the soldiers to break His legs to hasten death. By the ninth hour (Mark 15:25, 34, 37), probably 3:00 P.M.—in only six hours—Jesus was already dead (John 19:31–33). Jesus’ body was not left to rot; the disciples were able to secure Pilate’s permission to give Him a proper burial.

The cross has been a major stumbling block in the way of the Jews, preventing the majority of them from accepting Jesus as the MESSIAH. The apostle Paul summed up the importance of the crucifixion best: “We preach Christ crucified, to the Jews a stumbling block and to the Greeks foolishness, but to those who are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God” (1 Cor. 1:23–24). Out of the ugliness and agony of crucifixion, God accomplished the greatest good of all—the redemption of sinners.

Also see CROSS.

CRUSE [krooze]—KJV word for JAR.

CRYSTAL (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

CUBIT (see WEIGHTS AND MEASURES).

CUCKOO (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

CUCUMBER (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

CUD—partially digested food regurgitated from the first stomach of an animal and chewed again. The Hebrews were forbidden by the law of Moses from eating animals that chewed the cud (Lev. 11:3; Deut. 14:6).

CUDGEL (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

CUMI [KOO me] (see TALITHA CUMI).

CUMMIN (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

CUN [kun]—a form of CHUN.

CUNEIFORM [kyu NAY uh form] (wedge-shaped)—a system of writing developed before 3000 B.C. in Mesopotamia (the lower Tigris and Euphrates Valley) probably by the Sumerians and then adopted and modified by the Akkadians, Hurrians, Hittites, Elamites, Persians, and Canaanites from Ugarit.

The wedge-shaped signs of cuneiform writing were carved on stone and metal or inscribed with a stylus on clay tablets. These clay tablets received the wedge marks while soft and moist, but they became as hard as stone after they were dried in the sun or baked in a kiln. Thousands of such tablets were discovered by archaeologists at the site of Ras Shamra (ancient Ugarit, a Canaanite settlement).

Cuneiform was originally a pictographic form of writing, but it soon was used to signify syllables and consonants. Variations of cuneiform scripts were developed for Ugaritic and Old Persian writing. Also see WRITING.

CUP—a small container used for drinking water (Matt. 10:42), wine (Jer. 35:5), and other liquids. The cup is spoken of often in the Bible in a literal sense. Figuratively, the image of a cup also expresses several important ideas.

The cups described in the Bible may be of silver (Gen. 44:2, 12, 16–17) or gold (Jer. 51:7; Rev. 17:4) and have a decorated brim (1 Kin. 7:26; 2 Chr. 4:5). Kings had an official called a cupbearer (1 Kin. 10:5; 2 Chr. 9:4; Neh. 1:11) who prepared and handed him his drink (Gen. 40:11, 13, 21). His task was to sample the drink to make sure it contained no poison. Such an Assyrian official serving in a military capacity was called RABSHAKEH (2 Kin. 18:17; Is. 36:2).

According to the teachings of Jesus, the lowly service of giving a cup of cold water (Matt. 10:42; Mark 9:41) carries its reward. The "cup of consolation" is the drink shared with the grieving (Jer. 16:7). The "cup of blessing" (1 Cor. 10:16) refers to the cup over which a blessing is said.

For the wicked, the cup is a calamitous fate (Ps. 11:6; Ezek. 23:33). To experience the Lord's wrath is called drinking the cup of His wrath (Is. 51:17; Jer. 49:12). The Lord's judgment is spoken of as an intoxicating drink of wine from a cup, causing drunkenness and staggering (Ps. 75:8). The end of a nation comes by drinking this cup (Jer. 25:15, 17, 28; Lam. 4:21; Hab. 2:16). Babylon was the cup in the Lord's hand from which nations had to drink as she overran them (Jer. 51:7). But when the Lord finishes punishing Israel, He will take the cup of trembling from the hand (Is. 51:22). This figure of drinking the cup of the Lord's wrath is taken up in the New Testament to describe the punishment of the disobedient (Rev. 14:10).

The suffering and death of Jesus was His cup (Matt. 26:39; John 18:11). For Him, the endurance of suffering was to drink the cup (Matt. 20:22–23). But through this suffering, He provided a way for our salvation.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Gold cups discovered by archaeologists in tombs at the ancient city of Mycene on the island of Crete.

CUPBEARER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

CURSE—a prayer for injury, harm, or misfortune to befall someone. Noah, for instance, pronounced a curse on Canaan (Gen. 9:25). Isaac pronounced a curse on anyone who cursed Jacob (Gen. 27:29). The soothsayer Balaam was hired by Balak, king of Moab, to pronounce a curse on the Israelites (Numbers 22–24). Goliath, the Philistine giant of Gath, "cursed David by his gods" (1 Sam. 17:43).

In Bible times, a curse was considered to be more than a mere wish that evil would befall one's enemies; it was believed to possess the power to bring about the evil the curser spoke.

In the account of the temptation and Fall, God Himself is described as cursing the serpent (Gen. 3:14–15), as well as the ground (Gen. 3:17). Although the word "curse" is not used directly of Adam and Eve, the woman is sentenced to pain in childbirth and the man is condemned to earn his living by the sweat of his face. In the New Testament, Jesus cursed the fig tree, saying, " 'Let no fruit grow on you ever again.' And immediately the fig tree withered away" (Matt. 21:19; Mark 11:14). He also taught Christians how to deal with curses: "Bless those who curse you" (Luke 6:28).

The apostle Paul spoke of the law as a curse because it pronounces a curse upon everyone "who does not continue in all things which are written in the book of the law, to do them" (Gal. 3:10). By the grace of God, however, "Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, having become a curse for us (for it is written, 'Cursed is everyone who hangs on a tree')" (Gal. 3:13). John promised that the day is coming when "there shall be no more curse" (Rev. 22:3); all those whose names are written in the Lamb's Book of Life will enjoy the abundant blessings of God.

CURTAIN—a piece of cloth or similar material that acts as a decoration, shade, or screen. The inner part of the TABERNACLE (the Holy Place and the Holy of Holies) was made of ten blue, purple, and scarlet curtains (Ex. 26:1–13; 36:8–17). Eleven curtains made of goats' hair also covered the tabernacle.

Another curtain, or "veil," of blue, purple, and scarlet yarn and fine linen thread divided the Holy Place from the Holy of Holies (Ex. 26:31–33). Still another curtain of similar design functioned as a door to the tabernacle (Ex. 26:36–37).

In the New Testament the word "curtain" refers to the curtain of the temple that separated the inner court from the outer court. This curtain was torn in two from top to bottom when Jesus died on the cross (Matt. 27:51; Mark 15:38; Luke 23:45; veil, KJV, NKJV, NASB), symbolizing the opening of a new and living way to God (Heb. 6:19; 9:3; 10:20).

CUSH [kush]—the name of two men and two lands in the Old Testament:

1. A land that bordered the Gihon River, one of the four rivers of the Garden of Eden (Gen. 2:10–14). Since the Tigris (Hiddekel) and Euphrates are mentioned, this land must have been in or near Mesopotamia. It was named after No. 2.
2. A son of Ham and grandson of Noah. His brothers settled in Egypt and Canaan, and his famous son Nimrod lived in Mesopotamia (Gen. 10:6–12; 1 Chr. 1:8–10; also Mic. 5:6).
3. A man from the tribe of Benjamin who was an enemy of David (see the title of Psalm 7).
4. The land south of Egypt, also called Nubia, which includes part of Sudan. Cush began just beyond Syene (modern Aswan; Ezek. 29:10). The Persian Empire of Ahasuerus (Xerxes, 486–465 B.C.) extended to this point, “from India to Ethiopia” (Esth. 1:1; 8:9). Precious stones came from Cush, “the topaz of Ethiopia” (Job 28:19), and the people were tall with smooth skin (Is. 18:2, 7) that could not be changed (Jer. 13:23). The prophets predicted that the distant land of Cush would be judged by God (Is. 18:1–6; Zeph. 2:12). Other texts indicate, however, that some from Cush will bring gifts to God and worship Him as their king (Ps. 68:31; Is. 11:11; 18:7). Its ancient Greek name was Ethiopia, not to be confused with the modern nation of Ethiopia (Abyssinia). Also see ETHIOPIA.

CUSHAN [KOO shan]—a name referred to in Habakkuk 3:7. It is difficult to tell whether Cushan refers to a place (some suggest Cush, Mesopotamia, or the land of Midian) or to a person—perhaps the same as “Cushan–Rishathaim king of Mesopotamia” (Judg. 3:8, 10).

CUSHAN–RISHATHAIM [koo shan rish ah THAY im] (Cushan of double wickedness)—a “king of Mesopotamia” who held Israel in bondage for eight years until its deliverance by Othniel (Judg. 3:8, 10).

CUSHI [KOO shy]—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. An ancestor of Jehudi, whom the Jewish leaders sent to ask Baruch to read the scroll of Jeremiah to them (Jer. 36:14).
2. A son of Gedaliah and the father of the prophet Zephaniah (Zeph. 1:1). Also see CUSHITE.

CUSHION (see PILLOW).

CUSHITE [KOO shyte]—a native or inhabitant of the ancient land of CUSH. Two people in the Bible are called Cushites:

1. The wife of Moses (Num. 12:1, NRSV, NIV). Some scholars, however, believe this usage of “Cushite” does not have to mean “Ethiopian” (KJV, NKJV); it also may refer to a person from northern Arabia.
2. A messenger sent by Joab to David to tell of his victory over Absalom (2 Sam. 18:21–23, 31–32; Cushi, KJV).

CUSTODIAN (see TUTOR).

CUTH, CUTHAH [kooth, KOO thuh]—a city of Babylonia, northeast of Babylon. When the king of Assyria conquered Israel, he deported the ten tribes of Israel and brought in colonists from Cuth (or Cuthah) to settle in Samaria (2 Kin. 17:24, 30).

CUTTINGS OF THE FLESH—the cutting of oneself during worship to attract the attention of the gods. This practice was strictly forbidden in ancient Israel: “You shall not cut yourselves nor shave the front of your head for the dead” (Lev. 19:28; 21:5; Deut. 14:1). A striking example of this pagan practice occurred during the ministry of the prophet ELIJAH. The priests of Baal “cut themselves . . . with knives and lances” (1 Kin. 18:28), but their pagan god paid no attention to their cries.

The folly of cutting one’s flesh is that Jesus’ body has already been sacrificed for us. Anything more would be an insult to the redemption He has already accomplished.

CUZA [KOO zuh]—a form of CHUZA.

CYMBAL (see MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS OF THE BIBLE).

CYPRESS (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

CYPRUS [SIGH prus]—a large island in the northeastern corner of the Mediterranean Sea, about 97 kilometers (60 miles) off the coast of Syria and about 66 kilometers (41 miles) off the coast of Cilicia (modern Turkey; see Map 7, D–2). Although Cyprus is a rocky island, many nations sought its rich copper deposits and timber reserves (especially the cypress tree). Consequently, in the course of its history, Cyprus frequently was conquered by many powerful nations, including the Mycenaeans, Phoenicians, Assyrians, and Persians.

After Alexander the Great, the Egyptian Ptolemies controlled Cyprus until the Romans took it in 58 B.C. During the Roman period it was joined to the province of Cilicia, then made an independent imperial province; and in 22 B.C. it became a senatorial province, with a proconsul in charge at the capital city of Paphos.

The name Cyprus is not found in the Old Testament; but because extra-biblical texts refer to Alashiya as a primary source of copper, many believe that ELISHAH (Gen. 10:4; 1 Chr. 1:7; Ezek. 27:7) is Cyprus. KITTIM is another Old Testament name that may refer to Cyprus (Gen. 10:4; 1 Chr. 1:7). Another spelling is Chittim (Num. 24:24; Is. 23:1; Jer. 2:10, KJV).

The New Testament contains several references to Cyprus—all in the Book of Acts. Barnabas was a native “of the country of Cyprus” (Acts 4:36). The first Christians fled to Cyprus because of the persecution of the early church after the death of Stephen (Acts 8:1–4; 11:19–20). Barnabas, Mark, and Paul began their first missionary journey by stopping at Salamis, the largest city of Cyprus on the east coast of the island (Acts 13:4–5).

After the split between Paul and Barnabas, Barnabas took John Mark and returned to Cyprus to do missionary work there (Acts 15:39). Mnason, an early Christian, was from Cyprus (Acts 21:16). Later Paul sailed past the island (Acts 21:3; 27:4).

Photo by Howard Vos

- Ruins of a Greek gymnasium at the city of Salamis on the island of Cyprus. The apostle Paul visited Salamis on his first missionary journey (Acts 13:4–5).

CYRENE [sigh REE neh]—a city on the north coast of Africa founded by Dorian Greeks about 630 B.C. Cyrene was later the capital of the Roman province of Cyrenaica (ancient and modern Libya). Midway between Carthage and Alexandria—about 160 kilometers (100 miles) northeast of modern Benghazi—the city was built on a beautiful tableland nearly 610 meters (2,000 feet) above sea level.

Less than 16 kilometers (10 miles) from the sea, Cyrene attracted travelers and commerce of every kind. The city was renowned as an intellectual center; Carneades, the founder of the new Academy at Athens, and Aristippus, the Epicurean philosopher and friend of Socrates, were among its distinguished citizens. The city surrendered to Alexander the Great in 331 B.C. and passed into the hands of Rome in 96 B.C.

Although Cyrene is not mentioned in the Old Testament, it was an important city in New Testament times because of its large Jewish population. A Cyrenian named Simon was pressed into service to carry the cross of Jesus (Matt. 27:32; Mark 15:21; Luke 23:26). Cyrenians were present at Pentecost (Acts 2:10) and were converted and subsequently scattered in the persecution that followed Stephen's death (Acts 11:19–20).

Once a very populous city, Cyrene declined for several reasons. In a Jewish revolt in A.D. 115–116, over 200,000 inhabitants of the city were killed in the rioting. A disastrous earthquake in A.D. 365 contributed to its further decline. With the Arab invasion of A.D. 642, the city came to an end. The site is now a wasteland occupied by Bedouins.

CYRENIUS [sigh REE nih us]—a form of QUIRINIUS.

CYRUS [SIGH russ]—the powerful king of Persia (559–530 B.C.), sometimes called Cyrus the Great, who allowed the Jewish captives to return to their homeland in Jerusalem after he led the Persians to become the dominant nation in the ancient world. Within twenty years after becoming king of Persia, Cyrus had conquered the Medes, Lydians, and Babylonians (549, 547, and 539 B.C., respectively). He is praised most highly, in the Old Testament, in Isaiah 44:28 and 45:1, where he is called God's "shepherd" and His "anointed." He is the only pagan ruler to be honored with the latter title.

Cyrus first appears in the Old Testament in connection with the release of the Jewish captives (taken in the Babylonian captivity of Judah), when he proclaimed their return from CAPTIVITY (2 Chr. 36:22–23; Ezra 1:1–4). This restoration, which was highlighted by the rebuilding of the TEMPLE in Jerusalem, had been prophesied by Jeremiah (Jer. 29:10–14; also see Is. 44:28). The Book of Ezra contains a number of reports on the progress of the work related to the decree of Cyrus (Ezra 3:7; 4:3, 5; 5:13–14, 17; 6:3, 14). The prophet Daniel was a member of his court (Dan. 1:21; 6:28; 10:1).

Cyrus was known in Persia as a wise and tolerant ruler. He was able to gain the goodwill of the varied ethnic and religious groups within his large empire, which extended from India to the western edge of Asia

Minor (modern Turkey). The Old Testament describes him as chosen by the Lord God of Israel as the deliverer of His people. It was not that Cyrus became a follower of Israel's God; rather, he described himself as the one who received "all the kingdoms of the earth." He declared that God "commanded me to build Him a house at Jerusalem" (2 Chr. 36:23). The famous Cyrus Cylinder, containing records of Cyrus' reign, revealed that Babylon's chief god, Marduk, had accepted Cyrus as "righteous prince," and had appointed him ruler "over the whole world."

Ezra 6:1–12 gives some idea of the careful organization carried out by Cyrus in relation to the rebuilding of the Jewish temple in Jerusalem. Its dimensions and the materials and supplies required are carefully described, along with the specification of severe penalties for anyone who would change his orders regarding its construction.

Cyrus' reign ended in 530 B.C., when he was killed in battle. His tomb still stands at Pasargadae in southwestern Iran. He was succeeded by his son, Cambyses II.

D

DABAREH [DAB ah reh]—a form of DABERATH.

DABBASHETH [DAB bah shehth]—a border town of the tribe of Zebulun (Josh. 19:11; Dabbesheth, NRSV, NIV).

DABBESHETH [DAB bah shehth]—a form of DABBASHETH.

DABERATH [DAB uh rath]—a city of the tribe of Issachar assigned to the Levites (Josh. 19:12; 21:28; Dabareh, KJV; 1 Chr. 6:72). It is now identified as modern Daburiyeh at the northwest slope of Mount Tabor.

DAGGER (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

DAGON [DAY gun] (see GODS, PAGAN).

DAILY—occurring every day. The Israelite day lasted from one sunset to the next (Ex. 12:18). When Jesus said, "Give us this day our daily bread" (Matt. 6:11; Luke 11:3), he meant for us to trust God to provide for our needs every day.

DAILY OFFERING (see SACRIFICIAL OFFERINGS).

DALAIAH [duh LAY ah]—a form of DELAIAH.

DALETH [DAH leth]—the fourth letter of the Hebrew alphabet, used as a heading over Psalm 119:25–32. In the original Hebrew language, each of these eight verses begins with the letter daleth. Also see ACROSTIC.

DALMANUTHA [dal muh NEW thuh]—a place on the western shore of the Sea of Galilee (Mark 8:10). The parallel passage in Matthew 15:39 has Magdala (KJV, NKJV) or Magadan (NRSV, NIV). Jesus came to this region after His miraculous feeding of the four thousand.

DALMATIA [dal MAY she uh]—a district of the Roman Empire north of Greece on the shore of the Adriatic Sea. The apostle Paul sent Titus to this mountainous region (2 Tim. 4:10), and Paul himself preached the gospel in Illyricum (Rom. 15:19), which was in roughly the same area as Dalmatia.

DALPHON [dal FON]—the second of the ten sons of Haman, who was the adviser to King Ahasuerus. All of Haman's sons were hanged like their father (Esth. 9:7).

DAMAGES (see LAW).

DAMARIS [DAM uh riss]—a woman of Athens converted as a result of Paul's sermon on Mars' Hill (Acts 17:34). The fact that she was singled out along with Dionysius the Areopagite, one of the court judges, may indicate she was a woman of distinction.

DAMASCENES [DAM uh scenes] (belonging to Damascus)—natives or inhabitants of Damascus, which is called "the city of the Damascenes" (2 Cor. 11:32).

DAMASCUS [duh MASS cuss]—the oldest continually-inhabited city in the world and capital of Syria (Is. 7:8), located northeast of the Sea of Galilee (see Map 3, D–1).

Damascus was situated on the border of the desert at the intersection of some of the most important highways in the ancient Near Eastern world. Three major caravan routes passed through Damascus. Major roads extended from the city to the southwest into Canaan and Egypt, straight south to Edom and the Red Sea, and east to Babylonia. Because of its ideal location, the city became a trade center. Its major exports (Ezek. 27:18) included a patterned cloth called "damask." Egypt, Arabia, and Mesopotamia, as well as Canaan, were some of the trade neighbors that made Damascus the "heart of Syria."

Damascus owed its prosperity to two rivers, the Abana and the Pharpar (2 Kin. 5:12). These rivers provided an abundant source of water for agriculture. The Syrian people were so proud of these streams that Naaman the Syrian leper almost passed up his opportunity to be healed when the prophet Elisha asked him to dip himself in the waters of the Jordan River in Israel. He thought of the Jordan as an inferior stream in comparison with these majestic rivers in his homeland (2 Kin. 5:9–14).

History. The Bible first mentions the city as the hometown of Eliezer, Abraham's faithful servant.

Early Egyptian texts refer to Egypt's control over Damascus, but this influence did not last long. By the time of David's reign, Syria (Aram) was a powerful state with Damascus as its capital. David defeated the Syrians and stationed his own troops in Damascus (2 Sam. 8:5–6; 1 Chr. 18:5–6). During Solomon's reign, however, God allowed Rezon (1 Kin. 11:23–25), Solomon's enemy, to take Syria from Israel's control because of Solomon's sins. Rezon founded a powerful dynasty based in Damascus that lasted more than 200 years.

Shortly after Solomon's death, the king of Damascus formed a powerful league with other Aramean states. This alliance resulted in many years of conflict between Israel and Damascus. First, Ben-Hadad I of Damascus defeated King Baasha of Israel (1 Kin. 15:16–20; 2 Chr. 16:1–4). Later, God miraculously delivered King Ahab of Israel and his small army from the superior Syrian forces (1 Kin. 20:1–30).

Even after this miraculous deliverance, Ahab made a covenant with Ben-Hadad II against God's will (1 Kin. 20:31–43). Ahab was killed a few years later in a battle with Syria (1 Kin. 22:29–38).

In the midst of these wars, the prophet Elijah was instructed by God to anoint Hazael as the new king of Damascus (1 Kin. 19:15). King Joram of Israel successfully opposed Hazael for a time (2 Kin. 13:4–5), but the situation was eventually reversed. Hazael severely oppressed both Israel and Judah during later years (2 Kin. 13:3, 22).

Much later, God sent Rezin, king of Syria, and Pekah, king of Israel, against wicked King Ahaz of Judah (2 Kin. 16:1–6). Ahaz called on the Assyrians, who had become a powerful military force, for help (2 Kin. 16:7). The Assyrian King Tiglath-Pileser responded by conquering Syria, overthrowing the Aramean dynasty, killing Rezin, and destroying Damascus (732 B.C.), just as the prophets Amos and Isaiah had prophesied (Is. 17:1; Amos 1:4–5). This marked the end of Syria as an independent nation. The city of Damascus was also reduced to a fraction of its former glory.

The exact date of the reconstruction of Damascus is unknown, but such an excellent location could not long remain weak and insignificant. Damascus was the residence of Assyrian and Persian governors for five centuries after its conquest by Tiglath-Pileser. Still later, the city was conquered by Alexander the Great, who made it a provincial capital. In 64 B.C. the Romans invaded Syria, making it a province with Damascus as the seat of government.

All references to Damascus in the New Testament are associated with the apostle Paul’s conversion and ministry. During this time, the city was part of the kingdom of Aretas (2 Cor. 11:32), an Arabian prince who held his kingdom under the Romans. The New Testament reports that Paul was converted while traveling to Damascus to persecute early Christians who lived in the city (Acts 9:1–8). After his dramatic conversion, Paul went to the house of Judas, where God sent Ananias, a Christian who lived in Damascus, to heal Paul of his blindness (Acts 9:10–22).

Paul preached boldly in the Jewish synagogues in Damascus, but eventually he was forced to flee the city because of the wrath of those to whom he preached. The governor of Damascus tried to capture Paul, but the apostle escaped in a large basket through an opening in the city wall (Acts 9:25; 2 Cor. 11:32–33).

Little physical change has taken place in the city of Damascus since biblical times. The long streets are filled with open-air markets that sell the same type of ancient wares. But modern Damascus does show the strong influence of Muslim culture. The most important building in Damascus is the Great Mosque, a Muslim shrine built during the eighth century A.D. on the site of a former Christian church.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Roman gate and entrance to the "street called Straight" in the ancient city of Damascus, Syria (Acts 9:10–11).

DAMN, DAMNATION (see CONDEMN, CONDEMNATION).

DAN [dan] (a judge)—the name of a man and a city in Israel named after him:

1. The fifth son of Jacob and the first born to Rachel's handmaid Bilhah (Gen. 30:1–6). Dan had one son—Hushim (Gen. 46:23), or Shuham (Num. 26:42). Jacob's blessing of Dan predicted:

   > Dan shall judge his people
   > As one of the tribes of Israel.
   > Dan shall be a serpent by the way,
   > A viper by the path,
   > That bites the horse's heels,
   > So that its rider shall fall backward (Gen. 49:16–17).

   Nothing else is known of Dan himself.
2. A city in the northern territory of the tribe of Dan, identified as the modern ruin or archaeological site known as Tell el-Qadi (see Map 3, C–1). This city was located further north than any other village in Israel during much of the Old Testament period. This explains the phrase, “from Dan to Beersheba” (Judg. 20:1), used to describe the entire territory of the Israelites from north to south.

Archaeologists excavating at Dan have uncovered remains that include an intact Middle Bronze Age mud-brick, triple-arch gateway as well as pagan altars dated to the period of Israel’s divided monarchy (see 1 Kin. 12:28–30).

Photo by Howard Vos

• An altar for pagan worship at the city of Dan. Portions of the altar were constructed by King Ahab of Israel.

DAN, CAMP OF—a place in southern Palestine “between Zorah and Eshtol” (Judg. 13:25) where God’s Spirit stirred SAMSON before he became a judge among the Hebrew tribes. Members of the tribe of Dan camped there before settling permanently further to the north (Judg. 18:12; Mahameh Dan, NIV).

DAN, TRIBE OF—the tribe of Dan, descended from the son of Jacob. This tribe never lived up to its promise. The area allotted to Dan included the towns of Aijalon, Ekron, Eltekeh, and Zorah in the west central part of Canaan (Josh. 19:40–46; 21:5, 23–24) and stretched to Joppa on the Mediterranean Sea. The Danites, however, were unable to conquer much of the territory assigned to them. The original inhabitants, the Amorites, kept the Danites confined to the hill country of Ephraim and Benjamin. Unable to conquer their allotted territory, some members of the tribe of Dan migrated far to the northernmost area of the Promised Land and conquered the isolated city of LAISH, which they renamed Dan. The tribe's one glorious moment occurred when the mighty Danite SAMSON judged Israel (Judg. 13–16).

Apparently, Dan was among the tribes that were the least supportive of the Israelite tribes. The Song of Deborah, which celebrates the Israelite victory over the Canaanite king Jabin and his mighty general Sisera, reproves the tribes of Gilead, Dan, and Asher. Of Dan, Deborah asked: "And why did Dan remain on ships?" (Judg. 5:17). Dan's apparent lack of interest in assisting the other tribes suggests that Dan, situated on Israel's northernmost border, had more in common with its foreign neighbors to the north than with Israel's other tribes.

The exclusion of the tribe of Dan from the sealing of the twelve tribes (Rev. 7:5–8) should not be overlooked. It appears that Dan had been cut off from the other tribes of Israel. However, Ezekiel prophesied a "portion for Dan" (Ezek. 48:1).

(see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

DANCING—rhythmic movement of the body, usually done to musical accompaniment. Among the Israelites, dancing generally occurred among women, either singly or in groups. It was a way of celebrating joyous occasions. Indeed, dancing became a symbol of joy, the opposite of mourning (Ps. 30:11; Eccl. 3:4; Luke 15:25).

The Bible gives several examples of dancing. Groups of women danced at celebrations of military victories (1 Sam. 18:16). The dancing of the virgins at Shiloh was probably part of a religious celebration (Judg. 21:19–23). Occasionally, children imitated the dance in their play (Job. 21:11; Matt. 11:17).

The Bible also gives a well-known example of a man dancing. Wearing a linen ephod (the outer garment worn by priests), David "danced before the LORD with all his might" (2 Sam. 6:14) when the ARK OF THE COVENANT was brought up to Jerusalem from the house of Obed-Edom.

Dancing by the Israelites was usually accompanied by the rhythmic beating of timbrels—or tambourines (Judg. 11:34). On great national occasions, Israel also praised the Lord with stringed instruments, flutes, and cymbals (Ps. 150:4). Men and women never danced together. Even on those occasions where both sexes participated in the sacred professional dances, they always danced separately (Ps. 68:25; Jer. 31:13). Dancing for sensual entertainment was unheard of in Israel.

Salome's infamous dance, which won her John the Baptist's head on a platter, was in the tradition of Greek dancing, a sensual art form rather than an act of worship (Matt. 14:6).

• Egyptian dancers and musicians practice their skills in this carving from a temple of Queen Hatshepsut at Karnak, Egypt.

DANIEL [DAN yuhl] (God is my judge)—the name of three or four men in the Bible:

1. A son of David and Abigail (1 Chr. 3:1). He is also called Chileab (2 Sam. 3:3).
2. A priest of the family of Ithamar who returned with Ezra from the captivity (Ezra 8:2). Daniel sealed the covenant in the days of Nehemiah (Neh. 10:6).

3. A wise (Ezek. 28:3) and righteous man (perhaps non-Israelite), mentioned together with Noah and Job (Ezek. 14:14, 20), to be identified with an ancient Canaanite worthy named Daniel or equated with No. 4.
4. A prophet during the period of the captivity of God's Covenant People in Babylon and Persia (Dan. 1:6—12:9; Matt. 24:15). Daniel also wrote the book in the Old Testament that bears his name.

   Daniel was a teenager when he was taken from Jerusalem into captivity by the Babylonians in 605 B.C. He was in his eighties when he received the vision of the prophecy of the seventy weeks (Daniel 9). In more than sixty years of his life in Babylon, Daniel faced many challenges. But in all those years, he grew stronger in his commitment to God.

   We know very little about Daniel's personal life. His family history is not mentioned, but he was probably from an upper-class family in Jerusalem. It seems unlikely that Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon, would have selected a trainee for his court from the lower classes. Neither do we know whether Daniel married or had a family. As a servant in Nebuchadnezzar's court, he may have been castrated and made into a EUNUCH, as was common in those days. But the text does not specify that this happened. It does indicate that Daniel was a person of extraordinary abilities.

   We tend to think of Daniel as a prophet because of the prophetic dimension of his book. But he also served as an advisor in the courts of foreign kings. Daniel remained in governmental service through the reigns of the kings of Babylon and into the reign of Cyrus of Persia after the Persians became the dominant world power (Dan. 1:21; 10:1).

   Daniel was also a person of deep piety. His book is characterized not only by prophecies of the distant future but also by a sense of wonder at the presence of God. From his youth Daniel was determined to live by God's law in a distant land (see Daniel 1). In moments of crisis, Daniel turned first to God in prayer before turning to the affairs of state (2:14–23). His enemies even used his regularity at prayer to trap him and turn the king against him. But the grace of God protected Daniel (chap. 6).

After one of his stunning prophecies (chap. 9), Daniel prayed a noble prayer of confession for his own sins and the sins of his people. This prayer was based on Daniel's study of the Book of Jeremiah (Dan. 9:2). He was a man of true devotion to God.

So the Book of Daniel is more than a treasure of prophetic literature. It also paints a beautiful picture of a man of God who lived out his commitment in very troubled times. We should never get so caught up in the meanings of horns and beasts that we forget the human dimension of the book—the intriguing person whose name means "God Is My Judge."

Also see DANIEL, BOOK OF.

DANIEL, APOCRYPHAL ADDITIONS TO (see APOCRYPHA, THE.).

DANIEL, BOOK OF—a major prophetic book of the Old Testament that emphasizes the truth that God is in control of world history. The book is named for Daniel, its author and central personality, who was rescued miraculously from a den of lions after he refused to bow down and worship a pagan king.

Structure of the Book. Daniel's twelve chapters may be divided naturally into three major sections: (1) introductory information about Daniel (chap. 1); (2) narratives about Daniel and his friends during their days of captivity among the Babylonians and the Persians (chaps. 2–7); and (3) Daniel's dreams and visions concerning the future of Israel and the end of time (chaps. 8–12).

The first chapter sets the stage for the rest of the book by introducing Daniel and his three friends, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah. These four young Hebrew men were taken captive in one of the Babylonian raids against Judah in 605 B.C. Intelligent and promising, they were placed in special training as servants in the court of King Nebuchadnezzar; then their names and diets were changed to reflect Babylonian culture in an attempt to take away their Jewish identity. But Daniel and his friends rose to the challenge, proving their Jewish food was superior to the diet of the Babylonians. The young men increased in wisdom and knowledge, gaining favor in the king's court.

In the second major section of the book (chaps. 2–7), Daniel and his friends met several additional tests to prove that although they were being held captive by a pagan people, the God whom they worshiped was still in control. Daniel's three friends (renamed Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed–Nego) refused to worship the pagan Babylonian gods. Cast into the fiery furnace, they emerged unharmed because of God's miraculous protection. Daniel, refusing to bow down and worship Darius, the king of Persia, was thrown into a den of lions. But he was also saved by God's direct intervention. These tests proved that the God whom they served was superior to the pagan gods of their captors.

Daniel's skill as an interpreter of dreams is also well established in this second section of his book. He interpreted several visions and dreams for King NEBUCHADNEZZAR of Babylonia. As he revealed the meaning of the mysterious "handwriting on the wall" to Nebuchadnezzar's successor BELSHAZZAR, he made it plain that the Babylonian Empire would be defeated by the Medes and the Persians. This happened exactly as Daniel predicted (5:13–31), and he continued as a servant in the court of the conquering Persian king.

The final section of Daniel's book (chaps. 8–12) consists of a series of visions about succeeding kingdoms and the end of time. These visions came to the prophet during his years in captivity. Standing by the Tigris River in one of these visions, he saw a goat attack a ram. The goat symbolized the Greeks, who would defeat the Medes and Persians (Dan. 8:20–21). This goat had several different horns, representing the subsequent division of the Greek Empire among the four generals of ALEXANDER the Great.

Daniel had another unusual look into the future known as the SEVENTY WEEKS prophecy (Dan. 9:24–27). In this vision, the angel Gabriel revealed to Daniel that the nation of Israel would be restored to its homeland after their period of captivity. This would be followed many years later by the coming of the Messiah and then, finally, the final judgment and the end of time.

Daniel's spectacular book closes with a vision of the final judgment, when the righteous will receive everlasting life and the wicked will receive God's condemnation. But not even Daniel was blessed with perfect understanding of this mystery of the ages. "My Lord, what shall be the end of these things?" (12:8), he asked. To this God replied, "Go your way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end" (12:9).

Authorship and Date. Most conservative scholars believe the Book of Daniel was written by the prophet and statesman of that name who lived as a captive of Babylonia and Persia for almost seventy years after he was taken into captivity in 605 B.C. But this theory is rejected by some scholars, who object to the specific details of the prophetic visions that Daniel records.

Daniel predicted that the empires of Babylonia and Persia, for example, would be succeeded by the Greeks under Alexander the Great. He also foresaw that the Greek Empire would be divided among the four generals of Alexander upon his death. Daniel also predicted that the Jewish people would suffer great persecution under an official who would come into power some time after Alexander's death.

Most interpreters identify this ruler, who would "destroy the mighty, and also the holy people" (8:24), as Antiochus Epiphanes, the Greek ruler of Syria. Antiochus persecuted the Jewish people unmercifully from 176–164 B.C. because of their refusal to adopt heathen religious practices. According to this line of thinking about Daniel and his prophecies, the book was written not by Daniel the prophet but by an unknown author about 400 years later than Daniel's time. This anonymous writer, according to this theory, wrote the book during the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes to give the Jewish people renewed hope and religious zeal as they stood against their oppressors. Daniel's prophecies, according to these critics, are not "prophecies" at all, but were written after these events and were attributed to Daniel to show that these great events of world history would eventually happen.

Those who attack the authenticity of the Book of Daniel do not have enough evidence to support their charge. The speculation that it was written by zealous Jews to mobilize their countrymen in opposition to ANTIOCHUS Epiphanes is far-fetched and unconvincing. There is no valid reason to abandon the traditional view that it was written by the prophet Daniel. According to evidence in the book itself, Daniel's captivity lasted from the time of Nebuchadnezzar's reign in Babylon (1:1–6) into the reign of Cyrus of Persia (10:1), about 536 B.C. He must have written his book some time during this period or shortly thereafter.

Historical Setting. The Book of Daniel clearly belongs to that period among God's Covenant People known as the Babylonian CAPTIVITY. Nebuchadnezzar took captives from Judah on four separate occasions, beginning in 605 B.C. Among this first group taken were Daniel and his companions. Their courageous acts must have been a great encouragement to the other captives.

Daniel’s own interest in the forthcoming close of the captivity is supported by his prophecy in chapter 9. His prayer to God appears to be dated in 538 B.C., the very year that Cyrus of Persia issued his decree making it possible for some of the captives to return to Jerusalem to restore their land and rebuild the temple (Ezra 1:1–4). The fact that some did choose to return may be a tribute to the effectiveness of Daniel’s book. He wrote it to show that God was in charge of world history and that He had not yet finished with His Covenant People.

Theological Contribution. The major contribution of the Book of Daniel arises from its nature as apocalyptic prophecy. Highly symbolic in language, the prophecy was related to the events of Daniel’s near future, but even today it contains a message for the future.

In apocalyptic prophecy, these close-at-hand and further-removed dimensions of the future often blend into each other. An example of this is the figure of Antiochus Epiphanes, prominent in chapters 8 and 11 of the book. In these passages the prophet Daniel moves from the nearer figure, who was to desecrate the Jewish temple in 168 B.C., to his appearance at a remote time in the future as the Antichrist (8:23–26; 11:36–45; Rev. 13:1–10). This interplay between the near future and the distant future makes it difficult to interpret the book correctly.

In addition to its prophetic contribution, the Book of Daniel portrays a time in biblical history when miracles were abundant. Other periods when miracles were commonplace included the times of Moses, Elijah and Elisha, Jesus Christ, and the early church. In each of these periods, God was working in a spectacular manner to show His power and bring about a new era in His saving relationship to mankind.

Special Considerations. Chapter 9 of Daniel is a fascinating passage; it combines the best of biblical piety and biblical prophecy. Daniel’s study of the prophecy of the 70 years of captivity from the prophet Jeremiah (Jeremiah 25) led him to pray for God’s intervention on behalf of His people. He called on God to shorten the time of their grief (9:1–19). The Lord’s answer came through the angel Gabriel, who gave Daniel the prophecy of the Seventy Weeks, or 70 sevens (9:24–27). The 70 sevens as envisioned by the prophet are usually interpreted as years.

Thus, the prophecy deals with the next 490 years in the future of God's Covenant People. These 490 years are divided into three groups: 7 weeks (49 years), 62 weeks (434 years), and 1 week (7 years).

Various methods have been used to calculate these periods of years in this prophecy. Here is a general scheme of how it may be done:

During the first seven weeks (49 years), the returned exiles will complete construction of the city of Jerusalem.

The passing of the next 62 weeks (434 years) will mark the time for the cutting off of the Messiah (9:26).

The final or 70th week will bring the making and breaking of a covenant by a mysterious prince and the time of the ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION (9:27).

These verses contain a full scheme for the history of Israel from Daniel's time to the age of the Messiah. During the first period, the city of Jerusalem will be rebuilt. Then the Messiah will come, but He is destined to be cut off by a mysterious "people of the prince who is to come" (9:26). This prince will have authority during the final period; but his rule will then end, and God's purposes for His people will be realized.

Some scholars believe the 70 weeks or 490 years of this prophecy began with the decree of Ezra 7:11–26, in 458 B.C., when some of the exiles returned to rebuild the city of Jerusalem. They also believe the first 69 weeks (483 years) of this prophecy end roughly at the time of the beginning of the ministry of Christ, in A.D. 26. Others follow more complex schemes and arrive at different conclusions.

Perhaps the round numbers in this prophecy (70 sevens) should be our clue that it is dangerous to try to pin its fulfillment to a specific day or year. But we can say for sure that the end of the 483 years spoken of by Daniel would bring us to the general period of the ministry of the Lord Jesus Christ. The final week in the prophecy is symbolic of the age between the ASCENSION of Jesus and His SECOND COMING. This part of Daniel's prophecy is yet to be fulfilled in the future TRIBULATION described so graphically in the Book of Revelation.

Also see APOCALYPTIC LITERATURE; DANIEL.

◆

Daniel: A Study and Teaching Outline

Part One: The Personal History of Daniel (1:1–21)

I. Daniel Carried Away to Babylon 1:1–7

II. The Faithfulness of Daniel in Babylon 1:8–16

III. Daniel’s Reputation in Babylon 1:17–21

Part Two: The Prophetic Plan for the Gentiles (2:1—7:28)

I. Nebuchadnezzar’s Dream 2:1–49

A. Nebuchadnezzar Conceals His Dream 2:1–13
B. God Reveals the Dream 2:14–23
C. Daniel Interprets the Dream 2:24–45
D. Nebuchadnezzar Promotes Daniel 2:46–49

II. Nebuchadnezzar’s Image of Gold 3:1–30

A. Nebuchadnezzar’s Image is Set Up 3:1–7
B. Daniel’s Friends Refuse to Worship 3:8–12
C. Daniel’s Friends Trust God 3:13–18
D. Daniel’s Friends Are Protected in the Furnace 3:19–25
E. Daniel’s Friends Are Promoted 3:26–30

III. Nebuchadnezzar’s Vision of a Great Tree 4:1–37

A. Nebuchadnezzar’s Proclamation 4:1–3
B. Nebuchadnezzar’s Vision 4:4–18
C. Daniel’s Interpretation of the Vision 4:19–27
D. Nebuchadnezzar’s Humiliation 4:28–33
E. Nebuchadnezzar’s Restoration 4:34–37

IV. Belshazzar and the Handwriting on the Wall 5:1–31

A. Belshazzar Defiles the Temple Vessels 5:1–4
B. Belshazzar Sees the Handwriting 5:5–9
C. Daniel Interprets the Handwriting 5:10–29
D. Belshazzar Is Killed 5:30–31

V. Darius’ Decrees 6:1–28

A. Daniel Is Promoted 6:1–3
B. Darius Signs a Foolish Decree 6:4–9
C. Daniel Prays Faithfully 6:10–15
D. Daniel in the Lion’s Den 6:16–17
E. Daniel Is Saved from the Lions 6:18–24
F. Darius’ Wise Decree 6:25–28

VI. Daniel’s Vision of the Four Beasts 7:1–28

A. The Revelation of the Vision 7:1–14
B. The Interpretation of the Vision 7:15–28

Part Three: The Prophetic Plan for Israel (8:1—12:13)

- I. Daniel's Vision of the Ram and Male Goat 8:1–27
  - A. The Revelation of the Vision 8:1–12
  - B. The Length of the Vision 8:13–14
  - C. The Interpretation of the Vision 8:15–27

- II. Daniel's Vision of the Seventy Weeks 9:1–27
  - A. The Understanding of Daniel 9:1–2
  - B. The Intercession of Daniel 9:3–19
  - C. The Intervention of Gabriel 9:20–23
  - D. The Revelation of the Seventy Weeks 9:24–27

- III. Daniel's Vision of Israel's Future 10:1—12:13
  - A. The Preparation of Daniel 10:1–21
  - B. The Kings of the South and North 11:1–35
  - C. The King Who Magnifies Himself 11:36—12:3
  - D. The Conclusion of the Visions of Daniel 12:4–13

◆

DANITES [DAN ites]—members of the tribe of Dan. David's army at Hebron included 28,600 Danites (1 Chr. 12:35). Also see DAN, TRIBE OF.

DAN JAAN [dan JAY un]—a town in northern Israel visited by Joab as he took the census of Israel and Judah, which was ordered by King David (2 Sam. 24:6). The place may have been a suburb of Dan, located between Gilead and Sidon. Some scholars believe Dan Jaan is a textual corruption of "Dan and Ijon" ("Dan and Iyyon," REB). Other versions render the text, "To Dan, and from Dan."

DANNAH [DAN nah]—a village in the hill country of Judah between Socoh and Kirjath Sepher (Josh. 15:49). Some writers identify it with modern Deir esh-Shemesh or Simya.

DARA [DARE uh]—a son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 2:6). Also see DARDA.

DARDA [DAR duh] (pearl of wisdom)—a wise man with whom Solomon was compared (1 Kin. 4:31). He may have been the same as Dara (1 Chr. 2:6). As one of the "sons of MAHOL," Darda was a member of the musical guild.

DARIC [DARE ick]—a gold Persian coin or weight (1 Chr. 29:7; drams, KJV). The name probably comes from the Persian King DARIUS I. Ezra spoke of 20 gold basins “worth” (or perhaps “weighing”) 1,000 darics each (Ezra 8:27, NRSV, NIV, NASB).

DARIUS [duh RYE us]—the name of several rulers of ancient Persia:

1. Darius I, the Great, who reigned from about 522 to 485 B.C. He was one of the most able Persian kings, and is also known as Darius Hystaspis, or Darius, son of Hystaspis.

   Darius spent the first three years of his reign putting down rebellions in the far-flung regions of his empire. After he had secured his power, he divided the empire into twenty-nine satrapies, or provinces, each ruled by Persian or Median nobles. He made SHUSHAN, or Susa, his new capital and created a code of laws similar to the Code of HAMMURAPI; this code of Darius was in effect throughout the Persian Empire.

   An effective organizer and administrator, Darius developed trade, built a network of roads, established a postal system, standardized a system of coinage, weights, and measures, and initiated fabulous building projects at Persepolis, Ecbatana, and Babylon.

   Darius continued Cyrus the Great’s policy of restoring the Jewish people to their homeland. In 520 B.C., Darius’ second year as king (Hag. 1:1; Zech. 1:1), the Jews resumed work on the still-unfinished temple in Jerusalem. Darius assisted with the project by ordering it to continue and even sending a generous subsidy to help restore worship in the temple (Ezra 6:1–12). The temple was completed in 516–515 B.C., in the sixth year of Darius’ reign (Ezra 6:15).

   The final years of Darius’ reign were marked by clashes with the rising Greek Empire in the western part of his domain. He led two major military campaigns against the Greeks, both of which were unsuccessful.
2. Darius II Ochus, the son of Artaxerxes I, who ruled over Persia from about 424 to 405 B.C. He was not popular or successful, and he spent much time putting down revolts among his subjects. His rule was marked by incompetence and misgovernment. Darius II may be the ruler referred to as “Darius the Persian” (Neh. 12:22).

3. Darius III Codomannus, the king of Persia from 336 to 330 B.C. This Darius is probably the “fourth” king of Persia mentioned by the prophet Daniel (Dan. 11:2). Darius III underestimated the strength of the army of ALEXANDER the Great when the Macedonians invaded Persia. He was defeated by Alexander in several major battles. He attempted to rally the eastern provinces of his empire, but he was hunted down in 330 B.C. and assassinated by his own followers. For all practical purposes, these events brought the Persian Empire to an end and marked the beginning of the period of Greek dominance in the ancient world.
4. Darius the Mede, successor of Belshazzar to the throne of Babylon (Dan. 5:31). He is called the “son of Ahasuerus, of the lineage of the Medes” (Dan. 9:1). Darius the Mede has not been identified with certainty; he is not mentioned by Greek historians or in any Persian literature.

   Darius the Mede was the Persian king who made Daniel a governor, or ruler, of several provincial leaders (Dan. 6:1–2). Daniel’s popularity with his subjects caused the other governors and the satraps under them to become jealous of Daniel and to plot against him. It was Darius the Mede who had Daniel thrown into the den of lions (Dan. 6:6–9), but who ultimately issued a decree that all in his kingdom “must tremble and fear before the God of Daniel” (Dan. 6:26).

   Much confusion and mystery have clouded the identity of Darius the Mede. Some scholars have denied the existence of such a ruler, concluding that the writer of the Book of Daniel was historically inaccurate in saying that Darius the Mede was the person who “received the kingdom” (Dan. 5:31) when Belshazzar, king of Babylonia, was slain. Persian cuneiform inscriptions show that Cyrus II (“the Great”) was the successor of Belshazzar.

   One possible answer to this problem is that “Darius the Mede” was the army general sent by Cyrus to conquer Babylon. It is also possible that “Darius the Mede” was an alternative name or title used by the writer of the Book of Daniel for Cyrus the Persian himself. Indeed, in Daniel 11:1, the SEPTUAGINT—the Greek translation of the Old Testament—has Cyrus instead of Darius. Thus, a quite legitimate translation of Daniel 6:28 might read:

“Daniel prospered during the reign of Darius, that is, the reign of Cyrus the Persian” (NIV, margin). Such a logical and reasonable interpretation silences the skepticism about this passage in the Book of Daniel.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Tombs of Darius I and Artaxerxes I at the royal city of Persepolis in ancient Persia.

DARKNESS—the absence of light. Darkness existed before the light of creation (Gen. 1:2). Since darkness was associated with the chaos that existed before the creation, it came to be associated with evil, bad luck, or affliction (Job 17:12; 21:17). Darkness was also equated with death. In SHEOL, the land of the dead, there is only darkness (Job 10:21–22; 38:17). Darkness symbolizes human ignorance of God’s will and, thus, is associated with sin (Job 24:13–17).

Darkness also describes the condition of those who have not yet seen the light concerning Jesus (John 1:4–5; 12:35; Eph. 5:14) and those who deliberately turn away from the light (John 3:19–20). Hating the light will bring condemnation (Col. 1:13; 2 Pet. 2:17). Living in extreme darkness describes those who at the end of time have not repented (Rev. 16:10; 18:23).

DARKON [DAR kahn]—a servant of Solomon whose descendants returned to the land of Israel after the captivity (Ezra 2:56; Neh. 7:58).

DART (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

DATHAN [DAY thun]—a chief of the tribe of Reuben who, along with Korah and others, tried to overthrow Moses and Aaron (Num. 16; Deut. 11:6; Ps. 106:17). He and his conspirators and their households were swallowed up by the earth (Num. 16:31–33).

DAUGHTER—the female offspring of a husband and wife. The term "daughter" is also used in the Bible to designate a stepsister, niece, or any female descendant (Gen. 20:12; 24:48; granddaughter, NIV). Sometimes the word is used in an even more general sense to refer to the female branch of a family or the female portion of a community (Is. 23:10, 12), as in "the daughters of Levi" (Num. 26:59; descendant, NIV). Also see FAMILY.

DAVID [DAY vid] (beloved)—second king of the United Kingdom of Israel, ancestor of Jesus Christ, and writer of numerous psalms. The record of David's life is found in 1 Samuel 16–31; 2 Samuel 1–24; 1 Kings 1–2; and 1 Chronicles 10–29. An Aramaic inscription including the words "house [dynasty] of David" was found in 1993 in the ruins of the city of Dan. It dates to the ninth century B.C. and is the only known mention of David in ancient contemporary writings outside of the Old Testament itself.

David as a Youth. David's youth was spent in Bethlehem. The youngest of eight brothers (1 Sam. 16:10–11; 17:12–14), he was the son of Jesse, a respected citizen of the city. His mother was tenderly remembered for her godliness (Ps. 86:16). As the youngest son, David was the keeper of his father's sheep. In this job he showed courage and faithfulness by killing both a lion and a bear that attacked the flock.

As a lad, he displayed outstanding musical talent with the harp, a fact that figured prominently in his life. When Saul was rejected by God as king, the prophet Samuel went to Bethlehem to anoint David as the future king of Israel. Apparently, there was no public announcement of this event, although David and his father surely must have been aware of it.

David's Service Under Saul. King Saul, forsaken by God and troubled by an evil spirit, was subject to moods of depression and insanity. His attendants advised him to secure a harpist, whose music might soothe his spirit. David was recommended for this task. As harpist for Saul, David was exposed to governmental affairs, a situation that prepared him for his later service as king of Israel. Apparently, David did not remain with Saul all the time, since the Bible indicates he returned to Bethlehem to continue caring for his father's sheep.

During one of these visits to his home, the PHILISTINES invaded the country and camped 24 kilometers (15 miles) west of Bethlehem. Saul led the army of Israel to meet the enemy. Three of David's brothers were in Saul's army, and Jesse sent David to the battle area to inquire about their welfare. While on this expedition, David encountered the Philistine giant, GOLIATH.

David as Warrior. Goliath's challenge for an Israelite to do battle with him stirred David's spirit. Weighted with heavy armor, Goliath was equipped to engage in close-range combat. David's strategy was to fight him at a distance. Taking five smooth stones from a brook, David faced Goliath with only a sling and his unflinching faith in God. Goliath fell, struck by a stone from David's sling. For this feat, he became a hero in the eyes of the nation. But it aroused jealousy and animosity in the heart of Saul. Saul's son, Jonathan, however, admired David because of his bravery, and they soon became good friends. This friendship lasted until Jonathan's death, in spite of Saul's hostility toward David.

Saul had promised to make the victor in the battle with Goliath his son-in-law, presenting one of his daughters as his wife. He also promised to free the victor's family from taxation. But after the battle, David was no longer allowed to return occasionally to his father's house. He remained at Saul's palace continually. Perhaps Saul realized that Samuel's prediction that the kingdom would be taken from him could reach fulfillment in David. On two occasions, he tried to kill David with a spear; he also gave his daughter, whom he had promised as David's wife, to another man. As David's popularity grew, Saul's fear increased until he could no longer hide his desire to kill him. David was forced to flee with Saul in pursuit.

David as Fugitive Hero. David gathered a handful of fugitives as his followers and fled from Saul. On at least two occasions, David could have killed Saul while the king slept, but he refused to do so. Perhaps David hesitated to kill Saul because he realized that he would be king one day, and he wanted the office to be treated with respect. If he had killed Saul, David also would have entered the office of king through his own personal violence. Perhaps this was a situation he wanted to avoid.

When the Philistines battled Saul and his army at Gilboa, they were victorious, killing Saul and his son, Jonathan, whom David loved as a dear friend. When David heard this news, he mourned their fate (2 Samuel 1).

David as King of Judah. At Saul's death the tribe of Judah, to whom David belonged, elected him as king of Judah and placed him on the throne in HEBRON. The rest of the tribes of Israel set up ISHBOSHETH, Saul's son, as king at Mahanaim. For the next two years civil war raged between these two factions. It ended in the assassination of Ishbosheth, an event that saddened David.

David as King of All Israel. On the death of Ishbosheth, David was elected king over all the people of Israel. He immediately began work to establish a united kingdom. One of his first acts as king was to attack the fortified city of Jebus. Although the inhabitants thought it was safe from capture, David and his army took it. He then made it the capital city of his kingdom and erected his palace there. Also known as JERUSALEM, the new capital stood on the border of the southern tribe of Judah and the other tribal territories to the north. This location tended to calm the jealousies between the north and the south, contributing greatly to the unity of the kingdom.

After establishing his new political capital, David proceeded to reestablish and strengthen the worship of God. He moved the ARK OF THE COVENANT from Kirjath Jearim (Josh. 15:9) and placed it within a tabernacle that he pitched in Jerusalem. Next, he organized worship on a magnificent scale and began plans to build a house of worship. But God brought a halt to his plans, informing David that the building of the temple would be entrusted to his successor.

Although David was a righteous king, he was subject to sin, just like other human beings. On one occasion when his army went to battle, David stayed home. This led to his great sin with BATHSHEBA. While Uriah, the Hittite, Bathsheba's husband, was away in battle, David committed adultery with her. Then in an effort to cover his sin, he finally had Uriah killed in battle. David was confronted by the prophet NATHAN, who courageously exposed his wrongdoing. Faced with his sin, David repented and asked for God's forgiveness. His prayer for forgiveness is recorded in Psalm 51.

Although God forgave David of this act of adultery, the consequences of the sin continued to plague him. The child born to David and Bathsheba died. The example he set as a father was a bad influence on his sons. One son, Amnon, raped and humiliated his half-sister. Another son, ABSALOM, rebelled against David and tried to take away his kingdom by force.

One of David's deep desires was to build a temple in Jerusalem. But he was prevented from doing so. The prophet Nathan informed David that he would not build the temple because he had been a warrior. David did not build the temple, but he did gather material for the temple to be built later. It was Solomon, David's son and successor, who finally erected the first temple in Jerusalem.

David died when he was seventy-one years old, having been king for a total of over forty years, including both his reign in Hebron and his kingship over the United Kingdom.

David as Psalmist. Early in his life David distinguished himself as the "sweet psalmist of Israel" (2 Sam. 23:1). Many of the psalms in the Book of Psalms are attributed to him.

David's fondness for music is recorded in many places in the Bible. He played skillfully on the harp (1 Sam. 16:18–23). He arranged worship services in the sanctuary (1 Chr. 6:31). He composed psalms of lament over Saul and Jonathan (2 Sam. 1:17–27). His musical activity was referred to by Amos (Amos 6:5), Ezra (Ezra 3:10), and Nehemiah (Neh. 7:24, 46).

David as Ancestor to Jesus Christ. Jesus was referred to as the Son of David. The genealogy of Jesus as recorded in the Gospels of Matthew and Luke traced Jesus back through the ancestry of David. God promised David a kingdom that would have no end. This prophecy was fulfilled in Jesus (Luke 1:31–33), who came to establish the Kingdom of God. Jesus was born in Bethlehem because this was the "city of David" (Luke 2:4), David's birthplace and boyhood home.

Although David committed deep sin, he still was known as a man who sought God's will. Certainly he was not perfect, but he was willing to repent of his wrongdoing and to follow God's leadership. His influence for good in the life of his nation was great, since every king of Judah after David was compared to the standard he established.

A capable musician, David unquestionably gave great encouragement to this fine art in the life of his people. As a warrior and military man, he was resourceful and courageous. As a king, he was without equal in the life of his nation. As a religious leader, he was exceptional. Many of his writings will continue to be the favorite devotional literature for honest souls who seek a closer walk with God.

The Jewish historian Josephus praised David by saying, "This man was of an excellent character, and was endowed with all the virtues that were desirable in a king." David was truly a man after God's own heart (1 Sam. 13:14; Acts 13:22).

◆

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

- The Citadel or "Tower of David" in the Old City section of Jerusalem.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Oasis at En Gedi where David hid from King Saul during his years as a fugitive (1 Sam. 23:29; 24:1).

Photo by Howard Vos

• The mound of Gibeah, where David allowed several of Saul’s descendants to be executed and displayed in humiliation because of Saul’s slaughter of the Gibeonites (2 Sam. 21:1–9).

DAVID, CITY OF—(see CITY OF DAVID).

DAVID, TOWER OF—a fortress built by King David (Song 4:4; armoury, KJV; arsenal, NRSV).

DAWN, DAWNING—the first appearance of light in the morning as the sun rises (Job 7:4; Is. 58:10; Acts 27:33). Matthew's account of the resurrection of Christ begins with these words: "Now after the Sabbath, as the first day of the week began to dawn, Mary Magdalene and the other Mary came to see the tomb" (Matt. 28:1). Matthew also quotes the prophet Isaiah, using the figure of the dawn as the beginning of a wonderful new era of hope and promise: "The people who sat in darkness saw a great light" (Matt. 4:16).

DAY—the twenty-four-hour period between two successive risings of the sun. The Hebrew people reckoned their day from evening to evening, the period of time between two successive sunsets (Gen. 1:5, 8; Ex. 12:18; Lev. 23:32).

The Bible also uses the word "day" in a symbolic sense, as in "the day of His wrath" (Job 20:28), and "the day of the LORD" (Is. 2:12; 13:6, 9; Amos 5:18–20). The same phrase is used in the New Testament (1 Thess. 5:2; 2 Pet. 3:10), meaning "the day of the Lord Jesus" (1 Cor. 5:5), or His second coming. To those who scoff at the delay of the Lord's return, Peter declared, "With the Lord one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day" (2 Pet. 3:8). Also see CALENDAR; TIME.

DAY OF ATONEMENT (see FEASTS AND FESTIVALS).

DAY OF CHRIST, THE—the period at the end of time when Jesus will return to claim faithful believers and members of His church as His own (1 Cor. 1:8; 2 Cor. 1:14; Phil. 1:10). A related concept, DAY (1 Cor. 5:5), focuses on God's judgment against unbelievers. Also see ESCHATOLOGY.

DAY OF JUDGMENT (see ESCHATOLOGY).

DAY OF THE LORD, THE—a special day at the end of time when God's will and purpose for mankind and His world will be fulfilled. Many Bible students believe the Day of the Lord will be a long period of time rather than a single day—a period when Christ will reign throughout the world before He cleanses heaven and earth in preparation for the eternal state of all mankind. But others believe the Day of the Lord will be an instantaneous event when Christ will return to earth to claim His faithful believers while consigning unbelievers to eternal damnation.

Amos 5:18–20 is probably the earliest occurrence in Scripture of the phrase, "day of the LORD." According to Amos, that day would be a time of great darkness for any in rebellion against God, whether Jew or Gentile. The day would be a time of judgment (Is. 13:6, 9; Jer. 46:10), as well as restoration (Is. 14:1; Joel 2:28–32; Zeph. 1:7, 14–16; 1 Thess. 5:2; 2 Peter 3:10).

Also see DAY; DAY OF CHRIST, THE; ESCHATOLOGY.

DAY'S JOURNEY (see WEIGHTS AND MEASURES).

DAYSMAN—KJV word for MEDIATOR (Job 9:33).

DAYSPRING—a poetic way of speaking of the dawn, used figuratively to refer to Jesus as the Messiah who is the light to those who sit in darkness (Luke 1:78; rising sun, NIV).

DEACON—a servant or minister; an ordained lay officer in many Christian churches.

The general concept of deacon as a servant of the church is well established in both the Bible and church history. But the exact nature of the office is hard to define because of changing concepts and varying practices among church bodies through the centuries. Another problem is that the Bible passages associated with deacons are interpreted differently by various church groups.

The term "deacon" occurs in only two passages in the NKJV (Phil. 1:1; 1 Tim. 3:8–13). But the Greek word diakonos from which it is taken is found thirty times. In most cases diakonos is translated as "servant" rather than "deacon." In the Greek world, diakonos was used to describe the work of a servant—a person who waited on tables or ministered as a religious official. When the office of deacon was established in the New Testament church, it may have paralleled the function of the Jewish synagogue assistant—an official who took care of the administrative needs of the assembly.

The origin of the office of deacon is usually related to the events described in Acts 6:1–6. The young Christian church in Jerusalem was experiencing growing pains, and it had become increasingly difficult for the apostles to distribute charitable gifts to its needy members without neglecting their ministry of prayer and preaching. The widows of Greek or Gentile background complained to the apostles that they were not getting their just share of food and money. To meet this critical need, seven men were chosen by the congregation and presented to the apostles (Acts 6:1–6). Although these men were not called deacons at that time, the Greek word used to describe their work comes from the same Greek root word.

While these "table servers" were appointed to relieve an emergency and their assignment may sound somewhat menial, these men possessed the very highest moral and spiritual credentials. They are described as "men of good reputation, full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom" (Acts 6:3). They were formally installed or commissioned in a service of prayer and the LAYING ON OF HANDS by the apostles (Acts 6:6)—a practice regarded as the scriptural precedent for the ordination of deacons as church officials.

As a result of the selection of these seven men, harmony was restored in the congregation and the church continued to grow in number and spirit (Acts 6:5, 7). The later evangelistic work of two of these original "deacons," Stephen and Philip, serves as a role model for the spiritual ministry of deacons today.

The list of qualifications for deacons given in 1 Timothy 3 shows that this servant of the church was to be equipped for a spiritual ministry to serve with the bishop or pastor: "Likewise deacons must be reverent, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy for money, holding the mystery of the faith with a pure conscience. But let these first be proved; then let them serve as deacons, being found blameless" (1 Tim. 3:8–10).

The deacon was expected to have an exemplary home life (3:11, 12), to be a proven leader, and to possess flawless character.

The work of Stephen and Philip strongly suggests that gifted deacons became a permanent part of the church's outreach to the world very early in its history. The thrilling activities of these servants of the church sound much like the work of a traveling evangelist, missionary, or lay preacher. Stephen is described as a man “full of faith and power” who “did great wonders and signs among the people” (Acts 6:8). So convincing were his words and miracles that “they were not able to resist the wisdom and Spirit by which he spoke” (Acts 6:10). While some responded in faith, Stephen’s zeal for Christ stirred up powerful enemies (Acts 6:11–13). Undaunted by false witnesses, Stephen glorified the Lord even as he was put to death for his convictions (Acts 7:59–60). Philip was also an evangelist who “preached the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ” (Acts 8:9–13). After preaching to eager crowds in Samaria, Philip witnessed to a solitary Ethiopian in the desert and baptized him (Acts 8:26–38).

In the early years of the church, a difference of opinion arose about the role of deacons. Some church officials argued that no spiritual function had been assigned to deacons. But others insisted that deacons were a vital part of a church’s ministry, with official duties to perform. Through the centuries deacons generally have served as assistants to the clergy in the service of the sanctuary.

In the modern church deacons exist as a distinct lower order of the clergy in the Roman Catholic, Church of England, Episcopal, United Methodist, and other liturgical churches. In other denominations, including Baptist, Presbyterian, and Congregational, deacons are laypeople, sometimes ordained, who carry out a variety of practical and spiritual ministries that assist the pastor. Deacons are often given administrative and financial duties, such as reviewing budgets and recommending new church programs and personnel.

In some churches, each deacon is assigned “spiritual oversight” of several families in the congregation. The deacon keeps in close touch with the families in his charge to make certain they are involved in church life and are ministered to promptly at times of special need.

Paul wrote that the reward for faithfulness in the office of deacon is that they “obtain for themselves a good standing and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus” (1 Tim. 3:13). The selfless deacon may also feel close kinship with his Master, who walked the earth as “One who serves” (Luke 22:27). According to Jesus, the true heroes in the kingdom of God are those who assume the role of diakonos—a servant (Matt. 20:26).

Also see DEACONESS.

DEACONESS—a female believer serving in the office of DEACON in a church.

The only New Testament reference to deaconess as a church office is Paul's description of Phoebe as a deaconess of the church in Cenchrea (Rom. 16:1, NRSV). The Greek word translated as deaconess in this passage is rendered as deacon and servant by other versions of the Bible. The office of deaconess was similar to the office of deacon. Their spiritual responsibility was essentially the same, except that deaconesses probably rendered a ministry exclusively to women, particularly in the early years of the church.

The office of deaconess became a regular feature of church organization as early as the first part of the second century. In A.D. 112, Pliny the Younger, governor of Bithynia, wrote a letter to the emperor Trajan of Rome, indicating that in his investigation of Christians he had tortured two Christian maidens who were called deaconesses. The office of deaconess in the Eastern Church continued down to the twelfth century. The widows of clergymen, who were not permitted to remarry, often served as deaconesses. Some scholars believe that Paul's standards for WIDOWS in 1 Timothy 5:9–12 were applied to these deaconesses.

No qualifications for the office of deaconess are specifically given in the New Testament. But tradition indicates that piety, discretion, and experience were required of deaconesses.

While controversy has centered around the ordination of women through the centuries, deaconesses apparently were installed in their office by the LAYING ON OF HANDS, just like deacons. However, there is no account of a deaconess ordination in the Bible. Church groups with both deacons and deaconesses customarily ordain women in the same manner as men. In the United States the office of deaconess is most prominent today among Lutherans, Episcopalians, United Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, and in certain Reform bodies.

In the early centuries, deaconesses were especially called on to serve women in situations where custom forbade the ministry of the deacon. Deaconesses instructed female candidates for church membership, ministered to women who were sick and in prison, and assisted at their baptism, especially in the act of anointing. Through the years deaconesses have been assigned various types of educational, charitable, and social service work in their churches and communities. Deaconesses have traditionally served as doorkeepers in some churches. They may be seen frequently today as ushers and lay readers.

Also see DEACON.

DEAD, THE—those no longer alive; the deceased. The ancient Hebrews thought of the deceased as going to SHEOL, the abode of the dead, a netherworld where the dead have a shadowy existence. Apparently at death, according to the Old Testament view, even believers in God went to Sheol.

This belief would explain the view, prevalent in the early church, that Christ at His death descended into Sheol (Greek, hades) to bring the Old Testament believers to heaven with Him (1 Pet. 3:18–20).

Death is introduced in Genesis 2:17. God created people to live forever, both physically and spiritually. By human disobedience, however, death became everyone's lot (Rom. 5:12). The day Adam ate the forbidden fruit, he did not die physically but lived on and reached the age of 930 years (Gen. 5:5). However, with that act of disobedience he died spiritually and was separated from God's fellowship (Gen. 3:24). When the breath leaves the body, the body is dead. When people sin, they are separated from God and become dead spiritually.

The Bible speaks of both types of death. Those outside of Christ are alive physically, but they are spiritually dead—"dead in trespasses and sins" (Eph. 2:1).

The Bible also speaks of eternal, or everlasting, death. Those who persist in their unbelief remain forever in spiritual death—eternal separation from God—which Scripture calls the "second death" (Rev. 2:11; 21:8).

Also see HELL.

Photo by Howard Vos

• An elaborate sarcophagus, or coffin, at the city of Tyre, dating from the Roman period.

DEAD, ABODE OF THE (see HELL).

DEAD, BAPTISM FOR THE (see BAPTISM FOR THE DEAD).

DEAD SEA—a large lake in southern Israel (see Map 9, C–4) at the lowest point on earth. In the Old Testament it is called the Salt Sea (Gen. 14:3; Josh. 3:16); the Sea of the Arabah (Deut. 3:17); and the Eastern Sea (Ezek. 47:18; Joel 2:20). Josephus, the Jewish historian, referred to this buoyant body as Lake Asphaltitis. The Arabic name is Bahr Lut, meaning, "Sea of Lot." But from the second Christian century onward, Dead Sea has been the most common name for this unusual body of water.

The topography of the Middle East is dominated by a geologic fault that extends from Syria south through Palestine, all the way to Nyasa Lake in east-central Africa. The Dead Sea is located at the southern end of the Jordan valley at the deepest depression of this geologic fault. With a water level approximately 390 meters (1,300 feet) below sea level, the surface of the Dead Sea is the lowest point on earth. At the deepest point of the sea, on the northeast corner at the foot of the Moab mountains, the bottom is 390 meters (1,300 feet) deeper still.

The dimensions of the sea change from year to year. Many factors, such as rainfall and irrigation, contribute to this. In general, however, the Dead Sea measures approximately 80 kilometers (50 miles) in length and averages 15 to 16 kilometers (9 to 10 miles) in breadth, yielding a surface area of from 600 to 640 square kilometers (350 to 400 square miles).

A large peninsula known as el-Lisan ("the Tongue") protrudes into the sea from the southeast shore. It extends to within 3 kilometers (2 miles) of the western shore and is located some 24 kilometers (15 miles) from the southern tip. Throughout the centuries this tongue separated the sea into two parts with a channel of water flowing between them on the west. From the depths of the northeast corner, the bottom of the sea quickly shelves and rises southward. Thus the area of the sea south of el-Lisan is extremely shallow. It is at the entrance to el-Lisan that the destroyed cities of Sodom and Gomorrah most probably lie (Gen. 19:24–29).

Except on the north where the Jordan River enters, the Dead Sea is nearly surrounded by hills and cliffs. From these hills, streams feed fresh water to the Salt Sea. In addition to these year-round streams and the Jordan River, waters flow into the sea from the winter torrents of several seasonal streams.

These water sources pour millions of gallons of water each day into the Dead Sea. However, the extreme hot temperatures and sparse rainfall (about two inches a year) cause an enormous evaporation rate that has kept the water level constant over the years. Due to increased irrigation by the Israeli government, the volume of water flowing into the Dead Sea from the Jordan River is decreasing each year. Thus the level of the sea goes down proportionately. As a result, "the Tongue" often stretches all the way across the sea, completely separating the northern portion from the southern portion. Evidence of a Roman road across the peninsula has been discovered, indicating that at other periods in its history the Dead Sea was shallow enough for traffic to cross its southern tip.

Because the Dead Sea has several watercourse entrances but no exits, it is indeed a “dead” sea. Although lush vegetation can be found at the mouths of these tributaries, the water itself is very salty. This is because it flows through nitrous soil and is fed by sulphurous springs. With the absence of an outlet, the water from the Dead Sea is left to evaporate, leaving behind most of its minerals. Thus it contains a very large supply of potash, bromine, magnesium chloride, salt, and other minerals. Although the value of these chemicals is enormous, making the Dead Sea the richest mineral deposit on earth, the cost of retrieving these minerals is also high. Potash extraction has been one of the most successful operations. But as technology increases, the interest in “mining” the Dead Sea will also increase.

The salt and mineral content of the Dead Sea constitutes more than 25 percent of the water. This compares with about 6 percent mineral content in the ocean. The specific gravity of the water is greater than that of the human body, making it next to impossible for any person to sink in the Dead Sea.

The Dead Sea formed part of Israel’s eastern border (Num. 34:12; Ezek. 47:18). In addition to the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, many other historical and biblical events occurred along its shores. The springs of EN GEDI provided a refuge for David in his flight from King Saul (1 Sam. 24:1). In the Valley of Salt south of the sea, David and Amaziah won victories over the Edomites (1 Chr. 18:12; 2 Kin. 14:7). Here, too, Jehoshaphat encountered the Edomites (2 Chr. 20:1–2; 2 Kin. 3:8–9). The last days of Herod the Great were spent on the eastern shore of the Dead Sea at the hot sulphur springs of Callirhoe. At Machaerus, just to the southeast, his son Herod Antipas imprisoned John the Baptist.

The prophet Ezekiel (Ezek. 47:1–12) saw a vision of a river issuing from the temple sanctuary in Jerusalem and flowing to the desert sea, the Dead Sea. And the prophet Zechariah wrote: “And in that day it shall be that living waters shall flow from Jerusalem, half of them toward the eastern sea [the Dead Sea] and half of them toward the western sea [the Mediterranean Sea]” (Zech. 14:8). Prophetically this is apparently a reference to the “pure river of water of life” said to flow from the throne of God in John’s vision (Rev. 22:1–2).

The great fortress of Masada guarded the southern approaches toward Palestine, perhaps the road crossing from Moab to Judea at el-Lisan. Herod refortified this strong fortress, which finally fell in A.D. 73 to the Romans under Flavius Silva. He also refortified the Maccabean stronghold at Machaerus on the eastern shore.

The discovery of the DEAD SEA SCROLLS in caves on the northwest shore of the Dead Sea near QUMRAN has mustered renewed historical interest in this area. The remains of the ESSENE community at Qumran and the search for scrolls in the more than 250 surrounding caves focused the eyes of the world on a tiny sea devoid of marine life but bristling with mineral potential and archaeological promise.

• The Dead Sea, situated at the lowest point on earth, has a high salt content and no natural outlet.

DEAD SEA SCROLLS—the popular name for about 800 scrolls and fragments of scrolls that were found in eleven caves near Khirbet (“ruin of”) Qumran on the northwest shore of the Dead Sea in 1947 and shortly thereafter. Taken together, these leather and PAPYRUS (primitive paper) manuscripts were a find without precedent in the history of modern archaeology. The Dead Sea Scrolls have helped scholars to: (1) establish the date of a Hebrew Bible no later than A.D. 70; (2) reconstruct various details of the history of the Holy Land from the fourth century B.C. to A.D. 135; and (3) clarify the relationship between Jewish religious traditions and early Christianity.

The Dead Sea Scrolls were discovered when a Bedouin shepherd, who was looking for a stray goat, discovered several large clay pots containing ancient scrolls on the floor of a cave above Wadi Qumran. After some delay, several scholars were shown the manuscripts by dealers in antiquities. When it was determined that these manuscripts were extremely old, scholars began their search in earnest. Slowly other valuable scrolls were found, gathered, carefully unrolled, and published. It took twenty years (1947–1967) to bring together the various texts of the Dead Sea Scrolls. Because the Scrolls were written between 250 B.C. and A.D. 68, they offer an invaluable source for understanding the beliefs, community life, and use of the Bible of one group of Jews, probably the Essenes, who were active during the time Jesus lived. Jericho, a town Jesus visited, is only 13 kilometers (8 miles) north of Khirbet Qumran. Some scholars believe that some of the early followers of Jesus or John the Baptist may have come from the Qumran Community. Some of the writings of this community remind the reader of the themes of “repentance” and the “coming of the new age” that were preached by John the Baptist and Jesus. However, there is no evidence that the followers of John or Jesus joined the Qumran group.

The writings are the work of Jewish sectarians, written mainly in Hebrew, with a few in Aramaic and some fragments in Greek. Some of the scrolls were written to protest the lawless priest who was in charge of the temple worship in Jerusalem. It is likely that the main reason for building this monastic-like community near the Dead Sea was to get away from the “wicked priest” and to hear the words of the “teacher of righteousness.” Not all of the Dead Sea Scrolls have been translated or published. Probably the most interesting ones were found in Cave I not far from Qumran. Seven scrolls were found preserved in fairly good condition. They had been carefully stored in large clay jars and include:

1. A complete manuscript of the Book of Isaiah in Hebrew.
2. A partial manuscript of Isaiah in Hebrew. (The two Isaiah scrolls are easy to read, even after more than 2000 years, and are the earliest copies of Isaiah in existence.)
3. The Community Rule, or The Manual of Discipline, containing the laws that governed the life of the Qumran community.
4. The Thanksgiving Psalms are similar to the biblical psalms. They praise God the Creator for His protection against evil: "I give thanks unto Thee, O Lord, for Thou hast put my soul in the bundle of life and hedged me against all the snares of corruption."
5. The War Scroll is an interesting collection of plans for the final battle between the "sons of light" and the "sons of darkness," or between the "army of God" and the "army of Belial" (the Evil One). Such information as that of religious offices during wartime, recruitment, the sequence of campaigns, and the order of deploying battle squadrons is included.
6. A commentary on the Book of Habakkuk known as the Pesher on Habakkuk was written to demonstrate how the prophet Habakkuk, who lived in the seventh century B.C., was actually writing for the battle of the last days, when the wicked would be defeated by the righteous. The author of the Pesher on Habakkuk made direct references from Habakkuk to his own day. One section has the following commentary: "And God told Habakkuk to write down that which would happen to the final generation, but He did not make known to him when time would come to an end. And as for that which He said, 'That he who reads may read it speedily' (Hab. 2:2); interpreted, this concerns the Teacher of Righteousness, to whom God made known all the mysteries of the words of His servants the prophets."
7. The Genesis Apocryphon, a "commentary" on the Book of Genesis, is only partially preserved. Written around 50 B.C. in Aramaic, the common language of the Jews, it begins with the birth of Noah and documents the life and adventures of Abraham.

These seven manuscripts are typical of the scrolls found in the other caves on the west side of the Dead Sea. The material discovered includes various kinds of literature. There are numerous biblical fragments, such as commentaries on Isaiah, Hosea, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Psalm 37, Psalm 45, and Genesis. Except for Esther, all the books of the Old Testament were found in part or in full.

Apocryphal (see APOCRYPHA) and pseudepigraphal (see PSEUDEPIGRAPHA) writings were found scattered in various caves. Fragments of Tobit and Ecclesiasticus from the Apocrypha give evidence of the importance of these works for the community. The Book of Jubilees, the Book of Enoch, some of the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, the Sayings of Moses, the Vision of Amram, the Psalms of Joshua, the Prayer of Nabonidus, and the Book of Mysteries are a few of the pseudepigraphal works discovered. A number of hymns or psalms that were found and are included in this category are: The Hymn of the Initiates, The Book of Hymns (The Thanksgiving Hymns), Psalm 151, Poems from a Qumran Hymnal, Lament for Zion, and Hymns of Triumph.

The writings that were found can be listed under the following categories:

Biblical Manuscripts: Isaiah scroll (complete), Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy, among many others. Some are represented by multiple copies.

Commentaries: Genesis Apocryphon, Job, Isaiah, Hosea, Micah, Habakkuk, Psalm 37, and Psalm 45.

Apocrypha: Epistle to Jeremiah, Tobit, and Ecclesiasticus.

Pseudepigrapha: Book of Jubilees, Book of Enoch, and The Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs (fragments).

Previously Unknown Pseudepigrapha: Sayings of Moses, Vision of Amram, Psalms of Joshua, Daniel cycle (The Prayer of Nabonidus), and Book of Mysteries.

Community Documents: The Manual of Discipline, Damascus Document, Thanksgiving Psalm, and War Scroll.

The examples listed here are meant to be suggestive, and not exhaustive, of the archaeological finds. Other manuscripts discovered in the Judean Wilderness, for instance, deal with a later era.

Although many fragments have yet to be published, photographs of all the Dead Sea Scrolls, whether complete or fragmentary, have now been released and made available for scholarly research.

• This cave at Qumran, designated as Cave 4 by archaeologists, contained thousands of manuscript fragments.

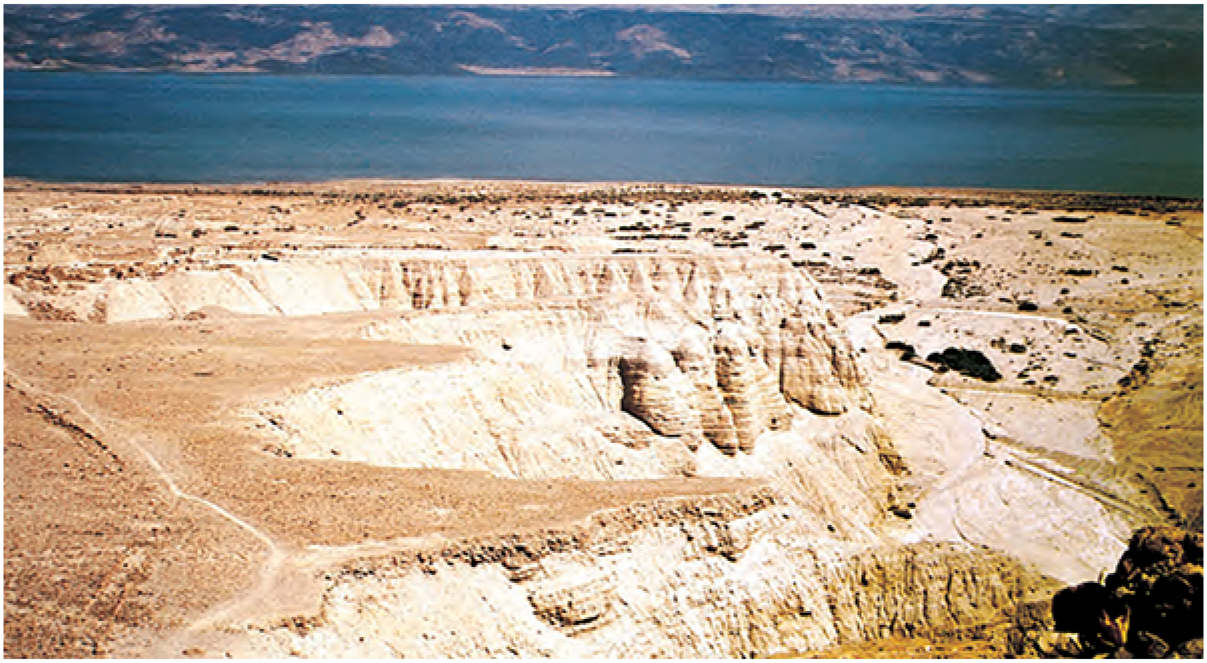

Photo by John Trevor

• The desolate wilderness of the Qumran area, with the Dead Sea in the background. Several of the caves where the manuscripts were found are situated in the cliffs in the center of the photo.

Photo by John Trevor

• Interior of Cave 4 at Qumran. The archaeologist stands in a passageway to a lower room, where the thousands of manuscript fragments were stored.

DEAF, DEAFNESS (see DISABILITIES AND DEFORMITIES).

DEATH—a term that, when applied to the lower orders of living things such as plants and animals, means the end of life. With reference to human beings, however, death is not the end of life. The Bible teaches that we are more than physical creatures; we are also spiritual beings. For man, therefore, physical death does not mean the end of existence but the end of life as we know it and the transition to another dimension in which our conscious existence continues.

The Bible speaks of death in a threefold way: physical, spiritual, and eternal. The first physical death of a human being recorded in the Bible is that of Abel, who was murdered by his brother Cain (Gen. 4:8). However, death itself, in both the physical and spiritual sense, is first mentioned by God Himself (Gen. 2:17). In the Genesis account of the FALL both physical and spiritual death come as a result of sin (Rom. 5:12–21).

Various attitudes toward death are expressed in the Bible, from dread to anticipation. The ancient Hebrews regarded death as entrance into SHEOL, where they were cut off from everything dear in life, including God and loved ones. But God revealed to the psalmist that the Redeemer God is both in heaven and in Sheol (Ps. 139:7–8), and He is able to bring a person out of Sheol (“the grave”, 1 Sam. 2:6).

Because “all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God” (Rom. 3:23), all people are spiritually dead—separated from God who is the Source of spiritual life. Sin makes a person hate the light and despise the truth; it causes one to break God’s laws and to become insensitive to holy things. Everyone who has not been redeemed by Christ is spiritually dead (Luke 15:32; Eph. 2:1–3; Col. 2:13).

The Bible also speaks of “the second death” (Rev. 2:11), which is eternal death, the everlasting separation of the lost from God in HELL. The “second death” is equated with “the lake of fire” (Rev. 20:14); “the lake which burns with fire and brimstone . . . is the second death” (Rev. 21:8).

The apostle Paul speaks of death as an enemy: “The last enemy that will be destroyed is death” (1 Cor. 15:26). In His resurrection, Jesus conquered death—physical, spiritual, and eternal. Through fear of death, people are subject to bondage (Heb. 2:15); but “our Savior Jesus Christ . . . has abolished death and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel” (2 Tim. 1:10).

DEATH, SECOND—the state of final condemnation and punishment to which unbelievers are condemned by God at the Last Judgment (Rev. 2:11; 20:14; 21:8). To Smyrna, the persecuted church, the crucified and risen Christ declared, “Be faithful unto death, and I will give you the crown of life . . . He who overcomes shall not be hurt by the second death” (Rev. 2:10–11). The meaning of this verse is that people without Christ when they face God’s judgment will be condemned to eternal punishment in hell or “the second death.” Also see ESCHATOLOGY.

DEBIR [duh BEER]—the name of one man and three towns in the Old Testament:

1. A king of Eglon (Josh. 10:3). He was one of five allied Amorite kings who unsuccessfully attempted to halt Joshua’s invasion of the land of Canaan (Josh. 10:1–27). Joshua soundly defeated these forces at GIBEON in the famous battle at the time of "Joshua's long day" (Josh. 10:12–13). The five kings were killed and hanged on five separate trees until evening. Their bodies were then placed in the cave where they had hidden (Josh. 10:16–27).

2. A town in Judah's hill country (Josh. 10:38–39), in the Negeb, or southland, and designated a city for the Levites (Josh. 21:15; 1 Chr. 6:57–58). In Joshua's time the town, also called Kirjath Sannah (Josh. 15:49) and Kirjath Sepher (Josh. 15:15–16; Judg. 1:11–12), was inhabited by the giant people, the ANAKIM, and was captured by Joshua (Josh. 10:38–39). Debir had to be recaptured later by the judge Othniel (Josh. 15:15–17; Judg. 1:11–13).
3. A town east of the Jordan River on Gad's border near Mahanaim (Josh. 13:26). This may be the same place as LO DEBAR (2 Sam. 9:4–5; 17:27).
4. A town on Judah's northern border near the Valley of Achor (Josh. 15:7).

DEBORAH [DEB uh rah] (bee)—the name of two women in the Old Testament:

1. A nurse to Rebekah, Isaac's wife (Gen. 24:59; 35:8). Deborah accompanied Rebekah when she left her home in Mesopotamia to become Isaac's wife and lived with Jacob and Rebekah. She probably spent her years caring for their sons, Jacob and Esau. Deborah died at an advanced age. She was buried below Bethel under a tree that Jacob called Allon Bachuth (literally "oak of weeping")—a fitting name for the burial place of one who had served so long and so faithfully (Gen. 35:8).
2. The fifth judge of Israel, a prophetess and the only female judge (Judg. 4–5). The Bible tells us nothing about her family except that she was the wife of Lapidoth. Deborah's home was in the hill country of Ephraim between Bethel and Ramah. The palm tree under which she sat and judged Israel was a landmark; it became known as "the palm tree of Deborah" (Judg. 4:5).

   Deborah summoned Barak (Judg. 4; 5:1; Heb. 11:32) and told him it was God's will that he lead her forces against the mighty warrior, Sisera. Sisera was the commander of the army of Jabin, king of Canaan, who had terrorized Israel for 20 years. Barak accepted on one condition: Deborah must accompany him. Deborah and Barak’s army consisted of only 10,000, while Sisera had a multitude of fighters and 900 chariots of iron.

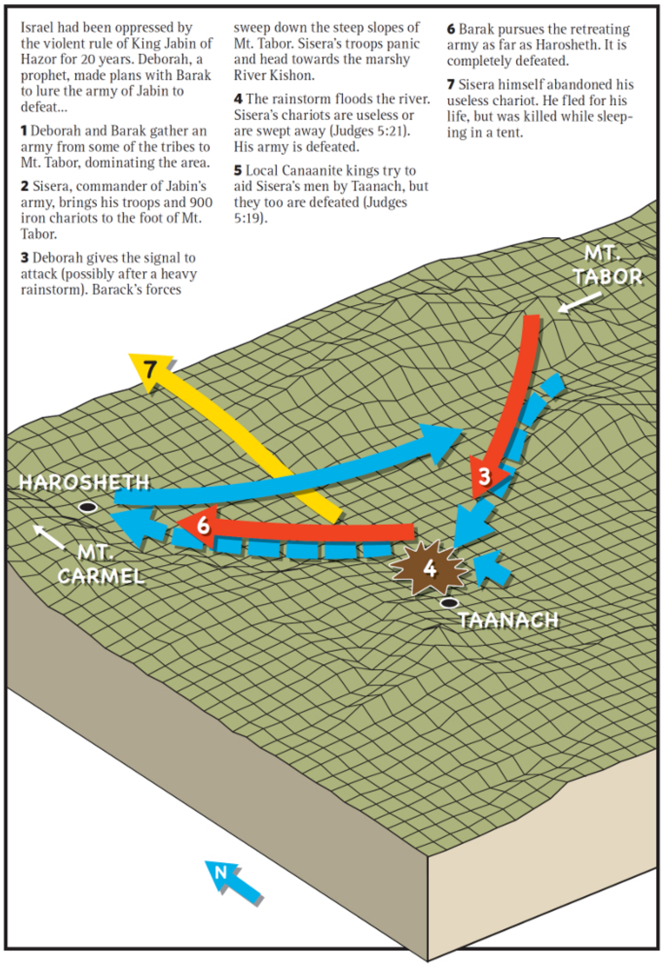
God was on Israel’s side, however. When the battle ended, not a single man of Sisera’s army survived, except Sisera himself, who fled on foot. When Sisera took refuge in the tent of Heber the Kenite, Jael (the wife of Heber) drove a tent peg through his temple (Judg. 4:21), killing him.

The “Song of Deborah” (Judges 5) is one of the finest and earliest examples of Hebrew poetry.

DEBORAH’S VICTORY



Israel had been oppressed by the violent rule of King Jabin of Hazor for 20 years. Deborah, a prophet, made plans with Barak to lure the army of Jabin to defeat...

1 Deborah and Barak gather an army from some of the tribes to Mt. Tabor, dominating the area.

2 Sisera, commander of Jabin’s army, brings his troops and 900 iron chariots to the foot of Mt. Tabor.

3 Deborah gives the signal to attack (possibly after a heavy rainstorm). Barack’s forces sweep down the steep slopes of Mt. Tabor. Sisera’s troops panic and head towards the marshy River Kishon.

4 The rainstorm floods the river. Sisera’s chariots are useless or are swept away (Judges 5:21). His army is defeated.

5 Local Canaanite kings try to aid Sisera’s men by Taanach, but they too are defeated (Judges 5:19).

6 Barak pursues the retreating army as far as Harosheth. It is completely defeated.

7 Sisera himself abandoned his useless chariot. He fled for his life, but was killed while sleeping in a tent.

DEBT—borrowed money or property that a person is bound by law to pay back to another. In all periods of history, people have always had to borrow money. In Bible times many were willing to lend the desired money, but at a price. Excessive interest rates of 50 percent or higher per year were often charged.

When a financial need arose, the needy could borrow from relatives or professional lenders, but they had to pay interest for the privilege of the loan. In spite of this custom, Moses admonished the Israelites to give help to their own people without charging any interest (Ex. 22:25; Lev. 25:35–38; Deut. 23:19–20). However, they were allowed to charge interest to foreigners (Deut. 15:3, 6; 23:20). Apparently Moses' regulations either were not followed or fell into disuse (Neh. 5:6–13). The prophet Ezekiel condemned the Jews for charging interest, or usury, to their fellow citizens (Ezek. 18:1–18; 22:12).

When a loan was made, something was usually put up for collateral (pledge or security) to guarantee that debtors would pay their debt (Gen. 38:17–20; Deut. 24:10). But the creditor did not have the right forcefully to enter the debtor's house and claim the collateral. He was required to wait outside until the debtor brought out the pledge and presented it to him before witnesses (Deut. 24:10–11). Essential objects that were necessary to sustain life, such as the MILLSTONE, could not be taken as a pledge (Deut. 24:6).

A person's outer cloak, which was essential for warmth to the poor during cold nights, could not be kept as a pledge overnight (Ex. 22:26; Amos 2:8). Thus the Mosaic law sought to preserve the worth and dignity of both the family and the individual debtor.

Occasionally debtors would give a child or slave as the pledge for a debt (2 Kin. 4:1; Neh. 5:1–5). Sometimes a family member or a friend would guarantee the pledge for another (Prov. 6:1–5; 17:18).

The Mosaic law also provided for the SABBATICAL YEAR every seventh year (Deut. 15:1) and the Year of JUBILEE every fiftieth year (Lev. 25:8–55). These were times of release when debts were to be forgiven and all pledges returned.

Although Christ did not condemn investments to earn money (Matt. 25:27; Luke 19:23), He emphasized the need for all people to show love and grace toward their fellow human beings (Matt. 5:25–26; Luke 12:58–59). He taught us to pray, "Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors" (Matt. 6:12). God has offered His grace in the form of His Son to pay the price for our debts (Heb. 7:22). Out of gratitude, we should show that love to others (Luke 7:36–50).

DECALOGUE [DECK uh log] (see COMMANDMENTS, TEN).

DECAPOLIS [dih CAP oh liss] (ten cities)—a district of northern Palestine, with a large Greek population, mostly on the east side of the Jordan River and embracing ten cities (see Map 6, C–3). Early in his ministry, Jesus was followed by "great multitudes," including people from Decapolis (Matt. 4:25). When Jesus healed the demon-possessed man from GADARA, he “began to proclaim in Decapolis all that Jesus had done for him” (Mark 5:20). Later, Jesus traveled through the midst of the region (Mark 7:31).

Pliny, the Greek historian, identified the ten cities of the Decapolis as: Damascus, Dion, Gadara, Gerasa (or Galasa), Hippos (or Hippo), Canatha (or Kanatha), Pella, Philadelphia (the Old Testament Rabbah or Rabbath Ammon and present-day Amman, the capital of Jordan), Raphana (or Rephana), and Scythopolis (Beth Shan). Later other towns, such as Abila and Edrei, were added to this district.

DECISION, VALLEY OF (see JEHOSHAPHAT, VALLEY OF).

DECREE—an official order, command, or edict issued by a king or other person of authority. The decrees of kings were often delivered to distant towns or cities by messengers and publicly announced at city gates or other public places (Ezra 1:1; Amos 4:5). The Bible also refers to God’s decrees, universal laws or rules to which the entire world is subject (Ps. 148:6).

DEDAN [DEE dun]—the name of two men and a geographical region in the Bible:

1. A descendant of Cush (Gen. 10:7; 1 Chr. 1:9).
2. A son of Jokshan and a grandson of Abraham and Keturah (Gen. 25:3; 1 Chr. 1:32).
3. A district near Edom and the Dead Sea (Jer. 25:23; Ezek. 25:13; 27:15).

DEDANITES [DEAD un ites]—natives or inhabitants of DEDAN (Is. 21:13; Dedanim, KJV).

DEDICATION—a religious ceremony in which a person or a thing is set aside or consecrated to God’s service. In Bible times, many different things were included in such services: the temple (2 Chr. 2:4), a field (Lev. 27:16), a house (Lev. 27:14), articles of precious metal (2 Sam. 8:10), even spoils won in battle (1 Chr. 26:27).

In one of the most beautiful passages in the Bible, Hannah presented her young son Samuel to God in an act of child dedication (1 Sam. 1:19–28). Hannah’s prayer of thanksgiving to God (1 Sam. 2:1–10) is a model of praise and dedication for all who seek to honor God through their lives.

DEDICATION, FEAST OF (see FEASTS AND FESTIVALS).

DEEP, THE—a vast space, expanse, or abyss. The term is used in Scripture in several ways. The first use occurs in Genesis 1:2: "The earth was without form, and void; and darkness was on the face of the deep." The word may refer in this phrase to the chaos existing at creation, or it may indicate the vast expanse of waters that covered the earth at creation (Ps. 104:6; Prov. 8:28). The term is elsewhere used to refer to the oceans and to the volume of water that burst forth at the Flood (Gen. 7:11; 8:2). Jonah spoke of God's casting him "into the deep" (Jon. 2:3), or the Mediterranean Sea. The apostle Paul wrote, "Three times I was shipwrecked; a night and a day I have been in the deep" (2 Cor. 11:25). This was apparently a reference to his being cast adrift on the Mediterranean Sea.

The deep also refers to the ABYSS, the abode of the dead (Rom. 10:7) and evil spirits (Luke 8:31; Rev. 9:1–2, 11; 20:1). All of these references to the "bottomless pit" translate a Greek word for unfathomable depth.

Figuratively, the deep means that which is profound or mighty: the great judgments of God (Ps. 36:6; 92:5; Rom. 11:33) or the "deep things of God" (1 Cor. 2:10).

DEER (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

DEFECT (see DISABILITIES AND DEFORMITIES).

DEFILE—to make unclean or impure. At least five types of defilement are mentioned in the Old Testament: (1) ceremonial (Lev. 15:19); (2) ethical (Ezek. 37:23); (3) physical (Song 5:3); (4) religious (Jer. 3:1); and (5) sexual (Lev. 15:24). The purpose of the Old Testament laws about defilement was to preserve the holiness of God's chosen people. But the Jewish rabbis turned these laws into a legalistic system that emphasized ceremonial cleanliness while ignoring spiritual purity. Jesus reversed this situation by emphasizing the need for moral purity and ethical living (Mark 7:1–23).

DEGREES, SONG OF (see ASCENTS, SONG OF).

DEHAVITES [dih HAY vites]—one of the tribes that colonized Samaria after Israel was carried away into captivity (Ezra 4:9). Herodotus, the fifth-century Greek historian, mentions that these people, known as Dai or Daoi, were among the nomadic tribes of Persia.

DELAIAH [dih LAY yah]—the name of five men in the Old Testament:

1. The sixth son of Elioenai, a descendant of Zerubbabel and King David (1 Chr. 3:24; Dalaiah, KJV).
2. A descendant of Aaron and one of David's priests (1 Chr. 24:18).
3. One of the NETHINIM (temple servants) who returned from the captivity with Zerubbabel (Ezra 2:60; Neh. 7:62).
4. The father of a contemporary of Nehemiah (Neh. 6:10).
5. A son of Shemaiah who pleaded with King Jehoiakim not to destroy the scroll containing Jeremiah's prophecies (Jer. 36:12, 25).

DELILAH [dih LIE lah]—the woman loved by Samson, the mightiest of Israel's judges. She was probably a Philistine. She betrayed Samson to the lords of the Philistines for 1,100 pieces of silver (Judg. 16:5). Deluding Samson into believing she loved him, Delilah persuaded him to tell her the secret of his strength—his long hair, which was the symbol of his Nazirite vow. While Samson slept at her home in the Valley of Sorek, the Philistines entered and cut his hair. With his strength gone, Samson was easily captured and imprisoned, then blinded.

No biblical evidence supports the popular belief that Delilah was deeply repentant over her actions. She even may have been one of the 3,000 Philistines buried beneath the temple of Dagon Samson destroyed when his God-given strength returned (Judg. 16:27–30).

DELUGE (see FLOOD).

DEMAS [DEE mus]—a friend and co-worker of the apostle Paul at Rome. Demas later deserted Paul, "having loved this present world" (2 Tim. 4:10; Col. 4:14; Philem. 24).

DEMETRIUS [dih ME tree us]—the name of two men in the New Testament:

1. A silversmith at Ephesus (Acts 19:24, 38) who made and sold silver models of the city's famed temple of the goddess Diana (Artemis). Alarmed at what the spread of the gospel would do to his business, Demetrius incited a riot against the apostle Paul. For two hours, the mob cried, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" (Acts 19:28, 34). The mob was quieted by the city clerk (Acts 19:35–40). Later, Paul left Ephesus for Macedonia (Acts 20:1).
2. A Christian commended by John because he had "a good testimony from all" (3 John 12).

DEMONS—another name for fallen angels who joined the kingdom of Satan in rebellion against God.

Origin. The origin of demons is not explicitly discussed in the Bible. But the New Testament speaks of the fall and later imprisonment of a group of angels (1 Pet. 3:19–20; 2 Pet. 2:4; Jude 6). The group that participated in the fall apparently followed one of their own number, SATAN. The fall left Satan and his angels free to contaminate the human race with wickedness (Gen. 3; Matt. 25:41; Rev. 12:9).

A symbolic view of this "initial" fall appears in Revelation 12:3–4 where the dragon (a symbol for Satan) "drew a third of the stars of heaven" (a symbol for angels) and "threw them to the earth." Thus, Satan has his own angels, presumably these demons (Matt. 25:41; Rev. 12:9).

Demons in the Old Testament. Because the Israelites believed God's power was unlimited, the Old Testament contains little information about demons. The primitive status of the understanding of demons during this time is perhaps reflected in the way the Old Testament relates the fallen angels to God. It was a "distressing (or evil) spirit from God" (1 Sam. 16:15–16, 23) that brought great distress to Saul the king. It was a "lying spirit" from the Lord about whom Micaiah, the prophet of the Lord, spoke (1 Kin. 22:21–23).

Pagan worship is also related to demon activity in the Old Testament (Lev. 17:7; Ps. 106:37). Demons delight in making heathen idols the focus of their activities.

Demons in the New Testament. The New Testament accepts the Old Testament teaching about demons and advances the doctrine significantly. Demons are designated in a number of different ways in the New Testament. Quite frequently they are called “unclean spirits” (Matt. 10:1; Mark 6:7). Another descriptive phrase for them is “wicked [or evil] spirits” (Luke 7:21; Acts 19:12–13). In his writings Paul calls them “deceiving spirits” (1 Tim. 4:1). John refers to “spirits of demons” (Rev. 16:14). Luke describes one demon as a “spirit of divination” (Acts 16:16).

The only individual demon named in the New Testament (Satan himself is never referred to as a demon) is the one called Abaddon in Hebrew and Apollyon in Greek (Rev. 9:11). Some scholars believe this is another name for Satan or that this is an unfallen angel. But stronger evidence suggests he was a fallen angelic leader who is subject to the kingly authority of Satan. Legion (Mark 5:9; Luke 8:30) is probably a collective name for a group of demons rather than the name of a single demon.

A prime purpose of Jesus’ earthly ministry was to overcome the power of Satan. This included His conquest of the demonic realm (Matt. 12:25–29; Luke 11:17–22; John 12:31; 1 John 3:8). This explains the fierce conflict between Jesus and these evil spirits while He was on earth.

Yet Jesus’ enemies accused Him of being in alliance with Satan’s kingdom, including his demons (Mark 3:22; John 8:48). This same accusation was made against His forerunner, John the Baptist (Matt. 11:18; Luke 7:33). But Jesus’ works of goodness and righteousness showed that these claims were not true (Matt. 12:25–29; Luke 11:17–22).

Following the resurrection of Jesus and His return to heaven, these demonic principalities and powers have continued their warfare against those who are His followers (Rom. 8:38–39; Eph. 6:12). Yet Satan and his allies will finally be overthrown by God. After Christ returns, the devil and his angels will be defeated and thrown into the lake of fire and brimstone (Matt. 25:41; Rev. 20:10). This is a doom with which demons are quite familiar (Matt. 8:29). God will achieve the ultimate victory in this conflict, which has been going on since the beginning of time.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• These columns completely surrounded an outdoor theater in Gerasa (modern Jerash) during the New Testament period. This is apparently not the same Gerasa (also spelled Gergesa) in the region where Jesus healed two demon-possessed men (Matt. 8:28–34).

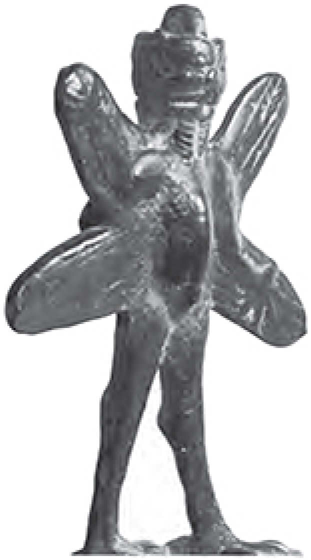


Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• The Assyrian desert demon Pazuzu had the feet and wings of an eagle, a human body with claws for hands, and a misshapen head.

DEMON POSSESSION—an affliction of persons in the New Testament who were possessed or controlled by demons (Matt. 4:24; 8:33; demoniac, NASB).

The New Testament gives graphic descriptions of the effect of demons on people. Some of the diseases which they caused included muteness (Matt. 12:22; Mark 9:17, 25), deafness (Mark 9:25), blindness (Matt. 12:22), and bodily deformity (Luke 13:10–17). But demons were not responsible for all physical ailments. The gospel writers frequently distinguished between sickness and demon possession (Matt. 4:24; Mark 1:32; Luke 6:17–18). Sometimes a problem caused by demons appears to have another cause in another situation (Matt. 12:22; 15:30).

In New Testament times demons were also responsible for some mental problems (Matt. 8:28; Acts 19:13–16). The ranting and raving that they produced probably should be included with mental disorders (Mark 1:23–24; John 10:20). Uncontrolled fits were another form of demonic affliction (Luke 9:37–42; Mark 1:26). Sometimes a demon also caused a person to behave in an antisocial manner (Luke 8:27, 35).

The method of Jesus and His disciples in casting out demons differed radically from the magical methods so often used in that time. Through His simple command Jesus expelled them (Mark 1:25; 5:8; 9:25). His disciples simply added the authority of His name to the command (Luke 10:17; Acts 16:18). Even some people who were not His followers invoked His power (Luke 9:49; Acts 19:13). In some instances prayer was necessary before a demon could be cast out (Mark 9:29).

By casting out demons, Jesus showed that the KINGDOM OF GOD—God's rule in the affairs of mankind—was a present reality. This was also a clear demonstration of His power over Satan and the demonic forces of sin and evil in the world.

DEN—the lair of a wild animal (Job 37:8). The prophet Daniel was cast into a den of lions (Dan. 6:7–24).

DEN OF LIONS—the lair (Job 38:40), thicket (Ps. 10:9), or cave (Nah. 2:12) where lions live. The most famous den of lions in the Bible is that into which Daniel was thrown (Daniel 6). This apparently was a deep cavern, either natural or artificial, sealed with a large stone (Dan. 6:17). The kings of Assyria kept lions in captivity, releasing them periodically for the royal sport of lion hunting. The lions of the Daniel story probably were kept by King Darius for this purpose. Daniel's preservation from the lions is an inspiring example of God's control of His world and His power to protect His people.

DENARIUS [dih NAIR e us] (see MONEY OF THE BIBLE).

DENY—to be untrue or to disown. This word is used often in the Bible to express one's lack of faithfulnessto God or Christ. A person may deny God in word or deed. Denial in word often involves disowning or rejecting a relationship with, or knowledge of, God or Christ (Josh. 24:27; Matt. 10:33; 2 Pet. 2:1). Denial in deed especially refers to withholding something from someone (Prov. 30:7; 1 Tim. 5:8). It may even refer to self-denial—abstaining from the pleasures of the world for the sake of Christ (Matt. 16:24).

DEPOSIT—something entrusted to another for safekeeping; money given as a down payment. The Old Testament laid down specific laws concerning the protection of deposits (Ex. 22:7–13). The New Testament describes the gospel as a special trust given to Christians, who are responsible for proclaiming it faithfully (1 Cor. 9:17; 1 Tim. 6:20).

DEPRAVITY (see MAN).

DEPUTY (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

DERBE [DUR bih]—a city in the southeastern part of LYCAONIA (see Map 7, D–2), a province of Asia Minor, to which Paul and Barnabas retreated when driven from Lystra (Acts 14:6–20), while on their first missionary journey. Paul also visited Derbe on his second missionary journey (Acts 16:1). Derbe is twice mentioned with Lystra; it was situated southeast of that city (Acts 14:6; 16:1). One of Paul's travel companions, Gaius, was a native of Derbe (Acts 20:4).

Photo by Howard Vos

• The unexcavated mound of Derbe, a city visited by the apostle Paul (Acts 14:20; 16:1).

DESCENT INTO HADES—Traditionally, Christ's journey to the place of the dead on our behalf following His crucifixion. Some interpreters see this descent in Paul's reference to "lower parts of the earth" (Eph. 4:9). Both Peter (Acts 2:27) and Paul (Acts 13:35) quote Psalm 16:10, declaring that Jesus experienced death, but that He was kept from the corruption of the grave. God did not abandon His Son in hell, but raised Him from the dead (Acts 2:27). From the heights of heaven's throne Jesus descended to earth and even to death itself to provide for our REDEMPTION.

DESERT—a dry and barren wasteland; a solitary place that is uninhabited; an arid pastureland. Different aspects of the desert (its wild animals, barrenness, and death) are emphasized in various contexts in the Bible.

Many desert areas support green plant life in the wet season, but dry up in the heat of the long, hot summer (Jer. 23:10; Joel 1:19–20). The desert area south of Beersheba toward Mount Sinai is very barren with less than two inches of rain per year. Other desert areas of the Holy Land have sufficient rain to support plant life (Ps. 65:12; John 6:10).

The Bible refers to the Wilderness (Desert) of Beersheba (Gen. 21:14), Beth Aven (Josh. 18:12), Damascus (1 Kin. 19:15), Edom (2 Kin. 3:8), En Gedi (1 Sam. 24:1), Red Sea (Ex. 13:18), Gibeon (2 Sam. 2:24), Jeruel (2 Chr. 20:16), Judah/Judea (Judg. 1:16; Matt. 3:1), Kadesh (Ps. 29:8), Kedemoth (Deut. 2:26), Maon (1 Sam. 23:24), Moab (Deut. 2:8), Paran (Gen. 21:21), Shur (Ex. 15:22), Sin (Ex. 16:1), Sinai (Ex. 19:1), Tekoa (2 Chr. 20:20), Zin (Num. 13:21), and Ziph (1 Sam. 23:14).

One of the promises of God in the prophetic books is that the desert lands will be transformed into fertile and productive fields. God will put rivers in the desert (Is. 43:19–20), which will bloom and rejoice (Is. 35:1, 6–7). The fir trees will grow, and the deserts will look as lush as the Garden of Eden (Is. 51:3).

The New Testament usually refers to the desert as a solitary place. Jesus repeatedly withdrew from the large crowds (Luke 4:42; 9:10–12) to these places for privacy and a time of prayer with His Father.

DESIGNER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

DESIRE OF ALL NATIONS—a phrase interpreted by some translations of the Bible as a Messianic title (Hag. 2:7; KJV, NKJV; desired of all nations, NIV; wealth of all nations, NASB; treasure of all nations, REB; see Mal. 3:1). The prophet Haggai envisioned a time when the choicest and costliest treasures of the Gentiles would be dedicated to the God of Israel. For the Christian, the Lord Jesus Christ is, indeed, "the Desire of all nations."

DESOLATION, ABOMINATION OF (see ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION).

DESTROYER—an enemy that invades the land of Israel (Is. 49:17; Jer. 22:7; 50:11), as well as a special agent used by God to accomplish judgment. In the account of the PASSOVER before the Hebrews were released from bondage by the Egyptians, the destroyer is first mentioned as distinct from the Lord (Ex. 12:23; see 1 Cor. 10:10).

DESTRUCTION (see ABADDON).

DEUEL [DEW el] (knowledge of god)—the father of Eliasaph, who was leader of the tribe of Gad when the people of Israel were numbered at Sinai (Num. 1:14; 7:42; 10:20). He is also called Reuel (Num. 2:14).

DEUTERONOMY, BOOK OF—an Old Testament book commonly identified as the farewell speech of Moses to the people of Israel just before his death. The title of the book, from the Greek word Deuteronomion, means "second law" and comes from the Septuagint text of Deuteronomy 17:18 ("a copy of this law"). In his address, Moses underscored and repeated many of the laws of God that the people received at Mount Sinai about forty years earlier. He also challenged the people to remain faithful to their God and His commands as they prepared to enter the Promised Land.

Structure of the Book. Because it is written in the format of a series of warmhearted speeches, Deuteronomy is unique among the books of the Bible. Following a brief introduction of Moses as the speaker, the book begins with a series of speeches and addresses from Moses to the people. These speeches continue through chapter 31, with only brief narrative interruptions of his spoken words. Chapter 32 records the Song of Moses, while the Blessing of Moses constitutes chapter 33. The final chapter departs from the speech format to report on Moses' death and the selection of Joshua as his successor.

In his addresses, Moses reminded the people of their days of slavery in Egypt and how God had delivered them safely through the wilderness to the borders of the Promised Land. He also restated the Ten Commandments and indicated that these great moral principles should direct their lives. As God's special people, they were to be holy and righteous as an example for surrounding pagan nations. Moses also warned Israel of the perils of idolatry and called the people to worship the one true God, who demanded their total commitment: "Hear, O Israel: The LORD our God, the LORD is one! You shall love the LORD your God with all your heart, with all your soul, and with all your might" (6:4–5).

As he spoke to the people, Moses also repeated many of the laws and regulations that dealt with observance of the Sabbath, proper forms of worship, treatment of the poor, religious feasts and festivals, inheritance rights, sexual morality, property rights, treatment of servants, and the administration of justice.

Authorship and Date. Conservative Bible students are united in their conviction that Moses wrote this book. But many liberal scholars theorize that Deuteronomy was written several centuries after Moses' time by an unknown author who wanted to bring about the religious reforms of the nation of Judah under King Josiah (2 Kin. 22–23). These sweeping reforms began when a copy of the "Book of the Law" (Deut. 22:8) or "Book of the Covenant" (23:2)—thought to be all (or parts) of Deuteronomy—was discovered as workmen repaired the temple in Jerusalem. According to this theory, Deuteronomy had been written during, or shortly before, Josiah's reign (640–609 B.C.).

This theory unfortunately overlooks the statement of the book itself that Moses wrote much if not most of Deuteronomy and directed that it be read regularly by the people (31:9–13). The first-person pronouns "I" and "we" appear throughout the book as Moses refers to himself and his people and their experiences. The logical conclusion is that Moses wrote the first 33 chapters of the book. Chapter 34, about his death, probably was added by his successor Joshua as a tribute to Moses. The date of the writing must have been some time around 1400 B.C.

Historical Setting. The Book of Deuteronomy marks a turning point in the history of God's Chosen People. For the previous forty years, they had been through many unforgettable experiences under the leadership of Moses. He had led them out of enslavement in Egypt and through the wilderness to receive God’s laws at Mount Sinai. Then, because of their rebellion and unfaithfulness, they had wandered aimlessly in the desert for almost forty years. Now they were camped on the eastern border of Canaan, the land God had promised as their homeland.

Moses sensed that the people would face many new temptations as they settled in the land and established permanent dwellings among the pagan Canaanites. He also realized that his days as their leader were drawing to a close. He used this occasion to remind the people of their heritage as God’s special people and to challenge them to remain faithful to God and His laws. Thus, the Book of Deuteronomy becomes a stirring conclusion to the life of this great statesman and prophet. One of the final verses of the book pays this fitting tribute to Moses’ visionary leadership: “Since then there has not arisen in Israel a prophet like Moses, whom the LORD knew face to face” (34:10).

Theological Contribution. The New Testament contains more than eighty quotations from Deuteronomy, so it must be rated as one of the foundational books of the Bible. Jesus Himself often quoted from Deuteronomy. During His temptation, He answered Satan with four quotations from Scripture. Three of these came from this key Old Testament book (Matt. 4:4; Luke 4:4—Deut. 8:3; Matt. 4:7, Luke 4:12—Deut. 6:16; Matt. 4:10, Luke 4:8—Deut. 6:13).

When Jesus was asked to name the most important commandment in the Law, He responded with the familiar call from Deuteronomy: “You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, with all your soul and with all your might” (Matt. 22:37; Mark 12:30; Luke 10:27; Deut. 6:5). He then added some other important words from Leviticus to show that He was carrying the law one step further: “The second [commandment] is like it: ‘You shall love your neighbor as yourself’ ” (Matt. 22:39; Mark 12:31; Luke 10:27; Lev. 19:18).

Another great truth underscored by the Book of Deuteronomy is that God is faithful to His Covenant People, those whom He has called to carry out His purpose of REDEMPTION in the world. The Hebrews were chosen as God’s instruments not because they were a worthy, powerful people, but because He loved them and desired to bless the rest of the world through their influence (7:6, 11). This is still God’s purpose as He continues to call people to follow Him and commit themselves to His purpose in their lives.

Special Considerations. Some people look upon the laws of God in the Old Testament as burdensome and restrictive. The Book of Deuteronomy, however, teaches that God's laws are given for our own good to help us stay close to Him in our attitudes and behavior. Thus, Moses called on the people to keep God's statutes, "which I command you today for your good" (10:13). The intention of God's law is positive; passages in the New Testament that seem to condemn the law must be interpreted in this light. It is the misuse of the law—trusting it rather than God's mercy as the basis of our salvation—that we should avoid. God's law is actually fulfilled in the person of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ (Matt. 5:17, 20).

Deuteronomy: A Study and Teaching Outline

Part One: Moses' First Speech

What God Has Done for Israel (1:1—4:43)

I. Preamble of the Covenant 1:1–5

II. Historical Review of God's Acts for Israel 1:6—4:43
- A. From Mount Sinai to Kadesh Barnea 1:6–18
- B. At Kadesh Barnea 1:19–46
- C. From Kadesh Barnea to Moab 2:1–23
- D. Conquest of Transjordan 2:24—3:20
- E. Change of Leadership 3:21–29
- F. Summary of the Covenant 4:1–43

Part Two: Moses' Second Speech

What God Expects of Israel (4:44—26:19)

I. Introduction to the Law of God 4:44–49

II. Explanation of the Covenant Stipulations 5:1—11:32
- A. The Covenant of the Great King 5:1–33
- B. The Command to Teach the Law 6:1–25
- C. The Command to Conquer Canaan 7:1–26
- D. The Command to Remember the Lord 8:1–20
- E. Commands about Self-Righteousness 9:1—10:11

F. Commands Regarding Blessings and Cursings 10:12—11:32

III. Explanation of the Additional Laws 12:1—26:19

A. Explanation of the Ceremonial Laws 12:1—16:17
B. Explanation of the Civil Laws 16:18—20:20
C. Explanation of the Social Laws 21:1—26:19

Part Three: Moses' Third Speech

What God Will Do for Israel (27:1—34:12)

I. Confirming the Covenant 27:1—28:68

II. Establishing the Covenant 29:1—30:20

III. Changing the Covenant Mediator 31:1—34:12

A. Moses Charges Joshua and Israel 31:1–13
B. God Charges Israel 31:14–21
C. The Book of the Law Is Deposited 31:22–29
D. The Song of Moses 31:30—32:47
E. The Death of Moses 32:48—34:12
  1. Moses Is Ordered to Mount Nebo 32:48–52
  2. Moses Blesses the Tribes 33:1–29
  3. Moses Views the Promised Land 34:1–4
  4. Moses Dies and Is Mourned 34:5–8
  5. Moses Is Replaced by Joshua 34:9
  6. Moses Is Praised in Israel 34:10–12

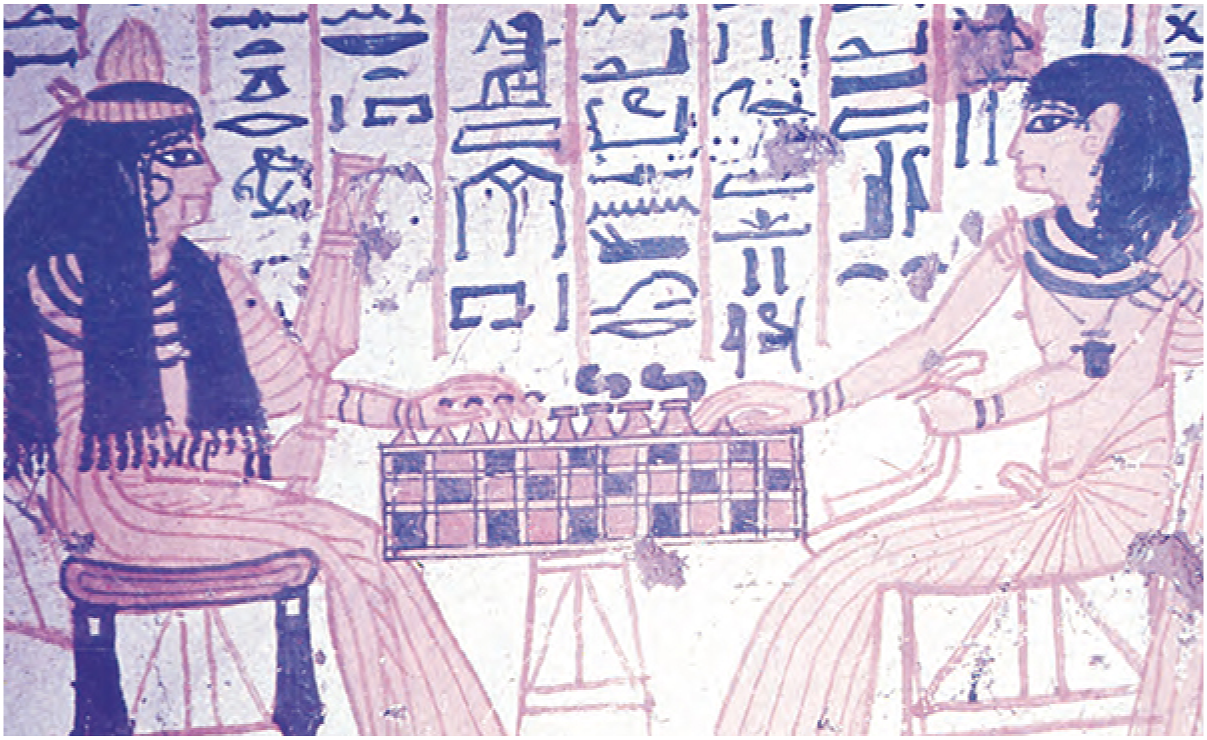

Photo by Howard Vos

• This painting from a tomb at Thebes shows two women of the Egyptian nobility playing a board game. The Israelites were slaves of the ruling nobles of Egypt (Deut. 16:12).

DEVIL (accuser, slanderer)—the main title for the fallen angelic being who is the supreme enemy of God and humankind. Satan is his most common name, and devil is what he is—the accuser or deceiver. The title "devil" appears thirty-five times in the New Testament of the NKJV. In every case it is preceded by the article "the," indicating a title rather than a name. The term comes from a Greek word that means "a false witness" or "malicious accuser."

Several descriptive phrases applied to the devil in the New Testament point out the nature of his wicked personality and the extent of his evil deeds.

That Serpent of Old (Rev. 12:9; 20:2). The devil worked through the serpent to tempt Eve (Gen. 3:1–6).

The Wicked or Evil One (Matt. 6:13; 13:19, 38; 1 John 2:13). This phrase depicts the devil's fundamental nature. He is in direct opposition to everything God is or all he wishes to do. He is the source of all evil and wickedness. While the KJV reads, "Deliver us from evil," the NKJV more accurately reads, "Deliver us from the evil one." Humanity needs this deliverance, for the devil "walks about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour" (1 Pet. 5:8).

Enemy (Matt. 13:25, 28, 39). The devil is our worst enemy. This is one enemy Jesus does not want us to love. He is an enemy of Christ, the church, and the gospel; he is tireless in his efforts to uproot good and sow evil.

Murderer (John 8:44). "He was a murderer from the beginning" are strong words from the lips of Jesus. The devil killed Abel and the prophets, and he wanted to kill Jesus before His time (8:40).

Deceiver (Rev. 20:10). Starting with Eve, the devil has attempted to deceive every human being. Evil people operating under the power of the evil one will continue to deceive (2 Tim. 3:13).

Beelzebub, the Ruler of the Demons (Matt. 9:34; 12:24). Beelzebub (see also 2 Kin. 1:2–3, 6, 16) means literally "lord of flies" and is a title of ridicule. The religious leaders of Jesus' time were guilty of blasphemy against the Holy Spirit because they claimed the miracles of Jesus were actually conducted by the devil. The KJV and some other versions incorrectly translate "demons" as "devils." There are many demons but only one devil. His name is Beelzebub, the chief leader of the fallen angels known as demons.

Belial (2 Cor. 6:15). The name means "worthlessness."

Ruler of This World (John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11). Three times Jesus called the devil the "ruler of this world." The devil offered the world to Jesus if He would worship him (Luke 4:5–7), but the Lord refused with these words, "Get behind me, Satan" (4:8). At Calvary God dealt a death blow to this world ruler. It is only a matter of time before God will win the final victory (1 John 3:8; Matt. 25:41; Rev. 12:7).

The devil is strong, but Christians are stronger through the Lord (Eph. 6:11). They have the protection needed to withstand his assaults. The devil tempts, but God provides a way of escape (1 Cor. 10:13); the devil tries to take advantage of people (2 Cor. 2:11), but he will flee if fought (James 4:7). The devil should not be feared, for Jesus is more powerful than this deceiving prince of the demons (1 John 4:4).

Also see SATAN.

DEW—condensed water that settles upon vegetation during the cool nights of the summer months. The dew of Israel is heaviest near the coast of the Mediterranean Sea and seaward slopes, and it does not occur at all in parts of the Jordan valley. The dew descends (2 Sam. 17:12) and departs (Hos. 6:4; 13:13) suddenly. It is vitally important in the summer when no rain falls, amounting to as much as 4–5 inches (100–125 mm) annually. A person can be drenched by the heavy dew (Song 5:2; Dan. 4:1). The dew on Gideon’s fleece was so heavy that it filled a bowl with water (Judg. 6:37–38).

Like the rain, dew was regarded as God’s gift (Gen. 27:28; Hos. 14:5). The dew brought good crops (Gen. 27:28; Deut. 33:13) and the manna during Israel’s escape from Egypt (Ex. 16:13–14; Num. 11:9). It thus became a symbol of fruitfulness and was associated with God’s word (Deut. 32:2), the resurrection (Is. 26:19), and the remnant of God’s people (Mic. 6:7; Zech. 8:12).

DIADEM [DIE uh dem]—a band or wrapping around the turban of a king or his queen signifying their royal authority. Rulers of the ancient Near East did not wear rigid gold crowns but cloth turbans wound around the head and decorated in turn with cloth diadems studded with gems.

Two Hebrew words translated as diadem in the Old Testament come from a word meaning “to wind around.” One of these words refers to the high priest’s headpiece (Lev. 8:9; 16:4) as well as the king’s turban (Ezek. 21:26). The other word is also rendered as diadem in several Old Testament passages (Is. 62:3; Job 29:14).

The New Testament uses the Greek word for diadem only in the Book of Revelation (Rev. 12:3; 13:1; 19:12). The New Testament also makes a clear distinction between a diadem and a CROWN. A crown was a garland or a wreath awarded for faithfulness in service, such as a crown of righteousness (2 Tim. 4:8), while a diadem always symbolized royal authority.

DIAL (see SUNDIAL).

DIAL OF AHAZ (see SUNDIAL OF AHAZ).

DIAMOND (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

DIANA [die ANN uh] (see GODS, PAGAN).

DIASPORA [dee AS puh ruh] (see DISPERSION).

DIBLAH [DIB luh]—an unidentified place in the nation of Israel mentioned by the prophet Ezekiel (Ezek. 6:14; Diblath, KJV). It may be the same place as RIBLAH No. 1.

DIBLAIM [dib LAY im] (double cakes of figs)—the father-in-law of Hosea the prophet (Hos. 1:3).

DIBON [DIE bahn]—the name of two cities in the Old Testament.

1. A prominent Moabite city (see Map 3, C–5) located east of the Jordan River and north of the River Arnon (Num. 21:30; 32:3; Is. 15:2; Jer. 48:18; Dimon, Is. 15:9). The Moabite (Mesha) Stone was discovered here in 1868. Dibon is now identified with the modern Dhiban.
2. A village of southern Judah near the boundary of Edom. Dibon was resettled following the captivity (Neh. 11:25; Dimonah, Josh. 15:22).

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• A city wall uncovered in the excavation of Dibon, one of the leading cities of Moab (Is. 15:2).

DIBRI [DIB rye]—a descendant of Dan whose daughter married an Egyptian. Her son was stoned to death for blaspheming the name of the Lord (Lev. 24:10–23).

DICE PLAYING—a game of chance. Although dice playing is never mentioned in the Bible, many cultures of the ancient world used dice in games of chance. Dice were used to determine moves in board games and as a form of gambling. The Egyptians used pyramid-shaped dice, probably introducing them to the Hebrew people while they were enslaved in Egypt.

The casting of lots is mentioned in the Bible as a form of decision-making (Lev. 16:8; Prov. 16:33; Acts 1:26). Just exactly how lots were cast is not known; this procedure could have involved dice. Soldiers at Jesus' crucifixion gambled for His clothes by casting lots (Matt. 27:35; John 19:24).

DIDACHE [DID uh kay] (teaching)—a writing of the early church probably used as a manual of instruction to train converts to Christianity in doctrine and discipline before they were baptized. The date of its writing is uncertain, but it was probably put into its final form between A.D. 50 and 225.

The Didache contained several important sections, including a discussion of the Two Ways—the ways of life and death; directions for worship; instructions concerning church officers and the conduct of congregational affairs; and a section on ESCHATOLOGY, or the end time. The Didache is important because it gives insights into church life during this early period of Christian history.

DIDRACHMA [dih DROCK muh] (see MONEY OF THE BIBLE).

DIDYMUS [DID ih mus] (twin)—the Greek name of THOMAS, one of the twelve disciples of Christ (John 11:16; 20:24; 21:2).

DIGNITARIES—angelic beings who hold a position of glory and honor (2 Pet. 2:10; Jude 8; dignities, KJV; the glorious ones, NRSV; celestial beings, REB, NIV; angelic majesties, NRSV, NASB).

DIGNITIES—KJV word for DIGNITARIES.

DIKLAH [DICK la]—a descendant of the family of Shem (Gen. 10:27; 1 Chr. 1:21). Most likely, Diklah also was the name of an oasis in southern Arabia.

DILEAN [DILL ee un]—a town in the Shephelah (lowland) of Judah near Lachish (Josh. 15:38). It is possibly the same place as Tell en-Najileh.

DILL (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

DIMNAH [DIM nah]—a border town in the territory of Zebulun assigned to the Levites of the Merari family (Josh. 21:35).

DIMON [DIE muhn]—a city of Moab (Is. 15:9); the same place as DIBON No. 1. “The waters of Dimon” (Is. 15:9; Dibon, Is. 15:2) probably refers to the River Arnon.

DIMONAH [die MOW nuh]—a city in the Negeb (southern wilderness) of Judah, near Edom (Josh. 15:22). The same place as DIBON No. 2.

DINAH [DIE nah] (one who judges)—Jacob’s daughter by Leah (Gen. 30:21; 34:1). When she was raped by Shechem, the son of Hamor the Hivite, her brothers were enraged. Later, when Shechem wanted Dinah for his wife, he asked his father to make arrangements for him to marry her. Dinah’s brothers consented on the condition that all the Hivites be circumcised.

The Hivites agreed; but after they had been circumcised, Simeon and Levi, two of Dinah’s brothers, suddenly attacked them “on the third day, when they were in pain” (Gen. 34:25) and killed all the males. Jacob did not condone the deed; in fact, upon his deathbed he denounced it (Gen. 49:5–7).

DINAITES [DIE nuh ites]—a people sent by OSNAPPER (Ashurbanipal), king of Assyria, to colonize the cities of Samaria after the captivity (Ezra 4:9).

DINHABAH [DIN huh bah]—the capital city of Bela, king of Edom (Gen. 36:32; 1 Chr. 1:43).

DIONYSIUS THE AREOPAGITE [die oh NISS e us; air e OP uh ghyte]—a member of the AREOPAGUS, the supreme court of Athens. Dionysius became a Christian after hearing the gospel preached by the apostle Paul (Acts 17:34). Nothing else is known about him except by tradition. One tradition says he was martyred in Athens during the reign of the Roman emperor Domitian.

DIOTROPHES [die OTT ruh fees] (nourished by Jupiter)—an unruly believer reprimanded by John (3 John 9–10). He appears to have been a strong personality or a prominent church leader who rejected both John and certain of his followers. Diotrophes stands in contrast to both Gaius (verse 1) and Demetrius (verse 12).

DIPHATH [DIE fath]—the second son of Gomer (1 Chr. 1:6). He is the same person as RIPHATH (Gen. 10:3).

DIRECTION—the line along which anything lies, in relationship to the point or region toward which it is directed. Several methods were used in the ancient world to determine direction. The Hebrew people used at least three of these methods: basic direction, local geography, and the position of the sun. For the Hebrews, the terms north, south, east, and west carried certain characteristics. They were not, as in Western culture today, simply neutral terms telling direction only.

The people of Israel divided the world into four parts, which they termed “the four corners of the earth” (Is. 11:12; Rev. 7:1; 20:8). The basic direction was the east—the direction of the rising sun. In determining direction, the Israelites faced the point where they knew the sun rose each day. Thus, the east was the front, sometimes called the “place of dawning.” All other directions received their designations relative to the east as the front. Thus, west was the “rear,” north was on the left, and south was on the right. Directions such as northwest and southeast were seldom used in Bible times.

The Old Testament usually spoke of directions other than the east as definite geographic locations. The Hebrew word translated as north meant “lookout” and was the name of a high mountain in Syria.

The term south, from a Hebrew word meaning “dry country,” usually referred to the NEGEV (Gen. 20:1), the dry region south of Beersheba. The west was designated by two methods—the position of the sun (“place of the setting sun”) and geographic location (the “sea” or “great sea,” referring to the Mediterranean Sea).

DISABILITIES AND DEFORMITIES—bodily handicaps or defects in Bible times that marred a person’s appearance or hindered his physical movement. Various kinds of physical disabilities are mentioned in the Bible, particularly in the gospels in the accounts of Jesus’ healing miracles.

Jesus healed the blind (Mark 10:51–52), the lame (Matt. 21:14), the deaf (Mark 7:33–35), and the maimed (Matt. 15:30). The Greek word translated as “maimed” referred to a person who was missing an arm or a leg. On one occasion, Jesus also restored a person’s withered hand (Matt. 12:9–13; shriveled, NIV)—an act of compassion that brought criticism from the Pharisees because He dared to heal on the Sabbath.

Another distinct disability in Bible times was impotence, or the inability of a male to father children. Sometimes a royal household servant was castrated as a precautionary measure, particularly if he worked with the members of the king’s harem or other women of the royal palace. Such sterilized domestic servants were known as eunuchs (Acts 8:27–39). Sometimes impotence was caused by accident. But no matter what the cause, a person who was a eunuch (Lev. 21:20; broken stones, KJV; crushed testicles, NRSV) was barred from serving as a priest under the Levitical law.

The Law also specifically stated that a person with an outward blemish or defect could not serve as a priest. This included "a man blind or lame, who has a marred face (flat nose, KJV), or any limb too long, a man who has a broken foot or broken hand, or is a hunchback (crookbacked, KJV), or a dwarf, or a man who has a defect in his eye" (Lev. 21:18–20).

The reasoning behind these strict regulations was that only those who were physically sound were worthy of serving at the altar of the Lord.

Also see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE.

DISCERNING OF SPIRITS—a gift of the Holy Spirit that enables a person to judge whether one who speaks in tongues or performs miracles does so by the power of the Holy Spirit or by a false spirit (1 Cor. 12:10; distinguishing between spirits, NIV). The apostle Paul suggested that a person led by the Holy Spirit will be concerned for those things that strengthen the church (1 Cor. 14:12, 26).

DISCIPLE—a student, learner, or pupil. In the Bible the word is used most often to refer to a follower of Jesus. The word is rarely used in the Old Testament. Isaiah used the term "disciples" to refer to those who are taught or instructed (Is. 8:16).

The word disciple is sometimes used in a more specific way to indicate the twelve apostles of Jesus (Matt. 10:1; 11:1; 20:17; Luke 9:1; the Twelve, NIV, REB, NASB, NRSV).

In general, apostles refers to a small, inner group of Jesus' followers; disciples refers to a larger group of Jesus' followers, such as the women who stood at Jesus' cross and discovered the empty tomb.

DISCIPLINE—to train by instruction and control (1 Cor. 9:27). The biblical concept of discipline has both a positive side (instruction, knowledge, and training) and a negative aspect (correction, punishment, and reproof). Those who refuse to submit to God's positive discipline by obeying His laws will experience God's negative discipline through His wrath and judgment. Also see CHASTISEMENT.

DISEASES OF THE BIBLE—Disease and sickness have plagued people since God cast Adam and Eve out of the Garden of Eden. The Hebrews believed illness was caused by sin in the individual, that God had to punish (Gen. 12:17; Prov. 23:29–32), the sin of a person's parents (2 Sam. 12:14–15), or seduction by Satan (Matt. 9:34; Luke 13:16). However, some passages in the Bible show there is not always such a simple explanation for disease (Job 34:19–20).

The Bible contains many general references to illness and disease without naming a specific malady. For example, the words "affliction" (Ps. 25:18) and "infirmity" (Jer. 10:19) often refer to an overwhelming sense of pain or sorrow that may be caused by either illness or spiritual despair.

The words "pestilence" (Jer. 21:6) and "plague" (Num. 11:33) seem to refer to contagious diseases of epidemic proportions that God sent occasionally as instruments of judgment upon His people, as well as upon the pagan nations of the ancient world. The NKJV word "pestilence" is used of the mysterious disease that struck the livestock of the Egyptians (Ex. 9:3; murrain, KJV).

Other words in the Bible that indicate the presence or effects of illness or disease include "bruise" (Is. 30:26), "sore" (Lev. 13:27), and "wound" (Job 34:6). A bruise occurs when the flesh beneath the skin is injured but the skin remains unbroken. But sores and wounds involve a puncture of the skin.

The following specific illnesses or diseases are mentioned or implied in the Bible. This list is keyed to the New King James Version of the Bible, with cross-references from five additional popular English versions: KJV, NASB, REB, NIV, and NRSV.

Ague (see Fever).

Blains (see Boils).

Blindness. Three types of blindness are mentioned in the Bible: sudden blindness caused by flies and aggravated by dirt, dust, and glare; the gradual blindness caused by old age; and chronic blindness. Paul suffered temporary blindness on the road to Damascus (Acts 9:8). Scripture often refers to old people whose eyes "grew dim" (Gen. 27:1; 48:10; 1 Sam. 4:15). But the Bible more often refers to chronic blindness.

The Israelites had compassion for the blind. In fact, God placed a curse upon those who made the blind wander out of their way (Deut. 27:18). Jesus ministered to many people who were blind. He said, "[God] has anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor. He has sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind" (Luke 4:18). Jesus healed a man born blind (John 9:1–41); a blind man whose healing was gradual (Mark 8:22–24); two blind men sitting by the wayside (Matt. 20:30–34); and a great number of others (Mark 10:46–52; Luke 7:21).

Blindness was often understood to be a punishment for evildoing. We find examples of this at Sodom (Gen. 19:11); in the Syrian army (2 Kin. 6:18); and in the case of Elymas at Paphos (Acts 13:6–11).

• A blind harpist practicing his skill, from an early Egyptian tomb carving.

Blood, Flow of. According to the Mosaic Law, a woman suffering from menstrual disorders was to be considered ceremonially unclean (Lev. 15:25). One such woman who had suffered for twelve years (Luke 8:43–48; hemorrhage, NASB; subject to bleeding, NIV) touched the hem of Jesus' garment and was healed immediately because of her great faith.

Bloody Flux (see Dysentery).

Boils. This term probably refers to anthrax, a disease that can be transmitted to humans by cattle, sheep, goats, and horses. The disease is caused by a rod-shaped bacterium that forms spores. These spores, in turn, can infect humans, who develop a boil-like lesion with a pustule (blain). In the infectious stage, the blain is called a malignant pustule. God inflicted boils on the Egyptians when the Pharaoh refused to let the Hebrews go to the Promised Land (Ex. 9:9–10; blains, KJV). This was also one of the afflictions God threatened to bring upon the Hebrew people because of their grumbling after the Exodus from Egypt (Deut. 28:27; botch, KJV).

Satan was permitted to afflict Job with boils from the top of his head to the tip of his toes (Job 2:7). King Hezekiah also was afflicted with boils (2 Kin. 20:7), which Isaiah cured by applying a poultice of figs. A fresh fig poultice has a drawing effect. Before the advent of antibiotics, this type of treatment for boils was common. Other words for boils used by different translations of the Bible are sores and scabs.

Botch (see Boils).

Bowels, Disease of (see Dysentery).

Cancer. This disease is mentioned only once in the Bible: "And their message will spread like cancer" (2 Tim. 2:17; canker, KJV; gangrene, NASB, REB, NIV, NRSV). It refers to the circulatory deterioration known as gangrene, which spreads rapidly and eats up tissue.

Canker (see Cancer).

Consumption. Moses warned the rebellious Israelites, "The LORD shall smite thee with a consumption, and with a fever, and with an inflammation and with an extreme burning" (Deut. 28:22; wasting disease, NIV). This disease is probably tuberculosis, a consumptive infection of the lungs.

Dropsy. This describes an abnormal accumulation of serous fluid in the body's connective tissue or in a serous cavity. The accumulation causes swelling. Jesus met at least one victim of dropsy in a certain Pharisee's house. Asked by Jesus if he thought it lawful to heal on the Sabbath, the Pharisee declined to answer. Jesus then healed the sufferer (Luke 14:1–4).

Dumbness (see Muteness).

Dumb Spirit (see Mute Spirit).

Dysentery. This is a disease that rots the bowels, or the intestines, in its advanced stage (2 Chr. 21:15–19). The fibrine separates from the inner coating of the intestines and is expelled. The KJV refers to a severe form of dysentery as the bloody flux. The father of a Christian named Publius lay sick with this disease (Acts 28:8). Paul prayed for him and the man was healed. Some scholars believe dysentery was also the strange malady that afflicted King Hezekiah of Judah (2 Kin. 20:1).

Eczema. A symptom of this disease was an inflammation of the skin, marked by redness, itching, and oozing lesions that become scaly, encrusted, or hardened (Lev. 21:20; 22:22; scurvy, KJV; itching disease, NRSV; festering sores, NIV).

Emerod (see Tumor).

Epilepsy (see Mute Spirit).

Feet, Diseased. Excessive uric acid in the blood causes this kidney ailment that manifests itself through painful inflammation of joints. Second Chronicles 16:12 says that King Asa had a foot disease, which apparently was gout.

Fever. The KJV uses the word “ague” to describe a burning fever. Moses warned the rebellious Israelites that “I will even appoint over you terror, consumption and the burning ague, that shall consume the eyes” (Lev. 26:16).

When Jesus found Simon Peter’s mother-in-law ill with this symptom, He rebuked the fever, and she was able to rise from her bed and wait on the disciples (Luke 4:38–39). On another occasion, Jesus healed the feverish son of a government official (John 4:46–54). Many diseases in ancient Israel would have been characterized by high fevers, the most common of which were malaria and typhoid.

Gangrene (see Cancer).

Hemorrhage (see Blood, Flow of).

Insanity. King Saul seems to have had symptoms of manic depression (1 Sam. 16:14–23), and the Bible mentions others who may have suffered from mental or nervous disorders. King Nebuchadnezzar is an example (Dan. 4:33). The words “mad” and “madness” are also used by various translations to refer to this malady (Deut. 28:28; NKJV, KJV, NIV).

Intestines, Disease of (see Dysentery).

Itch. This is a curse which God threatened to send upon the Hebrew people if they departed from faith in Him (Deut. 28:27). Itch is caused by a microscopic mite that burrows into the skin, causing extreme discomfort.

Itching Disease (see Eczema).

Leprosy. One of the most dreaded diseases of the world, leprosy is caused by a bacillus and is characterized by formation of nodules that spread, causing loss of sensation and deformity. Now treated with sulfone drugs, leprosy is perhaps the least infectious of all known contagious diseases. Hansen's Disease, as it is more properly known, was only one of various skin diseases afflicting people in Old Testament times, all of them referred to by the same Hebrew word (Lev. 13).

On the basis of a hair in a scab, a pimple, or a spot on the skin that had turned white, the priest would declare a person to be a leper and would quarantine him for seven days. If no change in the spot occurred by then, the quarantine would be extended another week. At that time, if the spot had started to fade, the "leper" would be pronounced cured and returned to his normal life. However, if the spot remained or had spread, he was declared unclean and banished. The words scurf and scall are applied to these spots on the skin by various English translations of the Bible (Lev. 13:30).

Skin diseases were very common in the Near East. Israelites who were healed of them were expected to offer certain sacrifices and engage in rites of purification (Lev. 14:1–32). Jesus healed lepers on numerous occasions (Luke 5:12–13; 17:12–17).

Lunacy, Lunatick (see Mute Spirit).

Madness (see Insanity).

Muteness. This is the temporary loss of speech, usually caused by a brain lesion but sometimes attributed to an emotional upset. This happened to the prophet Ezekiel (Ezek. 33:22). When an angel told Zechariah that he would be the father of John the Baptist, the old man came out of the temple and could not speak (Luke 1:22).

Mute Spirit. The NKJV uses this phrase for a disorder that was probably epilepsy. It is marked by erratic electrical discharges of the central nervous system and manifested by convulsive attacks. A certain man brought his epileptic son to Jesus for help (Mark 9:17–29). The KJV says the boy had a “dumb spirit.” Jesus healed him. Among the scores of people brought to Jesus for healing were epileptics (Matt. 4:24; lunaticks, KJV).

An ancient theory held that epilepsy was caused by the moon; people referred to epileptics as being “lunatic” or “moonstruck.” Psalm 121:6 may reflect this idea when it says, “The sun shall not strike you by day, nor the moon by night.”

Palsy (see Paralysis, Paralytic).

Paralysis, Paralytic. These words refer to partial or total paralysis. The Gospels record a well-known incident in which Jesus healed a paralyzed man at Capernaum (Mark 2:1–12). The Book of Acts describes how the apostles healed people with this disease (Acts 8:7; 9:33–34; palsy, KJV).

Scabs (see Boils).

Scall (see Leprosy).

Scurf (see Leprosy).

Scurvy (see Eczema).

Sores (see Boils).

Tumor. The specific nature of this disease is unknown, although some scholars believe the word refers to hemorrhoids (Deut. 28:27; 1 Sam. 6:11). Other versions prefer ulcers (NRSV) or emerods (KJV).

Ulcer (see Tumor).

Wasting Disease (see Consumption).

Worms. The prophet Isaiah warned that the rebellious people of Israel would be afflicted with worms (Is. 51:8). He also predicted this fate for Babylon (Is. 14:11). This parasitic disease could be fatal because no medical remedies were available. Worms such as tapeworms and hookworms live as parasites in the human body and cause illness and disease.

The Bible says that “an angel of the Lord” struck Herod the Great. Worms ate him up and he died (Acts 12:23).

Photo by Howard Vos

• Ruins of the hospital used by the early Greek physician Hippocrates at Cos.

DISH—a utensil for holding or serving food. In biblical times dishes usually were made of clay, although the wealthy classes sometimes used dishes of precious metal.

Many different types of dishes and bowls were used by the people of the ancient world. Jael provided Sisera with food in a “lordly bowl” (Judg. 5:25)—apparently a bowl of unusual size or splendor. Jesus referred to a dish or large serving bowl used at the Last Supper (Matt. 26:23; Mark 14:20). A large, deep dish was used for carrying the showbread (bread of the Presence, NIV) in the tabernacle and temple (Ex. 25:29). Also mentioned in the Bible are a flat dish (1 Kin. 21:13) and a platter of some sort (Luke 11:39).

The great variety of dishes discovered by archaelogists has been an invaluable aid in establishing relative dates for cities and biblical events.

DISHAN [DIE shan]—the seventh son of Seir the Horite, a clan chief in Edom (Gen. 36:21; 1 Chr. 1:38). Also see DISHON No. 2.

DISHON [DIE shahn]—the name given to two descendants of Seir the Horite:

1. The fifth son of Seir and a clan chief in Edom (Gen. 36:21, 26, 30; 1 Chr. 1:38).
2. A son of the Horite clan chief Anah and a grandson of Seir (Gen. 36:25; 1 Chr. 1:41). Also see DISHAN.

DISHONESTY—deceit, usually for the sake of profit. To God dishonesty is as despicable and morally destructive as sexual depravity (Ezek. 22:11–13). The fact that God struck Ananias and Sapphira dead for their deceit (Acts 5:1–11) shows His intolerance of dishonest Christians. For the unbeliever, the holiness of God is visible primarily in the behavior of His people. It is imperative that Christians be honest in their dealings with all people (2 Cor. 4:2).

DISOBEDIENCE—unwillingness to comply with the guidance of authority, especially refusal to follow God's will. The first and most crucial act of disobedience occurred when Adam and Eve ate of the forbidden fruit (Genesis 3). Like all later human disobedience, that act involved setting the desire of the flesh above the will of God. As a result of this, all people became "sons of disobedience" (Eph. 2:2). Christians have no choice, therefore, but to engage in a kind of spiritual warfare against their own natural tendency to disobey God (2 Cor. 10:5–6). They should aim to be as obedient to God's will as Christ was when He "became obedient to the point of death" (Phil. 2:8).

DISPENSATION—a period of time under which mankind is answerable to God for how it has obeyed the revelation of God that it has received. The term "dispensation" is found twice in the NKJV: "The dispensation of the fullness of the times" (Eph. 1:10) and "the dispensation of the grace of God�� (Eph. 3:2; administration, NIV). The KJV uses the term four times (1 Cor. 9:17; Eph. 1:10; 3:2; Col. 1:25).

Many Bible students believe all of history can be divided into several dispensations. According to this view, all of history has been pointing toward the SECOND COMING of Christ, when salvation will be made complete. Others reject this view, insisting that God has had faithful, loyal followers in all times who have lived according to His COVENANT with them.

Seven dispensations are commonly identified by traditional dispensationalists: Innocence, from Creation to the Fall of Adam and Eve and God's sending them out of the Garden of Eden (Gen. 3:24); Conscience, the covenant with Adam, ending with the judgment of the Flood (Genesis 9); Human government, the covenant with Noah, extending to the time of Abraham; Promise, from Abraham's call (Gen. 12:1) to Moses; Law, from the giving of the Law to Moses (Ex. 19:8, 20–31) to the death of Jesus Christ; Grace, from the death and resurrection of Christ to His Second Coming; Kingdom, the establishment of God's kingdom on earth and the thousand-year reign of Christ over the nations.

DISPERSION—a scattering of the Jewish people among other nations. Throughout their history, the Hebrew people have experienced many dispersions—a term which comes from a Greek word meaning “to scatter.” Some of these dispersions have been voluntary, while others have been forced upon them.

Voluntary movements were sometimes made by God’s people to escape the threat of destruction, as with those who moved to Egypt in the time of the prophet Jeremiah. Others left their homeland on various occasions with the expectation of pursuing an easier and more profitable way of life, as with the brothers of Joseph. Some migrants were most probably traveling merchants who chose to settle in a new homeland for business reasons, whereas others found themselves on foreign territory in a military capacity (2 Sam. 8:14).

While all Israelites regarded the land promised to them by God through Abraham as their natural home, none of them were ever compelled to live in it for an entire lifetime. In periods of economic hardship or political upheaval many took advantage of the opportunity to leave and begin life afresh in another country.

But forced dispersion was another matter. Periods of captivity for Israel may have begun as early as the invasion by Shishak of Egypt, about 926 B.C. (1 Kin. 14:25–26). But most significant were the fall of Israel to the Assyrians in 722 B.C. and the collapse of Judah before Babylonian attacks in 597–581 B.C. Already in 732 B.C. Tiglath-Pileser III had carried Reuben, Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh captive to Mesopotamia when Damascus fell. A decade later the capture of Samaria resulted in the remaining Israelite tribes being carried away as captives to ASSYRIA.

The end of national life in JUDAH began with the first attack on Jerusalem by the BABYLONIANS in 597 B.C. The final attack in 581 B.C. marked the end completely. By the end of this period, a total of some 4,600 prominent persons had been deported from Judah (Jer. 52:28–30). This number probably did not include family members or servants. The total may well have been many times the number recorded by Jeremiah. The dispersion actually began earlier in Judah, for early in his ministry Jeremiah reported that a significant number of Jewish emigrants lived in such Egyptian cities as Migdol, Tahpanhes, and Noph (Memphis).

The prophet ministered to these people even before Jerusalem fell (Jer. 43:8; 44:1).

But the settlement in Egypt was small compared to that in Assyria, Babylonia, and Persia as a result of the deportation from Israel and Judah. Captives from the Northern Kingdom were apparently absorbed completely into their foreign surroundings. But a small group of Jews ultimately returned from Persia to Judah as a result of the decree of Cyrus (538 B.C.). Those who remained behind in Babylonia formed the basis of the Dispersion that was well known in New Testament times (John 7:35; Acts 2:9–11).

This dispersed Jewish community in Mesopotamia flourished into the medieval Christian period, maintaining its distinctive religious practices. Earlier, it was here that the Babylonian TALMUD, a work that formed the basis for law and faith in the community, was compiled. The Dispersion had been supported by conditions in the Persian Empire and in the later Greek Empire, as the character of the crowd at Pentecost illustrates (Acts 2:9–11).

Interesting light has been shed on a fifth-century B.C. Jewish colony in Egypt by the discovery of the Elephantine papyri. These documents disclosed the existence of a Jewish trading community near Aswan that had its own temple worship. This community was also an important center for commerce in southern Egypt. With the rise of the Greek Empire, further Jewish settlements occurred in Egypt, along with a significant increase in the use of the Greek language across the Near East. One result of this was the translation of the Hebrew Scriptures into Greek at Alexandria, Egypt. This version (called the SEPTUAGINT) became so popular that the New Testament writers often quoted the Old Testament from it instead of using the traditional Hebrew text.

By 139 B.C. Jews who had migrated to Italy and settled in Rome were being expelled from the capital city. Even so, they had gained a foothold in Italy. By the beginning of the Christian period, colonies of Jews were scattered across the Near East and southeastern Europe. Although they were often disliked and sometimes persecuted, they managed to survive and prosper. By the time of Philo (20 B.C.—A.D. 50), a Jewish philosopher of Alexandria, an estimated one million Jews lived in Alexandria. An equal number had settled in both Persia and Asia Minor, and about 100,000 lived in Cyrenaica and Italy. The Jews who were dispersed throughout the world in this manner outnumbered the Jews who remained in their native land.

These colonies provided useful bases for evangelistic efforts by the apostle Paul and later Christian preachers. Eventually Christian communities were established in those cities that had a large Jewish population. Thus, the Dispersion helped to prepare the world for the reception and growth of the gospel.

• A stone carving from the palace of Tiglath-Pileser of Babylonia, showing the deportation of conquered citizens of Judah who lived in the city of Ashtaroth.

DISPERSION OF THE NATIONS—the dividing and scattering of the people of the earth after the FLOOD and the Tower of Babel through the three sons of Noah (Gen. 10:32; 11:9). Japheth's descendants were scattered to the north, Ham's to the south, and Shem's to the central regions between his two brothers.

DISQUALIFIED—the NKJV translation of the Greek word adokimos (1 Cor. 9:27; 2 Cor. 13:5–7; fail the test, NIV; Titus 1:16). In three others references, the NKJV translates the Greek word as debased

(Rom. 1:28; depraved, NIV), disapproved (2 Tim. 3:8), and rejected (Heb. 6:8). The literal sense of the word is “tested and proved to be false or unacceptable.” Borrowed from the athletic games, the word describes a contestant who, because of some infraction of the rules, is disqualified from winning the prize (1 Cor. 9:27; castaway KJV). Another metaphor is possible: a “counterfeit faith” (2 Tim. 3:8, NRSV). This suggests a coin that has been tested, proven false, and disapproved as legal tender.

DISSENSION—discord or strife that arises from a difference of opinion. The apostle Paul was accused of being “a creator of dissension” (Acts 24:5) because of His preaching of the gospel before the SANHEDRIN.

DISSIPATION—indulgent or wasteful living, especially excessive drinking. Drinking much wine leads to dissipation (Eph. 5:18). A bishop should not be guilty of dissipation (Titus 1:6–7). A Christian should separate himself from the dissolution that characterized his former life.

DISTAFF—a staff that holds unspun flax or wool for spinning into thread (Prov. 31:19).

DIVINATION (see MAGIC, SORCERY, AND DIVINATION).

DIVINE NAMES (see GOD, NAMES OF).

DIVINER (see MAGIC, SORCERY, AND DIVINATION; OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

DIVINER’S TEREBINTH TREE [TARE uh binth]—a tree that could be seen from the entrance to the city gate of Shechem (Judg. 9:37). Some scholars believe this tree was the same one mentioned in Genesis 12:6 or Genesis 35:4. Apparently it was assumed to be the tree associated with Abraham and Jacob. Those who practiced magic or sorcery at the tree considered it a scared place (plain of Meonenim, KJV; diviners’ oak, NASB, NRSV; soothsayers’ tree, NIV; Soothsayers’ Terebinth, REB).

Photo by Eitan F.

• The terebinth tree, also referred to as the oak tree by some translations, was considered sacred by some pagan worshipers of the ancient world (Hos. 4:13).

DIVORCE—the legal dissolution of a marriage.

The divine ideal for marriage is clearly a lifelong bond that unites husband and wife in a "one flesh" relationship (Gen. 2:24; Matt. 19:5). The marriage union is a holy condition founded by God and is not to be dissolved at the will of human beings (Matt. 19:6). Separations of this bond displease God and pose a serious threat to the social order: "And let none deal treacherously with the wife of his youth. For the LORD God of Israel says that He hates divorce, for it covers one's garments with violence" (Mal. 2:15–16).

The Law of Moses allowed a man to divorce his wife when she found "no favor in his eyes, because he has found some uncleanness in her" (Deut. 24:1). The primary purpose of this legislation was to prevent him from taking her again after she had married another man—"an abomination before the LORD" (Deut. 24:4).

This law was intended to discourage, rather than encourage, divorce. A public document known as a "certificate of divorce" was granted the woman. This permitted her the right to remarry without civil or religious sanction. Divorce could not be done privately.

The Mosaic Law called for severe penalties for certain types of "uncleanness." Adultery carried the death penalty by stoning for the woman. If a man believed that his wife was not a virgin when he married her, he could have her judged by the elders of the city. If they found her guilty, she could be put to death (Deut. 22:13–21). Although a man was allowed to divorce his wife, the wife was not allowed to divorce her husband for any reason. Legally the wife was bound to her husband as long as they both lived or until he divorced her (1 Cor. 7:39).

In Jesus’ day, confusion prevailed about the grounds for divorce. Even the rabbis could not agree on what constituted the “uncleanness” of Deuteronomy 24:1. Followers of Rabbi Shammai felt adultery was the only grounds for divorce. Those who followed Rabbi Hillel accepted many reasons, including such things as poor cooking.

The gospels record four statements by Jesus concerning divorce. In two of these He allowed divorce in the case of adultery. In Matthew 5:32 Jesus commented on the situation of both the woman and her new husband: “Whoever divorces his wife for any reason except sexual immorality causes her to commit adultery; and whoever marries a woman who is divorced commits adultery.”

In another statement, Jesus described the position of the man who divorced his wife: “Whoever divorces his wife except for sexual immorality, and marries another, commits adultery; and whoever marries her who is divorced commits adultery” (Matt. 19:9). While these two statements seem to allow divorce because of unfaithfulness, two other statements of Jesus appear to make no provision for divorce (Mark 10:11–12; Luke 16:18).

Are Jesus’ statements allowing divorce for infidelity in conflict with biblical statements that seem to forbid it entirely? Jesus’ statements in Mark and Luke were made in conversations with Pharisees about the Mosaic Law, which they believed allowed divorce on grounds other than adultery (Deut. 24:1–4). Jesus’ main point in these statements was that divorce is contrary to God’s plan for marriage and should never be taken lightly. Even though Moses allowed divorce, this was an exception granted under the law because of their “hardness” of heart (Mark 10:5). Jesus desired to put “teeth” into the Law by declaring that, even if the divorced couple had not been sexually unfaithful to each other, they would commit adultery in God’s sight if they now married other partners.

In allowing divorce for the single reason of "immorality," or illicit sexual intercourse, Jesus' thought is clearly that a person dissolves his marriage by creating a sexual union with someone other than the marriage partner. Such union violates the sacred "oneness" intended by God when he united Adam and Eve in the first marriage relationship (Gen. 2:18–25).

In the case of sexual unfaithfulness, the decree of divorce simply reflects the fact that the marriage has already been broken. A man divorcing his wife for this cause does not "make her an adulteress," for she already is one. Thus, divorce on the grounds of unchastity usually frees the innocent partner to remarry without incurring the guilt of adultery (Matt. 19:9). However, this is sometimes questioned. Although Jesus allowed divorce for adultery, He did not require it. On the contrary, He insisted that divorce disrupts God's plan for marriage and left the way open for repentance and forgiveness.

Paul was essentially in agreement with Jesus' teachings on marriage and divorce. However, the apostle dealt with new situations involving the marital conflict between believers and between a believer and an unbeliever.

In the case of two Christians, Paul admonished them to follow the Lord's teachings and be reconciled. In any event, neither is to marry another (1 Cor. 7:10–11). In 1 Corinthians 7:15, Paul says that a Christian whose mate has abandoned the marriage should be free to formalize the divorce: "If the unbeliever departs, let him depart; a brother or a sister is not under bondage in such cases." Many authorities hold that the phrase "not under bondage" means that a deserted Christian spouse may lawfully go from divorce to remarriage. But other scholars disagree with this interpretation. In any event, Paul encourages the believer to keep the marriage together in hopes that the unbelieving partner might be saved (1 Cor. 7:16).

DIZAHAB [DIZ uh hab] (abounding in gold)—a place in the desert near the site where Moses gave his farewell address to the nation of Israel (Deut. 1:1).

DOCTOR (see RABBI).

DOCTRINE—a body of beliefs about God, humankind, Christ, the church, and other related concepts considered authoritative and thus worthy of acceptance by all members of the community of faith.

Christ condemned the doctrine of the Pharisees because it was of human origin (Matt. 15:9; Mark 7:7). By contrast, Jesus' teaching was not systematic and repetitious. It was fresh and new (Matt. 7:28; Mark 1:22, 27; Luke 4:32).

After Pentecost, Christian doctrine began to be systematized (Acts 2:42). Doctrinal instruction was given by special teachers (1 Cor. 12:28–29; Gal. 6:6) to those who had responded to the gospel (Rom. 6:17). The earliest doctrine of the Christian church declared: (1) that Jesus was the Messiah, the Christ (Acts 3:18); (2) that God had raised Him from the dead (Acts 1:22; 2:24, 32); and (3) that salvation was by faith in His name (Acts 2:38; 3:16). These three truths were presented as a clear fulfillment of the promises of the Old Testament. Paul taught that true doctrine is essential for Christian growth (Eph. 4:11–16; 1 Tim. 4:6; 6:3; Titus 1:9) and that false doctrine destroys the church (Eph. 4:14; 2 Tim. 4:3).

DODAI [DOE die]—a form of DODO No. 2.

DODANIM [DOE dah nim]—a son of Javan (Gen. 10:4), also called Rodanim (1 Chr. 1:7). The reference may be to the people who lived on the island of RHODES, and on the neighboring islands in the Aegean Sea.

DODAVAH [DOE duh vah] (beloved of the Lord)—the father of Eliezer of Mareshah (2 Chr. 20:37; Dodavahu, NRSV, NIV, NASB, REB). Eliezer prophesied the destruction of Jehoshaphat's ships.

DODO [DOE doh] (beloved)—a name given to three Old Testament men:

1. The grandfather of Tola, a judge of the tribe of Issachar (Judg. 10:1).
2. The father of Eleazar, one of David's mighty men (2 Sam. 23:9; 1 Chr. 11:12). Also spelled Dodai (1 Chr. 27:4).
3. The father of Elhanan of Bethlehem, one of David's mighty men (2 Sam. 23:24; 1 Chr. 11:26).

DOE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

DOEG [DOE egg]—an Edomite who was the chief of Saul's herdsmen. Doeg betrayed David and, on Saul's orders, killed eighty-five priests at Nob (1 Sam. 21:7; 22:9).

DOG (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

DONKEY (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

DOOR—the covering over an entrance into a tent (Gen. 18:1), a permanent house (Judg. 19:22), or a public building (Ezek. 47:1). The doors of Bible times were made of a wide variety of material, ranging from animal hides to wood and metal. Doors are also spoken of symbolically in the Bible. In speaking of Himself as the Good Shepherd, Jesus declared, "I am the door of the sheep" (John 10:7). Also see HOUSE.

DOORKEEPER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

DOORPOSTS—the two sides of a doorway, similar to a doorframe. The Hebrews were ordered by the Lord to spread the blood of a sacrificial lamb on the doorposts of their houses during the PASSOVER while in captivity in Egypt. This was a sign of their loyalty to the Lord; it also was a sign for the destroying angel to pass over the houses of the Hebrews when the firstborn of Egypt were killed in the tenth and final plague that struck the land (Ex. 12:7). The Hebrews were later told to write sacred words on the doorposts of their houses as a reminder of God's commands (Deut. 6:9; 11:20). Also see HOUSE.

DOPHKAH [DAHF kuh]—a place in the Wilderness of Sinai between the Red Sea and Rephidim. Dophkah was the site of the first camp of the Israelites after they left the Wilderness of Sin (Num. 33:12–13).

DOR [dor]—a Canaanite town on the Mediterranean coast south of Mount Carmel and about 13 kilometers (8 miles) north of Caesarea (see Map 3, A–2). The town was captured by Joshua (Josh. 11:2; 12:23; 1 Chr. 7:29) and assigned to Manasseh (Josh. 17:11). However, its inhabitants could not be driven out (Judg. 1:27). The "regions of Dor" (Naphath-Dor, NRSV) was one of Solomon's tax districts (1 Kin. 4:11).

DORCAS [DOR cuss] (gazelle)—a Christian woman from Joppa known for befriending and helping the poor (Acts 9:36–43); Tabitha was her Aramaic name (it also means "gazelle"). She was raised from the dead by the apostle Peter. The Bible tells us little about her background, but it is possible that she was a woman of some wealth, or at least had connections with the wealthy. Dorcas may well have been one of the early converts of Philip the evangelist, who established a Christian church at Joppa.

DOT—RSV word for TITTLE (Matt. 5:18; Luke 16:17; the least stroke of a pen, NIV; stroke, NRSV).

DOTHAN [DOE thun]—a city of the tribe of Manasseh situated west of the Jordan River and 19 kilometers (12 miles) northeast of Samaria near Mount Gilboa (see Map 4, B–3). It was here that Joseph found his brothers tending their sheep. They put him in a pit and later sold him into slavery (Gen. 37:17). At Dothan the Syrians were blinded by God in the time of Elisha (2 Kin. 6:8–23). Dothan's modern name is Tell Dotha.

Photo by Howard Vos

- The mound of Dothan (center), the Old Testament city where Joseph’s brothers threw him into a pit and later sold him to slave traders (Gen. 37:17–28).

DOUBLE—twice as much in amount, number, or value (Gen. 43:12; Ex. 22:4–9; Is. 40:2). Elisha asked that a double portion of Elijah’s spirit be given to him (2 Kin. 2:9). To be double-tongued (1 Tim. 3:8) is to use double-talk—to be insincere or hypocritical. To be double-minded (James 1:8; 4:8), literally “two-souled,” is to be divided in thinking—to waver or falter between two opinions.

DOUBT (see UNBELIEF).

DOUGH (see BREAD).

DOVE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

DOVE’S DUNG (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

DOWRY—a gift given to the father of one’s bride. In the ancient world, when a man married, he was expected to give something to the woman’s father. This was not considered a payment or a purchase price for a wife, but compensation to the father for the loss of her help as a daughter. The dowry could be money or goods (Gen. 34:12; Ex. 22:16–17), service to make up for the loss (Gen. 29:15–30), or the performance of some assigned task (1 Sam. 18:25–27; Judg. 1:12). Through the trickery of Laban, JACOB was forced to give fourteen years of labor as a dowry for Laban's daughter, Rachel (Gen. 29:15–30).

DOXOLOGY—a declaration of praise to God or a brief hymn expressing His power and glory. The word itself does not appear in the Bible, but the concept is certainly present. Several passages in the Bible are called doxologies because of their clear declaration of praise to God.

One such passage is called the Gloria in Excelsis, or "Greater Doxology" (Luke 2:14). The title comes from the opening words of the angels to the shepherds when they announced the birth of Jesus in Bethlehem: "Glory to God in the Highest." The words of another doxology are found at the end of the Lord's prayer: "For Yours is the Kingdom and the power and the glory forever" (Matt. 6:13). The Gloria Patri, "Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost, world without end, Amen," is known as the "Lesser Doxology." This statement is not found in the Bible, although it reflects scriptural teaching.

Similar expressions offering praise and glory to God are also found in the Old Testament (1 Chr. 29:11; Ps. 8:1; 41:13; 72:18–19; 89:52; 106:48; 150). A strong statement of praise is also found in the stanza of a hymn, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," which has come to be known as the Doxology.

DRACHMA [DROCK muh] (see MONEY OF THE BIBLE).

DRAGNET—a net in which fish are trapped as it is dragged along the bottom of a stream (Hab. 1:15–16; Matt. 13:47).

DRAGON (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

DRAGON, BEL AND THE (see APOCRYPHA, THE).

DRAGON WELL (see SERPENT WELL).

DRAM (see DARIC).

DRAWER OF WATER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

DREAM—a state of mind in which images, thoughts, and impressions pass through the mind of a person who is sleeping. Dreams have had a prominent place in the religious literature of ancient peoples. In ancient times, dreams—especially those of kings and priests—were thought to convey messages from God (Num. 12:6; Gen. 31:10–13). In the Bible these were sometimes prophetic in nature. Elihu stated clearly his belief that God speaks through dreams (Job 33:14–15).

In a dream God warned Abimelech, the king of Gerar, not to touch Sarah, because she was Abraham's wife. The Lord spoke to Jacob in a dream in which He renewed the COVENANT and assured Jacob of His protection and presence.

Two special cycles of dreams in which expert interpretation was involved occur in the Old Testament. The first cycle related to Joseph (Gen. 37:5–10), or his officers. The second cycle involved Daniel (Dan. 2:14–45), with the dreams coming to Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon. The dreams in each case pertained to events of the future. God granted the ability to interpret these dreams to Joseph (Gen. 40:8; 41:12) and Daniel (Dan. 2:20–45).

In the Old Testament dreams were frequently associated with the prophets of Israel (Deut. 13:1–5; Jer. 23:25–32). But dreams, with their proposed prophecies, were not accepted uncritically. False prophets and their prophecies had to be recognized and rejected. Jeremiah, especially, denounced the prophets who spoke with lies.

In the New Testament, God appeared to Joseph in a dream after His announcement of the forthcoming birth of Jesus (Matt. 1:20). God also spoke through these dreams to protect the infant Jesus (Matt. 2:13–14).

DREGS—solid material settled to the bottom in a liquid, especially wine (Zeph. 1:12). The word is used symbolically to refer to the final amount of the Lord's wrath poured out in judgment (Ps. 75:8; Is. 51:17). The dregs are the worthless, bitter remnants left when the wine is gone. To drink the dregs is to swallow the bitter and undesirable, a fitting expression of judgment.

DRESS OF THE BIBLE—The warmth of Canaan's climate led the people to prefer loose-fitting clothes, while the drab landscape may have contributed to their preference for bright colors in their garments. Clothing styles remained essentially the same throughout the period covered by the Old and New Testaments.

Clothing was made from simple material, such as leather or goat's hair. In the early period of their history, the Hebrews were a people who tended flocks and herds. Thus, they wove most of their clothes from plentiful wool. The flax plant provided linen for the more formal clothing of the priests or the wealthier classes.

Many Israelite homes had looms for weaving cloth. Colorful embroidery enlivened the fancier clothes. Purple dye was taken from a Mediterranean shellfish. Red came from insects taken from oak trees. Pomegranate and other plants provided blue dye.

General terms for clothing in the Bible include attire and raiment. But many specific items of dress are also mentioned. The following list of specific items is keyed to the NKJV. But variant terms from five additional popular English versions—KJV, NASB, REB, NIV, and NRSV—are also cross-referenced to this list.

Any student who compares clothing terms in these six translations will notice many differences in the translation of the same Hebrew or Greek word from one version to another. This shows that scholars are not always sure about exactly how the word for an item of clothing should be translated. For serious Bible study, be sure to compare the rendering of several different translations.

Apron (see Belt/Sash).

Belt/Sash. The belt, made of leather, cloth, or cord, was worn around the waist, much like the belt of today. The Bible mentions belts worn by Elijah (2 Kin. 1:8) and John the Baptist (Matt. 3:4). The rich man's leather belt might hold his sword, dagger, knife, or an inkhorn for writing. The scribe's reed or pen was also carried in the belt (Ezek. 9:2, 11).

When Elijah "girded up his loins" (1 Kin. 18:46), he was probably tucking up the loose ends of his cloak, or outer garment, into his belt. Peter urged the early Christians to "gird up the loins of your mind" (1 Pet. 1:13)—to open themselves to Jesus' message. Agabus bound Paul's hands and feet with his own belt (Acts 21:11).

The sash was longer than the belt. It consisted of a piece of folded cloth wound two or three times around the waist. When made into a pouch, it might serve as a pocket for carrying money, other valuables (Matt. 10:9; Mark 6:8), or even food. Shepherds might even carry a lamb in their sash.

Other words for belt or sash used by other translations are girdle (KJV) and belts (REB).

Cloak (see Mantle).

Coat (see Mantle; Tunic).

Girdle (see Belt/Sash).

Mantle. This item of clothing was the distinctive Hebrew outer garment, made of two pieces of thick woolen material sewn together, with slits rather than sleeves for the arms. In Old Testament times the mantle was usually brightly colored. Joseph's "tunic of many colors" (Gen. 37:3) was probably a mantle of woven, bright strips.

The Lord commanded the people of Israel to add blue tassels to the corners of their outer garments, as reminders to obey His commandments (Num. 15:38). This custom degenerated into a mere outward show of piety, and it was condemned by Jesus (Matt. 23:5).

Typically, Israelites slept on the floor with their mantle used as a covering to keep them warm. This was especially true for travelers, shepherds, or poor people, so a person's mantle was not to be kept as collateral for a loan (Ex. 22:27). In times of anguish, people often tore their mantles to show their distress (Job 2:12; Ezra 9:3).

A handy, one-piece garment, the mantle protected a person from the weather. Because it fitted loosely, it could also be used to conceal or carry items. The typical Israelite mantle hung below the knees and was decorated with fringe.

Other words for mantle used by various English translations are cloak, coat, robe, and wimple.

Robe (see Mantle).

Sandals. The sandals worn by the Israelites were of cloth, wood, or dried grass, held on the foot by a thong or strap (Is. 5:27; Mark 1:7). Sandals were worn by all classes in Canaan, unlike Egypt where some people went barefoot. Women wore them too, as in the Song of Solomon (7:1). A certain kind of sandal for females had two straps, one between the big toe and the second toe, and another circling the instep and heel.

During mealtimes, people apparently removed their sandals, as when Jesus washed His disciples' feet (John 13:5–6). However, the Israelites kept their sandals on their feet while eating the Passover meal, preparing to leave Egypt (Ex. 12:11). Sandals were to be taken off as a sign of reverence, as God said to Moses: "Take your sandals off your feet, for the place where you stand is holy ground" (Ex. 3:5).

Another word for sandals used by some English translations of the Bible is shoes.

Photo by Howard Vos

- Ornamental sandals discovered in the tomb of Pharaoh Tutankhamun (King Tut) of Egypt.

Sash (see Belt/Sash).

Shirt (see Tunic).

Shoes (see Sandals).

Tunic. The tunic was a long piece of cloth folded in half, with holes for the arms and head. Also known as the inner garment, it was worn under the mantle, or outer garment. The tunic was generally made of leather, haircloth, wool, or linen. Jesus' tunic at the crucifixion was from one piece of cloth, since it had no seam (John 19:23). Women as well as men wore a tunic, often blue in color. Other words for tunic used by various English translations are coat and shirt.

Wimple (see Mantle).

Clothing for Special Occasions. In addition to the items of everyday dress used by God's people, the Bible also mentions the following specific clothes used for special occasions.

Mourning or repentance garments—Dark-colored sackcloth of coarse goat's hair was worn by Israel to lament the loss of his son Joseph (Gen. 37:34). Job wore sackcloth in his time of sorrow (Job 16:15). Eventually "sackcloth and ashes" became a symbol of repentance (Matt. 11:21). The dark sackcloth of the Israelites is similar to the western tradition of somber colors at funerals.

Robe of honor—Special robes were worn by people in high political positions in the ancient world. Such a robe was given to Joseph by the Pharaoh of Egypt (Gen. 41:42).

Wedding garments—In New Testament times, the mother of the family often kept her wedding dress for her daughter to use at her wedding. She usually stored it in a box to protect it from moths alluded to by Jesus (Matt. 6:19). The wedding dress was usually white silk, perhaps embroidered. The bride also wore a veil and considerable jewelry (Is. 49:18). The bridegroom's attire resembled that of a king. He might also wear a garland. Festive robes were also given to the guests at a wedding, as in Jesus' parable where a man was turned away for wearing inappropriate clothes (Matt. 22:11).

Winter clothing—The Israelites wore fur dresses or animal-skin cloaks in winter time. The rich wore expensive robes (Prov. 31:21), and the poor made do with common garments of "coarse hair" (Zech. 13:4), probably made from animal skins.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- An Arab bedouin with a headdress for protection against the sun. The high priest of the nation of Israel also wore headgear, referred to by some translations as a turban (Ex. 28:40).

DRINK—the liquid necessary to sustain life. Water, milk, and wine were the most common forms of drink.

The hot, dry summers of Canaan required a dependable supply of water. Even travel routes were marked with watering places, usually WELLS or CISTERNS (Gen. 24:11; Ex. 15:27). During Israel's years of wandering in the wilderness, water from a rock furnished water for the people (Ex. 17:6). Later the psalmist David spoke of being led "beside still waters" (Ps. 23:2).

Because of the dry climate, it was necessary to store drinking water in cisterns. In unusually dry times water even had to be bought (Deut. 2:28; Lam. 5:4), and people might wander from city to city begging for water (Amos 4:8). Families kept cows, sheep, goats, or camels for milk; they also kept vineyards for winemaking (1 Kin. 4:25; Zech. 3:10).

The Bible also speaks of drink in several symbolic ways. The earth "drinks" the rain (Heb. 6:7); killing one's enemy is to "drink blood" (Ezek. 39:18); evildoing is "drinking" evil (Job 15:16; Prov. 4:17; 26:6); and the sinful "drink" God's wrath (Rev. 14:10). In contrast, one can "drink" from the wells of salvation (Is. 12:3) and "drink" the blood of Jesus (John 6:54–55). The water of life satisfies all desires (John 4:14), and all who are thirsty are invited to come and "drink" (Is. 55:1; Rev. 22:17).

DRINK OFFERING (see SACRIFICIAL OFFERINGS).

DRINK, STRONG—any beverage that intoxicates. Most Old Testament references to strong drink are to beer, the manufacture of which was a thriving industry in ancient times. Strong drink was forbidden to the priest when he was officiating at the altar of sacrifice (Lev. 10:9) and to the Nazirite during his vow (Num. 6:3). It was also prohibited for princes (Prov. 31:4), but it was permitted the Israelite when eating at the sanctuary (Deut. 29:6). Samson's mother (Judg. 13:4, 7, 14), Hannah (1 Sam. 1:15), and John the Baptist (Luke 1:15) abstained from taking strong drink. Those who drank excessively were called drunkards (Ps. 69:12).

The prophet Isaiah pronounced a woe on those who rose up early in the morning in order to follow strong drink (Is. 5:11). Israel's priests and prophets were accused of having erred through intoxicating drink (Is. 28:7). The people seemed to welcome false prophets who encouraged excessive drinking of wine and strong drink (Mic. 2:11).

In spite of all the commands against strong drink, it apparently had some medicinal value during Bible times. Along with wine, strong drink was listed as a sedative for the distressed (Prov. 31:6).

DRIVER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

DROMEDARY (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

DROPSY (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

DROSS—the residue left at the end of the smelting process after metal has been separated from the impurities. Dross was a symbol for the imperfection of sinful Israel. In the smelting process, heat is applied to ore that contains precious metal. This causes the imperfections to separate, leaving only the pure metal. The prophet Isaiah warned the nation of Israel that it had become impure and would require purging in this way (Is. 1:22–25).

DROUGHT (see FAMINE).

DRUNKENNESS—a drugged or deranged condition that results from drinking intoxicating beverages (1 Cor. 5:11; 6:10; Eph. 5:18). Drunkenness regularly appears in lists of vices in the New Testament (Luke 21:34; Rom. 13:13; Gal. 5:21).

Noah, who planted a vineyard and drank its wine after the Flood, is the first intoxicated man mentioned in the Bible (Gen. 9:20–21). While intoxicated, Lot fathered sons by his daughters (Gen. 19:32–38). People thought the apostles were drunk on the Day of Pentecost (Acts 2:15), and drunkenness was apparently a problem in the Corinthian church (1 Cor. 11:21).

Common symptoms associated with drunkenness and mentioned in the Bible include the drunkard and his songs (Ps. 69:12), his reeling and staggering (Job 12:25; Jer. 23:9), his vomiting (Is. 28:8; Jer. 25:27; 48:26), and his drugged condition (Joel 1:5).

Drunkenness is also spoken of figuratively in the Bible to describe a helpless people whose ways have brought them punishment from the Lord (Is. 29:9; Jer. 13:13; Ezek. 23:33). Symbolically, one may also be drunk from the Lord’s fury (Is. 63:6; Jer. 25:27; Lam. 4:21) and the “wine” of fornication (Rev. 17:2).

DRUSILLA [droo SILL uh]—youngest daughter of Herod Agrippa I by his wife Cypros. Drusilla was the wife of Felix, the governor of Judea. While he was a prisoner, the apostle Paul pleaded his case before Felix and Drusilla: “Now as he [Paul] reasoned about righteousness, self-control, and the judgment to come, Felix was afraid” (Acts 24:25). The Scriptures do not record Drusilla’s reaction.

According to the Jewish historian, Josephus, Drusilla was a Jewish woman who married Azizus, king of Emesa, who then converted to Judaism. Because of Drusilla’s great beauty, Felix desired her for his wife. Drusilla then left Azizus and married the Gentile Felix in defiance of Jewish law (Acts 24:24).

DUKE (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

DULCIMER (see MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS OF THE BIBLE).

DUMAH [DEW mah]—the name of one man and two places in the Old Testament:

1. A descendant of Ishmael and the ancestor of an Arabian tribe (Gen. 25:14; 1 Chr. 1:30).
2. A town in the hill country of Judah (Josh. 15:52). Its site is modern ed-Domeh, about 13 kilometers (8 miles) southwest of Hebron.
3. A symbolic name of EDOM, or a place in Arabia (Is. 21:11).

DUMB SPIRIT, DUMBNESS (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

DUNG—literally, waste produced by humans and animals as a part of the process of digesting food (Ex. 29:14; Lev. 4:11; Job 20:7). The word is also used in a general or symbolic way to describe what is useless, rejected, or despised (Jer. 16:4; refuse, NIV). It is in this sense that Paul evaluates the accomplishments of his life before Christ (Phil. 3:8; rubbish, NIV), and the fate of Jezebel is described (2 Kin. 9:37).

Dung was used in Bible times as fertilizer. Dried dung was also used as a fuel. The prophet Ezekiel, for example, was commanded to bake his bread by using human dung. When he complained, God allowed him to use cow's dung (Ezek. 4:12, 15).

DUNG GATE (see GATES OF JERUSALEM AND THE TEMPLE).

DUNG HILL—KJV phrase for a heap or pit of human and animal wastes, used to fertilize plants in Bible times (Is. 25:10; refuse heap, NKJV; manure, NIV).

DUNG PORT (see GATES OF JERUSALEM AND THE TEMPLE).

DUNGEON (see PRISON).

DURA [DEW ruh]—a plain in Babylonia where King Nebuchadnezzar set up a giant golden image (Dan. 3:1).

DUST—loose earth. God fashioned Adam out of the dust of the earth (Gen. 2:7). Because he led people to sin, the serpent was cursed to eat dust as he crawled on his belly (Gen. 3:14). Dust was poured upon the head as a sign of mourning. Dust is also used as a symbol for a numberless multitude (Gen. 13:16), for death (Gen. 3:19; Job 10:9; Eccl. 12:7), and the grave (Dan. 12:2).

DUTY—obligatory tasks or service rendered to God (Eccl. 12:13). In the Old Testament, people's basic duty was contained in the Ten Commandments (Ex. 20:1–17). But Jesus summed up our duty in His commandments to "love God" (Matt. 22:37) and "love your neighbor as yourself" (Matt. 22:39).

DWARF (see DISABILITIES AND DEFORMITIES).

DWELLING—the place where someone lives. This term could refer to a tent (Gen. 25:27), a HOUSE (2 Sam. 7:1), or God's dwelling, heaven (1 Kin. 8:30). The Hebrews lived in tents during their early history. They did not have permanent houses until they settled the land of Canaan under Joshua. The word "dwelling" is also used symbolically in the Bible. The Psalmist sang, "Lord, You have been our dwelling place in all generations" (Ps. 90:1).

DYER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

DYSENTERY (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

E

EAGLE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

EAGLE OWL (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

EAR—an organ of hearing. The Bible speaks often of ears in a literal way (Gen. 35:4; Deut. 15:17). But far more significant is the use of the word ear in a figurative sense to speak of hearing and even of understanding. Thus the verb "gave ear" means paid careful attention. Stopping up the ears means refusing to listen (Acts 7:57). To "incline your ear to" suggests the desire to understand (Prov. 2:2). "Even to His ears" symbolizes that He hears prayer, as opposed to idols, which cannot hear (Ps. 18:6; 115:6; 135:17).

EARNEST—a down payment or first installment given by a buyer to a seller to bind a contract, as a promise that the full amount will be paid at a later time. Paul wrote, God has "given us the Spirit in our hearts as a deposit" (2 Cor. 1:22; earnest, KJV)—that is, as a guarantee of our inheritance (2 Cor. 5:5; Eph. 1:14; earnest, KJV; deposit, NIV; pledge, NASB, REB). The Spirit is not only the pledge of our complete salvation but also the foretaste of our future redemption (Rom. 8:23).

EARRINGS—pieces of jewelry worn on the earlobe in Bible times (Gen. 35:4). While these were generally worn only by Hebrew women, the men among the ancient ISHMAELITES apparently wore earrings (Judg. 8:24–25). Earrings were generally fashioned from silver or gold. Also see JEWELRY.

EARTH—the planet on which mankind lives. "The earth is the LORD's," wrote the psalmist, "and all its fullness" (Ps. 24:1). God is sovereign over the earth. All its living creatures, including human beings, are subject to His rule. The Israelites were promised that if they obeyed God's will and kept His laws, the earth would produce fruitful harvests; if they were disobedient, however, the crops would fail and famine would come (Deuteronomy 28).

After the FALL in the Garden of Eden, the earth was put under a curse. The Lord God said to Adam, "Cursed is the ground for your sake; in toil you shall eat of it all the days of your life. Both thorns and thistles it shall bring forth for you" (Gen. 3:17–18). The "ground" in this passage refers to the soil that produces food.

The apostle Paul wrote that the whole creation—including the earth and mankind—was "subjected to futility" and groans to "be delivered from the bondage of corruption" (Rom. 8:20–21). At the end of the age, however, the earth will be given renewed life, fertility, and productivity (Rev. 21:1).

EARTH, ENDS OF THE—the farthest regions of the world. The phrase is found often in the Old Testament (1 Sam. 2:10; Job 28:24; Ps. 59:13; 67:7; Is. 24:16; 40:28; Jer. 31:8; 51:16). But the most important use of this phrase occurs in the Book of Acts: "You will be my witnesses in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the ends of the earth" (Acts 1:8, NIV). This reiterates the ancient promise made to Abraham, now expressed in terms of the gospel of Christ, that the Gentiles would be brought to a saving knowledge of the Lord (Gen. 12:3; Gal. 3:8).

EARTH, FOUR CORNERS OF THE—a phrase found in Isaiah 11:12 and Revelation 7:1. To the people of Bible times the earth was flat and square. They knew nothing of a spherical earth which orbited the sun. The prophet Isaiah declared that the Lord will "gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth" (Is. 11:11–12). The same thought might be expressed today as "from every point of the compass."

EARTH, THE NEW—the new physical universe that God will create at the end of time. After God created the heavens and the earth, humanity sinned and fell under God's curse (Genesis 3). One aspect of that curse was the desolation of the land of Israel when God's people rebelled against God. That desolation was described as "without form, and void" (Jer. 4:23) like the first unformed earth (Gen. 1:2). But God promised that He would create a new heaven and earth (Is. 65:17; 66:22), a promise to be fulfilled when the events foretold in Revelation 21–22 occur.

The occupation of the land was an important part of God's plan for man. Abraham and his descendants were promised a land, and Israel enjoyed the partial blessings of that land. But God always wanted to extend these blessings to all lands. This desire of God will be met when the new earth is created. For the present, the earth remains under God's curse, which brings much pain and suffering (Rom. 8:19–22). But God's Spirit also groans in supportive prayer for the weakness of God's people until the new earth appears (Rom. 8:26–27).

EARTH, PILLARS OF THE—a phrase found in 1 Samuel 2:8: "For the pillars of the earth are the LORD's, and He has set the world upon them." A pillar is a support for holding up a building. The idea that the earth is supported by pillars, or upon foundations of some sort, is found often in the Old Testament (Ps. 18:15; Jer. 31:37; Mic. 6:2). The eternal God is the ultimate foundation on which the pillars of the earth rest.

EARTH, VAULTED—a phrase used in a pictorial way to show the view of the universe held by the ancient Hebrews. Many scholars believe the Israelites thought of the heavens as a solid dome above the earth—thus the description of God in some translations as founding "His vault upon the earth" (Amos 9:6; NRSV, NASB). The Hebrew word translated as vault actually means "something held firmly together." The NKJV translates the phrase as "founded His strata in the earth."

EARTHQUAKE—a trembling or convulsion of the earth, often accompanied by volcanic eruptions. Earthquakes may cause fissures in the earth, avalanches, loud rumbling noises, and destructive fires (Num. 16:32; 1 Kin. 19:11).

A notable earthquake occurred during the reigns of Uzziah, king of Judah (792–740 B.C.), and Jeroboam II, king of Israel (793–753 B.C.). Amos dated his prophecy "two years before the earthquake" (Amos 1:1), and Zechariah wrote about "the earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah" (Zech. 14:5). Earthquakes were common in ancient Israel. A notable earthquake took place in 31 B.C. during the reign of Herod the Great.

An earthquake occurred at the crucifixion of Jesus (Matt. 27:51–54), and another occurred at His resurrection (Matt. 28:2). A great earthquake occurred in Macedonia when Paul and Silas were in jail at Philippi, “so that the foundations of the prison were shaken” (Acts 16:26).

The Bible uses earthquakes as symbols of God’s power (2 Sam. 22:8), presence (Ps. 68:8), revelation (Ex. 19:18), and judgments (Ezek. 38:19–23).

Jesus said that “famines, pestilences, and earthquakes in various places . . . are the beginning of sorrows” (Matt. 24:7–8). All these events are only “the beginning” (Matt. 24:8) that will end in the catastrophic disasters of the last days. The Book of Revelation uses earthquakes as a symbol of the upheavals in the religious and political realms that will precede and accompany the second coming of Christ (Rev. 6:12).

EAST (see DIRECTION).

EAST, CHILDREN OF—inhabitants of the lands east of Palestine, bordering on the desert (Judg. 6:3, 33).

EAST GATE (see GATES OF JERUSALEM AND THE TEMPLE).

EAST WIND (see WINDS).

EASTER—a feast or festival of the Christian church that commemorates the resurrection of Christ. It is celebrated on the first Sunday following the full moon that occurs on or after March 21—or one week later if the full moon falls on Sunday. In other words, Easter falls between March 22 and April 25.

Easter was originally a pagan festival honoring Eostre, a Teutonic goddess of light and spring. At the time of the vernal equinox (the day in the spring when the sun crosses the equator and day and night are of equal length), sacrifices were offered in her honor. As early as the eighth century, the word was used to designate the annual Christian celebration of the resurrection of Christ.

The only appearance of the word Easter (KJV) is a mistranslation of pascha, the Greek word for “Passover” (Acts 12:4).

Also see PASSOVER.

EASTERN SEA—a lake on the southeastern boundary of the land of Israel (Ezek. 47:18), also known as the Salt Sea or the DEAD SEA.

EATING—the consumption of food at mealtime. The Israelites ate in the morning and in the evening (Ex. 16:12; John 21:4–5, 12). But this custom did not prohibit a snack at other times. For instance, laborers ate a light meal at noon (Ruth 2:14). Israelites were accustomed to wash their hands both before and after eating (Matt. 15:2; Luke 11:38), because food was lifted to the mouth with the fingers. Prayers were also offered before partaking of food (1 Sam. 9:13) in honor of God, who sent the rain and harvest.

Like the ancient Egyptians and Greeks and the modern Arabs, the Hebrew people sat while eating, probably on mats spread on the floor or ground (Gen. 27:19; Judg. 19:6). They later adopted the practice of reclining upon cushions, couches, or divans (Esth. 1:6; 7:8).

EBAL [EE buhl]—the name of two men and a mountain:

1. A son of Shobal and a descendant of Seir the Horite (Gen. 36:23).
2. A mountain north of Shechem and opposite Mount GERIZIM (Deut. 11:29; see Map 3, B–3). Moses gave instructions to the Israelites about a religious ceremony they should observe after they crossed the Jordan River into the Promised Land. Moses also instructed that stones be set up on Mount Ebal and an altar built to the Lord (Deut. 27:4–5).

   At a later time, Joshua and the other leaders of the Israelites did all these things as Moses had commanded (Josh. 8:30–35). Joshua renewed the covenant by building “an altar to the LORD God of Israel in Mount Ebal” (v. 30), by offering “burnt offerings” and “peace offerings” to the Lord (v. 31), by writing on the stones the law of Moses (v. 32), and by reading the words of the law to the assembled multitude (vv. 33–35).

   When Joshua read the blessings of the law, the people on Mount Gerizim responded with an “Amen”; when he read the curses, the people on Mount Ebal responded with an “Amen.” Hence, Mount Ebal became known as the Mount of Cursing. Ebal is somewhat higher than Gerizim. The tops of the two mountains are about 3 kilometers (2 miles) distant from each other. The modern name of Mount Ebal is Jebel Eslamiyeh.
3. A son of Joktan, a descendant of Shem (1 Chr. 1:22; Obal, Gen. 10:28), possibly an ancestor of an Arabian tribe.

Photo: Levant Photo Service

• Mount Ebal, with the excavated remains of the city of Shechem (modern Nabus) in the foreground.

EBED [EH bed] (servant)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. The father of Gaal (Judg. 9:26–35).
2. A descendant of Adin (Ezra 8:6). Ebed returned to Judah with Ezra from the captivity.

EBED-MELECH [E bed ME leck] (servant of the king)—an Ethiopian eunuch who served Zedekiah, king of Judah. Ebed-Melech rescued the prophet Jeremiah from a dungeon (Jer. 38:7–13). Later, Jeremiah informed him that he would be spared when the Babylonians captured Jerusalem (Jer. 39:15–18).

EBENEZER [ebb un EE zur] (stone of help)—the name of a place and a monument in Israel:

1. A place where Israel was defeated by the Philistines and the ARK OF THE COVENANT was captured (1 Sam. 5:1). Its location was perhaps at modern Izbet Sarteh near Aphek.

2. A stone erected by Samuel to commemorate Israel’s victory over the Philistines. It may have been named after Ebenezer No. 1 to show that Israel’s defeat there twenty years before had been reversed (1 Sam. 7:12).

Photo by Howard Vos

• Excavated remains of Israelite houses at Ebenezer, where the Philistines captured the Ark of the Covenant from Israel (1 Sam. 4:1–22).

EBER [EE bur] (on the other side of)—the name of six people or groups of people:

1. A descendant of Shem and an ancestor of Christ (Gen. 10:21, 24–25; Heber, Luke 3:35, KJV).
2. A name denoting the descendants of Eber; or, perhaps, a reference to those who lived “across” the Euphrates River (Num. 24:24). Also see HEBER.
3. A family of the tribe of Gad (1 Chr. 5:13).
4. A family of the tribe of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:12).

5. Another family of the tribe of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:22).
6. A priest, the head of the house of Amok (Neh. 12:20).

EBEZ [EH bez]—a form of ABEZ.

EBIASAPH [eh BUY uh saf] (the father has gathered)—a Levite whose descendants were doorkeepers of the tabernacle (1 Chr. 6:23; 9:19; also spelled Abiasaph, Ex. 6:24).

EBONY (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

EBRON [EE brun]—a town in the territory alloted to Asher (Josh. 19:28; Hebron, KJV). Ebron may be identical with Abdon (Josh. 21:30; 1 Chr. 6:74).

EBRONAH [ih BROH nah]—a form of ABRONAH.

ECBATANA [ECK bat uh nuh]—a form of ACHMETHA.

ECCE HOMO—the Latin translation of Pilate's words, "Behold the Man!" (John 19:5). The so-called Ecce Homo arch in Jerusalem is near the GABBATHA where Jesus faced Pilate (John 19:13).

ECCLESIASTES, BOOK OF—a wisdom book of the Old Testament that wrestles with the question of the meaning of life. It takes its name from the Greek word, ekklesiastes, meaning "convener of an assembly." The book is often referred to by its Hebrew name, qoheleth, which means "preacher" or "speaker."

Theme of the Book. The second verse of Ecclesiastes, "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity" (1:2), eloquently summarizes the underlying theme of the book—that all human achievements are empty and disappointing when pursued as ends in themselves. Many passages in Ecclesiastes appear to be as pessimistic and depressing as this statement because they point out the folly of pursuing selfish goals. One after the other, the author shows how wisdom, pleasure, hard work, popularity, wealth, and fame fail to bring lasting satisfaction. But the book ends on a triumphant note as the reader is asked to consider life's highest good: "Fear God and keep His commandments, for this is the whole duty of man" (12:13).

Authorship and Date. King Solomon of Israel, a ruler noted for his great wisdom and vast riches, has traditionally been accepted as the author of Ecclesiastes. Evidence for this is strong, since Solomon fits the author's description of himself given in the book: "I, the Preacher, was king over Israel in Jerusalem. And I set my heart to seek and search out by wisdom concerning all that is done under heaven" (1:12–13). But some scholars claim that Solomon could not have written the book because it uses certain words and phrases that belong to a much later time in Israel's history. These objections by themselves are not strong enough to undermine Solomon's authorship, however. The book may have been written some time during his long reign of forty years, from 970 to 931 B.C.

Historical Setting. King Solomon amassed great riches during his reign. He also developed a great reputation as a man of wisdom. He must have written Ecclesiastes as he looked back over his life and reflected on the meaning of all his accomplishments.

Theological Contribution. The Book of Ecclesiastes has a powerful message for our selfish, materialistic age. It teaches that great accomplishments and earthly possessions alone do not bring lasting happiness. True satisfaction comes from serving God and following His will for our lives.

But another important truth from Ecclesiastes is that life is to be enjoyed. The Preacher repeats this truth several times so it does not escape our attention: "There is nothing better for them than to rejoice, and to do good in their lives, and also that every man should eat and drink and enjoy the good of all his labor—it is the gift of God" (3:12–13; see also 2:24–25; 5:18; 8:15; 9:7–10). Our grateful acceptance of God's daily blessings can bring a sense of joy and fulfillment to our lives.

Special Considerations. One of the most moving passages in the Bible is the poem from Ecclesiastes on the proper time for every activity (3:1–8). This text, if taken seriously, can restore balance to our living. Another powerful passage is the figurative description of the aging process (12:1–7). The Preacher realizes that old age with its afflictions looms ahead for every person. So he counsels his audience, "Remember now your Creator in the days of your youth, before the difficult days come" (12:1).

Ecclesiastes: A Study and Teaching Outline

Part One: All Is Vanity" (1:1–11)

I. Introduction: All Is Vanity 1:1–3

II. Illustrations of Vanity 1:4–11

Part Two: The Proof that "All Is Vanity" (1:12—6:12)

I. Proof of "All Is Vanity" from Experience 1:12—2:26
- A. Vanity of Wisdom 1:12–18
- B. Vanity of Pleasure 2:1–3
- C. Vanity of Great Accomplishments 2:4–17
- D. Vanity of Hard Labor 2:18–26

II. Proof of "All Is Vanity" from Observation 3:1—6:12
- A. Unchangeable Nature of God's Program 3:1–22
  - 1. God Predetermines the Events of Life 3:1–8
  - 2. God Predetermines the Conditions of Life 3:9–15
  - 3. God Judges All 3:16–22
- B. Inequalities of Life 4:1–16
  - 1. Evil Oppression 4:1–3
  - 2. Folly of Hard Work 4:4–12
  - 3. Fleeting Nature of Popularity 4:13–16
- C. Insufficiencies of Human Religion 5:1–7
- D. Insufficiencies of Wealth 5:8–20
  - 1. Wealth Does Not Satisfy 5:8–12
  - 2. Wealth Brings Difficulties 5:13–17
  - 3. Wealth Comes Ultimately from God 5:18–20
- E. Inescapable Vanity of Life 6:1–12
  - 1. No Satisfaction in Wealth 6:1–2
  - 2. No Satisfaction in Children 6:3–6
  - 3. No Satisfaction in Labor 6:7–8
  - 4. No Satisfaction in the Future 6:9–12

Part Three: The Counsel for Living with Vanity (7:1—12:14)

I. Coping in a Wicked World 7:1—9:18
- A. Wisdom and Folly Contrasted 7:1–14
- B. Wisdom of Moderation 7:15–18
- C. Strength of Wisdom 7:19–29
- D. Submit to Authority 8:1–9
- E. Inability to Understand All God's Doing 8:10–17
- F. Judgment Comes to All 9:1–6
- G. Enjoy Life While You Have It 9:7–12

H. Value of Wisdom 9:13–18

II. Counsel for the Uncertainties of Life 10:1—12:8
A. Wisdom’s Characteristics 10:1–15
B. Wisdom Related to the King 10:16–20
C. Wisdom Related to Business 11:1–6
D. Wisdom Related to Youth 11:7—12:8
  1. Rejoice in Your Youth 11:7–10
  2. Remember God in Your Youth 12:1–8

III. Conclusion: Fear God and Keep His Commandments 12:9–14

◆

ECCLESIASTICUS (see APOCRYPHA).

ECLIPSE—a darkening of the earth or the moon that occurs when one passes in between the other and the sun. Several of the Old Testament prophets indicated that such a phenomenon in the sky was evidence of God’s judgment (Is. 13:10; Joel 2:31). Also see ASTRONOMY.

ECZEMA (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

ED [ed] (witness)—the name of an altar built by the Reubenites, Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh who settled east of the Jordan River. The altar served as a witness of the loyalty of these tribes to God and to the 9 1/2 tribes west of the Jordan (Josh. 22:34; witness, NKJV).

EDAR [E dar]—a form of EDER.

EDAR, TOWER OF [E dar] (see EDER).

EDEN [EE den] (delight)—the name of a garden, a man, and a region in the Old Testament:

1. The first home of Adam and Eve, the first man and woman. The concept “Garden of Delight” fits perfectly the setting of Genesis 2–3, a place of God’s blessing and prosperity.
   Suggestions offered as to the location of Eden include Babylonia (in Mesopotamia), Armenia (north of Mesopotamia), and an island in the Indian Ocean. The statement in Genesis 2:10 that four "riverheads" divided from the river that flowed out of the Garden of Eden (Gen. 2:10–14) supports a location somewhere in Mesopotamia.

Two of the rivers are clearly identified: the TIGRIS, which ran along the east side of Asshur (Assyria), and the EUPHRATES. The Pishon ("Spouter") and Gihon ("Gusher") rivers are hard to identify. The Gihon may have been in Mesopotamia, since Genesis 2:13 says it encompassed the whole land of "Cush" (possibly southeast Mesopotamia). Some think Pishon and Gihon represent the Indus and the Nile, respectively, suggesting that Eden included the whole of the Fertile Crescent from India to Egypt.

The Garden of Eden included many kinds of beautiful and fruitbearing trees, including "the tree of life" and "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil" (Gen. 2:9). Man was to tend and keep the garden (Gen. 2:15), which, in addition to trees, could have contained other vegetation such as grain crops and vegetables (Gen. 1:11–12). The garden was also filled with all kinds of birds and land animals (Gen. 2:19–20), probably including many of the animals created on the sixth day of creation (Gen. 1:24–25). It was well-watered (Gen. 2:10), insuring lush vegetation and pasture.

After Adam and Eve sinned against God (Gen. 3:1–19), the Lord banished them from the garden. Cain, the son of Adam and Eve, is said to have lived "east of Eden" (Gen. 4:16).

In several Old Testament passages Eden is used as a symbol of beauty and fruitfulness, the place blessed by God (Is. 51:3). Revelation 22:1–2 alludes to the Garden of Eden by picturing a "river of water of life" and "the tree of life" in the heavenly Jerusalem.

2. A Levite who lived during the reign of King Hezekiah of Judah. He assisted in the religious reformation under Hezekiah, helping cleanse the temple (2 Chr. 29:12) and overseeing the distribution of the freewill offerings (2 Chr. 31:15).
3. A region or city in Mesopotamia that supplied Tyre with choice items such as beautiful and luxurious clothing (Ezek. 27:23–24). Called Bit-Adini on the Assyrian monuments, the place probably was near Damascus (Beth Eden, Amos 1:5; house of Eden, KJV).

Photo by Howard Vos

• The Tigris River (shown here near Baghdad, Iraq) is the Hiddekel River referred to in the account of the Garden of Eden (Gen. 2:14).

EDER [EE dur] (flock)—the name of a tower, a city, and two men in the Old Testament:

1. A watchtower between Bethlehem and Hebron where Jacob encamped (Gen. 35:21; Edar, KJV).
2. A town of southern Judah, situated about seven kilometers (4 or 5 miles) south of Gaza (Josh. 15:21).
3. A descendant of Elpaal and a son of Beriah, a Benjamite (1 Chr. 8:15, Ader, KJV).
4. A descendant of Mushi and a Levite of the family of Merari (1 Chr. 23:23; 24:30).

EDOM [EE dum] (red)—the name of a person and a region (see Map 2, C–1) in the Old Testament:

1. An alternate name for ESAU, who traded his BIRTHRIGHT to his brother Jacob for a meal, which consisted of a red stew (Gen. 25:29–34).

2. The land inhabited by the descendants of Edom, or Esau (Gen. 32:3; 36:8). Ancient Edom included the region beginning in the north at the River Zered, a natural boundary also for southern Moab, and extending southward to the Gulf of Aqabah. At times it included mountain ranges and fertile plateaus on the east and west of the Arabah, the desert valley south of the Dead Sea.

The most significant area of ancient Edom was the mountain-encircled plain on the east of the Arabah. Mt. Seir, the highest of this range, rises to an elevation of nearly 1,200 meters (3,500 feet) above the Arabah. Edom's capital during the days of Israel's monarchy was Sela, situated at the southern end of a secluded valley that became the location of the city of PETRA in later times. Other important Edomite cities were Bozrah and Teman (Is. 34:6; Amos 1:12). In New Testament times, Edom was known as Idumea.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• Petra, situated in ancient Edom, is the site of numerous buildings carved from red sandstone cliffs by the Nabateans about 300 B.C.

EDOMITES [EE dum ites]—descendants of Edom, or ESAU—an ancient people who were enemies of the Israelites. During the days of Abraham, the region which later became the home of the Edomites was occupied by more than one tribe of non-Israelite peoples. When Esau moved to this region with his family and possessions, the HORITES already lived in the land (Gen. 36:20).

Edom and Israel after Kadesh Barnea. After the years of wilderness wandering, Moses wanted to lead Israel northward to Canaan across Edom into Moab. The king of Edom, however, refused them passage (Num. 20:14–21), forcing them to bypass Edom and Moab through the desert to the east (Judg. 11:17, 18). Later in the journey northward to Abel Acacia Grove in the plains of Moab across from Jericho (Num. 33:48–49), Balaam prophesied that Israel would one day possess Edom (Num. 24:18).

From the Conquest Until the Division. In dividing the land of Canaan after the conquest, Joshua established Judah's border to the west of the Dead Sea and to the border of Edom (Josh. 15:1, 21). During the reign of Saul, Israel fought against Edom (1 Sam. 14:47). But Edomites at times served in Saul's army (1 Sam. 21:7; 22:9). David conquered Edom, along with a number of other adjacent countries, and stationed troops in the land (2 Sam. 8:13–14). In later years, Solomon promoted the building of a port on the northern coast of the Red Sea in Edomite territory (1 Kin. 9:26–27).

After the Division. During the time of the Divided Kingdom, a number of hostile encounters occurred between the nations of Judah or Israel and Edom. During Jehoshaphat's reign, Edomites raided Judah but were turned back (2 Chr. 20:1, 8). An attempt to reopen the port at Ezion Geber failed (1 Kin. 22:48), and the Edomites joined forces with those of Judah in Jehoshaphat's move to put down the rebellion of Mesha of Moab (2 Kin. 3:4–5). During the reign of Joram, Edom freed herself from Judah's control (2 Kin. 8:20–22), but again became subject to Judah when Amaziah assaulted and captured Sela, their capital city. Edom became a vassal state of Assyria, beginning about 736 B.C. So antagonistic were relationships between Israel and Edom that Edom is pictured as Israel's representative enemy (Is. 34:5–17). The entire Book of Obadiah is a prophecy against Edom.

The Place of the Nabateans. After the downfall of Judah in 586 B.C., Edom rejoiced (Ps. 137:7). Edomites settled in southern Judah as far north as Hebron. Nabateans occupied old Edom beginning in the third century B.C., continuing their civilization well into the first century A.D. Judas Maccabeus subdued the Edomites and John Hyrcanus forced them to be circumcised and then made them a part of the Jewish people. The Herod family of New Testament times was of Idumean (Edomite) stock.

Knowledge of the Edomites comes mainly from the Bible, archaeological excavations of their ancient cities, and references to Edom in Egyptian, Assyrian and Babylonian sources.

EDREI [ED rih eye] (meaning unknown)—the name of two cities in the Old Testament:

1. A city of the kingdom of Og in BASHAN (see Map 3, D–2) and the site of Israel's defeat of Og's army (Num. 21:33–35; Josh. 12:4).
2. A fortified city allotted to the tribe of Naphtali. Edrei was between Kedesh and En Hazor, to the north of the Sea of Galilee (Josh. 19:37). It may be identical with present-day Tell Khureibeh.

EDUCATION—the transfer of knowledge, morals, and attitudes from one person to another, and usually from one generation to the next. For the Israelites, the goal of education was to prepare people to know God and to live peacefully with one another (Luke 2:52); education did not emphasize the "three R's." The method of education was different, too, although by New Testament times, it had changed significantly. In the Old Testament period education was rather informal. Children were taught in the home by the parents. However, by New Testament times schools had been established to assist parents in the teaching of their children.

God gave the responsibility of teaching to parents (Deut. 11:19). To be a parent meant to teach. Both parents were involved in the child's education; however, the father was responsible to see that his children were properly educated (Prov. 1:8–9). A young son stayed with his mother when the father went to the fields to work. Therefore, a boy's first significant instruction came from his mother (Prov. 31:1–9). As the boy grew, the father's involvement in his son's education increased, especially as they began to work together in the fields or in the father's trade. A daughter stayed on with her mother and continued under her instruction. In the close-knit family structure of that day, as parents became grandparents they also became involved in teaching their grandchildren (Deut. 4:9; 2 Tim. 1:5; 3:14–15). A parent's responsibility for instructing children continued until death.

The term "father" was applied to teachers outside the family, also, and teachers often called their students "sons." God made Joseph a "father" to the PHARAOH (Gen. 45:8), which means that the Pharaoh listened to Joseph as a pupil listens to his teacher and receives instruction from him. Throughout Proverbs the term "my son" indicates the same teacher-pupil relationship (Prov. 1:8, 10, 15; 2:1; 3:1, 11). And in the New Testament Paul spoke of Timothy as his son (1 Tim. 1:18).

During the period between the Old and New Testaments, SYNAGOGUES and schools were established. Generally, each rabbi taught in a village school supported by the parents of the children who attended. The teacher, or rabbi, of the school helped the parents by instilling religious truths in the boys' minds; however, the parents still were responsible for their children's education. In choosing a rabbi as a village teacher, the parents were more concerned with his personal character than with his ability to teach. His example was more important than his teaching skills. The ideal rabbi was a married man who also was industrious and serious. He would never joke with the boys, nor would he tolerate any wrongdoing. However, it was considered important that he be a patient man. Both rabbi and parents took God as their model for proper teaching. God was the Master Teacher (Is. 30:20–21), who taught by word and example (Ps. 78:1; Deut. 8:2–3).

Every father was expected to teach his son a trade. A Jewish proverb reads, "He who does not teach his son a useful trade teaches him to be a thief." Usually, a son followed in his father's occupation, with the father passing on his skills and trade secrets.

Scholars do not agree on how many Israelites could read and write in Old Testament times. By the New Testament period, however, almost every village had its own school where reading and writing were taught to the boys. Parents sent their sons to school for the purpose of learning to read the Scriptures; they continued in school from the age of six or seven until about twelve years of age. If the parents wanted their son to receive more training, he was sent to Jerusalem, where a number of notable rabbis had schools. Paul spent time there, studying under GAMALIEL (Acts 22:3), a famous rabbi. School was in session year-round, with the day beginning shortly after sunrise and continuing until about 10:00 A.M. On a hot day, the students would be dismissed for the remainder of the day. If the weather was more comfortable, classes reconvened about 3:00 P.M. for several more hours of study.

The school consisted of one classroom; all the students studied together. The teacher sat on a low platform (Luke 4:20); the students sat at his feet (Acts 22:3). Because the students were at different learning levels, the instruction had to be individualized. While the rabbi worked with one student or group, the others busied themselves with assignments. Because the rabbi believed that if the student did not voice his lessons they would be forgotten, students spoke out loud as they read and memorized.

EGG, EGGS—an oval shell that contains the embryo of a bird. The Bible also speaks of eggs in symbolic fashion. The prophet Isaiah accused the people of Judah of hatching “vipers’ eggs,” a symbol of the evil schemes which they were plotting (59:5).

EGLAH [EGG la]—one of David’s wives and the mother of David’s son, Ithream (2 Sam. 3:5; 1 Chr. 3:3).

EGLAIM [EGG lay im]—a town on the border of Moab (Is. 15:8).

EGLATH-SHELISHIYAH [EGG luth shell ih SHY ya]—a city mentioned in the prophetic oracles pronounced against Moab (Is. 15:5; Jer. 48:34, NIV).

EGLON [EGG lahn] (young bull)—the name of a city (see Map 4, A–4) and a king in the Old Testament:

1. An Amorite city in the western SHEPHELAH (lowlands). Eglon was one of five allied cities that attacked Gibeon but were conquered by Joshua (Josh. 10:3).
2. An overweight Moabite king who reigned during the period of the judges (Judg. 3:12–25). Allied with the Ammonites and the Amalekites, Eglon invaded the land of Israel. His army captured Jericho, and he exacted tribute from the Israelites.

   After eighteen years of Eglon’s rule, the Lord raised up EHUD the Benjamite, a left-handed man, to deliver Israel. Ehud stabbed Eglon in the belly with a dagger. Because Eglon was a very fat man, "even the hilt went in after the blade, and the fat closed over the blade, for (Ehud) did not draw the dagger out of his belly" (Judg. 3:22).

EGYPT [EE jipt]—the country in the northeast corner of Africa that extended from the Mediterranean Sea on the north to the first waterfall on the Nile River in the south (see Map 9, A–5)—a distance of about 880 kilometers (540 miles). The Israelites spent 430 years in this land (Ex. 12:40) between the time of Joseph and Moses. Jesus lived temporarily in Egypt during His infancy (Matt. 2:13–15).

The Egyptians called their country Tawy, "the two lands"—referring to Upper and Lower Egypt—or Kemyt, "the black land," which distinguished the fertile Nile valley from the red desert sand. In the Bible the word for Egypt is Mizraim, which means "Two Egypts" and is the name of one of the sons of Ham who founded the country (Gen. 10:6; 1 Chr. 1:8).

History of Egypt. Information about Egyptian history is found in the Bible, Egyptian and Greek historical books, various Egyptian papyrus documents and stone writings, and facts from archaeological investigations of ancient Egyptian cities, temples, and graves. One of the most helpful chronological surveys of the Egyptian kings was provided by the Egyptian priest Manetho. He divided the kings of Egypt into thirty-one different dynastic families who ruled from about 3100 to 250 B.C. Some of these dynasties were strong, while others were comparatively weak.

The history of Egypt can be simplified by ordering the dynasties into three main periods of strength: the Old Kingdom (2700–2200 B.C.); the Middle Kingdom (2000–1800 B.C.); and the New Kingdom (1570–1100 B.C.). Each of these kingdoms was followed by a period of weakness.

After the New Kingdom, Egypt was dominated by Libyan, Ethiopian, Persian, Greek and finally Roman powers during New Testament times. The dates for these periods and the length of the reigns of each king are not securely fixed. But Egyptologists have been able to reconstruct a fairly accurate chronology by using evidence from many different sources.

Archaeologists have found a number of small villages that date prior to the beginning of the Old Kingdom period of Egyptian history. These primitive hunting and farming communities were the descendants of Mizraim (Gen. 10:6). Metal objects, tools, pottery, jewelry and religious objects were found in these early graves. Trade with Mesopotamia may have been an important factor in the development of a written Egyptian language, which used pictures in a system known as HIEROGLYPHICS.

Around 3100 B.C., some 1000 years before Abraham, all of Egypt was joined together under one king at Memphis. The land was divided into districts called “nomes.” Irrigation and the plow were introduced to increase the nation’s agricultural productivity. Shortly thereafter, the Old Kingdom period of Egypt’s history began. During this era, the famous pyramids of Egypt were built. Djoser’s step pyramid at Saqqara and the three great pyramids at Giza are a testimony to the power and prosperity of the nation, as well as evidence of the people’s belief in the divine character of the PHARAOH, the Egyptian ruler.

Several pyramids have long series of curses, magical spells, and ritual formulas written on the walls of the burial chambers. These were to be used by the dead Pharaoh for protection on his journey to the afterlife. Large open-air temples where various rituals in honor of the king were performed were built beside the pyramids.

The arts of painting, sculpturing, and architecture excelled in Egypt. One group of texts known as the “Memphite Theology” probably dates back to this era. They describe how the god Ptah spoke and created all things, indicating that the Pharaoh was considered divine. Wisdom writings from Imhotep and Ptahhotep reveal something of the moral values and ideals of the nation and the high literary achievements of the educated classes.

As the government of Egypt expanded, noblemen from various parts of the nation began to gain greater power. This led to a decentralization of power and ultimately to the First Intermediate Period of weakness around 2200 B.C. The time was described as an epic of chaos, instability, poverty, and despair.

Two texts from this period describe man’s disillusionment with life. Another expresses a strong desire for social stability and justice. These events led to a rethinking of human ideals. As a result, the highly structured social order was reevaluated and social justice for even the peasant was proclaimed as important. The possibility of life after death, which had been limited to the kings, became the goal of noblemen as they rose to higher power. Ultimately even the common person pursued this hope.

The Middle Kingdom era of Egypt's history (2000–1800 B.C.) parallels the time of Abraham's journey into Egypt (Gen. 12:10–20). Wisdom texts, one supposed prophecy, and stories about fishing and hunting depict life at this time. During this era, the new kings centralized the government, expanded agricultural production through new irrigation projects, established the security of the nation by defeating the Nubians from Cush, and set up a series of defensive fortresses on the southern and western borders.

Trade with Phoenicia, mining in the Sinai desert, and at least one military raid into Palestine to Shechem indicate that Egypt had close relationships with Palestine when the patriarchs such as Abraham and his descendants first came to the land. The "Story of Sinuhe" describes an Egyptian's trip to Palestine and the fertility of the land. A painting in a tomb from the time of Sesostris III (1890 B.C.) shows thirty-seven people from Canaan who traveled to Egypt. Texts containing magical curses (the Execration Texts) on Egypt's enemies contain the names of the kings of Tyre, Beth-Shemesh, and Jerusalem. These indicate that Egypt's stability was weakening and that the Second Intermediate Period of weakness (1750–1570 B.C.) was about to begin.

During this time of weakness, many non-Egyptians entered the country. A group called the Hyksos ("rulers from a foreign land") took control of the nation. Joseph's rise to an important position in the house of Potiphar (Genesis 39) and his appointment to the task of collecting grain during the years of plenty (Genesis 41) may have been made possible because other foreigners had significant places in the Hyksos government.

Some scholars once thought the Hyksos were the people of Israel, but few accept this view today. The Hyksos used the bow, body armor, the horse and chariot, and a new defensive wall system for Egyptian cities. But in spite of their military power, they were driven out of Egypt when the New Kingdom began.

The New Kingdom period (1570–1100 B.C.) parallels the biblical period before the birth of Moses until the time of Samuel. The New Kingdom began when the Egyptians managed to drive out the Hyksos and reunite Egypt. This new dynasty was made of kings “who did not know Joseph” (Ex. 1:8). They began to persecute the Hebrews, forcing them to build the stone cities of Pithom and Rameses (Ex. 1:11). The Hebrews were seen as foreigners who were a threat to the security of the nation (Ex. 1:10), so they were enslaved.

Queen Hatshepsut carried out many building and reconstruction projects and expanded trade relations with several foreign countries. The next king, Thutmose III, was an aggressive warrior and he conducted several campaigns into Palestine. Many believe his son, Amenhotep II, was the Pharaoh of the Exodus. Egyptian texts do not mention the ten plagues, the Exodus of Israel from Egypt, or the defeat of Pharaoh and his army in the Red Sea (Exodus 7–15). But this would hardly be expected since the Egyptians seldom recorded any of their defeats. Before the Exodus, Egypt was at the height of its power; but God humbled the nation and taught its people that He was God—not Pharaoh or any of the other gods of Egypt (Ex. 7:5; 8:10, 22; 9:14, 29; 10:2; 12:12).

Many interesting stories come from this period of Egyptian history. “The Tale of Two Brothers” describes how the wife of one brother lied about the sexual advances of the other brother. This story is similar to the false accusation of Potiphar’s wife against Joseph. Myths about the struggles between the gods Horus and Seth and the “Wisdom of Amenemopet,” which are similar to Proverbs 22:17—24:22, are a few of the important literary compositions from Egypt during these years.

No one knows how the Exodus affected Egypt’s religious beliefs. However, several years later King Akhenaten rejected the worship of Amon at Thebes and proclaimed that Aten, the solar disk of the sun, was the only god. A beautiful hymn of praise to Aten has been discovered. This shows clearly that Akhenaten was pushing the Egyptians to adopt belief in one god. Religious tension was very high because Akhenaten dismissed the priests at the other temples and moved his capital to El-Amarna.

About 350 letters from Babylon, the Hittites, and many cities in Palestine were found at this capital. These letters reveal that Palestine was under a great deal of political unrest during the time of Joshua and the judges. A few years later the famous King Tut (Tutankhamen), whose burial chambers were found near Thebes by Howard Carter in 1922, ruled for a few years. He brought the nation back to the worship of its traditional gods at Thebes, relieving much of the tension within the nation.

During the final 200 years of the New Kingdom, the capital of Egypt was moved from Thebes to the city of RAMESES in the delta area. Large construction projects at Thebes, Abydos, Abu Simbel, and in the delta stand as a memorial to the greatness and power of these kings. Some believe the Exodus took place during the reign of Rameses (1304–1238 B.C.), but this contradicts the statement of the Bible that the Exodus took place 480 years before Solomon began to build the temple in 966 B.C. (966 plus 480 equals 1446 B.C. for the Exodus). One king, Merneptah, described his defeat of several Canaanite countries and actually mentions his defeat of Israel.

There is a wealth of historical, literary, and religious writings from the New Kingdom period of Egyptian history. Papyri, ostraca, and tomb and temple accounts give a graphic picture of Egyptian life. A primitive alphabetic script was discovered on the rocks in the Egyptian mines in the Sinai desert. The New Kingdom ended because of government corruption, strikes, inflation, and the increasing power of the temple priests, who constantly contended for greater advantage.

After the New Kingdom came the Late Period of Egyptian history (1100–330 B.C.). The fragmentation of Egyptian power allowed David and Solomon to establish Israel as a strong nation. The Egyptian story of Wen-Amon's trip to Byblos to secure cedar for the construction of a ship for the Pharaoh tells how he was robbed and then refused the needed lumber until proper payment could be made. Such incidents clearly indicate the low status of Egypt during this time. The nation was not a strong military power; so more emphasis was placed on trying to form peaceful trade relations with neighboring states.

Solomon married the daughter of an Egyptian Pharaoh (1 Kin. 3:1), another sign of Egypt's weakness. But later in his reign a new king (probably Shishak) provided refuge for two of Solomon's enemies (1 Kin. 11:17, 40). A few years after Solomon's death (930 B.C.), Shishak, a Libyan who had become Pharaoh, attacked Rehoboam and plundered the gold from the king's palace and the temple in Jerusalem (1 Kin. 14:25–28). A monument of Shishak was discovered during excavations of Megiddo. His record of his battles on the walls of a temple at Thebes indicates that he defeated 150 towns in Judah and Israel. Later Zerah, an Ethiopian general or Pharaoh (2 Chr. 14:9–15; 16:8), led an Egyptian army against Asa, king of Judah; but God miraculously gave victory to Asa.

Ethiopian and Saite dynasties controlled Egypt for several hundred years until the destruction of Israel by the Babylonian King, Nebuchadnezzar, in 587 B.C. These Pharaohs were not particularly powerful because of the political supremacy of the Assyrians and the Babylonians. The Israelite king Hoshea sought the help of Pharaoh So around 725 B.C. (2 Kin. 17:4) to fight against the Assyrians, but the Egyptians were of little help.

Around 701 B.C. Hezekiah was attacked by the Assyrian king Sennacherib. Tirhakah, the Ethiopian king of Egypt, came to Hezekiah's aid (2 Kin. 19:9; Is. 37:9). The Assyrians marched into Egypt in 671 and 664 B.C., destroying the Egyptian forces as far south as Thebes. To strengthen the Egyptian army, the nation hired Greek mercenaries to fight in their army; but this still did not give them any great strength. Josiah, king of Judah, was killed by the Egyptian Pharaoh Necho in 609 B.C. because Josiah tried to interfere with the Egyptian efforts to help the Assyrians who were under attack by the Babylonians (2 Kin. 23:29). After Josiah's death, Judah came under the control of Egypt; but in 605 B.C. the Egyptians were crushed by the Babylonians at Carchemish on the Euphrates. Many Jews fled to Egypt after the destruction of Jerusalem, although the prophet Jeremiah warned against it (Jeremiah 39–44). Nebuchadnezzar later defeated Egypt (Jer. 46:13); he was followed by the Persians (525 B.C.) and the Greeks (330 B.C.). After 330 B.C. a group of Ptolemaic kings ruled Egypt, developing the great city of Alexandria as a center of culture and learning.

Many Jews lived in Alexandria during this period. The Greek translation of the Old Testament from Hebrew to Greek was completed during this time so the Greek-speaking Jews would have a Bible in their language. The Romans took control of Egypt around 30 B.C. From the second century A.D. until the Muslim conquest of Egypt in 642 A.D., Egypt was primarily a Christian nation.

The Religion of Egypt. The Egyptians were polytheists, believing in many gods. Many of their gods were the personification of nature, such as the Nile, the sun and the earth. But other gods stood for abstract concepts such as wisdom, justice, and order. Some gods were worshiped on a national level, but others were local deities. Many cities had their favorite deity, which was the patron god of that locality (Ptah at Memphis or Amon at Thebes). But the cosmic gods like Nut (the goddess of the sky), Geb (the god of the earth), and Re (the sun god) were known throughout the nation.

The beliefs and practices of the Egyptians changed over their 3000-year history. Thus, any discussion of the Egyptian religion must involve generalizations that permeated most aspects of religious life, as well as the individual details and variations that changed within the nation's complex history.

One of the most confusing aspects of Egyptian religion was its ability to accept the process of syncretism. Through this process one god would take on the characteristics of another god and thus eliminate its distinctiveness. Another aspect of Egyptian religion, which is largely hidden, is the extent to which the official beliefs of the priests differed from those of the common peasants. Since most information is based on the official records kept in temples and the tombs of the kings, it is likely that these do not represent the beliefs of the poorer people.

The Egyptians believed that the gods were intimately involved with all aspects of life. The gods caused the rain, controlled the growth of crops, determined birth and death, and ultimately were behind everything. Nothing happened by chance. They did not give natural explanations to events, because they made no distinction between the secular and the sacred. The Israelites also believed that God was the force behind everything, but they had only one God who was not identified with any part of nature. The Egyptians confused the Creator with His creation.

Many Egyptian nature deities were represented as animals (bull, crocodile, falcon, ram, jackal) or by a part-human and part-animal statue. These gods were worshiped in temples throughout the land. Huge temples that covered many acres were built for the great cosmic gods. These were cared for by a large company of priests. The priests were responsible for the regular festivals at the temples and for the daily care for the gods.

Since each god was the king of its own realm of influence, it was treated as a king in its temple. The deity would be awakened, washed, dressed, fed (by an offering), taken for walks, and put to bed. These practices were totally opposite the activities in the Israelite temple, where God was separated from the priest in the Holy of Holies. God was considered the King of Israel and the head of the nation, but the sacrifices were for the removal of sin—not to provide food for God.

The Pharaoh himself was one of the most important Egyptian gods. While ruling, he was the incarnation of the god Horus and the son of Re. After his death, he was identified with the god Osiris. The Pharaoh was a mediator between the people and the cosmic gods of the universe. Thus the Pharaoh was a key factor in determining the fate of the nation. Israel's kings were never considered gods, because God was the true King of Israel (1 Sam. 8:7). Originally only the Egyptian kings had the possibility of eternal life after death, but later the same hope was opened to all people. This possibility was dependent on one's character in this life.

The worship of Osiris was one of the most important aspects of Egyptian religion. Osiris was the king of the underworld, where people went after death, as well as the god of fertility. An Egyptian myth about the murder of Osiris by the god Seth and the subsequent avenging of his death by Horus was very popular in Egypt. It provided the basis for people's hope for prosperity and immortality in the next life because of fertility in this life.

Before the rise of the cult of Osiris, the worship of Ptah at Memphis was dominant. The "Memphite Theology" claimed that Ptah was the supreme god of Egypt who created the world and humankind. The god Amon came to prominence when the kings from Thebes came to power and the god Aten received special attention during the reign of the Pharaoh Akhenaten. Thus the significance and honor of the Egyptian gods rose and fell according to the religious convictions of the ruling Pharaoh and the political power of the priests at the various temples.

In the New Kingdom period three gods were given special status: Amon, Re, and Ptah. One text even talks about these three as different aspects of one great Egyptian god. It is astonishing how religious the Egyptians were and how close some of their beliefs came to the truth. But there is no sign that their contact with Moses and the children of Israel had a lasting effect on religious beliefs or practices within Egypt.

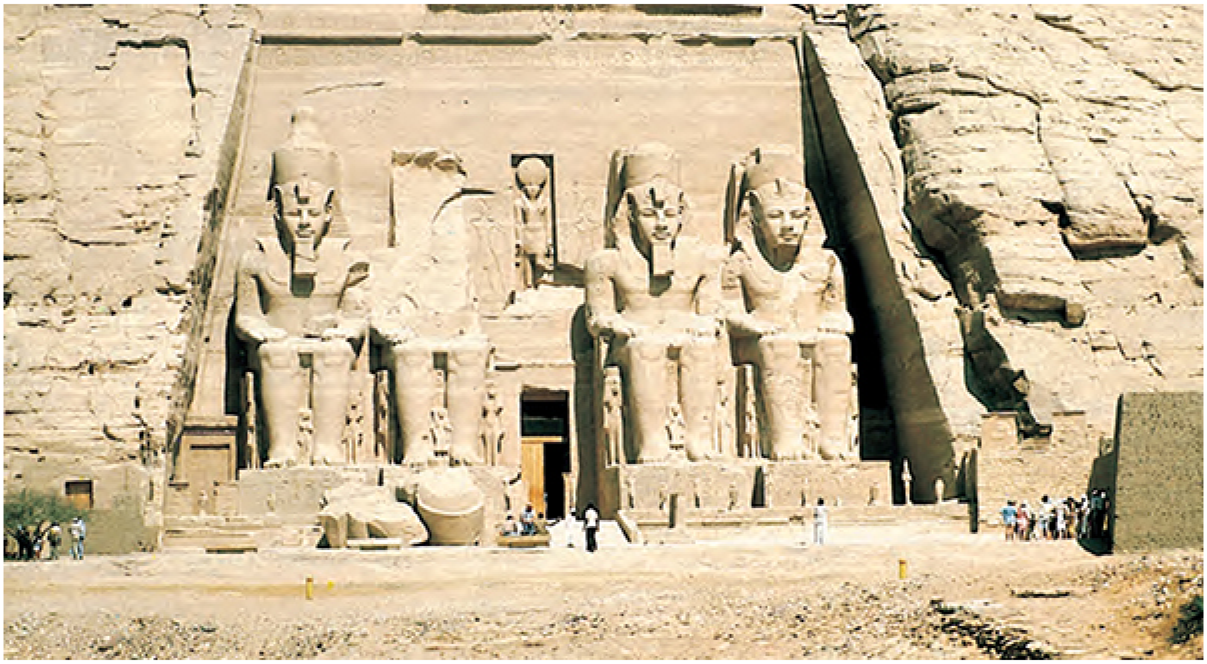

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

• Rameses II of Egypt ordered his craftsmen to carve these enormous statues out of solid rock in the 13th century B.C.

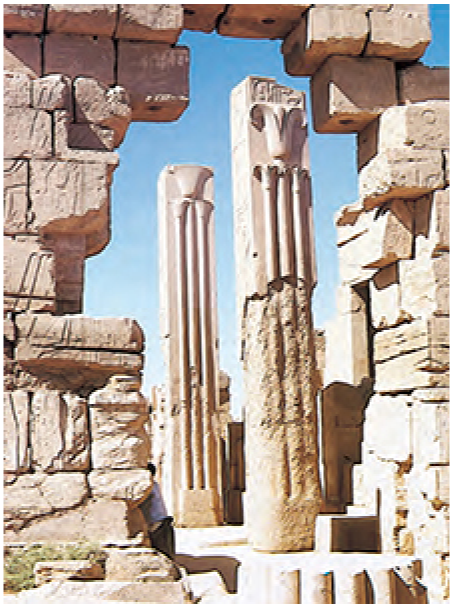

Photo by Howard Vos

• These two heraldic columns of Thutmose III among the ruins of an ancient Egyptian building represented Lower Egypt (left) and Upper Egypt (right).

Photo by Howard Vos

• The Sphinx and the Great Pyramid, timeless symbols of the land of Egypt and its people.

Photo by Howard Vos

• The step pyramid (right) of the Pharaoh Zoser at Saqqarah near Cairo —the oldest known Egyptian pyramid (2700 B.C.)—with accompanying temple.

EGYPT, BROOK OF—a dry stream bed, or wadi (see Map 4, A–4), which served as the dividing line between Canaan and Egypt (Josh. 15:4; Is. 27:12). It is known as the Wadi el-Arish today.

EHI [EE high]—a son of Benjamin (Gen. 46:21). Ehi is also called Ahiram (Num. 26:38).

EHUD [EE hud]—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. One of the judges of Israel (Judg. 3:15—4:1). A left-handed man from the tribe of Benjamin, he assassinated EGLON, king of Moab, who was Israel’s oppressor. He then fled to the hill country of Ephraim, where he summoned the Israelites by blowing a trumpet. Under Ehud’s leadership the Israelites descended into the Jordan Valley and captured the river crossing. They then killed 10,000

Moabites who attempted to cross the Jordan. After the victory, Ehud judged Israel the remainder of his life.

2. A son of Bilhan and a great-grandson of Benjamin (1 Chr. 7:10; 8:6).

EKER [EE cur]—a son of Ram, of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 2:27).

EKRON [ECK ron]—the northernmost of the five chief cities of the Philistines (see Map 3, A–4), near the Mediterranean Sea and about 66 kilometers (35 miles) west of Jerusalem (1 Sam. 6:16–17). Ekron was apportioned first to the tribe of Judah (Josh. 15:45–46), then given to the tribe of Dan (Josh. 19:40–43). After David killed Goliath, the Israelites pursued the Philistines to the very gates of Ekron, their fortified stronghold (1 Sam. 17:52).

The prophets pronounced God's judgment upon Ekron, along with her sister cities (Amos 1:8).

EKRONITES [ECK ron ites]—natives or inhabitants of EKRON (Josh. 13:3).

EL [EL] (see GOD, NAMES OF).

EL ELOHE ISRAEL [el e LOW he IHS ray el] (see GOD, NAMES OF).

EL OLAM [el OH lam] (see GOD, NAMES OF).

EL PARAN [el PAY ran] (god of Paran)—a place in the Wilderness of Paran in southern Palestine in Abraham's time (Gen. 14:6; El-paran, KJV, NRSV, REB, NASB). El Paran is perhaps an earlier name for Ezion Geber, today known as Elath.

EL SHADDAI [el SHAD eye] (see GOD, NAMES OF).

EL ELYON [el EL yun] (God Most High)—a Hebrew name for God. Translated into English, it means "God Most High" (Gen. 14:18–20). Melchizedek, king of Jerusalem, was the priest of God Most High. Also see GOD, NAMES OF.

ELADAH [EL uh dah] (God has adorned)—a descendant of Ephraim (1 Chr. 7:20; Eleadah, NRSV, NASB, NIV).

ELAH [EE la] (oak)—the name of six men and a valley:

1. A chieftain of Edom (Gen. 36:41).
2. The father of Shimei, one of Solomon’s twelve governors (1 Kin. 4:18).
3. A valley in Judah where David killed Goliath (1 Sam. 17:2; 21:9).
4. The fourth king of Israel. Elah was the son and successor of Baasha (1 Kin. 16:6–14). His wicked two-year reign ended when Zimri, one of his captains, murdered him while he was in a drunken stupor.
5. The father of Hoshea, king of Israel (2 Kin. 15:30; 17:1).
6. A son of Caleb and the father of Kenaz (1 Chr. 4:15).
7. A son of Uzzi, a Benjamite who returned from the captivity to live in Jerusalem (1 Chr. 9:8).

◆

Photo by V. Gilbert and Arlisle F. Beers

- The Valley of Elah, site of the battle between David and Goliath (1 Sam. 17; 21:9).

◆

ELAM [EE lum] (highland)—the name of eight or nine men and one geographical region in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Shem and grandson of Noah (Gen. 10:22). He was the ancestor of the Elamites (Ezra 4:9).

2. A geographical region east of the Tigris River (see Map 1, E–2). It was bounded on the north by Media and Assyria, on the east and southeast by Persia, and on the south by the Persian Gulf. In the time of Abraham, “Chedorlaomer, king of Elam” is described as the overlord of three other Mesopotamian kings (Gen. 14:1–17). The prophet Isaiah lists Elam as one of the places to which the Israelites were exiled (Is. 11:11). Elam is described as a people who “bore the quiver” (bow and arrow) and who had “chariots of men and horsemen” (Is. 22:6). Jeremiah lists Elam as one of the peoples who would be forced to drink from the cup of God’s fury (Jer. 25:15, 25).

   Ezekiel prophesies of a time when a funeral dirge will be chanted over the grave of Elam; the once-mighty nation shall be consigned to the Pit (Ezek. 32:24–25). When the Assyrians transported people from the east to settle them in Samaria, the Elamites were among those resettled (Ezra 4:9). CYRUS the Great, the founder of the Persian Empire who conquered Babylon and assisted the Jews, was from Anshan (a designation that apparently refers to eastern Elam with Susa, or SHUSHAN, as its capital). The Book of Esther records events that took place in Shushan (Esth. 1:2; 8:14–15). Daniel writes, “I was in Shushan, the citadel, which is in the province of Elam” (Dan. 8:2). Among the foreigners present in Jerusalem on the Day of Pentecost were “Parthians and Medes and Elamites” (Acts 2:9).
3. A son of Shashak, of the tribe of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:24).
4. A son of Meshelemiah, a Levite from the family of Kohath (1 Chr. 26:3).
5. The ancestor of a family that returned with Zerubbabel from the captivity (Ezra 2:1–2, 7).
6. Another person whose descendants returned from the captivity (Ezra 2:31). Possibly the same as Elam No. 5.
7. One whose descendants returned with Ezra from the captivity (Ezra 8:7).
8. The grandfather of Shechaniah, who confessed to marrying a pagan wife during the captivity and proposed that all those who had done so “put away [divorce] all these wives” (Ezra 10:3).
9. One of the leaders who, with Nehemiah, sealed the new covenant after the captivity (Neh. 10:14).

10. A priest in Nehemiah's time who helped dedicate the rebuilt walls of Jerusalem (Neh. 12:42).

ELAMITES [EE lum ites]—descendants of Elam; an ancient people who lived in the area east of the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers. During their history, the Elamites struggled with the Babylonians, Assyrians, and Persians for domination of the Mesopotamian region of the ancient world.

The great Babylonian dynasty of UR was brought to an end about 1950 B.C. by the Elamites, who destroyed the city and took its king prisoner. The capital of Elam during its entire history was Shushan (Susa). To it the Persian king, Darius I, transferred the Persian capital about 520 B.C. The city is therefore mentioned several times in the books of Nehemiah, Esther, and Daniel, since these books deal with events during the time of the Persian Empire (Neh. 1:1; Esth. 1:2; Dan. 8:2).

From about 2000 to 1800 B.C., the Elamites expanded their kingdom at the expense of the Mesopotamian states, until HAMMURAPI (about 1792–1750 B.C.) put an end to Elamite expansion. Elam was a virtual province of Babylon until about 1200 B.C. Then from about 1200–1130 B.C. Babylon was ruled by Elam. Under the leadership of a succession of strong kings, the Elamites raided and defeated Babylon. In 1130 B.C., however, Nebuchadnezzar I of Babylon captured Elam. For almost three centuries thereafter the Elamites were again under Babylonian domination.

From about 740 B.C. onward, Assyria's power created a more serious threat to the Elamites. Finally, Ashurbanipal, king of Assyria, conquered Elam about 645 B.C. The Persians had already taken the part of Elam called Anshan; after the Assyrian Empire was destroyed (609 B.C.), the Medes annexed most of Elam. When the Persians, in turn, began to control Media, all of Elam became a Persian administrative district. After the sixth century B.C., Elam was never again an independent nation.

Genesis 10:22 identifies Elam, the ancestor of the Elamites, as a son of Shem. Chedorlaomer, who led a group of eastern kings on raids to Palestine about 2000 B.C., also was an Elamite. These kings defeated several cities in the Jordan River plain, including Sodom and Gomorrah. Abraham and his allies finally defeated Chedorlaomer and his fellow kings and rescued Lot, regaining the wealth the easterners had captured (Genesis 14). Chedorlaomer himself was driven back to Elam.

After the Assyrians captured the northern kingdom of Israel in 722 B.C., they followed their usual practice of deporting the population as a means of strengthening their control over them. Elamites were among the national groups deported to Samaria. Some Samaritan Israelites were in turn deported to Elam (Ezra 4:9). Some of the Israelites returned from Elam when the Persians allowed the Jews to go back to Palestine after the captivity.

Isaiah prophesied that Elam would be involved in the defeat of Babylon (Is. 21:2). By its connection with the Persians during their conquest of the Babylonian Empire, they fulfilled Isaiah's prophecy (Dan. 8:1–4). Elamites serving in the Assyrian army also took part in the siege of Jerusalem (Is. 22:6) in 701 B.C. The prophets Jeremiah and Ezekiel prophesied that Elam itself would eventually be destroyed (Jer. 49:34–39; Ezek. 32:24–25).

Elamites were among the pilgrims at Jerusalem on the Day of Pentecost (Acts 2:9). They probably were Jews from Elam, or descendants of those who had been exiled there in 722 B.C. This group may also have included native Elamites who had converted to Judaism.

ELASAH [el AH sah] (God has made)—the name of two Old Testament men:

1. A son of Pashhur the priest; following the return from the captivity he divorced his pagan wife (Ezra 10:22).
2. One of two men whom Zedekiah sent as emissaries to Nebuchadnezzar and who carried Jeremiah's letter to the Babylonian captives (Jer. 29:3).

Also see ELEASAH.

ELATH [EE lath] (palm grove)—a seaport town on the northeast corner of the Gulf of Elath, or Aqaba, on the Red Sea (see Map 4, B–6). King David captured the city, where he established an extensive trade. King Solomon built a fleet at EZION GEBER, which is near Elath on the shore of the Red Sea, in the land of Edom (1 Kin. 9:26; Eloth, KJV, NRSV). Subsequently the town was conquered by Rezin, king of Syria, and then held by the Syrians until it became a border station for the Roman legion (2 Kin. 16:6). During the Greek and Roman period the town was called Aila or Aelana.

ELDAAH [el DAY ah]—the fifth of Midian's five sons. Midian was the son of Abraham and Keturah, Abraham's concubine (Gen. 25:4).

ELDAD [EL dad] (God has loved)—one of seventy elders chosen by Moses at the command of God to help "bear the burden of the people" (Num. 11:17). Eldad and MEDAD were absent from the tabernacle of meeting; nevertheless "the Spirit rested upon them [and] . . . they prophesied in the camp." When a young man told Moses, "Eldad and Medad are prophesying," Joshua was jealous. Moses refused to restrain them, however, answering, "Oh, that all the LORD's people were prophets and that the LORD would put His Spirit upon them!" (Num. 11:26–29).

ELDER—a term used throughout the Bible but designating different ideas at various times in biblical history. The word may refer to age, experience, and authority, as well as specific leadership roles.

In ancient times authority was given to older people with wider experience. These were often considered the most qualified to hold places of leadership. The basic meaning of the Hebrew and Greek words for elder is "old age."

In the Old Testament those leaders associated with Moses in governing the nation of Israel were called "the elders of Israel" (Ex. 3:16; 24:1), "the elders of the people" (Ex. 19:7), or the "seventy elders" (Ex. 24:1). Moses called the elders together to give them instructions for the observance of the Passover before the Exodus from Egypt.

Later, after the years of wandering in the wilderness, bodies of elders ruled in each city. They were viewed as the representatives of the nation and its people. The term "elder" eventually came to be applied to those who governed in the local communities, the rulers of the various tribes, and those who ruled all of Israel. These leaders were responsible for legal, political and military guidance and supervision.

During the years of Israel's captivity in Babylon and the following centuries, elders again appeared as leaders who were responsible for governing in the Jewish communities. They became the upper class, forming a type of ruling aristocracy. Later in this period, a council of elders of seventy-one members, called the SANHEDRIN, emerged. It had both religious and political authority among all the Jewish people in Palestine, particularly in New Testament times. The HIGH PRIEST was the chairman of the Sanhedrin. Local Jewish synagogues, which emerged in the period between the Old and New Testaments, were also governed by a council of elders.

A governing structure similar to the ruling elders among the Jews was followed in the early church. The title "elder" was continued, but the significance of the office changed. Thus the term elder is used in the New Testament to refer to the Jewish elders of the synagogue, to the members of the Sanhedrin, and to certain persons who held office in the church. It also implied seniority by reason of age (1 Tim. 5:2; 1 Pet. 5:5).

The presence of elders in the church in the New Testament indicates that this office was taken over from the synagogue. Elders were associated with James in Jerusalem in the local church's government (Acts 11:30; 21:18) and, with the apostles, in the decisions of the early church councils (Acts 15). Elders were also appointed in the churches established during Paul's first missionary journey (Acts 14:23). Paul addressed the elders at Ephesus (Acts 20:17–35). Elders played an important role in church life through their ministry to the sick (James 5:14, 15). They were apparently the teachers also in a local congregation. Additional duties consisted of explaining the Scriptures and teaching doctrine (1 Tim. 5:17; 1 Pet. 5:5).

ELEAD [EL e ad] (God is witness)—a son of Ephraim. Elead attempted to steal cattle near the Philistine city of Gath and was killed (1 Chr. 7:20–22).

ELEADAH [el ih AY duh]—a form of ELADAH.

ELEALEH [EE lih A leh] (God is exalted)—a city in Moab on the east side of the Jordan River. Elealeh was part of the allotment given to the tribe of Reuben (Num. 32:3). It is mentioned in oracles against Moab (Is. 15:4).

ELEASAH [el ee A sah] (God has made)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Helez, of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 2:39–40).
2. A son of Raphah, a descendant of King Saul (1 Chr. 8:37; Rephaiah, 1 Chr. 9:43).

ELEAZAR [el e A zur] (God is helper)—the name of seven men in the Bible:

1. Aaron's third son by his wife, Elisheba (Ex. 6:23). Eleazar was the father of Phinehas (Ex. 6:25). Consecrated a priest, he was made chief of the Levites after his elder brothers, Nadab and Abihu, were killed for offering unholy fire (Lev. 10:1–7). Before Aaron died, Eleazar ascended Mount Hor with him and was invested with Aaron's high priestly garments (Num. 20:25–28). Eleazar served as high priest during the remainder of Moses' life and throughout Joshua's leadership. He helped in the allotment of Canaan among the twelve tribes of Israel (Josh. 14:1), and was buried "in a hill that belonged to Phinehas his son . . . in the mountains of Ephraim" (Josh. 24:33). Phinehas succeeded him as high priest (Judg. 20:28).
2. The son of Abinadab who was charged with keeping watch over the ark while it stayed in Abinadab's house in Kirjath Jearim (1 Sam. 7:1).
3. The son of Dodo the Ahohite (1 Chr. 11:12). He was one of David's three mighty men (2 Sam. 23:9).
4. A man from the tribe of Levi, the family of Merari, and the house of Mahli (1 Chr. 23:21–22).
5. The Levite son of Phinehas (Ezra 8:33). He assisted the high priest.
6. A priest who acted as a musician when the rebuilt walls of Jerusalem were dedicated (Neh. 12:27, 42).
7. Eliud's son and one of the ancestors of Jesus (Matt. 1:15).

Also see ELIEZER.

ELECT—a person or group chosen by God for special favor and for the rendering of special service to Him. In the Old Testament the Hebrew people were described as God's elect. The New Testament speaks of Christ as God's Chosen One (1 Pet. 2:4, 6) and of the church as God's new chosen people (Rom. 8:33; 2 John 1, 13). Also see ELECTION.

ELECT LADY—the person or church to which 2 John is addressed (2 John 1).

ELECTION—the gracious and free act of God by which He calls those who become part of His kingdom and special beneficiaries of His love and blessings. The Bible describes the concept of election in three distinct ways. Election sometimes refers to the choice of Israel and the church as a people for special service and privileges. Election may also refer to the choice of a specific individual to some office or to perform some special service. Still other passages of the Bible refer to the election of individuals to be children of God and heirs of eternal life.

Throughout the history of redemption, election has characterized God's saving activity. He chose and called Abraham from Ur to Canaan, making an everlasting covenant with him and his offspring (Gen. 11:31—12:7; Neh. 9:7; Is. 41:8). God also called Moses to lead His people out of bondage (Ex. 2:24—3:10; Deut. 6:21–23; Ps. 105). He chose Israel from among the nations of the world to be His special covenant people (Deut. 4:37; 7:6–7; Is. 44:1–2).

Election to salvation takes place "in Christ" (Eph. 1:4; 2:10) as a part of God's purpose for the human race. As part of His eternal plan, God allows us to use our freedom to rebel against Him. Thus it is gracious of God to save those who find salvation through Jesus Christ. It is not unjust of Him not to save everyone, since no one deserves to be saved (Matt. 20:14; Rom. 1:18; 9:15). Election is gracious; it is also unconditional and unmerited (Acts 13:48; Rom. 9:11; 1 Pet. 1:2). It is an expression of the eternal, sovereign will of God who cannot change (Rom. 8:29; 2 Thess. 2:13). Therefore the salvation of the elect is certain (Rom. 8:28, 33).

Election is a necessary condition for salvation; faith is the sufficient condition. The elect inevitably believe, but they do not believe against their will. They have a God-given desire and ability to trust in Christ for salvation (Acts 13:48; 1 Cor. 15:10; Phil. 1:29; 2:13). The elect choose God because He effectively calls them through the proclamation of the gospel of Jesus Christ; they choose Him because He first chose and called them to Himself (Rom. 8:28). That initiating love of God is reflected in Jesus' statement, "You did not choose Me, but I chose you" (John 15:16).

A careful study of the Bible's doctrine of man cures any romantic notion of a human will that is free to choose for or against God. Those who are slaves to sin and its power (Rom. 6:6) neither understand nor seek after God in and of themselves (Rom. 3:11; John 14:17; 1 Cor. 2:14). Outside of Christ, people are spiritually dead rebels who neither desire to submit to the Lord Jesus Christ nor are able to. Apart from God's gracious, free, eternal, and sovereign choice of sinners to become His children, none would be saved but would remain forever under His wrath (Rom. 1:18).

Election is not to be a source of complacency (2 Pet. 1:12) or presumption (Rom. 11:19–22) on the part of Christians. They are to make their calling and election certain by growing in godliness (2 Pet. 1:2–11) as they respond with gratitude to God's electing love (Col. 3:12–17).

God has chosen Christians to bear the image and glory of Christ (Rom. 8:29; 2 Thess. 2:14). They have been elected to be holy in conduct, like Christ (Eph. 1:4). Like Him, they are also to be glorified in their whole being in the life to come (2 Cor. 3:18; Phil. 3:21). The ultimate goal of our election is that we might bring praise and glory to God (Eph. 1:6; Rom. 11:33; 2 Thess. 2:13).

Also see PREDESTINATION.

ELEMENTS—the essential substances of the physical world (2 Pet. 3:10, 12). The apostle Paul also used the word to refer to the demonic spirits or powers behind the physical universe (Gal. 4:3, 9).

ELEPH [E lef]—a town in Canaan allotted to the tribe of Benjamin (Josh. 18:28; Ha-Eleph, KJV).

ELEPHANT (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

ELEPHANTINE (see PAPYRI).

ELHANAN [el HAY nun] (God is gracious)—the name of one or two men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Dodo the Bethlehemite and one of David's mighty men (2 Sam. 23:24; 1 Chr. 11:26).
2. A warrior who killed a giant during the time of David (2 Sam. 21:19; 1 Chr. 20:5).

ELI [EE lie] (the Lord is high)—a judge and high priest with whom the prophet Samuel lived during his childhood (1 Sam. 1–4; 14:3).

The first mention of Eli occurs when the childless Hannah poured out to him her unhappiness over her barren condition. Later, her prayers for a son were answered when Samuel was born. True to her word, she brought her son to the tabernacle and dedicated him to God. There the future prophet lived with the high priest Eli.

Eli was a deeply pious man whose service to the Lord was unblemished. However, he was a lax father who had no control over his two sons. Phinehas and Hophni took meat from sacrificial animals before they were dedicated to God. They also "lay with the women that assembled at the door of the tabernacle" (1 Sam. 2:22). God pronounced judgment on Eli because of his failure to discipline his sons.

God's judgment was carried out through the Philistines. Hophni and Phinehas carried the ARK OF THE COVENANT into battle to help the Israelites. Both were killed, and the ark was captured. When Eli, ninety-eight years old and nearly blind, heard the news, he fell backward and broke his neck. God's final judgment against Eli and his descendants occurred when Solomon removed Abiathar, Eli's descendant, and put Zadok in his place as high priest of the nation (1 Kin. 2:35).

ELI, ELI, LAMA SABACHTHANI [EE lie, EE lie, LUH mah suh BOCK thuh NIE]—the bitter, central, anguished cry of Jesus from the cross (Matt. 27:46). The first two words, Eli, Eli ("My God, My God"), are in Hebrew, while the final words ("why have You forsaken me?") are in Aramaic. Mark 15:34 quotes the entire expression in Aramaic, beginning with "Eloi, Eloi" (see also an alternate reading in Matt. 27:46). With these words, Jesus identified with sinners, took their sins upon Himself, and experienced the righteous judgment of God against sin. In this moment of loneliness and despair, He cried out to His Father God by quoting these words from the Hebrew Old Testament (Ps. 22:1). Yet, even His cry ("My God") portrayed His ultimate faith in God's deliverance.

ELIAB [e LIE ab] (God is my Father)—the name of six men in the Old Testament:

1. A chieftain of the tribe of Zebulun during Israel's wandering in the wilderness (Num. 2:7; 7:24).
2. The father of Dathan and Abiram, Reubenites who rebelled against Moses.
3. David's oldest brother (1 Sam. 16:6–7; Elihu, 1 Chr. 27:18). Eliab's bearing was so striking that when Samuel saw him, he thought Eliab must surely be God's chosen one. Eliab's daughter Abihail married one of David's sons (2 Chr. 11:18).
4. A Levite ancestor of Samuel (1 Chr. 6:27; Elihu, 1 Sam. 1:1; Eliel, 1 Chr. 6:34).
5. A Gadite warrior who joined David at ZIKLAG (1 Chr. 12:8–9).
6. A Levite who served in the tabernacle in David's time (1 Chr. 15:18; 16:5).

ELIADA [e LIE uh duh] (God knows)—the name of three men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of David born at Jerusalem (2 Sam. 5:16; Beeliada, 1 Chr. 14:7).
2. The father of Rezon of Zobah, the "captain over a band of raiders" who annoyed King Solomon (1 Kin. 11:23).
3. A Benjamite and one of Jehoshaphat's chief captains (1 Chr. 17:17).

ELIAHBA [e LIE a ba] (God conceals)—one of David's mighty men (2 Sam. 23:32; 1 Chr. 11:33).

ELIAKIM [e LIE uh kim] (God is setting up)—the name of five Old Testament men:

1. A son of Hilkiah and overseer of the household of King Hezekiah of Judah (2 Kin. 18:18; 19:2). When the invading Assyrian army approached Jerusalem (701 B.C.), Eliakim was one of three men sent by Hezekiah to confer with Sennacherib's forces. Hezekiah then sent these men to report the Assyrians' answer to the prophet Isaiah, who praised Eliakim highly (Is. 22:20–23).

2. The original name of JEHOIAKIM, a son of King Josiah of Judah, who was made king of Judah by Pharaoh Necho (2 Chr. 36:4). Jehoahaz reigned only three months after Josiah's death before the Egyptian pharaoh carried him away captive. Necho then changed Eliakim's name to Jehoiakim to demonstrate his authority over him.
3. One of the priests who took part in the cleansing of the rebuilt walls of Jerusalem (Neh. 12:41).
4. An ancestor of Christ descended from Zerubbabel (Matt. 1:13).
5. An ancestor of Christ, descended from David, who lived before the captivity (Luke 3:30).

ELIAM [e LIE um] (The God of my people)—the name of two Old Testament men:

1. The father of Bathsheba, who became the wife of Uriah the Hittite and later of King David (2 Sam. 11:3; Ammiel, 1 Chr. 3:5).
2. One of David's mighty men (2 Sam. 23:34).

ELIAS [e LIE us]—Greek form of ELIJAH.

ELIASAPH [e LIE uh saf] (God has added)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. The head of the tribe of Gad during Israel's wilderness journey (Num. 1:14; 2:14). He was the son of Deuel (or Reuel; Num. 2:14).
2. The head of the Gershonites during Israel's wilderness journey (Num. 3:24).

ELIASHIB [e LIE uh shib] (God restores)—the name of six or seven men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Elioenai, a Judahite and descendant of Zerubbabel (1 Chr. 3:24).
2. A priest in David's time (1 Chr. 24:12).

3. One who helped Ezra resolve the problem of pagan wives following the captivity (Ezra 10:6; Neh. 12:22–23). Possibly the same as No. 7.
4. A Levite and singer who divorced his pagan wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:27).
5. A son of Zattu who divorced his pagan wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:36).
6. A son of Bani who divorced his pagan wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:36).
7. The high priest in Nehemiah's time (Neh. 3:1; 13:4, 28). Possibly the same as No. 3.

ELIATHAH [e LIE uh thah] (God has come)—the head of a division of temple musicians during David's reign (1 Chr. 25:4, 27).

ELIDAD [e LIE dad] (my God is a friend)—a chieftain of the tribe of Benjamin appointed to represent his tribe in the division of Canaan (Num. 34:21).

ELIEHOENAI [el ih oh EE nigh]—a form of ELIOENAI No. 4 and ELIHOENAI.

ELIEL [e LIE el] (My God is God)—the name of eight or nine Old Testament men:

1. A chief of the half-tribe of Manasseh (1 Chr. 5:24).
2. A Levite ancestor of the prophet Samuel (1 Chr. 6:34; Elihu, 1 Samuel 1:1; Eliab, 1 Chr. 6:27).
3. A Benjamite son of Shimei (1 Chr. 8:20).
4. A Benjamite son of Shashak (1 Chr. 8:22).
5. One of David's captains and a Mahavite (1 Chr. 11:46).
6. One of David's mighty men (1 Chr. 11:47).
7. A Gadite who joined David at Ziklag when David was hiding from Saul (1 Chr. 12:11). Possibly the same as No. 5 or 6.
8. A Levite who helped bring the ark from the house of Obed-Edom during the reign of King David (1 Chr. 15:9).
9. A Levite overseer of the temple tithes and offerings during the reign of King Hezekiah of Judah (2 Chr. 31:13).

ELIENAI [el ih EE nigh] (my eyes are on my God)—a son of Shimei, of the tribe of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:20).

ELIEZER [el ih EE zur] (My God is helper)—the name of eleven men in the Bible:

1. Abraham's chief servant (Gen. 15:2). If Abraham had never had a son, Eliezer of Damascus would have been his heir.
2. Moses' second son by Zipporah (Ex. 18:4; 1 Chr. 23:15).
3. A son of Becher, of the tribe of Benjamin (1 Chr. 7:8).
4. A priest who blew the trumpet before the ark when it was moved from Kirjath Jearim to Jerusalem (1 Chr. 15:24).
5. A son of Zichri and the officer over the tribe of the Reubenites during David's reign (1 Chr. 27:16).
6. A prophet who predicted that the ships of King JEHOSHAPHAT of Judah would be wrecked because he had joined forces with King AHAZIAH of Israel (2 Chr. 20:37).
7. A leader whom Ezra sent to bring Levites to Jerusalem (Ezra 8:16).

8, 9, 10. Three men who divorced their pagan wives after the captivity. One was a priest (Ezra 10:18); one was a Levite (Ezra 10:23); and one was a son of Harim (Ezra 10:31).

11. An ancestor of Joseph, the husband of Mary (Luke 3:29).

Also see ELEAZAR.

ELIHOENAI [el ih oh EE nigh] (my eyes are toward Jehovah)—one of the sons of Pahath-Moab who returned with Ezra from the captivity (Ezra 8:4; Eliehoenai, NRSV, NIV, NASB).

ELIHOREPH [el ih HO ref] (God of harvest rain)—a son of Shisha and one of King Solomon's scribes (1 Kin. 4:3).

ELIHU [eh LIE hew] (He is my God)—the name of five men in the Old Testament:

1. The great-grandfather of the prophet Samuel (1 Sam. 1:1; Eliab, 1 Chr. 6:27; Eliel, 1 Chr. 6:34).
2. A captain of Manasseh who joined David at Ziklag to hide from King Saul (1 Chr. 12:20).

3. A Levite of the family of Kohath who served as a tabernacle gatekeeper during David’s reign (1 Chr. 26:7).
4. The oldest son of Jesse and a brother of David (1 Chr. 27:18; Eliab, 1 Sam. 16:6).
5. The youngest of Job’s “comforters.” Elihu spoke to Job after the three friends—BILDAD; ELIPHAZ, and ZOPHAR—failed to give convincing answers to Job’s questions. Elihu is called “the son of Barachel the Buzite of the family of Ram” (Job 32:2). Like Job’s other friends, Elihu was probably from the Transjordan area southeast of Israel.

ELIJAH [ee LIE juh] (the Lord is my God)—the name of three or four men in the Old Testament:

1. A Benjamite, the son of Jeroham (1 Chr. 8:27).
2. An influential prophet who lived in the ninth century B.C. during the reigns of Ahab and Ahaziah in the northern kingdom of Israel. Elijah shaped the history of his day and dominated Israelite thinking for centuries afterward.

   Elijah’s prophetic activities emphasized the unconditional loyalty to God required of the nation of Israel. His strange dress and appearance (2 Kin. 1:8), his fleetness of foot (1 Kin. 18:46), his rugged constitution that resisted famine (1 Kin. 19:8), and his cave-dwelling habits (1 Kin. 17:3; 19:9) all suggest that he was a robust, outdoors-type person.

   Elijah was opposed to the accepted standards of his day, when belief in many gods was normal. He appears in the role of God’s instrument of judgment upon a wayward Israel because of the nation’s widespread idolatry. The miracles that Elijah performed occurred during the period when a life-or-death struggle took place between the religion of the Lord and BAAL worship.

   Elijah’s views were in conflict with those of King Ahab, who had attempted to cultivate economic ties with Israel’s neighbors, especially Tyre. One of the consequences was that he had married Jezebel, a daughter of Ethbaal, king of Tyre. Ahab saw no harm in participating in the religion of his neighbors, particularly the religion of his wife. Therefore, he established a center of BAAL worship at Samaria. Influenced by Jezebel, Ahab gave himself to the worship of Baal. Suddenly Elijah appeared on the scene.

Prediction of Drought. As punishment against Ahab for building the temple for Baal worship at Samaria, Elijah predicted that a drought would grip the land. Then he fled to the eastern side of the Jordan River and later to Zarephath on the Mediterranean coast to escape Ahab's wrath. At both sites he was kept alive through miraculous means. While staying at a widow's home, he performed a miracle by bringing her son back to life (1 Kin. 17:1–24).

Contest on Mount Carmel. After the drought had lasted three years, the Lord instructed Elijah to present himself before Ahab with the message that the Lord would provide rain. Elijah then challenged the 850 prophets of Baal and Asherah to a contest on Mount Carmel (1 Kin. 18:21). Each side would offer sacrifices to their God without building a fire. The ignition of the fire was left to the strongest god, who would thereby reveal himself as the true God.

The best efforts of the pagan prophets through the better part of a day failed to evoke a response from Baal.

Elijah poured water over his sacrifice to remove any possibility of fraud or misunderstanding about the offering. After Elijah prayed briefly to the Lord, his sacrifice was consumed by fire from heaven. The people of Israel responded strongly in favor of God (1 Kin. 18:39). Then the prophets of Baal were slaughtered at Elijah's command (1 Kin. 18:40), and God sent rain to end the drought (1 Kin. 18:41–46).

Photo by Vladimir Blinov

- The fertile plain surrounding Mount Carmel, site of Elijah's victory over the prophets of Baal (1 Kin. 18; 19:1–2).

Photo: Levant Photo Service

- Statue of the prophet Elijah at the Muhraqah on Mount Carmel, commemorating his victory over the pagan worshipers of Baal.

Flight from Jezebel. Queen Jezebel was furious over the fate of her prophets. She vowed that she would take revenge on Elijah. He was forced to flee to Mount Horeb—the mountain where Moses had received the Ten Commandments. Like Moses, Elijah was sustained for forty days and nights in the wilderness.

While Elijah was at Mount Horeb, the Lord revealed Himself in a low, murmuring sound. The prophet received a revelation of the coming doom on Ahab and Israel (1 Kin. 19:14). Then Elijah was given a threefold charge: He was instructed to anoint Hazael as king of Syria, Jehu as the future king of Israel, and Elisha as the prophet who would take his place (1 Kin. 19:16). These changes would bring to power those who would reform Israel in the coming years.

Naboth's Vineyard and the Challenge of Ahaziah. In the years of war that followed between Ahab and Ben-Hadad of Syria, Elijah did not appear (1 Kings 20). But he did appear after Jezebel acquired a family-owned vineyard for Ahab by having its owner, Naboth, falsely accused and executed (1 Kin. 21:1–29). Elijah met the king in the vineyard and rebuked him for the act (1 Kin. 21:1–24). Ahab repented, and Elijah brought him word from the Lord that the prophesied ruin on his house would not come during his lifetime, but would occur in the days of his son.

Shortly after Ahaziah, the son of Ahab, took the throne from his father, he was involved in a serious accident. He sent messengers to inquire of Baal-Zebub ("Lord of Flies"), the god of Ekron, whether he would recover. Elijah intercepted the messengers and predicted his death because of his belief in other gods (2 Kin. 1:1–17). This event would also be a fulfillment of the doom pronounced earlier upon Ahab's house.

Twice King Ahaziah sent a detachment of soldiers to capture Elijah. But both times they were consumed by fire from heaven. The third group sent by the king begged for mercy, and an angel of God directed Elijah to go with the commander to see the king. Elijah repeated his message of doom to Ahaziah, who soon died (2 Kin. 1:9–17). Elijah's prophecy that Jezebel would meet a violent death was also fulfilled (2 Kin. 9:36).

Ascension to Heaven. The prophet Elijah did not die. He was carried bodily to heaven in a whirlwind (2 Kin. 2:1–11). This was an honor previously bestowed only upon ENOCH (Gen. 5:24). ELISHA, the only witness to this event, picked up Elijah's mantle which fell from him as he ascended. He carried it during his ministry as a token of his continuation of Elijah's ministry (2 Kin. 2:13–14).

Elijah's influence continued even after he ascended into heaven. King Jehoram of Israel received a letter from the prophet seven years after his ascension, indicating that the king would be punished severely for his sins (2 Chr. 21:12–15).

Elijah's Contribution. The prophet Elijah understood that the nation of Israel had a mission to preserve its religious system—the worship of the one true God—in a pure form without any mixture with idol worship. Elijah was strongly opposed to the worship of pagan gods such as Baal and Asherah. This uncompromising stand often endangered his life by bringing him into conflict with those in positions of power, especially Queen Jezebel and her followers.

Elijah's impact on the prophetic movement among the Hebrew people was extensive. He stands as the transitional figure between Samuel (the adviser and anointer of kings) and the later writing prophets. Like the prophets who followed him, Elijah emphasized Israel's responsibility for total commitment to their God and the covenant responsibilities that God and His people had sworn to each other. Both ideas are more fully developed in later prophets, such as Amos and Hosea.

In later Jewish thought, the messianic age was frequently associated with Elijah's return. The Old Testament spoke of the reappearance of Elijah. The prophet Malachi prophesied that the Lord would send Elijah before the day of the Lord arrived. This prophecy was fulfilled in the coming of JOHN THE BAPTIST (Matt. 11:4; 17:10–13; Luke 1:17). John the Baptist was similar to Elijah in his preaching as well as his dress and physical appearance (Matt. 11:7–8; Luke 7:24–28). During Jesus' earthly ministry, some identified him with Elijah (Matt. 16:14; Luke 9:8).

The New Testament also mentions the reappearance of Elijah in person. Along with Moses, he appeared with Jesus on the Mount of Transfiguration (Matt. 17:3).

3. A son of Harim (Ezra 10:21). Elijah divorced his foreign wife following the captivity in Babylon.
4. An Israelite who divorced his foreign wife (Ezra 10:26). He may be the same as No. 3.

ELIKA [e LIE kuh]—one of David's mighty men (2 Sam. 23:25).

ELIM [E lim] (large trees)—an encampment of the Israelites after they crossed the Red Sea (see Map 2, B–2). This encampment was famed for its "twelve wells [springs] of water and seventy palm trees" (Ex. 15:27; Num. 33:9). The modern location is probably the Wadi Gharundel in northwestern Sinai.

ELIMELECH [e LIM uh leck] (my God is king)—the husband of Naomi and the father-in-law of Ruth (Ruth 1:2–3; 2:1). An Ephrathite of Bethlehem of Judah, he moved his family to Moab to escape famine. His two sons, Chilion and Mahlon, married Moabite women, Orpah and RUTH respectively. After the death of Elimelech and his two sons, Ruth chose to return to Bethlehem with Naomi (Ruth 1:16–17).

ELIOENAI [el ih oh EE nigh] (my eyes are toward Jehovah)—the name of six or seven men in the Old Testament:

1. A descendant of David after the captivity (1 Chr. 3:23–24).
2. A chief of the tribe of Simeon (1 Chr. 4:36).
3. A chief of the tribe of Benjamin (1 Chr. 7:8).
4. A gatekeeper of the Levitical family of Kore (1 Chr. 26:3, KJV; Eljehoenai, NKJV; Eliehoenai, NRSV, NASB, NIV).
5. A priest of the sons of Pashhur (Ezra 10:22). Elioenai divorced his pagan wife after the captivity.
6. One of the sons of Zattu (Ezra 10:27). Elioenai divorced his pagan wife.
7. A priest in the days of Nehemiah (Neh. 12:41). Perhaps the same as Elioenai No. 5.

Also see ELIHOENAI.

ELIPHAL [eh LIE ful]—a son of Ur and one of David's mighty men (1 Chr. 11:35).

ELIPHALET [e LIF uh let]—a form of ELIPHELET.

ELIPHAZ [EL ih faz]—the name of two Old Testament men:

1. Esau's son by Adah, daughter of Elon the Hittite (Gen. 36:2, 4, 10–12). Eliphaz was the father, by his concubine Timna, of Amalek and thus was the ancestor of several Edomite tribes.
2. The chief and oldest of Job's three "friends" or "comforters" (Job 2:11). A very religious man, Eliphaz sought to uphold the holiness, purity, and justice of God; he became uneasy when Job questioned this understanding of God. Called "the Temanite," this Eliphaz may have been a descendant of Eliphaz No. 1, who had a son named TEMAN.

ELIPHELEH [e LIF uh leh]—a Levite appointed to play the harp or lyre in the musical services of the tabernacle when David relocated the ARK OF THE COVENANT to Jerusalem (1 Chr. 15:18, 21; Eliphelehu, NRSV).

ELIPHELEHU [e lif eh LEE hew]—a form of ELIPHELEH.

ELIPHELET [e LIF eh let] (my God is deliverance)—the name of six Old Testament men:

1. The last of David's thirteen sons born in Jerusalem (2 Sam. 5:16; 1 Chr. 14:7; Eliphalet, KJV).
2. A son of Ahasbai and one of David's mighty men (2 Sam. 23:34).
3. Another of David's sons born in Jerusalem (1 Chr. 3:6). Also spelled Elpelet (1 Chr. 14:5; Elpalet, KJV).
4. A son of Eshek and a Benjamite descendant of King Saul (1 Chr. 8:39).
5. A son or descendant of Adonikam who returned from the captivity with Ezra (Ezra 8:13).
6. A son of Hashum who divorced his pagan wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:33).

ELISHA [ee LIE shuh] (my God saves)—an early Hebrew prophet who succeeded the prophet Elijah when Elijah's time on earth was finished (1 Kin. 19:16). Elisha ministered for about fifty years in the northern kingdom of Israel, serving God during the reigns of Jehoram, Jehu, Jehoahaz, and Joash. The period of his ministry dates from about 850–800 B.C. Elisha's work consisted of presenting the Word of God through prophecy, advising kings, anointing kings, helping the needy, and performing several miracles.

Elisha was the son of Shaphat of Abel Meholah a town on the western side of the Jordan River. Elijah found Elisha plowing with a team of oxen. As Elijah walked past Elisha, he threw his mantle over the younger man's shoulders.

Elisha "arose and followed Elijah, and became his servant" (1 Kin. 19:21), but Elisha is not mentioned again until 2 Kings 2:1, shortly before Elijah ascended to heaven in a chariot of fire. Before taking his leave, Elijah fulfilled the final request of Elisha by providing him with a double portion of his prophetic spirit (2 Kin. 2:9–10), making him his spiritual firstborn. Upon receiving Elijah's mantle, Elisha demonstrated this gift by parting the waters of the Jordan River, allowing him to cross on dry land (2 Kin. 2:14). In this way, Elisha demonstrated that he had received God's blessings on his ministry as Elijah's successor.

Elisha cultivated a different image from his predecessor. Instead of following Elijah's example as a loner and an outsider, Elisha chose to work within the established system. He assumed his rightful place as the head of the "official" prophetic order in Israel, where his counsel and advice were sought out by kings. In contrast to Elijah's strained relationship with the king and his officials, Elisha enjoyed the harmonious role of trusted advisor. This is not to say that Elisha never had a word of criticism for the government, as for example in the part he played in the overthrow of Jezebel and the dynasty of Ahab (2 Kin. 9:1–3).

Elisha's appearance was much more typical and average than Elijah's. He was bald (2 Kin. 2:23), while Elijah had been an extremely hairy man (2 Kin. 1:8). Elisha did not wander as extensively as Elijah. Instead, he had a house in Samaria (2 Kin. 6:32). Much tension had existed between Elijah and his audience. Elisha's ministry provided a strong contrast as he was welcomed into virtually all levels of society.

In perhaps the most important part of his ministry, however, Elisha followed in Elijah's footsteps. This consisted of his performance of miracles, which answered a wide variety of needs in every level of society. He had a reputation for sympathizing with the poor and the oppressed. Elisha's activities and miracles as a prophet were often focused on those who were abused by officials in positions of power.

One of Elisha's "community service" miracles was his purification of an unhealthy spring near Jericho. After learning that the spring was bad, Elisha threw a bowl of salt into it, making it pure (2 Kin. 2:19–21). The Bible reports that "the water remains healed to this day" (2 Kin. 2:22).

In another miracle, Elisha helped the widow of one of the sons of the prophets. To help her pay off creditors who intended to take the widow's two sons, Elisha multiplied the amount of oil in one jar to fill all available containers. This brought in enough money to pay off the debts and provided a surplus on which the widow and her sons could live (2 Kin. 4:1–7).

Elisha became a friend of a wealthy family in Shunem. The Shunammite woman displayed hospitality toward the prophet by regularly feeding him and building a room onto her home where he could lodge. Elisha repaid the childless couple by promising them a son (2 Kin. 4:8–17). Later, when tragedy struck the child, Elisha raised him from the dead (2 Kin. 4:18–37). When Elisha learned that a famine would strike Israel, he warned the family to flee the land. When the family returned seven years later, the king restored their property because of their relationship with Elisha (2 Kin. 8:1–6).

Elisha also advised kings and performed miracles for them. He helped Jehoram, king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat, king of Judah. He also helped the king of Edom defeat Mesha, king of Moab (2 Kin. 3:1–19).

Elisha ministered to all people, regardless of their nationalities. He cured Naaman, the commander of the Syrian army (2 Kin. 5:1–14), of leprosy, but he also advised the king of Israel of the plans (2 Kin. 6:8–10) of their Assyrian enemies. Even the bones of the dead Elisha had miraculous powers. When a corpse was hidden in Elisha's tomb, it came back to life as it touched the prophet's bones (2 Kin. 13:21).

Photo by Howard Vos

- Excavated remains of a house at the city of Dothan, where Elisha prayed for blindness to strike the Syrian army (2 Kin. 6:8–23).

ELISHAH [eh LIE shah] (God is Savior)—the oldest son of Javan and a descendant of Noah (Gen. 10:1–4). The home of his descendants is described as “the coasts of Elishah,” which supplied the Phoenicians with dyes of royal “blue and purple” (Ezek. 27:7). The name may refer to the island of Cyprus, known in ancient times as Alashiya.

ELISHAMA [e LISH uh muh] (God hears)—the name of six Old Testament men:

1. Leader of the tribe of Ephraim at the beginning of the Israelites’ journey (Num. 2:18). This son of Ammihud was one of Joshua’s ancestors (1 Chr. 7:26–27).
2. One of the sons born to David after he was crowned king at Jerusalem (2 Sam. 5:16; 1 Chr. 3:8; 14:7).
3. The father of Nethaniah and the grandfather of Ishmael (Jer. 41:1).
4. A Judahite, a son of Jekamiah (1 Chr. 2:41).
5. One of two priests sent by Jehoshaphat to teach the Law to the people in Judah (2 Chr. 17:8).
6. A scribe or secretary of King Jehoiakim (Jer. 36:12, 20–21).

ELISHAPHAT [e LISH uh fat] (my God is judge)—a son of Zichri and one who supported the revolt against Queen Athaliah in favor of seven-year-old Joash (2 Chr. 23:1).

ELISHEBA [ee LISH ih buh] (my God is fullness)—the wife of AARON and the mother of Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar (Ex. 6:23). She was a daughter of Amminadab and a sister of Naashon.

ELISHUA [el ih SHOE uh] (God is salvation)—a son of David born at Jerusalem (2 Sam. 5:15; 1 Chr. 14:5; 1 Chr. 3:6, where another reading is Elishama).

ELIUD [e LIE ud] (God is majestic)—a son of Achim and the father of Eleazar in the genealogy of Jesus (Matt. 1:14–15).

ELIZABETH [ee LIZ uh buth] (God is my oath)—the mother of John the Baptist (Luke 1). Of the priestly line of Aaron, Elizabeth was the wife of the priest ZACHARIAS. Although both "were . . . righteous before God, they had no child, because Elizabeth was barren" (Luke 1:6–7). But God performed a miracle, and Elizabeth conceived the child who was to be the forerunner of the Messiah.

Elizabeth was privileged in another way. When her cousin Mary visited her, Elizabeth, six months pregnant, felt the child move as if to welcome the child whom Mary was carrying. Elizabeth recognized the significance of this action and acknowledged the Messiah before He had been born.

ELIZAPHAN [el ih ZAY fun] (my God has concealed)—the name of two Old Testament leaders:

1. A Levite of the family of Kohath, a chief during the wilderness journey and a son of Uzziel (Num. 3:30). He helped remove the bodies of Nadab and Abihu, who had led a revolt against Moses, from the Israelite camp (Lev. 10:4; Elzaphan, Ex. 6:22).
2. A leader of the tribe of Zebulun during the wilderness journey (Num. 34:25). He was the son of Parnach.

ELIZUR [eh LIE zur] (My God is a rock)—a chief of the tribe of Reuben who assisted Moses in taking a census of Israel during the wilderness journey (Num. 1:1–5; 2:10).

ELKANAH [el KAY na] (God has possessed)—the name of eight Old Testament men:

1. A grandson of Korah (Ex. 6:24).
2. The husband of Hannah and Peninnah and the father of the prophet Samuel (1 Sam. 1:1–23).
3. A Levite of the family of Kohath and a son of Joel (1 Chr. 6:25, 36).
4. A Levite of the family of Kohath and a son of Mahath (1 Chr. 6:26, 35).
5. A Levite who lived in a village of the Netophathites in Judah near Bethlehem (1 Chr. 9:16).
6. A Benjamite warrior who joined David at Ziklag (1 Chr. 12:6).
7. A doorkeeper of the ARK OF THE COVENANT during the time of King David (1 Chr. 15:23).
8. A high-ranking court official of Ahaz king of Judah (2 Chr. 28:7).

ELKOSHITE [EL koh shite]—a native or inhabitant of the village of Elkosh, the residence (and perhaps the birthplace) of the prophet Nahum (Nah. 1:1).

ELLASAR [el LAY sar]—a Mesopotamian country mentioned in the story of Abraham (Gen. 14:1, 9). Its king was Arioch.

ELM (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

ELMODAM [el MOE dam]—an ancestor of Jesus. He was a son of Er (Luke 3:28; Elmadam, NIV, NRSV).

ELNAAM [el NAY am] (God is pleasantness)—the father of Jeribai and Joshaviah, two of David’s mighty men (1 Chr. 11:46).

ELNATHAN [el NAY thun] (God has given)—the name of four men in the Old Testament:

1. The leader of the party sent to Egypt to bring back the prophet Uriah, who had displeased Jehoiakim by his prophecy (Jer. 26:22).
2. 2, 3, 4. Three men sent by Ezra to invite priests and Levites to come to Jerusalem when the Israelites were in captivity in Babylon (Ezra 8:16).

ELOHIM [EL oh hihm] (see GOD, NAMES OF).

ELOI [EL oh eye] (see ELI, ELI, LAMA SABACHTHANI).

ELON [EE lahn] (oak)—the name of three men and one town in the Old Testament:

1. A Hittite and the father of Basemath, who became one of Esau's wives (Gen. 26:34).
2. The second son of Zebulun and founder of a tribal family, the Elonites (Num. 26:26).
3. A border town in the tribe of Dan (Josh. 19:43).
4. A Zebulunite who judged Israel for ten years (Judg. 12:11–12).

ELON BETH HANAN [ee lahn beth HAY nan] (oak of the house of Hanan)—a village of Dan, perhaps the same place as ELON (1 Kin. 4:9).

ELONITES [EL uhn ites]—the descendants of ELON, the second son of Zebulun (Num. 26:26).

ELOTH [E luth]—a form of ELATH.

ELPAAL [el PAY al] (God is working)—a descendant of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:11–12, 18).

ELPALET [el PAY let]—a form of ELPELET.

ELPELET [el PEA let] (God is deliverance)—a son of David (1 Chr. 14:5; Elpalet, KJV). Also spelled Eliphelet (1 Chr. 3:6).

ELTEKEH [EL teh keh]—a town of the tribe of Dan assigned to the Levites of the family of Kohath (Josh. 19:44; 21:23). It was situated almost due west of Jerusalem.

ELTEKON [EL tuh con] (founded by God)—a village in the hill country of Judah between Bethlehem and Hebron (Josh. 15:59).

ELTOLAD [el TOE lad]—a town in southern Judah assigned to the tribe of Simeon (Josh. 15:30; Tolad, 1 Chr. 4:29).

ELUL [ee LOOL]—the sixth month of the Hebrew year, corresponding roughly to a lunar month during our August-September (Neh. 6:15). Also see CALENDAR.

ELUZAI [e LOO zuh i] (God is my strength)—a Benjamite warrior who left King Saul's forces to join David at Ziklag (1 Chr. 12:5).

ELYMAS [EL ih mas]—a false prophet who was temporarily struck blind for opposing Paul and Barnabas at Paphos on Cyprus (Acts 13:8). Described as "a Jew whose name was Bar-Jesus" (Acts 13:6), he apparently had some influence with Sergius Paulus, the Roman governor of the island. Elymas was jealous of the gospel that Paul preached and tried to turn the governor away from accepting the Christian faith.

ELZABAD [el ZAY bud] (God has given)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A Gadite warrior who joined David at Ziklag (1 Chr. 12:12).
2. A gatekeeper in the temple (1 Chr. 26:7).

ELZAPHAN [el ZAY fun] (see ELIZAPHAN).

EMBALMER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

EMBALMING—a method of preparing the dead for burial and preserving the body from decay.

The practice of treating a corpse to preserve it dates back more than 3,500 years. Mummification was invented by the Egyptians, who believed that the preservation of the body ensured the continuation of the person after death.

According to the Greek historian Herodotus, there were three different methods of embalming. The least expensive method involved emptying the intestines by flushing them with a cleaning liquid, after which the body was soaked in natron. The second method called for placing the body in natron after the stomach and intestines had been dissolved by an injection of cedar oil.

The most elaborate method of embalming required the removal of the brain and all internal organs except the heart. The inner cavity of the body was then washed and filled with spices. The corpse was soaked in natron, then washed and wrapped in bandages of linen soaked with gum. Finally, the embalmed body was placed in a wooden coffin.

The Bible mentions embalming only once, in reference to Joseph and his father Jacob (Gen. 50:2–3, 26). Even this single reference is surprising, since the ancient Israelites did not generally embalm their dead because of laws concerning the touching of dead bodies (Num. 5:1–4; 19:11–22). But both Joseph and Jacob died in Egypt. They were apparently embalmed so their bodies could be taken back to Israel for burial.

Preparation for burial of the dead among the Jews usually consisted of washing the body (Acts 9:37) and then anointing it with aromatic ointments. Burial was normally on the day of death or the following day. The body was wrapped in cloth strips, with a separate cloth tied around the head. Spices were applied when the body was wrapped (Mark 16:1). Expensive spices were used to prepare Jesus' body for burial (John 19:39–42).

◆

Photo by Howard Vos

• Mummy of an Egyptian Pharaoh, demonstrating the remarkable way in which embalming preserved human bodies.

◆

EMBROIDERER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES; NEEDLEWORK).

EMBROIDERY (see NEEDLEWORK).

EMEK KEZIZ [EH meck KEH zeez] (valley cut off)—a city of the tribe of Benjamin, apparently near Jericho and Beth Hoglah (Josh. 18:21; Valley of Keziz, KJV).

EMERALD (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

EMEROD (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

EMERY (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

EMIM [EE mim]—an ancient people of the land of Canaan. The Emim lived in TRANSJORDAN, in an area later occupied by the Moabites. Like the ANAKIM, the Emim were regarded as giants. Their conquerors, the Moabites, called them Emim (Deut. 2:10–11; Emites, NIV). Chedorlaomer defeated them on the Plain of Kiriathaim (Gen. 14:5).

EMITES [EE mites]—a form of EMIM.

EMMANUEL [em MAN you el]—a form of IMMANUEL.

EMMAUS [em MAY us] (warm wells)—a village in Judea where Jesus revealed Himself to two disciples after His resurrection (see Map 6, B–4). The disciples, Cleopas and an unidentified companion, encountered Jesus on the road to Emmaus, but they did not recognize Him. Jesus accompanied them to Emmaus, and they invited Him to stay there with them. As He blessed and broke bread at the evening meal, the disciples' "eyes were opened and they knew Him" (Luke 24:31). The modern location of ancient Emmaus is uncertain. Luke reported the village was 11 kilometers (7 miles) from Jerusalem, but he did not specify in which direction.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Modern Emmaus, named after the village toward which Cleopas and another disciple were traveling when Jesus appeared to them after His resurrection (Luke 24:13–35).

EMPEROR (see AUGUSTUS; CAESAR).

EMPEROR WORSHIP—a pagan custom of ancient times in which a ruler claimed for himself the qualities of a god and was so treated by those whom he ruled.

Many nations of the ancient world followed the custom of worshiping their rulers. The Egyptians, for example, claimed their Pharaohs had descended from the sun god. The Greek conquerer ALEXANDER the Great established a cult of such worship in Alexandria. The rulers of Syria and Egypt followed this tradition, calling themselves gods who ruled on earth.

The Book of Daniel records two actual instances of emperor worship. King Nebuchadnezzar had a statue made. Then he ordered everyone to bow down to it. Those who refused were thrown into a fiery furnace (Daniel 3). Later, the prophet Daniel was thrown to the lions for his refusal to pray to King Darius (Daniel 6).

When the Roman Empire conquered ancient nations, the worship of the Roman state naturally replaced other pagan forms of worship. The conquered peoples began to worship outstanding Roman leaders, such as Mark Antony and Julius Caesar.

Under Augustus Caesar as emperor of Rome, emperor worship grew in intensity. In the various Roman provinces, the subjects worshiped the Roman state and the emperor as a sign of their loyalty to Rome. Throughout the empire, Roman subjects incorporated emperor worship into their local religions. Leading citizens became priests in the emperor worship cult as evidence of their loyalty to the Roman Empire.

Although the New Testament never speaks directly of emperor worship, passages that refer to Jesus as the only Lord (Rom. 10:9) and God as the only Ruler (1 Tim. 6:15) condemn it by implication. Secular history records that the Roman emperor Caligula (A.D. 37–41) proclaimed himself as a god, built temples for himself, and required his subjects to worship him. In A.D. 40, some Jews destroyed a statue that had been erected to him. Caligula retaliated by threatening to place a statue in the Jewish temple, but the plan was never carried out because of Jewish opposition.

Open conflict between Christians and the Roman Empire over emperor worship came long after the close of the New Testament. Under Emperor Trajan, Christians who would not renounce their allegiance to Christ and pledge their worship of the emperor often were executed.

Emperor worship continued as the official religion of the Roman Empire until Christianity was recognized under the Emperor Constantine (A.D. 305–337).

EN [en] (fountain, spring)—a Hebrew word used to designate the location of specific springs of water.

EN DOR [EN dorr] (fountain of habitation)—a town of the tribe of Manasseh (Josh. 17:11; see Map 3, B–2) where King Saul consulted a medium or spiritist about his future (1 Sam. 28:7). In a seance, the woman apparently brought the spirit of the prophet Samuel up from the dead. En Dor is probably modern Indur about 10 kilometers (6 miles) southeast of Nazareth.

EN EGLAIM [en EGG la im] (spring of two calves)—a place on the southeastern coast of the Dead Sea near Zoar (Ezek. 47:10).

EN GANNIM [en GAN im] (spring of gardens)—the name of two biblical cities:

1. A city in the lowlands of Judah near Zanoah and Tappuah (Josh. 15:34).
2. A city on the border of Issachar assigned to the Levites (Josh. 19:21; 21:29; Anem, 1 Chr. 6:73).

EN GEDI [en GEH dee] (spring of a kid)—an oasis on the barren western shore of the Dead Sea about 54 kilometers (35 miles) southeast of Jerusalem (see Map 3, B–5). It lay on the eastern edge of the rugged Wilderness of Judah, which contained many hideouts where David sometimes hid when he was fleeing from King Saul (1 Sam. 23:29—24:1).

En Gedi was watered by a hot spring yielding an abundance of fresh water that burst forth hundreds of feet above the base of a large cliff. Its ancient name was Hazezon Tamar or Hazazon Tamar ("pruning of palms"), indicating the presence of date palms there. Vineyards also prospered at En Gedi (Song 1:14).

In Abraham's day, CHEDORLAOMER conquered the Amorites who occupied this spot (Gen. 14:7).

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• The spring at En Gedi, where David hid from King Saul (1 Sam. 24:1).

EN HADDAH [en HAD ah] (swift fountain)—a city on the border of Issachar, near En Gannim (Josh 19:21).

EN HAKKORE [en HACK kuh ree] (spring of the caller)—a spring at Lehi that miraculously came out of a hollow place when Samson prayed (Judg. 15:19).

EN HAZOR [en HAY zoar] (spring of an enclosure)—a fortified city in the territory of Naphtali (Josh. 19:37).

EN MISHPAT [en MISH paht] (spring of judgment)—an oasis where the Israelites camped during their years of wandering in the wilderness (Gen. 14:7). It is probably the same place as KADESH BARNEA.

EN RIMMON [en RIM mun] (spring of the pomegranate)—a city of Judah south of Jerusalem. It was one of the settlements of the tribe of Judah on their return from the Babylonian captivity (Neh. 11:29). The city is usually identified with Khirbet Umm er-Ramamin, which was about 14 kilometers (9 miles) northeast of Beersheba.

EN ROGEL [en RO gull] (launderer's well)—a well on the border of Judah and Benjamin, east of Jerusalem, near the "Valley of the Son of Hinnom" (Josh. 15:7–8). Only the spring GIHON provided more water to Jerusalem. Jonathan and Ahimaaz stayed there in secret, ready to carry any message from Hushai to David about the revolt of Absalom (2 Sam. 17:17). En Rogel is identified today as Bir Ayyub ("Job's Well"), located near the juncture of the Kidron Valley and the Valley of Hinnom.

EN SHEMESH [en SHE mish] (spring of the sun)—a spring that served as a landmark on the border between Judah and Benjamin (Joshua 18:17). It is usually identified with 'Ain el-Hod, situated east of Bethany on the Jerusalem-to-Jericho road.

EN TAPPUAH [en top PEW ah] (apple spring)—a place apparently on the border between Manasseh and Ephraim (Josh. 17:7). It may be the same as Tappuah, a city of Ephraim (Josh. 16:8).

ENAIM [ih NAY em]—a form of ENAM.

ENAM [E nahm] (two fountains)—a village in the lowland of Judah near Jarmuth (Josh. 15:34), probably the same place as Enaim (Gen. 38:14, 21, NIV; NRSV).

ENAN [E non]—the father of Ahira, leader of the tribe of Naphtali in the days of Moses. Ahira assisted in taking the first census of Israel during their years in the wilderness (Num. 1:15).

ENCAMPMENT (see CAMP).

ENCHANTMENT—the practice of magic or sorcery. In the Bible, enchantment is used as a general word that can refer to several different types of supernatural experiences, including fortune-telling, calling up demons, and controlling evil spirits. Most ancient civilizations believed in such magical approaches to religion, but the Mosaic Law referred to such practices as "abominations," forbidding them to the Hebrews (Deut. 18:10–12). The Law also provided that practitioners of such "black magic" should be stoned (Lev. 20:27).

ENEMY—one who opposes or mistreats another. Before Israel could serve as the channel of God's grace to the world, its existence as a nation had to be securely established. The enemies of the Hebrew people were thus regarded as God's enemies, and the reverse was also true (Ps. 139:20–22). In the New Testament, by contrast, the enemies to be overcome are primarily spiritual in nature.

While the Old Testament refers to charity toward one's enemy (Ex. 23:4–5; Prov. 24:17), the New Testament goes further by commanding love for one's enemy (Matt. 5:44; Rom. 12:20). The New Testament looks toward a day when all enemies of good and righteousness will be overcome because of the redemptive work of Christ (1 Cor. 15:25).

ENGINE (see ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

ENGLISH VERSIONS (see BIBLE VERSIONS AND TRANSLATIONS).

ENGRAVER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

ENMITY—deep-seated animosity or hatred. The apostle Paul declared that the human mind in its natural state is in "enmity against God" (Rom. 8:7). This enmity can be changed only through the redemptive power of Christ.

ENOCH [EE nuck] (initiated or dedicated)—the name of two men and one city in the Bible:

1. The firstborn son of Cain (Gen. 4:17–18).
2. A city built by Cain in the land of Nod and named after his son (Gen. 4:17).
3. A son of Jared and the father of Methuselah (Gen. 5:18–24; Henoch; 1 Chr. 1:3, KJV). After living for 365 years, Enoch was "translated," or taken directly into God's presence without experiencing death (Gen. 5:24; Heb. 11:5–6).

ENOCH, BOOK OF (see PSEUDEPIGRAPHA).

ENOS [E nos]—a form of ENOSH.

ENOSH [EE nosh] (man, humankind)—a grandson of Adam, a son of Seth, and the father of Cainan (Gen. 5:6–11). He lived 905 years. Enosh is listed in Luke's genealogy of Jesus (Luke 3:38; Enos, KJV).

ENQUIRE OF THE LORD (see INQUIRE OF THE LORD).

ENROLLMENT—KJV word for the registration of the entire Roman world ordered by the Emperor Augustus (Luke 2:1–5). Augustus (Octavian) initiated a system of reforms, including a regular census of the populations of the various Roman provinces so they could be effectively taxed. Joseph probably owned some property in Bethlehem; so he returned there with Mary to be registered. God used this Roman edict to bring Jesus' parents to Bethlehem so the prophecy of Micah 5:2 might be fulfilled.

ENSIGN [EN sun] (see STANDARD).

ENVOY (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

ENVY—a feeling of resentment and jealousy toward others because of their possessions or good qualities. James linked envy with self-seeking (James 3:14, 16; selfish ambition, NIV, NRSV). Christians are warned to guard against the sin of envy (Rom. 13:13; 1 Pet. 2:1).

EPAENETUS [eh PEE nee tus] (praiseworthy)—a Christian, formerly from Asia, who later lived in Rome (Rom. 16:5; Epenetus, NIV). He was the first convert to Christ in the province of Asia.

EPAPHRAS [EP uh frus] (charming)—a Christian preacher who spread the gospel to his fellow Colossian citizens (Col. 1:7; 4:12). When Paul was a prisoner in Rome, Epaphras came to him with a favorable account of the church at Colossae. He remained with Paul in Rome and was, in a sense, his "fellow prisoner" (Philem. 23).

EPAPHRODITUS [ih paf ruh DIE tus] (charming)—a messenger sent by the church at Philippi with a gift for the apostle Paul, who was under house arrest in Rome (Phil. 2:25; 4:18). While in Rome Epaphroditus became ill and word of his sickness spread to Philippi. As soon as Epaphroditus was well enough, Paul sent him back home to relieve the church's anxiety and to deliver Paul's letter to the Philippians.

EPENETUS—a form of EPAENETUS.

EPHAH [E fa]—the name of two men, one woman, one tribe and a unit of measurement in the Bible:

1. A son of Midian and a grandson of Abraham and Keturah, Abraham's concubine (Gen. 25:4).
2. A concubine of Caleb (1 Chr. 2:46).
3. A son of Jahdi (1 Chr. 2:47).
4. An Arabian tribe, a branch of Midianites living in northwest Arabia (Is. 60:6). This tribe was probably descended from Ephah No. 1.
5. A unit of measurement. See WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

EPHAI [EE fie]—a resident of Netophah in Judah whose sons were among those who joined Gedaliah at Mizpah (Jer. 40:8–13). Ephai and his sons were promised protection and were subsequently murdered by Ishmael (Jer. 41:3).

EPHER [EE fur]—the name of three men in the Old Testament:

1. The second son of Midian and a grandson of Abraham and Keturah, Abraham's concubine (Gen. 25:4).
2. A descendant of Judah through Ezrah (1 Chr. 4:17).
3. A head of a family in the half-tribe of Manasseh east of the Jordan River (1 Chr. 5:24).

EPHES DAMMIM [EE fez DAM im] (end of blood)—a place in Judah between Socoh and Azekah where the Philistines camped at the time when David killed GOLIATH (1 Sam. 17:1; Pas Dammim, 1 Chr. 11:13).

EPHESIANS [ee FEE zyuns]—natives or inhabitants of EPHESUS (Acts 19:35). Trophimus, one of Paul's co-workers, was an Ephesian (Acts 21:29).

EPHESIANS, EPISTLE TO THE—one of four shorter epistles written by the apostle Paul while he was in prison, the others being Philippians, Colossians, and Philemon. Ephesians shares many similarities in style and content with Colossians; it may have been written about the same time and delivered by the same person.

In the Epistle to the Ephesians, Paul is transported to the limits of language in order to describe the enthroned Christ who is Lord of the church, the world, and the entire created order. As the ascended Lord, Christ is completing what He began in His earthly ministry, by means of His now "extended body," the church. Christ's goal is to fill all things with Himself and bring all things to Himself.

Structure of the Epistle. Ephesians divides naturally into two halves: a lofty theological section (chaps. 1–3) and a section of ethical appeal and application (chaps. 4–6).

Paul begins by greeting his readers and assuring them that they have been blessed with God's gracious favor—redemption in Christ—from before the foundation of the world (1:1–14). Paul then prays that God may grant them an even greater measure of spiritual wisdom and revelation (1:15–23). Chapter two begins with perhaps the clearest statement of salvation by grace through faith in all the Bible (2:1–10). Although the Ephesians were once alienated from God, now they are reconciled both to God and to one another by Christ, who is "our peace" (2:11–22). Paul was made an apostle to proclaim the "mystery of Christ"—the inexhaustible riches of the gospel to the Gentiles (3:1–13). Paul brings the first half of the epistle to a close with a prayer that the Ephesians may understand the depth of Christ's love (3:14–19). A benediction concludes the doctrinal section (3:20–21).

An appeal to adapt one's life to one's faith (4:1) marks the transition to the second half of the epistle. The Christian fellowship should pattern itself after the unity of the Godhead (4:1–16), and Christians should pattern themselves after the example of Christ (4:17—5:21). As new people in Christ they should walk in love, light, and wisdom. Paul cites Christ's relationship with the church as a model for wives and husbands (5:22–33), children and parents (6:1–4), and servants and masters (6:5–9). The epistle ends with an appeal to put on the whole armor of God and to stand against the forces of evil (6:10–20), followed by final greetings (6:21–24).

Authorship and Date. Ephesians bears the name of Paul (1:1; 3:1), and it sets forth many of the great Pauline themes, such as JUSTIFICATION by faith (2:1–10) and the body of Christ (4:15–16). Nevertheless, Ephesians has a number of notable differences from the undisputed letters of Paul. We know, for instance, that Paul spent three years in Ephesus (Acts 19:1–40), and it is clear that the Ephesians cherished his ministry among them (Acts 20:17–38). Strangely, however, Paul writes to the Ephesians as though they knew of his ministry only by hearsay (3:2). Moreover, with the exception of Tychicus (6:21), Paul mentions no one by name in Ephesians. Because of the impersonal nature of the epistle, plus the fact that it contains a number of words and phrases not characteristic of Paul, some scholars suspect that Ephesians was written by someone other than the apostle Paul.

Although this is possible, it is not likely. If Ephesians was not written by Paul, then it was written by someone who understood Paul's thinking as well as the apostle himself. Moreover, it is unlikely that a person capable of writing Ephesians could have remained unknown to the church. Many scholars have resolved the problems of authorship by suggesting that while Ephesians was indeed written by Paul, it was intended as a circular letter, or "open letter," to a number of communities surrounding Ephesus.

In the oldest manuscripts of the epistle, the phrase "in Ephesus" (1:1) is absent. Perhaps this phrase was omitted to leave space in copies of the letter for the insertion of different place names. Paul is known to have used circular letters on occasion (Col. 4:16), and the circular theory would account for the general tone of the letter.

If Paul was the author of Ephesians, then he probably wrote it about the same time as the Epistle to the Colossians. Both Ephesians and Colossians agree to a large extent in style and content. Both letters were delivered by Tychicus (Eph. 6:21; Col. 4:7). Furthermore, Paul was in prison at the time, presumably in Rome. This would suggest a date in the late 50s or early 60s.

Historical Setting. The general nature of Ephesians makes it difficult to determine the specific circumstances that gave rise to the epistle. It is clear, however, that the recipients were Gentiles (3:1) who were estranged from citizenship in the kingdom of Israel (2:11). Now, thanks to the gracious gift of God, they enjoy the spiritual blessings that come from Christ.

Theological Contribution. The theme of Ephesians is the relationship between the heavenly Lord Jesus Christ and His earthly body, the church. Christ now reigns “far above all principality and power and might and dominion” (1:21) and has “put all things under His feet” (1:22). Exalted though He is, He has not drifted off into the heavens and forgotten His people. Rather, so fully does He identify with the church that He considers it His body, which He fills with His presence (1:23; 3:19; 4:10).

The marriage relationship between husband and wife is a beautiful analogy for expressing Christ’s love, sacrifice, and lordship over the church (5:22–32). The enthroned Christ has reinvested Himself in the hearts of believers through faith (3:17) so they can marvel at His love. Absolutely nothing exists beyond His redeeming reach (1:10; 3:18; 4:9).

Christ’s bond with His church is also portrayed in the oneness of believers. Those who were once “far off” and separated from God “have been made near by the blood of Christ” (2:13). In fact, believers are now raised with Christ and seated with Him in the heavenly places (2:5–6). Since believers are with Him, they are accordingly to be like Him—“endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace” (4:3). “He [Christ] Himself is our peace” (2:14), says Paul, and He removes the walls and barriers that formerly divided Jews and Gentiles and draws them together in one Spirit to the Father (2:14–22).

Having spoken of these marvelous spiritual blessings, Paul then appeals to believers “to have a walk worthy of the calling with which you were called” (4:1). This appeal is a helpful insight on Christian ethics. Rather than setting down laws and regulations, Paul says, in effect, “Let your life be a credit to the One who called you.” The Christian is set free by Christ; yet he is responsible to Christ. Paul makes several statements about how believers can honor Christ (4:17—5:9), but the goal is not to earn merit through morality. Instead of looking for nice people, Paul envisions new persons, the “perfect person,” remade according to the stature of Christ Himself (4:13). This maturity could refer to the desired, and still unattained, unity of the church.

Special Considerations. The term “heavenly places” (1:3; 1:20; 2:6; 3:10; 6:12) is not the same as heaven, for in one instance Paul speaks of “spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places” (6:12). “Heavenly places” implies the unseen, spiritual world beyond our physical senses. It is the region where the most difficult, and yet authentic, Christian discipleship is lived out—the world of decisions, attitudes, temptations, and commitments. It is the battleground of good and evil (6:12).

Christ has raised believers to the heavenly places with the assurance that the One in whom we hope is more powerful, real, and eternal than all of the forces of chaos and destruction that threaten our world.

◆

Ephesians: A Study and Teaching Outline

Part One: The Position of the Christian (1:1—3:21)

I. Praise for Redemption 1:1–14
- A. Salutation from Paul 1:1–2
- B. Chosen by the Father 1:3–6
- C. Redeemed by the Son 1:7–12
- D. Sealed by the Spirit 1:13–14

II. Prayer for Revelation 1:15–23

III. Position of the Christian 2:1—3:13
- A. The Christian’s Position Individually 2:1–10
  - 1. Old Condition: Dead to God 2:1–3
  - 2. New Condition: Alive to God 2:4–10
- B. The Christian’s Position Corporately 2:11—3:13
  - 1. Reconciliation of Jews and Gentiles 2:11–22
  - 2. Revelation of the Mystery of the Church 3:1–13

IV. Prayer for Realization 3:14–21

Part Two: The Practice of the Christian (4:1—6:24)

I. Unity in the Church 4:1–16
- A. Exhortation to Unity 4:1–3
- B. Explanation of Unity 4:4–6
- C. Means for Unity: The Gifts 4:7–11
- D. Purpose of the Gifts 4:12–16

II. Holiness in Life 4:17—5:21
- A. Put Off the Old Nature 4:17–22

  - B. Put On the New Nature 4:23–29
  - C. Grieve Not the Holy Spirit 4:30—5:12
  - D. Walk as Children of Light 5:13–17
  - E. Be Filled with the Spirit 5:18–21

III. Responsibilities in the Home and at Work 5:22—6:9
  - A. Wives: Submit to Your Husbands 5:22–24
  - B. Husbands: Love Your Wives 5:25–33
  - C. Children: Obey Your Parents 6:1–4
  - D. Servants: Submit to Your Masters 6:5–9

IV. Conduct in the Conflict 6:10–24
  - A. Put On the Armor of God 6:10–17
  - B. Pray for Boldness 6:18–20
  - C. Conclusion 6:21–24

◆

EPHESUS [EFF uh sus]—a large and important city on the west coast of Asia Minor where the apostle Paul founded a church (see Map 7, C–2). A number of factors contributed to the prominence that Ephesus enjoyed.

The first factor was economics. Situated at the mouth of the river Cayster, Ephesus was the most favorable seaport in the province of Asia and the most important trade center west of Tarsus. Today, because of silting from the river, the ruins of the city lie in a swamp 8 to 11 kilometers (5 to 7 miles) inland.

Another factor was size. Although Pergamum was the capital of the province of Asia in Roman times, Ephesus was the largest city in the province, having a population of perhaps 300,000 people.

A third factor was culture. Ephesus contained a theater that seated an estimated 25,000 people. A main thoroughfare, some 35 meters (105 feet) wide, ran from the theater to the harbor, at each end of which stood an impressive gate. The thoroughfare was flanked on each side by rows of columns 15 meters (50 feet) deep. Behind these columns were baths, gymnasiums, and impressive buildings.

The fourth, and perhaps most significant, reason for the prominence of Ephesus was religion. The temple of Artemis (or Diana, according to her Roman name) at Ephesus ranked as one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World. As the twin sister of Apollo and the daughter of Zeus, Artemis was known variously as the moon goddess, the goddess of hunting, and the patroness of young girls. The temple at Ephesus housed the image of Artemis that was reputed to have come directly from Zeus (Acts 19:35).

The temple of Artemis in Paul's day was supported by 127 columns, each of them 60 meters (197 feet) high. The Ephesians took great pride in this grand edifice. During the Roman period, they promoted the worship of Artemis by minting coins with the inscription, "Diana of Ephesus."

The history of Christianity at Ephesus began about A.D. 50, perhaps as a result of the efforts of Priscilla and Aquila (Acts 18:18). Paul came to Ephesus in about A.D. 52, establishing a resident ministry for the better part of three years (Acts 20:31). During his Ephesian ministry, Paul wrote 1 Corinthians (1 Cor. 16:8).

The Book of Acts reports that "all who dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 19:10), while Paul taught during the hot midday hours in the lecture hall of Tyrannus (Acts 19:9). Influence from his ministry undoubtedly resulted in the founding of churches in the Lycus River valley at Laodicea, Hierapolis, and Colossae.

So influential, in fact, was Paul's ministry at Ephesus that the silversmiths' league, which fashioned souvenirs of the temple, feared that the preaching of the gospel would undermine the great temple of Artemis (Acts 19:27). As a result, one of the silversmiths, a man named Demetrius, stirred up a riot against Paul.

During his stay in Ephesus, Paul encountered both great opportunities and great dangers. He baptized believers who apparently came to know the gospel through disciples of John the Baptist (Acts 19:1–5), and he countered the strong influence of magic in Ephesus (Acts 19:11–20).

After Paul departed from Ephesus, Timothy remained to combat false teaching (1 Tim. 1:3; 2 Tim. 4:3; Acts 20:29). Many traditions testify that the apostle John lived in Ephesus toward the end of the first century. In his vision from the island of Patmos off the coast of Asia Minor, John described the church of Ephesus as flourishing, although it was troubled with false teachers and had lost its first love (Rev. 2:1–7). In the sixth century A.D. the Roman emperor Justinian (A.D. 527–565) raised a magnificent church to John's memory in this city.

Ephesus continued to play a prominent role in the history of the early church. A long line of bishops in the Eastern church lived there. In A.D. 431 the Council of Ephesus officially condemned the Nestorian heresy, which taught that there were two separate persons, one divine and one human, in the person of Jesus Christ.

◆

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• A column-lined marble street in ancient Ephesus.

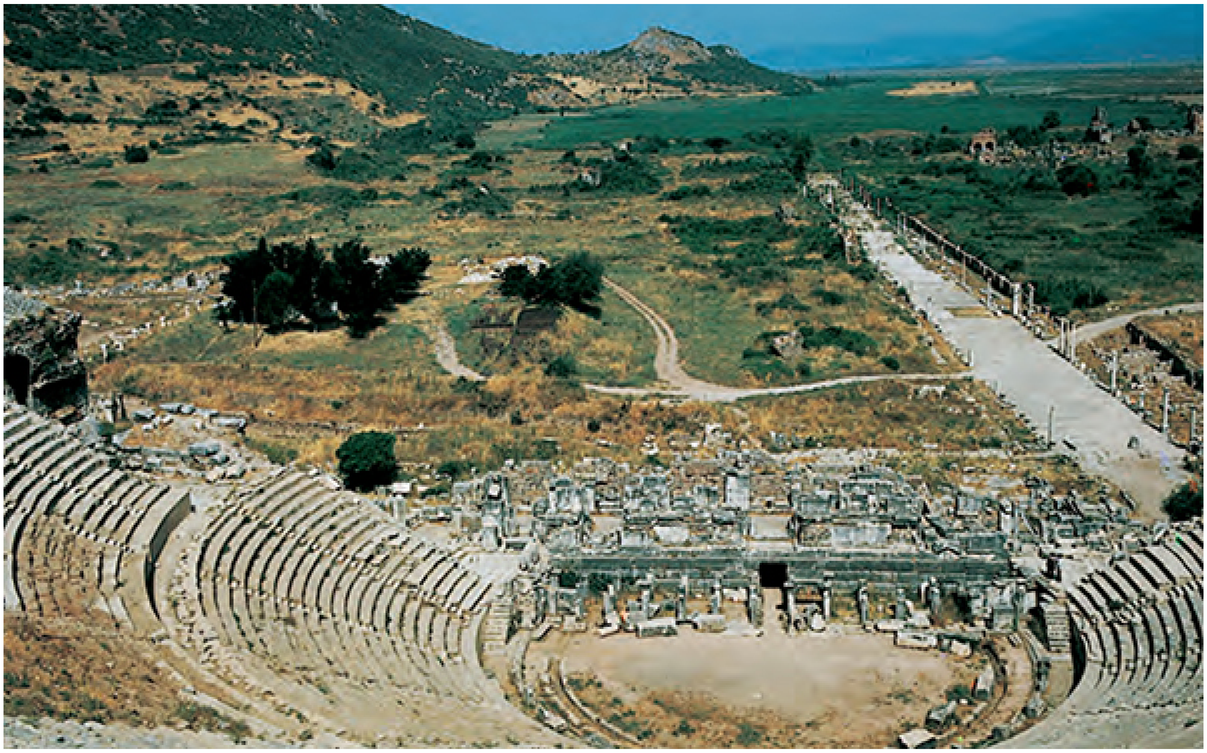

Photo by Ben Chapman

• The great theater of the city of Ephesus, showing the marble boulevard leading to the nearby harbor, now silted in because of erosion.

EPHLAL [EFF lal]—a descendant of Perez, of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 2:37).

EPHOD [EE fahd]—the father of Hanniel. Hanniel was a leader of the tribe of Manasseh and one of Moses' assistants in dividing the land of Canaan (Num. 34:23).

EPHOD OF HIGH PRIEST [EE fod]—a vest worn by the HIGH PRIEST when he presided at the altar (Ex. 28:4–14; 39:2–7). Worn over a blue robe (Ex. 28:31–35), the ephod was made of fine linen interwoven with some threads of pure gold and other threads that were blue, purple, and scarlet in color. The ephod consisted of two pieces joined at the shoulders and bound together at the bottom by a woven band of the same material as the ephod.

Upon the shoulders of the ephod, in settings of gold, were two onyx stones, upon which were engraved the names of the twelve tribes of Israel. The front of the vest, or the breastplate, was fastened to the shoulder straps by two golden chains (Ex. 28:14) and by a blue cord (Ex. 28:28).

In later years, ephods were worn by associate priests as well as the high priest (1 Sam. 22:18). Even the boy Samuel, dedicated to serve in the Shiloh Sanctuary, wore an ephod (1 Sam. 2:18). David, although not a priest, wore an ephod when he brought the ark to Jerusalem (2 Sam. 6:14; 1 Chr. 15:27).

EPHPHATHA [EF fa thuh]—an Aramaic word spoken by Jesus when he healed a deaf-mute (Mark 7:34). The word means “Be opened!”

EPHRAIM [EE freh em] (doubly fruitful)—the second son of Joseph by Asenath.

When Ephraim was born to Joseph in Egypt, he gave him his name meaning “fruitful” because “God has caused me to be fruitful in the land of my affliction” (Gen. 41:52). Even though Joseph was a foreigner (a Hebrew) in Egypt, he had been blessed by God as he rose to a high position in the Egyptian government and fathered two sons. Later this same theme of fruitfulness and blessing was echoed by Joseph’s father, Jacob, as he accepted Ephraim as his grandson (Gen. 48:5). Eventually Ephraim’s thousands of descendants settled in the land of Canaan as one of the most numerous of the tribes of Israel (Gen. 48:19; Num. 1:10).

EPHRAIM, CITY OF—a city near the wilderness (see Map 6, B–4) northeast of Jerusalem, to which Jesus and His disciples retreated when threatened by the chief priests and Pharisees after He raised Lazarus from the dead (John 11:54). It has been identified with OPHRAH in the territory of Benjamin (Josh. 18:23; 1 Sam. 13:17).

EPHRAIM, FOREST OF—a thick forest in the hill country west of the Jordan River. Joshua gave this territory to the dissatisfied tribe of Ephraim (Josh. 17:14–18). Absalom’s soldiers were defeated in this forest by David’s army (2 Sam. 18:6–17).

EPHRAIM, GATE OF (see GATES OF JERUSALEM AND THE TEMPLE).

EPHRAIM, MOUNTAINS OF—a range of mountains west of the Jordan River, extending as far south as Ramah and Bethel (1 Sam. 1:1; 2 Chr. 13:4), named for the tribe of Ephraim, which settled the region (Josh. 19:50).

EPHRAIM, TRIBE OF—descendants of EPHRAIM, who settled the land of Canaan as one of the twelve tribes of Israel. Their territory was bounded on the north by Manasseh (west of the River Jordan) and on the south by Dan and Benjamin (Josh. 16:5–10).

From the early days, the tribe of Ephraim was an influential force in Israel, being highly commended by Gideon (Judg. 8:2), and including such key religious and political centers as Bethel and Shechem. At the time of the first census in their new land, the tribe contained 40,500 men eligible for military service (Num. 1:33).

Following the revolt of the ten tribes after Solomon’s rule, Ephraim became a leader in the northern kingdom of Israel (1 Kin. 12:25–33). Often the name Ephraim was used for Israel because of its size and its leadership role. The Hebrew prophets, especially Hosea, chastised Ephraim for idolatry (Hos. 4:17), spiritual unfaithfulness (8:9–10), and relationships with heathen nations (12:1). Ephraim was involved in an alliance with Syria against Judah and King Ahaz (2 Chr. 28:5–8; Is. 7:3–9).

In 722 B.C., the northern kingdom of Israel was taken into captivity in Assyria. This seemed to be the end of the tribe of Ephraim, but the Lord would not forget them. Through the prophet Jeremiah, He declared that these people were still His “dear son” and He would have mercy on them (Jer. 31:20). Years later, after God’s people returned to their homeland following a long period of captivity in Babylon, “children of Ephraim” settled in Jerusalem (1 Chr. 9:3).

EPHRAIMITES [EE fruh im ites]—descendants of EPHRAIM, a son of Joseph, and inhabitants of the territory of Ephraim (Josh. 16:10; Judg. 12:4–6).

EPHRAIN [EE fruh in]—a city near Bethel that Abijah, king of Judah, took from Jeroboam, king of Israel (2 Chr. 13:19; Ephron, NIV; NRSV).

EPHRATH [EF rath]—a form of EPHRATHAH.

EPHRATHAH [EF ray thah] (fertility)—the name of a woman and a city in the Old Testament:

1. A wife of Caleb, the son of Hezron (1 Chr. 2:19; Ephrath, NIV; 4:4). She was the mother of Hur and the grandmother of the Caleb who spied out the land of Canaan.
2. The ancient name of Bethlehem of Judah (Gen. 48:7; Ephrath, NIV). The prophet Micah refers to the town as Bethlehem Ephrathah (Mic. 5:2). His prophecy that the Messiah would be born here was fulfilled in Jesus Christ (Matt. 2:6; Ephratah, KJV).

EPHRATHITE [EF ruh thite]—two Old Testament titles:

1. A native or inhabitant of Ephrathah, or Bethlehem (Ruth 1:2; 1 Sam. 17:12).
2. An Ephraimite, one who belonged to the tribe of Ephraim (1 Sam. 1:1, KJV; 1 Kin. 11:26, KJV).

EPHRON [EE fron]—the name of a man and a place in the Old Testament:

1. A Hittite from whom Abraham purchased a field containing the cave of MACHPELAH. It became the burial place of the patriarchs Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (and also of their wives, Sarah, Rebekah, and Leah; Gen. 23:8–17; 25:9; 49:29–30; 50:13).
2. A ridge of mountains between Nephtoah and Kirjath Jearim on the boundary between Benjamin and Judah (Josh. 15:9). See also EPHRAIN.

EPICUREANS [epp uh cue REE anz]—Greek philosophers who belonged to a school founded by Epicurus about 306 B.C. The Epicureans were concerned with the practical results of philosophy in everyday life. Their chief aim in life was pleasure. They believed they could find happiness by seeking that which brought physical and mental pleasure, and by avoiding that which brought pain.

Only one reference to the Epicureans occurs in Scripture—in the New Testament account of the apostle Paul's encounter with "certain Epicurean and Stoic philosophers" at Athens (Acts 17:16–34). In contrast to these philosophers, Paul believed that true happiness was found in following the will of Jesus Christ.

EPILEPSY (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

EPIPHANES [e PIFF uh knees] (a god revealed)—a shorter name for Antiochus IV, the king of Syria (reigned 175–163 B.C.). He defiled the Jewish temple in Jerusalem by sacrificing swine on the altar and by setting himself up as a god to be worshiped. Also see ANTIOCHUS.

EPISTLE—a letter of correspondence between two or more parties; the form in which several books of the New Testament were originally written. Epistle is generally synonymous with letter, although epistle sometimes is regarded as more formal correspondence, and letter as more personal.

There is no real precedent for the New Testament epistles in the Old Testament or Jewish literature. Rather, its 21 epistles (Romans through Jude) follow the general custom and form of letters, which became an important form of communication in the Greek-speaking world about 300 years before the birth of Jesus.

Greek letters may be roughly divided into six classes: (1) private letters, averaging slightly less than a hundred words in length, and written on PAPYRUS (an early form of paper); (2) correspondence between government officials; (3) letters intended for publication, such as the correspondence of the church fathers in the fourth century A.D.; (4) letters written to communicate ideas; (5) letters attributed to famous personalities; and (6) imaginary letters, somewhat like our modern historical novels, which were designed to entertain.

Ancient letters were written with a reed pen on either papyrus or PARCHMENT (scraped animal skins). A sheet of papyrus normally was about 10 to 12 inches in size, and accommodated about 200 words. For sending, it was folded or rolled, tied, and often sealed to ensure privacy.

The Roman government provided postal service only for official documents. Private letters had to be sent by special messengers or friendly travelers. Letters normally were sent to designated parties, although some were "open" or circular letters. Paul's letters, with the possible exception of Ephesians, were addressed to specific congregations; but the non-Pauline letters, usually called "general" epistles, included some letters that were circulated to several churches.

Most ancient letters were dictated to a secretary, or scribe. In Romans 16:22, Paul's secretary identifies himself as Tertius. When receiving dictation, a scribe could use a form of shorthand, in either Greek or Latin, which would later be converted to script and submitted to the author for approval. In addition to dictation, on occasion an author might provide a secretary with a summary of ideas and allow him to draft the epistle. This practice may have been followed in the case of 1 Peter.

Ancient letters normally followed a pattern that included: (1) an introduction, listing the names of sender and recipient, followed by a formal greeting inquiring about the recipient's health and a thanksgiving formula; (2) a body, or purpose for writing; and (3) a conclusion, consisting of appropriate remarks and a farewell. The farewell was normally written in the hand of the sender to show the recipient it was an authentic letter.

The apostle Paul's epistles follow this pattern, with only a few exceptions. Paul replaced the bland greeting of inquiry about health with a salutation combining Christian grace and Hebrew peace. His thanksgiving was likewise more than a formality; it was a sincere expression of gratitude for the well-being of his congregations. He also omitted the farewell in favor of personal greetings or a benediction.

Paul's epistles were letters written to communicate ideas. But they were more than abstract essays. With the exception of Romans, Paul's letters were written as follow-ups to his missionary activity. Their purpose was to further the spiritual growth of the churches he founded. The body of the Pauline epistles consisted of two parts: a theological or doctrinal section, and an ethical or practical section. These two sections flowed together in the same way that justification leads to sanctification in the life of the believer.

Paul’s epistles illustrate his personality. Perhaps the most prominent impression Paul leaves with his readers is his pastoral concern. His life was intimately involved in the struggles of his churches. His sense of divine calling (Rom. 1:1–6; Gal. 1:12) shines through in every epistle. This leads Paul to assume a posture of authority when addressing his congregations. His authority, however, is not rooted in a superiority complex but in his Christlike devotion to his converts and churches.

The Pauline epistles are arranged in the New Testament according to length, from the longest (Romans) to the shortest (Philemon), and not by their importance or by the dates when they were written.

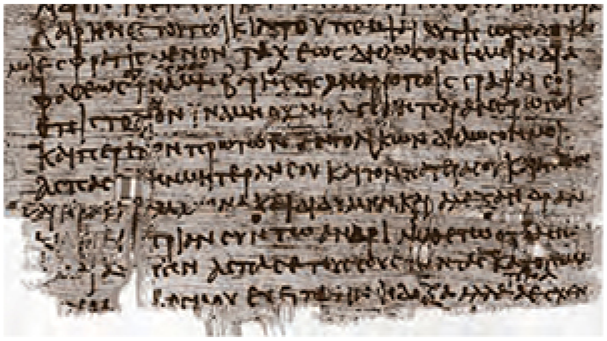

Photo: Pacific School of Religion

• An epistle, or letter, in the Greek language from the third century A.D., written to a person named Aphrodite.

Photo: Pacific School of Religion

• Reverse side of the letter to Aphrodite, showing how two pieces of papyrus were pressed together in crisscross fashion to produce a piece of writing material.

ER [ur]—the name of three men in the Bible:

1. A son of Judah (Gen. 38:3, 6–7).
2. A son of Shelah, the youngest son of Judah (1 Chr. 4:21).
3. An ancestor of Jesus who lived between the time of David and Zerubbabel (Luke 3:28).

ERAN [EE run]—a descendant of Ephraim through Shuthelah, Ephraim's oldest son and the founder of a tribal family, the Eranites (Num. 26:36).

ERASTUS [ih RAS tus] (beloved)—the name of one or more Christians in the early church:

1. A Christian sent with Timothy from Ephesus into Macedonia while the apostle Paul stayed in Asia (Acts 19:22).
2. The "treasurer of the city" (Rom. 16:23) in Corinth who sent greetings to Rome. If an inscription found in the pavement of the amphitheater at ancient Corinth and bearing the name "Erastus" refers to this man, Erastus is the earliest Christian name attested outside of the Bible.

3. One who remained at Corinth (2 Tim. 4:20).

Any two of the above—or perhaps all three—may be identical.

ERECH [EH wreck]—One of the most important centers in Nimrod's kingdom (Gen. 10:10). The city was situated between Ur and Babylon on the Euphrates River. The Babylonians and Assyrians called it Uruk, the Arabs called it Warka, and the Greeks and Romans called it Orchoe.

ERI [EE rye] (watchful)—the fifth son of Gad (Gen. 46:16) and leader of the Erites (Num. 26:16).

ERROR—deviation from the truth or an accepted code of behavior (Job 4:18; Eccl. 5:6; 10:5; Dan. 6:4). In the New Testament the Greek word translated as "error" means "a wandering from the way," "a straying from the path" (Rom. 1:27; 1 John 4:6). In the NKJV the same Greek word is also translated as "deception" (Matt. 27:64) or "deceit" (1 Thess. 2:3). James 5:19, 20 indicates that it is possible to wander from the truth. Since the Bible sees truth as moral in nature, error is more than incorrect thinking. It is a wrong way of life.

ESARHADDON [eh sar HAD un]—the favorite, though not the oldest, son of Sennacherib, who succeeded his father as king of Assyria. Sennacherib's favoritism toward Esarhaddon so enraged two other brothers, Adrammelech and Sharaezer, that they assassinated their father about 681 B.C., then escaped into Armenia (2 Kin. 19:36–37; 2 Chr. 32:21; Is. 37:37–38). At the time of the assassination, Esarhaddon was conducting a military campaign, probably in Armenia. He returned to Nineveh, the Assyrian capital, ended the civil strife, and assumed the Assyrian throne.

Esarhaddon was a wise ruler, both militarily and politically. He restored the city of Babylon, which his father had destroyed in an earlier campaign against Babylonia; and he successfully waged war against numerous groups that had been persistent in creating problems for the Assyrian Empire. Among his most notable military achievements was his conquest of Egypt, Assyria's competitor for world domination. In 677 B.C. Esarhaddon captured Memphis and then conquered the rest of Egypt. He then used native rulers and Assyrian advisers to rule the distant country.

Egypt rebelled in 669 B.C. On his way to Egypt to put down the rebellion, Esarhaddon became ill and died. As his father before him had done, Esarhaddon had provided for an orderly succession in the affairs of Assyria. His younger son, Ashurbanipal, ascended to the Assyrian throne.

Esarhaddon participated in the resettling of Samaria with foreigners long after this capital city of the northern kingdom of Israel fell to Assyrian forces in 722 B.C. (Ezra 4:2). This was an example of the Assyrian policy of intermingling cultures in the nations that they conquered to make them weak and compliant.

• A monument honoring King Esarhaddon of Assyria, showing subjects kneeling before him and symbols of his pagan gods in the upper corner.

ESAU [EE saw]—a son of Isaac and Rebekah and the twin brother of Jacob. Also known as Edom, Esau was the ancestor of the Edomites (Gen. 25:24–28; Deut. 2:4–8).

Most of the biblical narratives about Esau draw a great contrast between him and his brother, Jacob. Esau was a hunter and outdoorsman who was favored by his father, while Jacob was not an outdoors type and was favored by Rebekah (Gen. 25:27–28).

Even though he was a twin, Esau was considered the oldest son because he was born first. By Old Testament custom, he would have inherited most of his father's property and the right to succeed him as family patriarch. But in a foolish, impulsive moment, he sold his BIRTHRIGHT to Jacob in exchange for a meal (Gen. 25:29–34). This determined that Jacob would carry on the family name in a direct line of descent from Abraham and Isaac, his grandfather and father.

The loss of Esau's rights as firstborn is further revealed in Genesis 27. Jacob deceived his blind father by disguising himself as Esau in order to receive his father's highest blessing. Esau was therefore the recipient of a less blessing (Gen. 27:25–29, 38–40; Heb. 11:20). He was so enraged by Jacob's actions that he determined to kill him once his father died. But Jacob fled to his uncle Laban in Haran and remained there for twenty years. Upon Jacob's return to Canaan, Esau forgave him and set aside their old feuds (Gen. 32:1—33:17). Years later, the two brothers together buried their father in the cave at Machpelah without a trace of their old hostilities (Gen. 35:29).

Esau in many ways was more honest and dependable than his scheming brother Jacob. But he sinned greatly by treating his birthright so casually and selling it for a meal (Heb. 12:16–17). To the ancient Hebrews, one's birthright actually represented a high spiritual value. But Esau did not have the faith and farsightedness to accept his privileges and responsibilities. Thus, the right passed to his younger brother.

ESAU'S WIVES—the six wives of Esau, oldest son of Jacob: (1) Judith, (2) Basemath, daughter of Elon (Gen. 26:34), (3) Adah, (4) Aholibamah (Gen. 36:2), (5) Basemath, daughter of Ishmael (Gen. 36:3), and (6) Mahalath (Gen. 28:9). Because of the large clan that came from these wives, Esau moved south and east of the Dead Sea to the area of Mount Seir (Gen. 36:6–9). His descendants through these wives became known as the Edomites.

ESCHATOLOGY [es cuh TOL ih jih]—the study of what will happen when all things are consummated at the end of history, particularly centering on the event known as the SECOND COMING of Christ. The word comes from two Greek words, eschatos (last) and logos (study)—thus its definition as “the study of last things.”

The Curse. Genesis 3 shows God’s response to human sin. Because of its sin and unrighteousness, He cursed the world that He had made. At the other end of the Bible, Revelation 22:3 announces that there will no longer be a curse. All that happens between Genesis 3 and Revelation 22 is related to God’s efforts to reverse His curse and redeem His creation. This illustrates that eschatology is related to salvation. Eschatology reveals the end of history and how God reverses His curse upon the world by separating the good from the bad.

The curse of God plunged the world into a long conflict. This conflict-strewn path leading up to God’s final act in history can be traced from the Garden of Eden to Revelation. Just as God alone had cursed the creation, so only God can revoke the curse. He has chosen to revoke one aspect of the curse and its resulting conflict through an event known as the Day of the Lord.

Because human beings were not obedient to God, the need for the Day of the Lord arose. It was a day when all the world would be brought back under His rule (Amos 5:18–20; Joel 2:31). The final preparation for that rule was the elevation of Jesus to God’s right hand (Ps. 110:1; Acts 2:34–35). We are now under the spiritual rule of Christ, awaiting His earthly rule and the defeat of all His enemies when He returns to reign.

Seed Conflict. The process that would eventually end with all of God’s enemies in defeat begins in the first chapters of the Bible. Victory over evil was promised only through the conflict between the offspring of the woman and the offspring of the serpent (Gen. 3:15). This conflict forms the guidelines for eschatological events throughout the Bible, especially for the end times themselves.

This curse set the pattern for all future conflicts between humankind and God (1 John 3:10–11; Gal. 4:28–29; Phil. 2:5–8). The conflict also typifies the conflict between flesh and spirit (Gal. 5:16–17; 2 Cor. 11:3, 14; Rom. 16:20). The battles of the end times are the climax of a long battle between the forces of good and evil that has been going on since the beginning.

The Flood. The universal Flood of Noah's time was an expression of God's hatred and judgment of sin. He plunged His creation back to its original state of darkness and chaos with the waters covering the earth (Gen. 7:17–24). Then He began again with a new head of the human race—His servant Noah. Although this particular act of God's wrath will not be repeated, the reminders of His judgment are still present in the rainbow and the creatures' fear of humans (Gen. 9:1–17).

The Flood became a sign of the future wrath of God, which would take place by fire (2 Pet. 3:5–9). The first heaven and earth will eventually fall away and be replaced with the new heaven and earth. This falling away will be a violent burning of the universe (2 Pet. 3:10–13). Jesus Himself thus defined the end-time judgment of His return in terms of the Flood and Noah's generation (Matt. 24:36–44).

God's Covenant with Abraham. The end of history is focused on the fulfillment of God's promise to Abraham. The Abrahamic covenant is specific in its explanation of how biblical conflict will end in the Day of the Lord. God promised to give Abraham a land and a lineage (Gen. 12:1–3). These two items, the result of God's blessing of Abraham, are the specific blessings promised the Hebrew people. What began as a small national boundary for a small group of people (Israel) became international in scope, including all races (Acts 3:25–26). Eschatology reveals that Abraham's land, ultimately, is the new heaven and earth and that Abraham's lineage is the redeemed community in Christ.

Abraham was also promised by God that those who blessed him would be blessed and those who cursed him would be cursed (Gen. 12:3). In eschatology this interplay between blessing and curse depends on how people respond to God's work through His people Israel, and ultimately through His work in Christ. Hell is the ultimate curse, heaven the ultimate blessing.

Abraham's Offspring. The idea of blessing and cursing by God is further seen through various events in the life of Abraham and his offspring, Israel. Diseases sent by God on Egypt in Abraham's time (Gen. 12:17) foreshadowed the plagues under Moses (Exodus 7–12) and the end-time plagues of the book of Revelation (Revelation 8–9). The enemies from Mesopotamia who captured Lot and were destroyed by Abraham (Gen. 14:1–17) foreshadowed God's destruction of Assyria and Babylon at the end of Israel's period of captivity (Is. 13–14; Dan. 5:13–31) and the end-time destruction of the pagan people represented by Babylon (Revelation 17–19).

Other foreshadowings of the wrath of the Day of the Lord are the downfall of Jericho with its seven trumpets, which announced the presence of God above the ark (Josh. 6:13), and the seven-trumpet judgments of the Book of Revelation (Rev. 8:2—9:21; 11:15–19). These various destructions of Israel's enemies looked toward the final destruction of all of God's enemies in the Day of the Lord. Jesus' casting out of demons (Mark 5:29; Luke 8:31) also foreshadowed God's judgment on fallen angels (Jude 6; 2 Pet. 2:4; Rev. 20:10), who will be cast out in the Day of the Lord.

Final Judgments. In the end times, a basic order of judgment will prevail as the conflict between God and Satan comes to an end. There will be a time of great TRIBULATION (Matt. 24:4–26), followed by the SECOND COMING (Matt. 24:27–30) and the judgment of the nations (Matt. 25:31–46; 1 Cor. 15:20–24).

The Day of the Lord will reverse the curse upon the world by bringing judgment to all of God's enemies. The world will be judged by fire (Is. 66:16), and all nations will be included in this judgment (Amos 1:3—2:3; Ezek. 25:1–17). When the Lord spoke of the judgment of the people living at His arrival (Matt. 25:31–46), He pictured humanity as sheep or goats who inherit either everlasting punishment or ETERNAL LIFE. This concept of separation is expressed also through the figures of reaping harvest (Matt. 13:38–43; Rev. 14:14–20) and sorting out the good and the bad catch from a fishing net (Matt. 13:47–50).

Another judgment is portrayed in Revelation 20:11–15, commonly called the "Great White Throne" Judgment. This judgment is called the second death (Rev. 20:14). Those who are judged will be thrown into the lake of fire if their names are not written in the Book of Life.

The judgments of God at the end of history are preceded by resurrections of the just (Luke 14:13–14; Rev. 20:6) and the unjust (John 5:29; Rev. 20:5). Two specific resurrections are mentioned in the Bible (Dan. 12:2–3). They will be separated by an interval of 1,000 years (Rev. 20:4–6).

The Redeemer. Because God elected that some people would be saved in the day of His judgment, a saving event became necessary. This event is broadly defined as the offspring of the woman (Gen. 3:15), which began the long process of conflict through which God introduced the Savior into the world.

Eschatology shows how God's Redeemer will establish His kingdom upon a rebellious earth. The long process through which God selected a righteous group to serve Him on earth came to a climax in the person of Christ. He is indeed "God with us" (Matt. 1:23). This phrase from Isaiah 7:14 spoke of God's presence in Jesus in order to save (Is. 9:6–7) and to judge (Is. 7:17; 8:6–8).

Christ's first coming was to save (Mark 10:45); His second will be primarily to judge. But His return will also spell relief to His faithful REMNANT. Eschatology shows that God's presence for the redeemed will be fully realized at Jesus' return, when He will dwell among all the redeemed in the new heavens and earth (Rev. 21:3).

The Cross. Above all, the cross is the decisive eschatological event. In it the curse that brought God's wrath was reversed. Ever since, God has been progressively accomplishing His judgment against the forces of wickedness.

Psalm 110:1 is a key verse for understanding the redemptive side of eschatology. The King will reign until He defeats His enemies. As He returns to begin the final preparations for His reign, He will gather the ELECT to Himself. The redeemed will be evaluated by the Lord (Rom. 14:10; 1 Cor. 3:14–15) and will receive their reward of eternal life. The curse will be reversed, the Abrahamic covenant fulfilled, all earthly distinctions eliminated, and God's people will live in eternal fellowship with the Father and His Christ.

A major emphasis of eschatology throughout the Bible is to provide encouragement to believers in their witness for Jesus Christ (Matt. 24:14; 1 Cor. 15:58). It is not mentioned to encourage idle speculation or controversy. The reason God grants us a view of the future is to encourage us to witness for Christ and serve Him in the present.

ESDRAELON [ez dra EE lon] [God sows]—the great plain loosely identified as the Plain of Jezreel, about 89 kilometers (55 miles) north of Jerusalem (see Map 6, B–2). The word Esdraelon is the Greek form of the Hebrew word Jezreel. Esdraelon is a triangular plain approximately 24 by 24 by 32 kilometers (15 by 15 by 20 miles) in size, bounded along the southwest by the Carmel Mountain range and on the north by the hills of Nazareth.

The Plain of Esdraelon contains rich farmland because of the soil washed down into it from the mountains of Galilee and the highlands of Samaria. It is also the only east-west valley that divides the north-south mountain ranges and provides easy access to them.

Esdraelon has been the scene of numerous battles. There Deborah and Barak were victorious over Sisera (Judg. 4–5). Here, too, the Philistines were victorious over King Saul (1 Sam. 31:1–3). In this valley the Egyptians mortally wounded Josiah, king of Judah, when he attempted to intercept the army of Pharaoh Necho (2 Kin. 23:29).

But the greatest battle of this valley is yet to happen. The great battle of ARMAGEDDON will be fought here (Rev. 16:16). In this battle, the Lord of Glory, Jesus Christ, will triumph over the forces of Satan, and “the kingdoms of this world [will] become the kingdoms of the Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign forever and ever!” (Rev. 11:15).

Photo by Howard Vos

• View of the fertile Esdraelon Valley from the mound of the ancient city of Megiddo.

ESDRAS, BOOKS OF [EZ drus] (see APOCRYPHA).

ESEK [EE seek] (quarrel)—a well dug by Isaac's servants in the Valley of Gerar (Gen. 26:20). When the herdsmen of GERAR quarreled over the well, Isaac abandoned it and his servants dug another.

ESH-BAAL [esh BAY al] (man of Baal or Baal exists)—the original name of the son and successor of King Saul as king of Israel (1 Chr. 8:33; 9:39). He was also called Ishbosheth ("man of shame") because Baal was a shameful deity (2 Sam. 2:8–15; Jer. 11:13).

ESHBAN [ESH bun]—a son of Dishon (Gen. 36:26).

ESHCOL [ESH cuhl] (cluster of grapes)—the name of a man and a valley in the Old Testament:

1. A brother of Mamre and Aner. All three brothers helped Abram defeat CHEDORLAOMER (Gen. 14:13, 24).
2. A valley north of Hebron, famous for its grapes (Num. 13:23–24). The Israelite spies cut a huge cluster of grapes from this valley and carried it to Moses to show the fertility of the land.

ESHEAN [ESH eh an] (support)—the name of a group of towns in Hebron during Joshua's time (Josh. 15:52).

ESHEK [EE sheck]—a Benjamite; descendant of King Saul through Jonathan (1 Chr. 8:39).

ESHKALONITE [ESH ka lon ite]—a form of ASHKELONITE.

ESHTAOL [ESH tuh ole]—a town of the Danites situated in the Shephelah (lowland country) of Judah (Josh. 15:33). Near Eshtaol Samson began to be stirred by the "Spirit of the LORD" (Judg. 13:24–25), and he was buried here after his death (Judg. 16:31). Eshtaol was the home of some of the Danites who attacked Laish (Judg. 18:1–11).

ESHTAOLITES [ESH tuh ole ites]—natives or inhabitants of ESHTAOL, a city of Judah (1 Chr. 2:53; Eshtaulites, KJV).

ESHTAULITES [esh tuh YOU lites]—a form of ESHTAOLITES.

ESHTEMOA [esh teh MOH uh] (listening post)—the name of two men and one town in the Old Testament:

1. A town about 15 kilometers (9 miles) south of Hebron in the hill country of Judah. Assigned to the priests, Eshtemoa was a city of refuge (1 Chr. 6:57; Eshtemoh, Josh. 15:50). David sent it some of the booty captured at Ziklag (Josh. 15:50; 1 Sam. 30:28).
2. A descendant of Caleb, of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 4:17).
3. A Maachathite of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 4:19).

ESHTEMOH [ESH teh moh]—a form of ESHTEMOA.

ESHTON [ESH ton]—a descendant of Judah through Caleb (1 Chr. 4:11–12).

ESLI [ES lie]—an ancestor of Jesus (Luke 3:25).

ESPOUSAL (see BETROTHAL).

ESROM [ES rum] (see HEZRON).

ESSENES [ESS seenz]—a religious community that existed in Palestine from the second century B.C. until the Jewish war with Rome (A.D. 66–73). The Essenes were noted for their strict discipline and their isolation from others who did not observe their way of life.

Although the Bible never mentions the Essenes, they are described by several ancient historians. The Essenes are an important part of the background to the New Testament, showing the beliefs and practices of one Jewish religious group at the time of John the Baptist and Jesus. People have been especially interested in the Essenes since the discovery of the DEAD SEA SCROLLS at QUMRAN. The people who lived at Qumran probably were a group of Essenes.

Individual Essenes did not own any private property. Instead, they shared all their possessions with others in their community. They avoided any show of luxury and ate very simple meals. They wore simple clothes.

The Essenes were also known for their careful observance of the laws of Moses as they understood them. They were stricter about keeping the Sabbath than any other Jews, even the PHARISEES. They were concerned about being ritually clean themselves and about eating food that was ritually pure.

Essenes lived in the towns of Palestine in the days of Jesus. They were famous for their hospitality. An Essene traveling from one place to another knew he would be looked after by other Essenes, although he had never met them. The Essenes were also known for taking care of the sick and elderly. They were interested in medicines; in fact, some people think that the name Essenes means “healers.”

The Essenes would arise before sunrise for prayer. Then they would work until about midday, when they would bathe—to make sure they were ritually clean—before eating. Afterwards they would work again until the evening meal.

Anyone who wanted to become an Essene was required to hand over all he owned to the community. He would then be given the typical Essene white robe. Only after he had shown that he was trustworthy for a full year would he be allowed to use the community’s water for purification. And he had to prove that he was reliable for two more years before he could become a full member. Then, after promising to keep the Essene rules, he became a member and was allowed to take part in the community meals. But if he should break the Essene rule, he would be expelled from the community.

The Essenes believed that the souls of people were immortal and would be rewarded or punished after death. They had a special interest in angels, and some were known for making accurate predictions about the future. They avoided taking part in the services of the temple in Jerusalem. Instead, they worshiped God in their own communities.

Some of the Essenes’ beliefs and practices are similar to those in parts of the New Testament. The ritual washings of the Essenes bring to mind the baptism preached and practiced by John the Baptist. But John baptized people only once, while the Essenes’ washings took place every day. And Jesus told his followers not to use oaths, just as the Essenes avoided oaths.

The Essenes’ practice of COMMUNITY OF GOODS is also similar to what happened in the early church in Jerusalem (Acts 2:44–45). But again there is a difference. Christians sold their property of their own free will, while this was a requirement in the Essene community. Like the Essenes, the early Christians were soon known for their generous hospitality. A major difference was that the early Christians did not practice all the rules about the Sabbath and ritual purity that were so important to the Essenes. Above all, Christians believed that Jesus was the Messiah and Lord; the Essenes as a group rejected Jesus and continued to wait for God's salvation.

Photo by John Trevor

- A section of the "Manual of Discipline," a scroll that contained strict regulations for the life of the Essene community at Qumran.

ESTHER [ESS ter] (star)—the Jewish queen of the Persian king AHASUERUS (Xerxes). Esther saved her people, the Jews, from a plot to eliminate them. A daughter of Abihail (Esth. 2:15; 9:29) and a cousin of Mordecai (Esth. 2:7, 15), Esther was raised by Mordecai as his own daughter after her mother and father died. Esther was a member of a family carried into captivity in Babylon that later chose to stay in Persia rather than return to Jerusalem. Her Jewish name was Hadassah, which means "myrtle" (Esth. 2:7).

The story of Esther's rise from an unknown Jewish girl to become the queen of a mighty empire illustrates how God used events and people as instruments to fulfill His promise to His Chosen People. Following several days of revelry, the drunken king Ahasuerus—identified with Xerxes I (reigned 486–465 B.C.)—asked his queen, Vashti, to display herself to his guests. When Vashti courageously refused, she was banished from the palace. Ahasuerus then had "all the beautiful young virgins" (Esth. 2:3) of his kingdom brought to his palace to choose Vashti's replacement.

Scripture records that "the young woman [Esther] was lovely and beautiful" (Esth. 2:7). The king loved Esther more than all the other women. He appointed her queen to replace Vashti (Esth. 2:17).

At the time, HAMAN was Ahasuerus' most trusted advisor. An egotistical and ambitious man, Haman demanded that people bow to him as he passed—something that Mordecai, a devout Jew, could not do in good conscience. In rage, Haman sought revenge not only on Mordecai but also on the entire Jewish population of the empire. He persuaded the king to issue an edict permitting him to kill all the Jews and seize their property.

With great tact and skill, Esther exposed Haman's plot and true character to the king. As a result, Ahasuerus granted the Jews the right to defend themselves and to destroy their enemies. With ironic justice, "they hanged Haman on the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai (Esth. 7:10).

Even today Jews celebrate their deliverance from Ahasuerus' edict at the Feast of PURIM (Esth. 9:26–32), celebrated on the fourteenth and fifteenth days of the month of Adar.

Also see ESTHER, BOOK OF.

Photo by Howard Vos

- The royal titles of King Xerxes (the biblical Ahasuerus of Esther 1:1) found at his palace at Persepolis, Persia.

ESTHER, ADDITIONS TO (see APOCRYPHA).

ESTHER, BOOK OF—a historical book of the Old Testament that shows how God preserved His Chosen People. The book is named for its main personality, Queen Esther of Persia, whose courage and quick thinking saved the Jewish people from disaster.

Structure of the Book. The Book of Esther reports on actual events, but it is written like a short story. The main characters in this powerful drama are King Xerxes of Persia; his wife Queen Esther, a Jewish woman; his second in command, Haman, recently promoted by the king; and Mordecai, a leader among the Jewish people who are scattered throughout the Persian Empire. In an attempt to stamp out the Jews, Haman manipulates the king into issuing an order calling for their execution. But Esther uses her royal favor to intervene and expose Haman's plot. Ironically, in a dramatic twist of plot, Haman is hanged on the gallows he built for Mordecai's execution, and Mordecai is promoted to prime minister. The Jewish people are granted revenge against their enemies. They also celebrate by instituting the Feast of PURIM to mark their miraculous deliverance.

Authorship and Date. For centuries scholars have debated the question of who wrote the Book of Esther. The Jewish historian Josephus claimed it was written by Mordecai. But many modern scholars dispute this because Mordecai is mentioned in the past tense in the final chapter of the book. Until new evidence emerges, the author must remain unknown.

The question of date can be answered with greater certainty. The reign of the Persian king Xerxes (Esth. 1:1, NIV) lasted for about twenty years, beginning about 485 B.C. So Esther must have been written some time shortly after 465 B.C., since an obituary formula is used of Xerxes in Esther 10:2.

Historical Setting. The Book of Esther is valuable historically because it gives us a view of the Jewish people who were scattered throughout the ancient world about 475 B.C. The events in the book occurred about 100 years after the leading citizens of the Jewish nation were carried into exile by Babylon in 587 B.C. Shortly after the Persians overthrew the Babylonians, they allowed the Jewish exiles to return to their native land. Many did return to Jerusalem, but thousands of Jewish citizens chose to remain in Persia, probably because this had become home to them during their long separation from their native land. Thus, this book shows clearly that God protects His Chosen People, even when they are scattered among the nations of the world.

Theological Contribution. The Book of Esther is a major chapter in the struggle of the people of God to survive in the midst of a hostile world. Beginning with the Book of Genesis, God had made it clear that he would bless His Covenant People and bring a curse upon those who tried to do them harm (Gen. 12:1, 3). The Book of Esther shows how God has kept this promise at every stage of history. Just as Haman met his death by execution, we can trust God to protect us from the enemy, Satan, and to work out His ultimate purpose of redemption in our lives.

Special Considerations. One unusual fact about this book is that it never mentions the name of God. For this reason some people believe Esther has no place in the Bible. They see it as nothing but a fiercely patriotic Jewish book that celebrates the victory of the Jews over their enemies.

This harsh criticism is unfair to Esther. A careful reading will reveal that the book does have a spiritual base. Queen Esther calls the people to fasting (4:16), and God's protection of His people speaks of His providence (4:14). The book also teaches a valuable lesson about the sovereignty of God: although the enemies of the Covenant People may triumph for a season, He holds the key to ultimate victory.

Also see ESTHER.

Esther: A Study and Teaching Outline

Part One: The Threat to the Jews (1:1—4:17)

- I. The Selection of Esther as Queen 1:1—2:20
  - A. The Divorce of Vashti 1:1–22
    - 1. The Feasts of Ahasuerus 1:1–8
    - 2. Refusal of Queen Vashti 1:9–12
    - 3. Removal of Vashti 1:13–22
  - B. The Marriage to Esther 2:1–20
    - 1. Decree to Search for Vashti's Replacement 2:1–4
    - 2. Preparation of Esther 2:5–14

- 3. Selection of Queen Esther 2:15–20

II. The Formulation of the Plot by Haman 2:21—4:17
- A. Mordecai Reveals the Plot to Murder the King 2:21–23
- B. Haman Plots to Murder the Jews 3:1—4:17
  - 1. Haman Is Promoted 3:1
  - 2. The Reason for Haman’s Plot 3:2–6
  - 3. Ahasuerus’ Decree to Destroy the Jews 3:7—4:17

Part Two: The Triumph of the Jews (5:1—10:3)

I. The Triumph of Mordecai over Haman 5:1—8:3
- A. Setting for the Triumph 5:1—6:3
  - 1. Esther’s First Feast 5:1–8
  - 2. Haman Plots to Kill Mordecai 5:9–14
  - 3. King Ahasuerus’ Plan to Honor Mordecai 6:1–3
- B. Mordecai Is Honored 6:4–14
  - 1. Haman’s Plan to Honor Himself 6:4–9
  - 2. Haman Is Forced to Honor Mordecai 6:10–14
- C. Haman Dies on Gallows Prepared for Mordecai 7:1–10
  - 1. Esther’s Second Feast 7:1–4
  - 2. Haman Is Indicted 7:5–8
  - 3. Haman Is Hanged 7:9–10
- D. Mordecai Is Given Haman’s House 8:1–3

II. The Triumph of Israel Over Her Enemies 8:4—10:3
- A. Preparation for the Victory of Israel 8:4–17
  - 1. Esther’s Petition to King Ahasuerus 8:4–6
  - 2. King Ahasuerus’ Counter-Decree 8:7–14
  - 3. Many Gentiles Are Converted 8:15–17
- B. Israel’s Victory over Her Enemies 9:1–16
  - 1. Victories on the First Day 9:1–11
  - 2. Victories on the Second Day 9:12–16
- C. Israel’s Celebration 9:17—10:3
  - 1. The Feast of Purim 9:17–32
  - 2. The Fame of Mordecai 10:1–3

◆

ETAM [E tum]—the name of three or four places in the Old Testament:

1. A cave (Judg. 15:8, 11) in western Judah where Samson stayed after defeating the Philistines.

2. A place listed in Judah's genealogy (1 Chr. 4:3). It may be the same place as No. 4.
3. A town of the tribe of Simeon (1 Chr. 4:32). It is likely modern 'Aitun, about 18 kilometers (11 miles) southwest of Hebron.
4. A town near Bethlehem whose defenses were built up by King Rehoboam, Solomon's son (2 Chr. 11:5). According to the Jewish historian Josephus, Solomon often rode out to Etam in his chariot to enjoy its streams and gardens.

ETERNAL LIFE—a person's new and redeemed existence in Jesus Christ that is granted by God as a gift to all believers. Eternal life refers to the quality or character of our new existence in Christ as well as the unending character of that life. The phrase, "everlasting life," is found in the Old Testament only once (Dan. 12:2). But the idea of eternal life is implied by the prophets in their pictures of the glorious future promised to God's people.

The majority of references to eternal life in the New Testament are oriented to the future. The emphasis, however, is upon the blessed character of the life that will be enjoyed endlessly in the future. Jesus made it clear that eternal life comes only to those who make a total commitment to Him (Matt. 19:16–21; Luke 18:18–22). Paul's letters refer to eternal life relatively seldom, and again primarily with a future rather than a present orientation (Rom. 5:21; 6:22; Gal. 6:8).

The phrase, "eternal life," appears most often in the Gospel of John and the Epistle of 1 John. John emphasizes eternal life as the present reality and possession of the Christian (John 3:36; 5:24; 1 John 5:13). John declares that the believer has already begun to experience the blessings of the future even before their fullest expression: "And this is eternal life, that they may know You, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom You have sent" (John 17:3).

ETERNITY—infinite or unlimited time; time without beginning or end. The Bible speaks of the eternity of God (Ps. 90:2; Is. 57:15; Rev. 1:4). As Creator, He brought the world into being, even before the beginning of time itself (Gen. 1:1).

ETHAM [EE thum]—a place "at the edge of the wilderness" (Ex. 13:20) between Succoth and the Wilderness of Sinai. It was the location of the second encampment of the Israelites after they left Rameses in Egypt (Num. 3:5–8). Apparently, Etham was near the end of the western branch of the Red Sea, near Suez.

ETHAN [EE thun] (long-lived)—the name of three or four Old Testament men:

1. A renowned wise man in the time of Solomon called "Ethan the Ezrahite" (1 Kin. 4:31).
2. A son of Zerah, Judah's son by Tamar, and the father of Azariah (1 Chr. 2:6, 8). He may be the same person as No. 1.
3. A descendant of Gershon and an ancestor of Asaph (1 Chr. 6:42; perhaps Joah, 1 Chr. 6:21).
4. A descendant of Merari, son of Levi (1 Chr. 15:17, 19).

ETHANIM [ETH uh nim]—the seventh month of the Hebrew year, corresponding to our mid-September to mid-October (1 Kin. 8:2).

Also see CALENDAR.

ETHBAAL [eth BAY al] (with him is Baal)—a king of Sidon and the father of Jezebel, the idolatrous wife of King Ahab of Israel (1 Kin. 16:31). During his reign, a year-long drought occurred (1 Kings 17–18).

ETHER [EE thur]—the name of two villages in the Old Testament:

1. A village of the tribe of Judah (Josh. 15:42).
2. A village of the tribe of Simeon (Josh. 19:7).

ETHICS, BIBLICAL (see BIBLICAL ETHICS).

ETHIOPIA [ee thih OH pih ah] (burnt face)—the Greek name for the ancient nation south of Egypt, comprising the upper Nile region of Africa (Acts 8:26–40). Its Hebrew name was CUSH. Modern Ethiopia (Abyssinia), in the horn of East Africa, is hundreds of miles away from ancient Ethiopia. Also see CUSH.

ETHIOPIAN EUNUCH [YOU nuck]—a person baptized by Philip who held a responsible position as the royal treasurer in the court of Candace, queen of Ethiopia (Acts 8:26–40). The word eunuch refers to an emasculated servant who could rise to positions of power and influence in ancient times. The Ethiopian eunuch had apparently been a convert to Judaism. A keen student of the Bible, he was probably a PROSELYTE who had come to Jerusalem to participate in worship at the temple. On his return to his own country, he encountered Philip. On Philip's explanation of Isaiah 53, he confessed his faith in Christ and was baptized.

ETHIOPIAN VERSIONS (see BIBLE VERSIONS AND TRANSLATIONS).

ETH KAZIN [eth KAY zen]—a town on the eastern border of Zebulun, probably near Gath Hepher (Josh. 19:13; Ittah-kazin, KJV).

ETHNAN [ETH nan]—a descendant of Ashhur, of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 4:7).

ETHNI [ETH nigh]—an ancestor of Asaph, of the Gershonite branch of the Levites. David assigned him to the music ministry of the Lord's house (1 Chr. 6:41).

EUBULUS [you BYOU lus] (well advised)—a Christian of Rome who remained loyal to the apostle Paul during Paul's second imprisonment in that city (2 Tim. 4:21).

EUCHARIST [YOU kuh wrist] (see LORD'S SUPPER).

EUNICE [YOU niss] (good victory)—the daughter of Lois and mother of Timothy. Although Eunice is a Greek name and her husband was a Gentile, Eunice was a Jew, as was Lois her mother. Although Timothy had not been circumcised as a child, he had been brought up in "genuine faith" by Eunice and Lois (2 Tim. 1:5).

EUNUCH [YOO nuck]—a male servant of a royal household in Bible times. Such servants were often emasculated by castration as a precautionary measure, especially if they served among the women in a ruler's harem (2 Kin. 9:32; Esth. 2:15). The New Testament reported the conversion of a eunuch from Ethiopia under the ministry of PHILIP the evangelist (Acts 8:26–38).

EUODIA [you OH dih uh] (good journey)—a Christian woman at Philippi (Phil. 4:2; Euodias, KJV). Euodia and Syntyche, both of whom may have been deaconesses at Philippi, had an argument. The apostle Paul charged them to “be of the same mind in the Lord.”

EUODIAS [you OH dih us]—a form of EUODIA.

EUPHRATES [you FRAY tease]—the longest river of Western Asia and one of two major rivers in Mesopotamia (see Map 1, D–2). The river begins in the mountains of Armenia in modern-day Turkey. It then heads west toward the Mediterranean Sea, turns to the south, swings in a wide bow through Syria, and then flows some 1,000 miles southeast to join the Tigris River before it empties into the Persian Gulf.

The Euphrates is about 2,890 kilometers (1,780 miles) long and is navigable for smaller vessels for about 1,950 kilometers (1,200 miles). The ruins of many ancient cities are located along the river in Iraq. Among them are Babylon, Eridu, Kish, Larsa, Nippur, Sippar, and Ur.

In the Bible the Euphrates is referred to as “the River Euphrates,” “the great river, the River Euphrates,” or simply as “the River.” It was one of the four rivers that flowed from the Garden of Eden (Gen. 2:14). The Euphrates formed the northern boundary of the territories promised by God to Israel (Gen. 15:18; Josh. 1:4).

The biblical writer declared that the fathers of Israel had lived on “the other side of the River” (Josh. 1:2–3, 14–15; “beside the Euphrates,” REB), where they served other gods. But God took Abraham “from the other side of the River” (v. 3) and brought him to the land of Canaan. David attempted to expand the boundaries of his kingdom to this river (2 Sam. 8:3). The Euphrates also was the site of the great battle at Carchemish (605 B.C.) that led to the death of King Josiah (2 Chr. 35:20–24). “The great river Euphrates” is also mentioned in Revelation 9:14 and 16:12.

EUROCLYDON [you ROCK lih dun] (east wind)—a fierce, tempestuous wind often experienced by navigators, especially in the spring, in the eastern Mediterranean. Sometimes of hurricane or typhoon force, this tremendous wind (Acts 27:14; the Northeaster, NRSV; Euraquilo, NASB) is so called because it blows from the northeast or east-northeast. The ship in which the apostle Paul was being transported to Rome was caught in this tempest (Acts 27:13–44).

EUTYCHUS [YOU tih cuss] (fortunate)—a young man of Troas who fell asleep while listening to a sermon by the apostle Paul and “fell down from the third story.” When his friends reached him, he was “taken up dead.” Paul miraculously brought Eutychus back to life (Acts 20:9–10).

EVANGELIST—a person authorized to proclaim the gospel of Christ. In a more narrow sense, the word refers to one of the gospel writers: Matthew, Mark, Luke, or John. Literally, however, the word means, “one who proclaims good tidings” (Eph. 4:11; 2 Tim. 4:5).

The evangelist was a gift of God to the early church (Eph. 4:11). These persons were not attached to any specific local church. They traveled over a wide geographical area, preaching to those to whom the Holy Spirit led them. The early disciples were also called evangelists (Acts 8:4) because they proclaimed the gospel.

All Christians today may continue the witness of the early evangelists. As they spoke and wrote of Jesus, so may Christians bring His message to others.

EVE [eev] (life-giving)—the first woman (Gen. 3:20; 4:1), created from one of Adam’s ribs to be “a helper comparable to him” (Gen. 2:18–22).

Adam and Eve lived together in innocence and happiness, enjoying sexual union (“one flesh”) without guilt and sin (Gen. 2:25). However, the serpent tempted Eve to eat the forbidden fruit (Gen. 2:17).

Eve succumbed to the serpent’s temptation and ate the fruit. Then “she also gave to her husband with her, and he ate” (Gen. 3:6). The result of this disobedience was losing innocence and receiving the disturbing knowledge of sin and evil. “Then the eyes of both of them were opened, and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig leaves together and made themselves coverings” (Gen. 3:7) to conceal their shame.

In falling into temptation (Gen. 3:6), Eve learned about sin and death (Gen. 2:17). She and her descendants experienced the animosity between Satan and Christ—the “offspring of the serpent” and “the seed of the woman” (Gen. 3:15). Her pain in childbirth and Adam’s authority over her were other results of her sin (Gen. 3:16).

The apostle Paul referred to Eve twice. By saying “the serpent deceived Eve by his craftiness,” Paul gave an example of how easily a person can be led into temptation and sin, with disastrous consequences (2 Cor. 11:3; 1 Tim. 2:12–14).

EVEN, EVENING—the period between sunset and bedtime; the early part of the night. In the New Testament the Greek word rendered as evening means “a period never earlier than sunset” (Matt. 8:16; Mark 1:32; John 6:16; even, KJV). For the Hebrew people, the old day ended and the new day began at evening, or sunset.

EVERLASTING—lasting forever; eternal. The Greek word translated as everlasting in the New Testament means “age-lasting,” as contrasted with what is brief and fleeting. The Bible speaks of the everlasting God (Is. 40:28), Father (Is. 9:6), King (Jer. 10:10), and Redeemer (Is. 63:16). The Lord is a God of everlasting kindness (Is. 54:8), love (Jer. 31:3), and mercy (Ps. 100:5; 103:17) who has established an everlasting covenant with His people (Heb. 13:20). His kingdom is everlasting (2 Pet. 1:11), as is His salvation (Ps. 45:17). Also see TIME.

EVI [EE vie]—one of five kings of Midian killed by the Israelites (Num. 31:8).

EVIL—a force that opposes God and His work of righteousness in the world (Rom. 7:8–19). The word is also used for any disturbance to the harmonious order of the universe, such as disease (Ps. 41:8). But the Bible makes it plain that even these so-called “physical evils” are the result of a far more serious moral and spiritual evil that began with the FALL of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden (Genesis 3).

The ultimate source of evil in the world is Satan, also called “the devil” (Luke 8:12) and “the wicked one” (Matt. 13:19). The Christian believer can rest assured that Jesus will triumph at the end of time, when Satan will be cast into a lake of fire and brimstone and evil will be overcome (Rev. 20:10).

Evil also comes from the hearts of people (Mark 7:20–23). It does not come from God, “for God cannot be tempted by evil, nor does He Himself tempt anyone” (James 1:13).

EVILDOER—one who does evil, wicked acts. The psalmist equates “evildoers” with “workers of iniquity” (Ps. 37:1). Although most common in the Book of Psalms, the word appears elsewhere as well (Jer. 20:13; 1 Pet. 2:12). Generally, the word “evildoers” is applied to the enemies of God and his people (Is. 14:20). It also is applied to the Israelites when they forsook the Lord (Is. 9:17).

EVIL EYE—a symbolic phrase that refers to the sinful will of an envious, selfish person (Deut. 15:9; Matt. 6:23; 20:15).

EVIL-FAVOREDNESS—a KJV term (Deut. 17:1) for any defect (NKJV, NASB, NRSV, REB), or flaw (NIV) that made an animal unfit for sacrifice.

EVIL-MERODACH [EE vil MARE uh dak] (man of [the god] Marduk)—king of the Neo-Babylonian Empire (562–560 B.C.) and son of Nebuchadnezzar II. When Evil-Merodach (Awil-Marduk) became king, he released King Jehoiachin of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar had kept imprisoned for thirty-seven years (2 Kin. 25:27–30; Jer. 52:31–34). Evil-Merodach’s brother-in-law, Nergal-shar-usur (Neriglissar), formed a conspiracy against him and put him to death. Neriglissar then became king.

EVIL ONE (see DEVIL; SATAN).

EVIL-SPEAKING (see BLASPHEMY; SLANDER).

EVIL SPIRIT (see DEMON).

EWE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

EXACTOR—KJV term for a ruler or overseer (Is. 60:17). An exactor was usually a government officer who collected customs, taxes, or tribute or a taskmaster who supervised manual laborers.

EXCOMMUNICATION—the expulsion of a member from the church because of a serious doctrinal or moral lapse. The concept of the CURSE or the BAN in the Old Testament is similar to excommunication (see also John 9:22). The curse signified divine judgment on sin (Num. 5:21; Jer. 29:18). It was considered God’s agent in cleansing sin from the land (Deut. 27:11–26). To be under a curse meant to be excluded from society—thus removing a cancerous agent from the people (Lev. 20:17). When such a person refused to repent, he fell under the curse (Mal. 4:6) and was no longer considered part of God's Covenant People (Lev. 27:28; Deut. 7:26).

The process of excommunication from the church was spelled out by Jesus (Matt. 18:15–18). The errant Christian should first be confronted about his behavior. If he refuses to heed the warnings, a representative of the church should return with witnesses. If that, too, is ineffective, the person should be brought before the church, which is to excommunicate him: "Let him be to you like a heathen or a tax collector" (Matt. 18:17). The apostle Paul often used the phrase "deliver to Satan" to speak of excommunication. This idea implies that God has removed His presence from the person's life and therefore Satan is free to afflict him (1 Cor. 5:5; 1 Tim. 1:20).

Apparently there were degrees of excommunication. The idle Thessalonian Christians who refused to heed Paul's admonition were to be socially shunned (2 Thess. 3:6). Then if they were still unrepentant, they were to be disassociated from the brethren (2 Thess. 3:14–15). But in neither case were the offenders to be considered under an absolute ban (v. 15).

Several purposes stood behind this extremely disciplinary tool. Primarily it was to protect the church from blatant evil in its midst (1 Cor. 5:6). It also had a redemptive function—to force the member to realize the seriousness of his offense and to return to Christ (1 Cor. 5:5). In this sense Paul admonished Timothy: "In humility correcting those who are in opposition, if God perhaps will grant them repentance, so that they may know the truth, and that they may come to their senses and escape the snare of the devil" (2 Tim. 2:25–26).

EXECUTIONER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

EXEGESIS (see BIBLE, INTERPRETATION OF THE).

EXERCISE, BODILY—physical training or athletic discipline such as that practiced by competitors in gymnastics (1 Tim. 4:8). The apostle Paul often referred to athletic contests to illustrate spiritual truths (1 Cor. 9:24–27; 2 Tim. 2:5; 4:7).

EXHORTATION—a message of warning or encouragement, designed to motivate persons to action. The apostle Paul often exhorted his fellow Christians to live out their calling as ministers of the Lord Jesus (Rom. 12:8; 2 Cor. 8:17).

EXILE (see DISPERSION).

EXODUS, THE—the departure of the Israelites from captivity in Egypt under the leadership of Moses. The actual Exodus was the final event in a series of miracles by which God revealed Himself to His people in bondage, humbled the pride of the Pharaoh who opposed the Israelites, and enabled Jacob's descendants to live in freedom once again.

The precise date of the Exodus from Egypt is uncertain, because the information in the Bible can be interpreted to support more than one date. Archaeological discoveries also present a confused picture. The result is that some scholars date the Exodus as early as 1446 B.C., while others place it later, about 1290 B.C.

The circumstances of Egyptian history are not very helpful either, because surviving Egyptian records do not mention either Joseph or Moses in any historical period. Neither does the Bible name the Pharaoh who ruled Egypt in Moses' day. The Exodus occurred after the rise of a new king who "did not know Joseph," or, who refused to recognize Joseph's achievements (Ex. 1:8).

The promise of the Exodus began with God's revelation of Himself to Moses at the burning bush (Ex. 3:2). This was followed by the commissioning of Moses and Aaron to stand before Pharaoh and demand the release of the Israelites. When he refused, a series of ten plagues began. Nine of these involved partially natural occurrences that were miraculously concentrated within a short time, affecting the Egyptians only and leaving the Israelites untouched. Each plague involved an Egyptian god in some manner, showing how powerless such deities were in comparison to Israel's God.

The final, tenth, plague resulted in the death of all the Egyptian firstborn male children and animals. Only then did Pharaoh agree to release the Hebrew people. They were spared from death by remaining in their houses and putting sacrificial blood on the doorposts before they ate the newly-instituted PASSOVER meal (Ex. 12:6–13). The Egyptians were so glad to be relieved of what had become a great burden to them that they gave the departing Israelites gifts of gold, silver, and clothing (Ex. 12:35).

Then the Exodus from Egypt began, with the whole company under Moses being directed away from the northerly road (Ex. 13:17) leading from Egypt to Gaza in Canaan. From Rameses, probably near Qantir, they moved to Succoth, perhaps the ancient Tell el-Maskhuta situated in the Wadi Tumilat in the southeastern region of the Nile delta. Then the Hebrews camped at Etham, on the edge of the Wilderness of Shur (Ex. 13:20), at a site still unknown but probably north of Lake Timsah close to the fortifications guarding Egypt's northeastern frontier. They were directed by a PILLAR OF CLOUD during the day. At night they were guided by a PILLAR OF FIRE, which led them away from Etham, probably in a northwesterly direction, to a site opposite Baal Zephon and Pi Hahiroth.

At this site a body of water stood in the way (Ex. 14:2). To the Egyptians this spelled the doom of a group of runaway slaves that had become thoroughly confused about their location as they struggled to get out of the Goshen area. This misunderstanding was part of God's plan to destroy the Egyptian armies (Ex. 14:3–4). They closed in on the Israelite camp, eager to recapture their escaped slaves. While the Hebrews assembled and rushed to the edge of the water, the pillar of cloud moved to the rear of the fleeing Hebrews, preventing the movement of the Egyptian armies.

A strong east wind from the desert began to blow on the surface of the water, which is also described more fully as a "reed sea" (Ex. 15:22) or lake of papyrus reeds. Earlier versions of the Bible mistakenly translated the phrase as "Red Sea," but this name describes a large oceanic gulf far to the southeast in which papyrus reeds do not grow. The concentrated, hot winds miraculously parted the marsh waters and dried the bottom so the Israelites could flee across it.

As the Egyptians followed, the winds stopped and the waters drowned the pursuers. The miracles of the Exodus were thus completed by the destruction of the Egyptian armies. The jubilant Israelites sang a victory song with Moses to celebrate the event (Ex. 15:1–18). The women, led by Miriam the sister of Aaron, also danced and sang (Ex. 15:20–21) as they praised God for His deliverance.

Then the Israelites began to journey into the WILDERNESS of SHUR (Ex. 15:22), known in Numbers 33:8 as the WILDERNESS of ETHAM. They had traveled in a circular manner, except that now they were east of the body of water. Being free from the threat of capture, they traveled east and south into the Sinai peninsula in order to meet with God at Mount Sinai (Horeb). Here they would establish a COVENANT that would make them God's chosen nation. Etham contained very little water. But after God enabled Moses to locate a supply, the Hebrews arrived at an oasis named Elim.

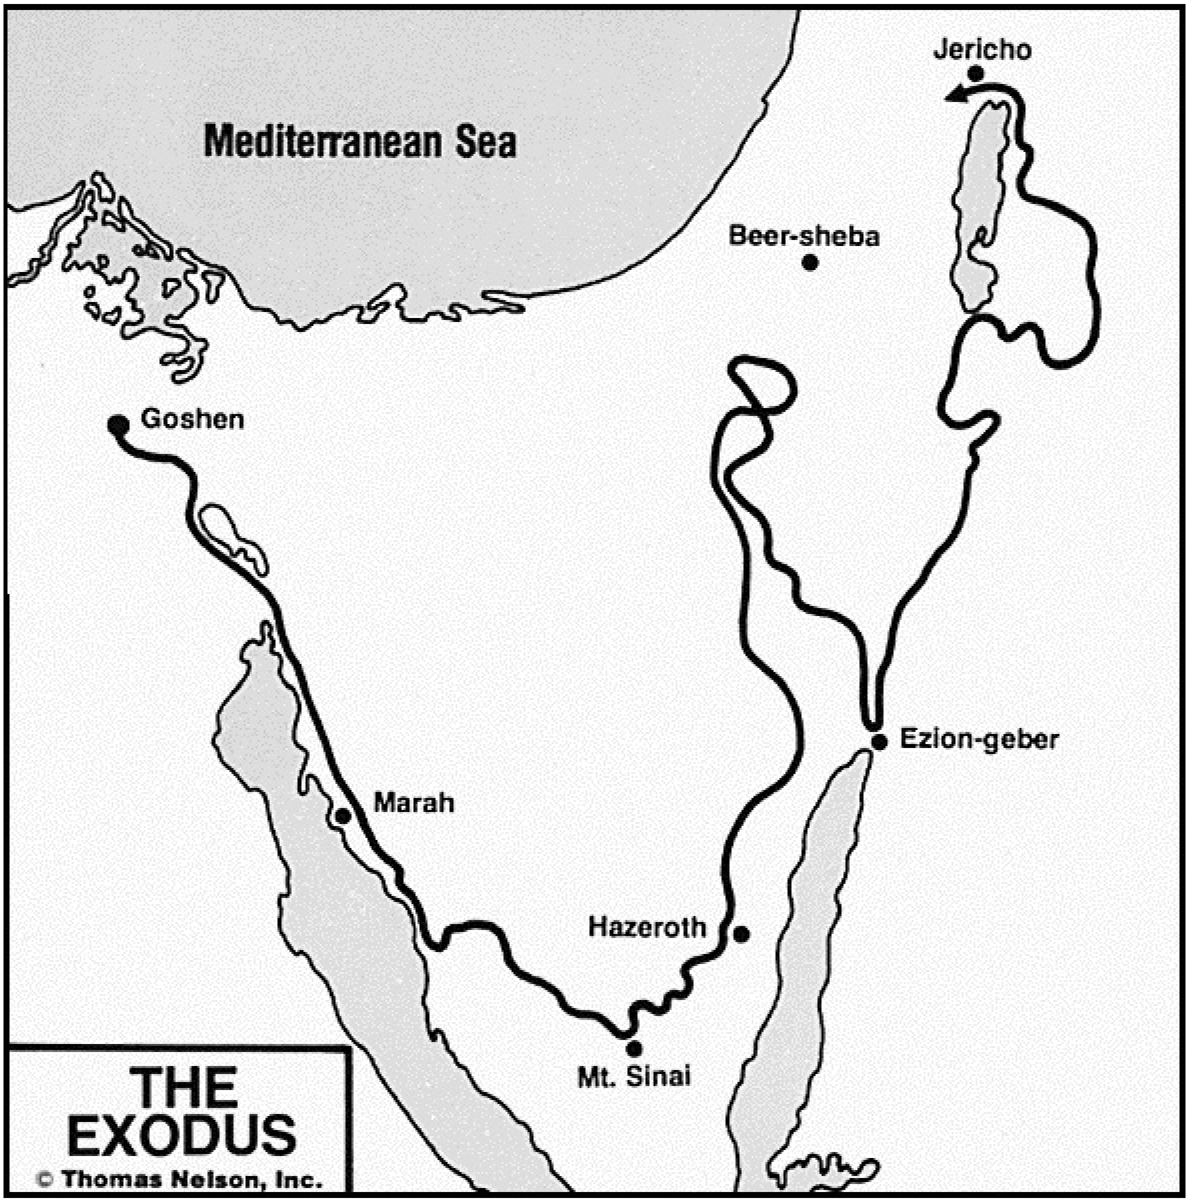
The Exodus became for the Israelites the supreme occasion when God acted to deliver His people from harsh captivity, binding them to Himself by a solemn covenant. Even today when the Jews celebrate the Passover, they are reminded of God's mighty deliverance in that long-ago time.

◆

Photo by Howard Vos

• The rugged Sinai Desert, through which the Israelites passed during the Exodus from Egypt.

The Exodus



Mediterranean Sea
Jericho
Beer-sheba
Goshen
Marah
Ezion-geber
Hazeroth
Mt. Sinai
THE EXODUS
© Thomas Nelson, Inc.

EXODUS, BOOK OF—key Old Testament book about Israel's beginning and early years as a nation. It takes its name from the event known as the EXODUS, the dramatic deliverance of the Hebrew people from enslavement in Egypt under the leadership of Moses. Throughout Exodus we meet a God who is the Lord of history and the Redeemer of His people. These themes, repeated throughout the rest of the Bible, make Exodus one of the foundational books of the Scriptures.

Structure of the Book. Exodus begins where the Book of Genesis leaves off—with the descendants of Joseph who moved to Egypt to escape famine and hardship in their own land. For many years the Hebrew people grew and prospered under the blessings of the Egyptian ruler. But then with one transitional verse, Exodus explains the changing political climate that brought an end to their favored position: “Now there arose a new king over Egypt, who did not know Joseph” (1:8). The Hebrews were reduced to the status of slaves and put to work on the Pharaoh’s building projects.

The Book of Exodus falls naturally into three major divisions: (1) Israel in Egypt (1:1—13:21); (2) Israel in the wilderness (15:22—18:27); and (3) Israel at Mt. Sinai (19:1—40:38).

Some of the major events covered by this rapidly moving book include God’s call of Moses through the BURNING BUSH to lead His people out of bondage (3:1—4:17); the series of plagues sent upon the Egyptians because of Pharaoh’s stubbornness (7:14—11:10); the release of the captives and their miraculous crossing of the Red Sea, followed by the destruction of Pharaoh’s army (13:17—15:21); God’s provision for the people in the wilderness through bread, quail, and water (16:1—17:7); the giving of the Ten Commandments and other parts of the Law to Moses at Mt. Sinai (20:1—23:33); and the renewal of the covenant between God and His people (24:1–8).

The book ends as Moses and the workmen under his supervision build a tabernacle in the wilderness near Mt. Sinai at God’s command. A cloud, symbolizing God’s presence, rests on the tabernacle; and the entire building is filled with His glory (35:1—40:38).

Authorship and Date. Exodus is one of the first five books of the Old Testament—books that have traditionally been assigned to Moses as author. (See PENTATEUCH.) But some scholars insist that Exodus was compiled by an unknown writer or editor who drew from several different historical documents. There are two sound reasons why Moses can be accepted without question as the divinely inspired author of this book.

First, Exodus itself speaks of the writing activity of Moses. In Exodus 34:27 God commands Moses to “write these words.” Another passage tells us that “Moses wrote all the words of the LORD” in obedience to God’s command (24:4). It is reasonable to assume that these verses refer to Moses’ writing of material that appears in the Book of Exodus. Second, Moses either observed or participated in the events described in Exodus. He was well qualified to write about these experiences, since he had been educated in the household of the Pharaoh during his early life (Ex. 1:10–11).

Since Moses wrote Exodus, it must be dated some time before his death about 1400 B.C. Israel spent the forty preceding years wandering in the wilderness because of their unfaithfulness. This is the most likely time for the writing of the book.

Historical Setting. Exodus covers a crucial period in Israel’s early history as a nation. Most conservative scholars believe the Hebrews left Egypt about 1446 B.C. Some believe it took place much later, around 1290 B.C. About two-thirds of the book describes Israel’s experiences during the two years after the Exodus itself. This was the period when Israel traveled through the wilderness toward Mt. Sinai and received instructions from God through Moses as he met with God on the mountain.

Theological Contribution. The Book of Exodus has exercised much influence over the faith of Israel, as well as Christian theology. The Bible’s entire message of redemption grows out of the covenant relationship between God and His people first described in this book. In addition, several themes in the book can be clearly traced in the life and ministry of Jesus. Moses received the Law on Mt. Sinai; Jesus delivered the SERMON ON THE MOUNT. Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness to give life to the people; Jesus was lifted up on the cross to bring eternal life to all who trust in Him (John 3:14).

The PASSOVER (Ex. 12), instituted by God for the deliverance of the Hebrews from slavery, became one of the focal points of Israel’s faith. It also served as the base on which Jesus developed the Last Supper as a lasting memorial for His followers. With clear insight into Exodus, the message of the Bible and the meaning of the life of Jesus dawns with greater understanding for Christian believers.

Special Considerations. The Book of Exodus is a dramatic testimony to the power of God. The signs and plagues sent by God to break Pharaoh’s stubbornness are clear demonstrations of His power. In addition to setting the Israelites free, they also dramatize the weakness of Egypt’s false gods. The puny idols of Egypt are powerless before the mighty God of Israel.

The crossing of the Red Sea is one of the most dramatic events in all of the Bible; the biblical writers repeatedly refer to it as the most significant sign of God’s love for Israel. A helpless slave people had been delivered from their enemies by their powerful Redeemer God. They celebrated their victory with a song of praise (Ex. 15:1–18) that emphasizes the theme of the Book of Exodus:

> I will sing to the LORD,
> For He has triumphed gloriously!
> The horse and its rider
> He has thrown into the sea!
> The LORD is my strength and my song,
> And He has become my salvation.

◆

Exodus: A Study and Teaching Outline

Part One: Redemption from Egypt (1:1—18:27)

I. The Need for Redemption from Egypt 1:1–22
  A. Israel’s Rapid Multiplication 1:1–7
  B. Israel’s Severe Affliction 1:8–14
  C. Israel’s Planned Destruction 1:15–22

II. The Preparation of the Leaders of the Redemption 2:1—4:31
  A. Moses Is Saved 2:1–10
  B. Moses Avenges a Wrong 2:11–22
  C. Israel Calls upon God 2:23–25
  D. God Calls Moses 3:1—4:17
  E. Moses Accepts the Call 4:18–26
  F. Israel Accepts the Call of Moses as Deliverer 4:27–31

III. The Redemption of Israel from Egypt by God 5:1—15:21
  A. Moses Confronts Pharaoh by Word 5:1—6:9
  B. Moses Confronts Pharaoh with Miracles 6:10—7:13
  C. Moses Confronts Pharaoh Through Plagues 7:14—11:10
    1. First Plague: Blood 7:14–25
    2. Second Plague: Frogs 8:1–15

    - 3. Third Plague: Lice 8:16–19
    - 4. Fourth Plague: Flies 8:20–32
    - 5. Fifth Plague: Disease on Livestock 9:1–7
    - 6. Sixth Plague: Boils 9:8–12
    - 7. Seventh Plague: Hail 9:13–35
    - 8. Eighth Plague: Locusts 10:1–20
    - 9. Ninth Plague: Darkness 10:21–29
    - 10. Tenth Plague: Death Announced 11:1–10
- D. Israel Redeemed by Blood through the Passover 12:1—13:16
- E. Israel Redeemed from Egypt by God’s Power 13:17—15:21

IV. The Preservation of Israel in the Wilderness 15:22—18:27

- A. Preserved from Thirst 15:22–27
- B. Preserved from Hunger 16:1–36
- C. Preserved from Thirst Again 17:1–7
- D. Preserved from Defeat 17:8–16
- E. Preserved from Chaos 18:1–27

Part Two: Revelation from God (19:1—40:38)

I. The Revelation of the Old Covenant 19:1—31:18

- A. The Preparation of the People 19:1–25
- B. The Revelation of the Covenant 20:1–26
    - 1. The Ten Commandments 20:1–17
    - 2. The Response of Israel 20:18–21
    - 3. Provision for Approaching God 20:22–26
- C. The Judgments 21:1—23:33
    - 1. Social Regulations 21:1—22:15
    - 2. Moral Regulations 22:16—23:9
    - 3. Religious Regulations 23:10–19
    - 4. Conquest Regulations 23:20–33
- D. The Formal Renewal of the Covenant 24:1–11
    - 1. The Covenant Is Renewed through Blood 24:1–8
    - 2. The God of the Covenant Is Revealed 24:9–11
- E. The Tabernacle 24:12—27:21
    - 1. The Revelation Is Given on Mount Sinai 24:12–18
    - 2. The Offering for the Tabernacle 25:1–7
    - 3. The Revelation of the Tabernacle 25:8—27:21
- F. The Priests 28:1—29:46
    - 1. The Clothing of the Priests 28:1–43
    - 2. The Consecration of the Priests 29:1–37
    - 3. The Continual Offerings of the Priests 29:38–46
- G. Institution of the Covenant 30:1—31:18
    - 1. Instructions for Using the Tabernacle 30:1–38
    - 2. Instructions for Building the Tabernacle 31:1–11
    - 3. Sign of the Covenant: The Sabbath 31:12–17
    - 4. Two Tablets Are Presented 31:18

II. The Response of Israel to the Covenant 32:1—40:38
- A. Israel Willfully Breaks the Covenant 32:1–6
- B. Moses Intercedes for Israel's Salvation 32:7–33
- C. Moses Convinces God Not to Abandon Israel 32:34—33:23
- D. God Renews the Covenant with Israel 34:1–35
- E. Israel Willingly Obeys the Covenant 35:1—40:33
- F. God Fills the Tabernacle with His Glory 40:34–38

◆

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

- The Wilderness of Zin, a desert region through which the Israelites passed on their journey to the Promised Land (Num. 13:21).

◆

EXORCISM (see MAGIC, SORCERY AND DIVINATION).

EXORCIST (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

EXPEDIENT, EXPEDIENCY—doing what is necessary in a given circumstance to achieve a certain goal. During the plot to kill Jesus, Caiaphas the high priest declared, "It is expedient that one man [Jesus] should die for the people, and not that the whole nation should perish" (John 11:50; also 18:14). His argument was that it was better for an innocent man to be crucified than to give the Romans cause to destroy the whole nation.

EXTORTION, EXTORTIONER—the act of obtaining property by force or underhanded means (Lev. 6:2; Is. 16:4). The apostle Paul mentions extortioners along with thieves, idolaters, and drunkards as those who will not inherit the kingdom of God (1 Cor. 5:10–11; 6:10).

EYE—the light-sensitive organ of vision in animals and humans. In Bible times, eyes were considered God's gifts (Prov. 20:12). Since early times, beautiful eyes have been part of physical attractiveness; women have long applied cosmetics to their eyes (2 Kin. 9:30). Cruel kings sometimes gouged out the eyes of conquered enemies, robbing them of any chance to rebel (1 Sam. 11:2; 2 Kin. 25:7).

In the Bible the eye is often described symbolically. "Evil eye" (Matt. 20:15) describes envy; "bountiful eye" (Prov. 22:9) refers to generosity; "wanton eyes" (Is. 3:16) mean pride; "eyes full of adultery" (2 Pet. 2:14) is symbolic of lust; "the lust of eyes" (1 John 2:16) means earthly temptation; and "the desire of your eyes" (Ezek. 24:16, 21) refers to a loved one or thing. "The apple [pupil] of His eye" (Deut. 32:10; Zech. 2:8) referred to Israel, implying its special place in God's plan.

EYE OF A NEEDLE—a figure of speech used by Jesus to illustrate the extreme difficulty of a wealthy person's attaining salvation: "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God" (Matt. 19:24; Mark 10:25; Luke 18:25). Much has been written in an attempt to explain this statement.

Some have suggested that the "Needle's Eye" was a particularly narrow gate adjacent to one of the main gates of Jerusalem. A camel could pass through this gate but only with great difficulty. First it had to be stripped of the goods it carried, and then it had to bow to its knees to get through the gate. However, this claim is unsupported by historical evidence. Another suggestion is that "camel" (kamelos) should be translated "rope" (kamilos) or "ship's cable." Neither of these suggestions has received much support from scholars.

It is probably best to understand this figure of speech as an example of Jesus' use of hyperbole, or exaggeration for effect. The image of a camel trying to climb through the eye of a needle would have been both vivid and amusing.

When Jesus' disciples heard this "hard saying" from their Lord, they asked, "Who then can be saved?" Jesus replied, "With men this is impossible, but with God all things are possible" (Matt. 19:25–26).

Even man’s best achievements cannot attain salvation, which is granted as a gift of God.

EYE SALVE—an ointment of various compounds applied to the eyelids for medicinal purposes (Rev. 3:18). This salve was mentioned by John in the Book of Revelation in his message to the church at Laodicea. The medical school at Laodicea was famous for its eye salve; so to make his point that the Laodiceans were spiritually blind, John told them that the Lord would have to anoint their eyes with salve that they might see or know the truth.

EYESERVICE—the outward show of service, in order to impress others—a form of deception condemned by the apostle Paul (Eph. 6:6; Col. 3:22).

EYEWITNESS—one who bears witness by giving a personal report of what he has seen (2 Pet. 1:16). The apostles did not receive the gospel secondhand but “were eyewitnesses of the word” (Luke 1:2) that they received personally from Jesus Christ.

EYES, COVERING OF THE—a symbolic expression in the KJV (Gen. 20:16) which apparently refers to the practice of accepting a bribe or taking a gift from a person as a payment for wrongs committed.

EYES, PAINTING OF—the practice of putting dark cosmetics on a woman’s eyelids and eyebrows to enhance her beauty. The arch of the eyebrow was lengthened and darkened, the edges of the eyelids were lined, and the eyelids were tinted in order to make the eyes appear larger (Jer. 4:30). Implements for this procedure, including boxes, horns, and slender reeds in which cosmetic coloring was kept, have been discovered by archaeologists. Generally it was only the wealthy who could afford such cosmetics (2 Kin. 9:30; Ezek. 23:40).

EZAR [EE zur]—a form of EZER.

EZBAI [EZ ba eye]—the father of Naarai, one of David’s mighty men (1 Chr. 11:37).

EZBON [EZ bun]—the name of two Old Testament men:

1. A son of Gad (Gen. 46:16; Ozni, Num. 26:16).
2. A grandson of Benjamin (1 Chr. 7:7).

EZEKIAS [ez eh KIE us]—Greek form of HEZEKIAH.

EZEKIEL [ih ZEEK e uhl] (God will strengthen)—a prophet of a priestly family carried captive to Babylon in 597 B.C. when he was about twenty-five years old. His call to the prophetic ministry came five years later. Ezekiel prophesied to the captives who dwelt by the River Chebar at Tel Abib. He is the author of the Book of Ezekiel.

In his book, Ezekiel identifies himself as a priest, the son of Buzi (1:3). He was married to a woman who was "the desire of his eyes" (24:16). One of the saddest events of his life was the death of his wife. The prophet was told that on the very day he received this revelation, his wife would die as the armies of Babylon laid siege against the holy city of Jerusalem. Ezekiel's sadness at the death of his wife was to match the grief of the people at the destruction of Jerusalem. Ezekiel was commanded not to grieve her death; he was to steel himself for this tragedy even as God's people were to prepare themselves for the death of their beloved city (24:15–22). Perhaps no other event in the lives of the Old Testament prophets is as touching as this.

Ezekiel shows us just how ugly and serious our sin is. Perhaps this is why God acted so dramatically in dealing with the human condition—by sending His Son Jesus to die in our place and set us free from the bondage of sin.

Also see EZEKIEL, BOOK OF.

EZEKIEL, BOOK OF—a prophetic book of the Old Testament with vivid, symbolic language much like that in the Book of Revelation in the New Testament. The Book of Ezekiel is named for its author, the prophet Ezekiel, who received his prophetic messages from God in a series of visions. He addressed these prophecies to the Jewish exiles in Babylonia, where he lived among them.

Structure of the Book. Although Ezekiel is a long book of forty-eight chapters, it has a logical, orderly structure that makes it easy to analyze. After a brief introductory section about Ezekiel and the nature of his mission, the book falls naturally into three main divisions: (1) judgment on the nation of Judah (chaps. 4–24); (2) judgment on the surrounding nations (chaps. 25–32); and (3) the future blessing of God's Covenant People (chaps. 33–48).

Ezekiel was a priest who lived among the other citizens of the nation of Judah as a captive of Babylonia during the years of the CAPTIVITY. In the first chapter of the book, he describes an amazing vision of God that came to him at the beginning of his ministry. He saw four living creatures, each of which had the faces of a man, a lion, an ox, and an eagle. Clearly visible above these strange creatures was the likeness of a throne, symbolizing the might and power of God. The glory of the Lord was clearly visible to Ezekiel as He called the prophet to proclaim His message of judgment. This vision sets the tone for the rest of Ezekiel. In other encounters with strange visions throughout the book, Ezekiel proclaims God's message for His Covenant People, as well as the Gentile nations surrounding the land of Israel.

In the first major section of the book (chaps. 4–24) Ezekiel describes God's judgment on the nation of Judah because of its rampant idolatry. Chapters 8–11 are especially interesting because their prophecies were delivered by Ezekiel in the city of Jerusalem after God transported him there during one of his visions (8:3). At the end of chapter 11, Ezekiel was taken back to Babylonia, where he continued his messages (11:24–25).

The next major division of the book (chaps. 25–32) proclaims God's judgment against the nations surrounding Israel. Included are judgments against Ammon, Moab, Edom, Philistia, Tyre and Sidon, and Egypt.

The final section of the book (chaps. 33–48) speaks of the future restoration of the people of Israel. It includes Ezekiel's famous vision of the valley of dry bones (chap. 37). At God's command, Ezekiel spoke to the bones, and they arose. Then God declared to the bones, "I will put My Spirit in you, and you shall live, and I will place you in your own land" (37:14). This was a clear promise from God that His Covenant People would be restored to their homeland after their period of exile in Babylon. This same theme is continued in chapters 40–48, which describe the restoration of the temple in Jerusalem and the renewal of sacrifices and authentic worship. These chapters are similar in tone and content to the closing chapters of the Book of Revelation. Ezekiel points forward to the ultimate glorious kingdom of Jesus the Messiah.

Authorship and Date. The author of this book was the prophet Ezekiel, a spokesman for the Lord who lived among the Jewish captives in Babylonia. Some scholars have questioned Ezekiel's authorship, claiming instead that it was compiled by an unknown author from several different sources. But the book itself clearly states that Ezekiel delivered these prophecies. The prophet refers to himself with the personal pronoun "I" throughout the book. The uniformity of style and language in the book—including such phrases as "son of man" (2:1) and "as I live, says the Lord GOD" (5:11)—is also a convincing proof of authorship by a single person. There is no good reason to doubt the traditional theory that Ezekiel wrote the book.

The prophet identifies himself in the book as "Ezekiel the priest, the son of Buzi" (1:3). He also tells us he began his prophetic ministry "in the fifth year of King Jehoiachin's captivity" (1:2). He was the king of Judah who was taken captive by Babylon in 597 B.C. This would place the beginning of Ezekiel's prophecies at about 593 B.C. The last dates that he mentions in the book are the "twenty-seventh year" (29:17) and "the twenty-fifth year of our captivity" (40:1). So Ezekiel must have prophesied for at least twenty-two years among the captives, until 571 B.C. He probably wrote the Book of Ezekiel some time shortly after 570 B.C.

Historical Setting. The Book of Ezekiel belongs to the early years of the Babylonian captivity of God's Covenant People. The Babylonians took captives from Jerusalem in three stages. In an early campaign about 605 B.C., the prophet Daniel was among the Jews taken to Babylon. A second attack against the city occurred in 597 B.C., when many additional captives were taken. Ezekiel must have been among those carried away at this time. Then in the extensive campaign of 588–586 B.C., Nebuchadnezzar destroyed Jerusalem and took most of the remaining inhabitants into exile.

In the early prophecies of the Book of Ezekiel, the author wrote as a captive in Babylon who expected Jerusalem to be destroyed. Chapter 24 describes the beginning of the final siege of the city. This date was so important that the Lord had the prophet write it down as a memorial of the dreaded event (24:2). This was followed by the symbol of the cooking pot with scum rising from the boiling meat, a clear judgment against Judah. On this day also the prophet's beloved wife died. Ezekiel was forbidden to mourn her death as a symbol of God's wrath upon the wayward nation (24:15–24).

Portions of the Book of Ezekiel were written during the long siege of Jerusalem. While Ezekiel and the other captives lived in Babylon, they must have heard of the suffering of their fellow citizens back home. At last they received word that the city had fallen, and Ezekiel translated this event into an unforgettable message for the people (33:21–29). Such were the perilous times in which Ezekiel prophesied.

Theological Contribution. One of the greatest insights of the Book of Ezekiel is its teaching of individual responsibility. This prophet proclaimed the truth that every person is responsible for his own sin as he stands exposed before God. In Ezekiel's time the Jewish people had such a strong sense of group identity as God's Covenant People that they tended to gloss over their need as individuals to follow God and His will. Some even believed that future generations were held accountable for the sins of their ancestors. But Ezekiel declared: "The soul who sins shall die. The son shall not bear the guilt of the father, nor the father bear the guilt of the son. The righteousness of the righteous shall be upon himself, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon himself" (18:20). This underscores the need for every person to make his own decision to follow the Lord. None of us can depend on the faith of our ancestors to gain entrance into God's kingdom.

Ezekiel also paints a beautiful picture of the future age in which God will rule triumphantly among His people. Although God's people were suffering at the hands of a pagan nation when Ezekiel prophesied, better days were assured. God would establish His universal rule among His people through a descendant of David (37:24–25). This is a clear reference to the MESSIAH, a prophecy fulfilled when Jesus was born in Bethlehem more than 500 years later. The followers of Jesus became the "new Israel," or the church—those who seek to follow God and carry out His purpose in the world.

Special Considerations. In his use of parables, symbolic behavior, and object lessons to drive home his messages, the prophet Ezekiel reminds us of the prophet Jeremiah. Through the use of parables, Ezekiel portrayed God's Covenant People as a helpless newborn child (16:1–12), as a lioness who cared carefully for her cubs (19:1–3), as a sturdy cedar (17:1–3), and as a doomed and useless vine (chap. 15). He also used a clay tablet to portray the Babylonian siege against the city of Jerusalem (4:1–2), ate his bread “with quaking” and drank his water “with trembling and anxiety” (12:17) to symbolize God’s wrath, and carried his belongings about to show that God would allow His people to be carried into exile by the Babylonians (12:1–16).

Ezekiel may have picked up this technique of acting out his messages from Jeremiah himself. For about forty years before Jerusalem’s fall in 586 B.C., Jeremiah prophesied in the capital city. As a young resident of Jerusalem, Ezekiel probably heard and saw this great prophet at work. When he was called to prophesy to the exiles in Babylon beginning about 593 B.C., he may have used Jeremiah’s methods as a way to get attention and win a hearing for God’s message.

◆

Ezekiel: A Study and Teaching Outline

Part One: The Commission of Ezekiel (1:1—3:27)

I. Ezekiel Sees the Glory of God 1:1–28

II. Ezekiel Is Commissioned to Proclaim the Word of God 2:1—3:27

Part Two: Judgment on Judah (4:1—24:27)

I. Four Signs of Coming Judgment 4:1—5:17
- A. Sign of the Clay Tablet 4:1–3
- B. Sign of Ezekiel’s Lying on His Side 4:4–8
- C. Sign of the Defiled Bread 4:9–17
- D. Sign of the Razor and Hair 5:1–4
- E. Explanation of the Signs 5:5–17

II. Two Messages of Coming Judgment 6:1—7:27
- A. Destruction Because of Idolatry 6:1–14
- B. Description of the Babylonian Conquest 7:1–27

III. Four-part Vision of Coming Judgment 8:1—11:25
- A. Vision of the Glory of God 8:1–4
- B. Vision of the Abominations in the Temple 8:5–18
- C. Vision of the Slaying in Jerusalem 9:1–11
- D. Departure of the Glory of God to the Threshold 10:1–8
- E. Vision of the Wheels and Cherubim 10:9–22
- F. Vision of the Twenty-five Wicked Rulers 11:1–12

  - G. Promise of the Restoration of the Remnant 11:13–21
  - H. Departure of the Glory of God to the Mount of Olives 11:22–25

- IV. Signs, Parables, and Messages of Judgment 12:1—24:27
  - A. Sign of Judah’s Captivity 12:1–16
  - B. Sign of Trembling 12:17–28
  - C. Message against the False Prophets 13:1–23
  - D. Message against the Elders 14:1–23
  - E. Parable of the Vine 15:1–8
  - F. Parable of Israel’s Marriage 16:1–63
  - G. Parable of the Two Eagles 17:1–24
  - H. Message of Personal Judgment for Personal Sin 18:1–32
  - I. Lament for the Princes of Israel 19:1–9
  - J. Parable of the Withered Vine 19:10–14
  - K. Messages of Judgment on Jerusalem 20:1—24:27

Part Three: Judgment on the Nations (25:1—32:32)

- I. Judgment on Ammon 25:1–7

- II. Judgment on Moab 25:8–11

- III. Judgment on Edom 25:12–14

- IV. Judgment on Philistia 25:15–17

- V. Judgment on Tyre 26:1—28:19

- VI. Judgment on Sidon 28:20–26

- VII. Judgment on Egypt 29:1—32:32

Part Four: Restoration of Israel (33:1—48:35)

- I. The Return of Israel to the Land 33:1—39:29
  - A. The Appointment of Ezekiel as Watchman 33:1–33
  - B. The Message to the Shepherds 34:1–31
  - C. The Judgment of Edom 35:1–15
  - D. Prophecies Concerning Israel 36:1—37:28
  - E. Prophecies Concerning Gog and Magog 38:1—39:29

- II. The Restoration of Israel in the Kingdom 40:1—48:35
  - A. The New Temple 40:1—43:27
  - B. The New Worship 44:1—46:24
  - C. The New Land 47:1—48:35

EZEL [EE zel]—the place where David hid until Jonathan brought back word of Saul's intentions. Apparently between Naioth (1 Sam. 20:1) and Nob (1 Sam. 21:1), this mound of stones was the scene of the final parting of Jonathan and David (1 Sam. 20:19).

EZEM [EE zum] (mighty)—a village in the Negeb of Judah situated south of Beersheba, near the border of Edom (Josh. 15:29; 19:3; Azem, KJV; 1 Chr. 4:29).

EZER [EE zur] ([God is a] help)—the name of six Old Testament men:

1. A son of Seir the Horite (Gen. 36:21; Ezar, 1 Chr. 1:38, KJV). Also see ABIEZER and ROMAMTI-EZER.
2. A descendant of Judah (1 Chr. 4:4; perhaps Ezra, 1 Chr. 4:17).
3. A son of Ephraim killed by the people of Gath when he and his brother Elead attempted to steal cattle from the Philistines (1 Chr. 7:21).
4. A Gadite who joined David at Ziklag (1 Chr. 12:9).
5. A priest of Nehemiah's time (Neh. 12:42).
6. A Levite who helped repair the wall of Jerusalem (Neh. 3:19).

EZION GEBER [EE zih on GHEE bur] (backbone of a man)—a site between the modern city of Eilat in Israel and the modern city of Aqaba in Jordan where King Solomon built a port (see Map 2, C–2). Situated on the northern shore of the Gulf of Aqaba—the eastern arm of the Red Sea—Ezion Geber was first mentioned in the Bible as the last stopping place for the people of Israel before they reached Kadesh (Num. 33:35–36; Deut. 2:8).

Ezion Geber's prominence came about during the golden age of Israel under Solomon. At this site Solomon built a port from which fleets of ships sailed to foreign ports along the coasts of Africa and Arabia (1 Kin. 9:26; 10:22; 2 Chr. 8:17). To the docks of Ezion Geber came gold from Ophir, silver, ivory, spices, precious stones, wood, apes, and baboons (1 Kin. 10:11, 22).

• The road to Petra in ancient Edom in the vicinity of Ezion Geber—a region south of the Dead Sea.

EZNITE [EZ night]—the nickname of Josheb-Basshebeth the Tachmonite, who was "chief among the captains" of David's mighty men (2 Sam. 23:8).

EZRA [EZ ruh] ([God is] a help)—the name of three men in the Old Testament:

1. A descendant of Judah (1 Chr. 4:17; Ezrah, NIV, NRSV; perhaps Ezer, 1 Chr. 4:4).
2. A scribe and priest who led the returned captives in Jerusalem to make a new commitment to God's Law. A descendant of Aaron through Eleazar, Ezra was trained in the knowledge of the Law while living in captivity in Babylon with other citizens of the nation of Judah. Ezra gained favor during the reign of Artaxerxes, king of Persia. This king commissioned him to return to Jerusalem about 458 B.C. to bring order among the people of the new community. Artaxerxes even gave Ezra a royal letter (Ezra 7:11–16), granting him civil as well as religious authority, along with the finances to furnish the temple, which had been rebuilt by the returned captives.

Ezra was a skilled scribe and teacher with extensive training in the Books of the Law (Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy). After his return to Jerusalem, he apparently did a lot of work on the Hebrew Bible of that time, modernizing the language, correcting irregularities in the transmitted text, and updating and standardizing expressions in certain passages. References to this work by Ezra are found in 2 Esdras, one of the apocryphal books of the Old Testament. He also refers to himself in his own book as a skilled scribe (Ezra 7:6, 12), whose task was to copy, interpret and transmit the books of the Law.

When he arrived in Jerusalem, Ezra discovered that many of the Hebrew men had married foreign wives from the surrounding nations (Ezra 9:1, 2). After a period of fasting and prayer (Ezra 9:3, 15), he insisted that these men divorce their wives (Ezra 10:1, 17). He feared that intermarriage with pagans would lead to worship of pagan gods in the restored community of Judah.

In addition to these marriage reforms, Ezra also led his countrymen to give attention to the reading of the Law. Several priests helped Ezra read the Law, translating and interpreting it for the people's clear understanding in their new language (Aramaic). This reading process went on for seven days as the people focused on God's commands (Neh. 7:73—8:18).

During this period, they also celebrated one of their great religious festivals, the Feast of Tabernacles, to commemorate their sustenance by God in the wilderness following their miraculous escape from Egyptian bondage (Nehemiah 8). The result of this week of concentration on their heritage was a religious revival. The people confessed their sins and renewed their covenant with God (Nehemiah 9–10).

Ezra must have been a competent scribe and priest, since he found favor with the ruling Persians. But he was also devoted to his God and the high standards of holiness and righteousness that the Lord demanded of His people.

As he communicated God's requirements to the captives in Jerusalem, Ezra also proved he was a capable leader who could point out shortcomings while leading the people to a higher commitment to God's law at the same time. Through it all, Ezra worked with a keen sense of divine guidance, “according to the good hand of his God upon him” (Ezra 7:9).

3. One of the priests who returned from the captivity with Zerubbabel (Neh. 12:1, 13).

Also see EZRA, BOOK OF.

EZRA, BOOK OF—a historical book of the Old Testament that describes the resettlement of the Jewish people in their homeland after their long exile in Babylonia. The book is named for its author and central figure, Ezra the priest, who led the exiles in a new commitment to God’s Law after their return.

Structure of the Book. The ten chapters of this book fall naturally into two main divisions, chapters 1–6, which report the return of the first wave of exiles to Jerusalem under the leadership of Zerubbabel, about 538 B.C., and chapters 7–10, which describe the return of a second group under Ezra’s leadership, about 458 B.C. One of the most unusual facts about the Book of Ezra is that its two major sections are separated by a time gap of about eighty years.

The book opens with a brief introduction that explains how the first return from exile happened. Cyrus, king of Persia, issued a proclamation allowing the Jewish people to return to Jerusalem to rebuild their temple and resettle their native land. About 50,000 of the people returned under the leadership of Zerubbabel, a Jewish citizen appointed by Cyrus as governor of Jerusalem (2:64–67). Arriving in about 538 B.C., they set to work on the rebuilding project. In spite of some shrewd political maneuvering by their enemies, the work moved forward in fits and starts until the temple was completed in about 515 B.C. (6:13–15).

The second major section of the book (chaps. 7–10) reports on the arrival of Ezra in Jerusalem with another group of exiles about sixty years after the temple had been completed. Just as Zerubbabel had led the people to rebuild God’s house, Ezra’s mission was to lead his countrymen to rebuild the Law of God in their hearts. Ezra worked with another Jewish leader, Nehemiah, to bring about several reforms among the Jewish people in Judah during this period. From the Book of Nehemiah (Neh. 8:1–8), we learn that Ezra read the books of the Law (Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy) aloud to the people. This led to a great religious revival throughout Jerusalem as the people committed themselves again to God’s Law, confessed their sins (Neh. 9:1–3), and renewed the covenant with their Redeemer God (Nehemiah 10).

We also learn from the final two chapters of his book that Ezra was distressed at the Jewish men who had married non-Jewish women. He led these men to repent of their sin and divorce their pagan wives (10:6–44).

Authorship and Date. Ezra has traditionally been accepted as the author of this book that bears his name, as well as the companion book of Nehemiah. In the Hebrew Old Testament, Ezra and Nehemiah appeared as one unbroken book, closely connected in theme and style to the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles. The last two verses of 2 Chronicles are repeated in the first three verses of the Book of Ezra, probably indicating that they belonged together in the original version. For this reason, many scholars believe Ezra served as writer and editor-compiler of all four of these books: 1 and 2 Chronicles, Ezra, and Nehemiah. He probably drew from official court documents as sources for his writings.

This compilation theory also helps explain the strange eighty-year gap between the two major sections of Ezra’s book. He wrote about Zerubbabel’s return many years after it happened, drawing from official court records or some other account of the event. To this he added his own personal memoirs, now contained in chapters 7–10 of the Book of Ezra as well as chapters 8–10 of the Book of Nehemiah. The rest of the material in the Book of Nehemiah may have come from Nehemiah’s memoirs, which Ezra incorporated into the book of Ezra-Nehemiah. The time for the final writing and compilation of all this material must have been some time late in the fifth century B.C.

Historical Setting. The Book of Ezra belongs to the post-exilic period. These were the years just after a remnant of the nation returned to Jerusalem following their exile of several decades in Babylonia. The return came about after the capture of Babylonia by the Persian Empire. Unlike the Babylonians, the Persians allowed their subject nations to live in their own native regions under the authority of a ruling governor. The Persians also practiced religious tolerance, allowing each nation to worship its own god. This explains the proclamation of Cyrus of Persia, which allowed the Jewish people to return to Jerusalem and rebuild their temple. Cyrus even returned the temple treasures that the Babylonians took when they destroyed Jerusalem about fifty years earlier (1:7–11).

Theological Contribution. The theme of the Book of Ezra is the restoration of the remnant of God's Covenant People in Jerusalem in obedience to his Law. The book shows clearly that God had acted to preserve His people, even when they were being held captives in a pagan land. But in their absence, the people had not been able to carry on the true form of temple worship. Only in their temple in Jerusalem, they believed, could authentic worship and sacrifice to their Redeemer God be offered. This is why the rebuilding of the temple was so important. Here they could restore their worship of God and find their true identity as God's people of destiny in the world.

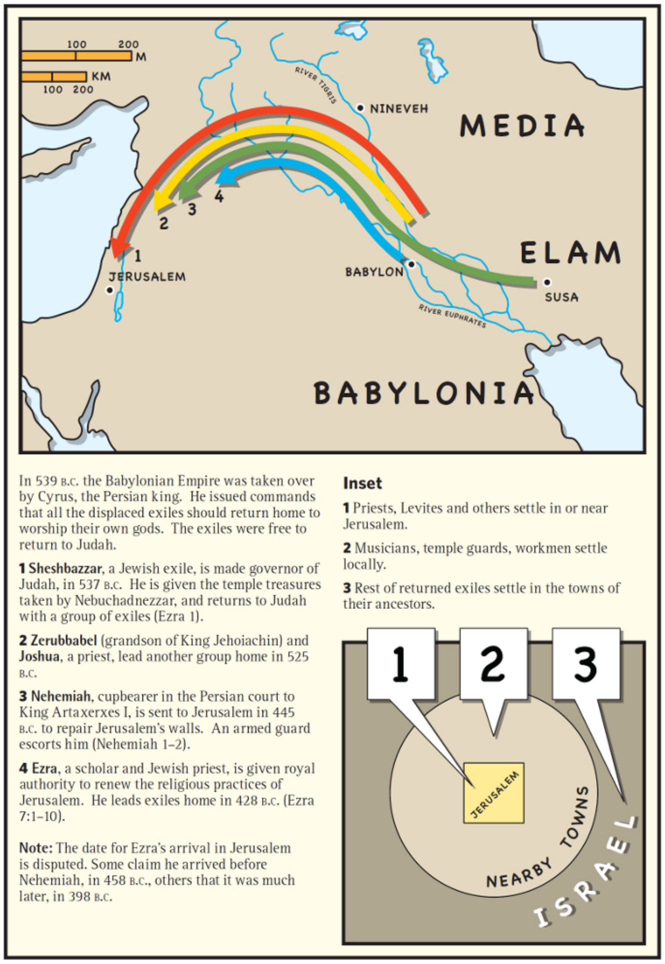
The Book of Ezra also teaches a valuable lesson about the providence of God. Several different Persian kings are mentioned in this book. Each king played a significant role in returning God's Covenant People to their homeland and helping them restore the temple as the center of their religious life. This shows that God can use pagans as well as believers to work His ultimate will in the lives of His people.

Special Considerations. Many scholars believe the Jewish people in Babylonia must have numbered many times the 50,000 or so who chose to return to Jerusalem with the first group under Zerubbabel (2:64–67). This indicates that most of them probably had become comfortable with their lives in these foreign lands. Or perhaps the certainties of their present existence were more appealing than the uncertainties of life in Jerusalem—a city most of them had never seen.

Some Bible readers are bothered by Ezra's treatment of the pagan women whom the Jewish men had married (10:10–19). How could he be so cruel as to insist that these wives be "put away" (divorced) with no means of support? His actions must be understood in light of the drastic situation that faced the Jewish community in Jerusalem following the Exile. Only a small remnant of the Covenant People had returned, and it was important for them to keep themselves from pagan idolatry and foreign cultural influences at all costs. Ezra must have realized, too, that this was one of the problems which had led to their downfall and captivity as a people in the first place. Yet even the horrors of defeat and exile by the Babylonians had failed to teach the people a lesson. Ezra was determined to stamp out the problem this time before it became a widespread practice among God’s Covenant People.

Also see EZRA.

COMING HOME



In 539 B.C. the Babylonian Empire was taken over by Cyrus, the Persian king. He issued commands that all the displaced exiles should return home to worship their own gods. The exiles were free to return to Judah.

1 Sheshbazzar, a Jewish exile, is made governor of Judah, in 537 B.C. He is given the temple treasures taken by Nebuchadnezzar, and returns to Judah with a group of exiles (Ezra 1).

2 Zerubbabel (grandson of King Jehoiachin) and Joshua, a priest, lead another group home in 525 B.C.

3 Nehemiah, cupbearer in the Persian court to King Artaxerxes I, is sent to Jerusalem in 445 B.C. to repair Jerusalem’s walls. An armed guard escorts him (Nehemiah 1–2).

4 Ezra, a scholar and Jewish priest, is given royal authority to renew the religious practices of Jerusalem. He leads exiles home in 428 B.C. (Ezra 7:1–10).

Note: The date for Ezra’s arrival in Jerusalem is disputed. Some claim he arrived before Nehemiah, in 458 B.C., others that it was much later, in 398 B.C.

Inset

1 Priests, Levites and others settle in or near Jerusalem.

2 Musicians, temple guards, workmen settle locally.

3 Rest of returned exiles settle in the towns of their ancestors.

Ezra: A Study and Teaching Outline

Part One: The Restoration of the Temple of God (1:1—6:22)

I. The First Return to Jerusalem Under Zerubbabel 1:1—2:70

A. Decree of Cyrus 1:1–4
B. Gifts from Israel and Cyrus 1:5–11
C. Census of the Returning People 2:1–63
  1. The People of Known Descent 2:1–58
  2. The People of Unknown Descent 2:59–63
D. The Return Completed 2:64–70
  1. The People Who Returned 2:64–67
  2. The Gifts the People Gave 2:68–70

II. The Construction of the Temple 3:1—6:22

A. Construction of the Temple Foundation 3:1–13
  1. Spiritual Preparation of the People 3:1–6
  2. Completion of the Temple Foundation 3:7–13
B. Interruption of the Temple Construction 4:1–24
  1. Present Opposition Under Darius 4:1–5
  2. Later Opposition Under Ahasuerus 4:6
  3. Later Opposition Under Artaxerxes 4:7–23
  4. Present Interruption of Construction Under Darius 4:24
C. Completion of the Temple 5:1—6:18
  1. Resumption of the Temple Construction 5:1–2
  2. Opposition to the Temple Construction 5:3–17
  3. Confirmation of the Temple Construction 6:1–12
  4. Completion of the Temple 6:13–15
  5. Dedication of the Temple 6:16–18
D. Celebration of the Passover 6:19–22

Part Two: The Reformation of the People of God (7:1—10:44)

I. The Second Return to Jerusalem Under Ezra 7:1—8:36

A. The Decree of Artaxerxes 7:1–28
  1. Ezra’s Qualifications 7:1–10
  2. Artaxerxes’ Letter 7:11–26
  3. Ezra’s Response 7:27–28
B. Census of the Returning Israelites 8:1–14
C. Spiritual Preparation for the Return 8:15–23
  1. Acquisition of Temple Leadership 8:15–20
  2. Proclamation of a Fast 8:21–23
D. The Return Is Completed 8:24–36

II. The Restoration of the People 9:1—10:44

A. Israel Intermarries 9:1–2
B. Ezra Intercedes with God 9:3–15
  1. Lamentation of Ezra 9:3–4
  2. Confession of Ezra 9:5–15
C. Reformation of Israel 10:1–44
  1. Israel Laments 10:1–2
  2. The Covenant Is Instituted 10:3–5

3. Solution for Intermarriage 10:6–44

EZRAH [EZ ruh]—a form of EZRA.

EZRAHITE [EZ ruh hite]—the title of ETHAN (1 Kin. 4:31) and HEMAN (Psalm 88 title). Ezrahites were descendants of Zerah, head of a Judahite family (1 Chr. 2:6).

EZRI [EZ rye] ([God is] my help)—a superintendent of farm workers in David’s court (1 Chr. 27:26).

F

FABLE—a story in which animals and plants speak and act like human beings—as in the well-known Aesop's Fables. The Old Testament contains at least three examples of the fable: (1) Jotham's story of the trees (Judg. 9:8–15)—a satire on the foolishness of choosing an unfit king; (2) Jehoash's story of the thistle and the cedar (2 Kin. 14:9)-a condemnation of Amaziah's presumption; and (3) Ezekiel's allegory of the two eagles and the cedar (Ezek. 17:1–24). The word "fable" appears in the New Testament as a translation of the Greek word mythos (1 Tim. 1:4). The word is used in a negative sense, as something to be avoided. Most modern translations translate mythos as "myth" (NRSV, REB, NIV)-an untruth designed to deceive and mislead.

FACE—that part of the human body that contains a person's unique, identifying characteristics; a term used in a symbolic way in the Bible to express the presence of God. In the Garden of Eden, Adam and Eve "hid themselves from the presence [literally, face] of the Lord God" (Gen. 3:8). Jacob said, "I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved" (Gen. 32:30). God's presence and glory have been revealed fully in the face, or the person, of Jesus Christ (2 Cor. 4:6). In the future many things that are now puzzling to Christian believers will be made clear: "For now we see in a mirror, dimly, but then face to face" (1 Cor. 13:12).

FACES, BREAD OF—word for SHOWBREAD, an UNLEAVENED BREAD placed in the tabernacle every Sabbath to symbolize God's Presence (NIV, REB) among His people (Ex. 25:30; 2 Chr. 4:19).

FAIR—a word with several different meanings in the Bible:

1. Lovely or beautiful (Song 1:15).
2. Free from self-interest or prejudice (Ezek. 18:25, 29); honest (Prov. 1:3).
3. Clear and open, as in "fair weather" (Matt. 16:2).

FAIR HAVENS—a harbor on the south coast of Crete (see Map 8, C–2), near the city of Lasea (Acts 27:8–12). This harbor is virtually unprotected in the winter. This is why the ship carrying Paul to Rome left Fair Havens for Phoenix, a safer harbor to the west.

FAITH—a belief in or confident attitude toward God, involving commitment to His will for one's life.

According to Hebrews 11, faith was already present in the experience of many people in the Old Testament as a key element of their spiritual lives. In this chapter, the various heroes of the Old Testament (Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, and Moses) are described as living by faith. In addition, the Old Testament itself makes the same point. Abraham "believed in the Lord" (Gen. 15:6); the Israelites "believed" (Ex. 4:31; 14:31); and the prophet Habakkuk taught that "the just shall live by his faith" (Hab. 2:4).

In the New Testament, "faith" covers various levels of personal commitment. Mere intellectual agreement to a truth is illustrated in James 2:19, where even demons are said to believe that there is one God. Obviously, however, they are not saved by this type of belief. Genuine saving faith is a personal attachment to Christ, best thought of as a combination of two ideas—reliance on Christ and commitment to Him. Saving faith involves personally depending on the finished work of Christ's sacrifice as the only basis for forgiveness of sin and entrance into heaven. But saving faith is also a personal commitment of one's life to following Christ in obedience to His commands: "I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep what I have committed to Him until that Day" (2 Tim. 1:12).

Faith is part of the Christian life from beginning to end. As the instrument by which the gift of salvation is received (Eph. 2:8–9), faith is thus distinct from the basis of salvation, which is grace, and from the outworking of salvation, which is good works. The apostle Paul declared that salvation is through faith, not through keeping the law (Gal. 2:16).

Finally, in the New Testament, faith can refer to the teachings of the Bible, the faith that was once for all delivered to the saints (Jude 3). In modern times, faith has been weakened in meaning so that some people use it to mean self-confidence. But in the Bible, true faith is confidence in God or Christ, not in oneself.

FAITHFULNESS—dependability, loyalty, and stability, particularly as it describes God in His relationship to human believers. The faithfulness of God and His Word is a constant theme in the Bible. It is particularly prominent in Psalms 89 and 119. God is "the faithful God who keeps covenant" (Deut. 7:9) and chooses Israel (Is. 49:7); great is His faithfulness (Lam. 3:23).

It is not surprising that this aspect of God's nature should also belong to the Messiah, who would be clothed with faithfulness (Is. 11:5) and who is described as the Faithful one (Rev. 19:11), the "faithful witness" (Rev. 1:5; 3:14), and the "faithful High Priest" (Heb. 2:17; 3:2).

God's faithfulness is the source of the Christian's deliverance from temptation (1 Cor. 10:13), assurance of salvation (Heb. 10:23), and forgiveness of sins (1 John 1:9). He is faithful to His children because He is first of all faithful to Himself (2 Tim. 2:13).

God's faithfulness should be so deeply reflected in the lives of His people (Gal. 5:22) that they can be called simply "the faithful" (Ps. 31:23). The Bible speaks of the faithfulness of Paul (1 Cor. 7:25), Abraham (Neh. 9:8), and Moses (Heb. 3:5).

Faithfulness is also expected in Christian believers. Faithfulness to one's fellow man is seen especially in relation to fulfilling an office. A steward must be found faithful (1 Cor. 4:2), just as Daniel and other persons in the Bible exercised their faithfulness toward God (Dan. 6:4; 2 Tim. 2:2).

FALCON (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

FALL, THE—the disobedience and sin of Adam and Eve that caused them to lose the state of innocence in which they had been created. This event plunged them and all of mankind into a state of sin and corruption. The account of the Fall is found in Genesis 3.

Adam and Eve were created by God in a state of sinless perfection so they could glorify God, reflecting His righteousness on the earth, and enjoy fellowship and communion with Him. Their calling was to exercise dominion, or control, over God's creation through their own labors and those of their offspring in faithful response to the word of God. As a specific test of this loyalty, God commanded them not to eat the fruit of "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil" (Gen. 2:17). Adam and Eve were to demonstrate their willingness to live "by every word that proceeds from the mouth of the LORD” (Deut. 8:3; Matt. 4:4). God warned them clearly that their disobedience would result in death.

The fall from their original state of innocence occurred when Satan approached Eve through the serpent, who tempted her to eat of the forbidden fruit. Satan called into question the truthfulness of what God had spoken about the tree and its significance. He urged Eve to discover, through trial and error, whether it was in her best interest to do what God had forbidden. Eve’s sin did not consist of being tempted but in believing and acting on Satan’s lie. Her rejection of God’s command occurred when she ate the forbidden fruit and persuaded her husband to do the same thing. The term “Fall” should not be interpreted to suggest that their sin was accidental. The temptation was purposeful, and their submission to it involved their willing consent.

The immediate consequence of the Fall was ultimately death, symbolized by their loss of fellowship with God. For the first time, Adam and Eve experienced fear in the presence of the Lord God; they hid when He approached (Gen. 3:8–10). Because of their unbelief and rebellion, they were driven from the garden that God had provided as their home. From that time on, people would experience pain and encounter resistance as they worked at the task of earning their daily bread. Physical death, with the decay of the body, is not a natural process. It entered the human experience as God’s curse upon sin.

Adam and Eve did not sin simply as private persons but as the representatives of all members of the human race. Their sin is the sin of all, and all persons receive from them a corrupt nature. It is this nature that stands behind all personal violations of the Lord’s commandments. For this reason, the fall of Adam is the fall of the human race. The apostle Paul thought of Christ as the last Adam (1 Cor. 15:45) who would rebuild the old, sinful Adam through His plan of redemption and salvation. “As in Adam all die, even so in Christ all shall be made alive” (1 Cor. 15:22).

FALLOW DEER (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

FALLOW GROUND—farmland allowed to lie idle during a growing season to allow the fertility of the soil to be restored (Hos. 10:12).

FALSE CHRISTS—persons who pretend to be Christ but who actually represent all that Christ opposes (Matt. 24:24; Mark 13:22). False Christs are similar to ANTICHRIST and his prophets, described in the Epistles of John (1 John 2:18; 2 John 7). These false Christs take their place in the long line of false prophets who have existed since Old Testament days.

FALSE PROPHET, THE—a religious leader of the end times who, along with the DRAGON (the devil) and the BEAST (the Antichrist), forms an unholy trinity in opposition to God (Rev. 16:13; 20:10). The Book of Revelation speaks of two beasts—the Antichrist (Rev. 13:1–10), a political ruler who sets up an evil empire in opposition to the kingdom of God; and the false prophet, a religious leader inspired by Satan who deceives the world into worshiping the Antichrist (Rev. 13:11–12). But they will be overthrown by Christ and cast into the lake of fire (Rev. 19:20).

FALSE PROPHETS—those who falsely claim to utter revelations that come from God, to foretell future events, or to have God's power to produce miracles, signs, and wonders. In the Bible, false prophets fell into three general categories: (1) those who worshiped false gods and served idols; (2) those who falsely claimed to receive messages from the Lord; and (3) those who wandered from the truth and ceased to be true prophets.

In the Old Testament, Moses spoke of the punishment of those who betrayed the faith. He ordered that any prophet who advocated the worship of other gods be stoned to death (Deut. 13:1–18). During the reign of King Ahab of Israel, false prophets were officially approved by Ahab and his queen, Jezebel. The writer of 1 Kings speaks of "the four hundred and fifty prophets of Baal, and the four hundred prophets of Asherah, who eat at Jezebel's table" (1 Kin. 18:19). Later, 400 false prophets spoke words they knew Ahab the king wanted to hear and assured him of victory at Ramoth Gilead. Micaiah, the true prophet, who warned Ahab of defeat and disaster, was put in prison on a diet of bread and water (1 Kin. 22:1–28).

A recurring characteristic of the false prophets is that they often are found in the employment of the powerful and that they are careful to speak pleasing, positive, and flattering words to their employers.

Jeremiah condemned the false prophets who were always saying, “Peace, peace!” when there was no peace (Jer. 6:14; 8:11). The false prophets preached a popular but false message: there would be victory against Babylon (Jer. 28:1–17). Jeremiah said, “The prophets prophesy falsely . . . and My people love to have it so” (Jer. 5:31). Even though Jeremiah was a true prophet of the Lord, the false prophets were rewarded by the king and Jeremiah was cast into a dungeon (Jer. 38:6).

In the New Testament, Jesus said, “Woe to you when all men speak well of you, for so did their fathers to the false prophets” (Luke 6:26). He warned his disciples to beware of false prophets “who come . . . in sheep’s clothing, but inwardly they are ravenous wolves” (Matt. 7:15). When speaking of the signs of the times and the end of the age, He also said, “Then many false prophets will rise up and deceive many. For false christs and false prophets will arise and show great signs and wonders, so as to deceive, if possible, even the elect” (Matt. 24:11, 24).

Later, the false prophet Bar-Jesus, also called Elymas the sorcerer, was smitten with blindness by the apostle Paul because he tried to turn the proconsul Sergius Paulus away from the Christian faith (Acts 13:6–12).

FAMILIAR SPIRITS (see MAGIC, SORCERY, AND DIVINATION).

FAMILY—a group of persons related by marriage and blood ties and generally living together in the same household. In the Western world, the family traditionally consists of a man and his wife and their children. In biblical times, however, the family units were often much larger than the primary family, especially if the man was wealthy and could therefore have more than one wife.

In the ancient world, the extended family could include any or all of the following relationships: the man and his wife or wives; his CONCUBINES or female slaves; his sons and unmarried daughters; the wives of the sons; grandchildren; aged parents and grandparents. Others living in the same home and considered as part of the family could include servants and their children and aliens, or strangers, who attached themselves to the family for a time before moving to another location.

The man making the decisions for the family was designated as “father,” although he may not have been the oldest male in the group.

These family groups, therefore, could be very large. When Jacob's "family" moved to Egypt from the Promised Land, he was accompanied by at least sixty-six people (Gen. 46:26).

God's Design for the Family. The concept of the family as the basic social unit reaches back into the CREATION account found in Genesis 1–2. A man was to be the husband of one wife and was to leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife.

However, not everyone in the Old Testament measured up to God's ideal. Sometimes a man married more than one wife (Gen. 4:19). Solomon had 700 wives and 300 concubines (1 Kin. 11:3). In addition, the family system of the Old Testament, with the man serving as the absolute ruling authority, discouraged a man from leaving his parents; he and his wife usually lived with his parents in the same dwelling.

After God created Adam, He declared, "It is not good that man should be alone" (Gen. 2:18). Then He created woman and united the couple; and they became "one flesh" (Gen. 2:24). Thus the family was designed by God to provide companionship for the various members of the family. In addition, the institution of marriage was approved and sanctioned by Jesus (Matt. 19:4–6).

God's ideal for the family is that it be a harmonious unit, where love for God and neighbor are instilled into each member (Deut. 6:6–9). If the couple are divided, especially over religious beliefs, they can never have the harmony and sense of common purpose that God desires. Therefore, Old Testament believers were instructed not to marry foreigners who would hinder their faith and bring strife to the marriage (Ex. 34:13–16; Deut. 7:3–4). Likewise, the apostle Paul commanded the New Testament believers, "Do not be unequally yoked together with unbelievers" (2 Cor. 6:14).

The Bible describes situations where a man went contrary to the will of God and married an unbeliever. A prime example is Solomon, who disobeyed God's commandment and married 700 wives (1 Kin. 11:3). The tragedy of the final years of his life is summarized in one sentence: "For it was so, when Solomon was old, that his wives turned his heart after other gods; and his heart was not loyal to the LORD his God, as was the heart of his father David" (1 Kin. 11:4).

From time to time in the history of the nation of Israel, the very existence of the country was threatened because of the breakdown of the home. The prophet Micah described the decayed situation of his day when he proclaimed: “Do not trust in a friend; do not put your confidence in a companion; guard the doors of your mouth from her who lies in your bosom. For son dishonors father, daughter rises against her mother, daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law; a man’s enemies are the men of his own house” (Mic. 7:5–6). Ezra took steps to remedy the family problems of his day (Ezra 9–10), and the prophet Malachi condemned the men of his generation for being faithless to the wives of their youth (Mal. 2:14–15).

The Exalted Position of the Father. The social structure described in the Old Testament is known as a “patriarchal” society. The word patriarchy means “the rule of the father.”

The father commanded a high position in the family of Old Testament times; his word was law. In addition, one of the Hebrew words translated “husband” means “lord,” “master,” “owner,” or “possessor” (Gen. 18:12; Hos. 2:16). Because of his position, shared to some degree with his wife, a man expected to be treated as royalty by the rest of his family. The fifth commandment carries this idea of the importance of the parents one step further when it states, “Honor your father and your mother” (Ex. 20:12). The word “honor” often refers to one’s response to God. In other words, this commandment suggests that the parents should receive a recognition similar to that given to God.

Along with the honor of the position as head of the family, the father was expected to assume certain responsibilities that can be classified into three categories: spiritual, social, and economic.

First of all, the father was responsible for the spiritual well-being of the family, as well as of the individual members of the family. In the earliest ages, the father functioned as the priest of his family, sacrificing on their behalf (Gen. 12:8; Job 1:5). Later, when a priesthood was established in Israel and the layman no longer functioned at an altar, the father’s spiritual role was redefined. He continued to be the religious leader in the home. This involved the training of the children in godliness (Ex. 12:3, 26–27; Prov. 22:6; Eph. 6:4).

Socially, the father’s responsibility was to see that no one took advantage of any member of his family. Those who were not protected by a father were truly disadvantaged persons. The two most common categories were widows and fatherless children. Four specific duties of a father toward his son, as stated in the Jewish writings, were to have the son circumcised; to pass on his inheritance to his firstborn son; to find his son a wife; and to teach his son a trade.

Economically, the father was to provide for the needs of the various members of his family. From time to time, however, a lazy person failed to provide for his family. Conscientious men sought to mock the lazy man, shaming him to do what was expected of him (Prov. 6:6–11). The apostle Paul rebuked those who considered themselves Christian but who did not look after the needs of their families (1 Tim. 5:8).

From this background we can more fully appreciate God as the believer's Father. He knows all about His children, even numbering the hairs on their heads (Matt. 10:30). He protects His children and rescues them when they get into trouble (Is. 63:15–16). He teaches them the way they should go (Hos. 11:1–3) and supplies all of their needs (Matt. 6:33). In turn, the Father expects honor from His child, although He does not always receive it (Mal. 1:6). Jesus sought to instill reverence and honor in the disciples when He taught them to pray: "Our Father in heaven" (Matt. 6:9–10).

The Clan. Each extended family was part of a larger group that was called a "clan." Often the male members of clans numbered into the hundreds (Ezra 8:1–14). The members of the clan considered themselves to be relatives of the other members of the clan, because the members traced their lineage back to a common ancestor.

Each male member within the clan had one person designated as his go'el, or kinsman-redeemer. There were four specific tasks that the redeemer was to perform as his help was needed: (1) If his kinsman sold his property to pay his debts, the kinsman redeemed or bought back the property (Lev. 25:25; Ruth 4:1–6; Jer. 32:6–15); (2) the person who was captured and enslaved or who sold himself into slavery had every right to expect his kinsman to redeem him and set him free (Lev. 25:47–49); (3) if a person died childless, the redeemer married the dead man's widow and raised up a son to carry on the family line and to honor the deceased person, in a custom known as LEVIRATE MARRIAGE (Deut. 25:5–10); (4) if the person was murdered, his redeemer tracked down the killer and evened the score. In the passages that describe this custom, go'el is translated as "avenger of blood" (Deut. 19:12).

The term “kinsman-redeemer” is used of God to express His intimate relationship with His people (Is. 41:14; 43:14; 44:24). He is their “next of kin” who ransoms them from bondage (Is. 43:1–3); He pays the price to set them free. Paul reminded the believers at Corinth that God had bought them at a price; therefore, they were to glorify God (1 Cor. 6:19–20).

The Family of God. Biblical writers used other analogies from the family to describe various aspects of the gospel. To be brought into God’s family, the believer must be “born from above” or “born again” (John 3:3, 5). Because a person has God as his Father, he must realize that other believers are his “fathers,” “mothers,” “brothers,” and “sisters” (1 Tim. 5:1–2). The body of believers known as the church is also referred to as the “household of God” (Eph. 2:19) and the “household of faith” (Gal. 6:10). In addition, the concepts of ADOPTION and INHERITANCE are used to describe the position of believers in God’s family (Gal. 4:5; 1 Pet. 1:4).

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

- In biblical times the family was a closely knit group, the grandparents often living with their children and grandchildren in the same household.

FAMINE—the lack of a supply of food or water. This word occurs often in the Bible in both literal and figurative senses. Since the line between famine and plenty in Palestine depends mainly on the rains coming at the right time and in the proper supply, famine was an ever-present threat. In the face of famine, Abraham migrated to Egypt (Gen. 12:10), Isaac went to Gerar in Philistine territory (Gen. 26:1), and Jacob moved to Egypt (Gen. 41–47).

The most famous famine recorded in the Bible is the seven-year famine in Egypt foretold by Joseph in interpreting Pharaoh's dream. Extending even into Canaan, it eventually brought the rest of Joseph's family to Egypt (Gen. 41–47; Ps. 105:16). During another famine Elijah was kept alive by the widow of Zarephath (1 Kin. 17:8; Luke 4:25–26).

Drought and conditions of war brought famine to besieged cities (1 Kin. 18:2; Ezek. 6:12). Pathetic descriptions of famine conditions include people's resorting to cannibalism (2 Kin. 6:28–29), cries of hungry children (Lam. 4:4), and the fainting of people in the streets (Is. 51:20).

Famine was also one of the punishments sent by the Lord upon His people because of their sins (Is. 51:20; Ezek. 14:21). A famine in the time of David was caused by Saul's mistreatment of the Gibeonites (2 Sam. 21:1). A striking description of famine conditions was given by the prophet Amos in his phrase, "cleanness of teeth" (Amos 4:6)—clean because there was no food to foul them.

A famine is one of the signs of the approaching fall of Jerusalem (Matt. 24:7), and one of the plagues coming upon "Babylon," as recorded in Revelation 18:8.

Using figurative language, the prophet Amos described a famine of an entirely different sort—not one of lack of food or water, but a famine of hearing the word of the Lord (Amos 8:11). Those who had refused to hear the prophets would have no prophets to guide them in the perilous days when God's judgment would fall upon His people.

FAN (see TOOLS OF THE BIBLE).

FANNER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

FARM, FARMING—the practice of growing livestock and crops for food or commercial purposes. Although the word "farm" occurs only in Matthew 22:5, farming was an important occupation in Bible times. Practically every family owned a piece of land in Israel, and many families farmed a small area of their own.

Outside the cities, most Israelites lived in villages rather than on farms. Cultivated land usually was outside the village, situated near the water supply or on western or northern slopes where rainfall was greatest. Crops grown included wheat, barley, grapes, olives, and figs.

Farm animals lived in the houses with the families. All but the poorest owned at least one ox or donkey as a work animal. Cattle, sheep, and goats were common, providing milk products as well as skins for clothes. Richer families and royal estates employed farm managers and workers (1 Chr. 27:25–31) and hired laborers for special tasks, particularly at harvest time (Matt. 20:1–16).

Frequent difficulties, such as hilly ground, stony soil, and unpredictable rainfall, did not make farming easy. But there were certain rewards, such as the joys of shearing animals and gathering the crops at harvest time (1 Sam. 25:2–8; Is. 9:3).

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

• Wind, rain, and careless farming methods have caused extensive erosion such as this in Palestine.

FARMER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

FAST, FASTING—going without food or drink voluntarily, generally for religious purposes. Fasting, however, could also be done for other reasons. It was sometimes done as a sign of distress, grief, or repentance. The law of Moses specifically required fasting for only one occasion—the DAY OF ATONEMENT. This custom resulted in calling this day “the day of fasting” (Jer. 36:6) or “the Fast” (Acts 27:9).

Moses did not eat bread or drink water during the forty days and forty nights he was on Mount Sinai receiving the law (Ex. 34:28). Voluntary group fasts (not specified in the law) were engaged in during time of war, such as when the Benjamites defeated the other Israelites (Judg. 20:26), and when Samuel gathered the people to Mizpah during the Philistine wars (1 Sam. 7:6). It was at a called fast that witnesses accused Naboth, setting the stage for his death (1 Kin. 21:9, 12).

Jehoshaphat called for a fast in all Israel when opposed by the Moabites and Ammonites (2 Chr. 20:3). Reacting to Jonah's preaching, the men of Nineveh, at the king's order, fasted and put on sackcloth (Jon. 3:5). Those about to return with Ezra from the captivity fasted at the river of Ahava because of the dangers faced on the journey (Ezra 8:21, 23). Esther and the Jews of Shushan (or Susa) fasted when faced with the destruction planned by Haman (Esth. 4:3, 16; 9:31).

In times of grief, people fasted. A seven-day fast was held when the bones of Saul and his sons were buried (1 Sam. 31:13; 1 Chr. 10:12). Fasting was practiced during the seventy years of the exilic period on the fifth and the seventh months, the date the siege of Jerusalem began and the date when Jerusalem fell to the Babylonians (Zech. 7:5).

Fasting was practiced by individuals in times of distress. David fasted after hearing that Saul and Jonathan were dead (2 Sam. 1:12). Nehemiah fasted and prayed upon learning that Jerusalem had remained in ruins since its destruction (Neh. 1:4). Darius, the king of Persia, fasted all night after placing Daniel in the lions' den (Dan. 6:18).

Going without food or water was not automatically effective in accomplishing the desires of those who fasted. In the prophet Isaiah's time, people complained that they had fasted and that God had not responded favorably (Is. 58:3–4). The prophet declared that the external show was futile. The fast that the Lord requires is to loose the bonds of wickedness, undo the heavy burdens, feed the hungry, shelter the poor, and clothe the naked (Is. 58:5–7).

Fasting also occurs in the New Testament. Anna at the temple "served God with fastings and prayers night and day" (Luke 2:37). John the Baptist led his disciples to fast (Mark 2:18). Jesus fasted forty days and forty nights before His temptation (Matt. 4:2). Using a marriage-feast comparison, however, Jesus insisted that fasting was not suitable for His disciples as long as He, the Bridegroom, was with them (Matt. 9:14–15; Mark 2:18–20; Luke 5:33–35).

Cornelius was fasting at the time of his vision (Acts 10:30). The church in Antioch fasted (Acts 13:2) and sent Paul and Barnabas off on the first missionary journey with fasting and prayer (Acts 13:3). Paul and Barnabas prayed with fasting at the appointment of elders in the churches (Acts 14:23). Paul suggested that husbands and wives might abstain from sexual intercourse for a while to give themselves to fasting and prayer (1 Cor. 7:5).

FAT—the richest part of an animal eaten as food or used as a sacrifice. In the ancient world, the fatty portions of the animal were eaten as a delicacy. While the fat of an animal offered to the Lord as a sacrifice could not be eaten, Deuteronomy 12:15–24 seems to imply that the fat of an animal slaughtered for food could be eaten.

In Old Testament times, being fat was considered a sign of personal success (Deut. 31:20; Prov. 15:30; Jer. 5:28). To a people for whom getting enough to eat was a constant problem, fat was a sign of abundance. It is easy to see why fat was a frequent symbol of excellence and desirability in the Old Testament. The spies were sent into Canaan to see if the land was “rich (Num. 13:20; fat, KJV) or poor.”

Because of the high value placed on fat, it was only right that the fat of the sacrificial animal—the best part—belonged only to the Lord (Lev. 3:16).

FATHER—the male parent of a household in Bible times, charged with the responsibility of providing for the family and giving religious instruction to the children. Also see FAMILY.

FATHER, GOD THE (see GOD, NAMES OF).

FATHER-IN-LAW—the father of a person’s husband or wife. The classic example of a father-in-law in the Bible is Jethro, father-in-law of Moses (Ex. 3:1). When Moses fled from Egypt to Midian, he married one of Jethro’s daughters and was welcomed into his family (Ex. 2:21).

FATHERLESS (see ORPHAN).

FATHER’S HOUSE—a way of designating families or households among the Israelites, sometimes referring to a family’s physical dwelling place (Gen. 24:23), the family itself (Gen. 12:1), a specific tribe (Gen. 24:40), or the entire nation (Neh. 1:6).

FATHOM (see WEIGHTS AND MEASURES).

FATLING—a grain-fed lamb, calf, or kid raised for meat (1 Sam. 15:9). Because of the expense of feed, these animals were very valuable in Bible times and were probably a luxury not available to the poor. Also see FATTED.

FATTED—grain-fed livestock, probably grown mostly for use as sacrificial animals in the worship system of ancient Israel (2 Sam. 6:13; fattened, NIV; 1 Kin. 4:23). On special occasions, these prime animals, also called FATLINGS, were also used for food. When the prodigal son returned home, his father killed the fatted calf for a festive meal to celebrate the occasion (Luke 15:23, 24).

FAWN (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

FEAR—a feeling of reverence, awe, and respect, or an unpleasant emotion caused by a sense of danger. Fear may be directed toward God or humankind, and it may be either healthy or harmful.

A healthy fear is reverence or respect. The Bible teaches that children are to respect their parents (Lev. 19:3), wives are to respect their husbands (Eph. 5:33), and slaves are to respect their masters (Eph. 6:5). The Scriptures also declare that "the fear of the LORD is the beginning of knowledge" (Prov. 1:7) as well as "the beginning of wisdom" (Prov. 9:10).

A harmful fear is a sense of terror or dread. Believers are instructed not to fear human beings (Matt. 10:28; Phil. 1:28), because they cannot ultimately harm us. Wicked men, however, are constantly fearing other people, especially the righteous (Prov. 28:1; Matt. 14:5; Rom. 13:3–4). Such fear causes them to act deceitfully in an attempt to hide their sins (2 Sam. 11; Matt. 28:4–15).

On the other hand, the unbeliever has every reason to be panic-stricken at thoughts of God, for he stands condemned before Him (Matt. 10:28; John 3:18). And yet, this kind of fear of God does not often lead to repentance. It normally leads to a feeble attempt to hide from God (Gen. 3:8; Rev. 6:15–17) or worse, to a denial of God's existence and His claim on a person's life (Ps. 14:1; Rom. 1:18–28).

FEASTS AND FESTIVALS—the holy convocations, the regular assemblies of the people of Israel for worship of the Lord.

The feasts and festivals of the nation were scheduled at specific times in the annual calendar and they were both civil and religious in nature. Some feasts and festivals marked the beginning or the end of the agricultural year, while others commemorated historic events in the life of the nation. All of the feasts were marked by thanksgiving and joyous feasting.

Meat, a scarce item in the daily fare of the people, was eaten at these affairs, and wine was also consumed. The fat and the blood of the animals were reserved for sacrifice to God. The libation (or offering) of wine may have been drunk by the worshipers as part of the meal ceremony. First the blood and the fat were offered to God; then sometimes the worshipers ate.

The feasts and festivals of Israel were community observances. The poor, the widow, the orphan, the Levite, and the sojourner or foreigner were invited to most of the feasts. The accounts of these feasts suggest a potluck type of meal, with some parts of the meal reserved for the priests and the rest given to those who gathered at the temple or the altar for worship. One of the feasts, Passover, originated in the home and later was transferred to the temple. The rest were apparently observed at specific times during the year and in designated places.

The Hebrew word for "pilgrimage" seems to be reserved mostly for the three great annual feasts: the Feast of Unleavened Bread, the Feast of Weeks, and the Feast of Tabernacles. These feasts are discussed in Leviticus 23. Every Israelite male was expected to observe them.

The religious pilgrimage from the various towns and cities to the temple or to the LEVITICAL CITIES scattered throughout the land became annual events. This yearly event may also have progressed from an annual "pilgrimage" early in Israel's history to a "processional" at the temple or at the Levitical center in later times. In all the feasts and festivals the nation of Israel remembered its past and renewed its faith in the Lord who created and sustained His people.

Following is a complete list of all the feasts and festivals observed by the people of Israel. Some were annual events, while others occurred weekly or once every several years.

Atonement, Day of. The tenth day of the seventh month was set aside as a day of public fasting and humiliation. On this day the nation of Israel sought atonement for its sins (Lev. 23:27; 16:29; Num. 29:7). This day fell in the month equivalent to our August, and it was preceded by special Sabbaths (Lev. 23:24). The only fasting period required by the Law (Lev. 16:29; 23:31), the Day of Atonement was a recognition of people's inability to make any atonement for their sins. It was a solemn, holy day accompanied by elaborate ritual (Lev. 16; Heb. 10:1–10).

The high priest who officiated on this day first sanctified himself by taking a ceremonial bath and putting on white garments (Lev. 16:4). Then he had to make atonement for himself and other priests by sacrificing a bullock (Num. 29:8). God was enthroned on the MERCY SEAT in the sanctuary, but no person could approach it except through the mediation of the high priest, who offered the blood of sacrifice.

After sacrificing a bullock, the high priest chose a goat for a sin offering and sacrificed it. Then he sprinkled its blood on and about the mercy seat (Lev. 16:12, 14, 15). Finally the scapegoat bearing the sins of the people was sent into the wilderness (Lev. 16:20–22). This scapegoat symbolized the pardon for sin brought through the sacrifice (Gal. 3:12; 2 Cor. 5:21).

Booths, Feast of (see Tabernacles, Feast of).

Dedication, Feast of. This feast, also known as Hanukkah and the Feast of Lights, is mentioned only once in the Bible (John 10:22). It developed in the era of the MACCABEES and celebrated the cleansing of the temple after its desecration by ANTIOCHUS; EPIPHANES. The Feast of Dedication is observed on the twenty-fifth day of the ninth month.

Hanukkah (see Dedication, Feast of).

Harvest, Feast of (see Weeks, Feast of).

Jubilee, Year of. The references to the Year of Jubilee in the Bible include Leviticus 23:15–16; 25:8–55; 27:14–24, Jeremiah 34:8, 14–17; and Isaiah 61:1–2.

The Jubilee Year began with the blowing of the RAM'S HORN. It took place after seven sabbatical years, or every forty-nine years; and the fiftieth year was thereby set aside as the Year of Jubilee. Once the Israelites entered and possessed the Promised Land, it became their obligation to observe this year.

The Year of Jubilee was a special year in family renewal. A man who was bound to another as a slave or indentured servant was set free and returned to his own family. If any members of his family were also bound, the entire family was set free. Houses and lands could also be redeemed in the Year of Jubilee. If they were not redeemed within a year, however, they became the permanent possession of the previous owner. The land owned by Levites was exempted from this law; they could redeem their land at any time.

The rights and privileges extended by the Israelites to other Israelites did not extend to non-Israelites. Servants obtained by Israelites from the non-Israelite world were permanent slaves. And property purchased from non-Israelites was not redeemable. The law of the Year of Jubilee favored the Israelites.

Jeremiah 34:8, 14–17 warned Judah for first practicing the Jubilee and then taking away people’s liberty. Apparently, those who gained wealth and power in Israel did not observe this festival willingly. The inscription on the Liberty Bell in Philadelphia—“Proclaim liberty throughout the land to all the inhabitants thereof” (Lev. 25:10)—is a modern application of the Year of Jubilee.

Lights, Feast of (see Dedication, Feast of).

New Moon. The references in the Bible to the New Moon celebration include Exodus 40:2, 17, Numbers 10:10; 28:1–10; 11–15, and Psalm 104:19. The law specified that two bullocks, one ram, seven lambs, and one kid were to be offered in connection with this celebration. Grain mixed with oil accompanied the offerings; a trumpet blast introduced this feast. The sins committed and not expiated during the previous month were covered by the offerings of the New Moon.

Passover and the Feast of Unleavened Bread. References to the Passover and the Feast of Unleavened Bread include Exodus 12:1—13:16; 23:15; 34:18–20, 25; Leviticus 23:4–14; Numbers 28:16–25; Deuteronomy 16:1–8; Joshua 4:19–23; 5:10–12; and 2 Chronicles 30:2, 3, 13, 15.

The Passover was the first of the three great festivals of the Israelite people. It referred to the sacrifice of a lamb in Egypt when the people of Israel were slaves. They smeared the blood of the lamb on their doorposts as a signal to God that He should “pass over” their houses when He destroyed all the firstborn of Egypt (Ex. 12:13).

Passover was observed on the fourteenth day of the first month, Abib, with the service beginning in the evening (Lev. 23:6). It was on the evening of this day that Israel left Egypt. Passover commemorated this departure from Egypt in haste. Unleavened bread was used in the celebration because this showed that the people had no time to put leaven in their bread as they ate their final meal as slaves in Egypt.

Several regulations were given concerning the observance of Passover. Passover was to be observed “in the place which the LORD your God will choose.” This implied the sanctuary of the tabernacle or the temple in Jerusalem.

Joshua 5:10–12 refers to the observing of Passover in the plains of Jericho near Gilgal. Second Chronicles 30:1, 3, 13, 15 describes a Passover during the reign of Hezekiah. Messengers were sent throughout the land to invite the people to come to Jerusalem to observe the Passover. Many refused; some even scorned the one who carried the invitation. Because the people were not ready to observe the Passover, a delay of one month was recommended. That year the Passover was on the fourteenth day of the second month. Even after the delay many still were not ready to observe the Passover.

In New Testament times, large numbers gathered in Jerusalem to observe the annual Passover. Jesus was crucified in the city during one of these Passover celebrations. He and His disciples ate a Passover meal together on the eve of His death. Like the blood of the lamb that saved the Hebrew people from destruction in Egypt, His blood, as the ultimate Passover sacrifice, redeems us from the power of sin and death (1 Cor. 5:7).

Pentecost (see Weeks, Feast of).

Purim, Feast of. References to Purim include Esther 3:7; 9:24, 26, 28–29, 31–32. This feast commemorates the deliverance of the Jewish people from destruction by an evil schemer named Haman during the days of their captivity by the Persians. It took its name from the Babylonian word put, meaning “lot,” because Haman cast lots to determine when he would carry out his plot against the Jews. The Feast of Purim took place on the fourteenth and fifteenth of Adar, and during its celebration the Book of Esther is read as a reminder of their deliverance. A happy ceremony, Purim is accompanied with the giving of gifts and much celebration.

Sabbath. The Sabbath is taught in many places, including Exodus 16:22–30; 20:8–11; 23:12; 31:12–16; 34:21; 35:2–3; Leviticus 23:3; 26:2; Numbers 15:32–36; 28:9–10; Deuteronomy 5:12–15. The Hebrew word for Sabbath means “to cease or abstain.” Two reasons are given for observing the Sabbath: Creation and Exodus.

Exodus 20:8–11 reminded the nation of Israel to remember that God rested on the seventh day (Gen. 2:2). This grounds the observance of the Sabbath in the creation of the world. Deuteronomy 5:12–15 reminded Israel to remember its bondage years when there was no rest. This passage fixed the origin of the Sabbath in the bondage of the Hebrews in Egypt.

The Israelites were instructed to include the family, the hired servants, the stranger, and even their domestic animals in observance of this holy day. All were commanded to cease from normal labor. This included the command not to gather firewood (Num. 15:32–36) or to kindle a fire (Ex. 35:2–3). Stoning to death was apparently the penalty for gathering firewood on the Sabbath. Those who violated the Sabbath would be excommunicated from the community or could be put to death (Ex. 31:12–16).

The Sabbath became not only a day of rest but a convocation to the Lord as well. A specific sacrifice on the Sabbath is required in Numbers 28:9–10. It included a lamb, a grain offering mixed with oil, and a drink offering. This was to be offered as a burnt offering. In later periods, prayer and other rituals became the procedure for observing the Sabbath.

The purpose of the Sabbath was twofold. It symbolized that the nation of Israel had been set apart by the Lord as His special people. The Sabbath was also a celebration of the fact that the land belonged to God. This is seen in His provision of a sabbatical year—one year out of every seven when the land should rest from cultivation in order to renew and replenish itself.

The observance of the Sabbath set the Israelites apart from their neighbors. Unfortunately, burdensome restrictions and heavy requirements eventually grew up around its observance. The day that was set apart for rest, renewal, and worship became a day filled with rules of many things that must not be done.

Jesus attempted to restore the purpose of the Sabbath (Matt. 12:1–14; Mark 2:23—3:6; Luke 6:1–11). He declared God’s intention for the Sabbath by pointing out that “the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath” (Mark 2:27).

Sabbatical Year. The concept of the sabbatical year was that the land was to be given a rest every seventh year. This law included grain fields and vineyards. Even that which grew from the planting and pruning of the sixth year was not to be consumed by the owner.

Eventually, the cancellation of debts was added to the land rest as a part of the sabbatical year. Debts to fellow Israelites were to be forgiven during this year, although debts of non-Israelites might be collected. But the spirit of generosity was encouraged even toward non-Israelites. Indentured servants were to be granted their freedom. They were also to be provided with grain, meat, and drink in generous portions.

The purpose of the sabbatical year was renewal—renewal of the land, renewal of hope in the canceling of debts, and renewal of life in a new start.

Seventh Month Festival. This festival is mentioned in Leviticus 23:24–25, 27–32 and Numbers 29:1–40. It was introduced with the blowing of trumpets, the halt of labor, sacrifices, and a testing (Lev. 23:24–32; Num. 29:1–40). The exact reason for its observance is not clear. Some scholars believe it originated during the Babylonian captivity as a way of counteracting the influence of the Babylonian New Year Festival. This feast is also known as the Feast of Trumpets.

Tabernacles, Feast of. References to the Feast of Tabernacles in the Bible include Exodus 23:16; 34:22; Leviticus 23:33–36; 39–43; Numbers 29:12–32; Deuteronomy 16:13–16; Ezra 3:4; and Zechariah 14:16, 18–19.

This festival was observed on the fifteenth day of the seventh month to celebrate the completion of the autumn harvest. Features of the celebration included a holy convocation on the first and eighth days, and the offering of many animal sacrifices. The Israelites were also commanded to live in booths made of palm and willow trees during the festival to commemorate their period of wilderness wandering when they lived in temporary shelters. This feast is also known as the Feast of Booths.

Trumpets, Feast of (see Seventh Month Festival).

Unleavened Bread, Feast of. This feast began on the fifteenth day of the first month as a part of the larger celebration of Passover (Ex. 13:3–10; Lev. 23:6–8). Manual labor was strictly forbidden. Strangers and native-born people alike were punished if they failed to keep this holy day. A convocation began the feast.

Only unleavened bread was to be eaten during this feast. Bread without leaven commemorated the haste with which Israel left Egypt. As the blood was drained from the sacrificial animal, so the life or the power of leaven was removed from the bread offered to God during this annual celebration.

Weeks, Feast of. Biblical references to the Feast of Weeks include Exodus 23:16; 34:22; Leviticus 23:15–21; Numbers 28:26–31; Deuteronomy 16:9–12; and 2 Chronicles 8:13. This feast was observed early in the third month on the fiftieth day after the offering of the barley sheaf at the Feast of Unleavened Bread. It included a holy convocation with the usual restriction on manual labor.

Numbers 28:26–31 describes the number and nature of offerings and Deuteronomy 16:9–12 describes those who were to be invited to this feast. They include servants, sons and daughters, Levites, the fatherless, the widow, and the stranger.

This feast was also known as the Feast of Harvest as well as Pentecost (a Greek word meaning “fifty”). The early Christian believers, who were gathered in Jerusalem for observance of this feast, experienced the outpouring of God’s Holy Spirit in a miraculous way (Acts 2:1–4).

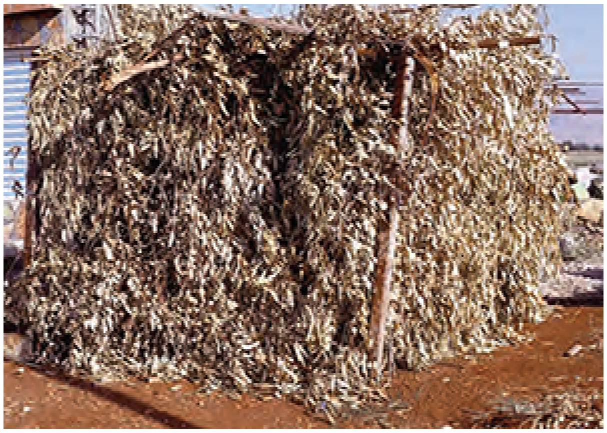

Photo by V. Gilbert and Arlisle F. Beers

• A temporary booth, or shelter, set up to celebrate the Feast of Booths, also known as the Feast of Tabernacles (Ex. 34:22).

FEEBLE KNEES—a description of persons who are weak or exhausted (Job 4:4).

FEEBLE-MINDED—KJV word for fainthearted (1 Thess. 5:14; timid, NIV). The Greek word means "little-spirited" or "small-souled."

FEET, DISEASED (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

FEET, WASHING (see FOOT-WASHING).

FELIX [FEE lix] (happy)—Roman governor of Judea before whom the apostle Paul appeared.

Felix was an unscrupulous ruler. In addition to having three wives, he considered himself capable of committing any crime and avoiding punishment because of his influence with the courts. Because of Felix's tyranny, a group of Jewish revolutionaries, known as the Sicarii ("assassins"), flourished. Retaliation against the Sicarii by the Roman government eventually led to the downfall and destruction of Jerusalem.

Felix is best known for his encounter with the apostle Paul (Acts 23:23). Arrested in Jerusalem as a disturber of the peace, Paul was sent to Caesarea for judgment by Felix. After his initial appearance before Felix, Paul was confined to the judgment hall until his accusers arrived. After five days, they arrived under the leadership of Ananias, the Jewish high priest. The case against Paul was managed by Tertullus, who sought to win Felix over by expressing gratitude on the part of the Jews (Acts 24:1–2).

Tertullus then proceeded to accuse Paul of committing rebellion against the Romans, being the ringleader of a trouble-making religious sect, and profaning the Jewish temple. The purpose of these accusations was to persuade Felix to surrender Paul to the Jewish courts, in which case he would have been assassinated.

When Felix gave Paul permission to speak, Paul refuted each of these charges; and Felix postponed his judgment. Several days later, Paul was brought before Felix a second time. On this occasion Paul gave his testimony as a Christian. Felix was visibly moved; and he dismissed Paul, indicating he would talk with him again on a more convenient day.

Felix kept Paul in suspense about his judgment because he hoped Paul would give him a bribe. He sent for Paul on several occasions. But his hopes for a bribe were unfulfilled, and he kept Paul a prisoner for two years.

Meanwhile, the atmosphere in Judea became more embarrassing, and Felix was finally removed as procurator by the Roman authorities. Because the Jews were making numerous accusations against Felix, Paul was left in prison in Caesarea for two years in an effort to appease the Jewish officials (Acts 24:27). Paul eventually appealed to Rome, which was his right as a Roman citizen, and finally was released from prison and taken to Rome.

FELLOES [FELL oze]—KJV word for RIMS (1 Kin. 7:33).

FELLOW—a word used in the Bible in both a positive and negative sense:

1. A worthless man or boy; a term of contempt for a person not worth mentioning (Matt. 26:61).
2. A friend, comrade, companion, or associate (Ex. 2:13).

The word fellow is also used in such phrases as fellow servant(s) (Col. 1:7), fellow disciples (John 11:16), and fellow workers (Phil. 4:3).

FELLOWSHIP—sharing things in common with others. In the New Testament, fellowship has a distinctly spiritual meaning. Fellowship can be either positive or negative.

Positively, believers have fellowship with the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit (John 17:21–26; Phil. 2:1; 1 John 1:3), as well as with other believers (Acts 2:42; 1 John 1:3, 7). The only reason why we dare to have fellowship with God, in the sense of sharing things in common with Him, is that He has raised our status through the death and resurrection of Christ (Eph. 2:4–7). What believers share in common with God is a relationship as well as God's own holy character (1 Pet. 1:15). Those who have fellowship with Christ should enjoy fellowship with other believers, a communion that ought to illustrate the very nature of God Himself (John 13:35; Eph. 5:1–2; 1 John 1:5–10).

Negatively, believers should not have fellowship with unbelievers. This means they should not share in unbelievers' sinful lifestyles (2 Cor. 6:14–18). This does not mean, however, that believers should have nothing to do with unbelievers. The Bible plainly teaches that believers are obligated to help unbelievers and share the gospel with them (Matt. 28:16–20; Mark 16:15–16; 1 Cor. 9:16–17).

FENCE—a protective barrier around a house or field or an enclosure for livestock (Ps. 62:3). Job also used the word symbolically to express his futility at being closed in and having his freedom restricted by God (Job 19:8).

FENCED CITIES—KJV words for FORTIFIED CITIES.

FERRET (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

FERRYBOAT—a vessel used to transport people or objects across a body of water. When David returned to Jerusalem after Absalom's death, a ferryboat carried the king and his household across the Jordan River (2 Sam. 19:18).

FESTIVALS (see FEASTS AND FESTIVALS).

FESTUS, PORCIUS [FESS tuss POUR shih us]—the successor of FELIX as Roman procurator, or governor, of Judea (Acts 24:27). After Festus arrived at Caesarea, he went to Jerusalem and met with the high priest and other Jewish leaders. They informed him of Paul's confinement in prison. Paul had been left in prison when Felix was removed as procurator by the Roman authorities.

The Jewish leaders requested that Paul be brought from Caesarea to Jerusalem so he could be tried before the Jewish Sanhedrin (Acts 25:3). Their real intent, however, was to have Paul killed along the way. Festus refused and told the Jewish leaders they must meet with Paul in Caesarea.

A few days later, Paul was summoned before Festus, who asked if he would be willing to go to Jerusalem. Paul, knowing that danger awaited him on such a trip, used his right as a Roman citizen to appeal to Rome for trial (Acts 25:11).

About this time, Herod Agrippa, with his sister, Bernice, came to Caesarea to visit Festus. The result was a meeting between the three and Paul in which Paul was declared innocent. But because Paul had appealed to Caesar, he had to be sent to Rome (Acts 26:32).

FETTERS—shackles or chains attached to the ankles of prisoners to restrain movement (Ps. 105:18). Fetters were usually made of iron or bronze.

FEVER (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

FIDELITY—faithfulness, loyalty. The word occurs only once (Titus 2:10). The apostle Paul wrote to Titus instructing him to exhort slaves to show "all good fidelity" to their own masters.

FIELD—a plot of open ground that might be used for many different purposes. The word field may refer to a place for hunting game (Gen. 27:5), a cultivated plot for planting crops (Ruth 2:3), or a place for grazing livestock (Gen. 34:5). A field could range in size from a small plot of land to a large territory.

Generally a field was not closed in; it was sometimes contrasted with enclosed land, such as a vineyard (Ex. 22:5). The boundaries separating fields were marked by stones that could be easily moved or removed (Deut. 19:14). Because there were no fences to keep them in, the flocks and herds needed constant watching and tending to prevent them from straying. Fields were sometimes named for events, as in Field of Sharp Swords (2 Sam. 2:16) or for their uses, as in Fuller's Field (Is. 7:3) or potter's field (Matt. 27:7).

FIELD OF SHARP SWORDS—an area near the pool of Gibeon that became the scene of bloody combat between Israel and Judah (2 Sam. 2:16; Field of Blades, REB; Helkath-hazzurim, NRSV; NIV). Here twelve of Abner's men (servants of Ishbosheth, king of Israel) and twelve of Joab's men (servants of David, king of Judah) battled one another until every man was dead.

FIFE (see MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS OF THE BIBLE).

FIG, FIG TREE (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

FIGUREHEAD—a carved figure on the front of a ship. The Alexandrian ship on which the apostle Paul sailed to Rome had a figurehead (Acts 28:11; sign, KJV).

FILE (see TOOLS OF THE BIBLE).

FILLY—a young female horse or a lively, high-spirited girl. The Beloved in the Song of Solomon compared the Shulammite (a Palestinian young woman) to "a filly among Pharaoh's chariots" (Song 1:9; chariot horse of Pharaoh, REB; a company of horses, KJV; a mare, NRSV, NASB, NIV). In the ancient world, where both horses and women were beautifully adorned, this was considered a high compliment.

FILTH, FILTHINESS—in a literal sense, foul or dirty matter; in a figurative sense, ceremonial uncleanness or spiritual corruption. "All our righteousnesses," declared the prophet Isaiah, "are like filthy rags" (Is. 64:6). But God will forgive and cleanse the sinner who repents and believes in Christ (1 John 1:7–9).

FINE, FINES (see LAW).

FINER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

FINGER—a digit of the hand. In the Bible, the word can refer to the literal fingers of a human (Lev. 4:6) or, figuratively, to the power of God. The "finger of God" thus brought about the plagues in Egypt (Ex. 8:19), wrote the Ten Commandments on two tablets of stone (Deut. 9:10), and made the heavens (Ps. 8:3). In the New Testament, Jesus said, "If I cast out demons with the finger ("by the Spirit," Matt. 12:28) of God, surely the kingdom of God has come upon you" (Luke 11:20). Evidently, the "finger of God" refers to God's power working through the Holy Spirit to accomplish His work and will.

FINING POT—KJV term for REFINING POT.

FINISHER—a person who completes a project. The word is applied to Christ (Heb. 12:2; perfecter, NIV). The Greek root refers to completing or bringing to an end or finish.

FINS—a hard, scaly object on fish, used as a distinguishing mark to separate fish into CLEAN and UNCLEAN foods under the law of Moses. Fish with fins could be eaten, while those without scales or fins were prohibited as foods (Lev. 11:9; Deut. 14:9, 10).

FIR, FIR TREE (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

FIRE—the combustion of flammable materials. In the Bible, fire often appears as a symbol of God's presence and power (Gen. 15:17–18).

The Israelites and other ancient cultures placed great value on fire. They used it to provide light, cook food, heat their houses, and forge their tools and weapons.

Fire worship was practiced in many cultures of the ancient world, including the Medes, the Persians, and the Canaanites. In an effort to appease their gods, the Canaanites sometimes even sacrificed their children on flaming altars (Deut. 12:31). God often warned Israel that this practice was an abomination to Him and that they should not participate in their neighbors' sin (Ezek. 16:20, 21; 2 Chron. 28:3).

In the Old Testament, fire and flame were closely associated with Israel's worship and religious life. On God's instructions, a fire was kept burning continuously on the altars where burnt offerings were sacrificed (Lev. 6:13). The consumption of offerings by flame assured them that God had accepted the people's sacrifices (Judg. 6:21; 1 Kin. 18:38).

God also used fire to guide His people. God spoke to Moses in the burning bush experience and called him to lead the children of Israel out of Egyptian bondage (Ex. 3:2–12). In their wilderness wanderings, the Israelites relied each night on a PILLAR OF FIRE from heaven to guide them in their travels (Ex. 13:21).

Numerous references to fire in the Bible emphasize God's judgment on wickedness and unbelief. God is represented as a "consuming fire" (Ex. 24:17; Deut. 4:24; Heb. 12:29). The prophet Amos warned Israel, "Seek the LORD and live, lest He break out like a fire in the house of Joseph and devour it" (Amos 5:6). In the New Testament, eternal damnation is pictured as an everlasting fire (1 Cor. 3:13; Rev. 21:8). Fire from heaven is described as an instrument of God's wrath to crush the satanic rebellion (Rev. 20:9, 10).

As a source of heat and light, fire is often pictured in the Bible as God's agent to purify and illuminate. The coming Messenger of the Lord is portrayed as a "refiner's fire" (Mal. 3:2). The tongues "as of fire" that came with the descent of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost underscored the purging and illuminating quality of God's truth (Acts 2:3).

FIRE BAPTISM (see BAPTISM OF FIRE).

FIRE, LAKE OF (see HINNOM, VALLEY OF).

FIREBRAND—a burning stick taken out of the fire. The prophet Amos described the nation of Israel as "a firebrand plucked from the burning" (Amos 4:11)—a figure of speech describing a narrow escape.

FIREPAN—a metal utensil to transport live coals used in starting a fire (Ex. 27:3). The firepans in the tabernacle were made of bronze. Also see CENSER.

FIRMAMENT—the expanse of sky and space in which the stars and planets are set. God made the firmament on the second day of creation to divide the waters that covered the earth from those that were above it (Gen. 1:7). But the firmament includes more than the atmospheric region between the seas of earth and the rain clouds of the sky; it is far more vast. In fact, on the fourth day of creation God placed the stars, the sun, and the moon in the “firmament of the heavens” (Gen. 1:15–18).

It is this vastness that the Hebrew writers tend to emphasize about the firmament. The writer of Psalm 150 pointed out that the firmament is “mighty” (v. 1). The prophet Ezekiel envisioned the firmament “like the color of an awesome crystal, stretched out over . . . [people’s] heads” (Ezek. 1:22). What the firmament reflects, then, is the greatness of the God who created it. We are urged to praise God because “the firmament shows His handiwork” (Ps. 19:1). God’s people can look forward to a day when they will “shine like the brightness of the firmament” (Dan. 12:3).

FIRST-BEGOTTEN (see FIRSTBORN).

FIRSTBORN—the first offspring of human beings or animals.

In memory of the death of Egypt’s firstborn and the divine protection of Israel’s firstborn in connection with the EXODUS, God placed a special claim on the firstborn of man and animals (Ex. 13:11–13). This meant that the nation of Israel attached unusual value to the oldest son and assigned special privileges and responsibilities to him.

Because of God’s claim on the first offspring, the firstborn sons of the Hebrews were presented to the Lord when they were a month old. Since the firstborn was regarded as God’s property, it was necessary for the father to redeem, or buy back, the child from the priest. The redemption price, established by the priest, could not exceed five shekels (Num. 18:16).

Early Israelite laws also provided that the firstlings of beasts belonged to the Lord and were turned over to the sanctuary (Ex. 13:2; 34:19; Lev. 27:26). The clean animals—those that could be eaten under the law of Moses—were sacrificed to the Lord. The unclean beasts were either destroyed, replaced, or redeemed at a price set by the priest.

In Israel, the firstborn son inherited special rights and privileges. His BIRTHRIGHT was a double portion of the estate and leadership of the family. As head of the home after his father’s death, the oldest son customarily cared for his mother until her death, and provided for his unmarried sisters until their marriages. He was the family’s spiritual head.

The inheritance rights of the firstborn son were sometimes transferred to a younger brother. Jacob, for example, stripped Reuben of his firstborn rights because of his incestuous conduct and transferred the birthright to his son Joseph (Gen. 48:20–22; 1 Chr. 5:1).

In figurative language, the term "firstborn" stands for that which is most excellent. This expression is applied to Jesus in several New Testament passages. All of them point to Jesus' high standing and His unique relationship to His Father and the church.

In Colossians 1:15, Jesus is described as the "firstborn over all creation," indicating that He existed before creation and actually participated in the creation process (John 1:3). In physical terms, he was the Virgin Mary's "firstborn son" (Matt. 1:25). The phrase, "firstborn from the dead" (Col. 1:18; Rev. 1:5), refers to Jesus' resurrection, which assures victory over sin and death to all who trust in Him.

Paul's description of Christ as "firstborn among many brethren" (Rom. 8:29) refers to His exalted position as head of the church. Because of His atoning death and resurrection, Jesus Christ heads a new spiritual race of twice-born men and women (Col. 1:18). The author of Hebrews foresees a joyful gathering of "the church of the firstborn who are registered in heaven" (Heb. 12:23).

FIRSTFRUITS—the firstborn of the flocks and the first vegetables and grains to be gathered at harvest time. The Hebrew people thought of these as belonging to God in a special sense. They were dedicated or presented to God on the day of the firstfruits, a part of the celebration of PENTECOST (Num. 28:26; 2 Chr. 31:5).

FIRST GATE (see GATES OF JERUSALEM AND THE TEMPLE).

FIRSTLING—the firstborn of animals or the first of the harvest from a crop. Abel brought the firstlings of his flock as an offering to God (Gen. 4:4). The law of the FIRSTBORN is recorded in Exodus 13:11–16.

FISH (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

FISH GATE (see GATES OF JERUSALEM AND THE TEMPLE).

FISHERMAN (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

FISHER OWL (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

FISHHOOK—a special hook of bone or metal used for catching and holding fish. The prophet Amos warned the people of Samaria that God would “take you away with fishhooks, and your posterity with fishhooks” (Amos 4:2). This probably referred to the common practice among conquering nations, such as Egypt and Babylonia, of placing fishhooks in the mouths of captives to make them easier to handle (Hab. 1:14–15).

FISHING—the practice of catching fish for food or for sale as a commercial product. Although the Israelites were not basically a seagoing people, fishing was an important industry and a source of considerable revenue. The Mediterranean Sea provided many different species of saltwater fish. Lake Huleh and the Sea of Galilee were the center of the freshwater fishing business. Hunting and fishing for sport were unknown.

Many of the fish caught were eaten fresh. But the close proximity of the salt deposits at the Dead Sea made it possible to preserve large quantities of fish for shipping long distances. Taricheae on the western shore of the Sea of Galilee was the major center of the salting and preserving industry.

Commercial fishing was hard work and often was frustrating and ineffective (Luke 5:4–6; John 21:1–3). Lines and hooks (Job 41:1; Amos 4:10), as well as harpoons (Job 41:7) were used. But the most common method of fishing was with nets.

A small casting net could be handled by one man standing on the shore (Eccl. 9:12; Ezek. 47:10; Matt. 4:18). The larger dragnets required several people in boats for effective operation. Such dragnets had wooden floats on the top edge and stone or metal weights on the bottom. A cord was usually threaded along the bottom edge. This allowed the bottom to be drawn shut to trap the fish as the boat closed the circle of the net around them. Then they were either unloaded into the boats (Luke 5:6–8), or dragged to the shore where the fish were removed and sorted (Matt. 13:47–48).

According to the Law of Moses (Lev. 11:9–12; Deut. 14:9–10), only fish that had fins and scales were ritually “clean” and could be eaten.

All others, including catfish, eels, etc., and the various shellfish (clams, lobsters, etc.), were “unclean” and forbidden as food.

Of Jesus’ first disciples, at least seven were fishermen—Peter, Andrew, Philip, James, John, Thomas, and Nathanael. At Jesus’ call they left their nets to follow him and “catch men” (Luke 5:10).

Photo by Howard Vos

• Fishermen with their catch in the Sea of Galilee.

FITCH (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

FLAG (see STANDARD).

FLAGON [FLAG gon]—KJV word for RAISIN CAKE.

FLANGE—a connecting clamp or collar on the bronze carts in Solomon’s temple (1 Kin. 7:35–36; ledges, KJV; stays, NRSV, NASB; supports, NIV).

FLANK—the fleshy part of the side between the ribs and the hip. The term refers to the part of an animal sacrifice burned along with the kidneys and the liver (Lev. 3:4). The Hebrew word for "flank" is used to refer to the corresponding part of a person: "waist" (Job 15:27) and "loins" (Ps. 38:7).

FLASK—a jar usually narrowed toward the rim and used for holding liquids such as oil, ointment, or perfume. Samuel used a flask of oil to anoint Saul as king of Israel (1 Sam. 10:1). Elisha the prophet sent one of his apprentice prophets with a flask of oil to anoint Jehu as king of Israel (2 Kin. 9:1, 3).

The Lord told the prophet Jeremiah to take "a potter's earthen flask" and break it (Jer. 19:1, 10; jar, NIV) as a sign of divine judgment against Jerusalem. In the house of Simon the leper, a woman of Bethany anointed the head of Jesus with a very expensive ointment, of pure nard, which she poured from an alabaster flask (Mark 14:3; jar, NIV).

FLAT NOSE (see DISABILITIES AND DEFORMITIES).

FLAX (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

FLEA (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

FLEECE—the coat of wool shorn from a sheep. Gideon used a fleece in a test to determine if God would deliver the nation of Israel from their enemies (Judg. 6:37–40).

FLESH—the physical bodies of humans or animals. When God removed a rib from Adam with which he created Eve, he closed up the place with flesh (Gen. 2:21). The apostle Paul spoke of the flesh of men, beasts, fish, and birds (1 Cor. 15:39).

The imagery of flesh expresses several different ideas in the Bible. Rather than only the "fleshy" parts of the body, the word could also refer to the entire body (Gal. 5:13). From this idea, the concept of a fleshly or human bond between people follows. A man and his wife "shall become one flesh" (Gen. 2:24), while a man can tell his family that "I am your own flesh and bone" (Judg. 9:2). "Flesh" is even used occasionally to describe all of mankind, and even animals (Gen. 6:3).

Biblical writers thought of the flesh as weak. The Psalmist sang, “In God I have put my trust; I will not fear. What can flesh do to me?” (Ps. 56:4). The weakness of the flesh was blamed for the disciples’ inability to keep watch with Jesus in Gethsemane on the eve of His crucifixion (Mark 14:38).

In an even stronger sense, flesh is the earthly part of a person, representing lusts and desires (Eph. 2:3). The flesh is contrary to the Spirit (Gal. 5:17). Those who are in the flesh cannot please God (Rom. 8:8). Galatians 5:19–23 contrasts works of the flesh with the fruit of the Spirit. The flesh is not completely condemned, however, for Christ Himself was described as being “in the flesh” (1 John 4:2). Christ alone is our salvation, since by the works of the law “no flesh shall be justified” (Gal. 2:16).

FLESH HOOK—an implement with three prongs used by the sons of Eli to handle meat provided for sacrifices in the tabernacle (1 Sam. 2:13, 14). The KJV also uses this word for an implement used in the temple (Ex. 27:3; Num. 4:14; fork, NKJV; NIV). Both these tools were probably a three-pronged fork.

FLESH POT—KJV words for a large metal pot used for boiling water or cooking meat (Ex. 16:3; pots of meat, NKJV). These were used by the Hebrews during their years of slavery in Egypt.

FLINT (see MINERALS OF THE BIBLE).

FLOCK—a herd of animals that consisted of a mixture of sheep and goats in Bible times. Both kinds of animals grazed and traveled together (Gen. 30:31–32). The animals in such mixed flocks were difficult to tell apart except at close range. This explains Jesus’ teaching about separating sheep from goats at the last judgment (Matt. 25:32). In Old Testament times, the size of one’s flocks and herds was a measure of wealth (1 Sam. 25:2; Job 1:3).

FLOOD, THE—the divinely sent deluge that destroyed all sinful humankind by water during the time of Noah.

The inspired writer of Genesis took two chapters to tell of the creation of the world and one chapter to portray the Fall, but he devoted four chapters to the Flood. Since the concern of the writer was to reveal the nature of God and His dealings with humankind he evidently saw this story as a good vehicle for this truth. The Flood reveals both the judgment and the mercy of God.

Archaeologists have discovered a number of flood stories among pagan nations in the ancient world. One Sumerian and two Babylonian stories have survived. A comparison of these stories with the Flood account in Genesis is both interesting and significant.

In one of the Babylonian stories, the gods became irritated with the people because they grew too numerous and became too noisy; so they considered several different ways to get rid of these bothersome people. Finally, they decided on a flood. But the flood apparently got out of hand. For a while the gods were afraid they would be destroyed. They began to quarrel among themselves, shrinking in fear from the rising waters and crowding around a sacrifice like flies.

In stark contrast to such pagan stories the Book of Genesis presents the holy and sovereign God who acted in judgment against sin and yet mercifully saved Noah and his family because of their righteousness.

The Flood was not simply a downpour of ordinary rain. The text indicates a cosmic upheaval. "The fountains of the great deep" were broken up (Gen. 7:11). Perhaps there were earthquakes and the ocean floors may have been raised up until the waters covered the earth. By a supernatural upheaval, God returned the earth to the primitive chaos described in Genesis 1:2.

A Degenerate Humanity. The Flood was a drastic judgment, but the condition that brought it to pass was also serious. Society degenerated to the point that "every intent" of the thoughts of man's heart "was only evil continually" (Gen. 6:5). Violence raged upon earth. Instead of living responsibly as persons created in the image and likeness of God, people existed as beasts. Because the situation was hopeless, God chose to destroy that generation and make a new start with the family of righteous Noah.

The Divine Grief. While the minds of people were filled with every evil, the heart of God was filled with grief and sorrow. Like a parent whose children have gone bad, God mourned for his wayward children. The Lord was sorry He had created them and "was grieved in his heart" (Gen. 6:6).

Since God knows the end from the beginning, how could He be sorry for what He had done? This was the biblical writer's way of showing the extreme disappointment of the Lord and the radical change in His attitude and action toward humanity. He had blessed the race, but now He would turn against the wicked people who refused to repent. Their failure to repent caused God to repent, or turn around, in his approach to humanity.

Righteous Noah. In stark contrast to the degenerate people among whom he lived, "Noah was a just man" who "walked with God" (Gen. 6:9). God's righteous judgment is seen in the destruction of the wicked, but His mercy and care are seen in His saving of Noah and, through him, the human race. God's judgment was accompanied by grief, but His grace was freely given to Noah and his family.

The Ark. The Lord revealed to Noah that His judgment was coming by way of a terrible flood. Noah could save himself and his family by building an ark of wood. The ark was to be large enough to hold Noah, his wife, his three sons, and their wives. In addition, it must provide room for two of every kind of animal and bird. Plenty of time was allowed for this massive building project by Noah and his sons.

The dimensions of the ark were 140 meters (450 feet) long, 23 meters (75 feet) wide, and 14 meters (45 feet) high. There were three levels—lower, middle, and upper decks. The displacement or capacity of a vessel of these dimensions has been estimated as 43,300 tons.

The Long Voyage. The raging waters kept rising for forty days, and the ark floated high above the hills and mountains. When the waters finally stopped rising, Noah and his passengers faced a long wait for the waters to go down. The total time spent in the ark was about one year and ten days. The ark came to rest on "the mountains of Ararat" (Gen. 8:4) in what is now Turkey. Numerous attempts across the centuries to find traces of the ark have proved futile.

Noah released a raven and a dove to determine whether the waters were low enough to allow them to leave the ark. When the dove returned to the ark, he knew it had been unable to survive outside the ark. After seven days, he again released the dove. This time it came back with an olive leaf. This was good news, indicating that the waters had dropped further and the time when the people and animals could leave the ark was near. Finally the earth dried, and they left the ark (Gen. 8:7–19).

Worship and Covenant. The first act of the grateful Noah was to build an altar and worship God, thanking Him for deliverance from the Flood. Then the Lord made a covenant with Noah. Never again would He destroy the world by water. The rainbow was given as a covenant sign. The bow was an instrument of war, but the rainbow represents a bow with the string on the ground—a symbol of peace.

The Flood came upon the earth as a severe judgment of God against wickedness. But God’s grace and mercy were also revealed in the preservation of Noah and, through him, the human race. The covenant was granted to reassure humanity about God’s care.

New Testament References to the Flood. References to the Flood are found in Matthew 24:38; Luke 17:26, 27; Hebrews 11:7; 1 Peter 3:20; and 2 Peter 2:5. The Flood was used to illustrate the holy God’s wrath against human wickedness and the salvation of His people.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Inscribed stone tablet from Babylon that describes a great flood. Unlike the Babylonian stories, the biblical account of the Flood emphasizes the sin of people and the power and moral judgment of God.

FLOOR—a stone or clay platform used for threshing grain (threshing floor, Num. 15:20) or the part of a house on which the residents walked. In a house or building in Palestine, the floors were formed from beaten clay. Also see HOUSE.

FLOUR—ground grain from which bread is baked (Ex. 29:2; 1 Sam. 28:24). The flour of Bible times was a fine substance made from wheat, with all the bran removed. One of the Hebrew words for “flour” means “fine flour” (Lev. 14:10; Num. 29:14).

FLOWERS (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

FLUTE (see MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS OF THE BIBLE).

FLY (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

FOAL—the young offspring of a donkey—the animal on which Jesus rode in His triumphal entry into Jerusalem. By riding such a lowly animal, Jesus entered the city not as a conquering hero but as the Prince of Peace bearing the good news of a spiritual kingdom (Matt. 21:5).

FODDER—feed for livestock, consisting of a mixture of grains and vegetation left over after the best parts of the harvest were gathered (Job 6:5).

FOLD (see SHEEPFOLD).

FOLLY (see FOOL, FOOLISHNESS).

FOOD—nourishing substances eaten by people and animals. Palestine, the land of the Bible, was called a land of "milk and honey" (Ex. 13:5). Food was plentiful, although hard labor was required for its production. Lack of rainfall or other weather conditions sometimes resulted in meager crops.

After conquering and settling the land of Canaan, the Israelites became farmers. This was different from the nomadic life of their forefathers. Their diet reflected the change, because tillers of the soil eat differently than shepherds and herdsmen. The land they worked produced foodstuffs in a variety pleasing to the palate and satisfying to the stomach. Among these were cereal grains, animal protein, vegetables, fruits and nuts, plus savory spices and herbs to make food tasty.

The cereal grains, often called corn in the KJV, are not to be confused with maize, a product of the western hemisphere unknown in Bible times. The word corn in the KJV should be translated as "wheat," "barley," and "millet." It also included spelt, a species of grain related to wheat but called fitch in the KJV.

In God's command to the prophet Ezekiel (4:9) to make bread, all these grains are mentioned, plus beans and lentils. This mixture sounds like the ingredients in a modern loaf of bread.

After the grain was harvested, it was ground into flour, mixed and kneaded into dough, and then baked into bread. In Isaiah (3:1) bread is called the "stock" and the "store," meaning that bread was the principal food of the people—the stock and store of life.

But grain could be prepared and eaten in ways other than in bread. It could be parched or roasted, or it could be cracked and made into a gruel (2 Sam. 17:28).

A distinctive feature of the agricultural economy of Israel was the provision for poor people to come into the fields of the wealthy to glean behind the harvesters. The story of Ruth reflects this custom. When Boaz, the wealthy kinsman of Naomi's departed husband, saw Ruth in his field, he told his reapers to leave grain for her to gather. At noon he invited her to share his parched grain (Ruth 2:14).

Protein is essential to life; it was readily available to everyone in the land of Palestine. Meat was part of every person's daily fare. Animal products such as milk, butter, and cheese were also readily available. A noon meal for a workman might consist of two loaves of barley bread—one filled with cheese, the other with olives.

Animals were divided into two distinct classes among the people—ceremonially clean and unclean (Lev. 11:1–47; Acts 10:9–15). The law governing this distinction dealt with four-footed animals as well as fish, birds, and insects. Only clean animals could be used for food. Clean animals were those that chewed the cud and had divided hooves (Lev. 11:3). Pigs have divided hooves, but they do not chew the cud. Therefore, they were ceremonially unclean and unfit for food. Camels chew the cud, but they do not have parted hooves. So they could not be eaten. Camel's milk and cheese from their milk, however, were not forbidden.

The effort to connect these unclean foods with modern practices of hygiene breaks down in details. But some forbidden foods did serve as health precautions. Pork is an example. It must be cooked at high temperatures to kill the dreaded parasite that can cause spiralis. The people of the land never heard of trichinosis, but they were protected from it by their food laws.

Animal fat was also forbidden as food (Lev. 3:16–17). While fat is essential to good health, it becomes extremely dangerous when eaten in large amounts that can cause a buildup of cholesterol. When Nehemiah urged the people to "eat the fat" (Neh. 8:10, NKJV), he used a word that is better translated as "dainties" (choice food, NIV). He may have been referring to a rich confection or a tasty dessert. He neither forgot nor overlooked the dietary restrictions of the Hebrew food laws.

Fish of some types could be eaten (Lev. 11:9–12). A total of twenty different species of birds was rejected (11:13–19). Insects that had legs and leaped, such as the grasshopper, were fit for food.

Oysters and shrimp, which fell within the forbidden list, spoil quickly and become unfit for food in a hot climate with no refrigeration.

Even the most humble people of Palestine had adequate protein in their diet. As is true in all agricultural societies, every family had land to till. The citizens of Palestine kept animals for heavy work and tended sheep for fiber. These animals yielded milk, cheese, and meat and even provided fiber such as wool for the making of clothing.

But bread, meat, milk, and cheese are not enough for a balanced diet. Other foods are necessary to maintain strong and healthy bodies. Other essential nutrients came from fruits, vegetables, and nuts, which the land yielded in bountiful fashion.

While enslaved in Egypt, the Hebrew people learned to enjoy vegetables. During their years of wandering in the wilderness, they missed their cucumbers, melons, leeks, onions, and garlic (Num. 11:5). They also longed for their “pots of meat” (Ex. 16:3), which were stew pots filled with simmering meat and vegetables.

Once settled in the land of Canaan, the Israelites cultivated these favorite vegetables, plus beans, lentils, and squash. The squash they cultivated may have been one of the “melons” they had learned to eat in Egypt many years before.

The abundance of food cultivated in Palestine is indicated by the list of provisions that Abigail furnished David in the desert of Paran (1 Sam. 25:18). Included was bread, wine, mutton, roasted grain, clusters of raisins, and cakes of figs.

Abigail’s clusters of raisins were pressed into cakes with the stems still intact. Grapes or raisins might be made into a raisin cake, as she had done, but they could also be eaten fresh, or pressed for their juice. In time the fresh-pressed juice could be turned into vinegar or WINE.

Along with raisins Abigail brought figs, also dried and pressed into cakes. She may have brought apricots dried and pressed the same way. The land produced both of these fruits. Honey was also available, because the land had both wild and domesticated bees. Honey was made from dates as well. From a small garden she might have brought mint, anise, dill, and cummin. Certainly she could have brought almonds—or pistachios. These trees were common in Palestine. Olives were also plentiful. Olive orchards were scattered throughout the land. The olive was eaten green or ripe. Or, it might be pressed for its oil. Olive oil was used for cooking and seasoning, and as fuel for lamps.

Perhaps Abigail brought salt; an abundant supply was available from the nearby Sea of Salt, or DEAD SEA.

◆

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

• Wheat—an important source of food in Palestine—growing in a terraced field on a Judean hillside.

◆

Photo by V. Gilbert and Arlisle F. Beers

• Watchtowers, like this one near Shiloh, were used by farmers to protect their crops from thieves and intruders.

Photo: Israel Government Press Office

• Food was often stored underground in Bible times. Archaeologists discovered remains of grain, beans, and grapes in these underground storage silos that dated back to about 4000 B.C.

FOOL, FOOLISHNESS—a stupid person or a senseless act. In the Bible, the most foolish person of all is one who denies the reality of God the Father: "The fool has said in his heart, 'There is no God' " (Ps. 14:1; 53:1). Like the Book of Proverbs, where "fool" denotes a person who is morally and spiritually deficient, Jesus contrasted wise and foolish persons. Persons who keep His sayings are wise; those who do not are foolish (Matt. 7:24–27). The use of the word "fool" in Matthew 5:22 is a special case. Jesus warned against using the word fool as a form of abuse. This word expressed hatred in one's heart toward others; therefore, Jesus condemned the use of the word in this way.

Paul called the preaching of the crucified Christ "foolishness" in the eyes of unbelievers. For believers, however, the message of the cross is the power and wisdom of God (1 Cor. 1:23–24).

FOOT—the lower extremity of the leg. The Bible uses the word both literally and symbolically.

Feet is used in many symbolic ways. “To sit at the feet” of a teacher was a symbol of discipleship, recalling the practice of the Jewish schools and synagogues (Acts 22:3). “To fall at the feet” was a gesture of humility (1 Sam. 25:24). “To put under the feet” was symbolic of conquest (Josh. 10:24). In this way Egyptian monuments picture conquerors walking on the defeated. The Lord promised to tread the Assyrians under foot (Is. 14:25).

In Bible times, washing a guest’s feet was an act of hospitality (Luke 7:44) and humility (John 13:4–15). To remove the sandals from one’s feet was an expression of worship and reverence (Ex. 3:5). Before one entered a holy place, it was necessary for him to remove his shoes.

FOOTMAN (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

FOOTSTOOL—a piece of furniture for resting a person’s feet. The word is often used symbolically in the Bible to signify God’s promise to Israel to “make [the Lord’s] enemies his footstool” (Ps. 110:1). This messianic promise is repeated six times in the New Testament (Matt. 22:44; Mark 12:36; Luke 20:43; Acts 2:35; Heb. 1:13; 10:13).

FOOT-WASHING—an expression of hospitality extended to guests in Bible times. People traveling dusty roads in Palestine needed to wash their feet for comfort and cleanliness. Foot-washing was generally performed by the lowliest servant in the household (Luke 7:44). Guests were often offered water and vessels for washing their own feet (Gen. 18:4; Judg. 19:21).

At the Last Supper, Jesus washed His disciples’ feet. He explained that this act was an example of the humble ministry that they must always be ready to perform for one another (John 13:5–17). First Timothy 5:10 suggests that the early church followed Christ’s example in observing the ritual of foot-washing. But many churches reject this because the other duties mentioned in the verse are household tasks. Churches of some denominations continue to practice foot-washing today.

FORBEARANCE—tolerance or mercy. Although human sin deserves punishment, God in His forbearance, or longsuffering patience, gives an opportunity for REPENTANCE (Rom. 2:4). Also see LONGSUFFERING.

FORCES (see WAR, WARFARE).

FORD—a shallow place that provides easy passage across a body of water. Fords across several rivers are mentioned in the Bible:

1. The Jordan. Two different fords mentioned are the place where the Israelite spies crossed before the capture of Jericho (Josh. 2:7), and the ford where Israel's Moabite overlords suffered defeat (Judg. 3:28). Both fords were apparently in the region of Jericho.
2. The Jabbok, a narrow but cultivated valley in Transjordan, was crossed by Jacob and his family near Penuel (Gen. 32:22).
3. The Arnon, running westwards to the Dead Sea, and traditionally Moab's northern border (Num. 21:13), was a deep gorge crossed by a number of fords (Is. 16:2).

FOREHEAD—part of the face above the eyes. The forehead was one area where skin disease could be identified (Lev. 13:41–44). David killed Goliath with a stone to the forehead (1 Sam. 17:49).

Since the forehead is so prominent, it is a proper place for an identifying seal. It is the location of a holy mark for the Israelite high priest (Ex. 28:38), God's 144,000 end-time servants (Rev. 14:1), and people living in the new Jerusalem (Rev. 22:4). The great harlot and the beast's followers will have evil marks on their foreheads (Rev. 13:16).

The Israelites were ordered to know God's law so well that it would be as if it were written across their foreheads (Deut. 6:8). Many Jews took this literally, and the custom of wearing PHYLACTERIES developed. Symbolically, the set of someone's forehead might mean rebellion (Ezek. 3:8–9).

FOREIGNER—a person whose citizenship and loyalty belong to a different country. The "foreigner" (or "outsider") mentioned often in the Bible was distinct from the "sojourner." The sojourner belonged to another nation; but, unlike the foreigner, he came to live (or sojourn) for a period of time away from his home country, perhaps taking on some obligations and enjoying some privileges in his new land.

In the English Bible it is not always easy to distinguish between these uses of the words, especially since "stranger" is sometimes used for "foreigner," sometimes for "sojourner." In Exodus 12, for instance, the "outsider"—the stranger who is a foreigner—is not to eat the Passover (v. 43). But the stranger who sojourns among the Israelites, and whose males are circumcised, is allowed to eat the Passover (vv. 48–49). Other regulations dealing especially with foreigners may be found in Deuteronomy 14:21; 15:3; 23:20.

Usually the term "foreigner" in the Bible means someone who is foreign to the Hebrew people. Because Israel was to be a special nation, there was a great danger that the Israelites would be influenced by the ways of other nations and, in the process, lose something of their special identity. That is why the Old Testament is full of references to the perils of foreign or strange gods (Josh. 24:20, 23; Jer. 5:19) and foreign or strange women (1 Kin. 11:1; Prov. 2:16; 5:20). That is also why foreigners or outsiders were not permitted to take part in Israel's worship (Ex. 12:43; Ezek. 44:9). On the other hand, among the prophecies of a glorious future for Israel are some in which foreigners who come to worship the Lord are given an honored place (Is. 56:3–8).

In New Testament times, the lines between Jews and foreigners were sharply drawn. Jews were expected not to eat with foreigners (Acts 11:3; Gal. 2:12). Some Jewish Christians still insisted on these distinctions and were offended when other Jewish believers ate with Gentiles. But the apostle Paul insisted that the barriers between Jews and foreigners had been broken down in Jesus Christ (Eph. 2:11—3:6). Both Jews and Gentiles could belong to God's new people, the church, through faith in Christ (Rom. 1:16; 4:11–12; Gal. 3:26–29).

FOREKNOWLEDGE—the unique knowledge of God that enables Him to know all events, including the free acts of people, before they happen.

God's foreknowledge is much more than foresight. God does not know future events and human actions because He foresees them; He knows them because He wills them to happen (Job 14:5; Ps. 139:15–16). Thus God's foreknowledge is an act of His will (Is. 41:4; Rev. 1:8, 17; 21:6).

In Romans 8:29 and 11:2, the apostle Paul's use of the word "foreknew" means "chose" or "to set special affection on." The electing love of God, not foresight of human action, is the basis of His predestination and salvation (Rom. 8:29–30, 33). This same idea is used to express the nation of Israel's special relationship to God (Acts 2:23; Rom. 11:2; 1 Pet. 1:2, 20).

FOREMAN (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

FORERUNNER—one who goes (literally, runs) before. The word is used only once in the New Testament to describe Jesus, who has opened a new and living way to God as our Savior and High Priest (Heb. 6:20).

FORESKIN—skin covering the end of the male sex organ. The foreskin was cut off in the rite of CIRCUMCISION, the sign of the Abrahamic covenant (Gen. 17:10–25). Males had their foreskin removed eight days after birth (Lev. 12:3). Because circumcision was a sign of the covenant with God, the word "foreskin" symbolically represented rebellion against God. Thus, the Israelites were told to "circumcise the foreskin of your heart" (Jer. 4:4), or to give up their disobedience.

FOREST—a grove or thicket of trees. Forests were far more common in ancient Israel than they are in the Holy Land today. Forests were especially abundant in the hills of Lebanon, Carmel, Bashan, the Sharon plain, and the Jordan valley. Extensive deforestation began even before the time of Abraham (around 2000 B.C.) with the continuing demand for timber, especially for building (2 Chr. 27:4; Neh. 2:8), fuel (Is. 44:14–15), and agriculture (Is. 29:17).

The forests spoken of in the Bible included everything from rough scrubland (Ezek. 20:46; scrubland, REB) to impenetrable jungle. The forest was a place of fear and of wild animals (Ps. 104:20), especially lions (Amos 3:4); but it belonged to God and would ultimately praise Him (Ps. 96:12; Is. 44:23).

The prophets often spoke of forests in a symbolic way. Forests represented both human pride (2 Kin. 19:23; Is. 10:34) and people who were ready for judgment, whether as the lion's prey (Is. 56:9; Jer. 5:6) or as fuel for the fire (Is. 9:18–19; 10:18–19). But the forest also was a picture of luxuriant growth, symbolizing the fruitfulness and glory of those on whom God poured His Spirit (Is. 32:15; 35:2).

FORGE (see TOOLS OF THE BIBLE).

FORGER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

FORGIVENESS—the act of excusing or pardoning others in spite of their slights, shortcomings, and errors. As a theological term, forgiveness refers to God's pardon of the sins of human beings.

No religious book except the Bible teaches that God completely forgives sin (Ps. 51:1, 9; Is. 38:17; Heb. 10:17). The initiative comes from Him (John 3:16; Col. 2:13) because He is ready to forgive (Luke 15:11–32). He is a God of grace and pardon (Neh. 9:17; Dan. 9:9).

Sin deserves divine punishment because it is a violation of God's holy character (Gen. 2:17; Rom. 1:18–32; 1 Pet. 1:16), but His pardon is gracious (Ps. 130:4; Rom. 5:6–8). In order for God to forgive sin, two conditions are necessary. A life must be taken as a substitute for that of the sinner (Lev. 17:11, 14; Heb. 9:22), and the sinner must come to God's sacrifice in a spirit of repentance and faith (Mark 1:4; Acts 10:43; James 5:15).

Forgiveness in the New Testament is directly linked to Christ (Acts 5:31; Col. 1:14), His sacrificial death on the cross (Rom. 4:24), and His resurrection (2 Cor. 5:15). He was the morally perfect sacrifice (Rom. 8:3), the final and ultimate fulfillment of all Old Testament sacrifices (Heb. 9:11—10:18). Since He bore the law's death penalty against sinners (Gal. 3:10–13), those who trust in His sacrifice are freed from that penalty. By faith sinners are forgiven—"justified" in Paul's terminology (Rom. 3:28; Gal. 3:8–9). Those who are forgiven sin's penalty also die to its controlling power in their lives (Rom. 6:1–23).

Christ's resurrection was more than proof of His deity or innocence; it was related in a special way to His forgiveness. Christ's resurrection was an act by which God wiped out the false charges against Him; it was God's declaration of the perfect righteousness of His Son, the last Adam, and of His acceptance of Christ's sacrifice (1 Tim. 3:16). Because He has been acquitted and declared righteous, this is also true for those whom He represents. Thus, Christ's resurrection was a necessary condition for the forgiveness of human sin (1 Cor. 15:12–28).

To be forgiven is to be identified with Christ in His crucifixion and resurrection.

Christ has the authority to forgive sins (Matt. 1:21; Heb. 9:11—10:18). This forgiveness is an essential part of the gospel message (Acts 2:38; 5:31). But blasphemy against the Holy Spirit (attributing to Satan a deed done by Jesus through the power of God's Spirit) is an unpardonable sin (Mark 3:28–29)—not because God cannot or will not forgive such a sin but because such a hard-hearted person has put himself beyond the possibility of repentance and faith.

God's forgiveness of us demands that we forgive others because grace brings responsibility and obligation (Matt. 18:23–35; Luke 6:37). Jesus placed no limits on the extent to which Christians are to forgive others (Matt. 18:22, 35; Luke 17:4). A forgiving spirit shows that one is a true follower of Christ (Matt. 5:43–48; Mark 11:25).

FORK—a three-pronged pitchfork, a farm tool used as a weapon by Saul's ill-equipped army (1 Sam. 13:21). Special forks of bronze and gold were also used by the priests to handle animal sacrifices in the tabernacle and temple (Ex. 27:3; 1 Chr. 28:17; fleshhooks, KJV).

FORMER GATE (see GATES OF JERUSALEM AND THE TEMPLE).

FORNICATION [for nih KAY shun]—sexual relationships outside the bonds of marriage. The technical distinction between fornication and ADULTERY is that adultery involves married persons while fornication involves at least one person who is unmarried. But the New Testament often uses the term in a general sense for any unchastity. Of the seven lists of sins found in the writings of Paul, the word "fornication" is found in five of them (Rom. 13:13; 1 Cor. 5:11; Gal. 5:19; Eph. 5:3; Col. 3:5). In the Book of Revelation, fornication is symbolic of how idolatry and pagan religion defiles true worship of God (Rev. 14:8; 17:4).

FORT, FORTIFICATION—the practice of erecting defensive walls around a city to protect it from enemy attacks. Such fortifications were not used widely by Israel until the period of the United Kingdom under David and Solomon. Before that time, the Israelites hid from roving enemy bands in caves and mountain strongholds (Judg. 6:2). The first Israelite city to be fortified was Saul's capital at Gibeah. His successor David used fortifications extensively, especially at the capital city of Jerusalem.

The first fortifications were massive walls around cities. Material for these walls was plentiful in rocky Palestine. Usually they were from 5 to 8 meters (15 to 25 feet) thick, and about 8 meters (25 feet) high. Sometimes several walls were built around a city for even greater protection.

The massive walls were strengthened at regular intervals by supporting balconies and embankments. Towers were erected on the corners and at obvious points of attack (2 Chr. 14:7; Zeph. 1:16). The tops of these towers often looked like rows of teeth with gaps between them. The protective towers were placed at regular intervals along the wall to give the city's defending archers a good vantage point for turning back an attack.

The walls were protected outside the city by a dry moat or an earth ramp heaped against the wall to make direct assault almost impossible. Most towns had only one or two gates. For even greater security, these massive gates were often reinforced with metal, usually bronze (Ps. 107:16; Is. 45:2).

Fortified cities were most often overcome by a prolonged siege from the enemy army. The enemy stationed their forces outside the walls so nothing could get in or out of the fortress. The greatest danger to a city under such a siege was a shortage of water. For this reason a city needed to be situated close to an abundant supply of water. If the water supply was not situated inside the walls, long underground tunnels were sometimes built to provide convenient access during times of siege.

Several methods were used by the attacking army to weaken a city's walls. The Assyrians built earthen causeways so their siege machines, or battering rams, could be rolled up to the wall to break it down. Attackers sometimes tunneled underneath to weaken the walls. Once the walls were weakened, a direct attack was made on the city.

Walled cities that served as Israelite defense posts included Lachish, Beth Horon, Samaria, Jezreel, Geba, and Mizpah. Solomon built fortresses around Jerusalem, Megiddo, Hazor, and Gezer (1 Kin. 9:15) as well as defense outposts across the kingdom for his army. His son Rehoboam fortified fifteen more cities (2 Chr. 11:5–12).

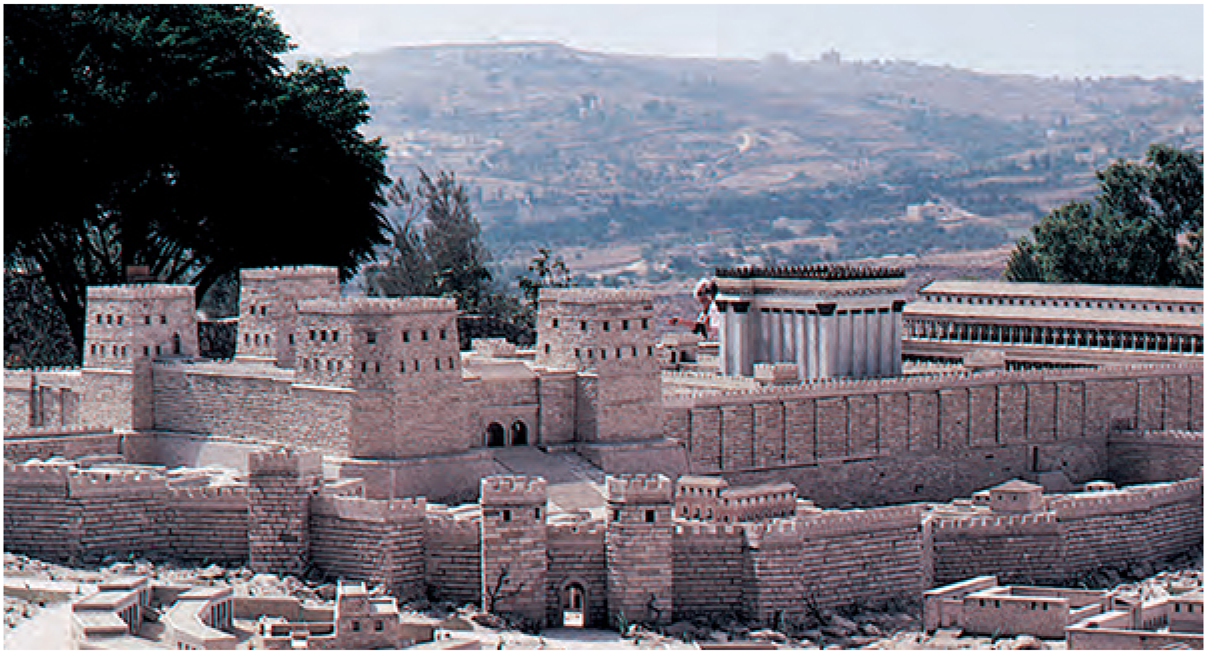

Photo by E. B. Trovillion

• A model of Jerusalem as it might have looked in the time of Jesus. The city was protected by massive walls, fortified gates, and defense towers built into the wall system.

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

• Excavations at Hazor, a city in northern Israel fortified by Solomon as a military stronghold (1 Kin. 9:15).

FORTIFIED CITIES—cities strengthened by walls, towers, gates and bars (Deut. 3:5).

When the Israelites entered the Promised Land, they found many fortified cities belonging to the Canaanites and Amorites (Josh. 14:12). The strength of these fortifications is proven by the fact that the Canaanites resisted the Israelite invaders for a long time. Judges 1:27–36 describes the incomplete conquest. Jerusalem, for instance, was still held by the Jebusites until the time of David (1 Chr. 11:5).

After the Israelites occupied the land of Canaan, they rebuilt and improved the destroyed defenses. King Solomon built "the Millo, the wall of Jerusalem, Hazor, Megiddo, and Gezer" (1 Kin. 9:15). Rehoboam fortified fifteen cities in Judah (2 Chr. 11:5–12). Asa fortified Geba and Mizpah (1 Kin. 15:22).

No city could hold out long against a siege without an adequate water supply. A city, therefore, was generally built near a river or a spring. Long tunnels were dug to supply water, as in the case of Hezekiah's tunnel, also called the Siloam tunnel (2 Kin. 20:20; 2 Chr. 32:30), cut through solid rock from the spring of Gihon to the pool of Siloam in Jerusalem—a distance of about 533 meters (1,749 feet).

FORTUNATUS [for chuh NAY tus] (fortunate)—a Christian of Corinth who, along with Stephanas and Achaicus, encouraged and comforted the apostle Paul at Ephesus (1 Cor. 16:17). These three men possibly carried Paul's letter (1 Corinthians) with them when they returned to Corinth.

FORTUNE-TELLING—predicting the future through magic and enchantment. At Philippi the apostle Paul healed a slave girl who had brought her masters much profit by fortune-telling (Acts 16:16; soothsaying, KJV; fortune-telling, NRSV). Also see MAGIC, SORCERY, AND DIVINATION.

FOUNDATION—the strong, stable base on which a building is constructed. When moral foundations are destroyed, a society is in danger of collapse (Ps. 11:3). Jesus taught that believers should build their faith on the strong foundation of practicing His teachings (Matt. 7:24–27). The apostle Paul also referred to Christ as a foundation for believers (1 Cor. 3:11). Also see HOUSE.

FOUNDATION GATE (see GATES OF JERUSALEM AND THE TEMPLE).

FOUNDER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

FOUNTAIN—a water source. Both the NKJV and the KJV use this word to translate several different Hebrew and Greek words. The two main types of fountains were the man-made well, or cistern, and the natural spring. To the Israelites, after forty years of wandering in the dry wilderness of Sinai, the many freshwater springs of Canaan were a sign of real blessing. In this dry climate it was important that a spring was nearby before a city or village could be established. Thus the Hebrew word for spring, (en) is preserved today in such biblical place names as En Dor, meaning “fountains of habitation,” or En Gedi, “spring of a kid.”

When the technique of plastering walls was developed, it made it possible to make storage places to capture runoff water during a rain. This development made it possible to support larger populations, especially in cities. But the water from these cisterns was never as desirable as the “living (flowing) water” of natural springs (Jer. 2:13).

FOUNTAIN GATE (see GATES OF JERUSALEM AND THE TEMPLE).

FOWL (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

FOWLER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

FOX (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

FRANKINCENSE (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

FREEDMAN—a free person, in contrast to a slave, who is held in bondage. Paul used this word to describe a person who has been freed by Jesus Christ from bondage to sin (1 Cor. 7:22). The “Synagogue of the Freedmen” (Acts. 6:9) probably consisted of Jewish prisoners who had been liberated.

FREEDOM—the absence of slavery; the ability to do and go as one desires. The concept of freedom, both physical and spiritual, is expressed in several different ways in the Bible.

Only God has absolute freedom. He is not controlled from the outside. Human beings, while not totally free, can experience a measure of freedom in different areas of life: social, economic, political, and spiritual.

Slavery was common in biblical times. Many persons served others in bondage. The law of Moses provided for the Year of JUBILEE, when slaves were given the opportunity to gain their freedom (Leviticus 25; 27).

The EXODUS of the people of Israel from Egypt is an example of God’s bringing His people into freedom. When the apostle Paul spoke of a free man (Col. 3:11), he referred to rights of citizenship. Politically, in Paul’s day, one might be either a citizen of Rome, a free person (Acts 22:28), or a noncitizen, one who was not free under the Roman law. As a free person, Paul had certain rights, especially the right of a fair trial. In Christ, distinctions between citizens and noncitizens—”slave” and “free”—disappear (Gal. 3:28). In Christ, all have the glorious freedom of the children of God.

In the spiritual realm, Jesus explained that when people know the truth, the truth will set them free (John 8:32). He Himself is the Truth (John 14:6). Jesus also declared that if He, the Son of God, set persons free, they would be truly free (John 8:36). Sin enslaves; Christ sets free.

The apostle Paul pointed out that the law, when not properly understood, also enslaves. A mechanical sense of compulsion to obey the law binds and restricts one’s freedom. Christ loosens the hold that the law has on Christians (Gal. 5:1, 13).

Set free from sin, the believer is able to choose service for God (Rom. 6:22). Using the phrase “the Lord’s freedman,” Paul emphasized the spiritual freedom that belongs to believers (1 Cor. 7:22). The spiritual freedom of others becomes the concern of those who have been set free by Christ.

FRIEND—a person whom one loves and trusts; close companion or comrade (Gen. 38:12). Perhaps the most famous friendship in the Bible was that of David and Jonathan (1 Sam. 18:1–4). Abraham was called God’s friend (2 Chr. 20:7), and God spoke to Moses “face to face, as a man speaks to his friend” (Ex. 33:11). Jesus said we are His friends if we obey Him (John 15:14).

FRIEND OF THE BRIDEGROOM (see BRIDEGROOM, FRIEND OF THE).

FRINGE—KJV word for TASSEL.

FROG (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

FRONTLET (see PHYLACTERIES).

FROST—a covering of small ice crystals, formed from frozen water vapor, that falls over the land at night during the winter months (Gen. 31:40). God once punished the rebellious nation of Israel by destroying their sycamore trees with frost (Ps. 78:47).

FRUIT (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

FRYING PAN—KJV term for covered pan, a special pan used for baking bread for the grain offering in the TABERNACLE (Lev. 2:7).

FUEL—any material that was burned to produce heat or light. In Palestine, wood and other fuel sources were scarce. People used almost any flammable substance for fuel. The Bible speaks of grass (Luke 12:28) and dung (Ezek. 4:15) as fuels used for cooking food. Olive oil was used as fuel for lamps (Ex. 25:6).

FULFILL (see PLEROMA).

FULLER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

FULLER'S FIELD—a spot just outside the city walls of Jerusalem where fullers, or launderers, washed and dyed clothes and cloth and hung them out to dry (2 Kin. 18:17; Is. 36:2). The place was apparently close to the GIHON SPRING, where an ample supply of water was available.

Also see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES.

FULLER'S SOAP—an alkaline salt or natural lye extracted from Asiatic soap plants that are reduced to ashes to obtain potash (Mal. 3:2; launderer's soap, NIV).

FULLNESS (see PLEROMA).

FUNERAL—a burial ceremony. The Bible provides few details about the actual rituals involved in burying the dead in ancient Palestine. Corpses were generally buried (Gen. 23:4, 6, 8), but only Joseph is said to have been embalmed and put in a coffin (Gen. 50:26). Mourners at funerals included family members (Gen. 37:34), acquaintances (1 Sam. 15:35) and, at times, professional mourners (Eccl. 12:5).

Mourning customs included weeping (Gen. 23:2), wearing sackcloth (Is. 15:3), cutting one's hair (Jer. 7:29), fasting (2 Sam. 1:11), and throwing ashes on oneself (Ezek. 27:30). A procession of mourners usually carried the corpse to the burial site (2 Sam. 3:31–34).

FURLONG (see WEIGHTS AND MEASURES).

FURNACE (see TOOLS OF THE BIBLE).

FURNACES, TOWER OF THE (see OVENS, TOWER OF THE).

FURNITURE—the furnishings of the tabernacle (Ex. 31:7–9). While this word is never used to describe the furnishings of a household, the furniture in a typical house in Palestine in Bible times included a bed, table, chair, and lampstand.

FURROW—a long, narrow trench in the ground made by a plow. The prophet Hosea declared that God's judgment would spring up against His people's sins "like hemlock in the furrows of the field" (Hos. 10:4).

FURY—violent and intense anger; rage. The Bible speaks often of the "fury of the LORD" (Is. 51:13, 22)—a phrase referring to the judgment of a holy God against the sinful rebellion of human beings. Also see WRATH.

FUTURE—the time that is yet to come (Ps. 37:37–38). After the archangel Gabriel interpreted Daniel's vision, he said to Daniel, "Seal up the vision, for it refers to many days in the future" (Dan. 8:17–26). The Christian believer is confident of the future because he belongs to Jesus Christ.

G

GAAL [GAY al]—a son of Ebed who led an unsuccessful rebellion by the inhabitants of Shechem against ABIMELECH. Abimelech defeated Gaal and demolished Shechem, spreading salt over it and making it uninhabitable (Judg. 9:26–45).

GAASH [GAY ash]—a mountain in the hill country of Ephraim. On the north side of Mount Gaash was the village of Timnah Serah (Josh. 24:30), the place where Joshua was buried.

GABA [GAY buh]—a form of GEBA.

GABBAI [GAB eye]—a chief of the tribe of Benjamin who lived in Jerusalem after the captivity (Neh. 11:8).

GABBATHA [GAB ah thah] (elevated place)—the Aramaic name of the place from which Pontius Pilate—the Roman prefect, or governor, of Judea—pronounced the formal sentence of death by crucifixion against Jesus (John 19:13). Gabbatha was probably a raised platform. It has been excavated and identified with the Roman pavement of the courtyard of the Tower of ANTONIA, at the northwest corner of the temple area.

GABRIEL [GAY brih el] (God is great)—an ARCHANGEL who acts as the messenger of God; he appeared to Daniel (Dan. 8:16), Zacharias (Luke 1:19), and the Virgin Mary (Luke 1:26–38).

All appearances of Gabriel recorded in the Bible are connected with the promise about the coming of the Messiah. But one passage may link Gabriel with Christ's return. In Christian tradition, Gabriel is sometimes identified as the archangel whose voice is heard at the Second Coming of Christ (1 Thess. 4:16). Although Gabriel is not mentioned by name in this passage, he is sometimes depicted as the trumpeter of the Last Judgment.

GAD [gad] (good fortune)—the name of the founder of a tribe in Israel, a prophet, and a pagan god:

1. The seventh of Jacob's twelve sons. Gad was the firstborn of ZILPAH (Leah's maid) and a brother of Asher (Gen. 30:11). Moses praised Gad for his bravery and faithfulness to duty (Deut. 33:20–21). With the possible exception of Ezbon, Gad's seven sons all founded tribal families (Num. 26:15–18).
2. A prophet described as David's "seer" (1 Chr. 21:9). Gad commanded David to buy the threshing floor of Araunah the Jebusite, which became the site of the TEMPLE. Gad the prophet also helped arrange the tabernacle music (2 Chr. 29:25) and is credited with writing an account of David's reign (1 Chr. 29:29).
3. The name of a pagan god (Is. 65:11, NKJV; Fortune, NIV). The name "Gad" appears in compound names, such as Baal Gad (Josh. 11:17) and Migdal Gad (Josh. 15:37).

Also see GODS, PAGAN.

GAD, RAVINE OF—a place connected with David's census of the Hebrew nation (2 Sam. 24:5; river of Gad, KJV). The ravine of Gad is probably the Arnon River valley.

GAD, TRIBE OF—the tribe that sprang from Gad and the territory this tribe inhabited, often referred to as Gilead (Num. 1:14). The territory of Gad lay east of the Jordan River between the half-tribe of Manasseh to the north and the tribe of Reuben to the south. Its western boundary was the Jordan River; on the east it faced the territory of the Ammonites. Gad had few major towns.

When Moses assigned the territory east of the Jordan River to the Gadites, he stipulated that they must cross over the river to help the other tribes in the conquest of Canaan (Num. 32:20–32). They did not always do this, however, most likely because the tribe experienced a great deal of trouble holding its own territory.

GADARA [GAD ah ruh] (walls)—a city of TRANSJORDAN about 10 kilometers (6 miles) southeast of the Sea of Galilee (see Map 6, C–2). Gadara was primarily a Greek city, one of the cities of the DECAPOLIS. It also was the capital city of the Roman province of Perea. The ruins of Gadara, present-day Um Qeis, include two theaters, a basilica, baths, and a street lined with columns. They indicate that at one time Gadara was a large and beautiful city.

Matthew 8:28–34 records that two demon-possessed men of the area of Gadara were healed by Jesus. Mark 5:1–20 and Luke 8:26–39 refer to only one man possessed by unclean spirits. He may have been the more violent of these two.

Also see GADARENES.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Remains of a church at ancient Gergesa which memorialized Jesus' healing of the demoniac (Matt. 8:28–34). This region east of the Sea of Galilee was also known as Gadara and Gerasa.

GADARENES [gad uh REENZ]—the inhabitants of GADARA, the capital of the Roman province of Perea. The Gadarenes are mentioned in the account of Jesus' healing of the demon-possessed man (Mark 5:1–20) (or men) (Matt. 8:28–34, NIV, NAS, NRSV, REB). The city was on the east side of the Jordan River, about 10 kilometers (6 miles) from the Sea of Galilee, opposite Tiberias. Variant readings of this name in different English versions are Gergesenes and Gerasenes.

GADDI [GAD dih] (my fortune)—one of the twelve spies sent by Moses to explore the land of Canaan (Num. 13:11).

GADDIEL [GAD ih ell] (God is my fortune)—one of the twelve spies sent by Moses to explore the land of Canaan (Num. 13:10).

GADI [GA dih] (my fortune)—the father of Menahem, king of Israel (2 Kin. 15:14, 17).

GADITES [GADD ites]—members of the tribe of GAD (Deut. 3:12; Josh. 1:12).

GAHAM [GAY ham]—the second son of Nahor and his concubine Reumah (Gen. 22:24).

GAHAR [GAY hahr]—the head of a family of temple servants who returned from the captivity with Zerubbabel (Ezra 2:47).

GAIUS [GAY US]—a common Roman name shared by several men in the New Testament:

1. A native of Macedonia and a companion of the apostle Paul (Acts 19:29).
2. A man of Derbe who accompanied Paul as far as Asia (Acts 20:4). He may be the same person as No. 3.
3. A Corinthian who was baptized under Paul's ministry (1 Cor. 1:14).
4. The person to whom John addressed his third letter. John commended him for his generosity and faithful service (3 John 1, 5). He may be the same person as No. 3.

GALAL [GAY lal] (rolling)—the name of two Levites who returned from the Babylonian captivity:

1. A priest who served at Jerusalem (1 Chr. 9:15).
2. The father of Shemaiah (1 Chr. 9:16), or Shammua (Neh. 11:17).

GALATIA [guh LAY shih uh]—a region in central Asia Minor (modern Turkey) bounded on the east by Cappadocia, on the west by Asia, on the south by Pamphylia and Cilicia, and on the north by Bithynia and Pontus (see Map 7, D–2). The northern part of the region was settled in the third century B.C. by Celtic tribes that had been driven out of Gaul (France). From these tribes, the region derived its name, Galatia.

In 64 B.C. the Roman general Pompey defeated the king of Pontus, Mithradates VI, and established a foothold for Rome in the region. When the last Galatian king, Amyntas, died in 25 B.C., the Romans inherited the kingdom. Caesar Augustus then created the Roman province of Galatia, making Ancyra the capital and annexing a number of districts to the south and west, including Pisidia, Isauria, Phrygia, and Lycaonia. The term Galatia, consequently, is somewhat ambiguous. It may refer to the older ethnic region in north-central Asia Minor (north Galatia), or to the later and larger Roman province (including south Galatia).

On his first missionary journey (about A.D. 46–48), the apostle Paul and Barnabas evangelized the Galatian cities of Pisidian Antioch, Iconium, Lystra, and Derbe (Acts 13–14). Paul revisited the area on his second and third missionary journeys.

Although the point is debated, it appears that Paul's Epistle to the Galatians (Gal. 1:2; 3:1) was addressed to the churches founded by him in the southern part of the province of Galatia (south Galatian theory). No evidence exists to show that Paul visited the region of Galatia in north-central Asia Minor. Although Acts 16:6 and 18:23 are sometimes thought to refer to this more remote northern region, the context of these passages seems to point to southern Galatia (Acts 13–14).

Also see GALATIANS, EPISTLE TO THE.

GALATIANS [guh LAY shih uns]—the inhabitants of GALATIA (Gal. 3:1).

GALATIANS, EPISTLE TO THE—a brief but energetic letter from the apostle Paul to the Christians of Galatia. Galatians is one of Paul's most commanding epistles; its importance far exceeds its size. It provides valuable information about Paul's life between his conversion and missionary journeys (1:11—2:14). Beyond its autobiographical value, however, Galatians ranks as one of Paul's great epistles; in it he forcefully proclaims the doctrine of justification by faith alone. Martin Luther, the Reformer, claimed Galatians as “my epistle.” So wedded was Luther to Galatians, both in interest and temperament, that, together, they shaped the course of the Reformation. Galatians has been called the “Magna Carta of Christian Liberty.” The peals of its liberating truth have thundered down through the centuries, calling people to new life by the grace of God.

Structure of the Epistle. Galatians falls into three sections, each two chapters long. The first third of the letter is a defense of Paul’s apostleship and gospel (chaps. 1–2). The middle section (chaps. 3–4) is devoted to the question of salvation. In it Paul uses a variety of means —logic (3:15–20), quotations from the Old Testament (3:7–14), metaphor (4:1–6), personal authority (4:12–20), and allegory (4:21–31) —to argue that salvation comes not through obeying the Mosaic law, but by receiving the grace of God through faith. The third section of Galatians concerns the consequences of saving faith (chaps. 5–6). Christians are free to love (5:1–15); the Holy Spirit produces fruit in their lives (5:16–26); and the needs of others lay a rightful claim on them (6:1–10). Paul concludes by summing up the main points of the letter (6:11–16), along with a closing admonition that he bears the marks of Jesus in his body (6:17), and a blessing (6:18).

Authorship and Date. No epistle in the New Testament has better claim to come from Paul than does Galatians. The epistle bears his name (1:1), tells his story (1:11—2:14), and expounds the truth that occupied his life—justification by faith in Jesus Christ (2:16).

The date of the epistle is less certain. It depends on another question: to whom is the epistle addressed? This question is difficult because the word GALATIA (1:2) is ambiguous. Ethnically, the word refers to a people of Celtic stock living in northern Asia Minor. Politically, however, it refers to the region throughout central Asia Minor, including various districts in the south, that were annexed to Galatia when it was made a province by the Romans in 25 B.C. It is impossible to say for sure which use of the term Paul intended, although the broader political usage seems more probable.

Paul was well acquainted with southern Galatia (Acts 13–14; 16:1–5), and we have no certain evidence that he ever visited northern Galatia (unless Acts 16:6 and 18:23 refer to that area).

Moreover, it seems unlikely that Paul would have addressed the Galatians in such a direct way unless he enjoyed a close relationship with them. These reasons indicate that the people to whom the letter was addressed probably lived in southern Galatia. If this is so, it probably was written before the Council of Jerusalem (Acts 15). If it had already occurred (about A.D. 49), Paul would undoubtedly have cited the decision of that council since it agreed with the thrust of his argument in the epistle. If this is so, Galatians may be Paul's earliest (surviving) epistle, written perhaps in A.D. 48.

If, on the other hand, "Galatia" refers to the northern ethnic region, which Paul could not have visited before his second (Acts 16:6) or third (Acts 18:23) missionary journey, the letter could not have been written before the mid-fifties. But this viewpoint seems less likely to be true.

Historical Setting. After Paul had evangelized the churches of Galatia, he received disturbing news that they were falling away from the gospel he had taught them (1:6). Certain religious activists had visited Galatia after Paul's departure and had persuaded the Christians there that the gospel presented by Paul was insufficient for salvation (1:7). In addition to faith in Jesus Christ, they insisted that a person must be circumcised according to the law of Moses (5:12) and must keep the Sabbath and other Jewish holy days (4:10), including the Jewish ceremonial law (5:3). These "troublers" (1:7), as Paul calls them, may have included some GNOSTIC ideas (4:3, 9) in their teachings. These teachers are sometimes referred to as JUDAIZERS, since they taught that both faith and works—belief in Jesus and obedience to the Law—are necessary for salvation.

Theological Contribution. News of the troublers' "perversion of the gospel" (1:7) was distressing to Paul. Paul quickly rose to the Judaizers' challenge and produced this letter. From the outset he was ready for battle; he abandoned his customary introduction and plunged immediately into the battle with the Judaizers. The Judaizers had suggested that Paul was an inferior apostle, if one at all, and that his gospel was not authoritative (1:10). Paul countered with an impassioned defense of his conversion (1:11–17) and of his approval by the leaders of the church at Jerusalem (1:18—2:10). Indeed, the gospel that Paul had delivered to the Galatians was not his own, nor was he taught it; but it came "through the revelation of Jesus Christ" (1:11– 12). Those who presumed to change it were meddling with the very plan of God (1:7–8).

God’s plan is that Jews and Gentiles are justified before God by faith alone. This plan can be traced to the beginning of Israel’s history, for Abraham “believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness” (Gal. 3:6; also Gen. 15:6). The law, which did not come until 430 years after Abraham (3:17), was never intended to replace justification by faith. Rather, the law was to teach us of our need for Christ (3:24–25). Christ, therefore, is the fulfillment of the promise to Abraham.

The result of justification by grace through faith is spiritual freedom. Paul appealed to the Galatians to stand fast in their freedom, and not get “entangled again with a yoke of bondage [that is, the Mosaic law]” (5:1). Christian freedom is not an excuse to gratify one’s lower nature; rather, it is an opportunity to love one another (5:13; 6:7–10). Such freedom does not insulate one from life’s struggles. Indeed, it may intensify the battle between the Spirit and the flesh. Nevertheless, the flesh (the lower nature) has been crucified with Christ (2:20); and, as a consequence, the Spirit will bear its fruit—such as love, joy, and peace—in the life of the believer (5:22–23).

Special Considerations. The letter to the Galatians was written in a spirit of inspired agitation. For Paul, the issue was not whether a person was circumcised, but whether he had become “a new creation” (6:15). If Paul had not been successful in his argument for justification by faith alone, Christianity would have remained a sect within Judaism, rather than becoming the universal way of salvation. Galatians, therefore, is not only Luther’s epistle; it is the epistle of every believer who confesses with Paul:

“I have been crucified with Christ; it is no longer I who live, but Christ lives in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me” (Gal. 2:20).

Galatians: A Study and Teaching Outline

I. The Gospel of Grace Defended 1:1—2:21
- A. Introduction 1:1–9
- B. The Gospel of Grace Is Given by Divine Revelation 1:10–24
- C. The Gospel of Grace Is Approved by Jerusalem Leadership 2:1–10
- D. The Gospel of Grace Is Vindicated by Rebuking Peter 2:11–21

II. The Gospel of Grace Explained 3:1—4:31
- A. The Holy Spirit Is Given by Faith, Not by Works 3:1–5
- B. Abraham Was Justified by Faith, Not by Works 3:6–9
- C. Justification Is by Faith, Not by the Law 3:10—4:11
  - 1. Christ Redeems Us from the Curse of the Law 3:10–14
  - 2. The Abrahamic Covenant Is Not Voided by the Law 3:15–18
  - 3. Law Is Given to Drive Us to Faith 3:19–22
  - 4. Believers Are Free from the Law 3:23—4:11
- D. Galatians Receive Blessings by Faith, Not by the Law 4:12–20
- E. Law and Grace Cannot Co-exist 4:21–31

III. The Gospel of Grace Applied 5:1—6:18
- A. Position of Liberty: Stand Fast 5:1–12
- B. Practice of Liberty: Love One Another 5:13–15
- C. Power for Liberty: Walk in the Spirit 5:16–26
  - 1. Conflict between the Spirit and the Flesh 5:16–18
  - 2. Works of the Flesh 5:19–21
  - 3. Fruit of the Spirit 5:22–26
- D. Performance in Liberty: Do Good to All 6:1–10
  - 1. Bear One Another’s Burdens 6:1–5
  - 2. Do Not Be Weary While Doing Good 6:6–10
- E. Conclusion 6:11–18
  - 1. Motives of the Circumcised 6:11–13
  - 2. Motives of the Apostle Paul 6:14–18

◆

GALBANUM (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

GALEED [GAL ee ed] (heap of witness)—a pile of memorial stones erected by Jacob and his father-in-law Laban as a sign of their covenant of peace and as a boundary mark between their territories. Galeed was located near Mount Gilead (Gen. 31:47).

GALILEAN [gal uh LEE un]—a native or inhabitant of GALILEE (Luke 13:1–2; John 4:45). After the captivity, Galilee was only sparsely resettled by Jews. Jesus (Luke 23:6) and eleven of His disciples were Galileans; only Judas Iscariot came from outside Galilee. Because of their distinctive accent, Galileans were easily recognized when they spoke. Thus, during the trial of Jesus, it was a simple matter for the servant girl to detect Simon Peter as one of Jesus' disciples. She knew he was a Galilean; his speech betrayed him (Mark 14:70).

The name Galilean was sometimes used as a term of contempt when applied to the disciples of Jesus (Luke 22:59; Acts 2:7). Flavius Claudius Julianus, the Roman emperor (A.D. 361–363), called Christ "the Galilean God" and made a law that all Christians must be called Galileans. He apparently hoped to end the use of the name "Christian."

GALILEE [GAL ih lee] (circle or circuit)—a Roman province of Palestine during the time of Jesus (see Map 3, B–2). Measuring roughly 80 kilometers (50 miles) north to south and about 58 kilometers (30 miles) east to west, Galilee was the most northerly of the three provinces of Palestine—Galilee, Samaria, and Judea. Covering more than a third of Palestine's territory, Galilee extended from the base of Mount Hermon in the north to the Carmel and Gilboa ranges in the south. The Mediterranean Sea and the Jordan River valley were its western and eastern borders, respectively.

Originally a district in the hill country of Naphtali (2 Kin. 15:29; 1 Chr. 6:76), Galilee was inhabited by a "mixed race" of Jews and heathen. The Canaanites continued to dominate Galilee for many years after Joshua's invasion (Judg. 1:30–33; 4:2). It was historically known among the Jews as "Galilee of the Gentiles" (Is. 9:1; Matt. 4:15).

Galilee had such a mixed population that Solomon could award unashamedly to Hiram, king of Tyre, twenty of its cities in payment for timber from Lebanon (1 Kin. 9:11). After conquest by Tiglath–Pileser, king of Assyria (about 732 B.C.), Galilee was repopulated by a colony of heathen immigrants (2 Kin. 15:29; 17:24). Thus the Galilean accent and dialect were very distinct (Matt. 26:69, 73). For this and other reasons, the pure-blooded Jews of Judea, who were more orthodox in tradition, despised the Galileans (John 7:52). Rather contemptuously Nathanael asked, "Can anything good come out of Nazareth?" (John 1:46).

Galilee consisted essentially of an upland area of forests and farmlands. An imaginary line from the plain of Acco (Acre) to the north end of the Sea of Galilee divided the country into Upper and Lower Galilee. Since this area was actually the foothills of the Lebanon mountains, Upper and Lower Galilee had two different elevations.

The higher of the elevations, Upper Galilee, was more than 1,000 meters (3,000 feet) above sea level; and in the days of the New Testament it was densely forested and thinly inhabited. The lower elevation, Lower Galilee, averaged between 500 to 700 meters (1,500 to 2,000 feet) above sea level; it was less hilly and enjoyed a milder climate than Upper Galilee. This area included the rich plain of Esdraelon and was a “pleasant” land (Gen. 49:15). Chief exports of the region were olive oil, grains, and fish.

Galilee was the boyhood home of Jesus Christ. He was a lad of Nazareth, as it was prophesied: “He shall be called a Nazarene” (Matt. 2:23). Here He attempted to begin His public ministry, but was rejected by His own people (Luke 4:16–30).

All the disciples of Jesus, with the exception of Judas Iscariot, came from Galilee (Matt. 4:18; John 1:43–44; Acts 1:11; 2:7). In Cana of Galilee He performed His first miracle (John 2:11); in fact, most of His thirty-three great miracles were performed in Galilee. Capernaum in Galilee became the headquarters of His ministry (Matt. 4:13; 9:1). Of His thirty-two parables, nineteen were spoken in Galilee. The first three gospels concern themselves largely with Christ’s Galilean ministry. Most of the events of our Lord’s life and ministry are set against the backdrop of the Galilean hills.

When Herod the Great died in 4 B.C., Galilee fell to the authority of HEROD ANTIPAS, who governed until A.D. 39. He built his capital city at Tiberias on the Sea of Galilee and was succeeded by HEROD AGRIPPA I who took the title of “king.” After Agrippa’s death in A.D. 44 (Acts 12:23), Galilee became a ZEALOT stronghold until the Romans crushed Jewish resistance in Palestine between A.D. 66 and 73.

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

• A view from Mount Arbel, looking toward the mountains of Lower Galilee.

GALILEE, SEA OF—a freshwater lake, fed by the Jordan River, which was closely connected with the earthly ministry of Jesus (see Map 6, C–2). This “sea” is called by four different names in the Bible: the “Sea of Chinnereth” [or “Chinneroth”] (the Hebrew word for “harp-shaped,” the general outline of the lake; Num. 34:11; Josh. 12:3; 13:27); the “Lake of Gennesaret” (Luke 5:1), taking the name from the fertile Plain of Gennesaret that lies on the northwest (Matt. 14:34); the “Sea of Tiberias” (John 6:1; 21:1), because of its association with the capital of Herod Antipas; and the “Sea of Galilee” (Matt. 4:18; Mark 1:16).

Situated some 98 kilometers (60 miles) north of Jerusalem, the Sea of Galilee contains fresh water since it is fed by the Jordan. The lake itself is the deepest part of the northern Jordan Rift and thus the water collects there before it flows on its way. The surface of Galilee is about 230 meters (700 feet) below the Mediterranean Sea. The floor of the lake is another 25 to 50 meters (80 to 160 feet) lower. The lake itself is nearly 21 kilometers (13 miles) long and 13 kilometers (8 miles) wide at Magdala, the point of its greatest width.

The lake is surrounded, except on the southern side, by steep cliffs and sharply rising mountains. On the east these mountains rise to the fertile Golan Heights as high as 900 meters (2,700 feet). As a result of this formation, cool winds frequently rush down these slopes and unexpectedly stir up violent storms on the warm surface of the lake. Waves such as these were easily calmed at the command of Jesus (Mark 4:35–41).

A fishing industry thrived on the Sea of Galilee. Jesus called His first disciples—Peter, Andrew, James, and John—from that industry (1:16–20). In spite of the steep hillsides around the lake, nine cities of 15,000 population or more thrived in the first century as part of an almost continuous belt of settlements around the lake. Of these cities, Bethsaida, Tiberias, and Capernaum were the most important. On and around the Sea of Galilee Jesus performed most of His 33 recorded miracles and issued most of His teachings to His disciples and the multitudes that followed Him.

Photo by Willem A. VanGemeren

• The Sea, or Lake, of Galilee, at the point where the Jordan River flows into the northern end of the lake.

GALL (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

GALLERY—a word of uncertain meaning, describing an architectural feature of the temple in Ezekiel's vision (Ezek. 41:15–16). Various scholars have suggested the word refers to "porticoes," "colonnades," "walkways," "corridors," and "terraces."

GALLEY—a seagoing vessel of the ancient world propelled mainly by oars, sometimes with the aid of sails (Is. 33:21). Galleys were low vessels of shallow draft, used mostly for commercial shipping. Also see SHIP.

GALLIM [GAL eem] (heaps)—a village of Benjamin near Gibeah of Saul (Is. 10:30); Gallim is probably modern Khirbet Kakul, about one kilometer (half a mile) west of Anathoth (Anata).

GALLIO [GAL ih oh]—the Roman proconsul of Achaia before whom the apostle Paul appeared during his first visit to Corinth (Acts 18:12–17). When Gallio discovered that Paul's Jewish enemies had a religious grievance against him, he threw them out of his court. He also refused to take action when the mob took the synagogue ruler Sosthenes and beat him before the tribunal.

GALLON—a unit of liquid measure or capacity equal to 231 cubic inches or 3.785 liters (four quarts). Each of the six stone waterpots at the wedding in Cana of Galilee contained twenty to thirty gallons (John 2:6; two or three firkins apiece, KJV). Also see WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

GALLOWS—a platform on which a person was executed. The gallows is mentioned several times in the Book of Esther (2:23; 7:9; 9:25). In an ironic turn of events, the wicked HAMAN was executed on the very gallows where he planned to hang the Jewish leader MORDECAI (Esth. 7:10). The method of "hanging" was probably impalement on a sharp upright stake.

GAMALIEL [guh MAY lih el] (God is my recompense)—the name of two men in the Bible:

1. A leader of the tribe of Manasseh chosen to help take the census during Israel's wandering in the wilderness (Num. 1:10).
2. A famous member of the Jewish SANHEDRIN and a teacher of the Law. Gamaliel, who had taught the apostle Paul (Acts 22:3), advised the Sanhedrin to treat the apostles of the young Christian church with moderation. Gamaliel's argument was simple. If Jesus was a false prophet, as many others had been, the movement would soon fade into obscurity. If, however, the work was "of God," he pointed out, "you cannot overthrow it" (Acts 5:39).

Photo by Howard Vos

• The scholar Gamaliel, under whom Paul studied, taught on these steps of the Temple in Paul's day (Acts 5:33–40; 22:3). The steps have been uncovered in recent excavations in Jerusalem.

GAMES—activities conducted as a form of entertainment. Games are seldom mentioned in the Bible and usually only indirectly to provide the setting for a historical event or to serve as an example for a theological or ethical teaching.

Many of the games and sports mentioned in the Old Testament were of a combative nature. The purpose of these games was probably to prepare young men to handle themselves in warfare.

The Bible mentions wrestling several times. Apparently, this was a popular sport or game in Bible times. Jacob, for example, wrestled with God (Gen. 32:24–26). Some believe that the combat between Joab's and Abner's forces was also a type of wrestling (2 Sam. 2:12–16).

Another game that also served to cultivate a person's battle skills was archery. Shooting at a target prepared the young men of Israel to fight in the army. The Old Testament mentions archery several times. Jonathan sent a message to his friend David by his skillful placement of arrows in the target as he practiced with his bow (1 Sam. 20:18–23).

Job likened himself to a target that God was using for practice (Job 16:12).

Riddles, a type of word game, were well known and popular in the ancient world (Prov. 1:6). One famous riddle in the Old Testament is the one Samson posed to his thirty Philistine companions (Judg. 14:12–14). Samson's use of a riddle is also an example of another type of sport well known in all times—gambling. Samson promised that the person who could solve the riddle would receive thirty linen garments and thirty changes of clothing.

Brief mention is made in Zechariah 8:5 of children playing in the street. This verse is part of a description of the future blessing of Jerusalem.

While descriptions of games and sports are indirect and fragmentary in the Old Testament, archaeological discoveries have filled out the picture a little more fully. For instance, many children's toys from Bible times have been discovered. These include dolls, rattles, and marbles. Board games of many types have been found at archaeological sites throughout the Near East.

During the period between the Old Testament and the New Testament, quite a debate arose in the Jewish community when a GYMNASIUM was built in Jerusalem. The Jews who were in favor of at least partial acceptance of Greek culture joined in the activities of this gymnasium as both spectators and participants, while orthodox Jews saw it as a great sin. The building of this gymnasium is mentioned in the apocryphal books of 1 and 2 Maccabees and by the Jewish historian JOSEPHUS.

In the Old Testament, games provided the background to certain historical events. But in the New Testament, sports provide illustrations to important teachings. Sports involve a great deal of concentration, effort, and practice in order to win the prize. This means it was natural for the apostle Paul and the other New Testament writers to refer to sports while urging believers to practice godliness. First Corinthians 9:24–27 develops this thought most fully as Paul compares the Christian's spiritual life to the training of a runner and a boxer. Other passages in the New Testament also refer to the foot race as a parallel to the Christian's life in Christ (Gal. 2:2; 5:7; Phil 2:16; Heb. 12:1, 2).

Jesus referred briefly to children playing in the public areas of the city (Luke 7:32). But perhaps the most notable example of games in the New Testament is the description of Roman soldiers engaged in games of chance over Christ's clothing just before He was crucified (Matt. 27:35).

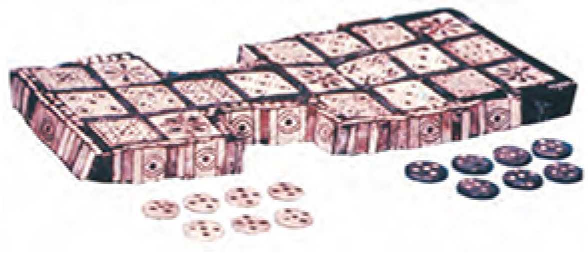

Photo by Howard Vos

- A game board from Mesopotamia that dates back to about 2500 B.C. It was discovered in excavations at the city of Ur.

GAMMAD [GAM add]—a city mentioned in the Book of Ezekiel. The reference is to the "men of Gammad," brave warriors who manned the towers of Tyre (Ezek. 27:11; "men of Gamad," NRSV; "Gammadim," KJV). Gammad may have been Kumidi in northern Syria.

GAMUL [GAY mool]—a descendant of Aaron and a chief of the Levites (1 Chr. 24:17).

GANGRENE (see DISEASES OF THE BIBLE).

GARDEN—a plot of ground where flowers, vegetables, or ornamental shrubs are grown. But the word "garden" as used in the Bible also includes parks, plantations, and orchards. Gardens that belonged to kings (2 Kin. 25:4; Neh. 3:15) were actually royal parks. The garden of the Persian King Xerxes, for example, was large enough to hold a week-long feast for thousands (Esth. 1:5).

Mesopotamian kings kept and hunted wild animals in their gardens. They also used these plots of ground for cultivating a wide variety of plants. The author of Ecclesiastes apparently regarded the planting of gardens and orchards as a royal task, demonstrating the king's prosperity (Eccl. 2:4). Occasionally, however, parts of royal gardens might be used for other purposes, such as vegetable gardens (1 Kin. 21:2) or even burial grounds (2 Kin. 21:18, 26).

Ordinary people also owned gardens. These gardens were not generally attached to individual houses, but were in a separate area, often outside city walls and near a good water supply. Their main function was to produce food (Num. 24:6; Jer. 29:5).

Gardens are also spoken of symbolically as portraits of happiness and fruitfulness. For example, the lovers in the Song of Solomon compared one another to a garden of delights (Song 4:12; 5:1; 8:13). The Lord's blessings for His people are also described as a garden of delights (Is. 51:3; Ezek. 36:35; Amos 9:14).

The Garden of Eden represented God's ideal environment for man. Special characteristics of Eden were its wide variety of trees (Gen. 2:9; Ezek. 31:8–9), its precious stones and metals (Gen. 2:11–12; Ezek. 28:13–14), and its rivers (Gen. 2:10–14; Rev. 22:1–2), all of them portraying its richness and fertility. Eden is also sometimes referred to in the Bible as the garden of the Lord (Gen. 13:10; Is. 51:3) or the garden of God (Ezek. 28:13; 31:8–9). Some of this garden's features, especially its rivers and the TREE OF LIFE, are also used to portray God's final blessings for His people (Ezek. 47:12; Rev. 22:1–2, 14).

GARDEN HOUSE—a place south of the Valley of Jezreel toward which Ahaziah, king of Judah, fled when pursued by Jehu (2 Kin. 9:27, KJV, NASB; Beth Haggan, NKJV, NIV; Bethhaggan REB, NRSV).

GARDENER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

GAREB [GAY reb]—the name of a man and a hill:

1. One of David's mighty men (2 Sam. 23:38).
2. A hill near Jerusalem (Jer. 31:39).

GARLAND—a wreath, usually woven of flowers or leaves, worn on the head (Acts 14:13; wreaths, NIV).

GARLIC (see PLANTS OF THE BIBLE).

GARMITE [GAR might] (bony)—a name applied to Keilah in the genealogy of Judah (1 Chr. 4:19).

GARNER—KJV word for BARN.

GARRISON—a fort or a company of soldiers stationed in a fort. During Saul's reign as king of Israel, the Philistines had garrisons deep inside Israel—at Geba (1 Sam. 13:3) and Bethlehem (2 Sam. 23:14; 1 Chr. 11:16). In later years, David drove out the Philistines and placed his own garrisons in Damascus (2 Sam. 8:6) and Edom (2 Sam. 8:14; 1 Chr. 18:13).

In the New Testament, the word "garrison" always refers to a detachment of Roman soldiers who were stationed in Palestine (Matt. 27:27) or in one of the surrounding nations visited by the apostle Paul (2 Cor. 11:32). Paul was once rescued from an angry mob by a garrison of soldiers (Acts 21:31).

GASHMU [GASH mew]—a form of GESHEM.

GATAM [GAY tam]—a descendant of Eliphaz. Gatam was a chief of an Edomite clan (Gen. 36:11; 1 Chr. 1:36).

GATE, CITY—a massive wooden door in a city wall through which traffic passed. Often reinforced with bronze or iron for greater security, these gates were opened during the day to allow the citizens to come and go. But they were closed at night as a safety measure. In the event of attack, the gates were closed and barred to keep out the enemy.

Goods were often bought and sold and important legal matters were discussed just inside the city gate (Ruth 4:11). Because of their central location, gates were often spoken of in the Bible as symbols of power and authority. God promised Abraham that his descendants would possess the gates of their enemies (Gen. 22:17).

Also see GATES OF JERUSALEM AND THE TEMPLE.

Photo by Howard Vos

• Remains of the King Gate in the city wall of Hattusa, ancient capital of the Hittite Empire.

GATES OF JERUSALEM AND THE TEMPLE—gates in the city wall of Jerusalem and the temple area. The Bible mentions numerous gates by specific names. But keeping these names straight is complicated by the fact that as the walls of Jerusalem expanded to incorporate new areas, or were destroyed and rebuilt, different names were used for the same gate (or gate site). Unless the Bible gives a clear indication, as in the case of “the Beautiful Gate of the Temple” (Acts 3:10), it is difficult to distinguish between gates of the temple and gates of the city wall.

Exactly how many gates the city of Jerusalem had is unknown. The number of gates probably varied from century to century. In John’s vision of the New Jerusalem, the holy city had twelve gates—three on each of its four sides (east, north, south, and west). Each of the gates was inscribed with the name of one of the twelve tribes of Israel (Rev. 21:12–13). John’s portrayal of the New Jerusalem seems to be based on the prophecy of Ezekiel (Ezekiel 48). The gates described in the Book of Revelation may not correspond to the number of gates of the Old Jerusalem.

As various modern versions of the Bible are compared, more than a dozen of the gates of Jerusalem are given different names by the different translations. A list of the gates of Jerusalem and the temple, giving their names according to the NKJV, is as follows:

Beautiful Gate (Acts 3:10)

Benjamin's Gate (Jer. 38:7; Zech. 14:10)

Corner Gate (2 Kin. 14:13; 2 Chr. 25:23; 26:9; Jer. 31:38; Zech. 14:10)

East Gate (1 Chr. 26:14; 2 Chr. 31:14)

Ephraim, Gate of (2 Kin. 14:13; 2 Chr. 25:23; Neh. 8:16; 12:39)

First Gate (Zech. 14:10)

Fish Gate (2 Chr. 33:14; Neh. 3:3; 12:39; Zeph. 1:10)

Foundation, Gate of the (2 Chr. 23:5)

Fountain Gate (Neh. 3:15; 12:37)

Horse Gate (2 Chr. 23:15; Neh. 3:28; Jer. 31:40)

Joshua, Gate of (2 Kin. 23:8)

King's Gate (1 Chr. 9:18)

Middle Gate (Jer. 39:3)

Miphkad Gate (Neh. 3:31)

New Gate (Jer. 36:10)

North Gate (1 Chr. 26:14)

Old Gate (Neh. 3:6; 12:39)

Potsherd Gate (Jer. 19:2)

Prison, Gate of the (Neh. 12:39)

Refuse Gate (Neh. 2:13; 3:13–14; 12:31)

Shallecheth Gate (1 Chr. 26:16)

Sheep Gate (Neh. 3:1, 32; 12:39; John 5:2)

South Gate (1 Chr. 26:15)

Upper Gate (2 Kin. 15:35; 2 Chr. 23:20; 27:3)

Valley Gate (2 Chr. 26:9; Neh. 2:13, 15; 3:13)

Water Gate (Neh. 3:26; 8:1, 3, 16; 12:37)

West Gate (1 Chr. 26:16)

Translations of the Bible other than the NKJV have the following names of gates (not found in the NKJV):

Dung Gate (Neh. 2:13; 3:13–14; 12:31; NRSV, NIV, REB, KJV; Refuse Gate, NKJV)

Dung Port (Neh. 2:13, KJV; Refuse Gate, NKJV)

Former Gate (Zech. 14:10, NRSV, REB; First Gate, NKJV)

Guard, Gate of the (Neh. 12:39, NRSV, NIV, NASB; Gate of the Prison, NKJV)

Guardhouse Gate (Neh. 12:39, REB)

Guardhouse, Gate of; Gate of the Prison (Neh. 12:39, NKJV)

High Gate (2 Chr. 23:20; 27:3, KJV; Upper Gate, NKJV)

Higher Gate (2 Kin. 15:35, KJV; Upper Gate, NKJV)

Inspection Gate (Neh. 3:31, NIV, NASB; Miphkad Gate, NKJV)

Jeshanah Gate (Neh. 3:6; 12:39; NIV, REB; Old Gate, NKJV)

Muster Gate (Neh. 3:31, NRSV; Miphkad Gate, NKJV)

Mustering Gate (Neh. 3:31, REB; Miphkad Gate, NKJV)

Shalleketh Gate (1 Chr. 26:16, NIV; Shallecheth Gate, NKJV)

Sheep Gate (John 5:2, REB, NKJV)

Sheep Market (John 5:2, KJV; Sheep Gate, NKJV)

• The Golden Gate in the eastern wall of Jerusalem in the Temple area. Scholars believe this gate was built in the fifth century A.D. on the site where Jesus made His triumphal entry into the city.

GATEKEEPER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

GATH [gath] (wine press)—one of the five chief cities (see Map 3, A–4) of the Philistines (Judg. 3:3). Although Gath is frequently used as a prefix in combination with a proper name to refer to other cities—for example, Gath Hepher (Josh. 19:13) and Gath Rimmon (Josh. 19:45)—when it appears alone it refers to the great Philistine city.

Gath was known as the residence of the ANAKIM, men of great stature (Josh. 11:22). GOLIATH and other giants belonged to this race and the city of Gath (1 Sam. 17:4). David captured Gath during his reign (1 Chr. 13:1). The residents of Gath, known as Gittites, were still subject to Israel during Solomon's reign, although they still had their own king (1 Kin. 2:39, 42).

Solomon's son, Rehoboam, later fortified Gath (2 Chr. 11:8), but the city returned to the hands of the Philistines. Later, it was recaptured by Hazael (2 Kin. 12:17), and Uzziah broke down its walls (2 Chr. 26:6).

GATH HEPHER [gath HEE fur] (winepress of the well)—a border town in the territory of Zebulun, about 5 kilometers (3 miles) northeast of Nazareth (Josh. 19:13; Gittahhepher, KJV). Gath Hepher was the hometown of the prophet JONAH (2 Kin. 14:25).

GATH RIMMON [gath RIM un] (winepress by the pomegranate)—the name of two cities in the Bible:

1. A city of the tribe of Dan assigned to the Levites. It was probably on the Plain of Joppa (Josh. 19:45).
2. A town of the half-tribe of Manasseh west of the Jordan River assigned to the Levites (Josh. 21:25). It was probably the same town as Bileam (1 Chr. 6:70) and Ibleam (Judg. 1:27).

GAULANITIS [goe luh NITE us]—a region or district east of the Sea of Galilee that received its name from its largest city, GOLAN (Deut. 4:43).

GAZA [GAY zuh] (stronghold)—one of the five principal cities of the Philistines (see Map 2, C–1). The southernmost city of Canaan, Gaza was situated on the great caravan route between Mesopotamia and Egypt, at the junction of the trade route from Arabia. This location made Gaza an ideal rest stop and a commercial center for merchants and travelers.

Gaza was originally inhabited by the Avvim, a people who were replaced by the Caphtorim (Deut. 2:23). Gaza was allotted to the tribe of Judah by Joshua (Josh. 15:47), but it was not immediately occupied (Judg. 1:18) because the Anakim were still present in the city (Josh. 11:22; 13:3). Soon afterwards the Philistines recovered Gaza (Judg. 13:1). Here the mighty Samson was humiliated by being forced to grind grain as a blinded prisoner (Judg. 16:21). In a final victorious performance, Samson brought down the house of the pagan god Dagon, destroying many Philistines (Judg. 16:23–31).

Although Solomon ruled over Gaza, not until the reign of Hezekiah, king of Judah, was the decisive blow dealt to the Philistines (2 Kin. 18:8). Through the prophet Amos, God threatened Gaza with destruction by fire for its sins (Amos 1:6–7). This prophecy was fulfilled by the army of Alexander the Great in 332 B.C., when Gaza was destroyed and her inhabitants massacred (Zeph. 2:4; Zech. 9:5).

In the New Testament the evangelist Philip was directed by God to preach the gospel along the road from Jerusalem to Gaza (Acts 8:26). On this road the Ethiopian eunuch professed faith in Jesus and was baptized.

GAZATHITES [GAY zuh thites]—a form of GAZITES.

GAZELLE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

GAZEZ [GAY zez]—the name of two men in the Bible:

1. A son of Caleb (1 Chr. 2:46).
2. A grandson of Caleb (1 Chr. 2:46).

GAZITES [GAY zites]—inhabitants of the Philistine city of Gaza (Judg. 16:2; Josh. 13:3; Gazathites, KJV).

GAZZAM [GAZ am]—the founder of a family of NETHINIM (temple servants) who returned from the captivity with Zerubbabel (Neh. 7:51).

GEBA [GHEE buh] (hill)—a city of Benjamin assigned to the priests (1 Chr. 8:6). Situated in northern Judah (Zech. 14:10), about 10 kilometers (6 miles) northeast of Jerusalem, it was regarded as a strategic city. King Asa of Judah fortified Geba (1 Kin. 15:22). It is also called Gaba (Josh. 18:24). The city is identified with the present-day village of Jeba.

GEBAL [GHEE buhl] (mountain)—the name of a city and a region:

1. A mountainous region between Petra and the southern end of the Dead Sea. Inhabited by the Edomites, Gebal was one of the areas allied against Israel (Ps. 83:7).
2. An ancient and thriving seaport situated on a bluff in the foothills of Lebanon that overlooked the Mediterranean Sea. Gebal was about 32 kilometers (20 miles) north of Beirut between Sidon and Tripoli (Ezek. 27:9). One of the most important seaports of PHOENICIA, Gebal imported so much PAPYRUS from Egypt that its Greek name, Byblos, ultimately gave rise to words like "Bible" and "bibliography." Also see GEBALITES.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• Remains of the Phoenician city of Gebal on the Mediterranean Sea (Ezek. 27:9), called Byblos by the Greeks.

GEBALITES [GHEE buhl ites]—inhabitants of the city of GEBAL (Josh. 13:5; Giblites, KJV). The Gebalites were known for shipbuilding (Ezek. 27:9) and for stonecutting (1 Kin. 5:18). They helped construct Solomon's temple.

GEBER [GHEE buhr] (strong one)—the name of two government officials in Israel:

1. The father of one of Solomon's supply officers (1 Kin. 4:13, KJV).
2. A son of Uri (1 Kin. 4:19). Geber was one of Solomon's twelve governors. His district was in southern Gilead, east of the Jordan River.

Also see BEN-GEBER.

GEBIM [GHEE bem]—a city of Benjamin, north of Jerusalem near Michmash and between Anathoth and Nob (Is. 10:31).

GECKO (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

GEDALIAH [gad uh LIE ah] (The Lord is great)—the name of five Old Testament men:

1. A person of high birth appointed governor of Judah by Nebuchadnezzar (2 Kin. 25:22–25). Gedaliah governed Judah from Mizpah, where after ruling for only two or three months he was assassinated by Jewish nationalists led by Ishmael. Gedaliah's father had protected the prophet Jeremiah, and Gedaliah probably did the same.
2. A Levite musician of David's time. Gedaliah was one of the six sons of Jeduthun (1 Chr. 25:3, 9).
3. A priest who divorced his pagan wife after the captivity (Ezra 10:18).
4. A son of Pashhur who called for the death of the prophet Jeremiah (Jer. 38:1, 4).
5. An ancestor of the prophet Zephaniah (Zeph. 1:1).

GEDER [GHEE duhr] (fence)—a town in southern Judah conquered by Joshua, along with Lachish and other cities (Josh. 12:13).

GEDERAH [GHED ah ruh] (enclosure or sheepfold)—the name of two towns in the Old Testament:

1. A town in the SHEPHELAH, or foothills, of Judah (Josh. 15:36), about 30 kilometers (20 miles) west of Jerusalem.
2. The hometown of Jozabad, a warrior who joined David at Ziklag (1 Chr. 12:4).

GEDERATHITE [GHED ah ruh thite]—a native or inhabitant of GEDERAH (1 Chr. 12:4).

GEDERITE [GHED uh rite]—a native or inhabitant of GEDER (1 Chr. 27:28).

GEDEROTH [ghe DARE oth] (sheepfolds)—an unidentified town in the SHEPHELAH, or foothills, of Judah (Josh. 15:41).

GEDEROTHAIM [ghed eh row THAY em] (two sheepfolds)—a town of Judah (Josh. 15:36).

GEDOR [GHEE dawr] (wall)—the name of one person and four towns:

1. A town in the hill country of Judah (Josh. 15:58).
2. A person or family of the tribe of Benjamin (1 Chr. 8:31; 9:37).
3. A Calebite town in Judah founded by Jered (1 Chr. 4:18).
4. A town in the territory inhabited by the Simeonites (1 Chr. 4:39).
5. The hometown of Joelah and Zebadiah, two of David's warriors (1 Chr. 12:7).

GE–HARASHIM [gay hah RAH shem] (valley of craftsmen)—a valley in Judah (1 Chr. 4:14) inhabited after the captivity by Benjamites (Neh. 11:35). It was near Lod and Ono, in the southern part of the Plain of Sharon, east of Joppa (modern Jaffa).

GEHAZI [geh HAH zih] (valley of vision)—a servant of the prophet Elisha (2 Kin. 4:8—5:27). Gehazi is first mentioned when Elisha asked how he could reward the Shunammite woman who had welcomed him into her home. Gehazi suggested that the childless woman and her husband might be given a child. A son was eventually born to the couple, but after a few years he died. The Shunammite woman sought Elisha's help. In an attempt to show Gehazi that faith healed, and not magic, Elisha sent him to lay the prophet's staff on the dead child's head. Nothing happened. But when Elisha himself went to the child, the child revived.

Gehazi's true character came out in the story of NAAMAN the Syrian, whom Elisha cured of a skin disease. Elisha refused any reward, but Gehazi ran after Naaman to claim something for himself. He told Naaman that Elisha wanted a talent of silver and two changes of clothing for the needy. Because of his greed, lying, and misuse of the prophetic office, Elisha cursed Gehazi with the same disease from which Naaman had been cured.

GEHENNA [ge HEN uh] (see HINNOM, VALLEY OF).

GELILOTH [geh LIH lohth] (circles)—a landmark on the border between Benjamin and Judah (Josh. 18:17). Apparently it was the same place as GILGAL on the road from Jerusalem to Jericho (Josh. 15:7).

GEM (see JEWELS AND PRECIOUS STONES).

GEMALLI [geh MAL ih] (camel owner)—the father of one of the spies who explored the land of Canaan (Num. 13:12).

GEMARA [geh MARE uh] (completion or tradition)—the second part of the TALMUD, the source from which the laws that govern orthodox Jews is derived. The MISHNAH, the text of Jewish oral law which was written in Hebrew, is the first part of the Talmud. The Gemara, which was written in Aramaic, is a commentary on the Mishnah. Together the Mishnah and the Gemara make up the Talmud. The Gemara contains historical information, sermons, ethical teaching, legal reports, legends, and other lore of the Jewish rabbis.

GEMARIAH [ghem ah RYE ah] (Jehovah has accomplished)—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A citizen of Judah who carried tribute money to Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon and took a letter from Jeremiah to the Jews in captivity (Jer. 29:3).
2. A son of Shaphan who tried to stop Jehoiakim, king of Judah, from destroying Jeremiah’s scroll (Jer. 36:10–12, 25).

GENEALOGIES OF JESUS—the two distinct lists of the ancestors of Jesus found in the Gospels of Matthew and Luke.

The Gospel of Matthew (1:1–17) recorded Christ’s descent from the patriarch Abraham, while Luke (3:28–38) reversed the recording process, contrary to biblical tradition, and traced the ancestry of Jesus back through Joseph, David, and Abraham to “Adam, the son of God.” Both records reflect the Old Testament practices of selection and omission in such lists. (See GENEALOGY.)

Matthew used the SEPTUAGINT, the Greek translation of the Hebrew Old Testament, for his forty-two names and grouped them in three units of fourteen generations each, fourteen being a multiple of the sacred number seven. His divisions are: (1) Abraham to David, fourteen names; (2) Solomon to the captivity, fourteen names; (3) Jeconiah to Jesus, fourteen names. Luke catalogued almost twice as many names as Matthew and also used the number seven as a basis for organizing Christ's pedigree in terms of seventy-seven names. Luke's groups are: (1) Jesus to Zerubbabel, twenty-one names; (2) Shealtiel to Nathan, twenty-one names; (3) David to Isaac, fourteen names; and (4) Abraham to Adam, twenty-one names.

Some of the people named in Luke's record cannot be identified readily, although certain names may be Greek forms of the original Hebrew. Matthew's list also contains several persons not found elsewhere. Matthew and Luke have the same names from Abraham to David, apart from Luke's addition of Arni and Admin; but beyond that point there are numerous variations. Matthew's genealogy is unusual in mentioning four women. By contrast, not even Jesus' mother was mentioned in Luke's genealogy.

Attempts have been made to explain how such different results can be arrived at by persons using the same sources of information, but no firm conclusions have emerged. Some writers suggest that both lists came from Joseph, but were compiled separately by different methods. Others believe that Matthew's list furnished a legal or "official" descent through the house of Joseph, while Luke's record actually reflected Mary's side of the family, since she herself probably was descended from David (Luke 1:27; 2:4). The absence of Mary's name from Luke's list argues against that theory, which would actually suit Matthew's genealogy better, since Mary is mentioned in it along with four other women.

Whatever the processes by which the two lists arose, their purpose was to show that Jesus Christ the Messiah was descended from the house of David. Matthew makes Jesus a legitimate heir through being "adopted" by Joseph, a member of the Davidic line. For Matthew the unfolding of Israelite history revealed Christ the Messiah, whose coming ushered in the age of grace. Luke's list reflects a wider concern by portraying Christ as the Savior of all peoples, not just the Jews. By reversing the normal order of listing, Luke may have intended to demonstrate the real nature of Jesus as the divine Son.

GENEALOGY [gene ee AL o gih]—a list of a person's ancestors that normally contains the members of each generation in succession. When compiled in the form of a "family tree," it begins at the bottom with the root stock from which the family came, then advances and branches out as the "tree" grows. When the genealogy records descent from ancestors by generations, the originating stock is listed first and all subsequent descendants are derived from it.

A technical term that means "family history," "record," or "genealogy" occurs in eleven places in the Book of Genesis in the phrase, "These are the generations of." This phrase divides the book in such a way as to suggest that the units thus formed were the actual sources from which the Book of Genesis was compiled. These "family records" sometimes included genealogies (Genesis 10) in much the same way that tablets from ancient Babylonia would occasionally have "family trees" written on the back.

Genealogical records probably began with the king-lists that were drawn up in ancient Mesopotamia. These lists preserved a record of personal history. They are sometimes dated by referring to historical personalities or to less familiar occurrences such as floods. For many people the information contained in the genealogies would be the only history they would know.

The people of the ancient world generally had far less access to written reference works than modern people do. Therefore, they committed a great deal of information to memory. To this day it is not uncommon for a Bedouin Arab to be able to recite a list of his ancestors from memory for an hour without making any mistakes. This emphasizes the importance that genealogical records had in the ancient Near East. In the Old Testament, no fewer than three of these dealt with the successors of Adam (Gen. 4:1–2, 17–22, 25–26; 5:1–32). This shows that compiling lists of descendants is a very ancient practice.

When the Hebrews began to manage large herds and flocks and to live together in families and tribes, genealogies became very important in deciding inheritance rights and land allotments. When land holdings had been distributed to the Israelite tribes in Canaan, a person could lay claim legally to ancestral property only by producing the proper genealogical records. When the Jewish captives returned from Babylonia to Jerusalem, a register of their genealogies was made (Neh.

7:5). These genealogies proved very useful in deciding who was qualified by birth to act as priests (Neh. 7:64). By the time of Christ, everyone who was a priest was expected to prove his descent from the tribe of Levi and the house of Aaron. For this purpose a proper written genealogy was of the greatest importance.

If this procedure was vital for the welfare of the priesthood, it was equally so for the royal succession in the kingdom of Judah, which traced its descent from the house of David. When the prophets proclaimed that the Messiah would also come from the stock of Jesse (Is. 11:1), the father of David, even greater precautions were taken to preserve the pattern of descent. The genealogies of Christ in the Gospels show the way in which the details of our Lord's descent from the house of David have been preserved through the centuries.

Genealogies were important for still other reasons. In the period of Israel's wandering in the wilderness, genealogies were used in the military organization of the tribes (Num. 1:2–4), as well as for deciding the amount of taxes and offerings to be contributed to the service of the sanctuary (Num. 7:11–89). From the time when the Israelites were formed into tribes, the genealogies helped to give persons a special sense of identity within the nation and also to locate them broadly in terms of family holdings. Thus a man might be traveling away from home; but when asked about his identity, he would commonly reveal himself by name, ancestry, and tribe, along with the village or town from which he came.

In the period after the captivity of the Jewish people by Babylon, Greek paganism threatened the purity of their religion. Orthodox Jews compiled and maintained genealogies to remind them of the need to keep the faith pure. These genealogies helped them resist the paganism that had brought both Israel and Judah to their knees in earlier ages.

Biblical genealogies present some problems because of the ways in which they were compiled. Ancient genealogies frequently omitted the names of unimportant family members or those whose presence in a family tree might cause embarrassment. Such gaps can be illustrated by the pedigree of Moses. Only four generations are mentioned between Levi, the third son of Jacob and Leah (Gen. 29:34) and Moses. This is difficult to reconcile with the census of 22,000 males descended from Levi that was taken in Moses' day (Num. 3:39) some four centuries later (Ex. 12:40). More than four generations would have been required to produce this many descendants.

By contrast, the genealogy of Ephraim, Levi's nephew, as it was traced to the time of Joshua, recorded eighteen generations (1 Chr. 7:20–27). Yet despite obvious omissions, the purpose of the genealogy of this family was accomplished because it demonstrated that Moses was descended from the tribe of Levi. A similar condensed record occurs in the case of Ezra (Ezra 7:1–2), which contained only five generations between Zadok (966 B.C.) and the time when Ezra returned to Judah, about 458 B.C. Even shorter was the opening verse of Matthew's gospel, which summarized Christ's genealogy in three major links. In the genealogies, the length of a generation is unknown.

Sometimes certain patterns in early genealogies are not evident in later ones. Thus in Genesis 5 and 11, the lists contain ten units giving the age of the father when his first child was born and the remaining years of his life. Both lists end with the names of three brothers in a way that seems deliberate, and the entire pattern may have encouraged easy memorization in antiquity.

Modern readers of biblical genealogies also need to be warned about the way in which such familiar terms as "father," "mother," "son," and "daughter" were used in the ancient Near East. A father was not always one who had children. This term could simply denote a learned, older man who was not even a relative. The term "mother" could be a symbolic description of a woman who exercised the love and care normally given by mothers. Just as "father" would also describe a grandfather or an even more remote ancestor, a son could actually be a grandson or a great-grandson. People could be brothers, not because they were siblings of one family, but because they were bound together by a treaty. Words such as "son" and "daughter" seem to have been used in the ancient world almost as widely as they are now. Thus caution is needed before they are taken at face value in Scripture.

The main purpose of genealogies was to establish the broad line of descent without furnishing all the details. Just because certain relatives were left out does not mean these records were inaccurate or invalid.

The vast majority of biblical genealogies occur in the Old Testament. An important one deals with the descent from Adam to Noah (Gen. 5:1–32). The descendants of Noah (Genesis 10), the line from Shem to Abram (Gen. 11:10–26), and the list of Abraham's offspring (Gen. 25:1–4) are extremely important for the early history of the Israelites.

The longest Old Testament genealogy contains a detailed list of persons from Adam to the time of Saul (1 Chr. 1–9). This list was probably compiled at a later time in the history of the Hebrews to enable people to trace their descent from proven Israelite stock. The house of David was traced back to Perez (Ruth 4:18–22), the son of Judah (Gen. 46:12). This was an important genealogy because of the promises of the prophets about the Messiah.

GENERATION—a word with two distinct meanings in the Bible:

1. A body of people who live at the same time in a given period of history. Generation is used in this sense in, for example, Deuteronomy 32:5, where Moses calls his contemporaries "a perverse and crooked generation." Applied in this way, generation is roughly synonymous with the word "age," as in this sentence: "Our age is characterized by its love of technology." See Matthew 11:16 and Luke 9:41 for further examples of this usage.
2. A single succession, made up of a set of individuals who share a common ancestor, in the line of descent. In this sense (Gen. 17:7; Ex. 1:6; Matt. 1:17), the word generation usually occurs when the Bible gives a genealogical or historical account of a family or tribe. First Chronicles 5:6–7, for instance, is the account of Beerah, his brothers, and "the genealogy of their generations."

   While generation is sometimes used in the Bible to indicate a more or less specific span of time (Gen. 15:16), the word is far more frequently applied in an indefinite way. So it is best to avoid forcing our English understanding of generation (the average period of time between the birth of a parent and the birth of his firstborn child, about 25–30 years) upon the word as it is used in the Bible.

GENEROSITY—liberality in spirit, especially in contributing to the needy. Christian giving should be "a matter of generosity and not as a grudging obligation" (2 Cor. 9:5). Also see ALMS.

GENESIS, BOOK OF—the first book of the Bible. Placed at the opening of the Hebrew Scriptures, Genesis is the first of the five books of Moses, known as the PENTATEUCH.

Genesis is the book of beginnings. The word Genesis means "the origin, source, creation, or coming into being of something." The Hebrew name for the book is bereshith, the first word in the Hebrew text, which is translated as "in the beginning" (Gen. 1:1). Genesis describes such important beginnings as the Creation, the fall of man, and the early years of the nation of Israel.

The beginning of salvation history—the story of God and man, sin and grace, wrath and mercy, covenant and redemption—also begins in the Book of Genesis. These themes are repeated often throughout the rest of the Bible. As the Book of Revelation is the climax and conclusion of the Bible, so the Book of Genesis is the beginning and essential seedplot of the Bible. Thus, Genesis is an important book for understanding the meaning of the entire Bible.

Structure of the Book. The Book of Genesis may conveniently be divided into four major parts: (1) the Creation and the early days of mankind (Gen. 1:1—11:9); (2) the story of Abraham and Isaac (Gen. 11:10—25:18); (3) the story of Jacob and Esau (Gen. 25:19—36:43); and (4) the story of Joseph and his brothers (Gen. 37:1—50:26).

The first major part of the Book of Genesis (chaps. 1–11) contains five great events: (1) the history of creation and a description of life in the Garden of Eden before the Fall (Gen. 1:1—2:25); (2) the story of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden: the temptation and Fall of humankind (Gen. 3:1–24); (3) the story of Cain and Abel (Gen. 4:1–16); (4) the story of Noah and the Flood: the wickedness and judgment of man (Gen. 6:1—9:29); and (5) the story of the Tower of Babel: the proud presumption of human beings, the confusion of tongues, and the scattering of humankind upon the earth (Gen. 11:1–9). Each of these great events relates to the whole of humanity, and each is filled with significance that continues throughout Scripture.

The rest of the Book of Genesis (chaps. 12–50) relates the narrative of the four great patriarchs of Israel: Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph. The theme of these chapters is God's sovereignty in calling out a CHOSEN PEOPLE who would serve and worship Him.

Authorship and Date. The Book of Genesis gives no notice about its author. The early church, however, held to the conviction that Moses wrote the book, as did the Jerusalem Talmud and the first-century

Jewish historian Josephus. In spite of the number of modern scholars who reject the Mosaic authorship of Genesis, the traditional view has much to commend it. Both the Old Testament and the New Testament contain frequent testimony to the Mosaic authorship of the entire Pentateuch (Lev. 1:1–2; Neh. 13:1; Matt. 8:4; Acts 26:22).

It would be difficult to find a person in Israel's life who was better prepared or qualified than Moses to write the history recorded in the Book of Genesis. A man who "was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians" (Acts 7:22), Moses was providentially prepared to understand and integrate, under the inspiration of God, all the available records, manuscripts, and oral narratives. Moses may have written the book during the years of the wilderness wandering to prepare the new generation to enter the land of Canaan.

As a prophet who enjoyed the unusual privilege of unhurried hours of communion with God on Mount Sinai, Moses was well equipped to record for all generations this magnificent account of God's dealings with the human race and the nation of Israel.

Historical Setting. Moses may have finished writing the Book of Genesis not long before his death on Mount Nebo (Deuteronomy 34). During this time the children of Israel, now led by Joshua, were camped east of the Jordan River, poised for the invasion of Canaan. In such a crucial historical context, the message of the Book of Genesis would have been of tremendous spiritual help to its first hearers. The creation of the world, the beginnings of sin and disobedience, the principle of judgment and deliverance, the scattering of the nations, the call and covenant God made with Abraham, the checkered careers of the first descendants of Abraham—all of these accounts would bear directly on the attitudes and faith of the new community.

The first readers, or hearers, of the Book of Genesis were the covenant community, the Chosen People of God. Like Abraham, they were on a journey—a great venture of faith into the unknown (Gen. 12:1–9). Like Abraham, they needed to respond to God in wholehearted faith and in the fear of the Lord (Gen. 22:1–19). They needed to hear such words as were spoken to Isaac: "I am the God of your father Abraham; do not fear, for I am with you. I will bless you and multiply your descendants for My servant Abraham's sake" (Gen. 26:24).

Theological Contribution. The Book of Genesis is a primary source for several basic doctrines of the Bible. The book focuses on God primarily in two areas: He is the Creator of the universe, and He is the one who initiates covenant with His people. Genesis ties creation and covenant together in a stunning manner: the God who initiates covenant is the same God who has created the entire universe. The eternal God and almighty Creator enters into covenant with His people (Gen. 1:1; John 1:1).

God's covenant with Abraham begins the basic plot of Scripture. God's work from that day forward was to accomplish His plan for the nations of the world through His people Israel, the descendants of Abraham. God's covenant with Abraham (Gen. 12:1–3; 15:1–21) contains a number of personal blessings on the father of the faith. But the climax of the text is in words of worldwide import: "And in you all the families of the earth shall be blessed" (Gen. 12:3).

This promise is realized in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Seed of Abraham (Gal. 3:16, 19), through whom peoples of all nations and families may enter into the joy of knowing the God of Abraham. God's promise is realized also in the church, in those who believe in Christ, which the apostle Paul calls "the Israel of God" (Gal. 6:16). The true "seed," or descendants, of Abraham, Paul argued, are not Abraham's physical descendants but those who have the same faith as Abraham (Rom. 9:7–8; Gal. 3:29).

Genesis presents the creation of human beings as male and female in the image of God (Gen. 1:26–27; 5:3; 9:6), their fall and ruin, their judgment, and their possible triumph in God's grace. In the context of their judgment came the first whisper of the gospel message of the final triumph of Christ over Satan: "And I will put enmity between you [the serpent] and the woman, and between your seed and her seed; He shall bruise your head, and you shall bruise His heel" (Gen. 3:15). This prophecy was fulfilled by the death of Jesus on the cross, a sacrifice that destroyed the works of the devil (1 John 3:8).

The apostle Paul referred to the story of Adam's fall (Genesis 3) by comparing Adam to Christ (Rom. 5:12, 18). Christ is portrayed as a "second Adam" who, by His atonement, reverses the effects of the Fall. Some scholars see another type, or foreshadowing truth, of Calvary in the fact that God, in order to cover the nakedness of Adam and Eve (symbolic of sin, guilt, and shame), killed an animal (thereby shedding blood) and made garments of skin with which to clothe them (Gen. 3:21). For, as the writer of the Book of Hebrews says, "Without shedding of blood there is no remission [of sin]" (Heb. 9:22).

Special Consideration. Some scholars organize the literary structure of the Book of Genesis around the Hebrew word toledoth (literally, genealogy), which Moses seems to use ten times in Genesis to indicate major blocks of material. The NKJV translates toledoth as "this is the history of" (Gen. 2:4) and "this is the genealogy of" (Gen. 5:1; 6:9; 10:1; 11:10; 11:27; 25:12; 25:19; 36:1; 37:2).

The Book of Genesis takes the reader to the moment when the Creator spoke into being the sun, moon, stars, planets, galaxies, plants, moving creatures, and mankind. Those who seek to discredit the Book of Genesis by pointing to alleged discrepancies between religion and science are blind to the exalted spiritual content of this work. If a student expects to find in Genesis a scientific account of how the world came into existence, with all questions concerning primitive life answered in technical language, he will be disappointed. Genesis is not an attempt to answer such technical questions.

Genesis is marked by exquisite prose, such as chapter 22 (the account of the binding of Isaac) and chapters 37–50 (the Joseph narrative). Literary critics often point to Genesis 24, the story of a bride for Isaac, as a classic example of great narrative style. Genesis also has poetic sections such as the solemn curses by God (Gen. 3:14–19) and the prophetic blessing of Jacob (Gen. 49:3–27). Genesis 1, the account of creation, is written in highly elevated prose with a poetic tone.

At times attention is focused on the men in the Book of Genesis. But women of major significance also appear in the book: Eve is the mother of all living (Gen. 3:20); Sarah had a faith that was complementary to Abraham's (Gen. 21:1–7); and Leah, Rachel, Bilhah, and Zilpah are the mothers of the twelve patriarchs of Israel (Gen. 29:31—30:24; 35:23–26).

Genesis is also a book of firsts. Genesis records the first birth (Gen. 4:1), the first death (Gen. 4:8), the first musical instruments (Gen. 4:21), and the first rainbow (Gen. 9:12–17). Genesis is indeed the book of beginnings. As the children of Israel read this book in the wilderness, or after they crossed the Jordan River, they knew that their experiences with God were just beginning.

◆

Genesis: A Study and Teaching Outline

Part One: Primeval History (1:1—11:9)

I. The Creation 1:1—2:25
- A. Creation of the World 1:1—2:3
- B. Creation of Man 2:4–25

II. The Fall 3:1—5:32
- A. The Fall of Man 3:1–24
- B. After the Fall: Conflicting Family Lines 4:1—5:32

III. The Judgment of the Flood 6:1—9:29
- A. Causes of the Flood 6:1–5
- B. Judgment of the Flood 6:6–22
- C. The Flood 7:1—8:19
- D. Results of the Flood 8:20—9:17
- E. After the Flood: The Sin of the Godly Line 9:18–29

IV. The Judgment on the Tower of Babel 10:1—11:9
- A. Family Lines after the Flood 10:1–32
- B. Judgment on all the Family Lines 11:1–9

Part Two: Patriarchal History (11:10—50:26)

I. The Life of Abraham 11:10—25:18
- A. Introduction of Abram 11:10–32
- B. The Covenant of God with Abram 12:1—25:18
  - 1. Initiation of the Covenant 12:1–20
  - 2. Separation to the Covenant 13:1—14:24
  - 3. Ratification of the Covenant 15:1—16:16
  - 4. Sign of the Covenant: Circumcision 17:1–27
  - 5. Testing of the Covenant 18:1—20:18
  - 6. Consummation of the Covenant 21:1—25:18

II. The Life of Isaac 25:19—26:35
- A. The Family of Isaac 25:19–34
- B. The Failure of Isaac 26:1–33
- C. The Failure of Esau 26:34–35

III. The Life of Jacob 27:1—36:43
- A. Jacob Gains Esau’s Blessing 27:1—28:9

B. Jacob’s Life at Haran 28:10—31:55
C. Jacob’s Return 32:1—33:20
D. Jacob’s Residence in Canaan 34:1—35:29
E. The Family Line of Esau 36:1–43

IV. The Life of Joseph 37:1—50:26
A. The Corruption of Joseph’s Family 37:1—38:30
B. The Exaltation of Joseph 39:1—41:57
C. The Salvation of Jacob’s Family 42:1—50:26

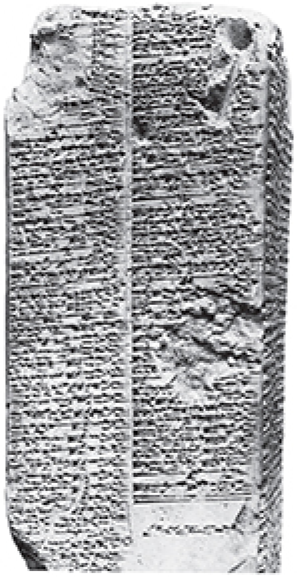

Photo: Ashmolean Museum

- This list of kings engraved in stone was discovered in ancient Mesopotamia. It contains the names of several kings who ruled before the Great Flood described in the Book of Genesis.

GENITALS—the external organs of the human reproductive system (Deut. 25:11; the secrets, KJV; the private parts, NRSV, NIV).

GENNESARET [geh NESS ah ret]—the name of a lake, a district, and a city in the New Testament:

1. The town Gennesaret, on the west shore of the lake of the same name. This town was a fortified city of Naphtali (Josh. 19:35) commonly referred to as Chinnereth.
2. The district of Gennesaret, identified in the Bible as “the land of Gennesaret” (Mark 6:53). This district was a plain extending 2 kilometers (1 mile) from the Sea of Galilee along a 5-kilometer (3-mile) section of Galilee’s north shore. Figs, olives, palms, and a variety of other types of trees were grown in this region’s rich, loamy soil.
3. The “Lake of Gennesaret” (Luke 5:1). This lake is more commonly known as the Sea of Galilee (Matt. 4:18) and is sometimes simply referred to as “the lake” (Luke 5:2).

Also see GALILEE, SEA OF.

GENTILES—a term used by Jewish people to refer to foreigners, or any other people who were not a part of the Jewish race.

The Jews were the Chosen People of God who had entered a covenant with God. God initiated the covenant with Abraham (Gen. 12:1–7) and affirmed it repeatedly through Israel’s leaders and prophets.

Because of this covenant relationship, a feeling of exclusivism gradually developed among the Jews over a period of several centuries. In early Hebrew history, Gentiles were treated cordially by the Israelites (Deut. 10:19; Num. 35:15; Ezek. 47:2). Men of Israel often married Gentile women, including Rahab and Ruth. However, after the Jews returned from their period of CAPTIVITY in Babylon, the practice of intermarriage was discouraged (Ezra 9:12; 10:2–44; Neh. 10:30). Separation between Jews and Gentiles became increasingly strict; by the New Testament period the hostility was complete. The persecution of the Jews by the Greeks and Romans from the third century B.C. to the New Testament era caused the Jews to retaliate with hatred for all Gentiles and to avoid all contact with foreigners.

The life and teachings of Jesus set the ideal for positive relationships between Jews and Gentiles, as recorded in the apostle Paul’s writings (Rom. 1:16; Eph. 2:14; Col. 3:11). But the process of such idealism becoming a reality was a struggle for the early church.

The Book of Acts pictures the struggle of the church to include the Gentiles in its life. When Peter, taught by the vision at Joppa, broke with Jewish tradition by visiting and eating with the Gentile Cornelius, it gave offense even to the Christian Jews (Acts 10:28; 11:3).

The apostle Paul became an effective missionary to the Gentiles (Acts 13:46–49; 15:14). At first the early church was composed of converted Jews who accepted Jesus as the Messiah, God's Anointed One. But more and more Gentiles came to accept the teaching of the gospel. Some Jewish leaders warned that they could not enter the church unless they also submitted to the Jewish ritual of CIRCUMCISION (Acts 15:1–31). But Paul fought against this requirement as a denial of the gospel and ultimately convinced the churches. The only condition of salvation is repentance from sin and faith in Christ Jesus (Acts 20:21). "There is neither Jew nor Greek . . . for you are all one in Christ Jesus" (Gal. 3:28).

• All nations surrounding Israel, including Egypt, were considered pagans and Gentiles by the Hebrew people.

GENTILES, COURT OF (see COURT OF THE GENTILES).

GENTLENESS—kindness, consideration, a spirit of fairness and compassion. The apostle Paul declared that Christians should have a spirit of gentleness toward all people (Phil. 4:5; 2 Cor. 10:1).

GENUBATH [geh NOO bath]—a son of Hadad (a fugitive Edomite prince) and his wife, who was the sister of Queen Tahpenes of Egypt (1 Kin. 11:20).

GERA [GHEE rah]—the name of four men from the tribe of Benjamin:

1. A son of Bela (Gen. 46:21).
2. The father or ancestor of the judge Ehud (Judg. 3:15).
3. The father or ancestor of Shimei, who cursed David when David fled from Absalom (1 Kin. 2:8).
4. A son or descendant of Bela (1 Chr. 8:3, 5, 7).

GERAH [GEE rah] (see MONEY OF THE BIBLE; WEIGHTS AND MEASURES).

GERAR [GEE rar]—an ancient Philistine city in the NEGEB, in southern Palestine, between Kadesh Barnea and Shur (Gen. 10:19; 20:1). A wealthy city, Gerar probably controlled an important caravan route between Egypt and Palestine. Gerar was ruled by ABIMELECH, "king of the Philistines" (Gen. 26:1). During a famine, Abraham and his wife Sarah journeyed to Gerar. Fearing for his life, Abraham concealed the truth that Sarah was his wife, calling her his "sister." Abraham was reprimanded by Abimelech for his deception; eventually the two men concluded a treaty.

GERASA [GEAR ah sah]—a city situated in TRANSJORDAN about 56 kilometers (35 miles) southeast of the Sea of Galilee (see Map 6, C–3). One of the ten cities of the DECAPOLIS, Gerasa is not mentioned by name in the Bible, but it may be inferred from the use of "Gerasenes" (Mark 5:1; Luke 8:26, 37, NRSV, NIV, NASB; Gadarenes, NKJV).

The Roman city of Gerasa was the same place as the Nabatean city of Jerash. Excavations at this site (the modern Jarash) have uncovered the best-preserved Roman city in Palestine (now Jordan), including ruins of the temple of Artemis, a triumphal arch (built in A.D. 129 to celebrate the visit of Emperor Hadrian), a forum with a street lined with columns, and a stairway leading to an older pagan temple. Archaeological evidence of at least a dozen churches indicates that Gerasa was also once a large Christian community.

Photo by Ben Chapman

• The theater at Jerash (ancient Gerasa, one of the ten cities known as the Decapolis). Jerash is one of the best-preserved cities from the Roman era in Palestine.

GERASENES [GARE uh seens]—a variant reading for GADARENES.

GERGESENES [GUR guh scenes]—a variant reading for GADARENES.

GERIZIM [GEH ruh zim]—a mountain in the district of Samaria (see Map 3, B–3). Mount Gerizim is located southwest of Mount Ebal. The main north-south road through central Palestine ran between these two mountains. Thus, Gerizim was of strategic military importance.

When the Hebrew people reached the Promised Land, Moses directed them to climb Mount Gerizim and Mount Ebal. Six tribes stood on each mountain (Deut. 27:11–14). Then Moses pronounced the blessings for keeping the Law from Mount Gerizim and the curses for not keeping it from Mount Ebal (Deut. 11:29; 27:4–26). A ledge halfway to the top of Gerizim is called “Jotham’s pulpit” (see Judg. 9:7). The characteristics of the two mountains make it possible to speak from either mountain and be heard easily in the valley below.

When the Israelites returned from their years of CAPTIVITY in Babylon, they refused to allow the SAMARITANS, the residents of this mountain region, to assist in rebuilding Jerusalem (Ezra 4:1–4; Neh. 2:19–20; 13:28). In the days of Alexander the Great, a Samaritan temple was built on Mount Gerizim. Although it was destroyed by the Hasmonean king John Hyrcanus in 128 B.C., the Samaritans still worshiped on Mount Gerizim in Jesus' day (John 4:20–21). The small Samaritan community in Israel continues to celebrate the Passover on Mount Gerizim to this day.

Jacob's Well is situated at the foot of Mount Gerizim, today called Jebel et-Tor. This is the well where Jesus met the woman of Samaria, discussed Samaritan worship practices on Mount Gerizim, and told her of Himself—"a fountain of water springing up into everlasting life" (John 4:14).

Photo by Howard Vos

• Mount Gerizim in the district of Samaria, site of the Samaritan temple in Jesus' time (John 4:20–21).

GERSHOM [GUR shom] (a sojourner there)—the name of four men in the Old Testament:

1. The firstborn son of Moses and Zipporah (Ex. 2:22).

2. The father of Jonathan, a Levite who became a priest to the Danites at Laish during the time of the judges (Judg. 18:30).
3. The oldest son of Levi (1 Chr. 15:7), also called GERSHON.
4. A descendant of Phinehas and a family leader who returned with Ezra from the Babylonian captivity (Ezra 8:2).

GERSHOMITES [GUR shom ites]—the descendants of GERSHOM (1 Chr. 6:62, 71, NRSV).

GERSHON [GUR shun]—the oldest of the three sons of LEVI; his brothers were Kohath and Merari (Gen. 46:11; Num. 3:17). He is also called Gershom (1 Chr. 15:7). Gershon was founder of the family called the GERSHONITES (Num. 26:57), one of three main divisions of the Levitical priesthood. Gershon was apparently born to Levi before Jacob's family moved to Egypt to escape a famine (Ex. 6:16). Although Gershon was the oldest of Levi's sons, it was through the line of Gershon's younger brother, Kohath, that the priestly line of Aaron sprang years later after the EXODUS of the Hebrew people from Egypt.

GERSHONITES [GUR shon ites]—the descendants of GERSHON, son of Levi (Num. 3:21).

GERUTH KIMHAM (see CHIMHAM).

GESHEM [GEH shim] (rain)—an Arab who sought to hinder the building of the wall of Jerusalem by Nehemiah (Neh. 2:19; 6:6; Gashmu, KJV).

GESHUR [GEH sure]—a small Aramean kingdom on the eastern slopes of Mount Hermon. Geshur was situated north of Bashan and south of Syria, serving as a buffer state between Aram and Israel. David married MAACAH, the daughter of Talmai, king of Geshur; she became the mother of Absalom (2 Sam. 3:3).

GESHURI [gih SHOO rye]—a form of GESHURITES.

GESHURITES [GESH you rites]—the name of two groups in the Old Testament:

1. The inhabitants of GESHUR (Deut. 3:14; Geshuri, KJV).

2. A tribe that occupied the territory between Arabia and Philistia (Josh. 13:2; Geshuri, KJV).

GETHER [GHEE thur]—the name of two men in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Aram (Gen. 10:23).
2. A son or descendant of Shem (1 Chr. 1:17).

GETHSEMANE [geth SEMM uh nee] (olive press)—the garden where Jesus often went alone or with His disciples for prayer, rest, or fellowship, and the site where He was betrayed by Judas on the night before His crucifixion (Luke 21:37; John 18:1–2).

Gethsemane was situated on the Mount of Olives just east of Jerusalem, across the Kidron Valley and opposite the temple (Mark 13:3; John 18:1). From its name scholars conclude that the garden was situated in an olive grove that contained an olive press. Attempts to locate the exact site of the garden have been unsuccessful. Many Christians have agreed on one site—the place that Constantine's mother Helena designated about A.D. 325. But at least two other sites are also defended by tradition and have their supporters. The gospel accounts do not provide enough details to show the exact site of the garden.

The four gospel writers focus special attention on Jesus' final visit to Gethsemane just before His arrest and crucifixion. After the Last Supper, Jesus returned there with His disciples for final instructions and a period of soul-searching prayer. All the disciples were instructed; but only Peter, James, and John went to Gethsemane with Jesus to pray (Mark 14:26–32). Jesus urged them to stand watch while He prayed. Then He pleaded with God to deliver Him from the coming events (Mark 14:32–42). But His prayer was not an arrogant attempt to resist God's will or even to change God's plan. His pleas clearly acknowledged His obedience to the will of the Father: "O My Father, if this cup cannot pass away from Me unless I drink it, Your will be done" (Matt. 26:42).

An important lesson can be learned from a study of Gethsemane. Jesus, no less than His disciples then and since, faced the temptation of Satan. He "was in all points tempted as we are, yet without sin" (Heb. 4:15). No wonder He cried, "My soul is exceedingly sorrowful, even to death" (Matt. 26:38). But He won the victory over Satan as He declared to His Father, "Your will be done."

Because Jesus has faced such powerful temptation Himself, we can relate to Him as a personal Lord and Savior. "For in that He Himself has suffered, being tempted, He is able to aid those who are tempted" (Heb. 2:18).

• The Garden of Gethsemane, where Jesus agonized in prayer on the night before His crucifixion (Matt. 26:36–46). The roots of these giant olive trees may date from the time of Christ or before.

GEUEL [geh YOU ell] (majesty of God)—one of the twelve men sent by Moses to spy out the land of Canaan (Num. 13:15).

GEZER [GEZ ur] (portion, division)—an ancient Canaanite city (see Map 3, A–4) 17 kilometers (20 miles) west of Jerusalem that was conquered by Joshua (Josh. 10:33; 12:12). Because the Israelites never fully obeyed God's command to destroy the Canaanites in this city (Josh. 21:21; 1 Chr. 6:67), they eventually lost it to the Philistines (2 Sam. 5:25; 1 Chr. 20:4).

During the reign of Solomon, an Egyptian pharaoh conquered Gezer, burned the city, and killed its inhabitants. Pharaoh gave the city and his daughter to Solomon to establish peace between Egypt and Israel. Solomon rebuilt Gezer and turned it into a strategic military and economic center (1 Kin. 9:15, 17–19). Many years later, Gezer was destroyed by the Assyrian king, Tilgath-Pileser (2 Kin. 16:5–7) when he came to rescue Ahaz, king of Judah, from the attack of the Syrians and Israelites.

In the Jewish wars just before the time of Christ, Gezer was an important military fortress (1 Macc. 9:52; 13:53). The city is not mentioned in the New Testament because it was destroyed earlier by the Romans.

Major archaeological excavations at Gezer were conducted by R. A. S. Macalister from 1902–1909 and by G. E. Wright, W. G. Dever, and J. D. Seger from 1964–1973. The city covered an area of about thirty acres and was first established before the time of Abraham. Some of the most significant discoveries at Gezer were: (1) a Palestinian calendar based on the agricultural seasons. This inscription in the ancient Hebrew script is one of the oldest Hebrew documents (from the time of Solomon); (2) a four-entryway gate that was characteristic of the construction methods of Solomon at Hazor and Megiddo; (3) an impressive sloping tunnel about 50 meters (150 feet) long that leads down to a large cistern under the city. This water supply was important to ancient walled cities if the people hoped to withstand an extended enemy siege; and (4) a row of ten huge stones standing on end. These stones may be a part of a HIGH PLACE where heathen gods were worshiped.

GEZRITES [GEHZ rites]—a form of GIRZITES.

GHIMEL [GHEE muhl]—a form of GIMEL.

GHOST—an old English word used by the KJV to refer to one’s spirit or soul. In the KJV, “to give up the ghost” (Gen. 25:8; Job 3:11; Jer. 15:9) is to die or to give up one’s spirit. The NKJV uses the expression, “to breathe one’s last” or more simply, “to die.” The other major use of “ghost” in the KJV is in referring to the Holy Ghost (John 7:39). The NKJV rightly renders this “Holy Spirit.”

GHOST, HOLY (see HOLY SPIRIT).

GIAH [GIH ah]—an unidentified place in the territory of Benjamin (2 Sam. 2:24).

GIANTS—human beings of abnormal size and strength. Races of giants are first mentioned in the Old Testament in Genesis 6:4, where giant godlike beings were produced by the union of “the sons of God” and “the daughters of men.” These abnormal unions displeased God (Gen. 6:5–6). The giants, or NEPHILIM, became “mighty men . . . men of renown,” perhaps a reference to their tremendous height.

REPHAIM were primitive giants who lived in Canaan, Edom, Moab, and Ammon. They were also known as Emim (Deut. 2:11) and Zamzummim (Deut. 2:20). King Og of Bashan (Deut. 3:11) was the last of these giants. His iron bed was 9 cubits long and 4 cubits wide (about 13 feet by 6 feet).

When Moses sent twelve men to spy out the land of Canaan, they returned with the frightening report that they saw “giants” who made them feel like “grasshoppers” (Num. 13:33). These giants were descendants of Anak, “a people great and tall” (Deut. 9:2). This negative report by ten of the spies caused the children of Israel to spend a night in murmuring and weeping. Only Joshua and Caleb urged the people to claim the land (Num. 14:38).

Goliath is the most famous giant in the Bible (1 Sam. 17:4), measuring six cubits and a span, which is more than three meters (nine feet) tall. Goliath taunted the Israelites and demanded a warrior to meet him in combat. David, the shepherd boy, with his sling and stone, dared to accept the challenge of the Philistine giant in full armor because he knew that God would direct him in the battle (1 Sam. 17:45). David’s stone struck Goliath in the forehead, and Goliath fell facedown. David then cut off the giant’s head, and the Philistines were put to flight (1 Sam. 17:49, 51).

GIANTS, VALLEY OF (see REPHAIM).

GIBBAR [GIB bahr] (mighty man)—a man whose descendants returned from the captivity with Zerubbabel (Ezra 2:20).

GIBBETHON [GIB uh thon]—a village of the tribe of Dan (Josh. 19:44) assigned to the Levites (Josh. 21:23). Nadab, king of Israel, was assassinated by Baasha at Gibbethon (1 Kin. 15:27). This city is probably modern Tell el-Melat, east of Gezer.

GIBEA [GIB ee ah] (hill)—a grandson of Caleb, of the tribe of Judah (1 Chr. 2:49).

GIBEAH, GIBEATH [GIB ee ah, GIB ee ath] (hill)—the name of three or four different places in the Old Testament:

1. Gibeath-Haaraloth, "the hill of the foreskins" (Josh. 5:3), a place in Canaan where male Israelites were circumcised.
2. A small, unidentified city in the territory of Judah (Josh. 15:57).
3. A city belonging to Benjamin (Judg. 19:14). Scholars disagree over whether this is the same city called Gibeath in Joshua 18:28. Gibeah has been excavated at the modern site of Tell el-Ful, 5 kilometers (3 miles) north of Jerusalem. This city figured prominently in two separate periods of Old Testament history. It first appeared in Judges 19–20 as the site of a crime of lewdness and obscenity. All the children of Israel came together to punish Gibeah for its crimes. After a prolonged and mostly unsuccessful war against the Benjamites, the Israelites completely destroyed Gibeah (Judg. 20:40). The Tel el-Ful excavations have uncovered the remains of a village completely destroyed by fire.

   Gibeah was apparently rebuilt after the fire. The birthplace of Saul, it became the capital of his kingdom (1 Sam. 14:16; 15:34). In many passages, it is even called "Gibeah of Saul" (1 Sam. 11:4; Is. 10:29). At Tell el-Ful, the remains of Saul's fortress, built around 1015 B.C., have been found. The fortress walls, 2.5 to 3.5 meters (8 to 10 feet) thick, enclosed an area of 52 x 47 meters (170 x 155 feet). The stronghold was made up of two stories joined by a stone staircase.
4. The KJV uses "Gibeah" instead of "hill" in some passages, such as "the house of Abinadab that was in Gibeah" (2 Sam. 6:4).

GIBEATH ELOHIM [GIB ee ath el oh HEEM] (hill of God)—the place where Saul was filled with the Spirit of the Lord after he was anointed king of Israel (1 Sam. 10:5, NRSV; Gibeah of God, NIV).

GIBEATHITE [GIBB ih uh thite]—a native or inhabitant of GIBEAH, a city of the tribe of Benjamin (1 Chr. 12:3).

GIBEON [GIBB eh un] (pertaining to a hill)—a city in the territory of Benjamin about 10 kilometers (6 miles) northwest of Jerusalem (see Map 3, B–4). It was the chief city of the HIVITES.

The first reference to Gibeon in the Bible is Joshua 9:3. After the Israelites destroyed the cities of Jericho and Ai (Joshua 6–8), Gibeon's inhabitants, fearing the same fate, made a covenant with the Israelites. Although they established the treaty by deceit and thus were made slaves by the Israelites, the Gibeonites were still protected from the alliance of five Amorite kings. In a battle over Gibeon between Joshua and the Amorite alliance (Josh. 10:1–11), the sun stood still for a day and hailstones rained down on the fleeing Amorites.

Gibeon does not appear again in Scripture until about 1000 B.C. Then, in a gruesome contest of strength, twelve of David's men and twelve of the men of Ishbosheth (Saul's son) killed one another with their swords. The place was named "the Field of the Sharp Swords" (2 Sam. 2:16) because of this event. There followed a great battle in which David's forces were victorious (2 Sam. 2:12–17).

The prophet Jeremiah mentioned a "great pool that is in Gibeon" (Jer. 41:12). This pool was discovered in an excavation of the site, beginning in 1956. Archaeologists discovered a large open pit about 11 meters (35 feet) deep that had been dug into the solid rock. A large stone stairway descended into the pit, then continued another eleven meters down to a water chamber. Gibeon was the center of a winemaking industry during the seventh century B.C. The lower chamber of the "great pool" provided water for the wine and also served as the city's main water supply.

Photo by Howard Vos

• The great pool in Gibeon (Jer. 41:12), 37 feet in diameter, extends 35 feet deep through solid rock.

GIBEONITES [GIB ee un ites]—the Canaanite inhabitants of the city of GIBEON, probably also including the people of its three dependent towns (2 Sam. 21:1–9). When the Gibeonites heard of Joshua's victories at JERICHO and AI, they pretended to be ambassadors from a far country in order to make a peace treaty with the invading Israelites (Josh. 9:4–5). When the deception was discovered, the Israelites permitted the Gibeonites to live, according to their agreement. However, they were made slaves, "woodcutters and water carriers for all the congregation and for the altar of the Lord" (Josh. 9:21).

Apparently King Saul broke this covenant of peace with the Gibeonites in later years. During the reign of David, when a three-year famine blighted the land, it was discovered that the Lord was angry with the "bloodthirsty house" of Saul, who had "killed the Gibeonites" (2 Sam. 21:1) in a frenzy of patriotic zeal. To make up for this wrong, David allowed the Gibeonites to execute seven of Saul's descendants (2 Sam. 21:9).

GIBLITES [GIB lights]—a form of GEBALITES.

GIDDALTI [gih DAL tih] (I have magnified [God])—a son of Heman and one of those in charge of the music services in the temple in David's time (1 Chr. 25:4, 29).

GIDDEL [GID dell] (magnified)—the name of two men whose descendants returned from the captivity to Jerusalem:

1. The ancestor of a family of Nethinim (temple servants) who returned with Zerubbabel (Ezra 2:47).
2. The ancestor of a family of Solomon's servants (Neh. 7:58).

GIDEON [GIDD ee un]—a military hero and spiritual leader who delivered Israel from the oppression of the Midianites.

As a young lad, Gideon had seen the land oppressed by the Midianites and Amalekites for seven years (Judg. 6:1). Like invading locusts, the roving bands camped on the land of the Israelites. At harvest time, they destroyed the crops and animals and plundered the farmers' houses. Israel's misfortune was apparently caused by their spiritual relapse into Baal worship (Judg. 6:1).

As young Gideon was threshing wheat, the angel of the Lord appeared with strong words of encouragement: "The Lord is with you, you mighty man of valor . . . Surely, I will be with you, and you shall defeat the Midianites as one man" (Judg. 6:12, 16).

Gideon then asked the messenger for a sign that God had selected him for divine service. He prepared an offering and placed it on an altar. The angel touched the offering with his staff, and fire consumed it (6:19–21). Gideon then recognized his personal call to serve God.

Gideon's first assignment was to destroy his father's altar of Baal in the family's backyard (Judg. 6:25). This act required great courage, for Gideon feared his father's house and the men of the city who must have worshiped at the altar. For this reason, Gideon and ten servants destroyed the altar of Baal and a wood idol by night and erected an altar to the Lord. Gideon immediately presented an offering to the Lord on the altar (6:27–28). When Gideon's fellow citizens discovered that the altar to Baal had been destroyed, they were outraged. When it was learned that "Gideon the son of Joash has done this thing" (6:29), Joash was called to account for his son’s behavior. To his credit, Joash defended Gideon by implying that an authentic god should require no defense. “If he [Baal] is a god, let him plead for himself” (6:31). So that day Gideon was called Jerubbaal, meaning “Let Baal plead” (6:25–32).

As the oppression of the Midianites intensified, Gideon sent out messengers to all Manasseh and the surrounding tribes to rally volunteers to Israel’s cause (Judg. 6:35). When Gideon’s volunteers assembled, about 32,000 citizen soldiers stood in the ranks (Judg. 7:1). Although there were 135,000 Midianites camped in a nearby valley, God directed Gideon to thin out the ranks. After dismissing the fearful and afraid, only 10,000 remained. Gideon’s band was now outnumbered about thirteen to one.

“There are still too many,” God told Gideon. “Bring them down to the water, and I will test them for you there” (7:4). Those who scooped up the water with their hands, never taking their eyes from the horizon, were retained in Gideon’s army; those who got down on their knees to drink, forgetting to keep watch for the enemy, were dismissed. Now only 300 soldiers remained (Judg. 7:5–7). The Midianites outnumbered Gideon’s band 450 to 1. But God and Gideon had a secret plan.

Gideon divided the army into three companies. Then he gave each man a trumpet, a pitcher, and a torch. At the appointed time, 300 trumpets blasted the air, 300 hands raised their pitchers and smashed them to bits, 300 burning torches pierced the darkness, and 300 warriors cried, “The sword of the LORD and of Gideon” (Judg. 7:19–21).

The Midianites were thrown into panic. In the confusion, some committed suicide or killed their comrades. The remaining soldiers fled. The enemies of Israel were completely routed, and Israel’s homeland was secure (Judg. 7:22; 8:10). It was a glorious victory for God and for Gideon, who became an instant hero (8:22).

Gideon and his men pursued the fleeing enemy. Many of them were killed or captured by Gideon’s allies. Two Midianite kings, Zebah and Zalmunna, were captured and killed for their murderous deeds (Judges 8).

As a conquering warrior, Gideon was invited to become king (Judg. 8:22), but he declined. Modest and devout, he was careful not to grasp at the power and glory that belonged to God. After he retired to his home, Israel was blessed with forty years of peace (Judg. 8:28).

Through the life and exploits of Gideon, God reveals much about Himself and the preparation that His leaders need for divine service. Gideon shows that God calls leaders from unlikely situations. Gideon was a poor farmer's son who worked with his hands, and his father was an idol worshiper (Judg. 6:15, 25). Still, Gideon was an effective leader in God's service.

The story of Gideon also reminds us that God prefers a few dedicated and disciplined disciples to throngs of uncommitted workers. God can win victories with a fully committed minority (Judg. 7:2, 4, 7).

Another leadership lesson from Gideon's life is that a leader's spiritual life is sustained by regular worship. Devout Gideon appears to have worshiped frequently—in times of personal crisis as well as celebration (Judg. 6:18–21; 7:15).

GIDEONI [gid ee OWN ih]—the father of Abidan, leader of the tribe of Benjamin in the wilderness (Num. 1:11).

GIDOM [GIE dum]—a place in the territory of Benjamin that marked the farthest point of Israel's pursuit of the tribe of Benjamin during their civil war (Judg. 20:45).

GIER EAGLE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

GIFT, GIVING—the act of bestowing a favor or an item on another person without expecting anything in return. The purpose of a gift may be to honor (2 Sam. 8:2; Dan. 2:48), celebrate (Rev. 11:10), or simply to bestow favor or help (Esth. 9:22). God is the giver of every good and perfect gift (Matt. 7:11; James 1:5, 17), including eternal life (Rom. 6:23), salvation (Eph. 2:8), the necessities of life (Matt. 6:11), ability to work (Eccl. 3:13; 5:19; Deut. 8:18), the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:38; 5:32), spiritual abilities (1 Cor. 12:4), and above all His indescribable gift (2 Cor. 9:15), His Son (John 3:16).

The Christian's gifts to God should not be bribes to obtain His favor, but grateful responses to what He has done in our lives. We are to give (Luke 6:30, 38), "for God loves a cheerful giver" (2 Cor. 9:7). Giving itself can be thought of as a gift from God: “Having . . . gifts . . . let us use them: . . . he who gives, with liberality” (Rom. 12:6, 8).

GIFT OF HEALING; GIFTS, SPIRITUAL (see SPIRITUAL GIFTS).

GIFT OF TONGUES (see TONGUES, GIFT OF).

GIHON [GIH hon] (gusher)—the name of a river and a spring in the Old Testament:

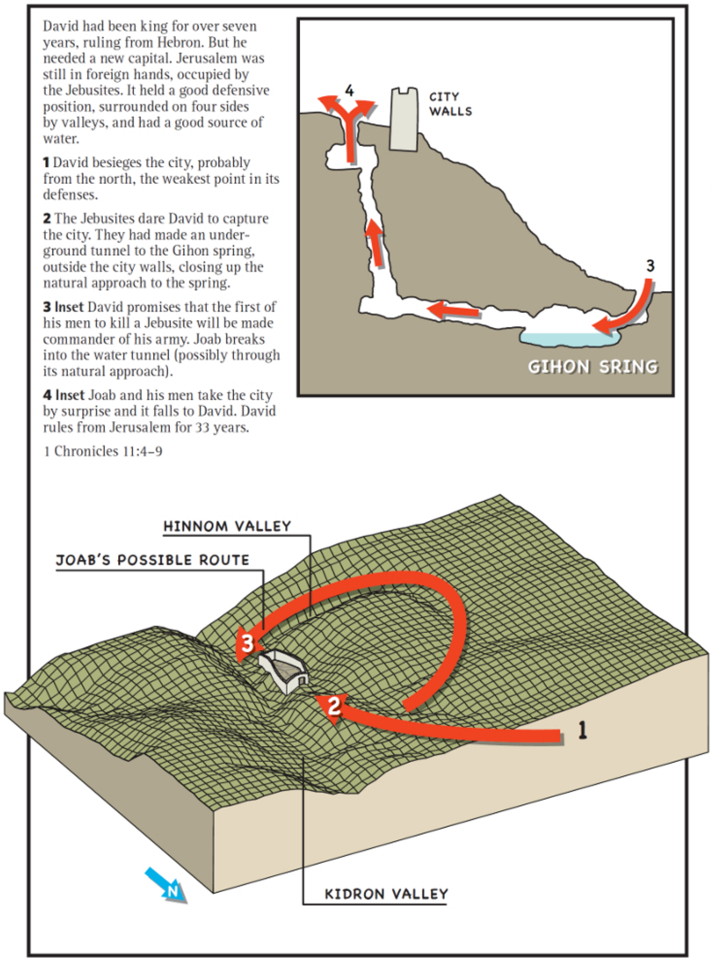
1. One of the four rivers of the Garden of EDEN (Gen. 2:13). Some scholars believe the name refers to the NILE River. Others, however, believe it refers to a smaller river in the Euphrates Valley system—perhaps a major irrigation ditch or canal.
2. A spring outside the walls of Jerusalem where the city obtained part of its water supply (2 Chr. 32:30). The Canaanite inhabitants of ancient Jerusalem, or JEBUS, had used and protected the spring in their fortifications, too. When David and his soldiers conquered Jebus, they entered it through the water shaft that led from the spring into the city (2 Sam. 5:8). Israel continued to use Gihon and its water channel. King Hezekiah channeled the water more elaborately when he constructed the famous SILOAM tunnel in 701 B.C. as part of the city’s preparation against the siege of the Assyrians (2 Kin. 20:20).

   Gihon was the site where Solomon was anointed and proclaimed king (1 Kin. 1:33, 38, 45). Some scholars believe it later became customary for the new king to drink from the waters of Gihon during his coronation ceremony (Ps. 110:7).

Photo by Howard Vos

- A family fills their water jars at the Gihon Spring—a natural source of water for the residents of Jerusalem for many centuries (2 Chr. 32:30).

JERUSALEM CAPTURED



David had been king for over seven years, ruling from Hebron. But he needed a new capital. Jerusalem was still in foreign hands, occupied by the Jebusites. It held a good defensive position, surrounded on four sides by valleys, and had a good source of water.

1 David besieges the city, probably from the north, the weakest point in its defenses.

2 The Jebusites dare David to capture the city. They had made an underground tunnel to the Gihon spring, outside the city walls, closing up the natural approach to the spring.

3 Inset David promises that the first of his men to kill a Jebusite will be made commander of his army. Joab breaks into the water tunnel (possibly through its natural approach).

4 Inset Joab and his men take the city by surprise and it falls to David. David rules from Jerusalem for 33 years.

1 Chronicles 11:4–9

GILALAI [GILL ah lih]—a Levite musician who participated in the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem following the captivity (Neh. 12:36).

GILBOA [gill BOW ah]—a ridge of mountains in the territory of Issachar at the east end of the Plain of Jezreel (see Map 3, B–3). Gilboa was the site where King Saul and his sons died when the Philistines defeated Israel (1 Chr. 10:1, 8). Jebel Fuquàh, about 5 kilometers (3 miles) southeast of Jezreel, is the name of the area today.

Photo by Amit Erez

- View of the Plain of Jezreel with the mountains of Gilboa in the background.

GILEAD [GILL ee ad]—the name of three men, two mountains, and one city in the Old Testament:

1. A son of Machir and grandson of Manasseh (Josh. 17:1). He founded a tribal family, the GILEADITES.
2. A mountain region east of the Jordan River 915 meters (3,000 feet) above sea level. Extending about 97 kilometers (60 miles) from near the south end of the Sea of Galilee to the north end of the Dead Sea, Gilead is about 32 kilometers (20 miles) wide. It is bounded on the west by the JORDAN River, on the south by the land of Moab, on the north by the YARMUK River, and on the east by the desert.

   The Jabbok River divides Gilead into two parts: northern Gilead, the land between the Jabbok and the Yarmuk, and southern Gilead, the land between the Jabbok and the Arnon (Josh. 12:2). The term Gilead, however, came to be applied to the entire region of Israelite TRANSJORDAN (Deut. 34:1).

This lush region receives an annual rainfall of from 71 to 81 centimeters (28 to 32 inches). Thus, much of it is thickly wooded today, as it was in Absalom's day (2 Sam. 18:6–9). Many fugitives fled to this region for safety. Jacob fled to Gilead from Laban his father-in-law (Gen. 31:21). The Israelites who feared the Philistines in King Saul's day fled here (1 Sam. 13:7), as did Ishbosheth (2 Sam. 2:8–9) and David (2 Sam. 17:22, 26) during Absalom's revolt. Gilead also contains rich grazing land (1 Chr. 5:9–10).

The BALM OF GILEAD, an aromatic resin used for medical purposes (Jer. 8:22), was exported to Tyre and elsewhere (Ezek. 27:17). The Ishmaelites who carried Joseph into Egyptian bondage also traded in Gilead's balm (Gen. 37:25).

When Canaan was being allocated to the Israelite tribes, Gilead fell to the Reubenites and Gadites because of its suitability for grazing cattle (Deut. 3:12–17). The half-tribe of Manasseh also shared in the land of Gilead.

3. A mountain on the edge of the Jezreel valley (Judg. 7:3). Gideon and his men were camped here when Gideon ordered a reduction in his troops before he fought the Midianites.
4. The father of JEPHTHAH, a judge of Israel (Judg. 11:1—12:7).
5. A chief of the family of Gad (1 Chr. 5:14).
6. A city in the region of Gilead condemned by the prophet Hosea (Hos. 6:8). The name Gilead in this passage is probably a poetic shortening of Ramoth Gilead or Jabesh Gilead, two of the cities of Gilead.

GILEAD, BALM OF—an aromatic gum or resin, reportedly having value as medicine (Jer. 8:22), exported from Gilead to Phoenicia (Ezek. 27:17) and Egypt (Gen. 37:25).

GILEADITES [GILL ee ad ites]—descendants of Gilead (Num. 26:29; Judg. 10:3; 11:1, 40).

GILGAL [GILL gal] (circle)—the name of a campsite and two cities in the Old Testament:

1. A village from which the prophet Elijah ascended into heaven (2 Kin. 2:1). Gilgal was perhaps in the hill country of Ephraim, about 13 kilometers (8 miles) northwest of Bethel.

2. The first campsite of the people of Israel after they crossed the Jordan River and entered the Promised Land (Josh. 4:19–20). They took stones from the Jordan and set them up at Gilgal as a memorial to God's deliverance. Many important events in Israel's history are associated with this city. The first Passover in Canaan was held at Gilgal (Josh. 5:9–10). It also became the base of military operations for Israel during the conquest of Canaan. From Gilgal Joshua led Israel against the city of Jericho (Josh. 6:11, 14) and conducted his southern campaign (Joshua 10). It was there that he began allotting the Promised Land to the tribes.

   In later years, Gilgal was the site of King Saul's coronation as well as his rejection by God as king (1 Sam. 11:15; 13:4–12; 15:12–33). After Absalom's revolt, the people of Judah gathered at Gilgal to welcome David back as their king (2 Sam. 19:15, 40). But during the days of later kings, Gilgal became a center of idolatry. Like Bethel, it was condemned by the prophets (Hos. 4:15; Amos 5:5). The presumed site of Gilgal is about 2 kilometers (1 mile) northeast of Old Testament Jericho (Josh. 4:19).
3. A town between Dor and Tirzah (Josh. 12:23), probably Jiljulieh, a little town north of the brook Kanah and 8 kilometers (5 miles) northeast of Antipatris.

GILOH [GIH low]—a town in the hill country of Judah (Josh. 15:51), the home of the traitorous Ahithophel and the place where he committed suicide (2 Sam. 15:12).

GILONITE [GIH low night]—a native or inhabitant of the town of GILOH (2 Sam. 23:34).

GIMEL [GHEE muhl]—the third letter of the Hebrew alphabet, used as a heading over Psalm 119:17–24. In the original Hebrew, each line of these eight verses began with the letter gimel. Also see ACROSTIC.

GIMZO [GHIM zow]—a town in northern Judah, captured by the Philistines during the reign of King Ahaz of Judah (2 Chr. 28:18).

GINATH [GIH nath]—the father of Tibni, the unsuccessful rival of Omri. Tibni and Omri fought for the throne of Israel after the death of Zimri (1 Kin. 16:21–22).

GINNETHO [GHIN ee tho]—a form of GINNETHON.

GINNETHOI [GHIN ee thoy]—a form of GINNETHON.

GINNETHON [GHIN ee thun]—the head of a priestly family who returned from the captivity and sealed the covenant with Nehemiah (Neh. 10:6; 12:4; Ginnetho, KJV).

GIRDLE (see DRESS OF THE BIBLE; ARMS, ARMOR OF THE BIBLE).

GIRGASHITE [GUR gah shite]—a member of an ancient tribe that inhabited Canaan before the Israelites drove them out (Josh. 3:10). Some scholars identify the Girgashites with the GADARENES.

GIRZITES [GUR zites]—a people who lived between Philistia and Egypt. The Girzites are mentioned with the Amalekites and the Geshurites (1 Sam. 27:8; Gezrites, KJV; Gizrites, REB).

GISHPA [GISH puh]—an overseer of the NETHINIM (temple servants) in Nehemiah's time (Neh. 11:21). This name may be a different form of Hasupha (Ezra 2:43).

GITTAH-HEPHER [GIT ah HEE fur]—a form of GATH HEPHER.

GITTAIM [GIT tah em] (two winepresses)—a village in Benjamin to which the Amorite inhabitants of Beeroth fled from King Saul (2 Sam. 4:3).

GITTITE [GIT tight]—a native or inhabitant of GATH (2 Sam. 15:18–19).

GITTITH [GITT ith] (from Gath)—the feminine form of Gittite (a native or inhabitant of Gath), used in the titles of Psalms 8, 81, and 84. At least three different meanings are possible:

1. A musical instrument used, or perhaps manufactured, in Gath—and to be used as an accompaniment to the singing of these psalms.
2. A "vintage song" whose tune was to be followed in the temple music.

3. The tune of a military march used by Gittite warriors.

GIZONITE [GUY zoe nite]—a description applied to Hashem, one of David's mighty men (1 Chr. 11:34), indicating either the name of his family or his hometown.

GIZRITES [GIHZ rites]—a form of GIRZITES.

GLASS—a clear substance made of a mixture of minerals from which liquid-holding vessels, mirrors, and other useful objects are manufactured. Rarely mentioned in the Bible, glass was not a widespread commodity until Roman times. But it was developed much earlier in the history of the ancient world. Glass beads, datable to about 2500 B.C. or later, existed in Egypt.

Evidence of glass manufacturing has been found at the royal site of Tell el-Amarna in Egypt. This was the center of a religious and artistic revolution under the Pharaoh Amunhotep IV (1368–1351 B.C.), who later changed his name to AKHENATEN. Glass from this period is core-made. The desired shape of the vessel was first formed from clay or sand around a metal rod. On this core, or mold, the vessel was fashioned. These objects were constructed from coiled threads of colored glass that were reheated and frequently combed to produce zigzag patterns. Phoenicia was also a center of glass production during this period, undoubtedly being influenced by Egypt. Egyptian and Phoenician imports have been found at a number of sites in Palestine, such as Hazor, Gezer, Megiddo, and Samaria.

The Roman period witnessed unparalleled growth in the glassmaking industry. This was the result of the introduction of blown glass in the first century B.C. Vessels were fashioned on the end of a hollow metal tube by blowing a bulb of molten glass into a mold. Later the vessels were shaped without the use of molds.

Biblical references to glass are few. Its rarity in Palestine during the Old Testament period is reflected in its mention (translated "crystal") together with gold in Job 28:17. In several passages translated "glass" by the KJV, the reference is actually to highly polished metal surfaces—such as bronze—that served as mirrors (Ex. 38:8; 1 Cor. 13:12; James 1:23). The bottle for tears mentioned in Psalm 56:8 is the kind of small glass vial uncovered in tombs by archaeologists. Glass is also referred to in Revelation 21:18, 21.

GLASS, SEA (see SEA OF GLASS).

GLASS WORKER (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

GLEANING—the process of gathering grain or other produce left in the fields by reapers (Judg. 8:2; Ruth 2; Is. 17:6). The Old Testament Law required that property owners leave the gleanings of their produce in the fields so they might be gathered by “the poor and the stranger” (Lev. 19:9–10; 23:22). Also see AGRICULTURE.

GLEDE (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

GLORIFY—to magnify God through praising His name and honoring His commandments (Ps. 86:12). Jesus also glorified His Father through His perfect obedience and His sacrificial death on our behalf (John 17:1).

GLORY—beauty, power, or honor; a quality of God’s character that emphasizes His greatness and authority. The word is used in three senses in the Bible:

1. God’s moral beauty and perfection of character. This divine quality is beyond human understanding (Ps. 113:4). All people “fall short” of it (Rom. 3:23).
2. God’s moral beauty and perfection as a visible presence. While God’s glory is not a substance, at times God does reveal His perfection to humans in a visible way. Such a display of the presence of God is often seen as fire or dazzling light, but sometimes as an act of power. Some examples from the Old Testament are the pillar of cloud and fire (Ex. 13:21), the Lord’s deliverance of the Israelites at the Red Sea (Exodus 14), and especially His glory in the tabernacle (Lev. 9:23–24) and temple (1 Kin. 8:11).

   Since the close of the Old Testament, the glory of God has been shown mainly in Christ (Luke 9:29–32; John 2:11) and in the members of His church. Christ now shares His divine glory with His followers (John 17:5–6, 22), so that in their lives Christians are being transformed into the glorious image of God (2 Cor. 3:18). Believers will be fully glorified at the end of time in God's heavenly presence (Rom. 5:2; Col. 3:4). There the glory of God will be seen everywhere (Rev. 21:23).

3. Praise. At times God's glory may mean the honor and audible praise that His creatures give to Him (Ps. 115:1; Rev. 5:12–13).

GLUTTON—a person who is debased and excessive in his or her eating habits. Gluttony is more than overeating. In its association with drunkenness (Prov. 23:21; Deut. 21:20), it describes a life given to excess. When Jesus was called a "gluttonous man" (Matt. 11:19), His critics were accusing Him of being loose and excessive by associating with tax collectors and sinners.

GNASH, GNASHING OF TEETH—to grate or grind one's teeth together as an expression of hatred and scorn (Job. 16:9). Jesus used the phrase to portray the futility of the wicked who will be judged by God at the end of time (Matt. 13:42, 50).

GNAT (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

GNOSTICISM [NOS tuh siz em]—a system of false teachings that existed during the early centuries of Christianity. Its name came from gnosis, the Greek word for knowledge. The Gnostics believed that knowledge was the way to salvation. For this reason, Gnosticism was condemned as false and heretical by several writers of the New Testament.

Sources. Our knowledge of Gnosticism comes from several sources. First, there are the Gnostic texts, which are among the New Testament APOCRYPHA. These texts are not recognized as Scripture because they contain teachings that differ from those in the Bible. Then, there are the refutations of the Gnostics by the early church fathers. Some of the more important ones are Irenaeus, Against Heresies; Hippolytus, Refutations of All Heresies; Epiphanius, Panarion; and Tertullian, Against Marcion.

Still a third source about Gnosticism is the New Testament itself. Many Gnostic teachings were condemned by the writers of the New Testament. Paul emphasized a wisdom and knowledge that comes from God and does not concern itself with idle speculations, fables, and moral laxity (Col. 2:8–23; 1 Tim. 1:4; 2 Tim. 2:16–19; Titus 1:10–16). John, both in his gospel and in the epistles, countered heretical teaching that, in a broad sense, can be considered Gnostic.

Teachings of the Gnostics. The Gnostics accepted the Greek idea of a radical dualism between God (spirit) and the world (matter). According to their world view, the created order was evil, inferior, and opposed to the good. God may have created the first order, but each successive order was the work of anti-gods, archons, or a demiurge (a subordinate deity).

The Gnostics believed that the earth is surrounded by a number of cosmic spheres (usually seven) that separate human beings from God. These spheres are ruled by archons (spiritual principalities and powers) who guard their spheres by barring the souls who are seeking to ascend from the realm of darkness and captivity that is below to the realm of light that is above.

The Gnostics also taught that every human being is composed of body, soul, and spirit. Since the body and the soul are part of people’s earthly existence, they are evil. Enclosed in the soul, however, is the spirit, the only divine part of this triad. This “spirit” is asleep and ignorant; it needs to be awakened and liberated by knowledge.

According to the Gnostics, the aim of salvation is for the spirit to be awakened by knowledge so the inner person can be released from the earthly dungeon and return to the realm of light where the soul becomes reunited with God. As the soul ascends, however, it needs to penetrate the cosmic spheres that separate it from its heavenly destiny. This, too, is accomplished by knowledge. One must understand certain formulas that are revealed only to the initiated.

Ethical behavior among the Gnostics varied considerably. Some sought to separate themselves from all evil matter in order to avoid contamination. Paul may be opposing such a view in 1 Timothy 4:1–5. For other Gnostics, ethical life took the form of libertinism. For them knowledge meant freedom to participate in all sorts of activities. Many reasoned that since they had received divine knowledge and were truly informed as to their divine nature, it did not matter how they lived.

Such an attitude is a misunderstanding of the gospel. Paul, on a number of occasions, reminded his readers that they were saved from sin to holiness. They were not to have an attitude of indifference toward the law. They had died to sin in their baptism into Christ (Rom. 6:1–11) and so were to walk "in newness of life." John reminded the Christians that once they had been saved they were not to continue living in sin (1 John 3:4–10).

These Gnostic teachings also had a disruptive effect on fellowship in the church. Those who were "enlightened" thought of themselves as being superior to those who did not have such knowledge. Divisions arose between the spiritual and the fleshly. This attitude of superiority is severely condemned in the New Testament. Christians are "one body" (1 Cor. 12) who should love one another (1 Cor. 13; 1 John). Spiritual gifts are for the Christian community rather than individual use; they should promote humility rather than pride (1 Cor. 12–14; Eph. 4:11–16).

Photo: Levant Photo Service

• Excavations at ancient Ashkelon, one of the five chief cities of the Philistines near the coast of the Mediterranean Sea.

GOAD (see TOOLS OF THE BIBLE).

GOAH [GOE ah]—a form of GOATH.

GOAT (see ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE).

GOATH [GOE ath]—a place near Jerusalem, one of the boundaries prophesied for the rebuilt city (Jer. 31:39; Goah, NASB, NIV, NRSV).

GOATHERD (see OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES).

GOAT'S HAIR (see DRESS OF THE BIBLE).

GOB [gob]—an unknown place where the Israelites battled the Philistines (2 Sam. 21:18–19). At Gob Jaare-Oregim killed the brother of the giant, Goliath.

GOBLET—any bowl-shaped container for holding liquids. The word is used symbolically in Song of Solomon 7:2, where the beloved's navel is compared to "a rounded goblet." The same Hebrew word is translated "cup" in Isaiah 22:24 and "basin" in Exodus 24:6.

GOD—the creator and sustainer of the universe who has provided humankind with a revelation of Himself through the natural world and through His Son, Jesus Christ.

The Bible does not seek to prove the existence of God; it simply affirms His existence by declaring, "In the beginning God . . ." (Gen. 1:1). God has revealed Himself through the physical universe (Ps. 19:1; Rom. 1:19–20). By observing the universe, one can find positive indications of God's existence. Creation reveals the results of a universal mind that devised a master plan and executed it. It makes more sense to accept the idea of God as Creator of the universe than to assume that our orderly universe came into existence apart from a divine being.

The greatest revelation of God, however, comes through the Bible. Through the inspired written record, both the existence of God and the nature of God are revealed in and through Jesus Christ. Jesus stated, "He that has seen me, has seen the Father" (John 14:9).

Although the full revelation of God was in Jesus Christ, the human mind cannot fully understand God. One reason for this is that Scripture does not record all the actions and teachings of Jesus (John 21:25). Another reason is the limitation of the human mind. How can our finite minds understand the infinity of God? It is not possible.

Although we cannot fully understand God, we still can know Him. We know Him through a personal relationship of faith and through a study of what the Bible teaches about His nature.

God may be described in terms of attributes. An attribute is an inherent characteristic of a person or being. While we cannot describe God in a comprehensive way, we can learn about Him by examining His attributes as revealed in the Bible. The first group is known as the natural attributes of God.

God Is Spirit. Jesus taught that "God is Spirit" (John 4:24). God has no body, no physical or measurable form. Thus, God is invisible. He became visible in human form in the person of Jesus Christ, but His essence is invisible.

God Is Changeless. Progress and change may characterize some of His works, but God Himself remains unchanged (Heb. 1:12). He does not change; otherwise, He would not be perfect. Thus, what we know of God can be known with certainty. He is not different from one time to another.

God Is All-Powerful. God's power is unlimited. He can do anything that is not inconsistent with His nature, character, and purpose (Gen. 17:1; 18:14). The only limitations on God's power are imposed by Himself (Gen. 18:25). "Impossible" is not in God's vocabulary. God creates and sustains all things; yet He never grows weary (Is. 40:27–31).

God Is All-Knowing. God possesses all knowledge (Job 38:39; Rom. 11:33–36). Because God is everywhere at one and the same time, He knows everything simultaneously. That God has the power to know the thoughts and motives of every heart is evident from many Scripture passages, notably Job 37:16, Psalm 147:5, and Hebrews 3:13.

God Is Everywhere. God is not confined to any part of the universe but is present in all His power at every point in space and every moment in time (Ps. 139:7–12). Thus, God does not belong to any one nation or generation. He is the God of the whole earth (Gen. 18:25).

God Is Eternal. Eternity refers to God’s relation to time. Past, present, and future are known equally to Him (2 Pet. 3:8; Rev. 1:8). Time is like a parade that human beings see only a segment at a time. But God sees time in its entirety.

The second group of attributes is called moral attributes. These refer to God’s character, His essential nature.

God Is Holiness. The word “holy” comes from a root word that means “to separate.” Thus, it refers to God as separated from or exalted above other things (Is. 6:1–3). Holiness refers to God’s moral excellence. Being holy, God demands holiness in His own children. And what He demands, He supplies. Holiness is God’s gift that we receive by faith through His Son, Jesus Christ (Eph. 4:24).

God Is Righteousness. Righteousness as applied to God refers to His affirmation of what is right as opposed to what is wrong. The righteousness of God refers to His moral laws laid down to guide the conduct of humankind, as in the Ten Commandments. Righteousness also refers to God’s administration of justice. He brings punishment upon the disobedient (Gen. 18:25; Deut. 32:4; Rom. 2:6–16). Finally, God’s righteousness is redemptive. In the Book of Romans the righteousness of God refers to God’s declaring the believer to be in a state of righteousness as though he had never been unrighteous (Rom. 1:16–17; 3:24–26). This is possible because of the sacrificial death of Jesus on our behalf.

The temple devoted to worship of the Roman Emperor Hadrian at Ephesus. This form of idolatry was condemned by the Lord God, who declared, “You shall have no other gods before Me” (Ex. 20:3).

God Is Love. Love is the essential, selfgiving nature of God. God’s love for humankind seeks to awaken a responsive love of people for God. Divine love runs like a golden thread through the entire Bible. Nature is eloquent with the skill, wisdom, and power of God. Only in the Bible, however, do we discover God giving Himself and all He possesses to His creatures, in order to win their response and to possess them for Himself.

God loved and gave; He loved and sought—just as a shepherd seeks his sheep. God loved and suffered, providing His love by giving His all on the cross for the redemption of humanity. God, in His love, wills good for all His creatures (Gen. 1:31; Ps. 145:9; Mark 10:18).

God Is Truth. All truth, whether natural, physical, or religious, is grounded in God. Thus, any seemingly inconsistent teaching between natural and physical sciences and God's revelation of Himself is more apparent than real. Truth is magnified in an absolute way through God's revelation.

God Is Wisdom. God's wisdom is revealed in His doing the best thing, in the best way, at the best time, for the best purpose.

Some people have knowledge, but little wisdom, while the most wise at times have little knowledge. But God is "the only wise God�� (1 Tim. 1:17). In creation, history, human lives, redemption, and Christ, His divine wisdom is revealed. Human beings, lacking wisdom, can claim God's wisdom simply by asking (1 Kin. 3:9; James 1:5).

Believers' understanding of God continues to increase throughout their earthly pilgrimage. It will finally be complete in eternity when they stand in the presence of God.

GOD, CHILDREN OF (see SONS OF GOD).

GOD, IMAGE OF (see IMAGE OF GOD).

GOD, NAMES OF—the titles or designations given to God throughout the Bible. In the ancient world, knowing another's name was a special privilege that offered access to that person's thought and life. God favored His people by revealing Himself by several names that offered special insight into His love and righteousness.

Jehovah/Yahweh. One of the most important names for God in the Old Testament is Yahweh, or Jehovah, from the verb "to be," meaning simply but profoundly, "He Is." His full name is found only in Ex. 3:14 and means "I am who I am" or "I will be who I will be." The four-letter Hebrew word YHWH was the name by which God revealed Himself to Moses at the burning bush (Ex. 3:14). This bush was a vivid symbol of the inexhaustible dynamism of God who burns like a fire with love and righteousness, yet remains the same and never diminishes. Some English translations of the Bible vocalize the word as Jehovah, while others use Yahweh.

God is the author of life and salvation. His "I am" expresses the fact that He is the infinite and original personal God who is behind everything and to whom everything must finally be traced. "I am who I am" signals the truth that nothing else defines who God is but God Himself. What He says and does is who He is. The inspired Scriptures are the infallible guide to understanding who God is by what He says about Himself and what He does. Yahweh is the all-powerful and sovereign God who alone defines Himself and establishes truth for His creatures and works for their salvation.

Moses was called to proclaim deliverance to the people and was told by God, "Thus you shall say to the children of Israel, 'I AM has sent me to you' " (Ex. 3:14). In the deliverance of the Hebrew people from slavery in Egypt, God revealed a deeper significance to His name. But He had already disclosed Himself to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob as Yahweh. Each of them had called on the name of the Lord (Yahweh) (Gen. 12:8; 13:4; 26:25; Ex. 3:15) as the God who protects and blesses. Yet Exodus 6:3 shows that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob did not know the fuller meaning of Yahweh, which was to be revealed to Moses and the Hebrew people in His role as Redeemer during the Exodus experience.

The divine name Yahweh is usually translated "LORD" in English versions of the Bible, because it became a practice in late Old Testament Judaism not to pronounce the sacred name YHWH, but to say instead "my Lord" (Adonai)—a practice still used today in the synagogue. When the vowels of Adonai were attached to the consonants YHWH in the medieval period, the word Jehovah resulted. Today, many Christians use the word Yahweh, the more original pronunciation, not hesitating to name the divine name since Jesus taught believers to speak in a familiar way to God.

The following are other names in honor of the Lord in the Old Testament that stem from the basic name of Yahweh:

Jehovah-jireh—This name is translated as "The-LORD-Will-Provide," commemorating the provision of the ram in place of Isaac for Abraham's sacrifice (Gen. 22:14).

Jehovah-nissi—This name means "The-LORD-Is-My-Banner," in honor of God's defeat of the Amalekites (Ex. 17:15).

Jehovah-shalom—This phrase means "The-LORD-Is-Peace," the name Gideon gave the altar that he built in Ophrah (Judg. 6:24).

Jehovah-shammah—This phrase expresses the truth that "The-LORD-Is-There," referring to the city which the prophet Ezekiel saw in his vision (Ezek. 48:35).

Jehovah-tsebaoth—This name, translated “The-LORD-of-hosts,” was used in the days of David and the prophets, witnessing to the Almighty God of sovereign power who is surrounded by His heavenly hosts (1 Sam. 1:3).

Jehovah Elohe Yisrael—This name means “The-LORD-God-of-Israel,” and it appears in Isaiah, Jeremiah, and the Psalms. Other names similar to this are Netsah Yisrael, “The Strength of Israel” (1 Sam. 15:29); and Abir Yisrael, “The Mighty One of Israel” (Is. 1:24).

El. Another important root name for God in the Old Testament is El. By itself it refers to a god in the most general sense. It was widely used in ancient eastern cultures whose languages are similar to Hebrew and therefore may refer either to the true God or to false gods. The highest Canaanite god was El, whose son was Baal. In the Bible the word is often defined properly by a qualifier like Jehovah: “I, the LORD (Jehovah) your God (Elohim), am a jealous God (El)” (Deut. 5:9).

Abraham planted a tamarisk tree at Beersheba “and there called on the name of the LORD (Yahweh), the Everlasting God (El Olam) (Gen. 21:33). Jacob built an altar on a piece of land he purchased at Shechem and called it “El Elohe Israel” (“God, the God of Israel”), commemorating his wrestling with the angel at the place he called Peniel (“the face of God”), and receiving his new name Israel (Yisrael, “God strives”) (Gen. 32:28–30; 33:20). El Shaddai (God Almighty), signifying God as a source of blessing, is the name with which God appeared to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (Ex. 6:3).

Elohim. Elohim is the plural form of El, but it is usually translated in the singular. Some scholars have held that the plural represents an intensified form for the supreme God; others believe it describes the supreme God and His heavenly court of created beings. Still others hold that the plural form refers to the triune God of Genesis 1:1–3, who works through Word and Spirit in the creation of the world. In any event, Elohim conveys the idea that the one supreme being, who is the only true God, is in some sense plural.

Several important names of God identify Him as Branch, King, Wisdom, Shepherd, and Servant:

Branch of Righteousness. Jeremiah 23:5–6 names the coming messianic figure, the “Branch of righteousness,” who will descend from David and be raised up to reign as King to execute judgment and righteousness in the earth. Christians see in this linkage a prophecy about God the Son taking on human flesh to serve as righteous King.

King. This descendant of David will have several divine qualities. He will be a Branch of Righteousness, a King, and His name will be called "The Lord Our Righteousness" (Jehovah-tsidkenu).

Wisdom. In Proverbs 8:1–36 Wisdom, who always says and does what is righteous, works with God in the creation of the universe. Paul describes Christ in similar terms in Colossians 1:13–19; 2:1–3.

Shepherd. God is also described in prophecy as the Shepherd who will feed His flock, gather the lambs in His arms, carry them in His bosom, and gently lead those with young (Is. 40:11; Jer. 31:10; Ezek. 34:11–16). Jesus applied this name to Himself (Luke 15:4–7; John 10:11–16), making Himself equal to God; and Jesus Christ is so named by His followers (Heb. 13:20; 1 Pet. 5:4; Rev. 7:17).

Servant. The name of Servant also identifies the divine Messiah and His saving ministry on behalf of His people. God's Servant is described in terms that apply to Jesus. He is upheld and chosen by God; He delights in God; He receives God's Spirit. Like Wisdom in Proverbs 8, He is holy, just, and righteous. He will bring Jacob back to Him and will be a light to the nations since He is an offering for sin (Is. 42:1–4; 49:1–7; 53:1–12).

Word of God. The Word of God figures prominently in Scripture as another name of God. The Word is not as clearly a person in the Old Testament as in the New Testament where Jesus Christ is identified as the personal Word of God (John 1:1, 14). But it is evident from Psalm 33:4, 6, and 9 that the Word should be understood in a personal sense, for "the word of the Lord is right" indicates a personified Word. "By the Word of the LORD the heavens were made" (v. 6), echoes the creation in Genesis 1:3, 6. In the New Testament Jesus is seen to be both Word and Law personified.

Glory. God is described as Glory in Exodus 16:7; Psalm 104:31; and Isaiah 60:1. In the New Testament Jesus shares the glory of God (Matt. 25:31; 1 Cor. 2:8; Heb. 1:3).

When the new age arrives with the birth of Jesus Christ, the names of the three persons who comprise the Trinity are made more explicit. These names fulfill the deeper meanings of the Old Testament names for God.

In the New Testament God is known as Father (Matt. 5:16; 28:19) and Abba (Mark 14:36; Gal. 4:6). Jesus is known as Son (Matt. 11:27), Son of God (John 9:35), Son of man (Matt. 8:20), Messiah (John 1:41), Lord (Rom. 14:8), Word (John 1:1), Wisdom (1 Cor. 1:30), Bridegroom (Mark 2:19), Shepherd (John 10:11), Vine (John 15:1), Light (John 1:9), and "I am" (John 8:12, 58). The Holy Spirit is known as the Helper (John 14:16).

◆

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• The temple devoted to worship of the Roman Emperor Hadrian at Ephesus. This form of idolatry was condemned by the Lord God, who declared, "You shall have no other gods before Me" (Ex. 20:3).

◆

GOD, SONS OF (see SONS OF GOD).

GOD, UNKNOWN—a god to whom the people of Athens, Greece, had erected a monument some time before the apostle Paul's visit to the city. After arriving in Athens, Paul argued daily in the synagogue and marketplace on behalf of Jesus and the resurrection. When he was taken to the AREOPAGUS for further questioning by the curious Athenians, Paul saw that in addition to the monuments erected in honor of named gods, there was an altar dedicated “to the unknown god” (Acts 17:23). The Athenians apparently wanted to make sure they missed no gods in their worship.

Paul seized this opportunity to tell them about the God who made Himself known in Jesus Christ. The truth of the Acts story is substantiated by several secular writers of the time who reported that altars dedicated to unknown gods were common in and around Athens. Other sources indicate that the custom was also practiced elsewhere.

GOD-WHO-FORGIVES—a name for God that appears once in the NKJV, emphasizing the forgiving nature of God toward His wayward people (Ps. 99:8).

GODDESS (see GODS, PAGAN).

GODHEAD—an old English term that is a synonym for God, with an emphasis on that which makes the triune God essentially one (Rom. 1:20; Col. 2:9). The apostle Paul used the term to show the contrast between God’s sinless nature and the corrupt character of human beings and their tendencies toward idolatry.

In Romans 1:20 Paul used the term Godhead to describe what mankind ought to see in nature as a result of God’s creative handiwork—“His eternal power and Godhead,” or “Deity.” This entire passage in Romans describes how the human mind fails to understand the exalted Godhead because of its sinful rebellion and distortion of truth.

In the Colossians passage Paul declared that in Christ “dwells all the fullness of the Godhead bodily” (Col. 2:9), in contrast to the “tradition of men” (Col. 2:8). In the Son of God who took on human form, the essential quality and character of God are wholly present. This was Paul’s way of emphasizing that Jesus is not a mere “divine man” like the heroes of the Greco-Roman world, but truly God—the Godhead or God Himself in human form.

GODLINESS—piety or reverence toward God (1 Tim. 2:2). Godliness means more than religious profession and godly conduct; it also means the reality and power of a vital union with God.

GODS, PAGAN—the false gods and idols worshiped by people during Bible times—especially the false gods of Egypt, Mesopotamia (Assyria and Babylon), Canaan, Greece, and Rome.

Religion has always played an important part in civilization; in the ancient world it was a powerful force. The pagan civilizations of Bible times worshiped many gods. They had male and female deities, high and low gods, assemblies of gods, priests and priestesses, and temples and sacrifices. All the forces of nature that could not be controlled or understood were considered supernatural powers to be worshiped and feared.

Our knowledge of the pagan gods of the ancient world comes from the religious literature, idols, and other objects discovered by archaeologists. We have also learned from the meanings of names found in the literature from this period. People in Bible times were often named with sentences and phrases; sometimes they used the name of their favorite god in the compound name. Thus, names very often reflected popular religion. Most of the people of the ancient world were polytheistic; they worshiped more than one god.

The people worshiped these gods in the form of representative idols. This practice is called idolatry. The nation of Israel, however, was forbidden to make graven images of the one true and living God whom they worshiped (Ex. 20:3–6; Deut. 5:7–10). The pagan nations made statues or images to represent the powers they worshiped. Most of these idols were in the form of animals or human beings. But sometimes the idols represented celestial powers, like the sun, moon, and stars; forces of nature, like the sea and the rain; or life forces, like death and truth.

Belief in false gods was characterized by superstition and magic. The people believed that what happened to their gods would also happen to them. Puzzled by the workings of nature, they assigned the causes of various natural happenings to their gods. Rain was absolutely essential to life in agricultural societies. If it rained, they believed this was caused by a rain god. If it did not rain, they thought this was because that god had not sent the rain. They prayed and sacrificed to the god to send it.

In time an elaborate system of beliefs in such natural forces was developed into mythology. Each civilization and culture had its own mythological structure, but the structures were often quite similar. The names of the gods may have been different, but their functions and actions were often the same. The most prominent myth to cross cultural lines was that of the fertility cycle. Many pagan cultures believed that the god of fertility died each year during the winter but was reborn each year in the spring. The details differed among cultures, but the main idea was the same.

According to the Old Testament, God is a jealous God who permits no rivals: “You shall have no other gods before Me” (Ex. 20:3; Deut. 5:7). God’s will is all-powerful, and people must submit to it. He reveals Himself when He pleases and to whom He pleases, demanding that we obey His revelation. Nevertheless, the Hebrew people sometimes gave in to temptation and worshiped pagan gods from the surrounding cultures.

The many pagan gods that served as a temptation to the Hebrew people may be conveniently grouped into four distinct types: the false gods of (1) Mesopotamia (Assyria and Babylon), (2) Egypt, (3) Canaan, and (4) Greece and Rome.

The Pagan Gods of Mesopotamia. The biblical references to pagan gods begin with the statement that Terah, Abraham, and Nahor, when they dwelt on the other side of the River (that is, the Euphrates in Mesopotamia), “served other gods” (Josh. 24:2). Ancient Mesopotamia covered the region that is roughly equivalent geographically to present-day Syria, Iraq, and Iran.

The prominent gods in Mesopotamia were those over heaven, air, and earth, personified by Anu, Enlil, and Enki (Ea). Another group was made up of those that controlled the heavenly bodies: the sun, the moon, and the planet Venus (the “morning star”). In fact, Ur, the city from which Abraham came, was the center for worship of the moon god SIN. As Mesopotamian religion developed, each god had his or her own star, and the worship of the stars became popular with the development of ASTROLOGY. Many of the astrological texts and charts of the ancient Babylonians read like modern horoscopes.

The worship of the sun, moon, and stars eventually spread across the entire ancient world. The Egyptians, Canaanites, and Phoenicians all incorporated features of this form of worship. Place names in pre-Israelite Canaan reflect the practice. Beth Shemesh (Josh. 15:10) means house of the sun [god]. Jericho (Num. 22:1) probably means moon city. Joshua's miracle of the sun and the moon standing still takes on greater significance in light of this fact. It was a demonstration of the sovereign power of the Lord God of Israel over the pagan gods identified as the sun and the moon, worshiped in pagan cities (Josh. 10:12–13).

Another god of ancient Mesopotamia was Adad, who represented the storm—either the beneficial rains for the crops or the destructive storms with hurricanes. Identical with Adad, or Hadad, was Rimmon or Ramman, the Assyrian god of rain and storm, thunder and lightning. The two names, Hadad and Rimmon, were combined in one name, Hadad Rimmon, in one Old Testament reference (Zech. 12:11). In the Old Testament Rimmon was an Aramean (Syrian) god who had a temple at Damascus. Naaman and his royal master worshiped this pagan god (2 Kin. 5:18).

The ancient Babylonian and Assyrian goddess Ishtar symbolized Mother Earth in the natural cycles of fertility on earth. Ishtar was the daughter of Sin, the moon god. She was the goddess of love, so the practice of ritual prostitution became widespread in the fertility cult dedicated to her name. Temples to Ishtar had many priestesses, or sacred prostitutes, who symbolically acted out the fertility rites of the cycle of nature. Ishtar has been identified with the Phoenician Astarte, the Semitic Ashtoreth, and the Sumerian Inanna. Strong similarities also exist between Ishtar and the Egyptian Isis, the Greek Aphrodite, and the Roman Venus.

Associated with Ishtar was the young god Tammuz (Ezek. 8:14), considered both divine and mortal. In Babylonian mythology Tammuz died annually and was reborn year after year, representing the yearly cycle of the seasons and the crops. This pagan belief later was identified with the pagan gods Baal and Anat in Canaan.

Another kind of god in both Babylonia and Assyria was a national god connected with politics. In Assyria it was Ashur, and in Babylonia it was Marduk, who became prominent at the time of HAMMURAPI (1792– 1750 B.C.). The ancient ideas about the ordering and governing of the universe were taken over by these two gods. Marduk, for example, achieved his prominence by victory over Tiamat, goddess of the ocean. This cosmic conflict, described also in ancient Sumerian and Canaanite myths, was believed to have established order.

In contrast, the Bible makes it clear that the forces of nature are not pagan gods that war with one another annually to bring about an established order of the universe. They are part of the Lord’s creation (Genesis 1).

The Babylonian god Bel (Is. 46:1; Jer. 50:2; 51:44) is the same as Marduk, the chief Babylonian god. The Babylonian god Merodach (Jer. 50:2), an alternate spelling of Marduk, was the god of war and the patron deity of the city of Babylon.

Nebo (Is. 46:1) was the Babylonian god of education, literature, writing, wisdom, the arts, and sciences. The special seat of his worship was at Borsippa, near Babylon. The Akkadian form of his name is Nabu.

Nisroch (2 Kin. 19:37; Is. 37:38) was an Assyrian god with a temple in Nineveh. The idol representing this pagan god had a human form with an eagle’s head.

Sikkuth (Amos 5:26; Sakkuth, NRSV) was a name given by the Babylonians to the planet Saturn.

Succoth Benoth (2 Kin. 17:30) was a Babylonian goddess, identified by some scholars with Zarpanitum, the mistress of Marduk. Other scholars believe this god is a designation of Marduk himself as Sakkut Binuti, the supreme judge of the world.

When SHALMANESER, king of Assyria, deported the inhabitants of Samaria to farflung regions of his empire, he also imported into Samaria settlers from afar to colonize it. These people brought their religions and their pagan gods with them. Among the gods were: Adram-melech (2 Kin. 17:31), an idol of the Sepharvites worshiped by child sacrifice; Anammelech (2 Kin. 17:31), another god revered by the Sepharvites; Ashima (2 Kin. 17:30), an idol worshiped by the people of Hamath; Nergal (2 Kin. 17:30), the war god of the men of Cuth; Nibhaz (2 Kin. 17:31), an idol of the Avvites; and Tartak (2 Kin. 17:31), an idol also worshiped by the Avvites.

The Pagan Gods of Egypt. The gods of Egypt were a constant threat to the Israelites, both during their years in bondage and afterwards. Their deliverance from Egypt was described by the Bible as a great spiritual victory, with the sovereign Lord of Israel defeating the gods of the Egyptians (Ex. 18:11; 2 Sam. 7:23).

Egyptian religion reflected the same pagan ideas that were popular in the ancient world, but with different figures. Horus was the god of Egypt's western delta; he was a human figure with a falcon's head. Hathor, the corresponding goddess, had a cow's body and a woman's head. The god Set had a man's body and an animal's head. Anubis had a man's body and the head of an ibis. Besides gods that were composite with animal forms and human forms, some Egyptian gods were portrayed as completely human. For instance, Min symbolized fertility. The name of Amun, the famous god of Thebes, was often combined with that of Ra (see below).

In ancient Egyptian religion Osiris was the god of the lower world and judge of the dead. He was the brother and husband of Isis and father (or brother) of Horus. Osiris was killed by Set, who was jealous of his power, Isis, the ancient Egyptian goddess of fertility, persuaded the gods to bring back Osiris, her dead husband. The myth is therefore an ancient vegetation cycle.

Egypt also had cosmic deities. The Egyptians envisioned the earth as in the shape of a dish with their fertile region (Egypt) in the center. The Nile River flowed from under the earth, bringing fertility to the land. These elements of nature were personified as gods. Geb, earth, was portrayed as a god lying down. Nut, heaven, was a goddess who arched her body across from mountain to mountain. Shu, the air, stood erect, holding up the sky.

The Egyptians also worshiped the sun, moon, and stars. Ra (also Re), the sun god, was the supreme deity of the ancient Egyptians. He was represented as a man with the head of a hawk or a falcon, crowned with a solar disk and the figure of the sacred asp or cobra. Ra appears in the Old Testament in the name of Joseph's father-in-law, Poti-Pherah (Gen. 41:45, 50; 46:20), priest of On, a city called Heliopolis ("city of the sun") by the Greeks—the principal seat of the worship of the sun. When Ra is absent, Thoth, the moon, is prominent. But the moon is definitely inferior to the sun.

The Egyptians had many other pagan gods. Notable among them was Maat, representing the abstract idea of truth, and Bes, a grotesque god who watched over childbirth. The worship of all the gods also involved magic and superstition. The purpose of these gods apparently was to explain the cycle and forces of life and to ensure stability and fertility.

The great PLAGUES OF EGYPT before the EXODUS (Ex. 7:14—12:30) struck at the heart of Egypt's religion. Their fertile land was struck with plagues; their sacred river was turned to blood; their glorious sun was darkened; and even the son of the "divine" pharaoh was killed. The wonders that God brought against Egypt clearly demonstrated that their gods were powerless before the true and living God of Israel.

◆

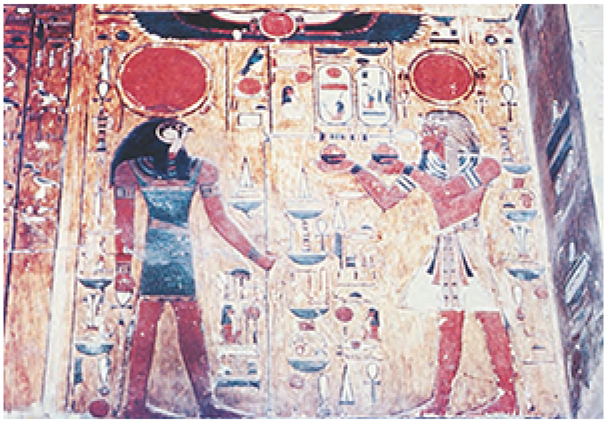

Photo by Howard Vos

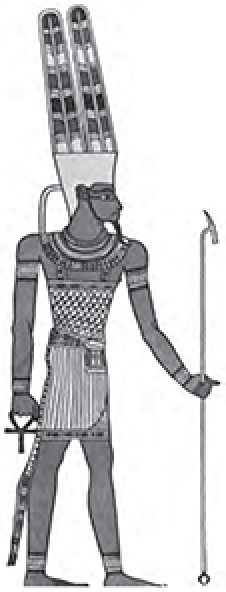
- Tomb painting that shows Pharaoh Seti I of Egypt making an offering to the sun god Ra, supreme god in the Egyptian religious system.

Photo by Gustav Jeeninga

• A sitting Ibis, representing the Egyptian god Thoth, who was the scribe, or secretary, of the pagan gods of Egypt.



• Amun, one of the principal gods of the Egyptians, may have been one of the false gods worshiped by the Israelites—a practice condemned by the prophet Jeremiah (Jer. 46:25, 26).

The Pagan Gods of Canaan. The pagan peoples who inhabited the land of Canaan before the Israelites arrived also worshiped many gods and goddesses. The Canaanite literature discovered at RAS SHAMRA (on the site of the ancient city of Ugarit) on the Syrian coast provides abundant information about several gods mentioned in the Bible.

The Canaanite god most often referred to is Baal, which means "lord" or "master." The word could be used as a title for any person who owned something, or any god considered to be a lord or master. But the word Baal soon became identified with various regional gods that were thought to provide fertility for crops and livestock. As a god who symbolized the productive forces of nature, Baal was worshiped with much sensuality (Num. 22:41; Judg. 2:13; 1 Kin. 16:31–32).

Baal appeared in many forms and under many different names. The Bible often makes reference to the Baalim (the plural of Baal, KJV) or to the Baals (NKJV; Judg. 2:11; 1 Kin. 18:18; Jer. 2:23).

The word Baal was often used in forming names, such as Baal of Peor (Deut. 4:3; Baal-peor, KJV). Peor was the name of a mountain in Moab. Baal of Peor was an idol of Moab (probably to be identified with Chemosh) that Israel was enticed to worship with immoral practices. In several passages the idol is simply called Peor (Num. 25:18; Josh. 22:17).

Baal-Berith, which means "lord of the covenant," is a name under which Baal was worshiped in the time of the judges at Shechem, where he had a temple. In Judges 9:46 he is called simply the god Berith (El-Berith, NIV).

Baal-Zebub, which means "lord of the fly," was "the god of Ekron" (2 Kin. 1:2–3, 6, 16)—the name under which Baal was worshiped at the Philistine city of Ekron. The name is probably a deliberate and scornful scribal corruption of Baal-Zebul, "lord prince," another name for the Canaanite god Baal (see below). In the New Testament, reference is made to Beelzebub, a heathen god considered the chief evil spirit by the Jewish people (Matt. 10:25; 12:27; Luke 11:18–19). The Pharisees called him "the ruler of the demons" (Matt. 12:24; Mark 3:22; Luke 11:15), and Jesus identified him with Satan.

This word Baal was also used in personal names, but when the worship of Baal became a problem in Israel, Baal was replaced by Bosheth, which means "shame" (probably because it was shameful to have the name of a pagan god as part of one's name and because Baal was a shameful god; Jer. 11:13). For instance, Merib-Baal (1 Chr. 8:34; 9:40), the name of the son of Jonathan, became Mephibosheth (2 Sam. 9:6–13), and Esh-Baal (1 Chr. 9:39) became Ishbosheth (2 Sam. 2:8).

The Canaanite god Baal was known as Baal Zebul ("lord prince") and Aliyan Baal ("strong lord"), as well as by a number of other titles. Baal was considered the god who brought rain and fertility (especially good harvests and animal reproduction). In a number of passages in Canaanite literature he is identified as Hadad, another god believed to bring the rains, storms, and fertility. Hadad is the god Adad of Assyria.

Archaeologists have discovered rock carvings of Baal holding a club in his right hand and a lightning flash with a spearhead in his left. These identify him as the god of rain and storm. Baal is also known as the "rider of the clouds," a term showing his power over the heavens. Psalm 68:4, "Extol Him who rides on the clouds," gives this title to the God of Israel—a declaration that the Lord, and not the false god Baal, is ruler over the heavens.

Baal and related deities are also portrayed as a mating bull, symbolizing fertility. It is no surprise that while Moses was on Mount Sinai, receiving the Ten Commandments from the Lord, the disobedient Israelites fashioned a golden calf to worship (Ex. 32). Jeroboam I, king of Israel, acted in accordance with this pagan idea by making two calves of gold, setting up one at Bethel and the other at Dan (1 Kin. 12:26–30).

During the history of the Israelites, a rivalry developed between Baalism and the true worship of the Lord (Jer. 23:27). Perhaps the best example of this rivalry was the conflict between Elijah and the prophets of Baal on Mount Carmel (1 Kings 18). Elijah's challenge to them to bring down fire from heaven was appropriate, because the Canaanites believed that Baal could shoot lightning flashes from the sky. Elijah's mocking of Baal struck at the heart of their claims; he knew that Baal was powerless, that the prophets of Baal had misled the people, and that only the Lord God of Israel was alive and able to answer. In the struggle to the death between true religion and false religion, Elijah knew that Baalism and its prophets had to be destroyed.

In Canaanite mythological texts Baal is sometimes called the son of Dagon. Dagon (Judg. 16:23; 1 Sam. 5:2–7; 1 Chr. 10:10) was the chief god of the ancient Philistines, a grain and fertility god whose most famous temples were at Gaza and Ashdod. Dagon continued to be worshiped by the Canaanites up to the time of Christ. In the APOCRYPHA mention is made of a temple of Dagon at Azotus in 147 B.C. (1 Macc. 10:83–84). Azotus was a later name for Ashdod, one of the five chief Philistine cities.

Like the myths of so many pagan religions, Canaanite stories claim that Baal came to prominence by defeating other gods. One of Baal's enemies was the sea monster known as Lotan. The Old Testament references to Leviathan (Job 3:8; 41:1; Ps. 104:26; Is. 27:1) correspond to this word. But in the Bible Leviathan is simply a powerful creature in the sea that people cannot control, and not like Lotan—a pagan god in the form of a twisting serpent.

Baal's mistress or lover was Anat (or Anath), the goddess of war, love, and fertility. She was the virgin goddess who conceives and was also the victor over Baal's enemies. With the help of Shapash, the sun god, Anat rescued Baal from Mot (the god of death). Her victories in battle were vicious; she is described as up to her hips in gore with heads and hands from the enemies stacked high. Thus, Anat was the driving force in the annual fertility cycle of Baal.

Anat is sometimes identified with the "queen of heaven," to whom the Jews offered incense in Jeremiah's day (Jer. 7:18; 44:17–19, 25). But some scholars identify the "queen of heaven" with the Assyro-Babylonian goddess Ishtar. Anat was the patroness of sex and passion; lewd figurines of this nude goddess have been discovered at various archaeological sites in Palestine.

The goddess Asherah (1 Kin. 15:13; 2 Chr. 15:16; Asherahs, Judg. 3:7) was portrayed as the wife of El (or sometimes Baal) in Canaanite mythology. Asherah was a favorite deity of women. Some of the wives of David and Solomon worshiped her (1 Kin. 15:13), as Ahab's wife, Jezebel, also probably did (1 Kin. 16:31–33). King Asa suppressed the worship of Asherah (1 Kin. 15:13), and King Josiah destroyed "the articles that were made for Baal, for Asherah, and for all the host of heaven" (2 Kin. 23:4). Recently discovered inscriptions at Kuntillet Ajrud and Khirbet el-Kom seem to indicate that the goddess Asherah was sometimes worshiped as if she were the wife of the Lord Himself—a pagan abomination of the worst possible sort.

The word asherah also refers to a wooden pole, or cult pillar, that stood at Canaanite places of worship—perhaps the trunk of a tree with the branches chopped off—and associated with the worship of the goddess Asherah.

Other pagan gods in addition to Baal and his companions were worshiped by the Canaanites. Molech was the national deity of the Ammonites (Lev. 18:21; Jer. 32:35), whose worship was accompanied by the burning of children offered as a sacrifice by their own parents. The god Molech also appears in the Old Testament as Milcom (2 Kin. 23:13; Zeph. 1:5; Malcham, KJV) and in the New Testament as Moloch (Acts 7:43).

Chemosh (Judg. 11:24; 2 King. 23:13) was the national god of the Moabites. This deity was apparently compounded with Athtar, the Venus star, and so is thought to be a pagan god associated with the heavenly bodies. Chemosh has been identified with Baal of Peor, Baal-

Zebub, Mars, and Saturn, as the star of ill-omen. Dibon (Num. 21:30), a town in Moab north of the River Arnon, was the chief seat of its worship.

Like Molech, Chemosh was worshiped by the sacrifice of children as burnt offerings, but scholars believe it is incorrect to identify Chemosh directly with Molech. Solomon sanctified Chemosh as a part of his tolerance of pagan gods (1 Kin. 11:7), but Josiah abolished its worship (2 Kin. 23:13). Human sacrifice was made to Chemosh, according to 2 Kings 3:27, which reports that Mesha, king of Moab, offered his oldest son as a burnt offering on the wall of Kir Hareseth, the ancient capital of Moab.

Ashtoreth (1 Kin 11:5, 33; 2 Kin. 23:13) was the ancient Syrian and Phoenician goddess of the moon, sexuality, sensual love, and fertility. In the Old Testament Ashtoreth is often associated with the worship of Baal. The KJV word Ashtaroth is the plural form of Ashtoreth; the NKJV has Ashtoreths (Judg. 2:13; 1 Sam. 12:10; also see Ishtar above).

Remphan (Acts 7:43; Rephan, NRSV, NIV, REB; Rompha, NASB) was an idol worshiped by Israel in the wilderness. This may be the same pagan god as Chiun (Amos 5:26; Kiyyun, NASB; Kaiwan your star-god, NRSV), or Saturn.

Nehushtan, literally “bronze serpent-idol,” was the contemptuous name given by King Hezekiah to the bronze serpent made by Moses in the wilderness (Num. 21:8–9), when people began to worship it (2 Kin. 18:4).

Gad (Is. 65:11; Fortune, NRSV, NIV, NASB; Fate, REB) was a heathen deity worshiped along with Meni (Is. 65:11; Destiny, NRSV, NIV, NASB; Fortune, REB). Scholars are uncertain about the exact identity of these pagan gods.

Photo: Levant Photo Service

- Excavations at the city of Dan, where King Jeroboam I of Israel set up a golden calf for pagan worship about 950 B.C.

- Bronze likeness of Baal, pagan god of war and fertility among the ancient Canaanites and Phoenicians.

The Pagan Gods of Greece and Rome. Only a few of the ancient Greek and Roman gods are mentioned in the New Testament.

Zeus (Acts 14:12–13; 19:35; Jupiter, KJV) was the supreme god of the ancient Greeks. According to Greek mythology, Zeus was the ruler of heaven and father of other gods and mortal heroes. He was identified by the Romans as Jupiter.

Hermes (Acts 14:12; Mercurius, KJV; Mercury, NEB) was the Greek god of commerce, science, invention, and cunning. He also served as messenger and herald for the other gods. Hermes was identified by the Romans with Mercury, who was generally pictured with winged shoes and hat, carrying a winged staff. He was the protector of roads and boundaries and he guided departed souls to Hades.

When the apostle Paul and Barnabas were in Lystra, the people of that city declared, “The gods have come down to us in the likeness of men!” They called Barnabas Zeus and Paul Hermes, because he was the chief speaker (Acts 14:11–12).

Diana (Acts 19:24, 27–28, 34–35), in Roman mythology, was the goddess of the moon, hunting, wild animals, and virginity. Diana is the same as the Greek goddess Artemis (NRSV, NIV, NASB), virgin goddess of the hunt and the moon. When Paul preached in Ephesus, the Ephesians were in an uproar because the gospel threatened to destroy the profit of the artisans who crafted silver shrines of Diana.

The Twin Brothers (Acts 28:11; Castor and Pollux, KJV, NIV, REB) is a translation of a Greek word which means “boys of Zeus.” In Greek mythology, Castor and Pollux were the twin sons of Zeus. After Castor and Pollux died, they were transformed by Zeus into the constellation Gemini (“Twins”). They were regarded as the special protectors of distressed sailors. The Alexandrian ship in which Paul sailed from Malta to Puteoli had a carving of the Twin Brothers as its figurehead.

